Reviews by: Shelf Awareness The Search for Us by Susan Azim Boyer (Jasmine Zumideh Needs a Win) is a moving, hopeful YA contemporary novel about half siblings who grew up never knowing the other existed, and their search for their absent father.

#2160125 Every Missing Piece (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Melanie Conklin

Maddy Gaines sees danger everywhere she looks: at the bus stop, around the roller rink, in the woods, and (especially) by the ocean. When Maddy meets a mysterious boy setting booby traps in the North Carolina woods, she suspects the worst. Maddy is certain she's found Billy Holcomb--the boy who went missing in the fall. Except, maybe it's not him. It's been six months since he disappeared. And who will believe her anyway? Definitely not her mom or her stepdad . . . or the chief of police. As Maddy tries to uncover the truth about Billy Holcomb, ghosts from her own past surface, her best friend starts to slip away, and Maddy's world tilts once again. Can she put the pieces of her life back together, even if some of them are lost forever?
 978-1-368-04895-8 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2020 288 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old Maddy Gaines can't help but imagine danger lurking around every corner. In the three years since a tragic accident took her father's life, the anxious girl has become so well acquainted with the local emergency services as to be considered a nuisance, dialing 911 at any hint of trouble. Six months after a local boy is abducted, she discovers a seemingly similar child with a bruised face setting booby traps in a cemetery, but she decides that she must accumulate proof to be taken seriously. Maddy becomes friends with the boy despite his connection to her sworn enemy, with whom she is engaged in a territory war. Also on Maddy's mind is getting along with her awkward new stepfather, whom she considers "the wrong piece for our puzzle," and the way her best friend seems to be growing up faster than she is. Conklin's well-paced narrative nimbly incorporates Maddy's ever-present fear and lingering grief into a nuanced tale of a tween discovering that things aren't always what they seem. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Elena Giovinazzo, Pippin Properties. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–7—Sixth grader Maddy Gaines wants her old life back: before her father died, before her anxiety caused her to keep a rescue ladder under her bedroom window, and before her best friend, Cress, became interested in boys and skin care. But as Cress tells Maddy, "You have to get used to it." As Maddy navigates a relationship with Stan, her mother's new husband, and the changing dynamics of her friendship with Cress, she is also confronted with a mystery. Walking in the neighborhood graveyard one day, Maddy meets Eric, a boy who reminds her of Billy Holcomb who has been missing for six months. Maddy wants to share her discovery with her mom, but after so many false alarms fueled by her anxiety, she decides to say nothing. As she gathers evidence to support her conviction that Eric is actually Billy, Maddy has the opportunity to reconsider assumptions she's made about her friends and Stan. She slowly begins to connect with Stan and appreciate that he is making a genuine effort to be a part of Maddy's life. When she learns the true story of what happened to Billy and his mother, Maddy is also forced to understand some hard truths about the realities of the emotional and physical effects of domestic violence. VERDICT In this heartfelt story about a family struggling through adjustments big and small, Maddy's efforts to make sense of the changes in her life will inspire young

#2333146 Cursed Moon (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Angela Cervantes

To take his mind off his mom's return, Rafa spends an evening crafting the scariest ghost story he's ever told. As an eerie blood moon hangs in the sky, Rafa tells a group of friends about The Caretaker. Rafa is really proud of his latest creation, until strange things start to happen around him. With a sinking feeling, Rafa realizes the Caretaker is real.

978-1-338-81401-9 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Rafa is a storyteller who can come up with the scariest stories to send chills down anyone's spine. He knows that his stories are fictional, so he is never frightened about anything except his mom, Nikki, who has been in and out of his life. But a new kind of fear brews when Ms. Martin warns Rafa about the upcoming blood moon and tells him to refrain from telling any scary stories. Rafa initially disregards her cautionary advice, and while they sit in a tree house under the blood moon, he tells his friends a story about the Caretaker, a being who takes children. Strange things begin to happen, and it seems like his nightmarish stories are coming to life. It's up to Rafa to stop the Caretaker before it takes its next victim. Award-winning author Cervantes is back with a story that will captivate horror fans. Cervantes' storytelling is a balance between earnest and eerie that will have readers at the edge of their seats.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A boy tells one scary story too many and must find his way to a happy ending--or else. Eleven-year-old Mexican American Rafael Fuentes loves writing horror stories. It comes easily to him despite his struggles in school because much of his life has been a different kind of scary story, one full of neglect and instability. For the past two years since their mom was sent to prison, Rafa and his younger sister, Brianna, have lived with their loving abuelos. But now Rafa is dreading his mom's upcoming early release. One day, neighbor Ms. Martin warns Rafa that he should not, under any circumstances, tell a scary story during the upcoming blood moon. But Rafa's storytelling has brought him social acceptance, so at his friends' urging, he tells one of his most frightening tales yet. Soon after, strange, unsettling things start happening. Rafa thinks his spooky story has something to do with this, and he tries to craft a new, happy ending for his story. With the support of his friends and help from a magical jaguar, he faces down the evil threat. Featuring excellent pacing and seamlessly centering a diverse, well-drawn community, Cervantes' latest deals with the complicated issues that arise from having an incarcerated parent and provides ample creep factor for young horror fans without ever losing sight of the fact that maintaining hope is key. The power of words lies at the heart of this heartwarming story. (Horror. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A tween with a penchant for crafting creepy tales must reckon with ghosts from his past and present in this haunting read. Mexican American 11-year-old Rafael Fuentes is dreading his mother's early release from prison. While living with his abuelos for the last two years during her incarceration, he's managed to cultivate a stable environment for his younger sister Brianna, and he worries that his mother's return will disrupt his established peace. When his neighbor Ms. Martin ominously warns him to not tell scary stories tonight during the blood moon lest he awaken a restless spirit, Rafa believes she's just another adult trying to control him. But after regaling his friends with his most terrifying yarn yet, about a specter who lures kids to their deaths in the local pond, strange things start happening: jaguar claw marks appear on Rafa's door, and he begins receiving sinister countdown texts and having ghostly visions of missing youths. Via sometimes choppy prose, Cervantes (Letty Out Loud) delivers a frightening adventure; Rafa and Brianna's close sibling dynamic, and his strained relationship with his mother, are the emotional center of this supernatural page-turner. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

#2319514 Good Different (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Meg Eden Kuyatt

Selah knows her rules for being normal. She always, always sticks to them. This means keeping her feelings locked tightly inside, despite the way they build up inside her as each school day goes on, so that she has to run to the bathroom and hide in the stall until she can calm down. So that she has to tear off her normal-person mask the second she gets home from school, and listen to her favorite pop song on repeat, trying to recharge.

978-1-338-81610-5 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist This beautifully written novel in verse follows one girl's journey as she learns that she's on the autism spectrum and comes to embrace herself. Seventh-grader Selah lives by her list of how to be a "Normal" person. This school year is already hard: best friend Noelle isn't in her class, her new school uniform is itchy, her homeroom teacher is loud, and her classmates think she's weird. It's exhausting for her to hold in all the bad feelings all the time. When Selah's annoying classmate Addie starts braiding Selah's hair one day without asking, Selah instinctively lashes out. She inadvertently hits Addie and gets suspended. As she learns more about her potential autism diagnosis, a supportive English teacher assures her she's not "damaged" and encourages her to express her feelings through poetry. Selah says, "I used to think / my rules could save me, make me happy, / but all I see now are the ways / they make me feel like I'm not enough." In an author's note, Kuyatt describes her own autism diagnosis, discusses masking and the degree to which the disorder is especially misdiagnosed in girls, and provides a list of resources and tools for autistic kids and their parents and educators. Ultimately, readers will empathize with Selah and rejoice with her as she learns to accept herself as she is.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An autistic artist just wants to survive seventh grade. Selah, a White girl, is a "good kid," praised for her schoolwork--but inside, she's a "dragon." She can't abide noise, smells, or touches, and her mother has been extremely clear about hiding her differences in public. But her "normal-person mask" is fraying. When Selah is praised for getting an A on a test and there is loud applause, she thinks, "I want to crawl / under my desk." Eventually, Selah has a violent outburst: Now classmates and teachers treat her like a wild animal. In her notebook, Selah writes free verse about being a dragon--a metaphor for all her neurodivergent frustration with social norms. She worries that she shouldn't share her poetry ("My feelings are loud. Rude. / BIG. Sometimes / angry. Are those OK in poems?"), but the verses ultimately allow her to share her scary feelings. It's a revelation when she finds fellow neurodivergent geeks at FantasyCon. Happy, married adults use earplugs and sensory tools, wear color-coded communication bracelets, and speak calmly and without shame about their autism. Can these tools help when educators at her private school are hostile to autistic kids' needs? Can they help when even her neurodivergent mother doesn't want to recognize that Selah isn't "normal"? Through her poems, Selah believably mends her family and starts a movement in her school, showing readers ways that "different" can be wonderful. Short free-verse vignettes beautifully evoke despair, loneliness--and determination. (author's note, resources) (Verse fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In Kuyatt's heartfelt debut, free verse poems explore middle school changes via the first-person viewpoint of an autistic 12-year-old. Selah Godfrey has always liked rules-oriented Pebblecreek Academy, where she knows exactly "what I'm/ supposed to do." But when she enters seventh grade, everything's different. Amid the crowded hallways, loud cafeteria, and itchy new uniforms, Selah's rules for "Being a 'Normal' Person" include resisting the urge to talk about dragons, remaining on her "Best Behavior," and otherwise masking until she can calm herself in the bathroom. When a classmate braids her hair without asking, and Selah's reaction causes a bloody nose, Selah is regarded as a social pariah and threatened with expulsion. Isolated from her peers, she takes the advice of her beloved, similarly wired grandfather and starts to write in a notebook, further finding her voice through a kind English teacher's poetry assignment. Kuyatt, who is autistic, uses candid lines to present Selah's story, conveying her mother's well-intentioned denial of Selah's needs, and Selah's own experiences, self-knowledge, and eventual self-advocacy. Selah is white. An author's note and resources conclude. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Lauren Spieller, TriadaUS. (Apr.)

#2328028 Mixed Up (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gordon Korman

Reef and Theo don't know what's happening to them. They'll be going about their days and then suddenly they'll have these strange flashes of memory -- but the memories don't belong to them. And at the same time, their own memories are starting to... vanish.

978-1-338-82672-2 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Around an electrifying premise, Korman winds themes of grief, family dysfunction, and the ways memory shapes character to generate a powerful friendship tale. Middle-schoolers Reef and Theo don't know one another initially, but that changes in a big way when they suddenly, mysteriously, begin acquiring each other's memories. Not only is this scary, not to mention confusing, but it's devastating for Reef when he realizes that, along with forgetting everything he studied for a test and other such details, bit by bit he's losing all he has left of his mom, who died from COVID-19. Theo has parental issues, too, but Reef's whole life is in such a dark place from the outset that the story takes on a grim tone, only gradually lightened by events that climax in a wild lightning storm, allies (including a hilariously clever rabbit), and the growth of a connection that is, perforce, uniquely perceptive and expresses itself in acts of both kindness to others and a sense of mutual commitment. That relationship will leave readers touched and thoughtful.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two white-cued tweens who have never met mysteriously begin swapping memories in this suspenseful novel by Korman (The Superteacher Project). Twelve-year-old Reef Moody is grieving his mother's death more than a year ago when he realizes that he can't recall certain memories of her. Instead, he has begun remembering events that he's sure he's never experienced. Meanwhile, Theo Metzinger, also 12 and living in another district, has begun recollecting images of a woman he's never seen and things he's never done; the memories are welcome if bizarre distractions from his father's overwhelming future expectations. When the two boys meet serendipitously, it doesn't take long for them to realize their connection. Together, they resolve to figure out what's happening and reverse it, but the solution turns out to be potentially life-threatening. Via Reef and Theo's earnest alternating POVs, Korman crafts an intricate mystery and a gripping adventure grounded by high-stakes emotional conflict. If the mythos surrounding the memory swap is somewhat contrived, the boys' creative brainstorming evokes classic Hardy Boys detective work, and they each emerge as bighearted, sympathetic heroes whose individual courage and support for one another is palpably rendered. Ages 8: 12. (July)

#2349567 Scarewaves (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Trevor Henderson

The adults in town are oblivious to these strange occurrences. Others prefer not to talk or even think about them. But over the course of several terrifying nights, a group of kids will come face to face with the horrors hiding within their sleepy town. Guided by the mysterious radio host Alan Graves, they must follow the clues to a terrifying secret before it eats them alive.

978-1-338-82950-1 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$12.99

Reviews by: Booklist True friendships aren't made at the playground or by living next door to someone; they are garnered through paranormal experiences. In the town of Beacon Point, inexplicable activities take place that affect only children. Oblivious to parents and adults, century-old anthropomorphic crows, deer, scarecrows, and more wreak havoc on the innocent. After being repeatedly plagued by the shape-shifting creatures, a motley crew of six kids bands together to stop the malevolence once and for all. Along the journey, they discover a camaraderie among one another. The story incorporates snippets of Beacon Radio Mystery Show, hosted by Alan Graves, who provides history of the spooky town and its ominous woods. Known for his illustrations in horror literature, Henderson makes his writing debut in this chiller for children. Included are images reminiscent of Stephen Gammel's artwork from Scary Stories to Tell in the Dark. Though there are a few abrupt moments to the story that leave some unanswered questions, readers' thirst for horror will surely be satiated in this novel.

#2310762 Boy in a White Room (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Karl Olsberg

A fifteen-year-old boy wakes to find himself locked in a white, cube-shaped room. No windows. No doors. Total silence. He has no memories. No clue how he got there. No idea who he is. A computer-generated voice named Alice responds to his questions.

Through her, he is able to access the internet. As the boy uncovers snippets of his story--an attempted abduction, a critical injury, a murder -- it becomes clearer. But when some of the pieces don't fit, how can he tell what's real and what's not? Who can he trust? And who is he really?

978-1-338-83184-9 Chicken House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 660

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-8 There is a boy in a white room. When he wakes, he knows nothing and feels nothing until an AI called Alice turns on and lets him surf the internet. Here, he figures out where he's located and, eventually, the few facts of his existence: his name is Manuel, he's the son of a millionaire, and he's in a virtual world because his body has been crushed in the real world. While the virtual world can offer amazing things--the first thing his father shows him is a reconstruction of Middle-earth from The Lord of the Rings--Manuel is still unsure and unhappy. He can explore the outside world as "a human brain trapped in a robot body," and he sets about trying to remember his lie before his accident, wondering if he's being told the whole truth. The title sets the stage for this standalone novel. German author Olsberg's work has only recently begun to be translated into English, and this middle-grade mystery struggles to feel complete. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A science-fiction thriller translated from German about a boy trapped in a virtual world. The teen wakes up locked in a silent, white, square room, devoid of memories. He can't smell anything, has no sense of touch, and when he tries to speak, his robotic voice sounds computer-generated. He eventually learns from a man who introduces himself as his father that he is a 15-year-old named Manuel, lives in Hamburg, and is the survivor of a kidnapping attempt during which his mother was killed and he was left for dead, his body damaged beyond repair. Through new technology, his father was able to rescue his brain, and, after a series of operations, Manuel is now able to survive a primarily virtual existence in a simulation of Middle-earth created especially for him due to his love of Tolkien's books. But the more Manuel interacts with the outside world through the internet (with the help of Alice, his voice-activated virtual assistant), the more he comes to question whether he is being told the truth about what happened and who he really is. Carefully crafted, thought-provoking questions about identity, self, and humanity are interwoven with heavy-handed elements pulled from The Lord of the Rings and Alice's Adventures in Wonderland to tell a punchy, fast-paced story that doesn't quite coalesce into a convincing, cohesive whole in its rushed ending. The largely racially ambiguous characters are minimally described. An intriguing if uneven journey of self-discovery. (Science fiction. 13-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An initially unnamed teenager wakes up alone in a blank white room with no recollection of who he is or how he came to be there in this cerebral speculative thriller by Olsberg. The teen's only apparent companion is a virtual assistant named Alice, whose monotone voice "seems to come from everywhere." With Alice's help, the teen uses the internet to try and piece together what has happened to him. After some time, a new voice claiming to be his father informs him that he is a 15-year-old Hamburg resident named Manuel, who suffered life-threatening injuries following a failed abduction by unknown assailants that resulted in his mother's death. Assuming that he will have to "live in this virtual reality world forever," Manuel endeavors to uncover more about his past, in the process unearthing ominous truths regarding his father's claims and the world beyond the white room. While the conclusion's breakneck pace leaves a number of questions unanswered, Olsberg makes adventurous use of classic sci-fi tropes, meticulously arranging them in a continually surprising series of twists and turnabouts to craft a pensive tale that explores questions of artificial intelligence, free will, and personhood. Ages 12: up. (Feb.)

#2366370 Just Keep Walking (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Soderberg Downing

Two years after her parents' surprising and painful split, twelve-year-old Jo and her mom find themselves on the 100-mile hike on the Superior Hiking Trail along Lake Superior's north shore—a journey that Jo had always looked forward to hiking with her dad. It's not a situation that either of them ever predicted they'd find themselves in, yet here they are in the wilderness with their entire lives stuffed into a pair of thirty-pound packs.

978-1-338-85130-4 Scholastic Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 990

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$26.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up—After her dad bails on their long-awaited father/daughter hike to be with his new family, Jo decides that she and her mother will hike longer and farther than her dad and brother did years before, to prove to him (and themselves) that they don't need him anymore. Out of spite, she plots a 111-mile trek through the Superior Hiking Trail—but spite doesn't last long, as Jo and her mom navigate the wilderness, make new friends, and work together to process the difficult emotions that come with divorce. This is an adventure story with a lot of heart. Readers looking for a pulse-pounding survival tale should look elsewhere, as the focus is on Jo dealing with the emotional fallout of her dad leaving. She has plenty of support in the wilderness, a fact that she uses to remind herself that she and her mother have similar support in their lives as well. While Jo's internal monologue as she processes her feelings about her dad can get a little monotonous, it's realistic, and her amusing observations about trail life shake things up. As Jo treks with her mom through the wilderness, she learns that things will get better as long as she just keeps moving forward. VERDICT This is a great choice for libraries looking for realistic fiction about dealing with divorce, as well as those seeking stories about the healing power of nature.—Mimi Powellt

#2315194 Iceberg (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jennifer A. Nielsen

The thrilling story of a young girl who stows away onboard the Titanic and as she explores, attempting to find answers to her many questions about the ship, suddenly finds herself caught up in the desperate struggle to survive after it strikes an iceberg. The danger only intensifies and readers will be caught up in the terror and suspense alongside Hazel as she fights to save her friends and herself.

978-1-338-79502-8 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Hazel Rothbury stows aboard the Titanic and finds friendships in unexpected quarters before tragedy strikes in Nielsen's latest. When British 12-year-old Hazel, uneducated but resourceful, sneaks aboard the famous ship, it's with a promise that she'll repay her ticket upon publishing an article that "tell[s] the great story of this ship." Hazel befriends a companion in first class and, under the tutelage of an older passenger, is dogged in her pursuit of information about the ship's design and vulnerabilities, offering readers insights to many factors that contributed to the seafaring tragedy. During her journalistic research, Hazel stumbles upon a mystery involving the finances and identities of fellow passengers, and makes questionable if well-meaning efforts to unravel the truth. Some readers may find Hazel's timely eavesdropping and immediate mastery of Morse code a bit convenient, but this story of perseverance and survival should please readers who enjoy historical fiction with heroism and a heavy sense of foreboding. Includes images throughout, most being documents recreated by the author, and a note parsing facts from the story's fiction.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Ever since Hazel's father's death, it has been hard for the family to make ends meet. When her aunt, who lives in America and works in a garment factory, invites her to live and work with her, Hazel accepts the opportunity to help support the family. Preparing to leave England, she decides to seek passage on the Titanic but is forced to stow away when she doesn't have enough money to cover the fare. Once aboard, she befriends Charlie, a porter; Sylvia, a first-class passenger; and Mrs. Åbelman, a teacher who nurtures her dream of becoming a Åjournalist. The inquisitive Hazel investigates her surroundings quite thoroughly, from the ship's physical construction to the passengers and their secrets. This exploration allows Nielsen (The Shadow Throne, rev. 3/14) to weave historical research into her first-person narrative. If the foreshadowing of the impending tragedy is a bit clumsy, that can be forgiven: everybody knows how the Titanic's story unfolds. An author's note separates fact from fiction, while primary source documents (newspaper articles, photographs, and transcripts) are occasionally interspersed between chapters. ÅJonathan Hunt(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young girl stows away on the Titanic. Twelve-year-old narrator Hazel Rothbury arrives in Southampton on April 10, 1912, only to discover she doesn't have enough money for a ticket. Hazel is bound for factory work in America, leaving behind the family farm. She sneaks aboard inside another passenger's trunk, and a young crewman finds her an empty cabin to stow away in. Sylvia, a first-class passenger Hazel's age, and Mrs. Abelman, a former governess, befriend her. Hazel dreads the thought of the factory and wishes to be a journalist--an aspiration that reflects her questioning, curious personality. Hazel's determined and occasionally inopportune questions allow Nielsen to deftly deliver myriad details that point to the looming disaster. These include the nature of icebergs, the refraction of light on calm seas, and the construction of the Titanic and its preparedness for emergencies. Hazel herself has an opportunity to observe human nature at close range, as she realizes both of her friends may be the targets of thieves and tries to intervene. When Hazel and Sylvia are locked in a cargo hold, the stakes seem very high. The astonishing acts of heroism, and a few of cowardice, that accompanied the sinking of the ship and the rescue of a fraction of its passengers become part of Hazel's story. Most characters read White; there is passing mention of four Chinese passengers, but other non-Europeans do not appear. Page-turning historical drama. (photo credit, author's note) (Historical fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A British 12-year-old stowed away aboard the Titanic becomes swept up into intrigue in this increasingly tense historical novel set on the ill-fated 1912 voyage. Having left her rural life behind and finding that she lacks sufficient means to pay her fare after arriving in Southampton, Hazel Rothbury sneaks aboard the Titanic in a steam trunk. Aboard the ship, porter Charlie Blight finds her a place to sleep, and Sylvia Thorngood, a first-class passenger Hazel's age, and her governess, invite Hazel into a world of finery and opulence. Though the factory work that awaits Hazel in New York promises to help her support her widowed mother and siblings, the quick-witted tween dreams of life as a journalist, and her inquisitive nature quickly finds her embroiled in mysteries aboard the ship. Nielsen (Lines of Courage) attentively sketches the Titanic's allure ("as powerful as the Titans of mythology, and as elegant as... a floating castle") and details its social hierarchy, seeding anticipation as the winning young heroine learns more about the ship's inner workings, notices warnings about icebergs and the ship's wake, and looks into two con artists targeting her newfound friends. It all makes for an engrossing portrait of an infamous maiden journey. Protagonists read as white; an author's note separates fact from fiction. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ammi-Joan Paquette, Erin Murphy Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Nielsen weaves mystery and action in her newest historical fiction novel. Readers join Hazel as she boards the Titanic, heading to America for the opportunity to obtain a job with her aunt in a factory. Her journey is not by choice, but of necessity, as the income will help support her family who recently lost their father. From the beginning of the story, Hazel faces numerous difficulties because of her gender, age, and poverty. Yet Hazel's inquisitiveness introduces her to new friends, a few foes, and lands her in the middle of a big mystery that involves both. Layer on top the impending problems awaiting the Titanic, and readers will find themselves unable to stop turning pages to find out what happens to Hazel, her friends, and everyone aboard the doomed ship. Nielsen creates engaging, authentic characters who pull readers in, making the plot both compelling and believable. VERDICT Fans of historical fiction and Nielsen's other novels will be riveted by Hazel and her friends' plight across the Atlantic aboard the Titanic.--Jennifer Seebauer Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2369109 Uprising (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Jennifer A. Nielsen Twelve-year-old Lidia is outside her grandfather's house when planes fly overhead, bearing the Nazi cross on each wing. Before the bombs hit the ground, Lidia realizes her life is about to change forever. After her family returns to Warsaw, where life has changed irrevocably, Lidia continues to play the piano, finding comfort in Chopin, Bach, and Beethoven. 978-1-338-79508-0 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 13.0 Lexile 700	1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve-year-old Lidia's world is shattered when she witnesses the German invasion of her homeland (Poland) and the start of WWII. Her father goes to help defend the country, leaving Lidia with her brother and mother. After seeing the German atrocities towards Jewish people, Lidia wants to help, too, but her brother and mother hold her back out of fear of German retribution. It isn't until her brother's life is in danger that she's able to join the resistance and help take Poland back from the Germans. Based on a true story, Nielsen's newest draws on Lidia Zakrzewski's life as a teenager who joined the Polish resistance and fought in the Warsaw Uprising of WWII. This action-packed read gives a unique perspective of a Polish girl involved on the front lines of war rather than behind the scenes, one who does not bat an eye at danger if it helps her people. With hints of romance, the story focuses more on the war and the Warsaw Uprising, taking readers on a nail-biting ride through history.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A fictionalized account of a real-life Polish resistance fighter. Talented pianist Lidia is just 12 when the Nazis invade Poland, and her whole life is abruptly upended. With their home bombed and then claimed by the Germans and Papa gone to join the Polish army, the Christian Durr family relocates to a crowded apartment adjacent to Warsaw's Jewish quarter. At the mercy of their occupiers, Lidia helplessly watches family, friends, and strangers suffer cruelty and injustice. Desperate to fight back, she finds ways to rebel, like enrolling in an underground school and sneaking food to people in the ghetto. Her brother, Ryszard, is maddeningly tight-lipped about his mysterious work for the resistance, but Lidia eventually finds her own path to participating in the uprising. Once admitted into the circle of those planning Operation Tempest, Lidia--code name Cello--quickly rises in the ranks, thanks to her bravery and willingness to take on the most dangerous assignments. Ferrying everything from messages to grenades across the war-torn city, Lidia hopes for liberation but fears that the world has forgotten Warsaw. Although the true story that inspired this novel is compelling, Nielsen's characters are one-dimensional, and they populate a landscape that never seems to truly come to life. Furthermore, major tragedies lack sufficient setup and execution to elicit the intended emotional gut punch in readers. An unremarkable addition to the already crowded field of World War II fiction. (photos, author's note) (Historical fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2323335 Storyteller (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Brandon Hobson

Ziggy has ANXIETY. Partly this is because of the way his mind works, and how overwhelmed he can get when other people (especially his classmate Alice) are in the room. And partly it's because his mother disappeared when he was very young, making her one of many Native women who've gone mysteriously missing. Ziggy and his sister, Moon, want answers, but nobody around can give them.

978-1-338-79726-8 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Sixth-grader Ziggy Echota suffers from anxiety, the result of his Cherokee mother's mysterious disappearance some 10 years before. He has heard tales of the Nunnehi (spirits that tell stories and protect other Cherokees) from his grandmother and his older sister, Moon. To learn more about his mother and her demise, he asks his classmate Alice to help him find the secret caves located in the New Mexico desert near their homes that his mom loved to explore. Hobson's fantasy features a folkloric setting (Poisonberry, named for the ubiquitous red fruits lethal to non-Cherokees), a mix of real and fantastic characters (including Gus, a fiddle-playing buzzard, and an armadillo channeling Andrew Jackson), and one long night of adventures. While most chapters could stand alone as self-contained stories, and Ziggy's need to cite all the things he has learned from his adventures feels didactic, readers will be happy that he moves beyond his grief (and hopefully the anxiety it has caused him), opting instead to learn and share stories of his mother's life.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Despite his sister's insistence that any evidence regarding their mother's disappearance would either have been found or is long gone, Ziggy is certain there might be clues left in the desert caves Mom often explored, even after ten years. He decides to consult his classmate Alice, one of the few other Cherokee kids at their school, whose knowledge of trickster spirits, Nunnehi, convinces him the spirits might have some answers. Tamping down his usually overwhelming anxiety, Ziggy sets out on an epic night of adventure and revelations on a quest that is filled with talking animals (for example, an armadillo who asserts that he is Andrew Jackson, justifying genocide while quoting from a State of the Union speech) and mysterious figures who convey equally opaque messages. Ziggy is a carefully developed protagonist, and Hobson deftly explores the particular grief of mourning a missing person whose fate is unknown. Ziggy and his older sister hurt from the loss of their mother but also from their father's inability to openly share stories about her because of his own pain, a secondary loss for Ziggy. The blending of the familiar and the fantastical works beautifully within the context of one long, exhausting, and anxiety-fueled night where Ziggy is doggedly determined to find some kind of peace or insight even if he cannot find his mom. Hobson seamlessly integrates Cherokee lore, history, and cultural details, grounding Ziggy in a loving family and community; a grim larger text about Ziggy's mother being one of thousands of Native women to have vanished is also woven in. Mostly, however, the novel zooms in on sixth-grader Ziggy and his broadening understanding of his own potential to be more than his biggest fears. Avid readers will already likely believe fervently in the power of stories to engage, inform, and sometimes even heal, and Ziggy's slow progression toward that knowledge is compelling and believable. AS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Hobson (Cherokee Nation Tribe of Oklahoma) combines elements of classic Western literature, Cherokee culture, pop culture, and the epidemic of Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Two-Spirit People to forge the thematic backbone for this fantastical adventure across the New Mexico desert. Ziggy Echota, a socially awkward Cherokee middle schooler with anxiety, is convinced that the key to finding his mother (missing since he was a baby) is somewhere in a secret desert cave. He enlists the help of classmate Alice, who claims that she's familiar with the caves and the Nunnehi (immortal spirit people) that inhabit them. The surreal journey kicks into high gear one night when Alice arrives at Ziggy's house with a talking coyote who calls himself Chupacabra. Along the way, Ziggy encounters, questions, and escapes from an assortment of offbeat characters -- including an armadillo possessed by Andrew Jackson, a fortune-telling snake, and murderous shapeshifters. Each interaction leaves Ziggy with a morsel of wisdom, leading to a difficult conclusion about his mother. The fast-paced narrative is episodic and character-driven, channeling Alice's Adventures in Wonderland as a central reference point. It is Ziggy's eccentric Grandma Moses who provides clarity at the tale's end: "Storytellers have power...We find the meaning in what's happened, and then we convey that meaning to others." A significant story full of delight and dimension. Patrick Gall(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Cherokee tween searches for his missing mother. Ten years after his mother's disappearance, Ziggy Echota hasn't given up hope. The anxious sixth grader becomes convinced that the Nunnehi, trickster spirits who reportedly live in desert caves outside his small New Mexico town, hold answers. Ziggy's classmate Alice, who wears a hearing aid, shows up in the middle of the night to take him to them. His older sister, Moon, secretly follows. Talking animals and humans alike appear along the dreamlike quest, from a coyote and a buzzard to a fortuneteller and a Shakespearean actor. Will Ziggy find answers among the stories? This middle-grade debut from National Book Award finalist Hobson (the Cherokee Nation Tribe of Oklahoma) offers a frank look at anxiety and loss balanced with moments of wonder and levity. The book's opening epigraph from Jefferson Airplane draws a clear link to Wonderland, but the evocative desert setting and infusion of Cherokee history, language, and culture ground the fantastical in tradition while exploring contemporary subjects such as missing Indigenous women. The kaleidoscopic structure imparts plentiful messages among its substories, always with a light hand. Ritualistic behaviors, catastrophizing, and insightful conversations with a therapist add authenticity to Hobson's depiction of anxiety. The multigenerational, majority-Native cast establishes a strong sense of community as well as a reverence for Native storytellers. Although a White side character joins the adventure, the novel refreshingly focalizes Native perspectives. A captivating testament to the healing power of stories. (author's note) (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An anxious Cherokee sixth grader finds the courage to pursue the truth behind his mother's disappearance in this supernatural adventure by Cherokee author Hobson (The Removed, for adults). Eleven-year-old Ziggy Echota lives in Poisonberry, N.Mex., with his father, grandmother, and older sister Moon. Ever since his mother went missing 10 years before this book's start, Ziggy has been seeing a therapist to help him manage his anxiety, which he believes is exacerbated by his mother's disappearance: "Native Women go missing all over the country. Nobody seems to be doing much about it," he explains. When new friend Alice, who is Cherokee and uses a hearing aid, tells him they might be able to find clues about his mother in secret desert caves said to be occupied by mischievous spirits called Nunnehi, who can take human form, he endeavors to set aside his fears to uncover the truth. Hobson weaves complex emotional elements such as Ziggy's relationships with Alice and Moon and his experiences with his anxiety alongside ethereal fantasy tropes, plentiful Cherokee cultural nuance, and educational conversation surrounding the United States' historic prejudiced treatment of Indigenous peoples to craft an atmospheric and meditative read. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Bill Clegg, Clegg Agency. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Ziggy is a member of the Cherokee nation living with anxiety and still processing the grief of his mother's disappearance when he was a baby. Determined to find clues about her, Ziggy teams up with school misfit Alice to explore caves his mother once explored. Alice claims these caves are home to the Nunnehi, spirit people who may be able to offer guidance. What unfolds is a series of encounters with various magical creatures. Once Alice and Ziggy, accompanied by Ziggy's sister Moon and friend Corso, start their adventure, the novel moves at a quick pace. In each chapter readers are introduced to a new magical creature or character, but the story does not feel fragmented. On the contrary, this narrative style is reminiscent of a folklore anthology, woven together with the overarching hero's quest. In one of the final chapters, Ziggy reflects on the lessons he learned from the characters he met along the way. This reflection comes off expositional; readers will have already drawn conclusions and noted the lessons learned through his travels. VERDICT Hand to tweens who enjoy magical realism and quest stories. Ziggy's experiences with anxiety and loss will likely resonate with many.--Katharine Gatcomb Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness An anxious sixth-grader spends a night in the desert seeking closure in Brandon Hobson's unconventional and surreal Indigenous adventure, The Storyteller.

#2328029 Bubble Trouble (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Wendy Wan-Long Shang

How many problems can a delicious cup of bubble tea cause? Plenty, if you're Chloe Chen. For starters, Chloe wants to go on the class trip to Broadway -- an expense Chloe's not sure she and her dad can afford since her mom passed away -- and those yummy cups of boba cost money. And then there's the fact that the incorrigible Henry

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Lee is the bobamaster at Tea Palace, and when he's not annoying Chloe, he's usually coming up with the perfect drink for every occasion. For Chloe, lover of neatness and control, the arrival of bubble tea is nothing but trouble!

978-1-338-80214-6 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 5.0

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine erious and comedic in this novel about friendship, grief, and tween romance. Musical theater fan Chloe Wong, still grieving the loss of her mother, an ER doctor who died from COVID-19, yearns to attend her middle school's Broadway trip, but she's afraid her widowed inventor father cannot afford the $375 ticket. Determined to pay her way to New York City, Chloe (with best friend Sabrina's help) brainstorms money-making ideas involving the Tea Palace, where her show tune-hating classmate/sometimes crush, Henry, happens to work. Several screwball events ensue when Chloe gets banned from the tea shop after confronting the local mean girl and eventually starts her own bubble tea business with help from friends and family. (Foodies will enjoy the detailed descriptions of the flavors and bubble tea-making process.) Some of the novel's strongest passages are also the most heartfelt: those focusing on Chloe missing her mother, the kindness Henry shows Chloe, and the epiphany our protagonist reaches at the end. "The house was never going to be like it was with Mom, but we could still have love, just a different kind, with different people and creatures. And happiness. And mistakes." Michelle Lee (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Boba tea may be the source of--and the solution to--this middle schooler's troubles. Twelve-year-old music lover Chloe desperately wants to go on her school's Broadway trip despite the teasing of her classmate Henry, "Mr. I-Hate-Broadway." But the cost for the shows, meals, and transportation is $375, and ever since Chloe's mom died, her dad has been working from home as an inventor, and she's sure the money's not there. Sabrina, Chloe's best friend, is eager to help her raise the funds, but when it becomes clear that Chloe's not cut out for babysitting and she gets banned from Henry's family's bubble tea shop for disruptive behavior, the two of them, with help from Chloe's new dog, develop a brilliant and delicious moneymaker. This is buoyant fare, touching only lightly on tough topics like grief and financial troubles. Chloe's and Henry's families are Chinese American; Sabrina is Cuban-Latina. Chloe's intense desire for organization and neatness hints at neurodivergence, and while this is not explicitly identified, her family and friends seem to recognize and accommodate her needs. The story's primary and secondary romances are predictable, sweet, and age appropriate. What may linger longest are the fantastic bubble tea descriptions, which will have readers salivating--and curious about the science of popping boba. Indeed, the only thing missing here may be a recipe. Sweet fun. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this lighthearted novel by Shang (The Great Wall of Lucy Wu), an entrepreneurial middle schooler endeavors to make and sell her own boba to raise money for a class trip. Twelve-year-old theater-lover Chloe is ecstatic about her drama class's upcoming field trip to a Broadway show. But while most members of her affluent D.C. neighborhood think nothing of the expense, Chloe hesitates to ask her father for the funds, especially since finances are tight following her mother's death. A messy incident at a local boba shop inspires Chloe to start her own boba business to pay her way. But handling the sticky drinks and bustling business, on top of navigating her stubbornly growing feelings for cute if irksome classmate Henry Lee, is almost more than Chloe can juggle. But help from her tech-savvy dad, best friend Sabrina, and new rescue dog Phineas bring Chloe closer to her goal. Shang has developed a feast for the senses; anyone with a sweet tooth will rejoice at Chloe and Henry's blossoming romance alongside abundant confectionary descriptions. Empathetic depictions of tween friendships, familial relationships, and moving on from loss deepen this quick-moving read. Chloe and Henry are Chinese American; Sabrina is Latinx-cued. Ages 8: 12. (July)

#2330720 Odds (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lindsay Puckett

This is the story of Begonia, who was abandoned at a retirement home when she was a baby. You might think that's the worst thing that could happen to someone, but for Bug, the worst is yet to come.

978-1-338-80381-5 Scholastic Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

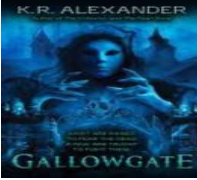

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Growing up in Swamp Root Manor nursing home with 58 magical grandparents may not sound at first like the perfect childhood. But it's the life of prickly, stubborn Begonia Hollowmoor's dreams. In a world divided into Never Odds (regular people) and Odds (anything from a grandma with horns to a grandfather with secret-hearing abilities), she's waiting for her own Oddity to appear before her 11th birthday or face memory-wiping and life in an orphanage with Never Odds. David, the manor's owner and her guardian, is struggling to keep it afloat financially. Worst of all are the ghost attacks leaving residents in a coma-like state. Following a riddle that could awaken her Oddity, Begonia and goofy, passionate 10-year-old Barnabas Montgomery (aspiring mortician, grandson of a resident, and thorn in Begonia's side) set out to save the home she loves. During a quest full of twists and spooky surprises, Begonia figures out who and what she can trust. A narrative voice that breaks the fourth wall to address readers directly is a delightful touch in a story that's unafraid of wry, macabre silliness. Amid some truly creative magic, there's earned emotion, in particular Begonia's experience with chronic pain. Her severe migraines are depicted with compassion and respect for her agency. Begonia and David read white; Barnabas and his family, which includes his two moms, are Black, and the supporting cast is racially diverse. A rollicking, spooky adventure with a big heart. (Supernatural. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In a world divided between magically gifted Oddities and ordinary Never Odds, a 10-year-old desperately attempts to activate her Oddity ahead of her birthday in this bustling ghost story from Puckett (The Glass Witch). If Begonia Hollowmoor, who experiences intense migraines, fails to do so, she'll be "Odbliterated"; have her memory wiped; before being placed in an orphanage for Never Odds. Begonia stands to lose everything she's ever known, including her 58 pseudo-grandparents; the elderly Odds who live at nursing home Swamp Root Manor, where she was abandoned as a baby. But other events threaten life as Begonia knows it: Swamp Root Manor is in deep financial distress, and an unknown entity has been haunting the estate, resulting in some inhabitants falling into a comatose state. Determined to save her home, Begonia reluctantly teams up with Bass, a resident's 10-year-old grandson, who's also seeking to uncover his power. Employing a sardonic tone that's elevated by a fourth wall: breaking omniscient narrator, Puckett addresses themes of disability, friendship, and mischief. Begonia's experience managing chronic pain is thoughtfully rendered and features heavily throughout, adding a layer of realism to this fast-paced supernatural adventure. Characters are intersectionally diverse. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Samantha Fabien, Root Literary. (Sept.)

		Quantity	Unit Price
	#2329244 Gallowgate (Hardcover (Trade)) written by K. R. Alexander Sebastian Wight is cursed. As a boy with the forbidden ability to traverse the lands of the dead, he must not only harness his newfound powers to fight the monster that stalks him, but also to navigate a creepy world of hunting ghosts and ghouls with his eccentric classmates. 978-1-338-80648-9 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 12.0	1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When Sebastian's ability to see ghosts turns from a secret curse he lives with to a deadly danger, he is thrust into a world where he must learn to hunt what haunts him. Twelve-year-old Sebastian hoped to start over in middle school. Fitting in has always been difficult, especially since he has white hair and can see the spirits of the dead. Sebastian's lone source of comfort and normalcy is his eccentric aunt Dahlia, with whom he has lived since his parents were murdered. Sebastian's hauntings turn violent with the appearance of the terrifying specter he calls the shadowman, but his world is truly upended when Aunt Dahlia reveals his lineage as being one charged with protecting the living world from the departed. No longer safe, Sebastian is sent to Gallowgate Academy for Ætheric Arts to learn the skills he needs to banish the dead and defend himself. There he makes friends and develops a sweet, reciprocated crush on another boy. Sebastian not only learns that his path is different than most, but that the ripple effects of his parents' long-kept secret will put many lives in mortal danger, starting with his own. This is an overall entertaining read with a gothic aesthetic and some loose ends that readers will hope may be resolved in a sequel. Sebastian is implied White; there is some diversity in race and nationality at the academy, and a couple of students use wheelchairs. A dark, fantastical adventure. (Horror. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly ten years ago, 12-year-old Sebastian Wight, who can see ghosts, lives with his aunt Dahlia. When he comes face-to-face with the shadowman, a malevolent entity wearing a porcelain mask and set on capturing him, Aunt Dahlia reveals that Sebastian is an etheric; a being meant to banish evil spirits to the underworld. She sends him to Gallowgate Academy for the etheric Arts to study alchemy, conjuring, necromancy, and summoning. Once friendless Sebastian now finds himself with two pals, classmates who show him the ropes in dealing with poltergeists, banshees, and more. But the shadowman is stronger than the Gallowgate wards, and as the spirit's pursuit of Sebastian grows more harrowing; and Sebastian realizes that the school is hiding secrets about his powers and his past; he must unravel many mysteries to face his foe. Employing myriad magical-school tropes, Alexander (Possess Me) delivers a thrilling fantasy adventure that sets itself apart via its vivid goth aesthetics and use of horror elements that are more squick than scary. Sebastian reads as white; context clues cue racial diversity among the supporting cast. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Brent Taylor, Triada US. (Aug.)

		Quantity	Unit Price
	#2366356 Liars Society (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Alyson Gerber Weatherby is a fish out of water. When she lands a scholarship to the prestigious Boston School, she's excited to be in the same world as her dad, whom she's never met, and make real friends. But Weatherby has a secret she'll risk everything to protect, one that could destroy her new life. 978-1-338-85921-8 Scholastic Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$14.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Through lying by omission, Weatherby earns a scholarship to an elite school, where she's ready to use her position for the greater good. The Boston School is proud of its sailing team. After Weatherby Walker wins a district regatta, beating Jack Hunt, who comes from one of the Boston School's favored families, she's offered a scholarship on the condition that she sail for the school. The only problem is, Weatherby accidentally used illegal sails that offered her an advantage. She decides not to admit her mistake; she's desperate to attend Boston, her late, estranged father's alma mater--especially since someone recently anonymously mailed her father's old school journal to her. This is just the start of the mysteries and revelations to come, including ones that lay bare her family's history and connections and deceptions by powerful people, all of which threaten ecological disaster. Everyone's lying about something--and some of the lies are deadly. Last Heir, the Boston School's elite secret society, seems designed to support corruption, indoctrinating generations of students and making them complicit. The chapters alternate between Weatherby's and Jack's perspectives; they're both sympathetic characters from whom there's much to learn about friendship and trust. This first entry in a new series sets up a solid premise, with white leads Weatherby and Jack and their somewhat racially diverse schoolmates confronting a powerful system. What happens next is left to be revealed in the sequel. Absorbing intrigue with a cliffhanger ending. (Mystery. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8—After winning a district sailing regatta, public school student Weatherby Walker is offered a full scholarship to the Boston School, the elite private school that her late father attended. The only problem? Weatherby accidentally cheated in the race, and her family's motto is, "Walkers don't lie." Still, she decides not to tell anyone—and quickly comes to find that she's not the only student with a secret. Jack Hunt, a fellow seventh grader whose wealthy family owns the waterproofing company Hunt International, is also hiding a cheating incident, but he's from a family whose motto is, "If you can't get to the top, get to the top anyway." Paired as sailing partners, Jack and Weatherby are soon tapped as candidates for the Last Heir, a secret society. When funds for the annual class trip to Hart Isle are stolen and initiation gambits send them on an investigation, both are desperate to uncover the truth—Jack, because he fears his uncle's involvement, and Weatherby, because her dad's childhood journal details a life-changing trip to Hart Isle with a critical page missing. Told from Jack and Weatherby's alternating perspectives, this is a layered, atmospheric mystery that effectively combines prep school intrigue, environmental issues, sports competition, and explorations of class privilege. The almost otherworldly setting of Hart Isle captivates, and the ending sets up a sequel that readers will be eager to devour. Weatherby and Jack are both cued as white. VERDICT This is an Inheritance Games–style mystery perfect for middle school readers.—Elizabeth Giles

#2328013 Ajay and the Mumbai Sun (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Varsha Shah

Abandoned on the Mumbai railways, Ajay has grown up with nothing but a burning wish to be a journalist. And after finding an abandoned printing press, his dreams might just come true. But when he and his friends Saif, Vinod, Yasmin and Jai create their own newspaper, The Mumbai Sun, and begin to hunt down stories to fill their pages, the children uncover a plan to tear down their slum--which will leave hundreds of more people homeless.

978-1-338-87546-1 Chicken House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Abandoned in Mumbai as a young child, Ajay is a quick-witted, resourceful boy who hawks newspapers outside the railway station and dreams of becoming a journalist. When he finds an old printing press, his friends rally to help him start his own newspaper. Saif, an apprentice engineer, overhauls the press. Yasmin, a factory worker, contributes the title design. Ajay discovers the villains behind the building collapse at Jasmin's workplace and discovers that they're plotting to drive out the slum dwellers and build expensive housing on the land. Two more friends--a young chef and an outstanding cricketer--also assist Ajay during the perilous adventures that unfold after he challenges Mumbai's most powerful, greedy, and corrupt public figures. A thoroughly likable hero, Ajay is sometimes discouraged, but he's never down for long. Shah's first novel engages readers with its unusual setting, appealing characters, and exciting action scenes. This fast-paced adventure story is propelled by the young characters' determination to fight for social justice. In England, where the book was originally published in 2022, a sequel is now available. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Ajay can still remember when his mother abandoned him on the Mumbai railways years ago; now at twelve years old (as best he can guess), he has made a life for himself selling newspapers while holding onto his dream of being a reporter. When he stumbles upon an old printing press, Ajay persuades his closest friends to help him create their (his) own newspaper: The Mumbai Sun. Ajay, having faced a lifetime of needing to center himself in order to literally survive, is not always great about sharing, seeing the perspectives of others, or avoiding the temptation to exploit the skills of his friends. These are difficult things to learn while also solving a mystery, writing articles, fighting for justice, planning an epic cricket match, and trying to save his own little corner of the world from corruption, but Ajay soon realizes he needs his pals more than he ever thought. The zippy pace and determined optimism of Ajay are mitigating factors for what is in many ways a bleak look at children's lives in an extremely poor area. Shah does not shy away from describing abject poverty and the ways in which it drastically constrains possibilities, but the book also offers Ajay as an example of how determination and a resolve to rise above societal constraints can be powerful catalysts for societal change. Readers will likely be happy to know that this UK import already has a published second book in the series, as persistent, brave Ajay and his quirky, gritty friends have surely earned another outing. AS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Ajay, a street kid living in a Mumbai railway station, earns a living by hawking newspapers and longs to become a journalist. A chance meeting with a well-known environmentalist, the discovery of an abandoned printing press, and a whole lot of gumption help Ajay chase his dream. His motley crew of friends--a railway apprentice engineer, an artist, a seasoned cook, and a budding cricketer--get together to start their own paper: The Mumbai Sun. Ajay learns of a plan to raze the neighboring slum and pounds the pavement to get an exclusive scoop that lays bare a diabolical plan by a corrupt nexus of builders and politicians to stage a land grab. With meager resources and goons on their trail, Ajay and his crew use their street smarts to dig deep and uncover hard truths. The fast-paced narrative builds on themes of friendship, loyalty, and underdogs getting the upper hand. However, improbable scenarios, escalating melodrama, and predictable turns mar the storytelling. Awkwardly reworded American idioms ("Compared to finding stories, that was a piece of paratha"), details that feel jarring (in one scene, Ajay hides in a building's air vents, which are uncommon in Mumbai), and references that privilege a Western perspective (Ajay compares making a big discovery to finding Christmas presents) result in a depiction of the city that doesn't ring true. Despite an intriguing premise, weakness in plotting and a lack of nuance hold this Mumbai-set tale back. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly s currently selling newspapers on Mumbai railway platforms to get by, he dreams of becoming a journalist. When he learns of an opportunity to impress Mr. Gupta, editor of the City Paper, Ajay determines to write an article that will convince Mr. Gupta to hire him. But when he goes to deliver his article to Mr. Gupta at a local restaurant, the disgruntled establishment owner tears up his piece, and Mr. Gupta tells Ajay that newspaper sales are declining: "We're firing people, not hiring," he says. Undeterred, Ajay enlists his friends to help create his own paper, the Mumbai Sun, using an abandoned printing press he finds in an alley. Upon discovering that his neighborhood will be sold and demolished by developers, Ajay endeavors to report on it, but his investigation soon imperils him and his friends. While some villain descriptions lean into caricature, short chapters and uncomplicated prose capably propel this largely fresh and fun mystery. By centering enterprising Ajay and his longing to "change the world," Shah delivers a heartfelt debut that tackles issues of housing inequity, financial precarity, and believing in oneself. Ages 8-12. (July) Copyright 2023 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

#2245581 Ghost of Midnight Lake (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lucy Strange

From award winning author Lucy Strange comes a thrilling ghost story about a strong willed heroine who will follow even the most restless spirit in order to untangles the dark mystery of her own past. It's 1899. The Earl of Gosswater has died, and twelve-year-old Agatha has been cast out of her ancestral home - the only home she has ever known - by her cruel cousin, Clarence. In a tiny tumbledown cottage, she struggles to adjust to her new life and the stranger who claims to be her real father. While adjusting to her new fate, she learns that the shores of Gosswater lake are haunted, and soon comes face to face with the spirit of another young girl who's soul will not rest.

Could the ghost of Gosswater hold the key to Aggie's true identity?

978-1-338-68643-2 Chicken House ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine This quickly paced gothic tale takes us to England's Lake District, 1899. Twelve-year-old Lady Agatha Asquith's elderly father has just died, and the new Earl of Gosswater, her sleazy cousin Clarence, summarily boots Aggie from her home. Even more outrageously, Aggie is told that the old earl wasn't really her father; in his will he decreed that she now live with her birth father, Thomas, a farmer she has never met. And even as she struggles to adjust to her new status, and learns to respect and trust Thomas, she's pursued and tormented by Clarence. He's certain Aggie knows the whereabouts of the legendary Gosswater opals and will perform any cruelty to get them. The story is stuffed with wintry adventures in small boats, icy treks over mountain passes, rose-fragrant visitations from a ghostly maiden, and ill-advised schemes. Characters are sharp, extreme, and sometimes colorfully eccentric, and the action moves toward an explosive and unpredictable finish. At heart, though, this is the tale of Aggie finding a loving family and friends, at last. Deirdre F. Baker March/April 2022 p.(c) Copyright 2022. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When her life changes overnight, Agatha finds herself in the middle of a ghost story, bravely unraveling her family's hidden truths. It's the turn of the 20th century in England, and 12-year-old Agatha is forced into a new life. Upon her father's death, she is disinherited from Gosswater Hall after learning that she was secretly--and not entirely legally--adopted, and her greedy, malicious cousin, Clarence, is taking over the vast estate. Agatha is sent to live with her biological father in his modest farm cottage, but she's bent on undoing Clarence's evil and fighting for what has been bequeathed to her--the Queen Stone, a priceless family heirloom whose whereabouts are unknown--and discovering the truth about who she is. Strange's writing makes for a compelling read full of vivid descriptions and characters that are well imagined and richly drawn. Agatha is a strong and capable female lead, vulnerable enough to be believable and brave enough to remake her life. Others, like the midwife and mystic Moll Speedwell, a cantankerous goose named Susan, and Agatha's friend Bryn, are irresistible, lively, fully formed characters. The titular ghost and other atmospheric elements evoke Brontë-an imagery just enough to spook but not terrorize. The story hits the right note thanks to expert plotting and pacing, with each twist and turn setting up what's to come without being overly predictable. Characters are presumed White. A pitch-perfect page-turner. (Historical mystery. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Set in England's Lake District in 1899, Strange's (Our Castle by the Sea) gripping riches-to-rags story hearkens back to Victorian classics, employing strong gothic elements alongside matters of inheritance and parenthood. Lady Agatha Asquith, 12, is cast out of her ancestral home when the father she's known, the Earl of Gosswater, dies, and the male heir; Agatha's cruel, recently arrived cousin Clarence; reveals her true lineage. Under the care of her newfound biological father at his small cottage, Agatha struggles to adapt to her new circumstances, tending geese and doing household chores. But she slowly recasts herself as Aggie and befriends orphan Bryn, with whom she sneaks out to explore nearby Skelter Island, where lies the Asquiths' cemetery. The plot thickens when a ghost girl appears and Aggie attempts to find the lost Queen Stone belonging to the Asquith line. Though Clarence proves predictably dastardly, he remains an effective foil throughout, while a spookily atmospheric historical setting; strong friendships among the appealing, presumed-white cast members; and a memorable heroine propel this ghostly mystery. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

#2333149 Nightmare King (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Daka Hermon

Things haven't been the same since Shane's accident. One minute he was a normal kid playing a game of tag with his friends, and the next he's the boy who came back from the dead. Now, every time Shane falls asleep, he's pulled into a dark world where the evil Nightmare King reigns. The King is collecting children and keeping them as treasure.

978-1-338-77581-5 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Reviews by: Booklist In this equally chilling sequel to Hide and Seeker (2020), 12-year-old Shane's determination to pick up his old life in the wake of spending a month in a coma after being hit by a car falls afoul of not only a bullying rival on his school's basketball team but also a weird and sinister "King" who seems to be continuing the game by stalking him through a series of daytime visions and exhausting nightmares. Or are those, along with Shane's memory losses and sudden fits of blind rage, just signs that his mind is far less healed than his scarred body? Hermon keep readers on the edges of their seats waiting for a clear answer as they watch Shane's personality deteriorate on the way to a hard-fought climactic confrontation in, yes, an otherworldly realm. Shane leads a nearly all-Black cast in which loving twin sister, Sadie, and staunch friend/comic-relief provider, Doc, play significant roles. Along with scaring the pants off readers, the tale highlights the value of loyalty and the importance of self-acceptance.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A boy just wants his old life back, but the Nightmare King has different plans. Twelve-year-old Shane has finally recovered from a game of tag that went tragically wrong, landing him in the hospital with gaps in his memory and scars on his torso. He thinks things are looking up when he is finally cleared to play on the basketball team after having to take a year off. Unable to perform at his previously high skill level, however, Shane begins to doubt himself. To top it off, he starts having terrible nightmares, even worse than the ones he had after his accident. When Shane starts falling asleep at random times, coming to with fresh bruises and objects pulled from his nightmares, his twin sister, Sadie, and best friend, Doc, begin to worry about him. In this novel featuring a central cast that is cued Black, Hermon creates a middle-grade horror world that involves a Nightmare King who collects talented children. Unfortunately, despite the quality of the prose, the story takes a long time to build up to the parts that will get readers spooked. A lot of time is spent dragging out the details of Shane's accident and exploring his self-doubt; readers won't experience any significant creep factor until later in the book and might lose patience hoping for the scary parts to play out. Well-written, but there's a long wait for the scares. (Horror. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2369114 Force of Nature: A Novel of Rachel Carson (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ann E. Burg

(Novel in Verse) A beautiful and hopeful story of how a young impassioned naturalist grows up to change the world. For everyone who cares about our fragile planet. Rachel was a girl who loved science and the sea books and writing and all the creatures of the world. Rachel was quiet, a listener by nature. But when she saw problems, she could not remain silent.

978-1-338-88338-1 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2024 5 x 8 304 pgs.

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Rachel Carson is particularly well known for 1962's Silent Spring, but what led to her writing it? Burg dives into Carson's remarkable mind in this fictionalized biography of her life, including the creation of her most famous work. Young Rachel is enchanted by the natural world and writing, and though her childhood isn't entirely happy, her parents encourage those infatuations. Following her interests to college leads to a fascination with biology, employment with the fish and wildlife department, and a path of environmental discovery that will influence all of her writings. As Carson continually butts up against gender expectations and personal tragedy, she doggedly pursues her passions with determination and grace. The stunning writing, all in verse, effortlessly floats through the details of Carson's life, offering keen observations of the natural world and adding terrific tenderness to Carson's most difficult moments. Interspersed natural drawings and excerpts from field notebooks add a wonderful sense of intimacy and awe. An outstanding ode to both the wonder of the natural world and the incredible woman who loved it so.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In lilting verse, Burg (Flooded) writes, "We must always leave nature/ as we find her," quoting Rachel Carson (1907: 1964), a marine biologist, conservationist, and award-winning author credited with launching the modern environmental movement. An early writing phenom enthralled by nature, Carson graduated college with a degree in biology. She received a PhD from Johns Hopkins in 1932 and went on to work as an aquatic biologist for the U.S. Department of Fisheries. Though she sometimes struggled to stand out in the male-dominated field, Carson eventually broke new ground by publishing several works, most notably the National Book Award-winning Silent Spring, which fluid text asserts is viewed as being the first to recognize "that unchecked progress wreaks havoc on our planet." Blending biographical detail with Carson's field notes and excerpts from her works, Burg crafts a fictionalized telling of Carson's life, which is accompanied by delicate and realistically rendered b&w illustrations of birds, flowers, and insects by Blackall (If I Was a Horse). An author's note expresses the hope that "readers will awaken to the beauty that surrounds us and become thoughtful caretakers of the earth, and recognize, as Rachel did, that we are part of the natural world." Ages 8: 12. (Mar.)

#2369117 Gut Reaction (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kirby Larson

Tess Medina is still dealing with the loss of her father when she starts at a new school. One way she is still able to feel close to him is by doing what she does best: baking. He taught her everything she knows. But when tasting her creations causes a deep stabbing pain in her abdomen, she tries to power through and be strong in the same way she powers through her emotional pain.

978-1-338-89313-7 Scholastic Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Tess has a knife in her gut. Not started-a-new-school-for-eighth-grade nerves or misses-her-late-dad emotions but a sharp pain that sends Tess fleeing to the toilet at the most inopportune moments. Tess is a skilled baker, a former finalist in the Jubilee Flour Junior Baker West Coast Competition, and a contender for their tenth anniversary Best of the Best Bake-off. Unfortunately, even her best ginger layer cake can't quiet wry Tess' digestive turmoil and "the Knife," as Tess calls it, which ultimately lands her in the hospital with a diagnosis of Crohn's disease. Debut author Wyatt lends personal insight about living with Crohn's and writes seamlessly with coauthor (and Newbery Honor Book winner) Larson. Baking plays a huge role in Tess' story and frames the plot's empathetic climax, making this a good match for fans of food competition tales like Lily LaMotte's Measuring Up (2020) and a natural pairing for Jake Maia Arlow's The Year My Life Went Down the Toilet (2023). A frank, sensitive window into life with inflammatory bowel disease and a welcome representation of chronic illness.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eighth grader Tess Medina is wrestling with the death of her father three years prior. She throws herself into baking, hoping it will keep her close to him, since he taught her everything she knows. Maybe it will even score her some friends. When she's invited to compete in the Jubilee Flour 10th Anniversary Junior Baker West Coast competition, though, Tess hesitates. Money is tight enough as it is without trying to afford practice ingredients and other preparation necessities, her grades are so poor her mother might not let her go anyway, and the last time she participated in the competition, her dad died during the event. Complicating matters more is the sharp pain in her stomach that causes Tess discomfort and prompts frequent trips to the bathroom. Bolstered by new friends, Tess starts a dog-walking job and begins preparing for the competition. But as the physical pain worsens, she struggles to continue pretending that everything is okay. Larson (the Shermy and Shake series) and debut author Wyatt depict Tess's eventual Crohn's disease diagnosis with empathy and insight inspired by Wyatt's own experiences. Tess's engaging and humorous voice tempers melancholy explorations of grief, as when Tess texts her dad's old phone even as she hides her sadness from her family. Tess defaults to white; supporting characters are racially diverse. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jill Grinberg, Jill Grinberg Literary. (Mar.)

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

#2282899 Children of the Quicksands (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Efua Traore

In a remote Nigerian village, thirteen-year-old Simi is desperate to uncover a family secret. Ajao is nothing like Lagos -- no cell phones, no running water or electricity. Not a single human-made sound can be heard at night, just the noise of birds and animals rustling in the dark forest outside. Her witchlike grandmother dispenses advice and herbal medicine to the village, but she's tight lipped about their family history. Something must have happened, but what?

978-1-338-78192-2 Chicken House ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 720

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 When Simi has to leave her home in Lagos to stay with her grandmother in a remote village, she isn't happy about being separated from the only life she knows. Simi quickly learns that the village is harboring a secret, one that involves a magical lake and the village's missing children. With the help of her priestess grandmother and new friends, Simi must use her wits to save the village from the ire of warring goddesses and a nefarious, magical bird. Traoré's writing is enchanting, and it immerses readers into the colorful, rich world of Yoruba mythology. Simi is a protagonist readers can root for, while the charming cast of side characters provides the reader with a multitude of personalities to enjoy. Traoré's world building is admirable, easily moving from the cityscape of Lagos to the quaint Ajao to the land where the children of quicksand live. This vibrant and imaginative fantasy celebrates the beauty and complexity of Nigeria and will appeal to fans of mythology-based fantasy adventures. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews estranged grandmother in a remote village and is confronted with family secrets. Thirteen-year-old Simi has only known Lagos--until her mother needs to go to London for work. Her parents are divorced, and Simi can't stay with her perpetually busy father, so she is reluctantly shipped off to spend her summer vacation with her maternal grandmother in Ajao, a remote village with no modern technology. So after her exhausting journey by bus and taxi, Simi goes for a walk and is drawn to go the wrong way--into the forest and toward a forbidden lake, where she is briefly transported to a different world, something she at first believes is a dream. Although her staunchly Christian mother does not want her exposed to the Yoruba gods and goddesses her grandmother follows, Simi later learns a story that is connected to her family about O hun, the river and water goddess. As more children are lured toward the lake, Simi feels compelled to come forward and risk everything to heal the wounds in her family and help the village that has come to feel like home. Traoré's debut is brimming with earnest, admiring details about Yoruba culture and traditions that are woven into the worldbuilding. As Simi's fast-paced adventure unfolds, readers will be swept away by the limited omniscient narration in this plot-driven story with a strong sense of place. A captivating adventure about the strength of love and family. (author's note, glossary) (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When 13-year-old Simi travels from Lagos to the rural Nigerian village of Ajao to spend her summer holidays with Iyanla, the estranged grandmother she's never met, she is not sure how she's going to last two full months without electricity or running water, let alone TV, internet, or phone. But Simi soon discovers that beneath its sleepy surface, Ajao is a town brimming with magic; and a mystery around the forest on the edge of town, in which children seem to disappear. As Simi begins to unravel the tragedies and secrets surrounding Ajao, her mother's never-discussed past, and the forbidden lake in the forest's heart, a mystical golden bird tempts more and more children to stray from home. Alongside her wise and esteemed grandmother and a few new friends, Simi searches for answers and bravely risks it all to make Ajao; and her family; whole again. Sleekly weaving together otherworldly occurrences, elements of the hero's journey, and Yoruba legend in vivid, place-centered prose, this action-packed debut from Traore will keep readers engaged in the mysteries of Ajao. An author's note and glossary of Yoruba words conclude. Ages 8: 12. (July)

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$24.99

#2252500 Christmas Pig (Hardcover (Trade))

written by J. K. Rowling

Jack loves his childhood toy, Dur Pig. DP has always been there for him, through good and bad. Until one Christmas Eve something terrible happens -- DP is lost. But Christmas Eve is a night for miracles and lost causes, a night when all things can come to life... even toys. And Jack's newest toy -- the Christmas Pig (DP's replacement) -- has a daring plan: Together they'll embark on a magical journey to seek something lost, and to save the best friend Jack has ever known...

978-1-338-79023-8 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2021 6 x 9 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.9 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 850

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 7-year-old descends into the Land of the Lost in search of his beloved comfort object. Jack has loved Dur Pig long enough to wear the beanbag toy into tattered shapelessness--which is why, when his angry older stepsister chucks it out the car window on Christmas Eve, he not only throws a titanic tantrum and viciously rejects the titular replacement pig, but resolves to sneak out to find DP. To his amazement, the Christmas Pig offers to guide him to the place where all lost Things go. Whiffs of childhood classics, assembled with admirable professionalism into a jolly adventure story that plays all the right chords, hang about this tale of loss and love. Along with family drama, Rowling stirs in fantasy, allegory, and generous measures of social and political commentary. Pursued by the Land's cruel and monstrous Loser, Jack and the Christmas Pig pass through territories from the Wastes of the Unlamented, where booger-throwing Bad Habits roam, to the luxurious City of the Missed for encounters with Hope, Happiness, and Power (a choleric king who rejects a vote that doesn't go his way). A joyful reunion on the Island of the Beloved turns poignant, but Christmas Eve being "a night for miracles and lost causes," perhaps there's still a chance (with a little help from Santa) for everything to come right? In both the narrative and Field's accomplished, soft-focus illustrations, the cast presents White. Plays to Rowling's fan base; equally suited for gifting and reading aloud or alone. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2231346 Discovery of Dragons (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lindsay Galvin

It's 1835. Cabin boy Simon Covington is on the voyage of a lifetime to the Galapagos Islands with the world-famous scientist, Charles Darwin. But when Simon falls overboard during a huge storm, he washes up on an unexplored island. Stranded there, he makes a discovery that could change the world.

978-1-338-71444-9 Chicken House ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Eleven-year-old Syms Covington is the ship's fiddler and naturalist Charles Darwin's assistant as they voyage on the HMS Beagle. Their journey takes them to the Galápagos Islands, where Darwin finds evidence that leads to his theory of natural selection. While all the characters in the story are based on real people, Galvin spins this historical foundation into an imagined adventure. Rowing back to the Beagle after collecting specimens, Darwin is tossed overboard by a sudden storm. Syms jumps in to save him but is swept away, washing up on another one of the Galápagos Islands, half drowned, with no supplies, and surrounded by empty ocean. Six adventure-filled days later, in which, among other things, Syms is befriended by an intelligent lizard he dubs Farthing and survives a volcanic eruption, he is rescued by the crew of the Beagle. But now Syms has a secret that he tells only Darwin--who doesn't believe him--and as events transpire, Syms must choose between loyalty to his employer or his principles. Originally released in the United Kingdom as Darwin's Dragons (2021) with a much more original and appealing cover that better reflects the contents, this terrific novel effectively uses history as a backdrop for both entertaining readers and posing questions about science and society. Characters are cued as White. A rip-roaring adventure exploring themes of friendship, loyalty, and bravery. (author's note, list of characters and places, author interview, timeline, reading list) (Historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2349676 Plot to Kill a Queen (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Deborah Hopkinson

Emilia Bassano is a girl who relishes the music of words. Although she plays the lute and writes poetry, Emilia nurtures a dream: to hear her words come alive on stage.

Emilia wants to write soliloquies for heroes and kings and queens of old, fashion fierce villains to make audiences howl, and try her hand at comedy and romance. Most of all, she wants to create unforgettable women characters.

978-1-338-66058-6 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist The imprisonment of Mary, Queen of Scots and the conspiracies against Elizabeth I come to life in this middle-grade novel for fans of theater, Elizabethan England, and smart female protagonists. Emilia Bassano has grown up at court, raised there after her father's death, but when the Queen's spymaster needs her help, she goes undercover as a lute player to play for the imprisoned queen. In between attempts to write her own play, Emilia embarks on a quest to save her queen that unfolds scene by scene, act by act. While there is a mystery in the plot, the theatrical air of the narrative, filled with asides and scene setting, takes prominence and will entice readers interested in the period or theater in general. Somewhat clunky pacing distracts, but the historical intrigue, espionage themes, and Renaissance setting will appeal to fans of Karen Cushman's classic The Midwife's Apprentice. Back matter offers more information on the real figures that inspired Hopkinson's characters, as well as the text of Emilia's fictional play, The Princess Saves the Cakes.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A 13-year-old stumbles upon a royal murder plot in this standout historical novel from Hopkinson (Race Against Death), written in three acts and set in 1623. The literary curtain opens as lute player and aspiring playwright Emilia Bassano; one of many characters based on 16th-century historical figures; sneaks away from court disguised as a servant boy to see a public performance, and encounters theater hopeful William Shakespeare. This act of daring persuades Emilia's guardian, Queen Elizabeth's spymaster, to send her on a mission to gather intelligence at Sheffield Castle, the court of the imprisoned Mary, Queen of Scots. Under the alias Emily Hughes, free-roaming Emilia spies on Queen Mary's court and encounters a plot against Queen Elizabeth. Breaking down elements of drama and spycraft, this carefully researched, jam-packed read offers insight into layers of historical power and influence while humorously rendering asides on feminism and social issues of the period. It's a bustling theatrical romp worthy of a standing ovation. Extensive back matter includes historical notes, a timeline, and one-act play "The Princess Saves the Cakes." Characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

#2210042 Ash House (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Angharad Walker

The children at the Ash House want the new boy to love their home as much as they do. They give him a name like theirs. They show him the dorms and tell him about the wonderful oasis that the Headmaster has created for them. But the new boy already has a name. Doesn't he? At least he did before he walked through those gates...

978-1-338-63631-4 Chicken House ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 640

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-9 None of the children at the Ash House has seen anyone new join their number, which makes the arrival of 11-year-old Sol a particularly exciting event. For Sol--short for Solitude, the name bestowed upon him there--the place is shrouded in mystery, but he has been promised that someone there will be able to cure him of the excruciating pains that frequently shoot through his back. Sol is received by Dom (Freedom), a kind boy who shows Sol the ropes, describes the headmaster (currently away) with adoration, and explains that all the children at the Ash House are named for a Niceness--the positive virtues that guide their conduct. Debut author Walker effectively builds an atmospheric, frightening story, tinged with just enough of the supernatural to make Sol, and so the reader, question his sanity. Aptly promoted as an intersection of Miss Peregrine's Home for Peculiar Children and Lord of the Flies, due to its curiosities and the absence of adults, this dread-filled novel is a strong addition to tween horror collections and where Frances Hardinge is popular. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When the new boy arrives at the Ash House, he expects to find someone who can help cure the debilitating back pain that began after his parents died in a house fire. Instead he meets a peculiar group of kids who've never left the property, and he only manages to make one friend, Freedom ("Dom"), from whom he acquires the name Solitude ("Sol"). The residents are governed by Niceness and eager to please their beloved, long-absent Headmaster. Being ill at the heavily surveilled Ash House draws unwanted attention from the unstable and dangerous Doctor, whose surgical intervention renders Sol unable to walk, and as Sol pushes at the Ash House's secrets and restrictions, the Doctor's controls move from subtle to overt savagery. This is an impressive first novel that slowly unfolds its brilliant twists and deceptions as chapters shift focalization between Dom and Sol. The book deftly builds its strange dystopian world of ash and smoke and desperate cooperation, and readers will quickly grasp that something is amiss even behind that front; the note of disturbance is an ever-growing hum until it finally bursts into full-on horror. Walker cleverly leaves the reality of the events a question mark, with evidence plentiful for this being Sol's mental concoction but also for this being a gothic reality, and the teasing ending will allow readers to argue with conviction for either interpretation. This selection would make an excellent option for close reading and developing analytical skills, and it'll be a must for educators looking to spark a classroom debate. Readers will sit back and revel in the uncertainty. QB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A boy arrives at a new school where he hopes to be healed of a mysterious condition that causes him insufferable pain. The Ash House isn't an ordinary school: It is literally made of ash, and the dorm is an old but verdant greenhouse. The Headmaster has been gone for three years, leaving no adults around, yet the children hold on to the hope that he will return. They have no recollection of anything before they arrived at the Ash House, and each has been named after Nicenesses, positive attributes that they are expected to possess such as Concord, Happiness, Temperance, and Liberty. The new boy, who can't remember his outside name, becomes Solitude. Initially, the students are wary of Sol, but with help from his new friend, Freedom--Dom for short--the others warm to him. Then the Doctor arrives. The Doctor claims he can cure Sol, but the children quickly discover he is pure Nastiness. As the children struggle to free themselves from the Doctor's tightening grip, they discover that Courage is the only Niceness that matters. Chapter headings helpfully indicate when the third-person narration switches between Sol's and Dom's perspectives. Action scenes unfold slowly at times, but when they're intense, they're nail-bitingly so, encouraging readers to push through to the satisfyingly ambiguous conclusion. Assume Whiteness for all. An unexpected--and pleasing--combination of propitious and disquieting. (Mystery. 11-14) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Debut author Walker spins a tense tale of abuse and neglect that centers on a brown-skinned foster child's arrival at an imposing, smoke-drenched mansion made of ash. After being sent from a hospital to the Ash House, a boy dubbed Solitude, who experiences back pain and seizures, struggles to fit in with the institution's other children. The kids live on their own in service of rigid, moralistic "Nicenesses"; taking on virtuous names such as Freedom, educating themselves using prerecorded lectures, maintaining the grounds, and tethering their lives to an unbreakable "web of habits and rules"; while longing for their absent Headmaster and dreading the cold and pitiless Doctor's reappearance. Sol bristles at the others' inflexibility, resulting in acrimony and accusations of "nastiness," but when the Doctor returns and Sol is the subject of a medical procedure gone awry, a brutal act with which the group has some experience, he must persuade his reluctant new acquaintances to escape, braving birdlike drones and lantern-eyed creatures en route to the outside world. Simultaneously bleak, moving, and unsettling, Walker's immersive story slowly reveals its secrets, using tension as a lever to tip the reader deep into the Ash House's mysteries. Ages 8: 12. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—The Ash House is a place with a strict moral code that expects Nicenesses and shuns Nastiness, and the child residents seem to have deeply internalized these lessons and have no knowledge of the outside world. An orphaned boy, taken from a hospital, is dropped at the gates of Ash House, where he is renamed Solitude (Sol). The Headmaster has been gone for three years, and the strain is showing on the children who are surviving on their own in decrepit conditions while they live in fear of visits from the Doctor. Twists and turns abound as Sol tries to understand what is happening, find relief from his debilitating mysterious physical pain, and figure out how to help his new community. Sol, with his fresh perspective and outsider knowledge, shakes things up. The children must figure things out on their own as all the adults in the book are either threats or unhelpful. A dreamlike, hazy, ominous atmosphere is created with the story and the book design. The house and grounds are ethereal and seem alive with potential healing qualities, shifting locations, and dangers. The narrative effectively alternates point of view between Sol, who is described as having brown skin, and the pale-skinned brunette child who befriends him, Dom (Freedom). VERDICT This creepy story will appeal to readers who are drawn to the unexplained and all things foreboding in its exploration of memory, reality, truth, found family, and survival.—Erin Wyatt, Highland M.S., Libertyville, IL

#2283723 Hummingbird (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Natalie Lloyd

Twelve-year-old homeschooled Olive is tired of being seen as "fragile" just because she has osteogenesis imperfecta (otherwise known as brittle bone disease) so she's thrilled when she finally convinces her parents to let her attend Macklemore Elementary. Olive can't wait to go to a traditional school and make the friends she's always longed for, until a disastrous first day dashes her hopes of ever fitting in.

978-1-338-65458-5 Scholastic Press ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 610

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Book Page From the very first page of Natalie Lloyd's Hummingbird, the unforgettable spirit of 12-year-old Olive Miracle Martin shines.

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Starred Review Born with incurable brittle bone disease, 12-year-old Olive has done well with homeschooling, but she longs to attend middle school and hopes to make at least one good friend there. After she promises to use her wheelchair at school, and Hatch, her stepbrother and soon-to-be classmate, reluctantly agrees to help Olive, her parents give consent. Immediately, a storm of white "feather-snow" begins outdoors, heralding a phenomenon from local lore: a hummingbird will soon appear to certain people in their Tennessee community and grant their wishes. In the drama group at school, Olive and her new friend, Grace, prepare for a play. Along with Hatch, they begin to search for the hummingbird. Each has a cherished wish, but when magic intersects with reality, odd things happen. With eccentric family members, a distinctive setting, and a supernatural element that is strangely believable within this otherwise realistic story, there's a lot to love here. Inspired by Lloyd's childhood experiences and disability, Olive's first-person narrative transports readers into her world, from the ordeal of a bone break to the triumph of a transformative stage performance. Her active mind, wit, and unerring sense of what matters make this a memorable novel, and the strikingly beautiful jacket art will surely draw readers. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Wildwood, Tennessee's own Olive Miracle Martin is a girl of great, sparkly confidence and passions. She loves her oddball family, church, writing, birding, her wheelchairs, and the idea of attending Macklemore Middle School after years of being home-schooled. Macklemore is the land of her hopes, full of potential friends and wild adventures, yet her osteogenesis imperfecta makes the prospect a challenge. While navigating new social mores and finding her niche within the quirky theater crowd, Olive and intrepid new friend Grace Cho hunt for the local hummingbird said to grant one fantastical wish. In a town where vividly described magic is taken as a point of fact and white feathers fall from the sky like snow, Olive's fairy-tale wish is for bones like steel, not glass. Now she must contend with the question of whether she should--or even wants to--be anyone but who she already is. Olive can lean a tad pitch-perfect, and the world Lloyd builds is at times saccharine, but the energetic first-person narration, interspersed with Olive's thoughts in free verse, is full of bold personality. Refreshingly, her obstacles don't come from being a wheelchair user but from navigating an inaccessible world. Her grappling with fears and bold dreams offers a rare depiction of physical disability that is allowed to be both complicated and empowering. The book follows a White default; Grace is described as East Asian. A spirited tale of self-belief. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Lloyd (Over the Moon) puts character development center stage as a sixth grader who uses a wheelchair enters the spotlight thanks to a school play and small-town magic. After years of being homeschooled due to her osteogenesis imperfecta, 11-year-old birder Olive Martin enrolls in a Tennessee middle school to meet her "future BFF" and prove that she's "more/ than bones and wheels/ and breakable parts." Learning of her brittle bones, classmates initially treat Olive "like a stick of dynamite." When she subsequently hears about a rare hummingbird that grants wishes to seekers who decipher its riddle, an uncomfortable new desire surfaces: "bones like steel." Teaming up with entrepreneurial classmate Grace Cho, Olive races to crack the riddle while wrestling with thorny self-image questions; soon realizing that other classmates also have "a wish tucked deep in soul." Olive's sparkly personality roars to life through assured first-person narration, metaphors rooted in the natural world, and simple yet piercing free verse that distills her self-revelations. An author's note acknowledges the diversity of disability experiences ("as unique as that individual's heart or fingerprints") and connects Lloyd's lived experiences to Olive's candid emotional arc. Protagonists cue as white; secondary characters represent multiple skin tones, ethnicities, and conditions. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Suzie Townsend, New Leaf Literary. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8--In her latest novel, Lloyd calls on personal experiences to create a realistic and magical adventure for middle grade readers. Twelve-year-old Olive has been homeschooled her entire life. She has osteogenesis imperfecta (also known as brittle bone disease) and uses a wheelchair, and her mother has always feared for her to leave the nest--but Olive is determined to go to public school and make a friend. When her mother relents and Olive starts public school for the first time, she must deal with so much more than she bargained for. Then she hears about a magical hummingbird that grants wishes, and it seems like finding this creature will be the answer to all her problems. With a few new companions along the way, Olive tries to discover the secrets of the hummingbird. This is an uplifting story for readers who enjoy realistic settings with magical threads. Olive is developed beautifully as a main character, giving older elementary and middle school readers plenty to relate to and love. The authentic voice that Lloyd crafts in Olive shines throughout the book. VERDICT A must-have for any elementary school or middle school library, this magical and heartening novel will keep readers engaged until the end. A perfect fit for fans of realistic fiction and fantasy alike.--Elizabeth Pelayo Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness A bold, lively narrator with brittle bone disease stars in this whimsical, heartwarming story that's laced with magic.

#2161758 Eight Princesses and a Magic Mirror (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Natasha Farrant

"Mirror, mirror on the wall . . . what makes a princess excellent?" When an enchantress flings her magic mirror into our universe, its reflection reveals princesses who refuse to be just pretty, polite, and obedient. These are girls determined to do the rescuing themselves.

978-1-324-01556-7 W. W. Norton & Company, Incorporated ©2020 6 x 8-1/2 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 880

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Strung loosely together under the premise that an enchantress is using a magic mirror to learn about princesses all around the world and throughout time, eight lovely short stories are presented in a way that feels at once fresh and familiar. Each princess featured is the sort who saves herself, and some of the stories hint just enough at a classic tale that readers will feel completely at home. Female friendships and empowerment, diversity as a given, and Corry's gorgeous, full-color watercolor illustrations deliver the whole package. Digestible in bits or all at once, this is one that readers will return to over and over again for inspiration. As the book closes, the enchantress asks the magic mirror to tell her what it learned about being an excellent princess. Its reply is that they are "brave and fierce and loyal, with big dreams, and even bigger hearts, and such a thirst for the world." In short, they are "excellent people."

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books An enchantress, delighted to be named godmother to a royal baby but a bit perplexed by the task, sends her magic mirror out into the world to find out what it means to be an excellent princess. The mirror observes eight (fictional) princesses across time whose acts of character range from rescuing their sisters and kingdoms, keeping unusual pets, and sailing the seas to baking bread, finding a place to belong, and saving a beloved community garden. Each princess' tale has a light, pragmatic tone that generally keeps it from being prescriptive, and readers will enjoy spotting diverse folkloric influences. As they highlight many kinds of excellent princesshood, the tales emphasize community and cross-generational cooperation while taking humorous jabs at destructive, hypermasculine cliches, especially in the tale of Heloise and a healer witch ("What would you do if a knight were wounded in battle?" "Leave him to die, probably"). Corry's generous illustrations, with folk art influences evident in the botanical accents and flat compositions, frame and punctuate the text. (A crocodile is particularly delightful in his gently mottled blue-green hide, ungainly rounded angles, and cutely pointy snout.) This is an enjoyable addition to a princess collection, and it would pair well with Jessie Burton's The Restless Girls (BCCB 2/19). FHK

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide The framing structure for this collection of princess stories is elaborate. When an enchantress is invited to be the godmother to a princess, she realizes that she doesn't know what qualities a true princess should embody, so she sends her magic mirror on a quest, across the world and across centuries, to observe princesses and come up with a definition of princess-ly excellence. As the enchantress loses and finds the mirror, we move from one folktale-inflected setting to another -- medieval Europe, North Africa, Scotland, the Amazon -- all reminiscent of the old-fashioned tradition of "fairy tales from many lands," there as here unsourced. The eight stories feature heroic princesses who are physically brave, rebellious, cheeky, intellectually curious, empathetic, and attuned to the natural world. They save their communities from attack, they rescue those in peril, they stand up for themselves, they speak truth to power. They find satisfaction, acceptance, and love. The writing is jaunty, and the lushly illustrated and decorated pages are full of movement, detail, and character. The point here is obviously an antidote to the glitter-and-big-hair trope of the pop-culture princess, but the illustrator does throw a sop to princess enthusiasts with her generous use of pink. (Copyright 2020 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews ight princesses together. The princess glut in today's media--especially the contemporary threads of the "girl power" ones, such as the entrepreneurial Tiana in Disney's Princess and the Frog and the warrior princesses like said studio's Mulan and Merida from Brave--might make readers roll their eyes at another. However, the author ties this enchanting European-heavy multicultural cast of preteen royalty together through the narrative device of a confidence-boosting enchanted mirror. It all begins when the looking glass, which once hung on an enchantress's wall, flippantly tells its owner that it knows nothing about princesses' attributes. The enchantress shrinks the mirror to compact-size and sends it on a time- and alternate-world-spanning adventure to places coded, from the characters' names such as Héloïse and Ellen Leila al'Aqbar, Abayome, Tica, Anya, and Zarah, and other details, as continental Europe, War and Peace-era Russia and Paris, the Middle East, Africa, Latin America, and New York City. The author deftly weaves the arc of the mirror's fantastic journey into each girl's journey of self-discovery, from becoming a nation's herbal healer to an anti-gentrification activist. Best of all, though the mirror is a device, it is not a gimmick thanks to the author's engaging plot and the illustrator's evocatively playful, full-colored drawings that border each story. These tales are enchanting in both their realness and their whimsy. (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Filled with varied expressions of what it means to excel, culturally diverse fairy tale imaginings by Farrant (The Children of Castle Rock) pair with Corry's naïf-style illustrations to present a series of episodic stories bound together by a single object. When an enchantress employs her magic mirror to discern, for her goddaughter's benefit, the ways to become an "excellent princess," the mirror; made pocket-size; visits young women in various locales and eras, all of whom are people who get things done. Princess Heloise undertakes a forest quest to save her sickly sister, Princess Tica must decide how to handle a beloved crocodile, and Princess Abayome's world is upended by her father's new wife. From Russian royalty fallen on hard times to a young activist living in a concrete apartment building, each must identify what makes her unique and use those traits to overcome her obstacles. Joyful retellings of time-honored fairy tales to inspire and challenge a new generation. Ages 9: 12. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--"What makes a princess excellent?" an enchantress ponders when she is asked to be godmother to a royal princess. When her enchanted mirror cannot give her a satisfactory answer, she shrinks it down to compact size. She then sends it out into the world to be her eyes and ears as it observes princesses across lands and centuries, in order to decide on the right gift for the newborn. As the mirror travels, it is lost, found, and both treasured and ignored for many years by eight different princesses. There is Heloise, who uses the magic in the mirror to become a great healer and save her dear sister's life; Laila, who bravely saves her father's kingdom from an enemy's attack; and Saoirse, who discovers her true talent is collecting stories for future generations. Each princess possesses inner strength and tenacity, refuting the notion that princesses must be merely fair and obedient. There are through lines connecting each tale, and when the mirror finally returns to the enchantress, it relates all that it has seen. It informs the enchantress that it is not through titles or being gifted by others that true princesses emerge; it is integrity, dedication, and self-awareness. Even readers who eschew fairy tales will find adventure and sweet surprise in these tales of royals who rebel against the stereotypes of their position. Prominent throughout the stories are Corry's whimsical color illustrations. The fanciful drawings bring characters and landscape to life, and they are a delightful accent to the tales. VERDICT Readers will find these stories of brave, determined young ladies inspirational as well as engaging.--Carol Connor, Cincinnati Public Schools Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2180167 Distress Signal (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mary E. Lambert

Lavender's class is on a field trip in the desert of Chiricahua National Park, hiking down a ravine, when a flash flood strikes! As the water hurtles down the ravine, everyone sprints for safety. Lavender runs in the opposite direction as the rest of her class and scrambles up a tree while the torrential river rages by.

978-1-338-60744-4 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 700

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Lavender has been looking forward to the sixth grade field trip to Chiricahua National Park in Arizona. The class will go on hikes and stargaze with the newly purchased class telescope. Plus, she'll get three days of hanging out with her best friend, Marisol. However, nothing is going to plan; Marisol is ignoring her and spending time with mean girl Rachele. When the class accidentally goes off trail, Lavender decides to prank Rachele so Marisol will see Rachele's true colors. Then she hears a flash flood warning on her ham radio, and while the rest of her class escapes, Lavender, Rachele, Marisol, and fellow student John get separated from the group. With no signal to call for help, limited water, and no maps, the students must work together to survive, while overcoming their friendship drama. The story is easy to read with a straightforward plot, and Lambert skillfully hooks readers with compelling chapter endings. The friend drama among the three girls is authentic for their ages, but some readers may find the meanness once they are in a survival situation, unrealistic. VERDICT Readers who enjoyed

Rebecca Behrens's The Disaster Days or Watt Key's Deep Water will enjoy Lambert's blend of survival themes, focus on teamwork, and friendship drama in her fast-paced plot. Fans of Dusti Bowling's The Canyon's Edge will also find the similar wilderness and survival themes intriguing.—
Kaetlyn Phillips, Yorkton, Sask.

#2281020 Fort (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gordon Korman

The morning after Hurricane Leo rips through the town of Canaan, residents awaken to widespread destruction -- power outages, downed branches, uprooted trees, broken windows and damaged roofs. Four eighth-grade friends -- Evan, Jason, Mitchell, and CJ -- meet to explore the devastation. Ricky is the one to find the strange trap door that's appeared in the middle of the woods -- the door to an old bomb shelter, unearthed by the hurricane. Things soon get tense. Some bad locals keep snooping around. And what started out as a fun place to escape soon becomes a serious refuge for one of the kids who is trying to avoid an abusive home situation. In order to save the shelter, the friends must keep its secret... and in order to save themselves, they're going to have to share their individual secrets, and build the safest place they can.

978-1-338-62914-9 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A gaggle of eighth graders find the coolest clubhouse ever. Fulfilling the fantasies of anyone who's ever constructed a fort in their bedroom or elsewhere, Korman hands his five middle schoolers a fully stocked bomb shelter constructed decades ago in the local woods by an eccentric tycoon and lost until a hurricane exposes the entrance. So, how to keep the hideout secret from interfering grown-ups--and, more particularly, from scary teen psychopath Jaeger Devlin? The challenge is tougher still when everyone in the central cast is saddled with something: C.J. struggles to hide injuries inflicted by the unstable stepdad his likewise abused mother persists in enabling; Jason is both caught in the middle of a vicious divorce and unable to stand up to his controlling girlfriend; Evan is not only abandoned by drug-abusing parents, but sees his big brother going to the bad thanks to Jaeger's influence; Mitchell struggles with OCD-fueled anxieties and superstitions; and so forth. How to keep a story overtaxed with issues and conflicts from turning into a dreary slog? Spoiler alert: Neither the author nor his characters ultimately prove equal to the challenge. With the possible exception of Ricky Molina, one of the multiple narrators, everyone seems to be White. A terrific premise buried beneath problem-novel tropes. (resources, author's note) (Fiction. 11-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2271944 Best Frenemies Forever (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Megan McCafferty

Sophie Dailey is NOT looking forward to starting middle school. For one thing, she doesn't look like other kids. Instead of trendy tank tops, she wears high tech shirts that block UV rays. (Sun protection is serious business!) Sophie is comfortable with who she is and doesn't want to change. Sophie can't believe Kaytee wants to spend the last days of summer with her. Determined to keep Kaytee as a friend, Sophie lies about her social status, claiming to be besties with Morgan and Ella. As long as Kaytee attends Villa Academy--a private school on the other side of town--she'll never find out her first friend in New Jersey is a loser. But can any friendship built on lies survive seventh grade?

978-1-338-72249-9 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Sophie befriends her new neighbor, hoping Kaytee will never learn why she was deserted by Ella, her former best friend. Sophie's been lonely the whole summer, but little does she suspect that bubbly Kaytee also has secrets. Kaytee's parents are sending her and her twin brother to private schools, so Sophie feels safe lying about her popularity. In reality, Ella was wooed away by mean girl Morgan in sixth grade, and now "MorganElla" are joined at the hip, excluding and being unkind to Sophie. Everything starts to fall apart when Kaytee, who is miserable at her private school, transfers to Sophie's public school. Sophie--smart, science-oriented, and a budding feminist--has no interest in clothes, makeup, boys, or social media. Kaytee acts more like the popular girls, but there is a part of her ocean- and dolphin-loving self that genuinely likes Sophie. Still, practical Sophie, generally good-hearted, is not above considering blackmail after she learns her neighbor's well-kept secret. The middle school friendship problems in this novel ring true, but some of Sophie's first-person narration feels artificial. Readers will tire of frequent pronouncements from Sophie's social worker mother and environmental scientist father. Most characters default to White; names cue some minor characters as Asian or Latinx. Seventh grade friendship issues loom large in this novel that doesn't stand out from the crowd. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Sophie, newly best-friendless, is wading through a lonely summer and dreading seventh grade when confident neighbor Kaytee moves in. Sophie is delighted that Kaytee wants to be friends, especially since Kaytee is going to attend a private school; Kaytee will never know that Sophie has been ditched by her former best friend and is the target of ongoing bullying by the popular, social media-savvy squad that her former friend has joined. Sophie's guilt-inducing small lies about being popular morph into more complicated ones as the groups of girls encounter each other and Kaytee eventually switches to Sophie's school. Sophie knows she is awkward, but doesn't know how to change it. She admires Kaytee's "cool girl confidence" and convinces herself that "what Kaytee doesn't know will only help our friendship grow." Kaytee has her own embarrassing past, the truth of which slowly unfolds. Sophie takes advantage of this secret before the girls ultimately reconcile. This is a sequel in the "Mercer Middle School" series, but can stand alone for new readers. The girls' friendship rings true, as do the instances of bullying and the lingering hurt of a friendship ending unexpectedly. Even with short chapters, the story occasionally lags, and the heavy-handedness of Sophie's parents' beliefs occasionally get in the way of the story, despite playing a part in Sophie's own mindset. Most characters are cued as white. VERDICT Despite some shortcomings, the always-relevant topic of friendship drama makes this title an acceptable choice where there is need.--Laura Stiles Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2366355 Heroes: a Novel of Pearl Harbor (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alan Gratz

December 6, 1941: Best friends Frank and Stanley have it good. Their dads are Navy pilots stationed at Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, and the boys get a front-row view of the huge battleships and the sparkling water. Yes, World War II is raging in Europe and in Asia, but the US isn't involved in the war, and the boys are free to dream about becoming comic book creators. (The book ends with an all-original, 10-page black & white comic that brings to life the comic book idea that Frank and Stanley brainstorm in the novel. The comic is written by Alan Gratz and illustrated by Judit Tondora.)

978-1-338-73607-6 Scholastic Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Pearl Harbor, December 6, 1941. It's another day in paradise for white 13-year-old Frank McCoy and his best friend, Japanese American Stanley Summers, united by their love of the comics they create together. For Frank, though, the perfection is compromised by a closely guarded secret: he's been afraid of everything since what he calls The Incident (he was mauled by a dog and has the scars to prove it). The next day, December 7, a seaman invites the boys to tour the decommissioned battleship Utah. They eagerly accept and are aboard when paradise becomes hell as a wave of Japanese planes attacks, destroying the entire American fleet in the harbor. In a thrilling, white-knuckle set piece, Gratz (Captain America: The Ghost Army, 2023) recreates the attack and Frank's and Stanley's harrowing experience of it. Just surviving tests the boys' mettle, as Frank swallows his fears and rescues a drowning seaman, becoming, at least for a while, a hero. Gratz does his usual splendid job of creating the visceral drama of battle alongside fully realized characters. He handles the theme of heroism well, while not straying into the didactic, and is especially good at depicting the enduring friendship of the two boys as, together, they experience the date that will live in infamy.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Set during the attack on Pearl Harbor that drew the U.S. into WWII, this tensely wrought, propulsive historical novel by Gratz (Two Degrees) centers the compelling friendship between 13-year-old aspiring writer Frank McCoy and illustrator Stanley Summers, who are brainstorming their own comic book characters. The pair live in the seemingly idyllic Ford Island Naval Air Station in Pearl Harbor, where their fathers are stationed. Frank harbors secret anxiety surrounding his perceived lack of courage, especially evident when he avoids helping Stanley confront bullies, which prompts Stanley to ask, "How do you think you can write about heroes if you can't be one yourself?" These paralyzing fears come into stark relief when, while the pair are on a battleship tour, Japanese planes begin bombing unsuspecting military targets. After diving from a sinking ship, the friends struggle to reach home amid violence, chaos, and death. Though the novel's tone is sometimes uneven and text can read as didactic, Gratz sensitively handles characters' suspicion of Stanley surrounding his Japanese American heritage, and offers a gripping, well-researched account of courage and friendship in this powerful depiction of American racism and imprisonment. Back matter includes a comic book created by Frank and Stanley and an author's note. Ages 8: 12. (Feb.)

#2271943 Castle of Tangled Magic (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sophie Anderson

Twelve-year-old Olia knows a thing or two about secrets. Her parents are the caretakers of Castle Mila, a soaring palace with golden domes, lush gardens, and

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$17.99

countless rooms. Literally countless rooms. She has a special bond with the castle, and it seems to trust her with its secrets. But then a violent storm rolls in . . . a storm that skips over the village and surrounds the castle, threatening to tear it apart. While taking cover in a rarely-used room, Olia stumbles down a secret passage that leads to a part of Castle Mila she's never seen before. A strange network of rooms that hide the secret to the castle's past . . . and the truth about who's trying to destroy it.
 978-1-338-74621-1 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 860

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Olia is no princess, but she lives in Castle Mila with her baby sister, grandmother, and parents, who are the castle's caretakers. After a fierce storm breaks part of the castle's main dome, Olia embarks on a magical journey with the house's guardian spirit into another realm to try and save the structure. The realm is full of spirits and creatures beyond her imagination, and, to her dismay, she learns that it, too, is in danger of destruction. Anderson describes the fantasy world beautifully, with engaging prose that guides readers through. She blends Slavic folktales and cultures beautifully as Olia explores her castle's secrets, meets new denizens, and acquires magical objects on her quest to save everyone. Bighearted Olia is easy to cheer on and always tries to find ways to resolve all the problems and conflicts she encounters. Unfamiliar names for foods, spirits, and creatures will likely lead readers to search for more stories that inspired this fantastical world within Castle Mila. A story encouraging readers to believe in magic all around us. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews ly and her home. Thirteen-year-old Olia loves her family's ramble-shamble wooden castle. She loves that they have called Castle Mila home for the past 500 years, from her royal ancestors to the present day in which her parents are carpenters. And she loves that he and her family--Papa, Mama, baby sister, and Babusya--care for it now. When an unexpected storm threatens Castle Mila, Babusya reveals that magic is attempting to break free from the castle's domes and that only Olia can prevent further damage. Aided by the castle's domovoi, a foxlike spirit named Feliks, Olia has less than one day to journey through the Land of Forbidden Magic, cut off the beard of an evil wizard, and restore the balance of magic. Along the way she meets myriad magical creatures from Slavic lore and learns that nothing--from her own abilities to the Land of Forgotten Magic to her family's legacy--is what it seemed. Although in keeping with the narrative's fairy-tale influences, largely unanswered worldbuilding questions--for example, why is Olia the only one who can save Castle Mila?--may leave readers feeling that key aspects of the plot are underdeveloped and contrived. The dialogue sometimes feels self-conscious, but Olia's first-person narration is earnest, and readers will root for her. The human cast reads as default White. A Slavic-inspired fantasy that may appeal to fans of fairy tales. (glossary) (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Even though a revolution a century earlier ended with a "fallen throne," 13-year-old Olia's formerly royal family, which reads as white, has continued to dwell in Castle Mila leading up to its 500th birthday. While her carpenter parents maintain the ancient structure, which is built entirely of wood and boasts 13 domes, narrator Olia, an artist, delights in discovering its secrets and seeking her way into the domes, which her Babusya insists "are filled with magic that has been locked away from the world." When a terrible storm threatens the building, Olia and her new companion, a foxlike domovoi named Feliks, must travel to the Land of Forbidden Magic; a realm locked away following a rivalry between a wizard and one of Olia's ancestors. But as the magic seeks to break through castle and realm, both are in danger of being destroyed forever. To save her home and prevent a catastrophe, Olia must join with several nature spirits to fight the wizard. Again drawing on Slavic myth, Anderson (The Girl Who Speaks Bear) writes an intimately cadenced adventure, rendering the magically charged setting a character of its own while emphasizing themes of perspective, family legacy, and following one's gut. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Gemma Cooper, Bent Agency. (Mar.)

#2271946 This Might Get Awkward (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kara McDowell

During a solo outing to her favorite beach, Gemma realizes--to her horror--that the popular kids from school have shown up to throw a party. Before she can sneak away (and possibly puke behind her car) Gemma is pulled into the action and ends up talking to Beau, who asks her to pretend that they're "close." After rescuing Beau from the water, Gemma is mistaken for Beau's girlfriend by his friends and family, including his mysterious older brother, Griff, who has returned to town after a year away. For the first time, Gemma has everything she's ever wanted: friends, big family dinners, and Griff--a boy who she can be herself around. But how can she embrace her new dream life when everything is built on a lie?

978-1-338-74623-5 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 7-10 Social anxieties plague Gemma, a high-school senior. She feels entirely relaxed on an empty lakeside beach, until a crowd of classmates arrives to party. When Beau Booker, a popular guy and her longtime secret crush, suddenly asks her for a favor, "Pretend that we're close. That you like me," she's baffled but willing. Within minutes, a boating accident leaves Beau unconscious and nearly drowned, while Gemma, who saved his life, is meeting his family and friends, who all assume that she's his new girlfriend. Over the weeks that follow, she tries to conquer her anxieties with the help of Griff, Beau's older brother, whose bad-boy reputation contrasts with Beau's more positive image. McDowell uses the settings (Lake Powell and nearby Page, Arizona) effectively within a first-person narrative written with wit and irony. Hampered by insecurities, Gemma makes plenty of mistakes as she struggles to recognize what she wants and how to achieve it, but readers will have no doubts about where her heart lies. An engaging romance with a satisfying conclusion. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After falling into a fake relationship with her crush while he's in a coma, Gemma starts falling for his brooding brother. Socially awkward Gemma Wells lives near the Arizona-Utah border where her father runs boat tours of Lake Powell. She finds herself in the middle of the summer's wildest drama when she rescues high school hottie Beau Booker from drowning during a boating accident. Beau lands in a medically induced coma, and when a nurse mistakes Gemma for his girlfriend, the story takes on a life of its own. Too nervous to tell the truth, Gemma hopes for a potential real relationship with the boy of her dreams. Beau's hospital stint forces Griff, his mysterious older brother, to return to town, and when he strikes up a friendship with Gemma, she wonders if she's falling for him instead. Griff and Gemma's growing relationship will have readers flying through pages, desperate to uncover what will happen when Beau eventually wakes up. Beyond the romance, McDowell shines a spotlight on mental health: Gemma's social anxiety disorder is displayed in both her social interactions and inner emotional workings, and her friend Sofia opens up about her struggle with depression. While Gemma and Griff's interactions and growing closeness are compelling and fully drawn, many of the side characters unfortunately fall flat. Main characters are presumed White; Sofia is cued as Latinx. Hits the mark as a page-turning romance. (Romance. 12-17) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2273551 Do-Over (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jennifer Torres

Raquel and Lucinda used to be inseparable. But ever since their parents split, Raquel has been acting like editor-in-chief of their lives. Then a pandemic hits, and the sisters are forced to spend the lockdown at their dad's ranch house. But at the ranch, they get a not-so-welcome surprise: their dad's new girlfriend and her daughter are already living there! Lucinda finds she actually likes them, which only makes Raquel more desperate to get rid of them. And as her Raquel's schemes get more and more out of hand, Lucinda starts to wonder what they are really fighting for. Is trying to bring the Mendoza family back together really just tearing them further apart?

978-1-338-75419-3 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7-Twins Lucinda and Raquel Mendoza haven't been close since their parents' divorce. Raquel has a tendency to organize and dictate their lives. To cope, Lucinda has committed herself to ice-skating. When a pandemic forces them to quarantine, Raquel remains busy with her school newspaper, but Lucinda is sidelined and anxious about keeping up her training. When the girls' mother decides to send them to their father's ranch to continue quarantining, Raquel convinces their mother to join them at the ranch, hoping that the experience will rekindle the parents' relationship. Unfortunately, the twins discover that their father has moved his new girlfriend and her daughter into the ranch as well. Raquel is undeterred, but Lucinda is not on board, and becomes increasingly uncomfortable with her twin's schemes. This gentle remix of The Parent Trap with a pandemic twist is entertaining. While the pandemic realities of toilet paper hoarding, virtual schooling, and staying sane in close proximity are depicted, they are not the focus. The portrayal of the fraying sibling bond is sympathetic and realistic, as is the challenge of blending families. The adults are involved, supportive, and committed to maintaining family ties. There's humor, drama, and some bad decisions that will keep tween readers engaged. VERDICT A timely, pleasing addition to the realistic middle grade fiction shelf.-Brenda Kahn © Copyright 2022. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. No redistribution permitted.

#2349206 Twisted Tale Anthology (Hardcover (Trade))

This Twisted Tale anthology features sixteen twisted short stories with new takes on fan-favorite Disney films. Swoon as Ariel and Eric meet right after the Little Mermaid saves her prince; join Tiana and Naveen on a race to get back to Maldonia; take a ride on a pirate space ship with Jim Hawkins; and uncover just what power Tinker Bell's pixie dust holds.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

978-1-368-08041-5 Disney Publishing Worldwide ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 576 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A whole collection of Disney what ifs. What if Snow White picked up some magic? What if Mufasa survived his fall? What if Tinker Bell worked for Captain Hook? What if Aurora was raised with knowledge of Maleficent's curse? YA authors explore these possibilities (and more) in this collection of 16 short stories. Previous contributors to the A Twisted Tale series return—Liz Braswell, Jen Calonita, Farrah Rochon, and editor Lim. Joining them are Livia Blackburne, M.K. England, Micol Ostow, and Kristina Pérez. The shorter format allows readers to revisit some movies that already have their own novel-length treatments (The Little Mermaid, Mulan, Hercules, The Princess and the Frog) as well as others that often get less attention (Robin Hood, Treasure Planet, Bambi), which is refreshing. Some of the stories have radical and intriguing premises (Rochon's "A New Dawn," Braswell's "A Royal Game of Chess," and Lim's "The Rose and the Thorns"). The stories that take place after the canon may be the most fun for some readers, since they don't upend the original beloved narratives (Lim's "A First Mission" and Calonita's "The Envelope" and "Fates, Three"). A couple of the tales offer some expanded backstory or fill in missing scenes (Pérez's "A Dragon in the Snow" and Braswell's "The Reluctant Prince"). All in all, this volume contains a pleasing variety of well-crafted entries. An entertaining compilation that will satisfy Disney fans. (Fantasy anthology. 12-18)

#2330018 Dark Place (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Britney S. Lewis

Seventeen-year-old Hylee Williams didn't ask to disappear. She didn't ask to move from Kansas City, Kansas out to the suburbs in Missouri. But she did disappear, and not only that, but when she vanished from our world, she materialized in a dark, twisted version of the night that changed her life forever: the night her older brother went missing.

978-1-368-07773-6 Disney-Hyperion ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Seventeen-year-old Hylee is no stranger to disappearances: one awful night, her childhood home was destroyed and her brother disappeared and has never been found. But when Hylee quite literally disappears right in front of her parents, they decide it's too much to handle and send her to live with her grandmother, who also doesn't seem to want to talk about what happened to Hylee or her brother. Hylee finally gets a chance to have her questions answered when she disappears in front of gorgeous, understanding Eilam, whose family conveniently happens to contain time travelers. But as Hylee begins to follow the story of what she's seeing when she travels back to that fateful night, the darkness starts to follow her back, and only she can save herself. Though a self-admitted frequent liar, Hylee is a sympathetic main character, with big, believable feelings and legitimate frustrations. Despite uneven pacing and a too-quick ending, differences in ways of handling intergenerational trauma and the importance of familial support and open communication are smoothly interwoven with truly disturbing horror imagery. — Allie Stevens

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A high school senior vows to solve her older brother's cold case while warding off the growing darkness of an unseen world. Seventeen-year-old Hylee Williams never wanted to leave Kansas. But after she literally vanished and reappeared in front of her parents and best friend during a cookout, Hylee was sent to live with her paternal grandmother in the cookie-cutter suburbs of Missouri. Hylee's new life is less than desirable. She's the new kid at school, her parents barely keep in touch—and she's being pulled into another dimension, always arriving at a sinister version of her childhood home, where she's forced to relive the night when her then-15-year-old brother, Bubba, went missing. Bubba's body was never found, but nine years later, Hylee believes he is still alive. When Hylee meets a charmingly awkward boy called Eilam Roads at a house party, the attraction is undeniable; both feel as though they've met—and loved—each other before. As the frequency and duration of Hylee's time-traveling episodes increase, she leans on Eilam to help control her ability, which may be linked to Bubba's disappearance. Lewis' genre-bending second novel offers equal parts star-crossed romance and spine-tingling science fiction horror. The method for time traveling is too easily explained, but the narrative is richly layered, and Hylee and Eilam's relationship is depicted with tenderness. Main characters are Black. An ultimately hopeful story that shows love—in all its powerful forms—can conquer the demons of the past. (Horror. 13-18)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly The day before her 17th birthday, Hylee Williams vanishes from a cookout at her Kansas City home. She emerges nine years in the past in a twisted alternate version of a childhood memory in which her family learned that her older brother had gone missing. When she returns to the present, her parents refuse to acknowledge her sudden disappearance and send her to live with her grandmother in the Missouri suburbs. Hylee uneasily settles into her new school, but she continues to randomly blink out of her contemporary life into that sinister alternate world. With no one to turn to, she struggles to understand what's happening to her and whether it could be related to her brother's disappearance. After she vanishes in front of tall, charming, and strangely familiar classmate Eilam Roads, 17, Hylee recruits him into her supernatural investigation. Employing alternating past and present sequences, poetic first-person narration, and moody prose, Lewis (The Undead Truth of Us) builds a tense atmosphere shadowed by secrets unsaid. By deftly exploring the persistent echoes of a traumatic event on one family, Lewis emphasizes the healing power of connection and closure. Hylee and Eilam are Black. Ages 12: up. Agent: Katelyn Detweiler, Jill Grinberg Literary. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 10 Up--Lewis's sophomore novel at its premise sounds intriguing and scary, but unfortunately the book is not executed as expected. Seventeen-year-old Hylee moves in with her grandmother after she has an incident at her house where she disappeared from inside her house and showed up again on the porch. When she moves in with her grandmother, she starts to learn that when she disappears, she appears to be going back in time, to when her brother disappeared. There is a lot happening in this book. Hylee is dealing with her mysterious disappearing, her parents not wanting her in their home because of it, her meeting new kids at school, her old best friend ignoring her for disappearing, her romance with a boy she met at a party, the disappearance of her brother after her family home was broken into when she was young, and a creepy no-eyed version of her in the "other world" she goes to. Reading this novel often feels like there are multiple stories happening, but nothing ties together cohesively. Also, for a book pitched as horror, it is more sci-fi/time travel. VERDICT Give to fans of Lewis's first novel or those looking for a different twist on time travel.--Tegan Beese Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2356018 All Is Found: A Frozen Anthology (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Just in time to celebrate the first decade of the Frozen franchise, we join Anna, Elsa, Kristoff, Sven, and Olaf as they embark on new adventures through the Frozen universe with friends new and old. This wide variety of original stories will share untold tales from Anna and Elsa's childhood, memories with their parents, and mysterious creatures they encounter. These highly relatable, yet larger than life characters will appeal to young Frozen fans as well as the Frozen fan in all of us. 978-1-368-09248-7 Disney Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 730	1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In honor of the 10th anniversary of the Disney film Frozen. This anthology combines adventure, humor, and lessons in communication and love with opportunities for readers to visit some cherished characters. In Diana Peterfreund's "Anna of Arendelle and the Silver Skates," young Elsa is confined to her room and wants to help Anna practice ice-skating. A surprise engagement party for the happy couple has everyone, including the unsuspecting lovebirds, in a state in "Engaging Anna and Kristoff," by Jen Calonita. "Cold Secrets Deep Down," by Delilah Dawson, follows a sea voyage during which the sisters come face to face with a gigantic tentacled creature. In Vera Strange's "Elsa and the First Monster," Elsa feels compelled to investigate rumors of a mysterious creature up on North Mountain. "Call of the Cuckoo," by Sámi author Karen Anne Buljo, is a Northuldra tale that speaks of wishes and love. Mancusi's "Coronation Day" takes place on Elsa's big day; her parents and sister are all there to support her, so why does she feel like something is wrong? There's a good variety among the stories, and the execution is largely satisfactory. Written with the expectation that readers will already be familiar with the characters and their storylines, most of the entries take place after the timeline of the second film and reference earlier events accordingly. A solid anthology that should satisfy fans of the franchise. (Fiction. 9-14)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2333069 Spirit Glass (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Roshani Chokshi Corazon yearns to finally start training as a babaylan (a mystical healer and spirit guide) under her powerful guardian, Tina. When her magic awakens, Corazon plans to bring her parents back to life. Tina sends Corazon on a quest to fashion a key that will restore balance between the human and spirit realms. But Corazon must move quickly, before a vengeful ghost gets through the Spirit Mirror and all hope is lost. 978-1-368-09339-2 Disney Publishing Worldwide ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Starred Review Chokshi is well known for her best-selling Aru Shah series, but she has outdone herself with her newest addition to the Rick Riordan Presents line, a standalone adventure that centers Filipino mythology. Corazon Lopez is a young babaylan (Filipino shaman) whose powers haven't yet fully awakened. Once they do, her number one goal is to bring back her parents, who passed away several years ago, leaving her in the care of her Aunt Tina, a babaylan with all of the power yet none of the warmth of Corazon's deceased mother. Her plan (and the fate of the world) is threatened when a ghost steals Corazon's soul key, a magical object with the power to tip the balance of the world, both human and spirit. Corazon's quest to retrieve the key unearths many secrets, including the one hidden deep in her heart. The Spirit Glass is a classic quest story with all the fun and danger one might expect from such a tale. Corazon's spirit companion, a gecko named Saso, provides much of the levity, but at its heart, this book is a story about grief. Corazon learns many hard truths, and young readers going through similar loss might find comfort in Corazon's trials. If nothing else, they have these words from the spirit glass in Tina's House: "I see you, little one. Your pain is not invisible to me." A must-have for any reader who loves folklore-inspired fantasy. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An open heart leads a girl to what she needs in this page-turner embedded in Filipino mythology. Corazon Lopez comes from a family of babaylans, mortals “who guarded the boundaries between the human world and the realm of spirits.” She must wait until her 12th birthday for her powerful magic to awaken so she can be trained by her aunt Tina. Corazon is especially eager to develop the ability to bring her deceased parents back to life instead of just having weekly dinners with their ghosts. Despite the presence of Saso, her anito or spirit companion who takes the form of a small lizard, and being cared for by Tina’s sentient home, Corazon feels lonely. Things take a turn for the worse when Corazon encounters Flordeliza, a vengeful ghost who steals her soul key, a token of powerful magic gifted to her by her mother that is essential to bringing her parents back. Soon the Library of Mirrors that contains portals to the spirit realms shows warning signs of an imbalance between worlds. Corazon, Saso, and their new ghost friend, Leo, must attempt to surmount daunting obstacles before it’s too late in Chokshi’s action-packed quest that balances tragedy and grief with comical antics. Family secrets, folktales, and the cultural diversity of the Philippines add interest to this story that ends on a hopeful note. A thrilling tale brimming with magic and love. (author’s note, glossary) (Adventure. 9-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Featuring a Filipina protagonist coming into her powers, Chokshi (the Aru Shah series) writes a memorable spin on a tween's looking-glass adventures. Three years after her parents' deaths, 11-year-old Corazon Lopez lives with her magically powerful but emotionally distant aunt Tina in a wondrous House "that tucked her in each evening and made sure she always had a sweater when it got cold." Like the women in their family, both Corazon and Tina are babaylans; mortals who guard the boundaries between the human and spirit worlds; but two days before her magic-manifesting 12th birthday, Corazon's specific power remains unknown even to her. She waits impatiently on the cusp with her wisecracking companion anito, an earth spirit named Saso who resembles a blue lizard, and a soul key that allows her to visit with her parents' ghosts each Saturday. She plans to bring them back to life once she gains, and trains in, her powers, but when Corazon and Tina travel through the Library of Mirrors en route to the spirit realms' marketplace, a figure pursues Corazon and steals the soul key, and Corazon must work to put the worlds-threatening specter to rest. Filipino folklore and a smart magical system of "bargains and balances" thread this wholly original narrative, which employs laugh-out-loud humor, sensory-forward prose, and deliciously dark threats to explore personal identity and tweenhood. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Thao Le, Sandra Dijkstra Literary. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—About to turn 12, Corazon Lopez is ready to learn what magical powers she possesses and begin her training. Corazon is a babaylan, a rare mortal guarding the boundaries between the human world and the realm of spirits. Her constant companion, the wisecracking Saso, is an anito (spirit of mountains, rivers, streams, and trees) who looks like a glowing blue gecko, with powers also yet unknown. Three years ago, when Corazon’s parents died, she moved into the magical house of powerful Aunt Tina. Corazon despairs that she only sees her ghostly parents for weekly Saturday visits, with the aid of the soul key her mother left her, and hopes that once her powers reveal themselves, she will find a way to bring her parents back to the mortal world. The Library of Mirrors is where the two worlds collide, and the mirrors there are guarded by the powerful Librarian. When a ghost steals the soul key from Corazon, she learns she must gather blessings to lay the ghost to rest and awaken her own powers. Corazon, Saso, and their ghostly friend, Leo, must overcome seemingly insurmountable obstacles to right the imbalance between the two worlds. An author’s note discusses Filipino folklore and the history of babaylans. VERDICT Chokshi’s tale weaves Filipino mythology and language throughout this spellbinding fantasy, creating a thoroughly original and heartfelt story of family, grief, and new beginnings.—Michele Shaw

#2349406 Wild Wishes and Windswept Kisses (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Maya Prasad

The Songbird Inn has always been the perfect home. No one knows that better than the Singh sisters. Nidhi, Avani, Sirisha, and Rani have been lovestruck and heartbroken and everything in between, all at their dad's cozy bed-and-breakfast. And today the whole Singh family will support aspiring filmmaker Rani in her first film festival-if only they can make it through the windstorm ravaging the Pacific Northwest.

978-1-368-08124-5 Disney-Hyperion ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 480 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Four sisters, two fathers, many relationships. Nidhi, Rani, Avani, and Sirisha--the Indian American Singh sisters whom readers met in 2022's Drizzle, Dreams, and Lovestruck Things--are back together. Well, almost. Oldest sister Nidhi's on her way home from

New Delhi to Orcas Island in Washington state when she bumps into Grayson, the boy she'd been dating, at LAX. Meanwhile, Avani is still writing her poetry (some of it steamier these days, thanks to boyfriend Fernando) but also wondering about her future as she tries to figure out her college plans--but none of her sisters seem to have time for her. Meanwhile, youngest sister Sirisha is reeling from her breakup with girlfriend Brie, but she's invited to an interactive murder-mystery costume party that pushes her out of her comfort zone, and things start looking up. However, the star of this story is aspiring filmmaker Rani, Avani's twin, who's shooting a short movie for a festival inspired by her relationship with boyfriend Raj, but her plans go awry right from the start. The fathers--Dad and his new husband, Pakistani Amir--play less of a role this time around, and they're sorely missed. Oscillating between past and present timelines, the story is punctuated by group chat messages offering insights into the family's warm, poignant relationships. As a windstorm picks up, so does the story's pace, as it traces the ebb and flow of the ties among the members of the charming ensemble cast. An easy, comforting read. (Fiction. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal for a magical day of adventures, obstacles, and, of course, romance in this sequel to Drizzle, Dreams, and overstruck Things. A lot has happened since the summer—Nidhi’s study abroad in India has been amazing, and she’s back in Washington for a hort time to meet with her advisor about extending her stay...if she can ever make it to Seattle amid a host of travel obstacles. Things between Avani and Fernando have been a bit rocky, but she’s hopeful that a full-day dance workshop will help them reconnect; of course, she doesn’t plan on n unexpected interruption that will force them to talk things out. Sirisha has been going through the motions since her breakup with Brie, but a friend’s murder mystery party brings new opportunities, and maybe even new love. Rani’s plans to memorialize her own epic love story in a short film are going awry—fate seems to have other plans for her love life and creative vision. Chapters alternate among the sisters and are interspersed with poetry, script excerpts, dialogue from the murder mystery party, and text messages. Despite the short time frame, all the sisters’ stories feel complete, and the alternating perspectives allow each girl’s personality to shine through. Much of the first book took place at the Songbird Inn, and a bit of the magic of that setting is missing here. All of the sisters’ stories have satisfying, if somewhat open, resolutions, perhaps leaving the door open for further titles. VERDICT A solid follow-up and worthwhile purchase for those who enjoyed the first book and readers who like stories set in one day like Blackout by Dhonielle Clayton and others or The Statistical Probability of Love at First Sight by Jennifer E. Smith.—Alison Glass

#2309138 Simon Sort of Says (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Bow

Simon O'Keeffe's biggest claim to fame should be the time his dad accidentally gave a squirrel a holy sacrament. Or maybe the alpaca disaster that went viral on YouTube.

But the story the whole world wants to tell about Simon is the one he'd do anything to forget: the story in which he's the only kid in his class who survived a school shooting.

978-1-368-08285-3 Disney-Hyperion ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Author of Stand on the Sky (2019) Bow delivers another middle-grade page turner. Seventh-grader Simon O’Keeffe moves with his parents to the small town of Grin And Bear It, Nebraska. Hoping to help their son forget a traumatic event, his dad, a Catholic deacon (and sackbut player), and mom, an undertaker, help Simon adjust. Though the townspeople are thirsty to find out more about the O’Keeffes, Simon wants to get through the school year by remaining incognito. That plan becomes moot when he befriends a girl named Agate and a boy named Kevin. All seems normal until the reason for the O’Keeffes' move is exposed, causing anxieties to flare in Simon that result in conflicts among the trio. Bow diffuses the story's serious topics, ranging from parental and social issues to mental and emotional health, with humor and a silly scheme. Middle-grade students will resonate with the worries and pressures attached to making friends and meeting one another’s families. A tale of healing that serves as an excellent reminder to never assume we know what plights another friend is going through.—Beronica Garcia Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Tweenager Simon's prepared explanation for why his family fled Omaha for Grin And Bear It, Nebraska, is pretty darn hilarious, involving rogue alpacas bringing chaos to a Catholic Mass. And surprisingly, it is true-it's just not the entire reason Simon is relieved his new neighbors can't look him up online. This tiny town is a designated National Quiet Zone with no internet, radio, or microwaves, which enables local astrophysicists to search for signs of life in the universe. When Simon learns the SETI (Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence) might lose funding, he joins his new pal Agate in a plan to impersonate alien communication and keep the scientists' dwindling hope alive. Before they can enact the plan, however, the truth about Simon's past comes out: he was the sole survivor of a well-known school shooting. While the violence happens offscreen, Simon's descriptions of his resulting panic attacks and anxiety have a visceral urgency; even more painful, however, are the small adjustments he's made--always staying aware of people's position in a room and noting exits for an escape route. Despite the weighty premise, Bow's storytelling brims with vitality, featuring many hilarious, outlandish scenes, like the antics of a funeral home's peacock, a dog that retrieves cans of beer, and the life and death of a Jesus Squirrel. The scientific plotline is thematically compelling, and the character-driven narratives thrive in its context, including Simon's narration of his post-traumatic healing and the development of winsome secondary characters. An author's note illuminates Bow's motivation to write about this topic and clarifies which story details are real or fictional, but the final backmatter resources for trauma survivors were not seen. KF COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Simon and his family are new to Grin and Bear It, Nebraska, an unusual town located in the National Quiet

Zone, a center for scientific research that restricts radio transmissions. There's no internet, and even microwave ovens are prohibited. They left their home in Omaha because, as Simon tells it, his family is odd, with a mother who is an embalmer and a father who plays the sackbut ("It's a kind of trombone"). These initial details are only the beginning of what builds into a gallimaufry of eccentricity. One neighbor has an emu farm; Simon's new friend, Agate, has siblings named Jade, Jasper, Coral, Onyx, and Mica and a large supply of witty radical T-shirts. There are funeral-home disasters, escaped wildlife, and plans for an elaborate prank choreographed by Simon and Agate. Hidden in all this jokey mayhem are small hints of a dark backstory. Why has the family relocated? Why can't Simon be in a room with just one exit? When it is revealed to the reader that Simon was the sole survivor of a school shooting in his previous town, the tone of the story shifts abruptly, inviting a reread to view the tale in a new light given our insight into Simon's past. This novel takes a considerable narrative risk and would be an excellent catalyst for discussion. SARAH ELLIS

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Attempting to start over, a traumatized tween and his parents move to a town where electronic devices are banned. In a tale that will put readers through an emotional wringer, Bow crafts an uproarious small-town comedy with a devastating tragedy at its core played out by a cast as memorable for its animals as its people. Having gone through a year of therapy and home schooling after witnessing the deaths of the rest of his fifth grade class in a school shooting that happens before the events of the book, Simon O'Keeffe hopes the move to Grin And Bear It, Nebraska, will let him escape the relentless notoriety and start seventh grade as an ordinary new kid. As no one in town is allowed to have a computer, cellphone, or even unshielded microwave because of the supersensitive radio telescopes nearby, things go well...for a while. He even makes friends with Agate, a classmate who cheerfully announces that she's autistic and challenges him to a gross-out contest. (Which he easily wins, what with his mother's being an undertaker.) Though developments--ranging from a roundup of escaped emus to being tasked with socializing a winsome puppy in service-dog training--provide plenty of warm and comical moments, the secret comes out eventually, spiraling into a crisis exacerbated by chance events and Simon's still uncontrollable reactions to sirens and other triggers. Readers will be relieved and cheered by the way he ultimately finds both the inner stuff and outer support to weather it. The cast largely presents as White. Adroit, sensitive, horrifying, yet hilarious. (resources) (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Centering 12-year-old Simon O'Keeffe's recent move to a completely off-the-grid town and told in his laugh-out-loud first-person perspective, Bow (Stand on the Sky) delivers a compassionate and refreshingly hopeful novel about a tween navigating the aftermath of a school shooting, which takes place before this book's start. Hoping to escape the anxiety-inducing notoriety they've been experiencing after the event, Simon and his family move to Grin and Bear It, Neb., where all electronic devices are banned. The devices, local scientists say, would interfere with their radio telescopes, which are listening for signals of extraterrestrial activity. Since no one can google him, Simon is optimistic that he can fly under the radar and put his past behind him. He makes fast friends with classmates Agate Van der Zwann, who is white and autistic, and half-white, half-Filipino Kevin Matapung; together, they set out to create false messages from aliens, using Kevin's family's contraband microwave to attempt to trick the scientists. Without detracting from Simon's uplifting emotional arc about making peace with his past and looking toward a brighter future with friends, Bow imbues this sincere story with levity by employing madcap plot points, including several animal-centered shenanigans featuring squirrels, dogs, and emus. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jane Putch, Eyebait Management. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Facing trauma from the past is difficult, but this book handles it masterfully. Main character Simon is the only survivor from a shooting in his school classroom. He and his family have just moved to Grin and Bear It, NE--a National Quiet Zone town without internet, cell phones, or television. He hopes it will be the perfect place to find the "now" version of himself. While on his journey, Simon makes friends with Agate and Kevin. All three kids face different types of pressure and support one another as they seek out coping mechanisms and strategies. Simon's mother works as the town undertaker and his father works for the Catholic Church. It is a very rural environment, and a large part of the story is Simon and his friends experiencing birthing goats, being chased by emus or an attack peacock, training the sweetest service dog ever, and even faking an alien signal to the scientists managing a Large Radio Telescope. In the mix are an incompetent morgue assistant who is constantly losing bodies (or taking the wrong ones!) and a wild squirrel who ate the sacrament. Simon is a funny, lovable character who has lived through an unthinkable event. Simon is white, Kevin is Filipino American, and Agate is white and autistic. Funny and heartfelt in equal measure, this book tackles some tough topics, but the humor keeps readers engaged, and it is easy to care about these characters. VERDICT A solid purchase for all libraries that serve middle grade readers A solid purchase for all libraries that serve middle grade readers. It deftly handles the sensitive topic of being a young trauma survivor; warning for school shooting content.--Claire Covington Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Escaping the memories of a traumatic event may be impossible, but in this poignant and remarkably funny National Book Award finalist and Kids Indie Next List title, Simon and his family hope to at least escape public attention.

#2330083 Haunted Mansion: Storm and Shade (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Claudia Gray

When high school student Audrey Perez moves to a town that's supposedly home to a haunted mansion, she and a few of her new friends decide to investigate. Audrey is quickly swept up in a macabre mystery and eerie adventure that holds the fate of the Haunted Mansion's 999 happy haunts in the balance. A storm is coming--both literally and figuratively--and it'll be up to Audrey and her friends to save the Mansion--and its ghosts-before it's too late. But can Audrey do so while dealing with her own anxieties and while caught in a love triangle between her boyfriend and the enigmatic Sterling-who just might be a ghost?

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

978-1-368-07606-7 Disney Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A girl with anxiety stumbles upon an actual haunted mansion. Even though her therapy is going well, 16-year-old Audrey Perez isn't looking forward to the beyond-nerves that her anxiety will give her as she starts a new school, having moved from the suburbs into New Orleans proper. Worse, she won't have her boyfriend, Chase, there to protect her from the world. Luckily, right off the bat she befriends Tatum, an outgoing girl from Scotland, and Iris, a wryly funny Black girl. When Audrey, whose family emigrated from Spain centuries ago, finds an abandoned manor house in the neighborhood, she lets her new friends in on it. Filmmaker Iris knows she's found a compelling subject. But after her first brush with the paranormal, Audrey starts to experience happenings outside of the mansion—ghostly possessions that lead her to mysterious keys. As the girls investigate, they notice chills in the air and sense that something bad is coming. This mysterious new threat is dangerous enough that even the ghosts dread it. The paranormal storyline has some strong moments, but readers primarily seeking thrills may feel the story's action is overshadowed by the characters' interpersonal dynamics. Audrey and Chase's relationship reveals red flags alongside moments of genuine sweetness and ends on a healthy, mature, nuanced note. Audrey's friendships are impacted by her expertly depicted anxiety and showcase healthy bonds. Disney fans will adore the care put in capturing details of the Haunted Mansion. Come for spooky action, stay for the robust cast. (Paranormal. 12-16)

#2293328 Disney Cautionary Tales (Hardcover (POB))

written by Ridley Pearson

What you are holding is no ordinary book. This book contains scary stories. Thrilling and chilling tales that feature the worst Disney villains. They twist and turn through unfortunate circumstances. Maybe you've heard of a cave full of wonders where no one escapes alive? Or a huntsman carrying a princess's heart back to an evil queen? Don't forget the horseman who lost his head. Literally.

978-1-368-06228-2 Disney Press ©2022 7-1/2 x 9-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Familiar Disney characters appear in new tales with a spooky edge. With their school closed because of nearby wildfires, Billie and Tim are spending their day at the Walt Disney Archives in Burbank, California. The book uses what Disney fan Billie is reading as a springboard, weaving together the present day and the fairy tales Billie and Tim slip into, as in the story "The Spirit Hunter," about the demon from Fantasia. When Tim disappears into a mirror he finds in the archives, Billie follows him on an adventure through dangerous Disney storylines with villains like Ursula and the Headless Horseman. Larson's illustrations are eerie and beautiful, and they also help readers track the threads of the storyline. All of the action that takes place in present-day Burbank is typeset in white against a solid black background. When Billie and Tim are in the world of Disney tales, there are ornate, themed borders surrounding each page along with a smattering of illustrations. One especially stunning full-page illustration depicts a skull with a brilliant diamond eye. The story gets a bit murky toward the end, becoming a confusing fumble through mirrors and timelines. One illustration shows Billie as a Black girl; most other characters are assumed White. Not just for fans of Disney; chilling and compelling despite a puzzling plotline. (Paranormal. 8-12)

#2201420 365 Days to Alaska (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Cathy Carr

Eleven-year-old Rigel Harman loves her life in off-the-grid Alaska. She hunts rabbits, takes correspondence classes through the mail, and plays dominoes with her family in their two-room cabin. She doesn't mind not having electricity or running water--instead, she's got tall trees, fresh streams, and endless sky. But then her parents divorce, and Rigel and her sisters have to move with their mom to the Connecticut suburbs to live with a grandmother they've never met.

978-1-4197-4380-1 Amulet Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 5-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–7—Eleven-year-old Rigel Harman is a happy kid who loves living off the grid with her close-knit family in Alaska. Rigel's life looks very different from most American students; she hunts, takes correspondence classes by mail instead of attending school, and has no running water or electricity. Things change when her parents divorce, and she and her sisters move to the Connecticut suburbs with their mother to live with a grandmother they've never met. But Rigel has a secret pact with her father: After one year, she can come home. Rigel hates middle school and Connecticut. She misses real nature and feels out of place. She befriends a small, wounded crow living behind her school and spends her free time with it. Caring for the crow helps her make friends, reconnect with her family, and fit in while still being herself. Rigel is a fun character; she has a lot in common with average tweens trying to find their place in the world, but her experiences in Alaska may be an informative peek into different lifestyles. The story shows how a strong family structure and the willingness to ask for help can be keys to success; the book also depicts the school library as a sanctuary for students. VERDICT This charming novel is recommended for realistic fiction fans who love nature and animals.—Christina Pesiri, Island Trees H.S., Levittown, NY

#2250935 Danny Chung Sums It Up (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Maisie Chan

Eleven-year-old Danny's life is turned upside down when his Chinese grandmother comes to live with his family in England. Things get worse when Danny finds out he'll have to share his room with her, and she took the top bunk! At first, Danny is frustrated that he can't communicate with her because she doesn't speak English—and because he's on the verge of failing math and Nai Nai was actually a math champion back in the day.

978-1-4197-4821-9 Amulet Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 240 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly As befits one born in the year of the Dragon, 11-year-old Brit Danny Chung is artistic and loves to draw. His math skills, however, are lacking, especially according to his Ba, who believes Danny should devote his time to more constructive pursuits. Big proponents of "the Chinese Way"; embracing traditional Chinese values; Danny's parents arrange for his Nai Nai to come from China to live with them in England, hoping Danny will learn about Chinese culture and to respect his elders. Predictably, frustration arises. Not only is Danny unable to communicate with her fluently, Nai Nai's very presence renders him the school laughingstock when she visits his classroom to feed him chicken feet, and a giant math project is proving daunting. But luckily for Danny, Nai Nai's mathematical prowess is something to behold. As the two confront the seemingly insurmountable language barrier with a love for numbers and art, Danny begins to view Nai Nai in a different light. Chan wholeheartedly portrays intergenerational relationships and cross-cultural exchange in a way that resonates. While several elements will be familiar to readers of similar titles, classic middle grade humor and detailed b&w sketchbook drawings by Quек add humor to an insightful read. Ages 8: 12. Agent (for Chan): Chloe Seager, Madeleine Milburn Literary, TV and Film Agency;(for Quек): Alice Williams, Alice Williams Literary. (Sept.)

#2319983 Take (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jennifer Bradbury

Two teens uncover a secret hidden in the Cascade Mountains that spans generations, stringing together family skeletons, lost stories, and a discovery of love and self in this tense and emotional young adult thriller.

978-1-4169-9009-3 Atheneum ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.
 Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A rock-climbing adventure unearths an unexpected mystery. The summer after high school graduation, Cara's busy working three jobs to fund a gap year rock climbing in Patagonia. She's independent and tough, not the least because she has to be--her dad, who taught her to climb, is unstable, mentally ill, and so unreliable he missed her graduation ceremony. Now, he's not responding to messages. When Cara goes to check on him, she finds his climbing gear gone and one wall of his trailer papered over with maps, photographs, and sticky notes. To find him, she'll need to figure out what it all means--and what peak he's trying to climb. Interspersed with Cara's first-person narrative are diary entries from the 1940s by a young, implied White climber in the Civilian Conservation Corps describing his growing romance with an artistic Japanese American farm girl. They are hampered by racism, particularly once America enters the war. Bradbury's smart, fast-moving book immerses readers in the language, procedures, and emotions of rock climbing without overwhelming those unfamiliar with the sport. She lets her characters and their stories be complicated and multidimensional. Her description of Cara's dad's mental illness is particularly real: "Sometimes he was sort of medically allowed to be a selfish jerk. The tricky part was how the messiness made it really hard for everybody around him to know when to cut him some slack and when to just cut him off." Great holds, great movement, and a worthwhile finish. (Fiction. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this genre-blending adventure, Bradbury (A Moment Comes) injects a high-stakes mystery with adrenaline. Recent high school graduate Cara plans to spend her summer working various odd jobs, rock climbing, and gearing up for her gap year traipsing through Patagonia. When Nat, her ex-boyfriend and fellow rock-climbing enthusiast, reappears in town, however, it sends her into an emotional spiral. She does her best to avoid Nat, until her depressed father; whom she hasn't spoken to in months; disappears. He leaves behind a trailer filled with clues in the form of old photographs, annotated maps, Beckett Friedrich climbing guides, and coded notes that Cara's convinced only history-loving Friedrich superfan Nat can unravel. Her father's trail leads the teens into the Cascade Mountains, where they face strenuous challenges, learn more about Cara's family's past, and find their way back to each other. Bradbury interweaves Cara's urgent first-person narration with brief diary entries by an adventurer from the 1940s, which tell a parallel story of young love hampered by racism during WWII. Cara's tenacity and grit make her a heroine to root for, and her determination to find her father no matter the cost conveys a complex, heartfelt relationship. Cara is white and of Japanese ancestry; Nat cues as white. Ages 12: up. Agent: Robin Rue, Writers House. (June)

#2162902 Beyond Me (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Annie Donwerth-Chikamatsu

In the aftermath of the natural disasters that have struck her country, eleven-year-old Maya is luckier than many. Her family didn't lose their home, their lives, or each other. But Maya still can't help feeling paralyzed with terror, and each aftershock that ripples out in the days that follow makes her fear all over again that her luck could change in an instant.

978-1-4814-3789-9 Atheneum ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile NP

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly On Mar. 11, 2011, an earthquake off the northeast coast of Japan, followed by a tsunami and an explosion at a damaged nuclear power plant, caused devastation throughout the country. Through the eyes of fifth grader Maya, who lives outside of Tokyo, this novel in free verse recounts the stressors of the event, its aftermath, and its ongoing reverberations. As the story begins, Maya plays freely in the wind and plans to perform a choir piece at school, but her daily life undergoes a dramatic change when the earthquake hits. After the event, the girl spends much of her time sheltering under a table and observing her parents, who try to help those affected, and her grandparents, who calmly tend their garden and vegetable stand. Donwerth-Chikamatsu (Somewhere Among) adapts font color, size, and word placement to reflect Maya's physical experiences: one page includes only the enlarged phrase "Earth/ drops/ below me," while others highlight times in the margin ("07: 44 Earth shudders"), giving a feel to its passing. As the story shows the country's unsteadiness and Maya's creative strategies for overcoming her sense of helplessness, it offers a compassionate window into how adults and children cope with calamity. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Holly McGhee, Pippin Properties. (June)

#2330605 Fall of the House of Tatterly (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Shanna Miles

Twelve-year-old Theo Tatterly's ability to see ghosts is a useful skill in a house full of dead relatives, but it makes him a loner at school and everywhere else, where ghosts eternally pester him for help. For Theo, life is easier on the periphery. When his first failed exorcism portends an end to the Tatterly line, Theo must bring together his entire family—living and dead—to save the home they've lived in for generations . . . and maybe the world.

978-1-4549-4930-5 Union Square Kids ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 280 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 780

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-8 Be careful in the swamp, and keep brick dust in your pocket! Charleston is a place like no other, and local middle-schooler Theo Tatterly knows it. He's the only medium in a family of assorted psychics, and his life stays busy between the hellhounds in their playground and his perpetually possessed younger cousin. But all Theo wants is to play basketball and make actual friends. When an eerie warning leads to mayhem at an aquarium, Theo must confront fears new and old that threaten his family's home. While the world building is somewhat overstuffed, this debut is a spooky delight full of rich local folklore and urban legends. From the swamp to the Night Market, Charleston feels like a gathering for all the magic folk, and it's the strong depiction of community that truly makes this book shine. A spine-chilling stand-alone for readers who love the works of Eden Royce and Lora Senf. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Black boy with magical abilities must save his family and his ancestral home in Charleston from dark forces that seek to ruin them. When he's not spending time with his magical family of aunts (both alive and ghostly) and his cousins Issa and Femi, 12-year-old Theo Tatterly is a loner. As the Tatterlys' only working medium, he can see a constant stream of ghosts--and despite his family's protests, Theo often exorcises ghosts by himself. But something goes wrong during a seemingly routine exorcism. Then, a ghostly hag ambushes Theo and Issa while they're at the aquarium. On top of that, his aunts are concerned about increasing efforts by someone unknown to disprove their legal ownership of the home that Tatterlys have occupied for generations; further back, the family lived on this land when they were enslaved. Theo's convinced that all the pieces are connected, but he's unsure how. It'll take relying on friends and family to help piece together the history and folklore behind the Tatterly name and save everything Theo cares about. Through limited omniscient narration, the author builds a steady tension as Theo pieces together information about their enemy, leading readers toward a momentous climax. Clear, reverent descriptions of Charleston's rich culture make the city just as much of a character as the members of Theo's diverse community, each of whom has a well-developed personality. A richly detailed story that amplifies the importance of connections and community. (Paranormal. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A Black 12-year-old must take on an evil supernatural entity to save his family in this adrenaline-fueled tale by Miles (For All Time). Theo Tatterly, who has always been able to see and talk to ghosts, lives with his similarly gifted aunts and cousins in an old mansion in Charleston, S.C. Because of his abilities, he is constantly surrounded by ghosts asking for his help in crossing over to the other side. This unending supernatural chatter makes him feel as if he has no time to cultivate relationships with the living, resulting in much time alone and few friendships, save for his bond with cousin Issa. When a malevolent presence interrupts his exorcising a spirit, Theo learns that the sinister specter intends to come after his family. To protect them, Theo must bring together everyone he knows; living and dead; to fight back. Though a somewhat complicated and occasionally inconsistent magic system can sometimes befuddle, over-the-top fantastical ambiance, paired with rich depictions of Charleston's historical and cultural lore, makes for an endearing, enchanting adventure teeming with quirky characters. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

#2285090 Blood Brothers (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Rob Sanders

Calvin Johnston's secret is out. He and his brothers are tainted. Untouchable. And the bad blood flowing through their veins is threatening to kill them. So are some of their neighbors in Ashland, the "Friendliest Little Town" in Florida. The Johnston brothers are kicked out of everything-school, baseball, scouts, even church. Ashland's anger has erupted into a fireball of hate. The only silver lining is that Calvin's best friend Izzy lives 65 miles away at the beach, and has no idea about his secret. But news has a way of spreading. Calvin and his brothers are in the fight of their lives. As a matter of fact, they're fighting for life itself.

978-1-4788-6927-6 Reycraft Books ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 480 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 2.7 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile HL 340

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.95

#2283420 Chasing Bigfoot (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Art Coulson

Chooch Tenkiller is not thrilled to be spending some of his summer with his Cherokee story-telling uncles and cousin Janees at a convention in North Carolina. While there, the uncles want to visit Judaculla Rock, a place of spiritual significance to the Cherokee people. Little does Chooch know that he has his own connection to the rock--a connection that could put him in mortal danger.

978-1-4788-7548-2 Reycraft Books ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 216 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 660

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Cherokee teen Chooch Tenkiller just wants to hang out with his friends, so he isn't thrilled when his mother makes him accompany his 13-year-old cousin Janees and uncles Jack and Dynamite on a trip to a North Carolina Cherokee reservation. His uncles, who are professional story-tellers, insist that the visit was foreseen generations ago by Tsul'kalu, who was one of the asduleni, or Bigfoot, in which Chooch doesn't believe. When it turns out that sacred Cherokee site Judaculla Rock is in danger of being sold to developer Dr. Viktor Almasty, Chooch finds that the Bigfoot prophecy is true; and that his predetermined mission to deliver a message to the world may just endanger his life. The alternating perspectives of Tsul'kalu, Chooch, Janees, and Dr. Almasty are distinct, though Dr. Almasty's chapters, which lean into villainous caricature, aren't as multidimensional as the others. Coulson (Fishing on Thin Ice), who is Cherokee, adeptly captures a modern Native teen's struggle between wanting to uphold traditions and striving to carve his own path. Cherokee language is featured throughout, and a celebration of Indigenous culture, community, and the search for identity is deeply rooted in the narrative. Ages 10: up. Agent: Jacqui Lipton, Raven Quill Literary. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Cherokee Nation middle schooler Maurice "Chooch" Tenkiller wakes up gagged and tied to a chair with a cloth over his head in a dank, smelly basement. He doesn't know what happened or where he is. He gradually remembers he and his cousin Janees, almost 13, and their uncles were on a road trip returning to Minnesota from North Carolina, where his professional storytelling uncles spoke at a conference. While there, they'd visited a sacred Cherokee site, Judaculla Rock, that's covered by mysterious carvings and petroglyphs. It's said that Tsul'kalu, a giant also known as Bigfoot, made his mark on the rock. Tsul'kalu and the Cherokee Little People have foreseen that Chooch is destined to carry their message out to the world. A Little Person that only Chooch can see gives him Ulvati, a sacred crystal that, when held up to the rock, brings all the rock's markings alive and allows him to hear the message. Unbeknownst to Chooch and his family, the unscrupulous Dr. Almasty and his henchmen intend to kidnap Chooch, because they believe he can read the rock's markings that they think are a map to hidden gold. Coulson, of the Cherokee Nation, keeps the action moving in short chapters, told alternately by Chooch, Janees, Dr. Almasty, and Tsul'kalu. The fact that the villains are cartoonishly buffoonish serves to counter the young heroes' actions. The character Chooch was also featured in Coulson's novella The Reluctant Storyteller. VERDICT An appealing addition to the growing body of middle grade fiction by and about Indigenous peoples.--Sharon Rawlins Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2355064 Tagging Freedom (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rhonda Roumani

Kareem Haddad of Damascus, Syria, never dreamed of becoming a graffiti artist. But when a group of boys from another town tag subversive slogans outside their school, and another boy is killed while in custody, Kareem and his friends are inspired and start secretly tagging messages of freedom around their city.

978-1-4549-5071-4 Union Square Kids ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 610

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-8 It's 2011, and Kareem is seeing a revolution happening right before his eyes in Damascus, Syria. He and his friends participate through protests and street-art activism, but as things become increasingly dangerous, his parents make the difficult decision to send him to America to live with his cousin Samira. Being the only Muslim and Arab in her school, Samira has been the target of bullying--that is, until she seizes an opportunity to show the popular kids a different side of her. With the arrival of her cousin, however, Samira begins to reconsider what it truly means to fit in. When graffiti starts popping up around town, Samira is faced with a choice: stay silent or speak up for what is right. This is a must-read for those looking for more Arab and Muslim representation in middle-grade titles. Roumani skillfully weaves together two different points of view to create a powerful story of activism that captures the importance of standing up for yourself and advocating for others. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Two cousins find common ground in their love of art and graffiti in this dual-perspective novel set on the verge of the Syrian revolution. Samira is a seventh grade Syrian American Muslim girl living in small-town Massachusetts. She's artistic and is particularly drawn to fonts and lettering. After her cousin Kareem is nearly caught spraying graffiti to protest the Syrian government, he's sent from Damascus to stay with her family. Initially, the cousins clash. As the only student at her school who's Arab or Muslim, Samira tries to blend in, going by Sam and staying quiet when her friends make ignorant, xenophobic comments. Kareem can't understand Samira's need to fit in. He befriends Ellie, Samira's Jewish best friend, and the two decide to secretly graffiti the town using spray chalk as a way of drawing people's attention to events in Syria. But as the graffiti divides their small community, Kareem and Samira find common ground and mutual empathy. The cousins grow, both individually and in tandem with their evolving relationship. Samira ultimately realizes who her true friends are, while Kareem finds a way to thrive where he is, despite his intense desire to return home. One event, in particular, realistically juxtaposes Kareem's safe new life with the growing dangers for his family in Syria. As readers follow the characters' evolution, they'll clearly absorb the message that it is worth it to stand up for what you believe in. A well-characterized novel offering insight into Syrian perspectives. (author's note, glossary, poem) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

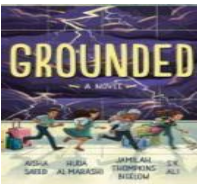

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Kareem; a Syrian Muslim 13-year-old; and his friends tag buildings to protest government oppression in Damascus, Syria. Kareem's seventh grade cousin Samira, meanwhile, paints the banners that accompany her Allansdale, Mass., school's Spirit Squad performances. Though Sam's friends Layla, with whom she takes Arabic lessons at the Islamic Center, and schoolmate Ellie remind Sam that Spirit Squad leader and mean girl Cat "ruined your life in fourth grade," Sam often abandons them both to hang out with the cool kids. When peaceful protests turn violent in Syria, Kareem's parents send him to live with Sam's family in the U.S. Sam and Kareem have always bonded over their love of graffiti, but at school, Kareem clashes with Cat's brother Dylan, whom Sam has a crush on; xenophobic comments from Dylan about Syria, and Sam's complicit silence, enrage Kareem. Soon, however, the cousins must come together to counter racism in Allansdale. High-stakes conflicts in the form of Kareem's fears for those he left behind play powerfully against adolescent challenges, such as Sam's emotionally vulnerable angst about fitting in, delivering a strongly paced tale. An author's note concludes. Secondary characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. (Nov.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--In a book written in alternating voices, the two characters--Kareem, who lives in Damascus, Syria, and Samira (Sam), who lives in Allansdale, MA--are cousins with more in common than they realize. Kareem and his closest friends have been spray-painting graffiti speaking out against how the corrupt Syrian government is treating its people. They know they must graffiti quickly and quietly to avoid being caught and becoming one of the "disappeared" or worse, killed. In an effort to protect their son, Kareem's parents send him to live with his aunt and uncle in the United States. Sam is anxious to join Spirit Squad, but struggles because the leader is a bully and her best friend Ellie refuses to join her. Despite this, Sam is determined to incite school spirit through her artistic talents in writing and drawing. Disappointed that her best friend Sam has joined the Spirit Squad, Ellie becomes close to Kareem when the two embark on their own form of raising awareness through tagging with graffiti. Graffiti in Allansdale brings out two opposing sides throughout social media. Thought-provoking and heartfelt, this novel parallels the struggles teens feel with loss and bullying situations to the oppression that citizens often feel when the government is deceitful. Preteens and teens will find this book relatable and real. VERDICT An outstanding novel that hits its mark, demonstrating that young teens grapple with a gamut of emotions and situations yet are resilient enough to work through them and achieve success. Highly recommended.--Tracy Cronce
Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2377181 Leila and the Blue Fox (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Kiran Millwood Hargrave Together, Leila and her mother's research team follow the migration of a tiny Arctic fox, Miso, across ice floes and international borders, hopeful the midnight sun will illuminate how to adapt to a constantly changing world. 978-1-4549-5434-7 Union Square Kids ©2024 6 x 8-1/2 256 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 810	1	$19.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2366096 Kites and Lemonade (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Yasmeen bint Ahmad Lina has spent her life in a wheelchair and has never been friends with another differently abled person until she meets Amara, who is blind. And they both have a secret they must keep from everyone else! Together with Amara's brother Omar they solve a mystery and save the day. 978-1-4482-1829-5 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2024 5 x 7-3/4 208 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$18.00

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2324578 Grounded (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Aisha Saeed When a thunderstorm grounds all flights following a huge Muslim convention, four unlikely kids are thrown together. These kids don't seem to have much in common--yet. Told in alternating points of view, Grounded tells the story of one unexpected night that will change these kids forever. 978-1-4197-6175-1 Amulet Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 272 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 8.0	1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Four kids, one fast-paced night, and an opportune mystery: this middle-grade novel hits the ground running from the very first page. A storm grounds flights at Zora Neale Hurston Airport, leaving hundreds of Muslims departing an Islamic conference stranded. Among them are four incredible kids: Feek, longing to be a spoken-word artist (like his famous dad) but relegated to babysitting his sister; Hanna (sister of readers' treasured Adam from Love from A to Z, 2019), searching for Snickerdoodle, a cat that went missing at the airport; Sami, the reserved kid who is never picked first; and Nora, always expected to be poised as the daughter of a congresswoman. In a single night and despite occasional tension, the quad rallies around a common goal: finding Snickerdoodle. In alternating points of view, the four authors—who collaborated on Once upon an Eid (2020)—have crafted a book that, while it brims with unapologetic Muslim rep, is about not religion but friendship and adventure. Sometimes their parents don't get them, but trust and communication abound. Hand to readers seeking a quick escape.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Four tweens stuck in an airport come together for a rescue mission. When 12-year-old Feek Stiles loses his 4-year-old sister, Ruqi, at the airport, he meets Hanna Chen and Sami Iqbal, who try to help him locate her. But Nora Najjar finds her first. The kids are waiting with their families to fly home after attending the Muslims of North America conference when flights are grounded due to inclement weather. Eleven-year-old Hanna, armed with flyers and Meow Mix, is determined to find Snickerdoodle, a cat who has been missing for a week in the airport, and she recruits Feek, Sami, and Nora to help. The story unfolds in chapters that alternate among the viewpoints of aspiring poet Feek from Philadelphia; Doha animal lover Hanna; Sami, who is from Orlando and does karate; and Nora, a Michigan congresswoman's daughter who posts on social media about sweet treats. Each one has something they are struggling with, including parents with busy work schedules, a sports competition, their sense of Muslim identity, and more. They end up going on an adventure throughout the airport that involves unexpected twists and turns, in the process learning more about themselves and one another and finding their voices. Saeed, Al-Marashi, Thompkins-Bigelow, and Ali write four relatable, well-developed characters from different backgrounds who represent the diversity of Muslim communities, seamlessly connecting their individual and collective stories into a single whole. A positive, engaging story centering Muslim kids. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this multi-POV collaboration, four kids leaving the Muslims of North America conference are stranded with their families at Zora Neale Hurston Airport after a thunderstorm grounds their flights. When 12-year-old aspiring lyricist Feek Stiles, from Philly, loses track of four-year-old sister Ruqi, he's thrown into the company of perpetually anxious Sami Iqbal, from Orlando, who's afraid of missing his upcoming karate competition; 13-year-old Nora Najjar, a social media enthusiast struggling to share the attention of her busy Michigan "Congressmom"; and 11-year-old animal lover Hanna Chen, from Doha, who's devoted herself to finding Snickerdoodle, a cat lost in the airport. Once Ruqi is found, Hanna presses the others into joining her cause, precipitating a revealing adventure that pushes each character; all of them navigating personal challenges; to confront whatever it is they're facing, now that there's nowhere to go. Humorous dialogue balances intensely emotional moments throughout alternating chapters by Saeed, Al-Marashi, Thompkins Bigelow, and Ali. Spirited characters with distinctly wrought backgrounds prove both idealistic and realistic while emphasizing the importance of community and the idea that there is more than one way to honor Muslim identity. Ages 8: 12. Authors' agents: (for Saeed) Faye Bender, Book Group; (for Ali) Sara Crowe, Pippin Properties; (for Thompkins Bigelow) Essie White, Storm Literary. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--In a book written in alternating chapters by four well-known, Muslim authors, four tweens with seemingly little in common are stranded at an airport. Bad weather has grounded all flights following a Muslim convention. Feek, an aspiring poet, wants to gain the approval of his famous father through his writing but is instead babysitting his little sister Ruqi. Hanna, animal protector extraordinaire, is trying to find a cat named Snickerdoodle, who was lost in the airport the week before, while also avoiding her dad's talk about finding her a new mom. Sami, forever anxious, is worried the grounded flights will keep him from his important karate tournament. Nora, daughter of a congresswoman, just wants to make videos for social media and work out her friend issues. When Hanna recruits the others to find Snickerdoodle, all four embark on an adventure through the airport (with Ruqi in tow), and uncover potentially sinister happenings with animals. The story contains just the right number of twists and turns to keep middle grade readers engaged. The authors have seamlessly overlapped each family's trials, keeping the characters likable and believable. Muslim readers will be happy to be represented, and will connect with one or more of the kids, whether they feel like they fit in or not, and non-Muslim readers will see the universality of friendship and families. VERDICT This will appeal to a wide audience, with important topics addressed smartly, including the positives and negatives of social media, and fitting in with peers while staying connected to one's family.--Michele Shaw Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2366858 Lost Kites and Other Treasures (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Cathy Carr

Twelve-year-old Franny Petroski never lets anyone know how often she thinks of the charismatic, troubled mom who left her years ago-any more than she talks about the unaccountable things Mom did while she was still in the picture. Life with Nana is safe and secure, and Franny's innovative art projects fill in any lonesome times.

978-1-4197-6799-9 Amulet Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8 272 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When Frances' grandmother took her in, Nana was insistent on giving her the stability that Frances' mother couldn't. It wasn't easy at first, but now in sixth grade, with regular assistance from a guidance counselor, Frances is mostly back on track at school and thrives in art class. When Nana takes a fall and needs to use a wheelchair for her months-long recovery, they call on friends to find a new, accessible apartment, though neither Nana nor Franny are keen on asking for help. What's worse is that Franny's estranged Uncle Gabe comes to stay for a bit, which only highlights the familial void left by her absent mother. Franny's first-person narration shines in this approachable story about the ripple effects of mental health challenges within a family. The primary plot centers on Franny seeking out the truth of her early life experiences with her mom, as she snoops through Nana's closet and meets her mom's former best friend on an outing with Uncle Gabe. Honest conversations-in stark contrast to the staunch silence from Nana for most of Franny's life-make way for compassion regarding Franny's mother's struggles with bipolar disorder. The flow of the novel is sometimes interrupted by awkward, obsolete terms that are clearly trying to connect with modern young audiences, but realism is still found in personality clashes, drifting friendships, and unmet expectations. Franny's artistic inclinations, focused on found objects and mixed media, are thematically compelling, as she finds beauty in things that are broken and discarded, like a makeshift garbage bag kite she eventually transforms into a sculpture piece subtly honoring her mom. KF COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Writing down her concerns and creating art with found objects are things that help calm Franny--and lately, she has big worries. Years ago, Franny Petroski's mom, Mia, left her to be cared for by her maternal grandmother. But now Nana has broken her leg and can't get around without assistance. Twelve-year-old Franny could use some help--or even emotional support--from her best friends, but Lucy Bernal's family is moving back to London, and Ruben Yao is busy befriending school loudmouth Tate. Enter Uncle Gabe, Mia's estranged brother, who moves in for a few weeks to help. While he's there, he starts telling Franny about Mia and raises the subject of her mom's mental health, an issue Franny hadn't heard much about before. This sparks some discomfort, a disagreement with Ruben, and difficult conversations with family members. Carr sensitively explores mental illness, incarceration, and families in crisis, and she portrays her characters as flawed but caring. As Franny works through it all, she discovers that she no longer needs to list her worries. The creative process of working on a lost, damaged kite she finds--covering it with pieces of fabric that represent family and friends--helps her express and resolve her complicated feelings. It's a rocky ride, but everyone, especially Franny, emerges stronger and with their spirits lifted. Franny and her family are white; Ruben is Filipino American. Unusual and gratifying. (Why You Should Be an Artist) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Twelve-year-old Franny Petroski lives with Nana in an apartment in New Jersey and enjoys creating art and spending time with her friends. But when Nana falls and breaks her leg, Franny's life drastically changes. Her estranged Uncle Gabe comes to help, and she starts to learn more about herself, family, and mother's mental illness and incarceration. She learns that by sharing her feelings and fears, she can find ways to deal with the pain of loss and strengthen family bonds. Franny finds power in art and talking about her past as she forges new relationships with Nana and her uncle. She also learns that being true to herself and her past may mean changes in friendships. Carr's first-person narrative features a well-developed character in Franny; readers will root for her from the beginning. Franny displays the complex emotions of a preteen dealing with complex issues. Carr's thoughtful and nuanced representation of a family dealing with bipolar disorder and incarceration gives voice to readers who have similar issues. VERDICT At times this book seems to have too many things going on, but the approach to mental health and family trauma makes it an important addition to any shelf.—Rebekah J. Buchanan

#2376401 Keeping Pace (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Laurie Morrison

Grace Eller has spent most of middle school working toward one goal: beating her former friend Jonah Perkins's GPA so she can be the best student in her class. But when Jonah beats her for eighth grade top scholar and then announces he's switching schools for ninth grade, it feels like none of Grace's academic accomplishments have really mattered. She starts to expand her ideas of what-and who-really matters.

978-1-4197-6875-0 Amulet Books ©2024 8 x 5-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Academic achievement has been one of the few constants in Grace Eller's life, and this last year of middle school wasn't supposed to be any different. When the year-end "top student" designation goes to her sworn enemy, Jonah, she's crushed. Sure, only a fraction of a point separates their scores, but after years of supposedly being the best, it pains her to come in second. It doesn't help that both of her parents are professors, either. As a budding writer herself, Grace places considerable value on her novelist father's seemingly glamorous pursuits. Astute readers will be able to see this as a bid for connection—her parents are divorced, and Grace and her sister live with their mom. The novel provides much-needed space to reflect on these dynamics, but the story is less about Grace figuring out her relationship with her dad than it is about figuring out her relationship with herself. However, it's through running that she gradually acknowledges her intrinsic self-worth, recognizing that it's OK to just be.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Goal-oriented Grace Eller strives to cross everything off her to-do list during the summer between middle school and high school in this introspective novel by Morrison (Coming Up Short). Before she turns 14, Grace wants to babysit her divorced father's girlfriend's son without incident, change her hair style, take a cool class, score her first kiss, make a new friend, and run a half-marathon. Initially doubtful of her athletic ability, Grace soon finds peace and strength in her training routine. This regimen helps ground her as she navigates evolving relationships with friends new and old, feelings for childhood bestie and current rival Jonah Perkins, and changing family dynamics. As Grace comes to terms with this transitional stage of her life, she realizes that "there are all sorts of things I used to find fun.... But now, I'm not so sure." Morrison utilizes insightful prose and a steady momentum to chronicle Grace's pursuit of her goals. Her varying success and fluctuating perspectives all serve to make her feel more complete and confident, especially when she decides that "setting the pace that's right for me" is the only way to get where she wants to go. Protagonists read as white; supporting characters are racially diverse. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Sara Crowe, Pippin Properties. (Apr.)

#216796 Campaign (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Leila Sales

Veep meets Parks and Recreation in this hilarious illustrated middle-grade political comedy about a 12-year-old who runs her babysitter's campaign for mayor.

978-1-4197-3974-3 Abrams ©2020 5-1/2 x 8 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity

Unit Price

1

$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Maddie, 12, lives for art class, the one place in school where "it's not really possible to do anything dumb or weird," so she's devastated when she learns that the lone candidate running for town mayor, a former Olympian campaigning as a "goal-oriented straight shooter," wants to cut school arts funding. Maddie is not one to go down without a fight, however, so she persuades her babysitter Janet to sign up as the race's challenger. The odds are stacked against Janet, but things kick into high gear after Maddie asks popular drama club queen Dahlina to enlist her friends to help run the campaign. Maddie's fears; that she is disliked by classmates, that she'll have to share Janet with the world; are well wrought and relatable, as is her drive to fight for what she believes. Sales (Once Was a Time) seamlessly weaves campaigning facts and ethics into the timely tale, educating readers while keeping them hooked on the suspenseful election. Balacuit's cartoons pepper the text, detailing story elements through short word-bubble conversations. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Stephen Barbara, InkWell Management. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—The self-important, presumptive mayor-to-be plans to cut arts education funding, so seventh grader Maddie leverages her peers' grassroots action in support of her babysitter's challenge for the mayoral seat. Sales infuses this civic engagement book with humor, identity angst, and character development, and keeps the story moving forward with a light touch. Underneath the who-will-win momentum, another layer of the story unfolds: Will relatable narrator and social outsider Maddie, who can be really mean and dismissive of her peers, learn to stop being so judgmental? Simple cartoons augment the text throughout, adding levity in the style of popular titles by Rachel RenTe Russell and Chris Grabenstein. Lawrenceville is a small, familiar, American town filled with ethnically diverse characters; Maddie is white and middle class. VERDICT A highly readable, enjoyable, nonpartisan story meant to encourage civic activism amongst middle schoolers.—Rhona Campbell, Georgetown Day Sch., Washington, DC

#216022 Once upon an Eid: Stories of Hope and Joy by 15 Muslim Voices (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Aisha Saeed

Once Upon an Eid is a collection of short stories that showcases the most brilliant Muslim voices writing today, all about the most joyful holiday of the year: Eid!

(Anthology)

978-1-4197-4083-1 Amulet Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity

Unit Price

1

$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Starred Review For Muslims, there's no better time to gather with family and reflect upon the joy of giving than during Eid-ul-Fitr (which celebrates the end of Ramadan, the month of fasting) or Eid-ul-Adha (the feast of sacrifice, which is connected to the Hajj, the annual pilgrimage to Mecca). Here Ali (Love from A to Z, 2019) and Saeed (Amal Unbound, 2018) have gathered a roster of #OwnVoices Muslim authors to highlight the diversity within Islam and to explore the meaning of and otherworldly feelings associated with Eid. In Ali's and Saeed's stories, Yusuf and Nadia examine the importance of traditions and of allowing them to evolve to include others. In Hanna Alkaf's story in verse, readers are introduced to Malay food and a pain so poignant it can only be quelled by forgiveness. In Seraj Captures the Moon, Sara Alfageeh (who also illustrated the stunning book cover) gives life to G. Willow Wilson's graphic story about a girl (and a donkey named Pickles) on a quest to share the light of the moon. This special anthology about family traditions, sharing meals, giving presents, and delighting in the cultural uniqueness of people all over the world isn't just for those who celebrate Eid; it's for all who want to share and learn about the holidays.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Fifteen Muslim authors contribute to this celebratory story collection centered around Eid, the holiday that marks the end of Ramadan. Joyful reunions, irritating relatives, fancy clothes, and special, heartfelt gifts appear in many of the tales, giving an overall tone of warmth and playfulness, and even the stories that take a more somber approach end with possibilities of hope and optimism. Dessert plans go awry when Yusuf burns the brownies-made from an old recipe and meant to be the best of the post-feast snacks-in Aisha Saeed's "Yusuf and the Great Big Brownie Mistake," a comedy of errors that plenty of novice bakers will recognize. A chaotic eight-hour road trip with unruly younger siblings and increasingly frazzled parents makes for a comic holiday travel in Randa Abdel-Fattah's "Eid and Pink Bubble Gum, Insha'Allah," while Asmaa Hussein's "Kareem Means 'Generous'" focuses on the moral principles emphasized by Eid. Several stories tackle the grief and sorrow that can come with celebration in the wake of loss, and one examines the refugee experience with realism and compassion. There's a helpful amount of education for those unfamiliar with the holiday, but readers will also savor the mouthwatering descriptions of food that will likely inspire preteens to try their hand at a few of the dishes. KQG

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide This remarkably inclusive collection of short stories by fifteen Muslim authors showcases some of the many Muslim communities; cultural and familial traditions; and the universality of human experience against the backdrop of the celebration of Eid. Like their authors, the stories' protagonists live in majority non-Muslim countries -- in the United States, Canada, Australia, and Greece, the exception being Hanna Alkaf's Malaysian character, Alia, in "Taste." Stories range from simple celebrations of joy and navigating everyday conflicts to addressing loss and grief, but all are inextricably tied to community, identity, and faith. Protagonists' experiences are inclusive of a variety of family structures, differing socioeconomic backgrounds, Shia Muslims, and recent converts to Islam. Though most stories are in prose, other formats include Alkaf's tale in verse; a comic-format story by G. Willow Wilson, illustrated by Sara Alfageeh (who also designed the cover and frontispiece for each story in the collection); and a movingly powerful poem by Jamilah Thompkins-Bigelow celebrating the vivid imagery of Eid in the African American Muslim community -- its history and connection to the memories and dreams of enslaved African Muslims. As a whole the collection captures the spirit and feelings of Eid as well as the many sensory elements: the collective "ameen" of a congregation of worshippers, the touch and rustle of Eid clothing, and the multitude of smells, sounds, and tastes that will resonate with Muslim and non-Muslim readers alike. (Copyright 2020 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine This remarkably inclusive collection of short stories by fifteen Muslim authors showcases some of the many Muslim communities; cultural and familial traditions; and the universality of human experience against the backdrop of the celebration of Eid. Like their authors, the stories' protagonists live in majority non-Muslim countries -- in the United States, Canada, Australia, and Greece, the exception being Hanna Alkaf's Malaysian character, Alia, in "Taste." Stories range from simple celebrations of joy and navigating everyday conflicts to addressing loss and grief, but all are inextricably tied to community, identity, and faith. Protagonists' experiences are inclusive of a variety of family structures, differing socioeconomic backgrounds, Shia Muslims, and recent converts to Islam. Though most stories are in prose, other formats include Alkaf's tale in verse; a comic-format story by G. Willow Wilson, illustrated by Sara Alfageeh (who also designed the cover and frontispiece for each story in the collection); and a movingly powerful poem by Jamilah Thompkins-Bigelow celebrating the vivid imagery of Eid in the African American Muslim community -- its history and connection to the memories and dreams of enslaved African Muslims. As a whole the collection captures the spirit and feelings of Eid as well as the many sensory elements: the collective "ameen" of a congregation of worshippers, the touch and rustle of Eid clothing, and the multitude of smells, sounds, and tastes that will resonate with Muslim and non-Muslim readers alike. Ariana Hussain September/October 2020 p.80(c) Copyright 2020. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Fifteen accomplished Muslim writers from various regions and backgrounds share Eid-themed short stories in this middle-grade collection. Stylish Hawa from Philly spends Eid in New York City with the Mandinka side of the family and learns to get along with her cousin. Kareem buys himself a new bike, then learns how to embody the meaning of his own name: "generous." Most of the young protagonists live in majority non-Muslim countries--Americans of various ethnicities in the United States, a Syrian family living in a refugee camp on a Greek island--and identity issues are sometimes in the foreground. The traditions depicted vary, but the themes of family, community, and faith permeate the volume. Whether making or buying special foods--Eid brownies, doughnuts, lontong--or taking care of younger siblings, these young heroes and heroines help make Eid special for others. The diversity within the collection is impressive, including several blended families and a recently converted one, and while the writing varies in style and quality, each story is engaging, full of emotion and thought. Particularly powerful are Jameela Thompkins-Bigelow's poem connecting present-day Eid scenes to imaginings of the early Muslims who arrived in the Americas enslaved and Hanna Alkaf's lyrical account of a Malay girl's attempt to save Eid for her family. A well-placed graphic story by G. Willow Wilson and illustrated by Alfageeh, who also contributes a frontispiece to each story, provides a reprieve midway through the book. This thoughtful and uplifting volume will keep readers turning pages year-round; here's to many more. (Anthology. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This effervescent anthology, edited by Ali (Love from A to Z) and Saeed (Amal Unbound), binds together 15 short stories in a variety of formats that explore the festival of Eid. While the annual Muslim celebration is a major component, the authors also interweave deeper explorations of the Islamic faith into their tales, which combine insights on Muslim culture with a message on the importance of such traits as generosity and resilience. Asmaa Hussein's "Kareem Means 'Generous,'" for example, features Kareem's discovery of the pleasure he gains from sharing his good fortune. Candice Montgomery contributes a moving narrative about 11-year-old Leila's first experience wearing a hijab, conveying both the girl's excitement and her mother's anxiety over potential backlash. Leila's closeness with family and positive interactions with classmates further exemplify fulfilling interpersonal relationships that appear throughout the book. No two stories are alike: the inclusion of a narrative in poem ("Taste," by Hanna Alkaf) and a short graphic novel (G. Willow Wilson's "Seraj Captures the Moon") ensures various reading formats. Moreover, a range of diverse, multidimensional characters; among them Shia Muslim, converted Muslim, Algerian, Caribbean, and West African representation; results in a stimulating, celebratory read. Ages 8: 12. Agents: John Cusick, Folio Literary Management (for Ali), and Taylor Martindale, Full Circle Literary (for Saeed). (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--This heartfelt collection of Eid (both Eid-ul-Fitr and Eid-ul-Adha) short stories, edited by Ali (Saints & Misfits) and Saeed (Amal Unbound), compiles the work of 15 #OwnVoices creators and provides beautiful, essential narratives about Muslim culture. Regardless of readers' familiarity with Eid or the Muslim faith, they will feel embraced in each and every story. The tales are artfully arranged, beginning with happy and light fare before wading into heavier, more complex topics, and ending on laugh-out-loud perfection. A graphic novel-esque intermission provides a delightful surprise. The narratives here are wonderfully diverse in setting, familial structure, race, culture, and experience. The collection not only celebrates and shares Eid, but skillfully teaches readers, addressing issues like racism and prejudice with a light but effective touch. With many varied contributors, the stories read well as a whole or individually, and many have significant appeal well beyond the target audience. VERDICT A joyous title that radiates love. This much-needed collection is recommended as a first purchase for all libraries.--Taylor Worley, Springfield P.L., OR Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness In a welcoming collection of fictional tales about celebrations of Eid, 15 notable Muslim voices share the excitement of this special day with middle-grade readers.

#2239249 Elvis and the World As It Stands (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa Frenkel Riddiough

Most shelter animals dream of going home with a forever family. But for Elvis, being chosen by Mrs. Pemberton is a nightmare. He's been separated from his sister, Etta, and is determined to get back to the shelter to find her. In spite of himself, Elvis becomes curious about ten-year-old Georgina Pemberton, who builds LEGO skyscrapers in her bedroom while navigating her parents' separation.

978-1-4197-5239-1 Amulet Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–5—Elvis is a kitten living in a shelter with his sister, Etta. During a big Fourth of July adoption event, Elvis is adopted by Mrs. Pemberton wanting to give her daughter, Georgina, a special gift because Mrs. and Mr. Pemberton have separated and Georgina is not taking it well. Elvis is heartbroken to be torn away from his sister and though Georgina is kind to him, he desperately tries to go back to the shelter. As Elvis becomes more comfortable in his new home with Gina, who builds LEGO architecture to cope with her life changing, will he ever be reunited with his sister? This book is part adventure, part family drama, and a remembrance of 9/11. One of the buildings Georgina works on is a replica of the Twin Towers, which she builds because she keeps asking her parents for a photo of them in front of the towers when they first met, in NYC before 9/11. The author also includes a note about this historical event for younger readers. Though the book deals with serious topics, being told from Elvis' point of view lightens the overall tone, along with supporting characters like a funny hamster named Mo and a goofy dog named Bambi. Readers will race to find out how everything ends, with character growth and plenty of failed escape attempts before the satisfying conclusion. VERDICT An animal adventure with family at its heart, this short read makes for a good purchase for elementary libraries where animal stories, particularly about cats and shelter animals, are popular.—Molly Dettmann, Norman North H.S., OK

#2292943 Prank Day (Hardcover (POB))

written by Kel Mitchell

This laugh-aloud novel for kids follows Chase as he masterminds a series of epic pranks only to discover that they've all become real on April 2nd. When his tricks become reality in hilarious and disastrous ways, Chase must come clean. How will he set the world right again, catch the eye of his crush Zoe, and keep her from getting flattened by the refrigerator running all over town?

978-1-4002-2922-2 Thomas Nelson, Inc. ©2022 5-1/2 x 7-1/2 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 600

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$12.99

#2324591 Museum of Lost and Found (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Leila Sales

Vanessa isn't sure which happened first: finding the abandoned museum or losing her best friend Bailey. She doesn't know what to do with herself now that Bailey has left her behind--but when she stumbles upon an empty, forgotten museum, her purpose becomes clear. If she can find the right way to tell the story of her broken friendship, she can figure out how to make it whole again.

978-1-4197-5451-7 Amulet Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Sixth grade has been confusing. Vanessa's best friend, Bailey, has grown distant, and when Vanessa learns that she wasn't invited to Bailey's birthday party, it seems their relationship is officially over. Thankfully, Vanessa makes a happier discovery, too: an abandoned museum at a nearby park, complete with a mysteriously abandoned painting. She puts together an exhibit about her floundering friendship, hoping to decipher why it ended, and soon other kids including her older brother and an unusual boy from her Hebrew school, join her in creating their own displays. News of the imminent building demolition sets Vanessa in a race against time to try to save the museum—and possibly her friendship with Bailey—in the process. It's an intriguing premise, and the tone is delightfully conversational, even when tackling topics of shifting friendships, body-focused repetitive behavior, and having an active-duty parent overseas. Discussions of relationships are nuanced and thoughtful, and the book ends on a realistic but hopeful note. A creative and compassionate examination of friendship in all forms.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Sixth grader Vanessa is mystified and saddened by the apparent end of her friendship with longtime BFF Bailey -- so much so that when she comes across a dilapidated building, once a museum, in her small Ohio town, she decides to make it into her own museum: the museum of Bailey. "Maybe by telling the story of Bailey -- by laying it all out clearly behind glass -- she would at last be able to understand where it went wrong." When others discover Vanessa's project -- Eli from Hebrew school; her older brother, Sterling; and twin classmates Rosalie and Honore -- they add their own exhibits. As Vanessa gains more insight into her and Bailey's friendship, "the story of Bailey" changes, with the labels on the items in the Bailey Wing amended to reflect Vanessa's evolving understanding. Meanwhile, the mysterious provenance of a large painting left behind in the museum adds Mixed-Up Files resonance. Other elements woven into the plot include Vanessa's compulsive skin-picking (identified late in the book as excoriation disorder) and worry over the safety of her active-service father. Sales (If You Don't Have Anything Nice to Say, rev. 5/18) manages to combine all of this into a nuanced look at friendship, family, self-knowledge, coming of age, and community, with Vanessa a strong-minded and sometimes unlikable but always sympathetic protagonist. Martha V. Parravano (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews For Vanessa, the loneliness of an ended friendship becomes creative inspiration in an abandoned museum. Vanessa Lepp doesn't understand why Bailey Dominguez doesn't want to be best friends anymore. They are both still sixth graders at Edgewood Falls Middle School, and they are still in the same homeroom. But Bailey, who is Mexican American, is not in Vanessa's life anymore. When Vanessa, who is Jewish, finds an old, mostly boarded up museum, she creates an exhibit of meaningful items connected to Bailey, hoping to win back her friend. The space becomes a place to put her pain. Eventually, others bring their stories of sadness and of hope to this secret space, including Sterling, her older brother, and Eli, the class clown from Hebrew school. A mysterious painting has also been left in the museum, raising questions about things we leave behind and how people change as they grow. What will happen to all of these treasures when the building gets torn down? There are many complex themes in this story: the loss of friendship, a military dad stationed in Germany, and Vanessa's anxiety that manifests as body-focused repetitive behaviors. Sales gently uses the museum's exhibits to explore self-awareness, help her characters process past behaviors, and reveal consequences that are not initially understood. The inner thoughtfulness is balanced with an action-packed ending that satisfies. Creatively explores the complexity of middle school friendships. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Sixth grader Vanessa Lepp is hurt and bewildered about being inexplicably abandoned by best friend Bailey Dominguez. When Vanessa discovers a boarded-up museum near her small-town Ohio home, she's fascinated by its empty frames and pedestals, and begins creating an exhibit about Bailey, hoping to understand what went wrong and to win her friend back. Others, including Vanessa's 14-year-old brother Sterling, happen upon the museum and begin building their own personal exhibits, forming a secret community that helps Vanessa expand her focus to other friends; and to the mysterious creator of a remarkable painting that she regards in the museum. Sales (Once Was a Time) persuasively portrays Vanessa's frustration around others' expectations, her lack of control over her life, and her anxiety, whose presentation involves compulsive skin-picking. Rendering the intensity of middle school dynamics in serviceable prose, this multifaceted art mystery with a focus on interpersonal bonds tackles an array of themes; anxiety, friendship's natural fluctuations, and learning to let go of the past; while offering opportunity for reflection. Occasional b&w illustrations from Li portray objects from Vanessa's exhibit. Vanessa cues as white and Jewish; Bailey is Mexican American. Ages 8: 12. (May)

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

#2275115 Grow Up, Tahlia Wilkins! (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Karina Evans

Twelve-year-old Tahlia Wilkins is ready to kick off the perfect summer, starting with an invitation to a pool party being thrown by the most popular kid in school. But when her period arrives twenty-four hours before the party, it messes up all her plans. In order to save herself from embarrassment, it will take all of Tahlia and her best friend Lily's scheming to keep her reputation (and favorite jeans) from being ruined.

978-0-316-16875-5 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist It's the last day of seventh grade, and Tahlia Wilkins has a plan for her and her BFF Lily: starting with a pool party at the home of popular, friendly Noah, Tahlia and Lily will get in with the cool kids crowd. There's only one problem: Tahlia gets her period for the first time the day before the party, right after her mom leaves for the weekend. Tahlia is desperate to avoid embarrassing herself by letting anyone except Lily know, and every attempt to handle the situation leads to disaster. Debut author Evans believably captures the emotional roller coaster of middle-school aged kids in Tahlia's frantic, snarky first-person narrative. Tahlia comes across as quite self-centered, but a sobering bit of news from Lily brings her down to earth and helps her start being a better friend. Tahlia's experience of her first period is refreshingly matter-of-fact and extensive: she tries tampons for the first time, buys supplies on her own, and ultimately discovers that her dad can be a supportive resource. Hand this voice-driven novel to kids interested in friendship stories.

Reviews by: Horn Book e topic of Evans's lively debut, which follows 12-year-old Tahlia Wilkins, who reads as white, and the series of disasters she experiences in the days following seventh grade graduation. Her first problem? The pimple that's appeared on her "traitorous chin" just in time for popular Noah Campos's pool party, where Tahlia hopes to overcome a previous "goggles-and-board-shorts incident," and prove that she's gotten cooler over the past year. Next, just after her mother leaves their central Pennsylvania town to attend a work retreat sans phone service, Tahlia gets her first period. She's too embarrassed to tell her awkward father or 16-year-old twin brothers, but Tahlia and her best friend engage in a series of comic acts. They sneak into a neighbor's bathroom, for one, and wade into a restaurant fountain to gather quarters for a bathroom dispenser, events that lead to further dilemmas. As Tahlia's chatty first-person narration conveys her desire of popularity amid her eventful first visit from "The Fairy Godmother of Puberty," Evans offers some practical tips for young people on the brink of menstruation, ending on a family-oriented upswing—and a note of relief."

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews On the last day of seventh grade, right before Noah Campos' pool party, Tahlia Wilkins worries about a new zit. Last year she wore a practical, sun-protective, but unfashionable outfit and was totally embarrassed to see how fashion-forward the other girls were. Noah is superpopular, and Tahlia is determined to make a good impression this time, but her first period threatens to upend her plans. Tahlia wants to start menstruating, but not right before the party, just after her mom has left on a work retreat. She can't talk to her socially awkward dad about it and doesn't have an older sister, just obnoxious 16-year-old twin brothers. She has no pads but finds some in her parents' bathroom. Luckily, Tahlia's best friend, Lily Baek, tries to assist, offering good ideas and some scatterbrained solutions. In the 24 hours between the onset of Tahlia's period and the help that she finally gets from her parents, her first step into womanhood is filled with funny, albeit mortifying, moments that will have readers both laughing and sympathizing. While largely focused on bodily concerns, there are also messages about friendship and family matters. Quick-moving, lighthearted, and ultimately heartwarming, this first-person narrative will especially be enjoyed by readers awaiting or having recently experienced their first periods. Tahlia's family is cued White. Lily's surname points to Korean ancestry, and names indicate some diversity in the supporting cast. Humorously highlights a meaningful milestone for a tween: a first period. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Middle school humiliation is the topic of Evans's lively debut, which follows 12-year-old Tahlia Wilkins, who reads as white, and the series of disasters she experiences in the days following seventh grade graduation. Her first problem? The pimple that's appeared on her "traitorous chin" just in time for popular Noah Campos's pool party, where Tahlia hopes to overcome a previous "goggles-and-board-shorts incident," and prove that she's gotten cooler over the past year. Next, just after her mother leaves their central Pennsylvania town to attend a work retreat sans phone service, Tahlia gets her first period. She's too embarrassed to tell her awkward father or 16-year-old twin brothers, but Tahlia and her best friend engage in a series of comic acts. They sneak into a neighbor's bathroom, for one, and wade into a restaurant fountain to gather quarters for a bathroom dispenser, events that lead to further dilemmas. As Tahlia's chatty first-person narration conveys her desire of popularity amid her eventful first visit from "The Fairy Godmother of Puberty," Evans offers some practical tips for young people on the brink of menstruation, ending on a family-oriented upswing; and a note of relief. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jessica Mileo, InkWell. (Apr.)

#2342451 Enemies in the Orchard: A World War 2 Novel in Verse (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Dana VanderLugt

It's October 1944, and while Claire's older brother, Danny, is off fighting in World War II, her dad hires a group of German POWs to help with the apple harvest on their farm. Claire wants nothing to do with the enemies in the orchard, until she meets soft-spoken, hardworking Karl. Could she possibly have something in common with a German soldier? Karl, meanwhile, grapples with his role in the war as he realizes how many lies Hitler's regime has spread-and his complacency in not standing up against them. But his encounters with Claire give him hope that he can change and become the person he wants to be.

978-0-310-15577-5 Zonderkidz ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In a Michigan apple orchard in 1944, a German soldier and an American girl reflect on wartime life. Claire DeBoer, a careworn 13-year-old Dutch American girl, bears countless responsibilities on her family's farm and dreams of one day becoming a nurse. Karl Hartmann, a teenage German prisoner of war, arrives in Michigan to do agricultural work through a federal program. The book opens with atmospheric poems introducing each protagonist, effectively using George Ella Lyon's "Where I'm From" format. This reflective verse novel alternates their perspectives as it explores their intersecting lives. Claire's brother is fighting in Europe, so the dissonance of enemy soldiers on her farm feels like a cruel joke. Karl is awakening to the immensity of Nazi atrocities and anti-American propaganda, though some of his more nationalistic fellow prisoners are determined to make him suffer. Calm and dread intertwine: The soothing harvest-time rhythms intermingle with the ever-present threat of tremendous loss. Karl and Claire, having lost their youths to a global conflict, discover a tenuous friendship; the hinted-at mutual romantic feelings between an eighth grader and someone described as "almost a man" might cause some discomfort. VanderLugt's reflections on war's personal toll and the tensions of having enemy troops working in America offer opportunities for readers to consider matters from many angles. An author's note describes her inspiration--the German POWs who worked in her own grandfather's fruit orchards during the war. An emotionally layered vision of a difficult moment in history. (sources) (Verse historical fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An aura of tender sorrow pervades Vanderlugt's 1944-set debut, a free-verse novel about two youths who meet due to a WWII labor camp program in the U.S. The paths of 13-year-old American Claire DeBoer and young German soldier Karl Hartmann cross when Karl is one of 250 German prisoners of war brought to a Michigan labor camp under terms with the Federal Emergency Farm Labor Agency. Assigned to the apple harvest on Claire's family's orchard, kindhearted, English-speaking Karl is stunned to learn of German government lies and to find that "now, / as a captive, / ... I'm more at peace / than I ever was / fighting at home." Claire, whose 18-year-old brother is fighting abroad, is desperate to attend high school and become a nurse rather than give in to expectations to leave school and help on the farm until marrying. In spite of Claire's initial distrust, which is amplified within the community, Claire and Karl slowly befriend each other as their perspectives of each other's situations change. Via contemplative first-person narratives and occasional adapted news articles, Vanderlugt intimately limns each character's experiences alongside those of a sympathetically drawn secondary cast. While eliding context around U.S. internment-camp practices in WWII, this bittersweet telling, per an author's note based on little-known true events, is nevertheless rich in atmospheric and emotional detail. All characters cue as white. Ages 9: up. Agent: Amy Thrall Flynn, Rubin Pfeffer Content. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8--Claire, a 13-year-old daughter of apple farmers in Michigan, and Karl, a Nazi prisoner of war, find themselves in an unlikely friendship--with hints of more--when their lives intersect at Claire's family orchard. This novel-in-verse is based on a true story of a group of German POWs who were transported to the Midwest to help with labor shortages due to the large quantity of Americans fighting in the war. Through dual perspectives, VanderLugt aims to humanize the characters and show that Karl, who was a member of the Hitler Youth, recognizes the horrors of war and the way he was indoctrinated; he is portrayed as a sympathetic character. Pacing and character development flow well in this story and hold readers' interest. WWII fiction crowds historical fiction collections, though not many focus on the experiences of German soldiers on American soil. This book sheds some light on this part of history. VERDICT Recommended for purchase for upper elementary and middle school collections only where WWII fiction is in very high demand.--Monisha Blair Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2349394 Our Divine Mischief (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Hanna C. Howard

A sweeping YA fantasy inspired by Scottish history and folklore, Our Divine Mischief takes readers on a journey told in three voices: a determined heroine, an outcast young man, and a wish-granting canine. Their adventure spans an island fishing village to the king's court in a story about identity, belonging, and the love between a human and her dog.

978-0-310-15622-2 Blink ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 400 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal finally has her mother's approval to go to the island where the goddess Ysla awaits to award her the meallion that will give her status in the community. But upon arrival, Aila discovers only a rambunctious puppy and no sign of the goddess. Return home a failure, with a puppy in tow, the priests announce a series of trials for Alia to endure in order to earn her medallion. The priests assign Hew, one of the "unblessed"—a person who returned with a blank medallion and is forced to provide menial services—to look after her and keep things organized, on track, and understandable during the trials. The trials are physically difficult and emotionally overwhelming; but her dog, Oriah, provides Aila comfort, resources, and a magic that cements their bond. When the third trial goes awry, bringing politics, violence, and an awareness that Oriah might be a key to great power, Oriah's life is endangered. Aila and Hew take action to ensure her safety even at the risk of their own. Told in alternating chapters, including Oriah's poetic voice, this fantasy sets readers firmly in Scottish folklore cementing the story as part romance, part political intrigue, part thriller, and at its heart, a dog story. Readers will root for the three protagonists as they struggle to save Oriah, alert their community to the dangers alive in the kingdom, and prove to themselves and their community that they belong and are worthy. VERDICT Offer this book to readers who enjoy their fantasy mixed with a folklore twist, romance, and, of course, dogs.—Connie Williams

#2223690 LEO, Inventor Extraordinaire (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Luke Xavier Cunningham

A "lifer" at the secluded Academy of Florence, Leo has never met his parents ... or anyone in his family for that matter. He spends most of his time tinkering with inventions that never work (or work disastrously) and making trouble with his infinitely more charming friend and fellow lifer, Savvy. After Leo's latest experiment goes catastrophically wrong, he discovers a series of secret passages beneath the school that can only be unlocked by the sharpest of wits and a little help from Leo's school lessons.

978-0-310-77000-8 Zonderkidz ©2021 5 x 7 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 13.0

Quantity 1 Unit Price $16.99

#2309310 Cookie Monsters (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erika J. Kendrick

Twelve-year-old Brooklyn Ace is ready to take the Valentine World Scouts by storm and build her own cookie empire. She nearly won the top cookie selling spot last year and is determined to make her mom--who recently passed away--proud by coming in first this time around. With her fabulous best friends by her side, Brooklyn knows she'll become Santa Monica's District Cookie Queen. The crown is practically in the bag.

978-0-316-28148-5 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1 Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 12-year-old girl finds her voice with the help of her community as she competes to sell the most cookies. Brooklyn Ace, a Black seventh grader at Valentine Middle School, is the reigning cookie queen. This year will be no different despite not having her biggest supporter in her corner to help her reach her goal of selling 5,000 boxes of World Scouts Alliance cookies and winning the Santa Monica district prize. Her biggest obstacle is Piper Parker, a new White student who is already stealing away Brooklyn's regular customers with fancy tactics--and the help of lots of kids from their school eager to go to the pool party Piper is promising them if she wins. Brooklyn realizes that her mom, whose death she is grieving, did a tremendous amount of the groundwork for Brooklyn's record-breaking cookie sales. Even with the help of her therapist and supportive, racially diverse scout squad--Lyric, Luciana, and Stella Rose--Brooklyn will need to reexamine her definition of winning as the fierce cookie competition nears its end. Secondary characters' personalities aren't clearly delineated, and readers will feel less invested in them. The delivery of the central message can feel heavy-handed, but the fast pace and conversational tone that uses up-to-the-minute language will draw readers in. The book's strongest quality is the spotlight it shines on mental health and the importance of community. An appealing read, especially for those looking to start a conversation about grief and anxiety. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two seventh graders face off to become a scouting cookie queen in this tenderhearted novel by Kendrick (Squad Goals). Having lost last year's World Scouts Alliance cookie-selling district title to a now-graduated high schooler, Black middle school student Brooklyn Ace is "in it to win it." She hopes to take the grand prize and dedicate it to her mother, who died of cancer the year prior. But the arrival of a transfer student, wealthy white Instagram influencer Piper Parker, brings competition to the fore. As Piper edges in on Brooklyn's established customers, and Brooklyn realizes how much of her success involved her compassionate mother's way with people, Brooklyn becomes overwhelmed with anxiety and grief as well as uncertainty about her prospects for winning. With the aid of her faithful scout troop members, HoneyBee cheer squad, vivacious therapist, and fashionable grandmother, Betty Jean, Brooklyn works to overcome her obstacles. Concentrating on Brooklyn's emotional growth, the positive first-person narrative sheds light on the importance of loyal friends, mental health support, and cherishing a loved one's memory. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Marcy Posner, Folio Literary. (Jan.)

#2278483 Duet (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Elise Broach

Welcome to the world of Mirabelle, a young goldfinch who loves to sing and dreams of becoming a musical star. She lives with her family in the backyard of a piano teacher, and she is quickly intrigued by Mr. Starek's newest pupil. Michael Jin is an eleven-year-old keyboard sensation, but lesson after lesson, he refuses to play. With the prestigious Chopin Festival looming at summer's end, how will he be ready in time?

Quantity 1 Unit Price $16.99

978-0-316-31135-9 Christy Ottaviano Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 7-1/2 288 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 8.0

Reviews by: Booklist Mirabelle, a goldfinch who sings beautifully, enjoys listening from a branch outside Mr. Starek's window when he plays the piano. A former concert pianist, the elderly man occasionally gives lessons to exceptionally gifted students such as Michael, an 11-year-old boy who is preparing to perform at a Chopin Festival. Unhappy to leave his former teacher, Michael initially refuses to play for Mr. Starek. But one day, the boy begins playing a piece by Chopin, and Mirabelle, perched near the window, begins to sing along. The spontaneous duet fills them both with awe. Now eager to learn from Mr. Starek and determined to play Chopin's music well, Michael is also intrigued by the mystery of the composer's missing Pleyel pianos and sets out to find one with help from Mirabelle. The story involves a treasure hunt, but it revolves around the characters' love of music and the sense of wonder that it inspires. Black-and-white art (not seen in final form) will illustrate the book. Mirabelle's lively, accessible first-person narrative offers a fresh perspective on the lives of birds and keen perception of the human characters. A companion book to Broach's Masterpiece (2008), this captivating chapter book is perfect for readers who, like Mirabelle, are sometimes spellbound by music.

Reviews by: Hachette Book Group arklng personality, narrates this engaging music-focused mystery con brio. She attributes her excellent ta te in music to listening through the window to a world-renowned pianist, and she's intrigued by his unappreciative, sulky new student, Michael. Wh Michael finally tries out the piano, she can't resist singing along with him to Chopin's Minute Waltz: "It's as if the song is singing me...Am I sti l made of bones and skin and feathers? No. I am only song." Mirabelle's singing inspires Michael, and the two continue their duets as Michael prepares for a Chopin contest. Broach skillfully incorporates bits of bird lore and information about both Chopin (including the macabre story of his heart) and his life partner, George Sand. As in Broach's previous books Masterpiece (rev. 11/08) and Shakespeare's Secret, a histori object is missing—this time, Chopin's piano. The pace is brisk, and Mirabelle faces multiple dilemmas (beyond her secret duets), involving newly hatched siblings, a dangerous cat, and a desperately ill man. Broach gives her heroine true self-determination and emotional growth, as the little bird ponders her situation: "What's the difference between a secret and a lie? A secret probably feels like a lie to someone who loves you." A final note sorts out historical fact from fiction.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Mirabelle, a goldfinch with a sparkling personality, narrates this engaging music-focused mystery con brio. She attributes her excellent taste in music to listening through the window to a world-renowned pianist, and she's intrigued by his unappreciative, sulky new student, Michael. When Michael finally tries out the piano, she can't resist singing along with him to Chopin's Minute Waltz: "It's as if the song is singing me...Am I still made of bones and skin and feathers? No. I am only song." Mirabelle's singing inspires Michael, and the two continue their duets as Michael prepares for a Chopin contest. Broach skillfully incorporates bits of bird lore and information about both Chopin (including the macabre story of his heart) and his life partner, George Sand. As in Broach's previous books Masterpiece (rev. 11/08) and Shakespeare's Secret, a historic object is missing -- this time, Chopin's piano. The pace is brisk, and Mirabelle faces multiple dilemmas (beyond her secret duets), involving newly hatched siblings, a dangerous cat, and a desperately ill man. Broach gives her heroine true self-determination and emotional growth, as the little bird ponders her situation: "What's the difference between a secret and a lie? A secret probably feels like a lie to someone who loves you." A final note sorts out historical fact from fiction. Susan Dove Lempke(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A singing goldfinch becomes a musical muse for a young piano prodigy. Mirabelle, a young female goldfinch who loves music, closely watches the home of Mr. Starek, a gifted piano teacher. One day, a tween boy named Michael Jin arrives, clearly against his wishes. The boy refuses to play for the esteemed teacher, who is supposed to help Michael prepare for the prestigious Chopin Festival in Hartford. Broach unfurls a shy dance between boy and bird, as Mirabelle's curiosity helps Michael, who presents as East Asian American, reveal his precocious talent. When Michael plays Chopin's Minute Waltz, Mirabelle, perched in a tree outside the window, begins to sing along, inspiring both to perform beyond their expectations. This creates a musical friendship that leads them to the mystery of Chopin's lost piano. Readers learn about the historical friendship among three geniuses: Frédéric Chopin; his muse, the writer George Sand; and painter Eugene Delacroix. A dilapidated house stuffed with treasures holds a rare piano that brings forth the duo's best performances, but will the bank take the house and all its contents away? Glimpses of bird life provide a lighthearted balance to the fine details of musicality and piano virtuosity. This story illustrates an appreciation for excellence and the passion to create music just for the joy of it. Final art not seen. A quick and interesting musical read, full of history and mystery.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Narrated by Mirabelle, a goldfinch with an exceptional voice, this soulful story set near Boston offers a bird's-eye view of three friends bound together by their passion for music. Mirabelle loves to listen to her once-famous pianist neighbor Mr. Starek, an emigrant from Poland, play the piano; he, in turn, delights in her singing. But when his sister dies, Mr. Starek grows despondent and ill until he takes on new student Michael Jin, who reads as East Asian, a rising sixth grader preparing for an upcoming Chopin competition that could "open doors." Michael is initially reluctant to play, but when he does, his talent astonishes both Mirabelle and Mr. Starek. Over the next few weeks, Mirabelle attends the lessons, performing duets with Michael, learning the history of Polish composer Frederic Chopin alongside that of French author George Sand and French painter Eugene Delacroix, and becoming involved in a mystery regarding a very old, very valuable piano. Rich with facts around goldfinches and music, Broach's (the Masterpiece Adventure series) novel employs vivid descriptions ("It comes in a torrent, a rush of silvery notes cascading over one another"), unique characters, and carefully crafted suspense. Occasional b&w illustrations by Chen (Dancing with Daddy) depict the characters. Ages 8: 12. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Connection Narrated by Mirabelle, a goldfinch with an exceptional voice, this soulful story set near Boston offers a bird's-eye view of three friends bound together by their passion for music. Mirabelle loves to listen to her once-famous pianist neighbor Mr. Starek, an emigrant from Poland, play the piano; he, in turn, delights in her singing. But when his sister dies, Mr. Starek grows despondent and ill until he takes on new student Michael Jin, who reads as East Asian, a rising sixth grader preparing for an upcoming Chopin competition that could "open doors." Michael is initially reluctant to play, but when he does, his talent astonishes both Mirabelle and Mr. Starek. Over the next few weeks, Mirabelle attends the lessons, performing duets with Michael, learning the history of Polish composer Frédéric Chopin alongside that of French author George Sand and French painter Eugene Delacroix, and becoming involved in a mystery regarding a very old, very valuable piano. Rich with facts around goldfinches and music, Broach's (the Masterpiece Adventure series) novel employs vivid descriptions ("It comes in a torrent, a rush of silvery notes cascading over one another"), unique characters, and carefully crafted suspense.

#2284576 Elephant Girl (Hardcover (Trade))

written by James Patterson

Clever, sensitive Jama likes elephants better than people. While her classmates gossip—especially about the new boy, Leku—twelve-year-old Jama takes refuge at the watering hole outside her village. There she befriends a baby elephant she names Mbegu, Swahili for seed.

978-0-316-31692-7 Jimmy Patterson ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Maasai girl's bond with a baby elephant catapults her into the world of wildlife conservation. Jama is a 12-year-old Maasai girl in Kenya who feels troubled by the path to maturity most of her friends seem to want. Jama's mother remained single after the death of her father and ran the family business alone. However, Jama's desire for a different version of womanhood, one that includes an education and autonomy, causes her best friend, who dreams of boys and marriage, to slowly begin withdrawing from her. Jama starts to feel isolated as her old friends begin to exclude her. She is hiding near a watering hole, her special secret place, when she witnesses the birth of a baby elephant. Jama immediately feels a bond with the baby elephant and returns to check on her. But when their new wildlife ranger seems to be collaborating with poachers, Jama fears for the elephant herd. Dramatic events lead to tragedy and Jama's banishment from the village. Poaching, conservation efforts, and elephant behavior are explored through Jama's experiences with the baby elephant. Creating the life you want from the ashes of your old one is a prominent theme in this narrative as Jama sheds old friendships and becomes a young woman. Emotionally thrilling and richly satisfying. (glossary, authors' note) (Fiction. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this powerful novel based in true events, Maasai 12-year-old Jama Anyango's life is irrevocably changed when she befriends a herd of elephants near her Kenyan village. As her best friend begins to focus on crushes, Jama, who longs for "the same freedom and power" as boys have, instead seeks refuge in the gorgeous natural landscapes around her, disobeying her widowed mother's rules that she stay near the village. An assured first-person perspective connects readers with Jama as she bonds with the elephant herd at a watering hole she loves, particularly a baby elephant whose birth she witnesses and whom she names Mbegu. But poachers roam the land, looking to kill elephants for their tusks, and the neglect of a seemingly corrupt wildlife ranger further threatens the elephants' safety. After a tragic accident, Jama's courage is put to the test, and her home life and well-being are imperiled, when the other villagers seek to kill Mbegu in revenge. Patterson and Banda-Aaku's well-developed, vividly set story is thoroughly grounded in Jama's bravery, moral strength, and genuine love for the animals that share her home. An authors' note discusses elephant poaching. Ages 10: 14. (July)

#2275105 Einsteins of Vista Point (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ben Guterson

When Zack's younger sister dies in a tragic accident, his family moves to a small town in the Northwest to try and heal from all the pain. Eleven-year-old Zack blames himself for his sister's death, and he struggles to find any comfort in his new surroundings. Vista Point is home to many mysterious landmarks: The great domed Tower casts inscrutable shadows, and what is the cryptic message in its ceiling medallion?

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

978-0-316-31743-6 Christy Ottaviano Books ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Booklist ccident, the devastated Einstein family moves to a Victorian mansion in the Pacific Northwest for a fresh start as proprietors of a bed and breakfast. Eleven year-old Zack feels responsible for Susan's death and thinks everyone is moving on except for him. His parents and siblings dreamy Ruth, outdoorsy Ethan, and sporty Miriam—throw themselves into the renovation and exploration of their new setting, but Zack keeps to his room, rereading his favorite vintage sibling adventure series. He's finally coaxed out by an abandoned tower and a girl with an uncanny resemblance to Susan, and along with Zack's new cryptic acquaintance, coded messages eventually thrust the entire family into an ever-expanding mystery. Guterson does a splendid job of conjuring up the ideal setting for a classic summer story, complete with crystal-clear swimming holes, dilapidated dwellings, and lush forests. There are compassionate explorations of grief and loss, but obvious familial affection and gracious communal support keep the tone warm and hopeful. A properly old-fashioned adventure that begs to be read by flashlight under bedcovers.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Eleven-year-old Zack Einstein is trying to figure out how to mourn his sister, who died almost a year ago, without staying stuck completely in a holding pattern of grief and guilt (despite being told otherwise, he still holds himself responsible for the accident). His parents hope that a move and a project to renovate an old house will help them all find the fresh start they need, and Zack does find a distraction in a new friend. It's not entirely clear if his friend is real, a symbol of the sister he still misses, or something else altogether, but Zack is nonetheless able to connect with her, and through that, find his way back to his siblings and family. Guterson treads carefully, demonstrating how grief can be maneuvered but not entirely left behind—this is a bruised family, even as they heal through shared experiences, conversations, and renewed trust that their loved ones will support their unique ways of mourning. The mystery of a tower, secret messages, ghostly communications, and a cranky old man are all appealing elements that move the story forward. The book is most successful, however, when it centers on loss and how much effort it takes to get from a drowning depth of grief to a place where you can put your feet down in the pool sometimes, and, if you're lucky, even walk towards the shallow end. Spot illustrations mirror the text, often appearing at key moments that will deepen understanding with a bit of extra reflection. The sentimentality and sweetness hover at the edge of twee, but readers will be glad to see the Einsteins get some closure, joy, and good karma. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews What secrets will Zack and his siblings discover in and around the cryptic Tower? When 11-year-old Zack Einstein and his family move to Vista Point, Zack still blames himself for the accidental death of his younger sister the previous year. He's paralyzed by grief until he follows a mysterious girl into the abandoned nine-sided Tower. What he discovers sets Zack off on a summer filled with secret messages, a hidden cave, and a touch of the supernatural, But can Zack put the pieces of the mystery together before his family's dream of opening a bed-and-breakfast is dashed by a cantankerous old man? The fascinating cipher that ties it all together is the highlight of this wholesome, gentle story set in 2002. There's little doubt this novel was inspired by classic sibling adventure stories. Indeed, Zack's favorite series, the fictional Falcons and Bandits, reads like an homage to Arthur Ransome's Swallows and Amazons. Zack's emotional journey is compelling, yet his siblings' one-dimensionality keeps this work from ascending to the heights of more character-driven titles. The happy ending is sweet—some may find it cloyingly so—offering closure for Zack, his family, and even the story's villain-turned-friend. The Einsteins are Jewish and White; other major characters are assumed White. Occasional spot illustrations add visual interest. An inspirational throwback for families seeking tales with a classic feel. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old Zack Einstein blames himself for the sudden death of his younger sister, Susan. After her passing, Zack and his family; including siblings Ruth, 13; Miriam, 15; and Ethan, 16; pursue a fresh start in Vista Point, Ore. Their parents plan to renovate a three-story Victorian-style mansion into a bed-and-breakfast, but the siblings would rather explore their new backyard's sprawling landscape. Near the property stands a strictly off-limits abandoned tower where the Einsteins meet mysterious nine-year-old neighbor Ann. Together, the group explores the tower, decoding its cryptic carvings and attempting to communicate with an unknown party by using a flashlight to send messages in Morse code. Amid cheerful adventure, the siblings finally begin healing ("For the first time in months, Zack felt a little less unhappy"). Antonsson's detailed and finely lined art, which includes a map and spot illustrations, provides intimate looks into pivotal scenes. Though the rest of the Einsteins don't feel as richly characterized as protagonist Zack, Guterson (the Winterhouse trilogy) sensitively explores Zack's journey toward self-forgiveness in this contemplative adventure featuring a captivating northwestern U.S. setting, a splash of the paranormal, and a tidy ending. The Einsteins are Jewish and white; supporting characters cue as white. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. (Apr.)

#2342625 Hannah Sharpe, Cartoon Detective (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Janet Tashjian

Young cartoonist Hannah Sharpe has many strengths: she's curious, creative, has an amazing memory, and most important—she notices things. When Doug Williams moves into her family's Airbnb, Hannah can't shake the feeling that he's got something to hide. But his girlfriend, Remy Furtado, couldn't be nicer or more helpful. As Hannah investigates, often with her sketchbook in hand, she makes a series of unsettling discoveries involving stolen packages, changed keypad codes, and hidden stacks of cash. Can Hannah crack the case and unfold the mystery on her own?

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

 978-0-316-31980-5 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist When her teacher, Mrs. Monroe, takes an indefinite leave of absence, white autistic girl Hannah doesn't think any of the coping skills she's learned either in school or from her play therapist will help navigate such a big change. On top of that, there's a mystery of why some of the school's plants aren't doing well, plus a string of porch pirate robberies in her neighborhood. Hannah may not be good with social skills, but her pattern recognition might just be what these cases need. Helping her out are her classmates Noah and Gabriella, as well as her drawings of Dusty Pickle. Included are illustrations explaining how Hannah thinks and reacts, minicomics, and an author's note explaining that her son, the illustrator of this novel, is on the autism spectrum. This is an inclusive, fun addition to the middle-school mystery field, perfect for readers who need a little extra help moving to typical chapter books.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An autistic 11-year-old who's considered the class sleuth practices her investigative knack in this illustrated series starter from mother-son duo the Tashjians (the My Life series). The creator of a comic book series featuring Dusty Pickle; a pickle cowgirl in the Wild West; artist Hannah Sharpe also uses drawing to better understand idioms and decode social interactions. Though she's not a fan of altered routines, Hannah soon navigates a teacher change and befriends the woman renting her family's converted garage apartment. And when a string of catalytic converter and porch package thefts occurs in her family's Northern California neighborhood, she employs her observational skills around the inquiry, noticing patterns that add up to a curveball that Hannah cannot handle alone. Though the concept of the young autistic detective is well-trodden, Hannah's openhearted voice adds myriad details about her neurodivergent experience (drawn, per an author's note, from Jake Tashjian's own life), while comics interstitials; both Dusty Pickle episodes and interpersonal experiences; add humor to the straightforward narrative. Hannah and her family read as white; the broader cast is portrayed with various skin tones. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

#2330441 Hurricane Girls (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kimberly Willis Holt

Born in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, Greer, Joya Mia, and Kiki are seventh graders and the best of friends. After an accident leaves Greer's little sister paralyzed, Greer is forever changed by the experience and blames herself. Kiki and Joya Mia will do anything to help Greer let go of this emotional burden, and a plan is hatched to compete in a triathlon. Each girl will participate: Kiki will swim, Joya Mia will cycle, and Greer, if they can persuade her, will run.

978-0-316-32609-4 Christy Ottaviano Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist gether on a school project on Hurricane Katrina, three sixth-grade classmates in New Orleans formed a strong bond of friendship. Now they're in seventh grade, and Greer blames herself for a road accident that has left her younger sister physically disabled. Hop ng to end Greer's "year-long funk," Kiki proposes that they enter the Junior Team Relay Triathlon. The others agree. Greer, a former track team member, will run. Joya Mia plans to do the cycling on a rusty bike. Kiki, who can't swim yet, agrees to take the aquatic section. During the many months of training, each girl runs into predictable difficulties and unexpected joys. And each challenges herself not to let the others down. Holt's involving third-person narrative shifts focus, chapter by chapter, from one girl to the next and portrays their family relationships as well as the intricately interwoven thoughts, emotions, and memories that bind them together. While some readers may be drawn to one girl in particular, most will find themselves rooting for all three main characters in this engaging novel. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When Kiki, Greer, and Joya Mia were grouped together for a sixth-grade class project, they formed a remarkable bond as they gathered stories from their family and friends about their experiences when Hurricane Katrina hit their hometown of New Orleans. However, as seventh grade approaches, Greer's sister is paralyzed in an accident, for which Greer feels completely responsible, and the normally seamless balance of the trio's friendship is Ölike a tricycle with one loose wheel.Ö So Kiki, prone to lofty ideas and eager to help her friend heal, enlists the group in a triathlon. Holt devotes each chapter to the perspective of one girl, which gives the reader insight into the vastly different inner lives of the three friends and what they may be uncharacteristically keeping from each other. Each point of view captures the complexity of young female friendship and shows that while the Hurricane Girls may love and admire each other, they are capable of private resentments brought on by their own personal challenges. This coming-of-age story is an honest portrayal of the lives of girls learning to be resilient in the wake of a city's collective tragedy. KH COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Interpersonal conflicts threaten the friendship of three New Orleans seventh graders in this slice-of-life novel by Holt (The Ambassador of Nowhere Texas). Because she went for a run instead of minding her younger sister, Greer believes that the traffic accident that resulted in her sibling needing a wheelchair is her fault. To lift Greer's spirits, best friend Kiki proposes that she, Greer, and their other friend Joya Mia; who dubbed themselves the Hurricane Girls after their collaboration on a school project about Hurricane Katrina; compete in a relay triathlon. But the race's events present problems for the trio: Kiki cannot swim despite attempting to learn in the pool her father had installed before he abandoned their family, Joya Mia shares her rusted old bike with her financially struggling household, and Greer doesn't want to run at all following her sister's accident. Myriad growing pains surrounding school, money, body image, and the future further imperil their bond. Nuanced relationship dynamics paired with complex characterizations drive this grounded look at the ways in which the aftermath of tragedy can reverberate long after the event and how community and connection can pave a path toward healing. Greer and Kiki read as white; Joya Mia is Mexican American. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Amy Berkower, Writers House. (Aug.)

#2350054 Death and Life of Benny Brook (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ethan Long

Benny's life is slowly unraveling. His parents are newly divorced, his mom chooses to move away, and Benny and his brother and sister are left with their chain-smoking dad, who has just been diagnosed with lung cancer. Benny is lonely, anxious, and very angry. He can't sleep at night and spends his days trying to survive fifth grade.

978-0-316-33312-2 Christy Ottaviano Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Booklist In this fictionalized memoir, Long recalls his life as a 10-year-old boy. After a period of anger and arguments, Benny's parents divorce and Mom moves out. Dad can't stop smoking, despite a recent diagnosis of terminal lung cancer. For Benny; his often-bullying, sometimes amusing older brother; and their little sister, household routines become unstable and chaotic. And although Benny attends counselling sessions, he sits silently, unable to talk about his anxiety and loneliness. When his father's condition worsens, Benny punches a classmate. But he makes a breakthrough in counseling, and, with help from a teacher, a friend, and family members, he is ready for his father's death and the increased sense of awareness that follows. As a writer/illustrator, Long is known for his wit, and it emerges in this captivating story as well, particularly in his expressive grayscale drawings, which appear throughout the book. The cartoonlike illustrations keep the tone from becoming unbearably dark, even when the topic is death. Written from Benny's viewpoint, the first-person narrative begins with reflections on who annoys him, but toward the end, he starts reflecting and acting on his own rather than reacting to others. Long's heartening memoir portrays a boy facing challenging situations with hard-won hope and increasing maturity.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Long (the Junior Monster Scouts series) pulls from events in his childhood to deliver an ardent illustrated novel. A month after 10-year-old Benny's parents' divorce, Benny and his siblings have been living with their chain-smoking father, who recently learned that he has a lump on his lung. Both parents struggle to manage childcare on top of their own difficulties; Mom's new home lacks sufficient sleeping space for all three siblings, and Dad's cancer diagnosis impacts his ability to be present for his children. The family's interpersonal tensions result in emotional tumult for Benny, who starts lashing out in moments of intense anger. His parents sign him up for therapy, and as Benny begins being opening about his worries, he comes to terms with the new realities of his life. Dynamic, youthful-feeling pencil drawings by the protagonist; the sun is depicted as a quintessential semicircle on the edge of the page, and tree canopies are rendered using cloud-like shapes; permeate this slice-of-life narrative, allowing readers glimpses into how Benny views his circumstances. The characters' challenges are realistically handled, and painful moments are balanced with levying humor. Character skin tones reflect the white of the page. Ages 9: 14. Agent: Paul Rodeen, Rodeen Literary Management. (Oct.)

#2321200 Audrey Covington Breaks the Rules (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Karina Evans

Audrey is stuck helping her parents move her former-movie-star grandmother into a luxury retirement community. When she finally manages to sneak off to her parents' car to check her phone, her grandmother climbs into the driver's seat and speeds off--not realizing Audrey is still in the back seat! But as the two make their way across Hollywood, they realize that the life they think they want might not be what they need.

978-0-316-34042-7 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 272 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Why does Audrey's mother set such strict boundaries when her own mother, Nana Rhea, an aging former film star, led such a colorful life? Audrey's parents insist she follow their rules: no gymnastics, no PG-13 movies, no video games. Since rising seventh grader Audrey doesn't even know what she likes, she doesn't rebel--until her two best friends uninvite her from their annual end-of-school-year sleepover because they don't want to limit their activities to ones she's allowed. Audrey is understandably heartbroken and mad, but her mother won't negotiate her rules. She also rarely talks about what her own childhood with Nana Rhea was like. Audrey's mom is directing Nana Rhea's life too, insisting she move to a retirement community. When Nana Rhea runs away for one last romp, Audrey goes with her. What follows is a riotous gallivant across Hollywood as they "borrow" outfits from a studio costume department, visit a tattoo parlor so Audrey can get her ears pierced, mingle at star-filled parties--and try to outrun Audrey's parents. Audrey is having the time of her life while learning heaps about why some parental limits might actually be good. Friendships and family dynamics among this default White cast come under scrutiny, allowing for growth, change, and self-discovery. One of Audrey's best friends has black hair and a Muslim name. This quirky read celebrates exploring and finding the right balance between guidance and freedom. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly th grader Audrey Covington faces a whole summer without longtime best friends Sadia and Tamzin, on whom she's counting to help her navigate junior high. Devastated when they disinvite her from their annual end-of-the-year sleepover by text, citing her protective parents' strict guidelines, she finds her mother unwilling to make any changes. A chance to break some rules presents itself after Audrey's parents move her maternal grandmother; beloved former Hollywood star Nana Rhea, who's been facing paparazzi at her Hollywood home; to a retirement community. Nana Rhea, not truly ready for the adjustment, makes a break for it with Audrey in the car, and the two strike a deal that meets both their needs: one night on the town for Nana Rhea to visit old memories and for Audrey to explore her wild side. With Audrey's parents; an Nana Rhea's fans; hot on their tail, they get Audrey's ears pierced at a tattoo parlor, sneak into a Hollywood studio wardrobe to borrow glamorous attire, and crash an exclusive pool party. Tracing the duo's big night out with considerable verve, Evans (Grow Up, Tahlia Wilkins!) mixes a glamorous setting and quirky characters with deeper themes about growing up, as Audrey learns about her mother's struggles with Nana Rhea and the idea that adults face transitional change, too. Characters default to white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jessica Mileo, InkWell Management. (Apr.)

#2291568 Learning to Fall (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sally Engelfried

Daphne doesn't want to be stuck in Oakland with her dad. She wants to get on the first plane to Prague, where her mom is shooting a movie. Armed with her grandparents' phone number and strict instructions from her mom to call them if her dad starts drinking again, Daphne has no problem being cold to him. But there's one thing Daphne can't keep herself from doing: joining her dad and her new friend Arlo at a weekly skate session.

978-0-316-36797-4 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2022 5-1/2 x 8 272 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve-year-old Daphne is sent to her dad's house for the summer while her mom heads to Prague to film a movie. Daphne hasn't seen him in years because of his problems with alcoholism. Skateboarding was the one thing they bonded over until Daphne got into a skateboarding accident when she was 10, partly due to her dad not showing up for her. Now he is in recovery and doing his best to repair their relationship. Daphne still doesn't feel as if she can rely on him, and she doesn't skateboard anymore either, having tangled up her love for it with her love for her dad. Most stories about alcohol addiction don't always focus on the complexities of recovery and forgiveness like Engelfried does, and the theme of family resonates throughout as Daphne navigates the instability of an alcoholic parent and her anger and resentment towards her father. Pair with Life in the Balance (2021), by Jen Petro-Roy, for a story that also deals with an alcoholic parent struggling in recovery.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A girl learns life lessons through skateboarding. When 12-year-old Daphne is sent to Oakland to stay with her father for the summer so her mother can pursue her acting career in Prague, she feels resentful. Daphne hasn't seen her father since before her 10th birthday, when he was supposed to meet her at a skate park to teach her some skills but didn't show up. Trying to do a trick on her own, Daphne broke her arm and subsequently quit skateboarding. Now in Oakland, Daphne is cold toward her recovering alcoholic father and refuses his attempts to get her to skateboard with him. The tepid, formulaic plot and tentative voice of the first half of this story (overexplaining is rampant, as are tropey expressions of anxiety—the stomach features prominently) give way by the end to a more assured, original voice and welcome nuance in the characterizations of Daphne and her parents. The depictions of alcoholism through the eyes of Daphne and the adults affected are honest and unromanticized—possibly the strongest part of the book—while the skateboarding theme is integrated fairly successfully. Readers will enjoy the descriptions of skateboarding tricks, but the skateboarding-as-a-metaphor-for-life angle is at first too heavy-handed; by the end of the story it becomes more subtle. Main characters read White; two significant secondary characters are Mexican American. Not without glitches but, overall, an honest story about alcoholism and forgiveness.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Twelve-year-old Daphne hasn't seen her dad in three years because of his drinking but now she's being forced to spend the summer with him in Oakland, CA, while her mom films a movie in Prague. Daphne's dad is an avid skateboarder and when she was younger, they used to skateboard together. But, ever since the Skate Park Disaster when she was 10, Daphne's refused to skate. Now in recovery, her dad's trying to reconnect with her but Daphne stubbornly refuses his overtures, instead giving him her "Cold Fish" look. She blames him for her skateboarding accident two years ago when he didn't show up to skate with her as he promised. Her dad's neighbor and best friend Gus is dating a woman who has a son Daphne's age named Arlo, and he is an enthusiastic skateboarder too. With both Arlo and her dad's patience and encouragement, Daphne begins to regain her confidence and love for skateboarding. She even allows Arlo to film her skating for his summer film project. While Daphne can be sharp at times, her unwillingness to initially trust or forgive her dad feels realistic. As she finally begins to thaw and hear him out, she becomes more understanding and empathetic. Arlo and Gus are Mexican American; the rest of the characters are white. VERDICT An authentic and hopeful look at a young girl with a passion for skateboarding who is struggling to understand and forgive an alcoholic parent with the support of family and friends.--Sharon Rawlins Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2300183 Heart Finds (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jaime Berry

Eleven-year-old Mabel Cunningham is a quiet loner who only feels free to be herself when she's "extreme treasure hunting" with her grampa-much to her perfectionist mother's disapproval. Nothing excites Mabel more than discovering a heart find, an item that calls to her heart, and the maybes that come along with it.

978-0-316-39047-7 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Mabel's sixth grade year challenges her in unexpected ways. Narrator Mabel is bright, observant, and an inveterate punster who wears Doc Martens with everything. The summer's-end change in her lifelong friendship with neighbor Ashley might have been the most bewildering and unpleasant thing that could happen to Mabel at the start of sixth grade. But when her beloved Grampa has a stroke and must move for a time to assisted living, Mabel is distraught and concerned with protecting and defending his collections. A former banker, Grampa has spent recent years scavenging for treasures he finds in dumpsters and at garage sales, repurposing them or sometimes selling them for cash. He and Mabel have had a routine, including weekly visits to a local pawnshop and a thrift store in their Oklahoma town and watching a television show about unexpected finds. He knows "how to take things that look a mess and make them right again." Mabel's relationship with her competitive mother, a talented wedding planner, is less easy and comfortable. Mabel believes if she can help her mother finance her grandfather's care, she can save his house full of salvaged treasures. At the same time, she struggles with navigating her changing friendships and relationship with her sometimes-prickly mom. The characters read White. Sure-handed storytelling and a resilient, extremely likable young hero. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly With humor and a light touch, this feel-good novel with a personal-growth trajectory captures the sharp edges of a family crisis and shifting sixth-grade social dynamics. In Abner, Okla., word-loving 11-year-old narrator Mabel and her collection-loving grandfather are "urban scavengers" for whom dumpster diving is sport. For them, "heart finds, items that take hold and stir something in our hearts," prove the ultimate trophy. Just as her lifelong best friend Ashley gets sucked into the popular crowd, and a pattern of unkind behavior ensues, Mabel's beloved grandfather experiences a stroke. Suddenly, Mabel must adapt to hospital routines and scary possibilities, and rely more on her sometimes judgmental single mother, a former beauty queen turned wedding planner and tablescaper who favors the perfect and the new. In this shifting whirlwind, Mabel not only finds a few kindred spirit friends but also comes to a deeper understanding of her mom's own wounds and dreams. Berry (Hope Springs) crafts a winning, wise heroine and a heartfelt small-town story that foregrounds the message that "sometimes you don't find what you were looking for, but just what your heart needed." Characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Kaitlyn Johnson, Corvisiero Agency. (Nov.)

#2377789 Bridge to Bat City (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ernest Cline

After losing her mother, thirteen-year-old Opal moves in with her uncle Roscoe on the family farm. There, Opal bonds with Uncle Roscoe over music and befriends a group of orphaned, music-loving bats. But just as the farm is starting to feel like home, the bats' cave is destroyed by a big mining company with its sights set on the farmland next.

978-0-316-46058-3 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 13-year-old girl and a colony of bats overcome losses in this middle-grade debut from Ready Player One author Cline. After Opal B. Flats' mother dies, she goes to live with Uncle Roscoe on the family farm in the Texas Hill Country. Her first night there, she has an alien encounter and subsequently discovers that she can communicate with the Mexican free-tailed bats living in a nearby cave. Their connection becomes essential when Opal, Uncle Roscoe, and the bats, through differing circumstances, are forced to find new homes. Opal and Uncle Roscoe, who read white, convince the bats to accompany them to Austin, "the only place in this whole stone-hearted state where weirdos are welcome!" If Opal and Uncle Roscoe have a slow start with fitting in, it's even more difficult for a colony of over a million bats, especially when prejudice against them is being systematically reinforced by a greedy councilman whose pesticide business suffers when the bats start eating insects. The third-person narration unfolds in a homey style that's colored with references to music and famous names that contribute to the sense of place, including Ann Richards, Selena, and Willie Nelson. Entries from Opal's scrapbook are interspersed throughout. Readers will be relieved that, despite the hardships Opal and the bats must overcome, they ultimately prevail, succeeding in making friends and new homes for themselves in this celebratory primer on bats and belonging. Westell's delicate, atmospheric illustrations greatly enhance the text. Delightfully weird and whimsical. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2326016 Braid Girls (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sherri Winston

Maggie's world is turned upside down when she learns that her father, whom she admires, has a second daughter, Callie, whom no one knew existed. But she won't let a new family member get in the way of her summer plans with best friend Daija.

They're determined to make tons of money braiding hair for kids around the neighborhood.

978-0-316-46161-0 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 272

pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Maggie has been best friends with Daija ever since she moved from her previous home in Japan. Daija and Maggie just click, and they're so close that they don't really need any other friends. But when Maggie discovers that her father has another daughter, named Callie, and that Callie is going to have to come live with her family, she has mixed feelings. Daija's feelings, however, aren't mixed at all: she doesn't trust Maggie's new sister, and she definitely doesn't like having to share her best friend. When the three girls start a hair-braiding business together, they find that they must navigate the ups and downs of friendship, family, and rivalries. Winston's newest novel explores a variety of different family dynamics within the Black community. It is easy to delineate between the girls, who all serve as narrators, as they each have distinct voices. This book celebrates the empowerment of young Black girls across all walks of life. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine It's a big summer for middle schooler Maggie: she is starting a braiding business with her best friend, Daija, and she will be meeting her half-sister, Callie, who is from the Bahamas, for the first time. Callie's mother recently passed away, and Callie will be moving in with Maggie's family in Jacksonville, Florida. While Maggie is welcoming to Callie, Daija is not so happy about this new sister, as she and Maggie are practically sisters. Protective of her friendship and their new braiding enterprise, Daija is not interested in embracing Callie and is determined not to be replaced by a stranger. However, Callie soon becomes the least of their worries as nemesis Angela and her crew decide to open a competing braid business and start to steal their customers. Is it possible for the three girls to overcome their differences and insecurities and become sisters and friends? Drama between the Braid Girls and the Sistahs Who Braid heats up as the competition for business leads to a memorable climax. A summer crush for Maggie lends extra excitement. Told through the alternating points of view of the three girls, the story explores themes of friend and family relationships, grief, bullying, divorce, and parental absence, all handled with care and sensitivity. Monique Harris(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A tween in Jacksonville, Florida, worries about changes in her closest friendship. Daija and Maggie are best friends, two Black girls with plans to turn their hair-braiding skills into a summer business. Things become complicated with the arrival of Maggie's new half sister, Callie; Callie's White mom had kept her existence a secret from Maggie's dad until just before her death. Maggie's close-knit family absorbs their new addition, but there's naturally some tension. Meanwhile, Daija desperately needs Braid Girls to succeed so she can afford private ballet lessons. The girls incorporate their braiding business into their duties as junior counselors at a local day camp and get off to a great start--until girls from another camp set up a rival business and try to steal their clients. This adversity, along with Daija's worries about money and her place in Maggie's life, creates a rift, revealing personality differences the friends had ignored. But they eventually realize their different ways of handling things can make them a stronger unit. In addition to the centrality of friendship in the lives of middle schoolers, the family connections are richly portrayed. Daija's drive to prove herself to her father, now remarried, is always on her mind; Maggie's need to play peacemaker is perceived as a weakness; and Callie puts on a brave face while mourning her mom. The story is told in the three girls' alternating voices, and the supporting adult characters add realistic texture. An enjoyable story with lively and engaging protagonists. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Hoping to make extra money over the summer, best friends Daija and Maggie, who are both Black, are excited to launch their hair-braiding business while undertaking their responsibilities as junior counselors at Paradise Park camp. Daija plans to use the funds to pay for a ballet tutor, while Maggie yearns to impress her strict father with her success. Since Maggie is the "pie-in-the-sky type of girl" and Daija is the "getting it done type," the pair feel that they're perfectly matched to take on this endeavor and build a booming business. But when Maggie's father introduces Maggie to her biracial half sister Callie, whose mother recently died, Maggie struggles to incorporate Callie into her already established summer plans. Daija and Maggie begrudgingly invite Callie to join their Braid Girls team, but while their business launch is good, emerging competition threatens their progress. Daija, meanwhile, struggles with feelings of jealousy over Callie and Maggie's budding siblinghood, and the two besties must reckon with how life changes will affect their future friendship. In this loving ode to the beauty of Black hair, Winston winningly portrays the girls' ambitious entrepreneurial spirit and competitive drive, and explores, via their shifting dynamics and emotional openness, the complexities of blended families. Ages 8: 12. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–8—Twelve-year-olds Daija and Maggie are looking forward to a summer as junior counselors at a day camp in their north-eastern Florida hometown. They also have plans to set up a business braiding the hair of campers. Both girls are dealing with family issues. Bold ballet dancer Daija worries that her father cares more about his new family than he does about her. Quiet, practical Maggie is nervously awaiting the arrival of her half-sister, Callie, whom she didn't know existed until recently. After some initial conflict, Maggie and Daija decide that Callie can join them in their braiding business. As soon as they begin to develop a clientele, a group of rival counselors decide to start up a competing business. Throughout the summer, the girls deal with competition, friendship, money, and family. They struggle with these challenges in age-appropriate ways and learn from their mistakes. Told in alternating viewpoints, readers see the challenges faced by the three girls from different angles. The family drama is exclusively focused on the perspective of the young leads, and conflict between their parents is not a part of the story. The characters are likable, the conclusion is satisfying, and the business plot means there are lots of beautiful descriptions of different natural Black hair styles. VERDICT This enjoyable slice-of-life novel centers three Black girls navigating family, friendship, and belonging.—Kristin L. Anderson

#2309305 World Made of Glass (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ami Polonsky

As Iris navigates her rage and grief, she resolves to speak out against the rampant fear, misinformation, and prejudice surrounding AIDS--and find the pieces of Dad that she never knew before. In the process, she discovers surprising sides to J.R., the joy of true friendship, and the power of her own voice in school and at home.

978-0-316-46204-4 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Thirteen-year-old Iris' father has died of AIDS, leaving her furious at his partner, J.R., who was the one who infected him with HIV. She also feels anger toward her once-favorite teacher and her two best friends, Will and Toby, who react with fear when they learn that her dad had AIDS. It's 1987--the height of the plague years--and Iris, warming to J.R. a bit too easily, goes with him to a demonstration and an ACT UP meeting, realizing these are the only times since her father's death that her anger has abated. Additional respite is found in Julian, the new boy in class who becomes her staunch ally and then her crush. As time gradually passes, she begins to come to terms with what she thinks of as her rage monster. The novel's character-driven nature is underscored by an enlightening acrostic that Iris and her dad have written for each other. Altogether, the novel offers a valuable education in AIDS history and emotional wellness while never becoming overly didactic. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Iris just wants more time with her dad, but in 1987 his AIDS diagnosis is all but a brutal death sentence. She's gotten used to her parents' divorce after her dad came out, she's learned to (barely) tolerate her dad's partner, J.R., and she has even tried to learn what she can about AZT, the new FDA-approved drug to treat AIDS, but she just cannot accept that her poetic and loving father will be gone in a matter of days. After her dad dies, Iris needs something to ground her, and that quickly becomes activism, which opens her eyes to the glacial speed of AIDS research and medication approval, President Reagan's unfathomable refusal to address AIDS, and the continued misunderstanding about the contagion that has her teacher, for example, lose his mind about a drop of her blood after she gets a splinter. Impeccably written and emotionally powerful descriptions capture Iris' grappling with loss, as she pores over poems she and her dad wrote to each other, and tries to fill the part of herself hollowed out by grief. Iris' eventual bonding with J.R. opens opportunities for historical background that feel naturally integrated after he guesses correctly that activism may be a balm for her heart and a worthy direction for her anger. Early AIDS history will likely be new ground for most younger readers, and detailed notes at the end provide additional context. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine It's 1987, and twelve-year-old Iris Cohen is feeling extremely fragile. In the past year, her father, an NYU professor, has moved to an upstairs unit in their Greenwich Village apartment building and begun a relationship with a man. Before Iris can wrap her head around the new living arrangement, Dad contracts AIDS and is given little hope for survival. Iris and her father are kindred spirits and share a special bond -- a love of words, writing, and poetry. The acrostic poems left on each other's doorsteps give readers a glimpse into their relationship and shine a light on their wit, expansive personalities, and mutual affection. The devastation of his loss is made palpable when the poems abruptly stop. To honor her dad's wishes, Iris works at getting to know his partner, J.R., and, in the process, learns about her father's activism and advocacy for fellow AIDS patients. This aspect of his life is totally unknown to her, and participating in early ACT UP demonstrations allows her to channel some of the rage and frustration she feels. With the support of her mom and a small cadre of friends, she sets out to try to change the conversation about the epidemic, including the way the public is being educated about the disease and the way it is spread. This is the best kind of family story, filled with love and, yes, loss, but most importantly with caring. The narrative is lyrical and heartfelt, and young people will be inspired to see Iris transcend her grief, use her voice, and find a way to make a difference. Luann Toth(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews It's the height of the AIDS panic in New York City, and Iris' father is dying. Last year, when Iris Cohen was in sixth grade, her parents got divorced because her dad came out. Her folks still love each other and even live in the same building. Dad's boyfriend, J.R., is so wonderful and kind that it's hard work to hate him ("If you lost your focus for even a minute, you started to love him"). But it's 1987, Dad is dying of AIDS, and the panic over the so-called gay plague is at a fever pitch. Iris discovers his diagnosis is no secret when the best teacher at her mostly White private school overreacts with ludicrous terror when Iris gets a splinter and there's a tiny drop of blood on her finger. How can you grieve when people are so scared that they won't go near a dead man's ashes without protective gear? Framed by lovely acrostic poems by Iris and her dad, the book shows a girl focusing her rage and pain into love through the nascent radical activism of ACT UP. An informative author's note describes the complex relationships of early AIDS activists with Dr. Anthony Fauci and adds factual historical nuance to various elements of the story as presented. The homophobia of the 1980s and the horror of AIDS deaths are softened for the middle-grade audience but still clearly present. Simultaneously sad and life affirming; a poetry-filled, inspiring call to activism. (Historical fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Set in 1987, this short, emotionally charged novel by Polonsky (Spin with Me) follows a few months in the life of seventh grader Iris Cohen, whose father is dying of AIDS. People at Iris's largely white, private New York City school know her father is gay, but Iris hasn't told her friends, DnD players who head up an after-school Philanthropy Club, that he's sick. Surprising herself, though, she suddenly tells new kid Julian, who's just moved from Indiana and doesn't balk at the news, or at Iris's family situation; she and her mother live in the same West Village building as her father and his boyfriend. Alongside emotional first-person prose peppered with mentions of era-specific entities and people; ACT UP, Indiana teen Ryan White; acrostic poems exchanged by Iris and her father address themes of life's fragility as well as managing grief and rage. Iris's father says that writing a poem means first identifying its "beating heart"; foregrounding believable, dynamic characters and showing both the cost of inaction and fear around the HIV/AIDS crisis, and the power of activism to bring change and build community, Polonsky has done just that. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Wendy Schmalz, Wendy Schmalz Agency. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--It's 1987, and seventh grader Iris Cohen has a secret. Everyone at school knows her parents divorced after her dad revealed that he is gay and planning to move in with his boyfriend JR, but none of them know that her dad is dying of AIDS. When her father dies far sooner than she expected, Iris is filled with anger at all the people who are scared of getting close to her (including two of her best friends) because of HIV, even though she is not infected and the virus isn't spread through casual contact. She finds some relief from her anger by joining JR at one of the ACT UP protests on the streets of New York, demanding help for AIDS victims from President Reagan, the FDA, and Anthony Fauci. She realizes with her new friend Julian that people are often willing to help once they know the facts, so she and her friends come up with a plan to educate students at their school. This beautifully written novel explores the complexity of grief while showcasing the stigmatizing fear, ignorance, prejudice, and anger surrounding the AIDS crisis in the late 1980s. Iris is a sympathetic, authentic character whose love for her father shines through in the acrostic poems they composed for each other, which appear throughout the novel. All of the main characters are white, with the exception of Iris's friend, Will, who is described as the only Black student in Iris's grade in their private school. An author's note at the end offers a brief history of the AIDS crisis and the ACT UP movement, while expressing the hope that the book will inspire readers to fight for justice in their own ways. VERDICT With its sensitive portrayal of loss, and its carefully researched depiction of a devastating time in American history, this lyrical novel is highly recommended.--Ashley Larsen Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

#2291611 Door of No Return (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kwame Alexander

11-year-old Kofi Offin dreams of water. He loves these things above all else: his family, the fireside tales of his father's father, a girl named Ama, and, of course, swimming. He's hoping to finally prove himself in front of Ama and his friends in a swimming contest against his older, stronger cousin. But before this can take place, a festival comes to the villages of Upper and Lower Kwanta and Kofi's brother is chosen to represent Upper Kwanta in the wrestling contest.

978-0-316-44186-5 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2022 5-1/2 x 8 432 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.9 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile NP

Reviews by: Book Page Kwame Alexander opens a planned historical fiction trilogy with The Door of No Return, which takes place in 1860, near the end of the transatlantic slave trade. Eleven-year-old Kofi Offin lives in the Asante kingdom, in what is now Ghana. Kofi holds deep respect for his grandfather, the village storyteller, who always begins his stories by saying, "There was even a time . . ." In this time, Kofi has a crush on Ama, a girl in his class. In this time, Kofi and Ama's teacher forces them to speak English instead of their native language, or face the wrath of his cane. And in this time, Kofi's older brother, Kwasi, will unintentionally alter the fate of their entire family, and Kofi will have to draw on all of his grandfather's wisdom to survive.

Reviews by: Booklist is a life he loves. He's 11, just on the cusp of becoming a man, and he finds that there are things he must tackle before coming-of-age—proving his strength by beating his cousin at a swimming match, speaking up so that the girl he likes knows that he admires her, and earning the meaning behind the coded language his elders hide from him. When Kofi's brother accidentally kills a neighboring chief's nephew in a wrestling match, Kofi instinctively knows that everything in the world is going to change, he just doesn't realize how much. Alexander weaves a breathtaking tale that is ripe with the juxtaposing emotions that come with any coming-of-age story. Through Alexander's verse, readers are reminded of the beauty and unbounded richness that Ghana and her people have to offer. Simultaneously, while offering a picture of mirth and tangible humanity, Alexander immerses readers in the reality of being Asante during the age of slavery. We see Kofi's humanity slowly ripped away alongside the dehumanization of an entire race. Alexander has written a masterpiece, one that powerfully and truthfully gives agency to the Black voices of the past. Profound and important reading. HIGH-DEMAND BACKSTORY: Alexander is one of the biggest names in kidlit right now, and his ardent fans will be eagerly awaiting his latest.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Kofi Offin feels ready for his Ashante manhood initiation in the African Gold Coast of 1860, despite his confusion over the contradictory life information he's receiving from respected elders: his British-influenced teacher pushes English language and manners while his grandfather and parents value Twi and tradition. When Kofi's older brother accidentally kills a rival from a neighboring kingdom at an annual competition, however, a fatal chain of events is set in motion that leads to the brother's revenge murder and Kofi's capture and sale to slaver traders. Kofi is left to call upon the wisdom of his grandfather and his own preparation for initiation to keep hope—or at least a reason to live—preserved among his fellow captives. Alexander's narration comprises poems (many incorporating dialogue) and interspersed interludes from Kofi's grandfather, whose stately yet intimate voice imparts the history and advice that will support Kofi through tragedy. The horror of the slave system is clearly traced to its European and American roots, but Alexander also examines some of the complexities within Kofi's society that contributed to the trade—a treaty between rival kingdoms that carried a near-certain guarantee of renewed hostilities; home-grown greed for the shiny allure of "the wonderfuls" civilization; a mechanism for disposing of one's enemies to enslavers. This tragic realism culminates in a climactic enactment of "The People Could Fly" that will feel triumphant for readers who recognize and embrace the allusion and will offer an introduction to those unfamiliar with that work. A glossary will be included. EB COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Alexander's latest verse novel, the first in a projected trilogy, is historical fiction set in 1860, in an Asante Kingdom village. Kofi Offin learns about the world through his storyteller grandfather Nana Mosi: how he came to be named after the river; the origin of the rivalry with neighboring Lower Kwanta; and the history of "the wonderfuls," the white colonials who have claimed dominion over their nation of Ghana. While Kofi's school teacher has an affinity for all things British (he's "on a mission to capsize our culture," Nana says), Kofi is content to learn from his grandfather, even as his own highly engaging story plays out through interactions with those around him. There's Ama, Kofi's childhood friend and the most beautiful girl he's ever seen; his best friend Ebo; and the cousin who torments Kofi. And there's his older brother Kwasi, the newest athlete to compete in the village games during the Annual Kings festival. When a wrestling contest results in tragedy, the tentative peace with Lower Kwanta is broken. As a result, Kofi is taken captive, and the book now becomes a searing chronicle of the terror that will carry him to "the door of no return" and far from home. A master storyteller himself, Alexander has taken great care to incorporate familiar West African sayings, folklore characters, and rituals. Themes of conflict within and between cultures, and of war and peace, hate and love, despair and hope are deeply embedded throughout this gripping tale that forefronts the humanity of those who were forced into slavery.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Alexander's (The Crossover, rev. 5/14; The Undefeated, rev. 3/19) latest verse novel, the first in a projected trilogy, is historical fiction set in 1860, in the Asante Kingdom village of Upper Kwanta. Kofi Offin learns about the world through his storyteller grandfather Nana Mosi: how he came to be named after the river; the origin of the rivalry with neighboring Lower Kwanta; and the history of "the wonderfuls," the white colonials who have claimed dominion over their nation of Ghana. While Kofi's school teacher has an affinity for all things British (he's "on a mission to capsize our culture," Nana says), Kofi is content to learn from his grandfather, even as his own highly engaging story plays out through interactions with those around him. There's Ama, Kofi's childhood friend and the most beautiful girl he's ever seen; his best friend Ebo; and the cousin who torments Kofi. And there's his older brother Kwasi, the newest athlete to compete in the village games during the Annual Kings festival. When a wrestling contest results in tragedy, the tentative peace with Lower Kwanta is broken. As a result, Kofi is taken captive, and the book now becomes a searing chronicle of the terror that will carry him to "the door of no return" and far from home. A master storyteller himself, Alexander has taken great care to incorporate familiar West African sayings, folklore characters, and rituals. Themes of conflict within and between cultures, and of war and peace, hate and love, despair and hope are deeply embedded throughout this gripping tale that forefronts the humanity of those who were forced into slavery. Eboni Njoku(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A boy's life is turned upside down following a wrestling match in West Africa's Asante Kingdom in 1860. Eleven-year-old Kofi Offin loves his family, admires his friend Ama, and tries to avoid his bully of a cousin. Kofi's teacher, Mr. Goodluck Phillip, who canes him for speaking Twi, is convinced the students must learn the Queen's English, but Kofi prefers the stories of Nana Mosi, his grandfather and the village storyteller. The place he truly feels at home is the river, where he practices swimming and dreams of defeating his cousin in a race. But before that can happen, all attention turns to the Kings Festival, which features highly anticipated wrestling contests against representatives from their rival village. This year, Kofi's older brother, Kwasi, has been chosen to compete. During the match, Kwasi accidentally kills Prince Yaw Boateng, his opponent and the nephew of the King of Lower Kwanta, changing the direction of their lives. The king retaliates by having Kofi, Kwasi, and other boys from their village kidnapped. Ultimately, they are sold and shipped far away. The immediacy of this verse novel places readers alongside Kofi, thriving as a young boy surrounded by family love and legacy before being abruptly snatched from all he has known. Alexander's rich language is lyrical and haunting as the water, long a source of comfort for Kofi, becomes full of uncertainty and danger. A riveting, not-to-be-missed trilogy opener that will leave readers invested in what is to come.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Newbery Medalist Alexander's gripping historical novel in verse, a trilogy opener rooted in the Asante Kingdom in 1860, centers 11-year-old Kofi Offin; a child deeply connected to water. In early, lyrical chapters that evoke a dreamlike childhood, Kofi lives with his family in Upper Kwanta, where he swims in the river that is his namesake, engages with best mate Ebo, crushes on longtime friend Ama, and listens to the tales of his village-storyteller grandfather, Nana Mosi; who details "the past/ like it lives/ in him,/ like it still matters." He also clashes with his cousin, a bully, and Mr. Goodluck Phillip, the schoolteacher imparting "the Queen's English" and Shakespeare to students speaking their native Twi. When an annual festival pits wrestlers from Upper and Lower Kwanta against one another, and Kofi's older brother, Kwasi, is set to represent their village, an unexpected death sets off a series of tragedies that upend Kofi's world. Interweaving moments of joyful exuberance and heartbreaking sadness via sensate lines by turns sweet and stinging, Alexander's sweeping novel conjures a captivating, resonant world of African tradition, life, and ancestral wisdom. Ages 10: up. Agent: Arielle Eckstut, Levine Greenberg Rostan Literary. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—The beginning of a planned trilogy set in western Africa in 1860, the latest offering from Newbery winner Alexander introduces readers to Kofi Offin. His experiences are a window to what life would have been like for a boy growing up in that specific place and time. He has a crush on Ama. He loves his grandfather's stories. He has learned English in school but speaks Twi with his family and friends. His cousin bullies him and he challenges him to a swimming race. When Kofi's brother accidentally kills his opponent in a wrestling match, the gentle verse narrative is disrupted because the family of the dead wrestler captures Kofi and his brother. They take them away from their village to the coast; Kofi goes through the door of no return and is put on a boat where things get very bad very quickly. The cliff-hanger ensures that future volumes will tackle the rest of Kofi's story. Books with enslaved main characters certainly exist in juvenile fiction, but the reality of the transatlantic slave trade hasn't been so adeptly captured for young readers to date. This important book is ideal for classroom discussion; shelve alongside Sharon Draper's Copper Sun and Julius Lester's Day of Tears. VERDICT Told in Alexander's lyrical and masterly style, this gritty and compelling novel of Kofi's life should be included in all library collections that serve young readers.—Kristin L. Anderson

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness In this foreboding yet mesmerizing historical novel by Newbery Medalist Kwame Alexander, Asante villager Kofi Offin comes face to face with the door of no return. Eleven-year-old Kofi lives with his family in a Ghanaian village where the river plays a huge role in his life. He was named after it, and villagers gossip that beasts dwell there at night. Kofi questions the gossip until he sees for himself that there truly are monstrous things hiding near the water.

#2330418 Tessa Miyata Is No Hero (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Julie Abe

When Tessa and Jin break the Miyata family's precious heirloom they accidentally release the malicious samurai god Taira Masakado and discover a hidden part of the city where gods and mythological creatures walk among humans—including their new companion, a mythical nine-tailed fox who may be more trouble than he is help.

978-0-316-44852-9 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 368

pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist In internet bullies to ominous ancient spirits that only she can see, Tessa Miyata can't seem to catch a break. So when she and her sisters are invited to spend the summer with their grandparents in Japan, Tessa is excited to start over. But then a vengeful samurai spirit attacks a local shrine, and Tessa and her friends, both mortal and spirit, have to find a way to save the city (and Tessa's self-worth, while they're at it). Tenuous world building and inconsistent characters keep the story from more meaningfully exploring its supernatural and emotional premise, but readers interested in the mythology can enjoy a light-hearted take on figures from Japanese lore. This fast-paced middle-grade fantasy feels like a book dreaming of being an animated series, complete with training sequences, quippy talking-animal sidekicks, and plentiful pop-culture references. Informed by the author's own summers in Japan, Abe (Eva Evergreen and the Cursed Witch, 2021) revisits familiar themes of determination and learning to believe in yourself in this high-energy--if somewhat underdeveloped--coming-of-age story. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Grappling with the loss of her parents, Tessa Miyata feels like a burden upon her American grandparents, who have now been charged with providing for her and her sisters. Recently having parted ways with a bullying best friend and feeling strained by the familial knots of grief, obligation, and love, Tessa sees a summer in Japan at her other grandparents' house as a fresh step towards self-sufficiency. Unfortunately, that plan goes quite awry when she's saddled with stoic neighborhood karate prodigy, Jin Uehara, and together they accidentally release Lord Taira Masakado, a rebel samurai god, who begins wreaking havoc on Tokyo. With the help of Kit, a fox spirit invested in recovering his memories and gaining his own independence, they must find the hidden City of Legends. While they prepare to fight Lord Taira, Tessa and Jin grow to know themselves and one another, finding their own worth and learning what they can offer the world. Abe skillfully builds a world, drawing on elements of Japanese religion, art, food, and architecture in an energizing wash of sensory descriptions. Pencil art evoking manga illustration works to this same end, depicting, for example, torii, a traditional Japanese shrine gate, or a patterned happi coat. An author's note and an in-character glossary likewise invite the reader further into Abe's Japan and provide context. While the text is sometimes overly reliant on expository dialogue, readers will nevertheless be thrilled by the dramatic and epic stakes imbued into action sequences. Looping repeatedly around the Japanese proverb, "After the rain, the earth hardens," Tessa's journey provides young readers with a new heroine whose emotional core is rock solid. MC COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Thrown into a world of Japanese gods and spirits, Tessa must find the courage and strength to defeat an evil samurai spirit. Tessa Miyata is cursed. At the beginning of sixth grade, she began seeing a masked woman who's invisible to everyone else, leading to her being shunned socially. A year later, an incident gets her expelled from summer camp. Gram, the maternal grandmother who has cared for Tessa and her sisters since their parents died, sends her to spend the summer in Japan with Ojii-chan and Obaachan, her paternal grandparents. But Tessa's grand Tokyo vacation plans get shut down when she's forced to hang out with neighbor boy Jin, who is clearly reluctant too. The kids finally get to run an errand for Ojii-chan in Tokyo, but it turns disastrous when bullies break the precious heirloom daruma doll entrusted to them, releasing the spirit of legendary samurai Taira Masakado, who died over 1,000 years ago. With the help of a kitsune, or nine-tailed fox, Tessa and Jin must work together, train to battle monsters, and try to save Tokyo from Lord Taira. In this exciting, action-packed story, Tessa struggles with loneliness and feels like she doesn't belong anywhere, but she discovers true strength, bravery, selflessness, and resilience. The magical world of Japanese spirits is beautifully crafted, with cultural elements seamlessly woven throughout. A glossary and interspersed black-and-white illustrations provide additional context. A delightfully spirited Japanese mythology-inspired adventure that's full of heart. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A determined tween trains to battle an ancient Japanese warrior threatening present-day Tokyo in this mythical fantasy adventure by Abe (Alliana, Girl of Dragons). Twelve-year-old Tessa Miyata, who has been raised by her Gram in California following her parents' deaths, has been labeled a "weirdo" by her classmates for her ability to see things others can't. Once summer begins, Tessa is excited to visit her paternal grandparents in Japan with her two older sisters, hoping for a break from her mysterious visions and a chance at a fresh start. Except she still sees things, including a strange glow emanating from the glass-encased daruma doll that Ojii-chan sends her to deliver to an antique shop. When the case breaks, Tessa learns that it was binding the spirit of Taira Masakado, a thousand-year-old samurai lord who almost overthrew Japan. Accompanied by Jin Uehara, a neighborhood boy and martial arts whiz, and Kit, a magical fox spirit, Tessa must do whatever it takes to save Tokyo from the escaped lord. Otherworldly beings and ethereal landscapes, inspired by Japanese mythology, fill this energetic tale of acceptance and friendship that centers a compassionate, loyal protagonist. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Sarah Landis, Sterling Lord Literistic. (Aug.)

#2220333 Dustborn (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Bowman

Delta of Dead River has always been told to hide her back, where a map is branded on her skin to a rumored paradise called the Verdant. In a wasteland plagued by dust squalls, geomagnetic storms, and solar flares, many would kill for it even if no one can read it. So when raiders sent by a man known as the General attack her village, Delta suspects he is searching for her.

978-0-358-24443-1 Clarion Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 16.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 7-10 The author of Vengeance Road (2015) and Retribution Rails (2017) brings hardscrabble frontier drama to a desolate futurescape in this postapocalyptic western. Delta and her pack of kin spend their days trying to survive in their sweltering, barren settlement and their evenings looking to the stars for signs the gods will return to them. When her family is abducted, Delta sets out on a harrowing journey across the dust to free them. Armed with smarts and very little water, she must figure out whom to trust, who the enemy is, and what is worth fighting for. Delta is a clever and hard heroine, and the cast of characters she forms tentative alliances with along the way are as likable as they are mysterious. A burgeoning romance with an old friend and a dramatic reveal toward the end give way to a satisfying ending, sure to please readers. Ethical dilemmas, especially about violence and sacrifice, make this novel an interesting conversation starter. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Delta and her companions are barely surviving the brutal heat and dust storms of the wastes and then raiders attack, kidnapping her friends and family. Then she herself is captured and brought to the General, who is certain that the map branded onto Delta's back holds the key to finding the idyllic and flourishing Verdant. The problem, however, is that no one can actually read the map, and Delta flees, thinking the only way to get the General to release her compatriots is to find someone who can make sense of her scars. Her journey takes her to Powder Town, a stronghold against the General; to a lone woman in the middle of a desert inventing (and failing at) a wind wagon; and eventually to Eden, a caved-in bunker where she learns that her world is nothing that she thought it was. The post-apocalyptic setting is richly drawn, with harrowing escapes from dust storms across parched land and a general sense of blistering doom, but the story itself is heavy with info-dumps, particularly in the form of unprompted explanations of plot and/or setting from secondary characters that roll in and out of importance. Delta is a snarky firecracker of a girl, but she lacks the foresight to make any real plan, so the plot starts and sputters with her being pushed around more by circumstance than her own motivation. Thematically, the book works on a more effective scale, particularly when Delta discovers that her world's history is built on a series of miscommunications and lies, and her authentic struggle with faith and spirituality outweighs some of the book's other flaws. Readers will be left to ponder the sometimes warring forces of hope and truth-right after they find a cool drink of water. KQG

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A powerful teen grapples with love and truth in a post-apocalyptic landscape. Seventeen-year-old Delta lives in a literal wasteland, deadly and unforgiving. But though she is surrounded by the dust, heat, and desiccated misery of the wastes, she has symbols branded onto her back that seem to show the way to the Verdant, a lush oasis that may or may not exist. She hides these markings, knowing--as her Ma has repeatedly reminded her--that her life would be at risk if the wrong people knew about them. When Delta returns from an expedition to find her desolate home settlement of Dead River has been raided and everyone killed or abducted, she suspects the information burned into her skin might be what the General, who ordered the attack, is after. Although Delta sets out in hopes of rescuing her family, what she discovers on her quest upends everything she thinks she knows about the brutal world she inhabits. The rule of the wastes is to trust no one, but in order to survive, Delta must challenge this foundational belief. She is aided by people she meets along her journey, including a long-missing childhood friend and mysterious others. Each encounter pushes Delta toward a deeper understanding of love and trust and the spaces in between in this intense, gritty, and propulsive novel. Main characters follow a White default. Will keep readers turning the pages. (Dystopian. 13-18) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Bowman (The Girl and the Witch's Garden) sets fierce challenges for implied white protagonist Delta of Dead River, 17, as she struggles across the postapocalyptic desert Wastes, searching for her pack and for the mythical Verdant, a "green paradise" to which Delta has an unreadable map branded on her back. Venturing from her pack's settlement at Dead River with her pregnant elder sister, Indie, Delta seeks medical attention from a healer. When Indie doesn't survive childbirth, grieving Delta returns home with Baby, only to find that her entire pack has been killed or kidnapped. She suspects the kidnappers were looking for her because of the map scarred into her skin when she was five. With few supplies and Baby in tow, Delta heads through the hot, barren land, hoping to reach the sanctuary of Powder Town, until she, too, is captured by The General's minions--including Asher, a boy who was once part of her pack and who also bears a secret map brand. Bowman skillfully portrays the privation and grief that Delta bears, alongside her determination to overcome each obstacle. Absorbing world-building propels this fast-paced adventure, which has crossover appeal and series potential. Ages 12-up. (Apr.) Copyright 2021 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Star Wars in this apocalyptic Western. Delta and the rest of her Dead River pack are trapped between s aying at their waterless river and trying to move in the fatally hot summer months. Returning from a trip to a neighboring settlement, Delta discovers raiders have kidnapped much of her pack and murdered the rest. Determined to save her family and get her revenge, Delta has the ultimate bargaining chip: a map to the Verdant, a lush and lost oasis, is branded onto her back. Bowman's newest dystopia features complicated characters fighting a high stakes war against an unforgiving world--and each other. Dystopian fans will love the mix of familiar Old World tech the heroes stumble upon during their quest across the desert. Bowman's deft hand manages to make both elaborate backstory and lore passages something to look forward to, as Delta and her childhood friend Asher try to find the Verdant. The story's pacing never flags and YA readers suffering from series fatigue will enjoy this standalone's premise and world-building. While there is diversity mentioned in the large cast, the main characters' skin colors are not defined. VERDICT Bowman sets high expectations and meets them in this standalone worthy of all YA shelves. An impeccably crafted dystopian full of beloved tropes and a generous helping of plot twists.--Emmy Neal, Lake Forest Lib., IL Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Erin Bowman's enthralling post-apocalyptic thriller Dustborn is the story of Delta, a 17-year-old struggling to survive in the decaying wastelands of a desert planet.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2330286 Secret Sisters (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Avi Attending high school in Steamboat Springs is Ida Bidson's dream-it's her next step toward becoming a teacher and her best shot at escaping a life of milking cows. It's 1925, and from using telephones to attending movies, Ida is thrilled by her new experiences in Steamboat. She and her school friends even form a club, the Secret Sisters, to celebrate everything modern. 978-0-358-24808-8 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic	1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 This sequel to The Secret School (2001) continues the story of 14-year-old Ida, who leaves her home on a Colorado farm in 1925 to attend high school in Steamboat Springs. Ida boards with Trudy, a woman mourning for her fiancé, who fought in the Great War and died during the 1918 pandemic. Besides encouraging Ida to work hard and avoid annoying the principal, Trudy expresses concern that Ida is influenced too much by her "secret sisters" (a small group of new classmates), particularly lively, rebellious Lulu. When stressful situations arise, Ida handles them with support from those around her and with increasing confidence in herself and her values. While Avi focuses primarily on Ida's excitement, worries, and growth as her world expands, certain elements place the story firmly within its historical context. These include the increasing support of women's rights, the widespread adoption of innovations such as radio, electric lights, and telephones, and Lulu's use of flapper slang, which is translated within the text and the appended glossary. An enjoyable historical novel with a likable heroine. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Ida, 14, leaves her rural Colorado mountain ranch home for Steamboat Springs in this stand-alone companion to 2001's The Secret School. Ida Bidson attended a one-room schoolhouse, but in September 1925, she says goodbye to her family. She won't be home for two months. Ida dreams of being a teacher, so she must go 20 miles away to high school. Kind county school inspector Miss Sedgewick lets Ida board with her for free, and everything feels so modern: indoor plumbing, electricity, and a telephone! Ida's anxious to please but wrestles with what's considered proper and what other people think of her. When she makes some friends, they form the Secret Sisters club to try new things and help each other in school. But the girls end up on the bad side of the principal, who has firm attitudes about ladylike behavior, women voters, and the capability of rural students and threatens to expel them. Getting good grades on the upcoming midterm exams is critical. While maintaining a solid grounding in the 1920s, the novel tackles self-discovery amid challenging situations, including dealing with peer pressure, misogyny, classism, and general unfairness, in ways contemporary readers will find accessible and relatable. Historical facts are memorably and organically conveyed through Ida's innate curiosity. Characters read White; one of Ida's friends is from an immigrant mining community, and her name cues as having East European heritage. One for smart, outspoken kids looking for their places in the world. (author's note, glossary, bibliography) (Historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2328339 Clouds over California (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Karyn Parsons

Stevie's life is fluctuating rapidly. She's starting over in a brand new middle school. Quiet and observant, it's hard for her to make friends. Plus, her mind is too occupied. The tension in her home is building as her parents' arguments are becoming more frequent. To top it all off, Stevie's older cousin Naomi is coming to live with the family in an attempt to keep her from a "bad" crowd-The Black Panthers.

978-0-316-48407-7 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist In 1970s Santa Monica, Stevie's white father and Black mother have been fighting—particularly about her mother's desire to obtain a college degree—and her older cousin, Naomi, moves in after getting in trouble in her Boston hometown. Naomi takes a shine to her cousin and shakes things up, introducing Stevie to new music and encouraging the women in the house to embrace their natural hair texture and women's liberation. Stevie's dad bristles at some of the suggestions, preferring women to be homemakers. Stevie tries to keep everyone afloat and happy, but her mother is disappearing at night, Naomi is sneaking out to Black Panther meetings, and her dad is rarely present. How can Stevie keep all the secrets while staying true to herself as well as her loved ones? It's a compelling, complicated story that touches on huge topics—racist microaggressions, police profiling, feminism, divorce—but keeps it all focused through Stevie's wonderfully compassionate and curious lens. A fascinating and intimate snapshot of familial and personal transformation and the power in finding your voice.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Stevie's parents haven't stopped fighting since they moved into their new house in Santa Monica, which hasn't made this difficult year any easier for the only Black girl in a new elementary school class that is full of kids who assault her afro hair while chanting a catchphrase from a Charmin commercial. Stevie has already lost a best friend to some mean girls, and with Mom thinking about going back to school despite Dad's protests, Stevie feels desperately alone, at least until her older cousin Naomi from Boston comes west to stay for good. Having a big sis in her life takes some getting used to, but Stevie is quickly won over by the supportive, outspoken, bully-confronting, Black Panther-curious, Chaka Khan-listening, boy-kissing, tight bell bottom-wearing, perfectly '70s cool girl Naomi. Even as Stevie's prudish Black Mom and conservative white Dad feel challenged by Naomi's disruptive politics (which are mostly centered on the then-radical idea that women and Black people deserve personal agency and political power), Stevie's world is being expanded in ways that make some of the everyday adversity she faces manageable. She narrates her own story with a healthy mix of believable naivete and enviable emotional maturity as she turns twelve and starts junior high with an outlook readers have reason to be optimistic about, despite so much to remain enraged by in this pointed period piece. WJ COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In an affecting story set in Santa Monica, California, in the 1970s, a young biracial girl at the center of a calamitous family dynamic learns to navigate momentous change and find her own place in the world. Life is not as it should be for eleven-year-old Stevie. Her parents have moved, which means she has to adjust to a new school. She does not make friends easily and is targeted by bullies over her natural hairstyle. Her best friend since third grade abandons their friendship when she joins a clique of mean girls. At home, her parents are constantly fighting because her stay-at-home mother wants to pursue a career over the strenuous objections of her chauvinistic father's ideas of women's roles in society. And then an older cousin, Naomi, who is involved with the Black Panther Party and is described as "full of fight," arrives to live with the family. Parsons's keenly empathetic portrayal of Stevie and her tribulations is complemented by an equally compelling attention to detail in establishing the era. Particular attention to the social agenda of the Black Panther Party adds validity to the setting. Themes of empowerment, friendship, bullying, interracial marriage (Stevie's father is white; her mother is Black), trust, divorce, and social justice are interwoven in perfect balance to create a satisfying ending in this honest coming-of-age story. Pauletta Brown Bracy(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews anta Monica, California, navigates family and friendship tensions. Stevie, perceptive and introverted, has recently moved with her parents to a new house on the other side of town and is starting over at a new school where she struggles to make friends. Her former best friend has been hanging out with the mean girls and ignoring her. As if that wasn't enough change, her parents are fighting: Against her White father's wishes, her Black homemaker mother wants to get a degree and a job. Having her rebellious 15-year-old cousin from Boston move in shakes things up even more--with Naomi around, Stevie gets exposed to the ideals of the Black Panther Party, which helps boost her confidence. Meanwhile, Stevie's mother is acting strangely--receiving secret phone calls, running odd errands, and spending time with a mystery friend. Stevie is desperate to know what's going on--and, assuming the worst, to keep her father from finding out. Despite Stevie's attempts to hold her family and friendships together, she may have to come to terms with a new normal. The author weaves together multiple storylines exploring the changing social landscape of the times, such as the Black Power movement and shifting gender roles. However, a lack of depth and uneven pacing hinder the story. Nevertheless, the characterization is strong throughout as Stevie demonstrates growth, and the secondary characters are well defined. A relationship-driven novel that is strongest in its portrayal of one girl's journey. (Historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In 1970s Southern California, 11-year-old biracial Stevie is experiencing an overload of newness, including a new neighborhood, new school, and new classmates who tease her about her natural hair. Even once familiar staples in Stevie's life are shifting before her eyes: her best friend, Jennifer, is dodging her calls now that Stevie has moved across town, and Stevie's white father and Black homemaker mother are getting into arguments late at night about her mother's desire to go back to school. The sudden arrival of her 15-year-old cousin Naomi; whose parents shipped her from Boston to Santa Monica to prevent her from joining the Black Panthers; throws a curveball in Stevie's struggle to find her footing. As she grows closer to outspoken Naomi, Stevie begins unlocking her own untapped inner confidence. But even as Stevie's social life starts looking up, she worries that her mother's increasingly odd behavior; leaving home at strange hours and taking phone calls with someone named Clarence; could spell disaster for things at home. Told through a spirited first-person perspective, this earnest novel by Parsons (How High the Moon) seamlessly connects key historical moments during the Black Power movement, social politics, and evergreen tween conflicts surrounding agency and independence. Ages 8: 12. (July)

#2365691 World-Famous Nine (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ben Guterson

Zander Olinga's grandmother is the owner of the fabled Number Nine Plaza, the spectacular nineteen-story skyscraper. The Nine, as it's called, has everything imaginable, including a massive Ferris wheel on its rooftop, monorail tracks suspended from its ceiling, and twenty-five glass elevators. But there's something evil looming in the shadows, and strange accidents start befalling the guests. When Zander and his friend Natasha come across a series of inscriptions hidden throughout the walls of The Nine, they discover that the clues will lead them to a magical object which protects the store's very existence. With the future of The Nine on the line, the pair are determined to recover the mysterious object before the luxury plaza and its many guests are destroyed.

978-0-316-48444-2 Christy Ottaviano Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Book Page Number Nine Plaza, most often called "The Nine," is a uniquely dazzling place: "the largest, most famous, and most extraordinary department store in the entire world." And Zander Olinga is lucky enough to be the grandson of the woman who owns it, Zina Winebee, who is going to look after him for several weeks while his parents are away on a research trip. But as 11-year-old Zander soon learns in Ben Guterson's imaginative and entertaining mystery-adventure novel

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Coded clues put two young sleuths on the trail of a magic mandala hidden somewhere in a huge, bustling department store. Hardly has meek young Zander Olinga arrived for a visit with Zina Winebee, his grandmother and owner-manager of the Number Nine Plaza, than he learns of a threat to the continued existence of the renowned emporium. The danger is linked to Darkbloom, a rumored evil spirit set on reversing the good-fortune charm left by Nepali monks at the store's founding. The stone tablet bearing the magical mandala vanished 90 years ago, and finding its hiding place becomes a race pitting Zander and intrepid new ally Natasha Novikov against unknown saboteurs whose minds have been taken over by Darkbloom. The keys to the tablet's location are a series of ingenious word and number clues left by Zander's great-granduncle Vladimir, and Guterson provides enough hints along the way for savvy readers to decode them. What he doesn't do is give either his leads or the many-faceted store (which, over the course of the story, is explored from the Ferris wheel on its roof to the bakery in the cellar) any more depth or distinctive traits than he gives Nepali religious practice. Darkbloom remains a shadowy bugaboo, its actual nature and motivations unexplained and its fate left anticlimactically unresolved. Zander's father is from Cameroon, and his mother reads white; names cue some diversity in the supporting cast. Final art not seen. (This review has been updated for factual accuracy.) A whodunit that doesn't live up to its intriguing premise. (Mystery. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Deep in the heart of the Russian city of Novatrosk lies Number Nine Plaza, a shopping destination brimming with a plethora of things to see and do. For the first time in years, 11-year-old Zander Olinga; who lives in Pittsburgh and whose father is from Cameroon; travels to Russia to spend the summer with his grandmother, the current owner of the Nine. He quickly befriends white-cued Natasha Novikov, also 11, who works for his grandmother, and the pair bonds immediately over their shared love of sports and mutual appreciation for each other's curious differences (Zander is afraid of heights and Natasha can juggle marbles). All is not perfect in the magical building, however; strange occurrences, old legends, and the arrival of a possibly demonic entity named Darkbloom put the Nine's reputation; and very existence; at risk. Juxtaposing Zander's sophisticated voice with Natasha's effervescent; and occasionally reckless; ways, Guterson (Winterhouse) dives headlong into adventure, employing flights of fancy and imagination and humorous situations to instantly charm readers. A large, multiethnic cast of secondary adult characters balances the tweens' youthful exuberance with caring, patient instruction, while Kister (Baby Unicorns) brings the grandiose setting to life, imbuing it with a wonder reminiscent of department stores of yesteryear. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Rena Rossner, Deborah Harris Literary. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Zander Olinga is off to spend the next five weeks of summer at his grandmother's world-famous department store, The Number Nine Plaza, while his parents are on a research trip in Kamchatka, Russia. Within hours of Zander's arrival, The Nine is abuzz with news about strange and dangerous things happening. The electricity is on the fritz, and an employee is attacked. Zander's grandmother, Zina, tells him the story about a magical mandala that was gifted to the first Winebee matriarch by Nepali monks. However, the mandala was stolen 90 years ago and hidden in The Nine. Zina suspects the mandala is being hunted by Darkbloom, an evil spirit who wishes harm on The Nine. Zander, with the help of a new friend, Natasha Novikov, goes on a search for the mandala using clues left by his great-granduncle, Vladimir. The Nine is a fantastical place full of shops and activities that will surely tickle readers' imaginations. However, Zander's exploration of the plaza often competes with the mystery of the missing mandala. VERDICT A promising novel with attention-grabbing elements and a high-stakes hunt for a magical object, that unfortunately gets lost in heavily detailed descriptions, a large cast of side characters, and an inconsistent time line.—Maria Martin Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Eleven-year-old Zander Olinga partners with a new friend to protect his family's legendary, theme park-like department store, the Number Nine Plaza, in a wholesome and elaborate middle-grade mystery with fantastical themes.

#2246420 Paradise on Fire (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jewell Parker Rhodes

Addy is haunted by the tragic fire that killed her parents, leaving her to be raised by her grandmother. Now, years later, Addy's grandmother has enrolled her in a summer wilderness program. There, Addy joins five other Black city kids—each with their own troubles—to spend a summer out west.

978-0-316-49383-3 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.3 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist that took the lives of her parents, Addy is obsessed with creating escape maps and mazes. To help Addy continue to heal, her Grandma Bibi enrolls her at Wilderness Adventures, a summer camp in California where city kids can experience camping, hiking, and rock climbing. Addy is reluctant initially but quickly makes friends with campers Jay and Nessa (all three are Black). Recognizing a kindred spirit, the camp owner takes Addy under his wing and helps nurture her budding love of wilderness while they hike trails every morning before sunrise. When a massive forest fire engulfs Eagle's Ridge during the group's final camping trip, Addy must confront her past and rely on her friends to survive. People of color have not historically featured in wilderness stories, which makes this title refreshing, especially in light of national conversations around racial equity in outdoor spaces. A strong read-alike for Gary Paulsen fans or older kids who have graduated from the I Survived series but are still seeking a thrilling survival story. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books After her parents' death in an apartment fire, Adaugo, known as Addy, is hypervigilant about mapping her surroundings and identifying escape routes (ÒNo matter what: Escape. SurviveÓ). Now she's thousands of miles away from her Bronx home in a summer program called Wilderness Adventures, which allows Addy's group of urban Black kids to experience the California wild. Addy takes to the wilderness like a duck to water, reveling in exploring her surroundings and cartographically comprehending the untamed country around her. When a group camping trip turns into a frenzied flight from a wildfire, will Addy's skills save her and her new friends? Rhodes has a knack for disaster stories with real-life implications, and Addy is an original character whose focus on control is plausible and plausibly advantageous in this very different milieu. The kids are a reasonably individuated bunch, and it's a nice touch that Addy's abilities are respected by most of the group when the time comes. The escape itself is harrowing, and the book doesn't pull any punches about the price and fury of wildfires. Addy's (and the author's) clear love of the natural world shines throughout, balancing the pounding adventure with respect and appreciation. Readers may not want to race a wildfire, but they'll definitely long to hit the hills with Addy. Rhodes appends a detailed note about wildfires, climate change, and systemic racism's effects on minority access to nature. DS COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Having lost both parents to an apartment fire when she was little, Addy steers clear of fire as much as possible, and spends much of her time making maps of her Bronx neighborhood that note all the ways to "no matter what: Escape. Survive." When her grandmother signs her up for a wilderness adventure program in California for "Black city kids," Addy desperately wishes she could escape that, too -- a summer in the forests of California with five strangers doesn't sound particularly interesting or safe. She is almost immediately proven wrong: her interactions with wilderness camp owner Leo establish Addy as "a kid who didn't know they belonged in the wild." Under Leo's tutelage, Addy adapts to the forest, learns about climate change's impact on the environment, and begins to flourish in her mapmaking skills. While the other kids in her group also become acclimated to the wilderness, Addy is unique in her understanding of the world around her -- and when a forest fire threatens their very lives, it is that understanding that offers a chance at survival. Although the quick pacing doesn't lend itself as well to the full development of secondary characters, the novel's lyrical tone and first-person narration bring home Addy's love of nature as well as her urgency to protect it. Rhodes's contribution brings welcome diversity to the wilderness adventure genre; an afterword provides additional information on climate change, forest fires, and minorities' access to wilderness/national parks. Eboni Njoku(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Fire can change everything. Adaugo, whose name means "daughter of an eagle," leaves Bibi, her Nigerian grandmother and surrogate mother, to travel from New York to California with Wilderness Adventures for a three-week outdoor experience. Leo, the White owner of Wilderness Adventures, and two White college-age counselors, seek to teach Addy and five other urban Black kids enough outdoor skills to conclude their stay with a several-night backpacking trip. Tormented by nightmares of the fire that killed her parents, Addy obsesses over maps, mazes, and escape routes. Stylistically varied and impressively detailed, her sketches throughout the book highlight her talent and observational skills. She learns topographical mapping to understand the wooded landscape, and she quickly falls in love with nature. Leaving Leo, the only skilled woodsman, at base camp, the group encounters a wildfire the first night of their culminating trip, and the counselors ignore Addy's informed advice--based on Leo's mentorship and her focus on cultivating her navigation skills--to their peril. Inspired by California's 2018 Camp Fire, this novel teaches about nature and climate change but centers Whiteness since Leo imparts most of the wisdom. He also relies on the leadership of the counselors, neither of whom demonstrates the passion or cultural competence to work effectively with Addy and her peers. Those who know the woods may sense this habitat is less familiar to Rhodes than the settings of her previous books. A heart-pounding read that imparts both a healthy fear and a deep appreciation of nature's power. (afterword) (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Inspired by real events, Parker Rhodes (Black Brother, Black Brother) makes her entree into climate fiction with the story of narrator Adaugo (Addy), a Black 15-year-old from the Bronx. Living with an overwhelming fear of fire after losing her parents to one at the age of four, Addy copes by constantly drawing maps and plotting escape routes in case of emergency. When Addy's Nigerian Grandma Bibi signs her up for Wilderness Adventures in California, Addy expects to be the odd one out; instead, though, she makes friends and falls in love with nature. But a wildfire soon endangers the woods and the people she has come to cherish, and Addy must count on her maps and newfound survival skills to save everyone she can. Addy's character-driven narrative offers a broad picture of her motivations; including a post-traumatic mindset that's focused on survival; yet leaves little room for the explicit development of relationships on which the story's emotional heft eventually relies. If the negative impact of human activity on the environment sometimes dominates the story, Parker Rhodes believably explores one Black city girl's discovery of the wilderness around her. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Michael Bourret, Dystel, Goderich & Bourret. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8—Plagued by memories of the fire that killed her parents years ago, Addy always maps her city surroundings. But a chance to experience a wilderness camp leads Addy away from her comfort zone, along with five other kids, and across the country to Paradise Ranch. Out in the California forest, Addy has the opportunity to learn essential wilderness skills. However, her worst nightmare occurs when a deadly forest fire leaves Addy and her friends fighting for their lives in the woods. Now it's up to Addy to take all that she's learned at camp to survive. Rhodes delivers another gripping story about loss, resilience, and healing. Addy's anxiety over her parents' deaths is handled beautifully through her transition from mapper of escape routes to proper wilderness cartographer. Addy's restorative journey is realistically bumpy as she fights to accept that she can't live her life waiting for the worst to happen; rather, she can act wisely, embracing hope. While the environmental message may seem heavy-handed at first, it plays its part well by the end, aiding the final note that humans impact the Earth greatly and need to take this responsibility seriously. Addy and the five other city kids are Black. Camp owner Leo and the two counselors are cued white. An afterword provides the historical inspiration for the story. VERDICT Perfect for reluctant readers and fans of Dusti Bowling's The Canyon's Edge, this is a tale of survival and hope that doesn't disappoint.—Emily Walker, Lisle Lib. Dist., IL

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness In this gripping, moving and life-affirming middle-grade adventure, survival requires not only smarts but also compassion for others, the planet and oneself. Jewell Parker Rhodes, award-winning author of Ghost Boys, introduces Addy, a Nigerian American teen girl participating in a summer program for Black city kids to develop wilderness skills. "Escape. Survive."--that's Addy's mantra. Her parents died in a fire when she was four, but she lived. Now, on her flight to Paradise Ranch in California, she maps the exits, preparing for an emergency. At the ranch, she avoids the fireplace, trying not to summon unwanted flashbacks. She misses the Bronx and Grandma Bibi, who left Nigeria to raise Addy and who encouraged this trip: "To know yourself, you need to journey, Adaugo." As events lead to a climactic forest fire, Addy endeavors to follow Bibi's words. Paradise on Fire is a brilliant melding of captivating storytelling and crucial teaching moments; Rhodes also exemplifies how friends can bring out one's latent strengths. Through the kids' candid dialogue and Addy's expressive narration, Rhodes weaves in issues of race and class. Aware of the opportunities they've lacked as Black city kids, Kelvin jokingly calls s'mores "white people's food" and notes the weirdness of sleeping outside. DeShon, cognizant of how "white people's charity" funded the trip, feels like someone's "summer project." Immersive prose adds urgency to Rhodes's message that 97% of wildfires are caused by humans, a topic cited in the afterword as the book's inspiration, along with the 2018 Camp Fire. Inspiring both action and hope, Paradise on Fire heralds the importance of believing in one's own power to make a difference. COPYRIGHT(2021) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2328988 Make a Move, Sunny Park! (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jessica Kim

This is the story of Sunny Park, a seventh-grade student at Ranchito Mesa Middle who loves the K-pop band Supreme Beat, hanging out with her cool grandma, dancing when no one is watching, snacking on shrimp chips, and being there for Bailey, her best friend since third grade. When Bailey decides that she and Sunny should audition for the school dance team in a ploy to parent-trap Bailey's divorced mom and dad, Sunny agrees even though the thought of performing in public makes her pits sweat. In a twist of fate, Sunny makes the team and Bailey doesn't, and when Sunny reluctantly joins, it's the start of a painful and drawn-out parting of ways for the two girls.

978-0-525-55500-1 Kokila ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Park is feeling pressure from many directions. Her mother urges her to get over her social anxiety. Sunny's longtime best friend, Baily, who is having trouble adjusting to her parents' divorce, demands Sunny's companionship and support while disparaging her friend's enthusiasm for Supreme Beat, a K-pop band. Baily presses Sunny to try out for the school dance team. Sunny is chosen, but Baily is not. After befriending two fellow dancers who love Supreme Beat, Sunny honors a commitment to them instead of attending her friend's mother's wedding. Baily retaliates online with a video aimed at destroying Sunny's reputation. Taking responsibility for her actions, Sunny brings this hurtful episode to a close and moves forward. Kim, a former teacher and the author of Stand Up, Yumi Chung! (2020), is equally adept in portraying the members of Sunny's three-generation Korean American household and realistically recreating the shifting dynamics of middle-school friendships. Sunny's first-person narrative becomes increasingly involving as characters and events create rising tension. The appealing jacket art will help this heartening story find its audience. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Korean American Sunny Park wants to support her best friend, Bailey, whose parents are getting divorced (she also wants to avoid Bailey's resentment). Although Sunny experiences social anxiety, she agrees to endure the judgment of fellow seventh graders by auditioning for the middle-school dance team with Bailey. When Sunny makes the team and Bailey doesn't, their friendship becomes strained. Sunny bonds with teammates who share her love of the same K-pop group, an interest that Bailey has derided as immature. Finding solace in her supportive family, Sunny is especially close to her halmoni, who moved in after Sunny's grandfather passed away. Sunny shares the joy of K-pop while her grandmother shares advice and stories of her own childhood as she prepares (vividly described) Korean dishes. Despite the challenges of navigating social interactions, making mistakes, and reflecting on relationships, Sunny finds personal growth and leadership through the dance team. Kim offers humor, tween drama, and a satisfying conclusion in this well-paced story of self-discovery. Kristine Techavanich(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When Sunny joins the school dance team, she discovers some important things about friendship—and about herself. Sunny Park, a Korean American seventh grader, has been best friends with Bailey Stern, a White girl, since third grade. Sunny prides herself on being a good friend: She is always there for Bailey, supporting her through her parents' divorce and being available at a moment's notice. She doesn't even let Bailey's disparaging remarks about her Korean identity or her love of K-pop bother her. It's always been just the two of them, doing everything together, like taking ballet—and then both quitting right after Sunny landed the lead in The Nutcracker. Now, Bailey wants to try out for Ranchito Mesa Middle School's dance team, and Sunny, who suffers from social anxiety disorder, agrees to do it too. But when she makes the team and Bailey doesn't, Sunny begins the journey of discovering her own resilience, making new friends, and realizing what really makes for strong relationships. Kim does a stellar job of portraying different types of friendships, illustrating how healthy and unhealthy ones can differ and creating an authentic road map for tweens who are navigating the social complexities of middle school. At the same time, she infuses Sunny's growth as a friend, an artist, and a leader with fun and joy—especially during the dance scenes. Make a move on this book—its heart will cheer your soul. (Fiction. 8-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Korean American seventh grader Sunny Park loves to dance, especially to music from her favorite K-pop group, Supreme Beat. Her white best friend Bailey thinks Supreme Beat is immature, which doesn't surprise Sunny; Bailey often makes snap judgments and will rarely change her mind once it's made up. Despite Sunny's stage fright, she agrees to audition for the school dance team with Bailey, but things don't go as planned when only Sunny makes the cut. Sunny's decision to carry on dancing with the team alienates Bailey further, as do Sunny's budding friendships with fellow teammates and Supreme Beats fans Jady, who is Filipino, and Bea, who reads as Greek. Though Sunny wants to fix her relationship with Bailey, she also enjoys hanging out with her new friends, prompting conflicting feelings about how to spend her time. But communication lessons from her dance partners and "no-filter" Halmoni help Sunny shore up the confidence to advocate for herself in relationships. While some plot points don't fully coalesce, sensitive portrayals of anxiety define this joyful novel. With unmitigated and endearing honesty, Kim (Stand Up, Yumi Chung!) proffers myriad interpretations of friendship and what it means to be a true friend. Ages 9: 12. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8--A relatable story for tweens that illustrates the struggle of ending a toxic friendship and the triumph of being unapologetically yourself. Sunny Park is a Korean American seventh grader who has learned to make herself small. While Sunny loves K-pop and dancing, her best friend Bailey does not, and she shames Sunny for her "immature" hobbies. Sunny is afraid to face Bailey's anger if she goes against her wishes or fails to be completely available to meet Bailey's needs. After joining the school's dance team and making new friends who are part of the same K-pop fandom, Sunny begins to work through her social anxiety and realizes how much Bailey has been holding her back. This slice-of-life, character-driven story is a quick read, mostly conveyed through dialogue. Sunny is an empathetic and complex character who grows from her mistakes. VERDICT A potential mirror for tweens who are struggling with their sense of self-worth and navigating the complexities of friendship. Recommended for middle school collections.--Maria Bohan Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2327802 Flora la Fresca and the Art of Friendship (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Veronica Chambers

Given the choice of a friend who's honest, loyal, or the Most Fun Ever, larger-than-life Flora Violeta LeFevre and her steadfast sidekick Clara Bayano would obviously pick option three. So when the sad news breaks that Clara's moving, the girls roll up their sleeves and get to business: finding Flora an exciting new BFF to continue the adventures in Clara's stead.

978-0-525-55629-9 Dial Books ©2023 5 x 7 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 800

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-7 Ten-year-old Flora and Clara are inseparable BFFs. They look forward to all the exciting things they'll experience together once they're teenagers, but their plans are foiled when they find out that Clara is moving across the country after Christmas. To make things worse, Flora's sister, Maylin, has been especially irritating lately as the day of her quinceañera approaches. To prepare for the move, Flora and Clara come up with a BFF-ometer to help each other find new friends with the same interests. Once Clara has moved to California, it doesn't take long for her to make a new friend, but Flora, on the other hand, is left feeling heartbroken and alone. However, with the arrival of a new student, Zaidee, Flora will find that great friendships can form unexpectedly. Chambers has captured the many real and raw feelings that a child may experience when a friend is moving. Paired with the splendid illustrations by Rim that enhance the story, this is a delightful look into the special connections one can have with friends and family. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When fifth grade best friends Clara and Flora aren't in Saturday Spanish school, they're typically getting into all sorts of mischief, most recently scheming ways to annoy Flora's older sister, Maylin, who has become a quinceañera while planning her upcoming quinceañera. It's all well and good until Clara's mother gets a new job in California, which means that Clara and her family will be moving away from their home in Rhode Island in five weeks, ruining Christmas and, according to the girls, their lives forever. Flora must now navigate her school without her partner in crime while Clara has to figure out how to make friends in a new California school. The girls' friendship is full of inside jokes and heartwarming anecdotes, and both pals are realistic modern tweens, writing code in Scratch, practicing TikTok dances, and skateboarding. The mix of Spanish and English dialogue between the friends shows their growing Spanish language skills, and their relationships with their Latinx mothers deftly convey the parent/child dynamic of second-generation kids trying to honor their heritage. Having a close friend move away in childhood is a common theme in middle grade and YA lit, and Chambers' compassionate look at Clara and Flora's relationship may make the journey more bearable for those facing a similar scenario. JU COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Ten-year-old Flora struggles after her best friend moves away. Flora LeFevre would rate her best friend, Clara Londra, full marks on the BFF-ometer the girls programmed in Scratch. Clara makes Saturday Spanish school bearable, and she's down for any adventure. They both have parents from far away--Flora's are from Panama, and Clara's are from Argentina. So, when Clara's mother announces that they are leaving Rhode Island to move to California, Flora feels lost even though the girls resolve to remain best friends no matter what. Maylin, Flora's older sister, is too obsessed with planning her quinceañera to pay attention to her. Worse, Clara quickly finds a new friend in California. Flora thinks no one can hold a candle to Clara until a new student arrives in class: Hailing from Paris, Lebanese Zaidee Khal seems too sophisticated for fifth grade. As Flora slowly warms up to Zaidee, they begin to form a new friendship. But can Flora have two besties? Chambers places universal friendship trials within the specific joy and beauty of an Afro-Panamanian family, capturing the deep, intense emotions of childhood bonds. Rim's delightful illustrations punctuate the text and capture the mood of the characters' journeys. The dialogue is peppered with Spanish in the natural cadence of bilingual families, with each member possessing varying degrees of proficiency. Non-Spanish-speaking readers won't miss a beat and may even pick up a phrase or two. Funny, heartwarming, and sweet. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Afro-Panamanian American 10-year-old Flora Violeta LeFevre and her Argentinian American BFF Clara Ocampo Londra have experienced everything together, including agonizing Saturday Spanish lessons and daring adventures at the local skate park. So Flora is devastated when Clara has to move from their Rhode Island hometown to California because of Clara's mother's new job. As the besties lament Clara's impending move, they hang out as much as they can and create, using coding tool Scratch, a BFF-ometer test to help them make new friends. While Clara seems to immediately find a new friend group, Flora can't imagine anyone replacing Clara. It's even difficult to connect with her sister Maylin, who's too preoccupied with planning her quinceañera to offer Flora comfort. But when Lebanese new student Zaidee Khal arrives from Paris, Flora begins to believe that maybe she won't feel lonely forever. Pencil-like b&w sketches from Rim (Take a Chance) pepper vivacious prose by Chamber (Finish the Fight!), punctuating Flora's moments of elation and sorrow as she works to navigate her shifting relationships. Realistic familial dynamics and a fair amount of tween antics from Flora and company add verve to this warm friendship story. Ages 8: 12. (July)

#2144777 Nessie Quest (Library Binding (Trade))

written by Melissa Savage

Ada Ru is anything but happy. She doesn't like their new home, she hates haggis, and she certainly doesn't like the idea that she will be away from her best friend all summer. To top it all off, there is said to be a monster in the lake near their house!

978-0-525-64568-9 Crown Children's Books ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 690

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—If Ada Ru Fitzhugh has to spend the summer away from her best friend, she'd rather be at the Magic Kingdom, not in a tiny Scottish town on Loch Ness, where her father teaches. Ada Ru doesn't like change. She's also worried about losing her best friend, and she fears the ghosts that she believes haunt the ancient abbey where she and her parents are staying, as well as bodies of water. She is intrigued by Dax, an American boy who sits on the stairs of the abbey strumming a guitar. Then she meets Hamish Bean Tibby, who runs the Nessie Quest boat tours with his Gran, who was a famous Nessie hunter. Ada Ru doesn't believe in the Loch Ness Monster. Her patient parents challenge her to investigate, so she sets about interviewing the townsfolk for the truth behind the legend. Eventually, though, she must gather her courage and get on a boat. This adventure charms in every way. The characters are endearingly eccentric. Townsfolk speak in a Scottish dialect that is easily understood and often hilarious, while the atmospheric Loch Ness setting sets a perfect stage. Readers will root for these three oddballs as they form an unlikely friendship and embark on the adventure of a lifetime. Fans of the author's Lemons will delight in a certain cameo appearance. VERDICT Fans of warm, quirky comedies will love this epic adventure and friendship story.—Brenda Kahn, Tenakill Middle School, Closter, NJ

#2368643 Chronically Dolores (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Maya Van Wagenen

Nothing has been the same for fourteen-year-old Dolores Mendoza since everything started changing at the end of middle school. Newly diagnosed with interstitial cystitis, Dolores had a humiliating accident in class that earned her the nickname "whiz kid." Even worse, she's losing her lifelong BFF, Shae, who's suddenly ignoring Dolores to hang out with the cool girls. Dolores is alone, and confused. What did she do wrong?

978-0-525-42682-0 Dutton ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 640

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 7-10 Starred Review Dolores Mendoza's life is in the toilet after she embarrasses herself in front of the entire eighth grade. Between her chronic illness (interstitial cystitis) and repeated head injuries, her best friend Shae ghosting her, and family drama, she feels really out of place. To get her out of the house, her mom signs her up for a workshop on communication and making friends, where the only other girl there about her age is awkward, direct, and puts the pieces of Dolores' life together, causing her further embarrassment. But that girl, Terpsichore Berkenbosch-Jones, is doing whatever she can to convince her overprotective mom to let her go to the public high school because being homeschooled is not how she's going to become a Tony-winning costume designer for a big Broadway show. Together, the two hatch a plot for Dolores to get her friend back and convince Terpsichore's mother that being autistic doesn't mean she can't have dreams and a life. Hitting themes of growing apart from old friends, confronting exaggerated ideas of embarrassment and rejection, learning to find accommodations and self-advocate, and understanding that people aren't always what they seem, Van Wagenen's (Popular, 2014) fiction debut is a standout with both wide appeal and important, specific representation bolstered by the author's own life. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews During the summer before high school, a nominally Catholic teen finds that she can relate to martyred saints. Dolores Mendoza's family is struggling financially, and her parents' marriage is imploding. A year ago, she was diagnosed with interstitial cystitis after a bladder accident made her a pariah. Then Mexican American Dolores meets Terpsichore Berkenbosch-Jones, who is autistic and reads white. Terpsichore wants to fake a friendship to prove to her helicopter mom that she's capable of attending public school and can stop home schooling. The answer to their problems seems clear: Dolores will win back her former best friend, and Terpsichore will win her independence. What could go wrong? Dolores' chronic illness frequently causes trouble for herself, and a vein of wry humor and dramatics runs through her everyday interactions. Her creative first-person narration includes transcripts from her confessional conversations with a priest, mock telenovela scripts (complete with scene directions), and her reviews of local bathrooms. Dolores is in an ongoing standoff with her illness and comes to no pat resolutions about her body, instead approaching her illness in a way that feels true to her character and to being 14. Self-actualized and incisive Terpsichore's journey and the girls' increasingly non-fake friendship feel earned, and the affectionately combative dynamics between the Mendoza family, in particular between Dolores and her Tia Vera and older brother Mateo, are strong. An insightful, funny, and realistic coming-of-age story. (author's note) (Fiction. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Van Wagenen (Popular) draws on her experiences managing interstitial cystitis—a chronic bladder condition, as addressed in an author's note—in her striking fiction debut. Fourteen-year-old Dolores Mendoza, who's constantly navigating chronic pain due to her IC, is embarrassed when her condition results in a bladder-related incident at school. Suddenly ignored by her best friend and dealing with increasing tension at home surrounding her father's financial irresponsibility, Dolores feels isolated. Hoping to escape reality, she imagines her life as a telenovela; commiserates with her gay older brother Matteo, who's facing romantic hurdles; and periodically confides in a witty local priest despite her mother's disapproval of religion. Then Dolores meets wise and astute autistic teen Terpsichore Berkenbosch-Jones, who rails against her own mother's overprotective nature. Buoyant banter and Dolores's interstitial journal entries in which she rates bathroom environments add levity to tense moments depicting Dolores's illness and her and Terpsichore's yearning for independence. Compassionate prose conveys the protagonists' experiences with care and thoughtful, complex characterizations approachably highlight life's ambiguity. Characters are racially diverse. Ages 12-up. Agent: Daniel Lazar, Writers House. (Mar.) Copyright 2023 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

#2348841 Remember Us (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jacqueline Woodson

It seems like Sage's whole world is on fire the summer before she starts seventh grade. As house after house burns down, her Bushwick neighborhood gets referred to as "The Matchbox" in the local newspaper. And while Sage prefers to spend her time shooting hoops with the guys, she's also still trying to figure out her place inside the circle of girls she's known since childhood. A group that each day, feels further and further away from her. But it's also the summer of Freddy, a new kid who truly gets Sage.

978-0-399-54546-7 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 192 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 680

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Book Page ted but powerful punch...Sage's deep sense of nostalgia intertwines with a palpable fear of those fires, which act as a metaphor for Sage's recognition that her body and her world are changing...Remember Us has the feel of a new classic, ageless in its universal themes while wonderfully rendering a specific time and place. The pure magic of this novel is that Woodson somehow makes readers feel as though they are experiencing these moments of growing up along with Sage. Woodson flawlessly intersperses explosive moments—and games of basketball—among quiet, reflective scenes while responding to Sage's weighty fears with reassurance about the permanence of loving memories."

Reviews by: Booklist Sage is spending the summer before seventh grade doing her favorite thing in the world: playing basketball at the park in her beloved Bushwick neighborhood. She's the only girl on the court, but she knows she's as good as any guy in the close-knit bunch and dreams of playing professionally. A new kid, Freddy, quickly falls in with the sports set and becomes inseparable from Sage in particular. Though it may all sound idyllic, it's a supremely strange time in their corner of 1970s Brooklyn—homes are regularly burning to the ground in "The Matchbox," and Sage's mother is keen to relocate them to a safer part of town. A tragic death combined with a threatening confrontation on the basketball court sees the previously confident Sage question her place in every aspect of her world, and it takes all of her courage and the community strength to find her way again. The deeply moving novel from National Book Award winner Woodson is both elegant and accessible, and the novel-in-verse approach works wonderfully here, with occasional chapters consisting of only a few dramatic lines. Bushwick and its inhabitants are fully fleshed out with incredible detail and immense tenderness, and Sage immediately feels like a dear friend. A poignant portrayal of a historic neighborhood and an outstanding ode to the grief and gift of growing older. HIGH-DEMAND BACKSTORY: Woodson is one of the most esteemed figures in children's publishing, and her historical fiction especially can't be missed. — Emily Graham

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Homes are catching fire in the summer heat of Bushwick, and twelve-year-old Sage is seeking to preserve her love of basketball and her friendships as she sees more of her Brooklyn community go up in flames. Basketball isn't just a game for Sage but a steady anchor, running through her friendship with Freddy, her memories of her dead father, her love for her neighborhood. But her passion and skills falter after a terrifying encounter with a menacing teenage boy who corners Sage alone, demanding to know what kind of girl she thinks she is playing ball like that. Meanwhile, the fires continue to rage and any sense of safety simply turns to ash. Sports references (Sage isn't waiting for some "ladies team" to be invented so she can play ball) and details like Sage's mother using a typewriter place the novel in its historical moment, but the emotions and challenges feel ever current. Written with the reflective voice of a slightly older Sage, the slice-of-life narrative steers readers through weighty emotions and contemplations on friendship, grounding the connections between notions of identity, family, and home with tactile imagery. The vividness of Sage's world gives an urgency to the story, calling up the immediacy of youth, while the reflective tone softens some of the more painful memories, assuring to children that these things will pass, and that fires will not burn forever. ART

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Sage Durham, a basketball-obsessed Black twelve-year-old, is looking forward to a summer of pick-up games with the boys (she's always the only girl on the court) in her close-knit 1970s Brooklyn neighborhood. Instead, it proves to be a season of screaming sirens and burned-out buildings. The newspapers dub Bushwick "The Matchbox," and a number of the Durhams' neighbors become victims of fire. Sage's mom, the widow of a firefighter, is saving every possible penny to put toward a brick house and a safer future for herself and her daughter. But the idea of leaving the home where her dad grew up and all the people she has ever known is hard for Sage. A recent cruel comment ("What kind of girl are you?") has her questioning where she fits in. This lyrical first-person upper-middle-grade novel taps into a wide array of emotional truths and preteen sensibilities. Passages on loss and memory feature palpable sadness, but there is also a tender exploration of the enduring power of friendship and love, the discovery of inner strength and resilience, and the need to balance an appreciation for what "once was" and what may be. Woodson again delivers an appealing protagonist whose voice will resonate with readers in a nuanced coming-of-age story worth remembering. Luann Toth(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An African American tween's world is turned upside down by mysterious fires in her neighborhood and by self-doubt as she comes of age. Sage's mother wants them to move to a safer area, but Sage is reluctant to leave their community, where her father, a fireman killed in the line of duty, grew up. Her mother was always one of the first to help families when fires struck, and Sage finds herself drawn to the little kids who play in the residue left behind. Rough-and-tumble, basketball-loving Sage grapples with feeling different from the makeup-wearing girls who used to be her friends. The words of a menacing teen who harasses her on the basketball court haunt her ("What kind of girl are you?" "I should punch you in the face just to show you you ain't a dude..."), and her hurt turns to an anger that nearly has a catastrophic outcome. After one of the neighborhood children is killed in yet another fire, Sage finds herself reflecting on her own loss. Drawing on her own experiences growing up in Brooklyn's Bushwick neighborhood during the '70s and '80s, Woodson has crafted a beautifully lyrical narrative of change, healing, and growth. Her ability to evoke time and place is masterful; every word feels perfectly chosen. Sage is an irresistible character with a rich interior life, and her relationships with her mother and her friend Freddy are exceptionally well drawn. An exquisitely wrought story of self and community. (author's note) (Fiction. 10-13)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Black 11-year-old Sage, a Bushwick native, questions the meaning of memory and struggles with self-image as houses begin mysteriously burning down throughout her neighborhood, newly dubbed "The Matchbox." After Sage's firefighter father dies in the line of duty, her mother saves money in the hope of one day moving them out of town. Despite the growing worry that permeates her community, Sage is reluctant to leave, and spends her time playing basketball with local boys. But some of the boys make fun of her for participating in the sport ("You shoot that ball like you think you a dude or something," one taunts), prompting Sage to wrestle with gender norms and feelings of self-doubt. When another fire results in further tragedy, Sage is forced to reckon with her community, her future, and the power of legacy. Woodson (Before the Ever After) draws on her experiences growing up in Bushwick in the 1970s and '80s to craft a nostalgic-feeling ode to the unexpected. Short chapters offer swift glimpses into momentous happenings in Sage's life, while organic dialogue and mesmerizing prose lay bare a narrative that encourages learning to move with the ebbs and flows of life. Ages 10: up. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Another remarkable ode to Brooklyn and memory from the incomparable National Book Award winner. Twelve-year-old Sage no longer feels comfortable with the girls from her Bushwick neighborhood because she'd rather be playing basketball than worrying about her appearance. The sport is what she loves most in the world and is what unites her and the new boy Freddy. The two exchange player stats and discuss the Knicks, finding a kindred spirit in the other as families are left displaced because of the fires that are mysteriously razing their buildings. Sage's mom warns that they'll be moving out soon, to where "sirens didn't scream deep into the night." That year Sage also grapples with her grief over her father's death and a scary and sexist encounter in the park that has her questioning her identity and giving up basketball altogether. Set during the 1970s, this nostalgia-tinged novel takes place when Bushwick was known as "The Matchbox" because of the fires that plagued its streets. The chapters are vignette-like, sometimes featuring only a few sentences. The often wistful text is lyrical, but the nostalgia never overwhelms the narrative. Woodson's economy of language expertly presents the microcosm of Sage's community of friends and neighborhood kids and the macrocosm of the external world that threatens to destroy it. Sage's journey to finding herself while trying to navigate these two worlds will resonate with readers young and old. VERDICT The power of community and friendship permeates every word in this middle grade novel for all readers. A truly masterly work.--Shelley M. Diaz Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness National Book Award-winner Jacqueline Woodson (Brown Girl Dreaming; The Year We Learned to Fly) uses personal experience to honor her childhood in Remember Us, a poignant work of middle-grade historical fiction about how a little-known event shapes one girl's transition to young woman.

#2152970 High Five for Glenn Burke (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Phil Bildner

When sixth grader Silas Wade does a school presentation on former Major Leaguer Glenn Burke, it's more than just a report on the irrepressible inventor of the high five. Burke was a gay baseball player in the 1970s--and for Silas, the presentation is his own first baby step toward coming out. Soon he tells his best friend, Zoey, but the longer he keeps his secret from his baseball teammates, the more he suspects they know something's up--especially when he stages one big cover-up with terrible consequences.

978-0-374-31273-2 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 690

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist When Silas has to do a presentation on a famous inventor for his sixth-grade class, he chooses Glenn Burke, the baseball center fielder credited with inventing the high five. When Glenn Burke arrived in the big leagues in 1976, the Los Angeles Dodgers thought he was going to be the next Willie Mays, Silas explains, but there's one thing he doesn't share with his class, friends, or teammates: Burke was pushed out of baseball because, like Silas, he was gay. Even as he considers coming out, Silas worries about his secret being revealed. As he becomes increasingly nervous, he distances himself from baseball and, worse, tells a lie about his best friend Zoey, which causes her to stop speaking to him. Bildner's (Martina & Chrissie, 2017) latest is a middle-grade book that will have broad appeal. Young readers will relate to Silas and cheer him on as he navigates longstanding relationships that suddenly seem new and awkward. Muted problems at home, seen through Silas' eyes, encourage communication with and trust in parents. The story also speaks to the importance of creating a welcoming community whether on a baseball field or in a classroom that embraces differences with not only tolerance but also complete and unrelenting support. An essential book for all readers, not just baseball fans, about friendship, acceptance, and self-confidence.--Grace Rosean Copyright 2020 Booklist

#2199528 Halfway to Harmony (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Barbara O'Connor

Walter Tipple is looking for adventure. His big brother, Tank, always used to say, "Let's you and me go see the world, Little Man"--but Tank went to the army and never came home, and Walter doesn't know how to see the world without him. But then he meets the brash, brave new girl next door named Posey, as well as an eccentric man named Banjo who's off on a bodacious adventure of his own.

978-0-374-31445-3 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 750

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Walter Tipple, 10, does not expect much out of his summer. His brother, Tank, died in an overseas war six months ago, leaving his mother in a kind of depressed fog. His father is on the road much of the time, and no one his age lives near him. In addition, Walter is shy, is pigeon-toed, and has a lazy eye, and he doesn't have friends anyway. His life changes when Posey, along with her mother, Evalina, and a three-legged dog named Porkchop, moves in next door. Posey is outspoken and a little bossy, but she leads Walter on a real adventure. They find an injured man named Banjo in the woods and join his quest in finding his hot-air balloon so he can mend it and enter a balloon competition. Over the course of the summer, Walter finds his voice and his spirit, and he's finally able to face his grief over Tank. This friendship story is sweet and savory, with memorable main characters in Walter, Posey, and Banjo and a story elegant in its simplicity. COPYRIGHT(2020) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Walter Tipple is still reeling from the loss of his big brother, Tank, a soldier who was killed fighting abroad. The arrival of new neighbor Posey, far more outspoken and adventurous than he, gives him something to think about besides the family's grief and the recurring dreams of his upcoming birthday, wherein Tank cryptically promises to show him his world. A mystery/project drops literally out of the blue when they discover an injured balloonist-sans balloon-who claims to have crashed in a trial run for a race. Banjo's story might be more believable if his narration of it was less florid, and as he insinuates himself into the lives of the kids and Posey's single mother, always dishing up a fresh reason not to move along, neither characters nor readers are entirely certain this guy can be trusted. O'Connor's fans will settle smoothly into familiar territory—a Southern rural milieu populated with warm, mildly eccentric adults and resourceful kids who roam, explore, and learn on a very long leash. The technical details of retrieving, repairing, launching, and piloting a hot-air balloon add flavor and expand the audience for this feel-good friendship story, and Walter's balloon ride satisfyingly fulfills Tank's dream-given promise of a new perspective on his familiar world. EB

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Ask ten-year-old Walter Tipple to describe himself, and he would start with the perceived negatives: his slight build, pigeon-toed walk, and lazy eye. He's an easy target for the local bullies -- except when he was with his older brother, Tank, former captain of the football team (and a daredevil who rode a motorcycle into church). But Tank left Harmony, Georgia, to join the army and was killed, leaving Walter despondent and friendless. That is, until a new neighbor, Posey, moves in and the two stumble across a nearly lifeless man, one Jubilation T. Fairweather, a.k.a. Banjo (because his older brothers always picked on him). This discovery leads to the beginnings of a beautiful friendship and a great adventure involving a hot-air balloon, a contest to win a Ford, and Walter driving Tank's beloved truck to save the day. With its fast pace, liberal use of Southern idioms, one bodacious adventure, and memorable characters, this book has read-aloud written all over it. Betty Carter March/April 2021 p.97(c) Copyright 2021. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A hot air balloon race over a small Southern town helps a boy cope with grief. Eleven-year-old Walter Tipple is celebrating his birthday, but with a sad heart. Tank, the older brother that he hero worships and who is fighting in a war overseas, has died. Then a series of events enlivens his quiet life in the sleepy town of Harmony, Georgia. Posey moves next door with her single mother and three-legged dog. Walter, who is meek and has amblyopia, is targeted by school bullies. Posey has a birthmark on her left cheek, loves to read nonfiction and quote advice on making friends--and she stands up for herself fiercely. Together, they find Jubilation T. Fairweather, a man who literally falls into their lives from his damaged hot air balloon. Nicknamed Banjo, he is determined to find his balloon and win a race, an endeavor that becomes the focus of the story's action. Walter thinks constantly about his brother but is unable to read Tank's last letter. The two children balance fear with bravery, and in the concluding balloon ride over Harmony, Walter finds the strength to reconcile his feelings about Tank. Posey owns up to her own fears, and Banjo remains the quirky catalyst. Readers follow Walter's inner feelings through a narrative that is centered on his thoughts and actions, but the resolution of family grief ultimately feels facile. All characters present as White. Heartfelt and accessible. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A boy grieves the death of his revered older brother in O'Connor's (Wonderland) tender story. Ten-year-old Walter Tipple loves living in Harmony, Ga., which is why he can't understand why his older brother, Tank, was so eager to enlist in the Army and fight in the overseas war in which he was killed. Now, all Walter has to remember Tank by is his prized truck; which Walter runs faithfully for a few minutes daily; an unopened letter, and a strange recurring dream. With his birthday approaching, Walter welcomes the distraction of his loquacious and bossy new neighbor, Posey. When the two of them venture to a nearby creek to catch minnows, they find a stranger named Banjo, injured from a hot air balloon fall, who enlists Walter and Posey to help him recover the damaged balloon, resulting in an unexpected but much-needed adventure for Walter as well as a chance to strengthen his friendship with Posey. O'Connor's characters are vividly portrayed, especially Walter, whose insight illustrates his grief, which is by turns confusing, overwhelming, and infuriating. Banjo and Posey's antics provide levity, and the quest to save Banjo's balloon propels the plot forward, resulting in a feel-good novel reminiscent of Moon Over Manifest. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Barbara Markowitz, Barbara Markowitz Literary. (Jan.)

#2245897 Between the Lighthouse and You (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Michelle Lee

Everyone says Alice Jones's mother died in a boating accident, but Alice doesn't believe them. When she hears that the residents of Aviles know how to communicate with loved ones who have died, she knows she has to go--if she can contact her mother, she might have all the answers she needs.

978-0-374-31450-7 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 It's been six years since Alice's mother's presumed death from drowning while visiting Aviles Island. She had gone there to research reports that local residents received "tidings," written messages sent by departed loved ones once a year. Still yearning for some word from Mom, 12-year-old Alice reads her mother's journals and persuades her father to take the family to Aviles for a few days. There she meets Leo, a boy whose family tends the island's lighthouse, collects the annual tidings, and distributes them to their neighbors. Grieving for his beloved grandfather and fiercely protective of the island's traditions, Leo is initially suspicious of the newcomers. Gradually, he forms an alliance with Alice and tries to help her contact her mother, but his plan has its perils. The first-person text shifts from Alice's point of view to Leo's, chapter by chapter, and tells a continuous, interwoven story that builds momentum as it progresses. In her first novel, Lee offers an involving, uplifting story about coming to terms with grief and finding a meaningful way to move forward. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books onvined her mother is alive, despite six years passing since Mom sailed into a storm o the Florida coast and disappeared. After all, Mom studied death for a living—specifically, how to communicate with the deceased—and the remot island where she vanished has a peculiar tradition that allows its residents to do just that. Twelve-year-old Leo Mercury takes this tradition, c lled the tidings, very seriously; he and his family are keepers of both the island's lighthouse and the messages from the dead that wash ashore each ear for island residents. While Leo doesn't appreciate Alice's snooping when she and her family arrive on a vacation, an unprecedented tidi g from his grandfather brings the two together as they attempt to contact their lost loved ones. Debut author Lee switches between her protagonis ts' perspectives in this slow-to-start story, which eventually crests in a heartfelt exploration of grief and familial love. Plot-minded readers will leave Aviles Island with unanswered questions about the liminally spiritual tidings tradition, as well as the island's continued isolation in the internet era. However, kids processing their own loss who are willing to accept the unexplained may enjoy Alice and Leo's quest to communicate both with those who have passed on and those who remain behind. AMM COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Six years ago, Alice's mother, a cultural anthropologist, disappeared in a boating accident near Aviles Island off the coast of Florida. Now twelve, Alice pores over her mom's books and notes, looking for clues and hope, while her father and younger sister contend with grief in their own ways. Alice desperately wants to learn more about the island's tradition of "tidings," or communications with the dead, that her mother was studying when she disappeared, and she pushes for a trip to Aviles Island. Her father plans to interview the Mercury family, the island's lighthouse keepers, for his radio show; Alice sets her sights on finding out more about the tidings. The story alternates between the first-person narratives of Alice and the Mercury family's oldest son, Leo, who's protective of the island's traditions in memory of his beloved grandfather. Alice and Leo have an antagonistic relationship at first, but an unusual tidings message causes them to join forces. Over the course of a weekend on the island, the tidings come and go, the Jones family members finally begin to process their grief, and a risky boat trip nearly finds history repeating itself. A few of the story's fantastical elements (as well as some of its realistic ones) may rankle some skeptical readers, but the narrative's heart and energy, as well as its portrayal of the many ways one can be isolated and paralyzed by grief, feel true and meaningful. Julie Roach(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Unable to accept her mother's death, a 12-year-old girl visits the Florida island where she disappeared in a storm six years ago. Alice has selective mutism resulting from her refusal to believe in her mother's death. A cultural anthropologist, Alice's mother specialized in studying people's communications with the dead. When Alice discovers a letter to her mother from Aviles Island lighthouse keeper John Mercury, she learns that he agreed to speak with her about what the islanders call tidings, or messages between the living and the dead—and she's determined to go there to seek his help. Alice's father agrees to a family vacation on Aviles, hoping it will bring Alice closure. Arriving with her dad, her dad's girlfriend, and her younger sister just in time for the Tidings Festival, Alice learns Mercury has died but meets his grandson Leo, whose family now operates the lighthouse. Still mourning his grandfather's death, Leo realizes Alice wants the same contact with her deceased mother he has with his grandfather, and he decides to help her. As they row out to sea bearing Alice's tidings to her mother, a terrific storm strikes. Could history repeat itself? The alternating first-person present-tense voices of Alice and Leo provide immediacy and intimacy, while the interactions between and among their down-to-earth families add realism, making the implausible feel possible. The island lighthouse setting proves an ideal venue for otherworldly communication. Main characters are presumably White. A heartwarming, emotional tale of family, grief, and acceptance. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–7—Every April, for the past eight years, on the anniversary of her mother's funeral, Alice loses her voice for several days. The loss of her mother in a boating accident left her confused and desperate for answers. Her sister is too young to remember their mother, and their father has seemingly moved on with his new companion, Neesha. But Alice is stuck. She spends hours combing through her mother's academic notes and letters, and when her father gives her a journal he recently discovered, Alice finds references to a planned interview with John Mercury on Aviles Island. Residents on this island off the coast of Florida purportedly receive written messages from deceased family members each year. What did her mother learn about the island? If she goes there, could she receive a message from her mother? After convincing her family to take a vacation to the island, Alice meets Leo, whose family manages the lighthouse. He is a cautious boy who wants to protect the magic of Aviles Island. Gradually, the two become friends and unite in their efforts to find out what really happened to Alice's mother. This suspenseful story, alternating between Alice's and Leo's perspectives, is beautifully written and captures the agony of unresolved grief. Lee provides rich detail on the physical landscape of the island, and each chapter slowly reveals answers to Alice's many questions, leaving readers eager for more. VERDICT This compelling story tackles weighty issues related to death and the afterlife, so it is better suited for more mature middle grade readers and young adults, especially those who may be grieving their own losses.—Anne Jung-Mathews, Plymouth State Univ., NH

#2245896 Dog Star (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Megan Shepherd

Laika is a Cold Dog, a stray pup fighting for her life on the streets of Moscow. Then, one winter night, she is plucked from her alley to become a starflyer, a dog trained to travel into space. Distrustful of people, Laika tries to do everything she can to escape. That is, until she meets Nina.

978-0-374-31458-3 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2022 5-1/4 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 730

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Based on the true story of the 1950s Space Race, Dog Star focuses on the Soviet dog Laika, rescued from the snowy streets of Moscow and groomed to become a "starflyer"--a test traveler orbiting the Earth during the early days of space exploration. Nina is the daughter of one of Laika's scientist trainers and bonds with the special pup. As she deals with school bullies and misses her friend whose family defected to America, she begins to question Communist beliefs. The crisis comes when she realizes that there is no plan to bring Laika back from her mission. There is a fictional, but failed, rescue attempt, leading to the actual result. Told from Laika's and Nina's alternating viewpoints, the novel reveals the process the Soviets followed into space, as well as insights into life during the Cold War. Shepherd includes an informative afterword and valuable bibliography for those who want to know more. Recommended for its insight into a pivotal moment in history and the touching relationship between a girl and her dog. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Laika is a stray struggling to stay alive on the cold, mean streets of Moscow; Nina, 12, is the daughter of a scientist working at the Institute of Space Medicine. It's 1957, the space race between the United States and the Soviet Union is on, and the Soviets are determined to be the first to send a living creature into space. When they settle on dogs, Laika is plucked off the streets as a recruit, and her path crosses with Nina's during a family visit day at the Institute after the little dog has been brought in for testing. A bond immediately forms between them, and Nina engineers a service project through her Young Pioneers group so she can volunteer to care for Laika and the other dogs. The more invested Nina becomes in Laika, the more she begins to question the outright lies and lies of omission churned out by the Soviet propaganda machine, especially in light of her best friend Ludmilla's family's defection to the U.S. And when the question of Laika's well-being arises, Nina will stop at nothing to protect her new friend. The narrative alternates between Nina's and Laika's points of view; Laika's perspective is anthropomorphized with inner monologue as well as dialogue between dogs, and this works to the story's advantage in arousing sympathy for the small animal who was sacrificed for science. A poignant story that accessibly illuminates a milestone in space exploration history. (author's note, recommended reading) (Historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Set in Moscow in 1957 against the internationally charged space race, Shepherd's (The Secret Horses of Briar Hill) tautly paced historical novel portrays the friendship between a stray dog and an empathic 12-year-old, both in the orbit of the Starflyer mission to launch animals into space. Alternating chapters follow Laika, a captured street dog inducted into training as a cosmonaut on a remote-controlled spacecraft, and Nina, the presumed-white daughter of a prominent rocket scientist, who volunteers with the group under a patriotic service program. The emotionally intense narrative effectively captures Laika's senses and viewpoint, both on the streets and in the lab, as she begins to trust other dogs, scientists, and especially Nina, who falls under suspicion after the sudden defection of her best friend's family to America. Though some perspectives feel heavy-handed, palpably-wrought authoritarianism follows Nina, who struggles to distance herself from her former friend and to conform to social pressure, priming her for a bond with Laika. Likewise, the voice of wise higher power Dog Star, who speaks to Laika, can feel out of place, but sympathetic characters deliver a tense and compelling adventure that stays true to historical events. An author's note offers background on the real Laika and the space race. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Josh Adams, Adams Literary. (Sept.)

#2245857 Cuba in My Pocket (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adrianna Cuevas

When the failed Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961 solidifies Castro's power in Cuba, twelve-year-old Cumba's family makes the difficult decision to send him to Florida alone. Faced with the prospect of living in another country by himself, Cumba tries to remember the sound of his father's clarinet, the smell of his mother's lavender perfume.

978-0-374-31467-5 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 760

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7. Cuevas' intense and immersive account of a Cuban boy's experience after the failed Bay of Pigs Invasion brings a specific point in history alive (1961 Santa Clara, Cuba) while also feeling extremely relatable and contemporary on matters such as immigration and the overwhelming feelings associated with moving and starting at a new school. Twelve-year-old Cumba loves his family and home in Cuba's mountains, but Fidel Castro's ascent to power has made life chaotic and frightening. Castro's socialist agenda comes with soldiers patrolling the streets and whispers that turn neighbors against one another. Cumba himself is now old enough to be recruited for Castro's "Young Rebels," a precursor to mandatory military training, and that's not a fate the boy's parents will permit. With heavy hearts and secret contacts on the island, they obtain the forged paperwork needed to fly Cumba to the U.S. and to safety. Drawing from her father's boyhood experiences, Cuevas does an outstanding job of eliciting the confusing array of emotions Cumba feels as he is thrown into life in a new country, where he understands only a smattering of English and desperately misses his family in Cuba. Cuevas takes care not to depict Cubans with broad strokes, emphasizing their individuality within a shared culture, and she lovingly raises up family, biological and made, as essential to finding a way forward.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Twelve-year-old Cumba Fernandez carries an unlucky double-nine domino, la caja de muertos, or the "dead man's box," in his pocket as a reminder that "there are worse sources of bad luck than a little white tile." It's April 1961 in Santa Clara, Cuba, and the Cuban exiles fighting to overthrow Fidel Castro have failed in their mission, leaving families like Cumba's who sided with the former president Batista vulnerable to incarceration and violent subjugation. In order to avoid the threat of mandatory military training in Russia, Cumba's parents decide to send him to the United States. Cuevas's (The Total Eclipse of Nestor Lopez) skillful first-person present-tense narrative follows Cumba's experience of separation from his loved ones; his adjustment to life in Miami as a refugee; and ultimately his reunion with his family in the United States. Cuevas furthers this insider perspective with letters between Cumba and his little brother, Pepito. Incorporating elements from her father's experiences as a Cuban exile and child refugee, the author tells a larger, complicated story about the ways children navigate the geopolitical forces that compel families to make hard choices to ensure their survival. Lettycia Terrones November/December 2021 p.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews To escape the harsh realities of Castro's Cuba, a 12-year-old boy must leave his family behind and flee to the United States alone. Following the failed Bay of Pigs invasion, Fidel's grip on Cuba tightens. Neighbors whisper and conspire against each other, and those not loyal to Castro's regime face punishment, even execution. When young Cumba is marked for military recruitment, his family decides to send him off to the United States. Escaping to Miami and the home of a distant relative, Cumba struggles to adjust to his new life without his family. The labyrinthlike city's size and the cacophony of English-speaking voices overwhelm the young boy at first. School also brings its share of pains and embarrassments. Thankfully, Cumba gains allies in the unlikeliest ways, including an American schoolmate obsessed with horse races and other Cuban refugee young people. Letters from his little brother back home also bring him some comfort. Then, one day, a letter brings horrible news: Fidel's soldiers have arrested Cumba's parents. Inspired by stories from her father's childhood, Cuevas' latest is a triumph of the heart. Devoting half of the story to Cumba's life in Cuba and the other half to his adjustment to the United States, the author continually reminds readers about the strength provided by community and family and the forces that can threaten to snatch these sources of happiness away. A compassionate, emotionally astute portrait of a young Cuban in exile. (author's note, glossary) (Historical fiction. 8-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Cuevas (The Total Eclipse of Nestor Lopez) excavates family history to illuminate the Cuba of 1961 during Fidel Castro's reign. Cumba, 12, his family, and the other citizens of Cuba are attempting to adjust to the new order after the failed Bay of Pigs invasion a week before, living in fear of "Fidel's oppressive government" and soldiers. With the threat of Cumba getting drafted into the military, his family sends him to the United States alone. When Cumba arrives in Florida, he must learn to navigate his new home, school, and language, as well as the wave of homesickness that follows. His only respite is his new friends, fellow Cuban refugees Valeria and Alejandro, and letters from his younger brother, Pepito. But when bad news from home reaches Cumba as he is forced to start over again, he spirals into self-doubt and the guilt of leaving his family behind. Cuevas packs this sophomore novel with palpable emotions and themes of friendship, love, longing, and trauma, attentively conveying tumultuous historical events from the lens of one young refugee. Back matter features an author's note and glossary. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Twelve-year-old Cumba Fernandez is a normal kid in many aspects. He has a loving family, friends at school, and loves building models so one day he can be an architect. However, life in Santa Clara, Cuba, is far from ordinary in 1961. Fidel Castro, now in power after his successful campaign against dictator Fulgencio Batista, has defeated a group of Cuban refugees who tried to overthrow Fidel during the Bay of Pigs invasion. But as Cumba's grandfather noted "we traded one dictator for another," and life was hard in Cuba. Children were sent to Russia for military training or forced to join the Young Rebel forces. In addition, people were executed; schools' curriculum modified to disseminate communist propaganda; neighbors turned against one another; and churches were closed, with foreign priests expelled. Cumba's parents have only one choice. First-generation Cuban American author Cuevas offers a historical novel inspired by the experience of her father, who as a boy had to leave Cuba alone and start a new life in the United States. The 34-chapter work, written in English with some Spanish terms interlaced in the narrative, is divided into two sections-one depicting Cumba's life in Cuba, and the second, starting in chapter 12, exploring his life in Florida. Of interest to educators, the text contains many English vocabulary words. However, the novel is filled with secondary characters that help to move the story forward but lack meaningful character development. What makes this novel strong is Cuevas's ability to capture the spirit of this Caribbean country, its food, flora, and fauna, and Cubans' cultural traits. The book contains a glossary for terms used throughout. VERDICT A fast-moving novel for middle schoolers who enjoy historical fiction that could work well in a social unit covering child migrants, authoritarian governments, and humanitarianism.-Kathia Ibacache, Univ. of Colorado Boulder © Copyright 2021. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. No redistribution permitted.

	Quantity	Unit Price
	1	$16.99

#2225891 Adventure Is Now (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jess Redman

Sometimes it's hard to be Milton P. Greene. He says all the wrong things. He has a very sensitive stomach. His family life is falling apart, and his friends will barely speak to him after the embarrassing Bird Brain Incident. But when Milton plays his video game Isle of Wild, he becomes Sea Hawk, the brave and brilliant naturalist explorer who conquers danger at every turn.

978-0-374-31471-2 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile NC 830

Reviews by: Booklist In the wake of "The Most Totally, Terribly, Horribly, Heinously Rotten Year of All Time," Milton's divorcing parents send him off to stay with his naturalist uncle, Evan, on aptly named Lone Island, where he meets the three likewise friendless children of the island's other resident scientists. The island is about to be sold off to real-estate developers unless proof of its unique species can be found, but its interior is blocked by impenetrable walls of "Truth-Will-Out" vine. Milton learns that admitting his true feelings aloud causes the vines to peel back, sparking an expedition that leads to encounters with a many-armed "Push-Pull Centopus," "Menu-You" fruit that tastes like anything you want, and other wonders. More important (to judge from the author's emphasis), the opportunities for the children to work through mutual suspicion and personal issues lead to an understanding of the importance of true friendship. The remote island filled with Dr. Dolittle-style flora and fauna helps to keep this message-driven tale afloat, and readers will likely wish for even more scenes with the imaginative fancies.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Milton P. Green's never been big on friends, and ever since the "karate-chopping incident that had brought him school-wide notoriety" he's been content to retreat into the video game Isle of Wild and imagine himself as its dashing hero-adventurer, Sea Hawk. Now, while his parents plan their upcoming divorce, he's shipped off to Lone Island in the tropical mid-Atlantic, where his uncle Evan and three other scientists search for confirmation of the amazing flora and fauna reported by the late Dr. Paradis. They'd better be quick about it, because real estate developers are closing in, and without evidence of rare species, the court may decide there's nothing worth preserving. Fortunately, there are three other kids who've been exploring the island on their own, and Milton-now adopting the name Sea Hawk-can't find electricity to recharge his device, giving him no option but to pursue an adventure of his own. That they will collectively save the day is a foregone conclusion, but getting to it is a Roald Dahl-esque delight, from breaking through the Truth-Will-Out Vine (feed it a deep personal secret), to vanquishing the Push-Pull Centopus (sing to it like a Tone-Deaf Warbler), to befriending the Beautiful Lemallaby that helps them deliver Dr. Paradis' complete field notes to Uncle Evan, not a second too soon. There's a touch of kid rivalry, and a few life lessons learned about honesty and cooperation. and a happy developer-free future for the exotica on Lone Island. Mostly, though, there's wryly delivered absurdity with a Charlie Bucket ending, since the Lone Island wildlife legally passes into the hands of four young adventurers, and the developers will just have to find someplace else to exploit. EB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When life deals precocious, friendless Milton P. Greene a blow, he escapes into his hand-held video game. Exploring the game's island with intrepid naturalist Sea Hawk is impossible after Milton's divorcing parents send him to visit his real-life naturalist uncle on an actual tropical island with no electricity and that used to be owned by Uncle Evan's mentor, the late Dr. Ava Paradis. Still smarting from the loss of his only friend, Milton gets the chance at a friendship reboot after meeting the resident scientists' children, Rafi and Gabe Alvarez and Fig Morris. Though unfriendly Rafi rebuffs him, Fig, if skeptical, welcomes his company. Dr. Paradis had described amazing flora and fauna, but despite scientists' efforts, few have been verified, as the impenetrable Truth-Will-Out Vine closed off the interior after her death. When Milton discovers how to part the vines, he finds Dr. Paradis' field guide--a mystery until Fig decodes it. Learning that the island will almost certainly be sold to a developer, Rafi and Gabe unexpectedly join the urgent quest to find species like the Push-Pull Centopus and Menu-You Bush and prevent the sale. The story is entertaining and fast-moving but suffers from slapdash execution and jarring shifts in tone. The silly flora and fauna, played for laughs, clash with potentially effective messages about bullying, loneliness, and family breakup and undercut the sincere environmentalist theme. Milton is presumed White; Rafi and Gabe are Latinx, and Fig is cued as Black. All the ingredients of a first-rate fantasy, disappointingly half-baked. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Sixth grader Milton P. Greene is having the "Most Totally, Terribly, Horribly, Heinously Rotten Year of All Time" in this contemporary story that turns fantastical. He's ending the school year friendless, his parents are on the verge of divorce, and he harbors painful memories of a humiliating school experience known as "The Bird Brain Incident." Milton has grown out of his "Nature Phase" and wants only to retreat into escapism via beloved video game Isle of Wild, so he's underwhelmed when an invitation from his uncle Evan, a biologist studying a secluded island, results in Milton heading halfway around the world to give his parents space. Initially disappointed by Lone Island's lack of electricity, pale-skinned, skinny Milton reluctantly befriends the progeny of the island's other scientists, including brilliant Fig, who has brown skin, and energetic, bronze-skinned brothers Rafi and Gabe; together, the kids search for a hidden treasure that will keep the island and its inhabitants from defaulting to corporate ownership. If myriad quests sap some momentum toward story's end, Redman (Quintessence) renders compassionate characters in Milton and crew, placing an emphasis on honesty and emotional directness that makes for an affirming adventure. Ages 8-12. Agent: Sara Crowe, Pippin Properties. (May) Copyright 2021 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--Milton, a young white boy, is having a horrible sixth-grade year. His best friend has ditched him, his parents are getting divorced, and now his uncle wants him to spend the summer with him on a deserted island in the middle of nowhere. Of course, Milton doesn't want to go; he just wants to immerse himself in his explorer video game. But when he arrives on the island and finds there are three other kids living there, he realizes it's an opportunity to reinvent himself. Slowly he makes friends with Fig, the dark-skinned daughter of one of the island's research scientists. Rafi is another story, despite the friendliness of his younger brother Gabe, who has bright eyes and a laughing bronze that face pops up everywhere. Milton soon learns that all is not well on the island: the interior is covered in a strange vine, his uncle is distressed, the scientists are worried, and the island is under threat of developers who want to create a resort. When he stumbles across a journal with clues about the island's hidden treasure, Milton decides to help save the island with Fig. They are launched into a series of fantastical adventures as they follow the clues in the journal. The magical realism of this wild adventure will especially appeal to ecologically minded middle grade readers. VERDICT A fun summer read perfect for fans of Kate Beasley's Lions & Liars, and Lynda Mullaly Hunt's Shouting at the Rain--Gretchen Crowley, formerly at Alexandria City P.L., VA Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2327590 Hope in the Valley (Hardcover (Trade))	1	$17.99

written by Mitali Perkins

Twelve-year-old Indian-American Pandita Paul doesn't like change. She's not ready to start middle school and leave the comforts of childhood behind. Most of all, Pandita doesn't want to feel like she's leaving her mother, who died a few years ago, behind. After a falling out with her best friend, Pandita is planning to spend most of her summer break reading and writing in her favorite secret space: the abandoned but majestic mansion across the street.

978-0-374-38851-5 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 710

Reviews by: Book Page On her 13th birthday, Pandita Paul escapes to her own secret garden--the Johnson property, an abandoned orchard and house where she and her now-deceased mother used to sneak away for quiet moments. In this haven just across the street from her home in Silicon Valley, Pandita keeps her most precious possessions: notes from her mother and a childhood photo of her mom, whom Pandita worries she's beginning to forget.

Reviews by: Booklist Ever since her ma passed a few years back, Pandita Paul has made it a goal to remember her. This becomes harder when Ashar Jaiga, the once-secret place she shared with her mom, goes up for demolition, and her baba starts dating. As Pandita rallies to preserve the property, one of her sisters fights to transform it into potential affordable housing. Pandita's social life takes a hit, too, as she's forced to attend drama camp with her ex--best friend while another friendship fizzles. Hoping to reclaim letters from her mom hidden at Ashar Jaiga, Pandita sifts through boxes but learns instead about her hometown's complex history--like the "Keep California White" campaign--and realizes that, maybe, moving on doesn't have to mean letting go. Perkins has written a sensitive character who comes of age during a time of rapid change in 1980s Silicon Valley. Pandita's thoughtful nature is most evident through her love of poetry, through which her voice is clear even as she shies away from the stage. Perfect for readers seeking an emboldened young hero.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine The former orchard across from Pandita Paul's home, dilapidated though it may be, holds a special place in the thirteen-year-old's heart. It's where she and her late mother used to spend time: "Ashar Jaiga, as Ma and I called it. Ma's name, Asha, which means 'hope,' Ma's place, Ashar Jaiga. Place of Hope." Now the property is up for sale. Pandita, encouraged by the historical society's call to preserve it, becomes the group's youngest member. Meanwhile, one of her twin older sisters, an activist, helps spearhead the fight for demolition of the orchard and subsequent construction of affordable rental units. The story is set in the summer of 1980 in Silicon Valley, California, before the tech boom. It is a place on the cusp, much like the story's protagonist, who finds herself compelled by memories of her past; the complex and fascinating history she uncovers; and possibilities for the future of her town, her family, and herself. Pandita, a budding poet, reluctantly attends summer drama camp, meets a talented new boy, reconciles with her former best friend, and struggles with family changes. An engaging subplot involves a new love interest for her father; the woman (a.k.a. "the Intruder") is brash and outspoken, and her unsolicited opinion on the development issue is enlightening for the characters, and for readers, about both sides having a point and no one being demonized. Elissa Gershowitz(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Grief, memories, and the difficulty of letting go permeate this powerful story about family, friendship, and finding your voice. Pandita Paul's Bengali family includes two older twin sisters, Shar and Indy, and their father, Baba, but it has a gaping hole: their late Ma. This chasm is deepened as the nearby abandoned Johnson property, including the orchard Pandu and Ma called Ashar Jaiga, or place of hope, is being sold and developed for rental units. This demolition will take with it Pandu's sweet recollections of enjoying the orchard's apricots, flowers, and bird song with Ma. Things are changing too fast for Pandu. Worse, everyone seems to be moving on, including her ex-best friend and even Baba, who is dating The Intruder. But tentative friendships blossom at her summer drama camp even as Pandu, desperately clinging to her memories of Ma, is pitted against her own sister, who advocates for affordable housing in their Silicon Valley community. Set in the 1980s, this beautifully written book weaves together the Indian American Pauls' personal histories as well as those of the U.S. and India. In trying to save the place she and her mother loved, the 13-year-old embarks on a journey that takes her down pathways of memory of earlier inhabitants of the Johnson house and the region. In doing so, Pandu gives wings to her words and her voice. There's poetry here, along with literature and lots of culinary heritage, all combining in a deeply compelling read. A riveting, courage-filled story. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this moving novel by Perkins (The Story of Us), 13-year-old aspiring poet Pandita Paul struggles to navigate grief and change in her rapidly gentrifying Silicon Valley neighborhood. Since the death of Pandu's mother years ago, the apricot orchard across the street; which the two called Ashar Jaiga, or place of hope; has recently been a sanctuary for Pandu, until it's threatened when the mansion property on which it sits is sold for redevelopment into purportedly affordable rental units. When demolition begins, Pandu loses access to this refuge and worries that, once the orchard is gone, her memories of Ma will go with it. In her search for a solution, Pandu cultivates an alliance with the town librarian and members of the local historical preservation society, who are adamant about preventing the property's bulldozing. But this allyship puts Pandu at odds with her older sister Shar, an affordable housing activist who supports the development. Though the novel is set in the 1980s, issues surrounding housing inequity and financial precarity deeply resonate with present-day challenges. Employing Pandu's lilting voice and quiet bravery, Perkins crafts an introspective novel about moving on from loss and finding the courage to fight for what one believes in. Pandu and her family are Indian American. Ages 8: 12. (July)

#2267082 Each of Us a Universe (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jeanne Zulick Ferruolo

Cal Scott has been running--from her mother's cancer, from her father in prison, and from classmates who've never seemed to "get" her. The only thing Cal runs toward is Mt. Meteorite, named for the magical meteorite some say crashed there years ago. Cal plots to summit the mountain, so she can find the magic she believes will heal her mother. But no one has reached its peak--no one who's lived to tell about it, anyway.

978-0-374-38868-3 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Cal's life changed in an instant with her mother's cancer diagnosis, but Cal has a daring plan: local legend maintains that a meteorite smashed into a nearby mountaintop, and Cal becomes obsessed with scaling the peak and bringing the mystical artifact home to heal her mother. When she learns that Rosine, a refugee from the Democratic Republic of the Congo, also intends to climb the mountain and find something miraculous herself, Cal reluctantly agrees to team up for the impossible climb, and as their connection deepens, a new kind of magic takes hold. It's an immediately compelling story, full of breathtaking descriptions of the natural world and unafraid to tackle big topics. Cal is allowed a full range of emotions about her situation, from deep love to terrible resentment, and Rosine makes for a remarkable and resilient counterpoint (Mwilelo drew on her own experiences as a refugee to tell Rosine's story). Above all, it's a reminder that life can be imbued with a sense of wonder, even in its most difficult moments. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Cal has been running away from her father's imprisonment and her mother's cancer for months now, and she is pinning all her hopes on the idea that Mount Meteorite actually has some magic as the local legends suggest. Meanwhile, Rosine, a new girl who is a refugee from Burundi, is looking for some magic of her own as she negotiates yet another new town with her older sister as her only family. The two meet and decide to scale the mountain despite the formidable risks and their lack of supplies needed for such an endeavor, and it is during their trek that the girls truly connect, each letting go of their protective walls and sharing their vulnerabilities. Unfortunately, this novel hovers between realism and magic in a way that obfuscates understanding rather than intriguing the reader with multiple possibilities, and the characters serve more as proxies for self-improvement adages than real people. Even so, the climbing passages are tense and frightening, Cal's broken family moves toward reconciliation at an authentically slow pace, and the mountain, serving as symbol of hope or potential in this town hit hard by COVID-19, is effective. End matter includes a note from Ferruolo on her own experience with cancer, as well as a moving note from Mwilelo on her experience as a refugee. There's also a nifty science lesson that explains the micrometeorites that play a key role in the novel. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Two preteens in search of rumored mountain magic tackle peaks of both the emotional and the geological sort. With her alcoholic father serving time and her mom debilitated by cancer, it's not surprising that White 12-year-old Calliope Scott has turned into a sullen, thoroughly unlikable child prone to bad behavior and vicious conversational barbs. Her walls are not high enough to keep out new classmate Rosine Kanambe, recently arrived with her 19-year-old sister from the Democratic Republic of the Congo via a refugee camp in Burundi. As Cal puts it, once repeated rejections and harsh exchanges have given way to solid friendship following a grueling shared climb up a vertical spire enticingly dubbed Mount Meteorite, Rosine is "the superhero of never giving up." Rosine has experienced traumatic losses of her own but serves as the steady, strong example Cal needs to find her feet. Along with incorporating their personal experiences, the co-authors enrich their tale with specific technical details about both rock climbing and, referencing Carl Sagan and the popular saying that "we are made of stardust," the micrometeorites that continually filter down around us. They acknowledge the Covid-19 pandemic by setting their story in an economically stricken New England town whose diverse residents are actively pitching in to support one another. Cal experiences growth throughout the story; Rosine functions primarily as an inciting force. A tribute to the value of a friend willing to pull and push when the going gets rocky. (authors' notes, scientist interview) (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2290309 Adrift (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tanya Guerrero

Cousins Coral and Isa are so close that they're practically siblings; their mothers are sisters, and the two girls grew up on the same small island. When Coral and her parents leave on a months-long sea voyage amid the islands of Indonesia, Isa is devastated that they'll be kept apart, and the two vow to write to each other no matter what.

978-0-374-38965-9 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 7-10 Starred Review Half-Filipino Coral and Isa are more than cousins: their mothers are sisters; their fathers are brothers. It is no wonder they feel as close as sisters. This bond is tested when Coral and her family set sail on a long boat trip, only to get swept up in a tidal wave. The shock hits Isa hard, and though she holds out hope, it's soon clear that she will have to accept that her "Star Sister" is gone. Except, she isn't. Across the sea, Coral washes up on the shore of a lonely tropical island. Her parents missing, and food and water dwindling, she must gather all the skills her parents taught her to survive and get back to her home. The action follows the two POVs of Coral and Isa, each girl an example of facing life with courage. While Coral lives out a harrowing survival story, Isa's story is quieter but no less intense. In this way, Guerrero adroitly unfolds this tale of grief and triumph by showing a visceral story of determination alongside the effects a tragedy has on the people left behind. This is a stirring page-turner that will move readers to appreciate the people in their lives. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Growing up on Pebble Island with their families, eleven-year-old Coral and twelve-year-old Isa are biracial Filipino cousins who are as close as siblings. When Coral and her parents are off on a four-month sea voyage to Indonesia, Isa feels lost without her cousin and decides to write letters to Coral to keep in touch. But tragedy strikes when a tidal wave sweeps Coral's parents and the rest of the crew members off the boat, and Coral is washed ashore on a deserted island. Devastated and alone, Coral must find the strength to survive and figure out a way to get back home, while Isa stays hopeful that her cousin is still alive and they will reunite again. First-person point of view and the use of handwritten letters effectively convey the two girls' struggle with grief as they learn how to validate and accept their own feelings during a terrible hardship. Although repetitive dialogue and descriptions slow the narrative down, they also immerse readers in Coral's experience on the island and capture the significance of familial memories to the cousins' resilience. This is an insightful and heartfelt book that balances a strong representation of Filipino culture with a heartfelt message about how it is okay to not be okay. DR COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Stranded on a deserted island, a 13-year-old struggles to survive while her cousin refuses to give up hope that she's alive. Coral and Isa Bituin-Rousseau may be cousins, but they're as close as siblings: Their Filipina mothers are sisters who married brothers, the girls' White American fathers. They grew up together in Pebble Island, New York, eating lobster Isa's father caught and their mothers' Filipino cooking. The two are rarely apart except when Coral and her parents go on one of their journeys to see the world. Following an earthquake and tidal wave while they are sailing through the Indonesian archipelago, Coral is thrown overboard and stranded on an uninhabited island. With the help of survival skills learned from her father and mysterious gifts of freshly killed small game, Coral keeps herself alive. But how long will it be before rescue comes? Isa, meanwhile, is left alone on Pebble Island, with parents who seem willing to abandon hope and a newly introduced cousin who Isa can't help but feel is meant to replace Coral. Partly a survival story and partly an exploration of coping with grief, heavy topics are touched upon with a soft hand. Coral's struggles and triumphs offer an introduction to the wilderness adventure genre, but more experienced readers may find her a little too lucky. Isa's story serves as a nice counterpoint to Coral's, as she struggles with moving on and forming new relationships. A survival story with some guardrails still in place. (Adventure. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly is tender novel, which follows two tightly bonded cousins across a devastating separation. The daughters of two Filipina sisters married to two white-cued American brothers, "Star Sisters" Coral and Isa have been inseparable since birth, raised together on Pebble Island, N.Y. But a crisis strikes during Coral's family sailing trip, when an earthquake in Indonesia causes a tidal wave that capsizes their boat. No survivors are reported, but Isa, unwilling to give up hope, is certain that Coral is alive: "I can feel her presence inside me, in my bones in my gut, in my heart." And she's right: Coral is stranded alone on an island with a survival kit and a few days' rations, attempting to endure until help arrives. Employing the cousins' alternating first-person voices to portray their situations and their love across space and time, Guerrero (All You Knead Is Love) movingly portrays the toll of resilience, sorrow, and survival, seamlessly including Filipino cultural references throughout. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Wendy Schmalz, Wendy Schmalz Agency. (Sept.)

#2348419 Jawbreaker (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Christina Wyman

Max Plink's life is complicated. Her parents aren't getting along. The school bullies are relentless-and her own sister is the cruelest of them. Worst of all, her mouth is a mess. Max has a Class II malocclusion, otherwise known as a severe overbite. She already has braces, but now Max has to wear painful (and totally awkward) orthodontic headgear called "the jawbreaker." Could things get any worse?
978-0-374-38969-7 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 760

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Smile meets Wonder in Wyman's affirming debut, a South Brooklyn: set novel that probes the intersection between bullying and orthodontia through the eyes of Maximillia "Max" Audrina Plink, a 12-year-old of Italian descent. Nicknamed "Bucky Beaver" and otherwise taunted by cruel classmates, aspiring journalist Max loathes her splayed teeth, severe overbite, and jaws that "fit together like mismatched puzzle pieces." Her Class II malocclusion's painful, costly treatment; braces, headgear (which Max dubs "the jawbreaker"), and possible surgery; strains the family's already lean finances and triggers harassment from Max's sister. As Max navigates friendships, feuding parents, a father who increasingly smells of alcohol, and a journalism competition that requires a video essay, she slowly gains the courage to speak up for herself; and against academic inequities, bullying, and intergenerational trauma. Portraying complex social concepts with nuance, Max's candid, accessible first-person narration propels her growing pains and journey toward empowerment, leading to a hopeful conclusion emphasizing the idea that "no one should have to look perfect just to be treated well." An author's note discusses the story's personal roots. Secondary characters suggest the presence of racial diversity. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Erin Murphy, Erin Murphy Literary. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–7—In a novel inspired by the author's own childhood, seventh grader Max Plink has a Class II malocclusion, also known as severe overbite, which typical braces are not able to correct. Her orthodontist, Dr. Watson, has been talking about potential surgery that would wire her mouth shut for weeks. Max is currently wearing painful headgear that she calls the "jawbreaker" to try to avoid the surgery. Her parents are struggling financially and the additional cost of dentistry, plus her dad's substance abuse problem, has put a strain on the family. Max's younger sister Alexis is hanging out at school with kids who bully Max about her appearance and the two fight constantly at home. The bright spot in Max's days is spending time with her friend Shrynn, although she has been distant recently while dealing with her own family issues. The two work for the school newspaper and participate in a competition to work with journalist Jordan Slade. Readers will relate to Max's experiences dealing with bullies, trying to complete assignments without the technological resources of her peers, navigating changing family dynamics, and enduring typical preteen angst. VERDICT This heartfelt story about a common middle school experience of having braces will appeal to fans of Raina Telgemeier's Smile.—Sarah Polace

#2321955 Department of Lost Dogs (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Josephine Cameron

Eleven-year-old Rondo McDade is starting to feel left out. His older brother, Epic, is heading into high school, and his younger sister, Elvis, is always mad at him. His parents, who are busy running their dog-friendly bed-and-breakfast, the Perro del Mar, keep pushing him out of the house and into the company of the new kid in town, hoping he'll keep Rondo out of trouble.

978-0-374-38975-8 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist It's been two years since the McDade kids collared a thief in the dog-obsessed town of Camelito, but due to a dearth of mysteries, their detective agency has since disbanded. Eleven-year-old Elrond "Rondo" McDade, an introverted Houdini expert, is looking forward to a quiet spring break despite the family B & B having been temporarily turned into the set of his favorite canine-detective TV show. The increasingly busy family is growing distant, and the siblings, including older Epic and younger Elvis, aren't as close as they once were. But when dognapping incidents threaten to halt the production, the kids find themselves at the heart of another mystery and pull back together to stop a canine cast member from disappearing. The hilarious whodunit works splendidly on its own, and fans of A Dog-Friendly Town (2020) will be thrilled to reunite with familiar characters from a different child's perspective. Brisk pacing, interspersed podcast transcripts, and dog puns aplenty keep the proceedings compelling for younger readers. Supersleuths and dog lovers will lap up this clever caper.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A stand-alone, high-stakes mystery set in "America's #1 Dog-Friendly Town." Sixth grader, middle child, and Houdini admirer Rondo McDade was hoping for a relaxing spring break, but instead, his family's B&B, the Perro del Mar in Carmelito, California, is serving as a filming location for the reboot of TV series Bentley Knows, and the canine star has been dognapped. Rondo's mom and dad are busy, and Rondo is at odds with older brother Epic and younger sister Elvis. He needs to solve the mystery of the missing canine actor or his favorite TV show will be cancelled, but he's going to need to work with, not against, his annoying siblings and 9-year-old Denver Delgado-Doyle, his neighbor's nephew from out of town who is also a fan of magic. Together the kids try to solve a crime with many possible suspects, including a dog trainer, an actress, and the BarkAngels, who claim to be able to communicate psychically with dogs but who Rondo is convinced are frauds. Transcripts of the Daily Dog Dish podcast give readers extra insights into the celebrity dog world and help with pacing. A tight time frame of less than a week, an observant first-person narrator, and a large cast of family members and suspects make for an entertaining whodunit perfect for animal lovers. The McDades read White; names and some charming full-page illustrations cue ethnic diversity in the supporting cast. A fun, fast-paced mystery. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2325717 How to Stay Invisible (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Maggie C. Rudd

Raymond Hurley has never had one place to call home. His free-wheeling parents move their family from town to town, and he's living in a trailer in a brand-new state when one day, they just up and abandon him. He is completely alone. With only his reliable old dog Rosie for comfort and company, Raymond makes his home in a cramped hollow tree in the woods near his school.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

978-0-374-39033-4 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 730

Reviews by: Booklist ally take place in remote locales, but this one hits closer to home. Suddenly abandoned once again by his deadbeat parents, Raymond takes up residence in the woods behind his latest middle school—determined to make a go of it and actually doing a creditable job of keeping his head down in class while, often, going hungry or barely subsisting on dumpster produce and fish from the local stream as days turn into weeks and then months. While Rudd makes it clear that Raymond is far from safe or comfortable, as points of reference she name checks both Hatchet and The Outsiders and lightens the load by giving him an unusually intelligent dog and a playful young coyote, two loyal but not too inquisitive friends in school, and an elderly loner who is willing to respect his refusal to contact social services while providing help and temporary shelter at need. Rather than even try to explain the behavior of her protagonist's parents, the author just focuses on Raymond's realistic hurt, incomprehension, and resulting lack of trust in any grownup's motives, all of which many young readers may, sadly, find easy to understand. Still, following a nearly fatal reversal of fortune, she closes the tale on a hopeful note by leaving him in the care of adults who do at least seem to have his best interests at heart.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Raymond is used to his parents' neglect and irresponsibility, but this time is even more drastic than all the rest as they appear to have completely abandoned him without money, a home, or any details about their whereabouts. He has his beloved dog, his wits, and a comfort with being outdoors—these are all essential tools as winter closes in and he is sleeping in the woods with his dog, trying to provide them each with safety, warmth, and food. Raymond is determined to not be found out, at first because he hopes his parents will return for him and then because he does not want to be in the child services system. He finds community in a couple of close friends and a gruff old man Stigs, who takes him in for a bit after Raymond's dog injures herself, and who sees enough through Raymond's stoic exterior to eventually let the right folks know about his situation. This is a painful picture of a middle-school boy in need, who longs for the loving families most of his peers have while clearly so damaged from his own that he can't even really imagine what being cared for must feel like. There is an acute melancholy to his resigned acceptance of his parents' neglect and to his belief that all he can really do is add to his already impressive survival skills, connect with people when he can, and not spend too much time wishing. Specific details, like Raymond watching his grades slip because he is literally unable to do homework on dark, frozen ground, give immediacy to his situation. Readers may imagine how they would fare in similar circumstances, and they'll likely be deeply relieved when things appear to be on a significantly easier path for Raymond. AS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine "Most people didn't live in hollowed-out trees behind their middle school," but twelve-year-old Raymond does. A seventh grader at River Mill Middle School in North Carolina, he had lived in a rented trailer with his feckless parents three miles from school. But one day he comes home to discover that they have abandoned him, and now here he is living in the woods with his dog and doing his best to fly under the radar. He saves food from cafeteria lunches, does nighttime dumpster dives, and sometimes has luck fishing. He does have a new friend in Harlin, who in an act of kindness chooses as a bingo prize a sleeping bag for Raymond instead of the NASCAR tickets he'd wanted. Gradually, Raymond finds a circle of caring people (and a coyote) in his orbit: Lexi, his first girlfriend; Stigs, a former army surgeon who lives in a cabin nearby; and various teachers who don't let Raymond remain invisible. The third-person narrative allows for fully realized secondary characters who play important roles in Raymond's life and, ultimately, in his rescue. Rudd's straightforward, meticulous prose perfectly captures the daily routines and occasional drama of life in the woods. A worthy match for My Side of the Mountain and Hatchet, the book Raymond checks out of the library toward the end of the novel. Dean Schneider July/August 2023 p.125

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When 12-year-old Raymond's parents abandon him, he takes to the woods to survive. The Outsiders meets Hatchet in this story that follows Raymond's ordeal to both survive in the winter woods of North Carolina and attend middle school without anyone finding out how he lives. Trying to balance keeping up his grades with living in a hollow, overturned tree with his dog, Rosie, existing on fish he catches and food he scavenges from the dumpster outside his school, Raymond stoically accepts his reality even as he wishes for parents who cared for him. The narrative poignancy of Raymond's being cold, hungry, and doing homework by the light of a fire is grounded by descriptions of creative survival techniques: how to catch minnows using a plastic water bottle, how to make fire with a battery and foil gum wrappers, and how to build a lean-to with branches. Completely devoid of cheap drama, this tightly written, understated narrative tells its story through finely drawn characters, intensely realistic atmosphere and setting, and a protagonist who will capture readers' hearts with both his courage and his creative survival skills. All secondary characters—irrepressible NASCAR-loving classmate Harlin; red-haired love interest Lexi; emotionally torn old man Stigs, who offers friendship; and the teachers, both callous and obtuse—are drawn with originality and verve. Characters read default White. An exceptional story of courage. (Fiction. 8-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Rudd (I'll Hold Your Hand) weaves an uplifting tale of connection and found family featuring an unhoused tween. Twelve-year-old, white-cued Raymond is used to his unreliable parents constantly moving house. So when he starts at yet another middle school; this time in River Mill, N.C.; he does what he does best: keeps his head down and tries to stay invisible. But when his parents abruptly leave, abandoning him and his dog Rosie outside their locked, rented trailer, Raymond takes to the woods to avoid state care. Thus begins months of living in a tree hollow, where he contends with wild animals and faces hunger, bitter cold, and sickness. Keeping his situation secret, Raymond continues attending school and makes new friends; classmates, adults, and animals alike; who inadvertently help Raymond come to terms with his harsh reality and prompt him to question the long-term effects of his solitude and secrecy. Via introspective third-person prose, Rudd juxtaposes a typical middle school milieu of crushes and school projects against Raymond's harrowing position. A hearty dose of existentialism, depictions of necessary wilderness skills, and ruminations on the perseverance of the human spirit permeate this meditative survival read. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Mary Cummings, Great River Literary. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Raymond is used to taking care of himself, but when he is abandoned by his parents outside a small town where he knows virtually no one, he must learn how to survive in the woods of North Carolina with just his wits and his dog Rosie. Not only does Raymond have to figure out basics like what to eat every day, he must also continue to navigate the homework, friendships, drama, and dances of middle school. How long can Raymond go unnoticed and keep himself out of a children's home? How long can he stay invisible? This heartbreaking and beautiful story balances a survival tale with classic middle grade friendship story while maintaining an impressive level of believability. Readers will find themselves furious at Raymond's parents and his antagonist at school, and a moment later brimming with love for his loyal friends who accept him as he is. While many of the characters are somewhat static, Raymond and his self-appointed best friend Harlan colorfully fill in the gaps with their emotional honesty. Readers will cheer for Raymond as he learns to fish and build a fire just as hard as they cheer for him to ask the girl to the semiformal dance, or learn to trust in the kindness of others. VERDICT A truly unique blend of survival story and standard middle grade friendship fare, this refreshingly genuine book on resilience and survival will enthrall readers from chapter one. Recommended for collections where survival books and heartfelt fiction are popular.--Emily Beasley Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2321564 Ghosts of Rancho Espanto (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adrianna Cuevas

A new contemporary middle-grade fantasy novel about a Cuban American boy who's sent to work on a ranch as punishment for a school prank gone wrong where he is confronted with a troubling supernatural mystery.

978-0-374-39043-3 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 810

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Cuevas' riveting middle-grade novel follows Rafa, a Cuban American boy who is sent off to a ranch in New Mexico as punishment for a school-prank fiasco with his friends. When Rafa gets to the ranch, he discovers that little is what it seems, and there are more mysteries afoot than he expected from a boring detention job. Rafa usually finds comfort in his favorite role-playing game, the Forgotten Age, but when the very same game and a slushy-machine heist gone wrong results in disaster and punishment, he must learn to establish new friendships and apply hard work in the real world. Readers will relate readily to Rafa's easygoing, creative, voice-y narration and sympathize with him when he is sent far from home to meditate on his actions. As the emotional clues and multiple time lines and multiverses swirl around him at the eerie ranch, Rafa and his new friends must unravel the truth behind the mysterious figure haunting Rancho Espanto and sabotaging Rafa's hard work, learning in the process much more about themselves and their priorities than they originally expected. In a twist that is equal parts haunting and poignant, readers of all ages will be compelled to reflect upon their own lives and legacies after this gripping read.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Cuevas (The Total Eclipse of Nestor Lopez; Cuba in My Pocket, rev. 11/21) presents another humorous, sensitive, and compelling story, with hints of fantasy, horror, and science fiction. Rafael, a twelve-year-old Cuban American from Miami, likes to lose himself in role-playing games with his friends. These extended fantasy adventures help him forget how much his life has changed since his mother became ill. After a game-based prank goes badly, his father sends him away for the summer to Rancho Espanto in New Mexico. There Rafa makes new friends while working as a ranch hand, but still living mostly in his fantasy world. When he encounters what he believes is a ghost and has glimpses of alternate realities, Rafa must confront his own "ghosts" and deal with his fears in real life. The character experiences northern New Mexico through a newcomer's eyes, and Cuevas's descriptions of grooming horses, hiking in canyons, and eating green chilies are vivid and immediate. The author incorporates Cuban Spanish words and phrases naturally into the narrative. Topics of illness, death, anxiety, and PTSD give this book some depth but do not overwhelm the story or detract from its appeal to a diverse audience. Lara K. Aase(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When Rafa Alvarez and his two best friends decide to bring their favorite role-playing game into the real world, the consequences become just as real. Between his father's strict nature and his mother's worsening illness, Cuban American Rafa has retreated into playing The Forgotten Age with Beto and Yesi. However, after they attempt to steal a slushie machine from the school cafeteria as part of the game, Dad decides Rafa would best learn his lesson by spending a month on a ranch...all the way across the country from Florida in New Mexico. When Rafa arrives at Rancho Espanto, or Terror Ranch, he forms new friendships with Korean American Jennie Kim, the librarian's daughter, and Black barn manager Marcus Coleman, an army veteran. But when a strange man in a green sweater begins to appear, causing chaos for Rafa, the seemingly sedate ranch becomes the site of an exciting--and slightly terrifying--mystery to solve. Together, Rafa and Jennie work to uncover the strange (possibly paranormal) happenings at Rancho Espanto. While the mystery lies at the core of this novel, the exploration of themes of loss, grief, and identity add complexity. Readers familiar with these subjects will see themselves in Rafa as he struggles to come to terms with and understand his mother's condition and build his own identity. An intriguing mystery with a satisfying emotional payoff. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Ten-year-old Cuban American Rafa Alvarez and his friends Beto and Yesi, who are obsessed with the fantasy tabletop role-playing game The Forgotten Age, take the adventure out of doors and into the real world in this boisterous telling by Cuevas (Cuba in My Pocket). When a prank they pull as part of their game goes wrong, Rafa's father sends him from Florida to New Mexico, to spend a month helping Marcus Coleman, an old college friend, run Rancho Espanto; Terror Ranch. There, Rafa meets Marcus, a Black Army veteran turned barn manager, and affable Korean American Jennie Kim, the snack-obsessed daughter of the local librarian. Rafa slowly acclimates to the ranch's sedate lifestyle, which helps him process his mother's worsening cancer. But a stranger in a green jacket, believing the ranch to be haunted, pressures him to leave, even going so far as to frame Rafa for vandalism around the ranch, which puts the youth at odds with his new friends. Via Rafa's vulnerable first-person narration, Cuevas crafts a whirlwind mystery populated by a compassionate community of lovable characters with effervescent personalities, to explore themes of grief, healing, and PTSD with tenderness and well-timed humor. Ages 8: 12. (Apr.)

#2364776 Maybe It's a Sign (Hardcover (Trade))
written by E. L. Shen

Seventh grader Freya June Sun has always believed in the Chinese superstitions spoon-fed to her since birth-but ever since her dad's death a year ago, she's become obsessed, believing that her father is sending her messages through signs from the beyond. Like how, on her way to an orchestra concert where she's dreading her viola solo, a pair of lucky red birds appear, a sure indication that Dad wants Freya to stick with the instrument and make him proud.

978-0-374-39077-8 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Seventh-grader Freya June Sun deeply misses her father, who died suddenly from a heart attack eight months ago. She searches for signs from him at every turn, believing his messages will appear through traditional Chinese superstitions he shared with her. But instead of receiving comfort and relief from these "signs," Freya becomes even more fraught with anxiety. She struggles with family pressure to keep playing the viola, but she sees twin red birds that she's convinced are a good luck sign from her dad. Things are extra tense at home as her busy mom and older sister, who keeps sneaking out, fight often. Then, in Freya's home economics class, she is paired with Gus Choi, an annoying, clumsy classmate. Things start to shift during their cooking project, however, when Freya discovers a passion for baking and that maybe Gus isn't so bad after all. She also discovers her sister's secret, and the two begin to develop a bond. A thoughtful portrayal of big feelings around loss and healing. An author's note and recipes cap off this tender, wholesome story.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Since the sudden death of her father from a heart attack, seventh-grader Freya June Sun has been keeping a near-obsessive eye for signs from him, sure they will manifest through the traditional Chinese superstitions he shared with her. However, rather than comforting her, the supposed signs create a constrictive world full of family pressure and anxiety. Her sister's unlucky white headband is a sure sign Freya's about to fail, and twin red birds repeatedly confirm her father's desire to see Freya succeed in the school orchestra, even though playing the viola has come to feel like a suffocating obligation. When she meets goofy but culinarily talented love-interest Gus Choi, Freya is able to open up to new people and new hobbies, temporarily relieved from the isolating stress of both family and friends struggling to cohere in the face of enormous loss. Baking brings joy, pride, and excitement back into her life: in the gentle sureties of kneading dough and mixing chocolate chips into batter, Freya leaves off interpreting signs and lets herself choose what feels right. While Freya's voice is slightly generic and secondary characters often fall into familiar tropes, the emotional effects a sudden death can have on a child are depicted with nuance and depth, and Freya's reckoning with symbolism to connect with her deceased father is emotionally and culturally adept. With friction continually sparking between Freya, her grieving mother, and her activist sister, the interrupted dynamics of a family unit are moreover depicted with compelling insight. A quiet, melancholic read adroitly lifted with just a baker's pinch of first-love sweetness, Freya's journey is sure to resonate with middle graders coming up against big changes and bigger feelings. Author's note and recipes to bake along with Freya included. MC COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young teen searches for meaning after the loss of her father. Eight months after the sudden passing of her dad, 13-year-old Freya June Sun can't help but double down on following the Chinese superstitions that he taught her. She habitually searches for signs from Dad for guidance as friendship dynamics shift at school, tensions simmer between her mother and sister at home, and an orchestra competition looms. When Freya spies two red birds before her viola solo, she's convinced that it's a good-luck signal from Dad to continue with the instrument despite its becoming a growing source of anxiety. As she begins to come to terms with her grief, she's surprised to find support from her longtime nemesis, Korean American Gus Choi, and discovers a passion for baking as another means of connecting with memories of her father, who had a sweet tooth. Freya's internal struggle between pursuing the viola and her new interests may resonate with young readers who find themselves venturing beyond the perceived scope of parental expectations. Combining a dash of wholesome middle school romance, a generous helping of familial support, and a sprinkling of self-made luck, Shen serves up a realistic portrayal of the many ways that grief and healing can take shape in our lives. A hopeful and uplifting tale of loss, self-discovery, and the restorative powers of baking. (author's note, recipes) (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Thirteen-year-old Chinese American seventh grader Freya June Sun plays the viola in memory of her father, who died suddenly eight months ago. Having bonded with him over Chinese superstitions, Freya looks for signs--such as the two red birds she's constantly seeing--whenever she doubts her desire or ability to continue playing. After being partnered with Korean American schoolmate Gus Choi, whom Freya dubs "the most annoying kid on the planet," for a Cooking & Careers class project, Freya discovers an unexplored comfort in baking and, as she grows closer to Gus, makes a new and compassionate friend. As quiet and sensitive Freya struggles to manage increasingly frequent anxiety attacks, she also gains a deeper understanding of her newly single mother and finds an unlikely supporter and trusted confidant in her older sister. With endearing narration and quick pacing, this gentle meditation on grief and healing by Shen (The Comeback) carefully balances heavier moments of fraught emotion and high-stress situations with Freya's sweet memories of her father and her growing appreciation for her new life without him. Includes recipes. Ages 10-14. Agent: Marietta Zacker, Gallt & Zacker Literary. (Jan.) Copyright 2023 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

#2329215 Nightmare House (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sarah Elisabeth Allen

Penny Hope used to be brave, but that was before she met the Fear Maker when she was a little girl. Years later, he still haunts her nightmares--a tall, thin man with red eyes, in a haunted house in the woods, who devours human souls and leaves their eyes hollow and empty. Penny's beloved grandma tells her to write down these nightmares as poems in her notebook. But then Penny starts seeing blank-eyed people in the waking world, too. She's the only one who notices.

978-0-374-39095-2 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 750

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist After the night the Fear Maker found Penny, she was never the same. She grew afraid of the world and shy around those in it. And, of course, it's when the nightmares began. Four years later, the 11-year-old's dreams are getting worse, leeching into the real world as the Fear Maker's power grows. A creeping dread permeates the pages as Penny realizes she must face this monster down in his own territory, a tangled wood where his rickety house feeds on stolen souls. Poetry, sunflower seeds, and a new friend become Penny's unlikely weapons in this endeavor, but they are exactly what is needed. Her poems weave their way through the narrative, fortifying Allen's own lyrical writing and adding to the overall message that strength can be found in words and creativity. Family also plays an important role, especially Penny's close relationship with her grandmother, a published poet. Fans of Jonathan Auxier's The Night Gardener (2014) will find the Fear Maker alluring but may suffer some nightmares of their own after following Penny to his door. Allen deals in both beauty and terror, rendering this a sophisticated choice for horror readers.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Penny was a different girl years ago, before she encountered the Fear Maker, a red-eyed man with monstrous intent. She is now a haunted eleven-year-old, writing down her awful nightmares as poems and hoping that someone, anyone, else will help the increasing numbers of hollow-eyed people appearing around her. Unfortunately, it comes down to Penny (along her bold, loyal new friend Aarush and a mysterious gardener with some pointed advice) to stop the oily, charismatic horror that is the Fear Maker, who has moved beyond her dreams into her waking life and is now threatening the world, one soul at a time. Penny desperately needs a friend, and Aarush is an undeniable support in her life, but the crux of this novel lies in Penny and the Fear Maker. The two are inextricably tied to one another, linked through years of nightmares and now both occupying a space that can only hold one of them. The first-person narration sparks sympathy--this is a girl tormented by fear who is, even with magic seeds and a notebook of poems, woefully unprepared to face a soul devourer on her own. Her eventual determined pursuit of the Fear Maker in his own domain is all the more powerful because readers will see how hard-won that determination is, and it may inspire them to peek beyond their own fears, seeing if those boundaries can be pushed just a bit as well. AS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An anxious 11-year-old girl must save her loved ones from the soul-stealing Fear Maker. One Halloween four years ago, Penny Hope left candy as an offering for the monster under her bed. She receives a gift in return, but it's only after she accepts it that she realizes it's cursed, plaguing her with recurring nightmares. In the daylight, Penny sees that everyone around her has blank, hollow eyes. She learns that the giver of the cursed gift, responsible for both her constant bad dreams and the vacant-eyed people, is the Fear Maker--and his power is quickly growing. Armed with her love of poetry and with new friend Aarush Banerjee by her side, can Penny conquer the Fear Maker before he reaps the souls of everyone around her? For much of Allen's spine chiller, Penny's struggles are internalized; her fear keeps her from reaching out to those around her. Slowly, she tells those she trusts most, and the narrative takes a turn, moving the needle to genuine scares as Penny and Aarush battle the Fear Maker at his terrifying haunted house. The horror aspects are immersive, but murky characterization and thin worldbuilding leave this novel feeling disjointed and faltering under its own weight. Prose and verse, including a variety of different poetic forms, are interestingly juxtaposed in short chapters. Penny reads White; Aarush is cued South Asian. An ambitious premise that never quite coalesces. (Horror. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly White-cued 11-year-old Penny Hope's anxiety manifests as a real-life monster under her bed in this ethereal novel by Allen (Breathing Underwater). For the past four years, Penny's anxieties have been heightened by the presence of the Fear Maker, a creature of "nightmare and shadow" who lives beneath her bed. But now the Fear Maker, having become a corporeal entity, is stealing the "soul, their them-ness" of the people in her town. Only Penny can see her soulless neighbors' "blank, colorless, empty eyes," resulting in intense feelings of isolation. When her supportive poet grandmother encourages her to write about her fears and introduces her to homeschooled Indian-cued peer Aarush Banerjee, Penny feels as if she's found a bright spot. As the Fear Maker's power intensifies, however, Penny learns that to destroy him, she must "pick one thing you're afraid of, and do it." She resolves to face her fears by joining Aarush in a poetry contest, hoping to find the right words to overcome her anxieties. Poetic prose and visceral emotion infuse realistic depth into this mood-driven, allegorical portrayal of mental illness. Stark b&w illustrations by Hewitt employ a photo negative effect to accentuate Penny's brooding poems. Ages 10: 12. Agent: Rena Rossner, Deborah Harris Agency. (Aug.)

#2329072 I'll Tell You No Lies (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Amanda McCrina

July 1955. Eighteen-year-old Shelby Blaine and her father, an Air Force intelligence officer, have just been wrenched away from their old life in West Germany to New York's Griffiss Air Force Base, where he has been summoned to lead the interrogation of an escaped Russian pilot. Still in shock from the car accident that killed her mother barely a month earlier, Shelby struggles as much with her grief and the emotional gulf between her and her father as having to start over in a new home.

978-0-374-39099-0 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 9-12 Eighteen-year-old Shelby Blaine finds herself at Griffiss Air Force Base in Rome, New York, when her father, Col. Robert Blaine, an Air Force intelligence officer, is transferred there from their home in Germany to interrogate a Russian defector. Although bitter and angry at the timing, Shelby has no choice but to attend a party in honor of the defector, whose name is Maksym. The two meet cute, but Shelby is not prepared when Maksym subsequently flees his interrogators and she finds him, injured, hiding in her house. She has two choices: she can turn him in or help him. Of course, she chooses the latter and--hold on to your hairnets--nonstop action ensues with enough red herrings to feed an army (or at least a battalion) for it seems that no one is who they seem to be and lies abound. The ingenious McCrina (The Silent Unseen, 2022) ensures that readers will have a field day with this well-plotted, engaging thriller, and that's no lie. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An American teenager becomes entangled in a web of lies with a Soviet defector during the Cold War. The year is 1955, and Shelby Blaine is grieving the death of her mother three weeks prior when her life is turned upside down again. Col. Blaine, Shelby's father, is in Air Force intelligence, and he's been given a special assignment that takes them from their military base in Germany to upstate New York, where his expertise is required to debrief a Soviet defector. Eighteen-year-old Shelby makes the acquaintance of the defector, a young Ukrainian pilot named Maksym Kostyshyn, at a welcoming party, but the next day she learns that he has escaped without a trace after the military found a hole in his story. When Maksym makes contact with her, Shelby has to decide whether to turn him in under suspicion that he is in fact a KGB operative or to believe him when he insists that he is telling the truth. What follows is a fast-paced, twisty story that keeps readers on their toes. Along with Shelby, they will be unsure who to believe and who can be trusted. This spy thriller is peppered with rich period details. Shelby's character feels like an authentic portrayal of an intelligent, college-bound teenager of the time, lending the book the realistic air of the past come to vivid life. A fascinating dive into a segment of history that reverberates today. (author's note) (Historical thriller. 13-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An encounter with a Soviet defector thrusts an American teenager into a political investigation in this tensely wrought Cold War historical novel set in 1955. After an automobile accident kills her mother, 18-year-old Shelby Blaine's intelligence officer father, Colonel Blaine, moves the two of them from Germany to Upstate New York's Griffiss Air Force Base, where he has been assigned to debrief a Soviet defector. When, at an official dinner, Shelby meets said defector; 21-year-old Ukrainian pilot Maksym Kostyshyn; she immediately falls for his alluring, enigmatic personality. The next day, she discovers that Maksym has disappeared after coming under suspicion as a potential KGB spy. He soon shows up in Shelby's home, insisting that the FBI have made a mistake and begging her not to turn him in. As Shelby learns more about Maksym's past, including the time he spent as a prisoner in Auschwitz, she resolves to help him, despite the considerable risks. Via tight prose, McCrina (The Silent Unseen) effectively sketches a high-stakes spy thriller that features period-relevant intrigue and simmering romance. All characters cue as white. Back matter includes an author's note. Ages 12: up. Agent: Jennie Kendrick, Red Fox Literary. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7 Up--When 18-year-old Shelby Blaine gets relocated with her father to a new Air Force base, she is not expecting to find a wounded Soviet pilot hiding in their new house. Maksim insists he is a defector seeking refuge in the United States. What should Shelby do, when FBI and CIA agents arrive, looking for a KGB spy? When she confronts Maksim, the truth about his past becomes even murkier. Is the young man a defector or an enemy agent? Is he Ukrainian or Russian? What was he doing during WWII? McCrina develops an exciting, engrossing plot--as an unknown Soviet mole and known American operatives close in, Shelby and Maksim must choose what secrets to share, whether to trust one another, and how to save each other. The novel is sensitive to the complicated psychology and layered identities of the central and peripheral characters: Maksim is no more complicated than his CIA handler, a Jewish-German immigrant who adopts the bland surname "Jones." McCrina also has an eye for details that make the 1950s historical setting immersive, whether naming a brand of lipstick, describing summer in upstate New York, or pointing to a specific, Ukrainian neighborhood in Toronto. As to the romance: is a strapping young man likely to be up for some smooches while suffering from a broken ankle and ethylene glycol poisoning? Probably not? Will readers be cheering on Shelby and Maksim? Absolutely! VERDICT Thrilling, historically accurate, and morally complex, this title is sure to please readers of Elizabeth Wein.--Katherine Magyarody Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2207608 Of a Feather (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Dayna Lorentz

Great horned owl Rufus is eight months old and still can't hunt. When his mother is hit by a car, he discovers just how dangerous the forest can be. Reenie has given up on adults and learned how to care for herself--a good thing, since she's sent to live with an aunt she's never met. Yet this aunt has a wonderful secret: she's a falconer who agrees to help Reenie catch an injured passage hawk in the wild and rehabilitate it.
 978-0-358-28353-9 Clarion Books ©2021 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 336 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 After Maureen's mom is once again admitted to the hospital for mental-health reasons, Reenie is left in the care of a relative she's never met, her great-aunt Beatrice. Reenie, though resilient, is exhausted and skeptical of the prospect, but Beatrice has a marvelous secret: she's an experienced falconer, and her red-tailed hawk ("not a pet . . . a partner") lives in the mews out back. Throwing herself into the world of falconry, Reenie discovers another young creature without a mother or real home: Rufus, the self-proclaimed "absolute worst great horned owl ever," injured, alone, and hopelessly trapped in a snare. Together, the unlikely pair begin to heal and hope, navigating unfamiliar worlds and learning to trust. Rufus and Reenie split narration duties from chapter to chapter, and it's often funny; Rufus has a delightfully distinct voice and a bewildered way of sorting out human behavior. A tender tale that reminds readers that families come in all forms and that the greatest rewards come from opening oneself to all that life has to offer. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

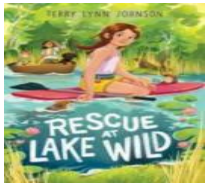

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books After her mother is hospitalized and her grandmother's house turns violent, sixth-grader Reenie moves in with her great-aunt Beatrice, whom Reenie has never met. While Reenie is slow to warm up to the situation, she's captivated to learn that Beatrice is a falconer; she quickly falls in love with the sport and the red-tailed hawk Beatrice has trained. Meanwhile, a young owl in the nearby wilderness struggles to learn how to hunt for himself; when he's injured, chance brings him and Reenie together, and the girl tenderly cares for the wounded bird she names Rufus. This is a classic fish-out-of-water tale, with a hefty helping of lost-parent story. Reenie is all sharp edges and no trust, certain that making friends or letting her guard down would be dangerous to her well-being. Rufus (who calls himself Second) is all uncertainty and self-deprecation, certain he is "The Absolute Worst Great Horned Owl Ever," but his confidence builds under Reenie's care. As narration alternates between Reenie and Rufus, it's clear that Lorentz is mirroring their stories of missing moms and personal growth. However, the voices are too similar, and while Rufus's innate haughtiness and judgment of the Furless Creatures' inability to understand Owl-ish provide some humor, his chapters interrupt what is otherwise a compelling narrative of coping, loss, and learning to trust. Still, for readers interested in hunting, falconry, or birds of prey, there's a lot of instruction packed into this title, with end matter including a glossary of falconry and birding terms and a Q&A based on Lorentz's conversations with experts. KP

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A relationship between a young owl and a young girl helps them both confront their fears. Reenie is taken away from her grandmother's house by social services after a fight between her grandmother and her grandmother's boyfriend endangers her. Reenie has been through this before--when her mother's depression is bad enough, she has to be hospitalized, leaving Reenie at the mercy of social services. This time she is delivered to Beatrice, a great-aunt she has never met. Beatrice turns out to be a master falconer, and Reenie, despite her overall mistrust of adults, is intrigued. When a young, undernourished owl ends up in a hawk trap by mistake, Reenie convinces Beatrice to bring the owl, whom she names Rufus, back to the house. The story is narrated in alternating first-person chapters from the points of view of Rufus and Reenie, with both protagonists having distinctive, plausible voices. Even before he is caught in the trap, Rufus suffers from a debilitating lack of confidence, being second-hatched and therefore smaller and weaker, which he overcompensates for by (often amusing) deliberations and conjectures. Reenie's distrust of emotional closeness is deftly played with well-reasoned plot developments. Set in Vermont, the story is fleshed out by thought-provoking forays into the ethics of hunting and the powerlessness of children in determining their home lives. Reenie is in the sixth grade and reads as White. Unusual and poignant--full of the depth and contradictions of life. (author's note, bird facts, glossary) (Fiction. 8-11)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #222535 Occasionally Happy Family (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Cliff Burke There are zero reasons for Theo Ripley to look forward to his family vacation. Not only are he, sister Laura, and nature-obsessed Dad going to Big Bend, the least popular National Park, but once there, the family will be camping. And Theo is an indoor animal. It doesn't help that this will be the first vacation they're taking since Mom passed away. 978-0-358-32567-3 Clarion Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 224 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 7.0	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Nothing sounds exciting about this first family vacation since Mom died. And they can't even bring the cat. Thirteen-year-old Theo Ripley feels powerless about this trip and steels himself for the eight-hour drive. Deftly capturing the childhood torture of family road trips, Burke nails the hilarious dialogue between Theo; his 16-year-old sister, Laura; and their science teacher dad. They are headed to Texas' Big Bend National Park in the middle of July--to camp. Theo prefers to appreciate nature from indoors. He also prefers drawing to dialogue and stares aimlessly out the window as Dad and Laura argue endlessly. Once at the barren and boulder-filled park, the family bounces from one disastrous mishap to the next, encountering a riotous cast of eye-opening characters who surprisingly unite them. Each short chapter provides a glimpse of the humor and pain caused by the lack of communication and unaddressed grief that burdens each family member. When a surprise visitor joins their vacation, the bottled-up grief spills over. With memorable characters and voices, realistic emotions, and an extra helping of humor, this title rocks. The Ripley family reads as White; names cue some diversity in the supporting cast. A masterful look at loss and mourning wrapped up in a hilariously painful family vacation. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--Theo is glad that it is his summer vacation. He thinks about all the fun he will have with his friends, playing video games or going to robotics camp. However, those plans are not in the cards for Theo. He has been roped into going with his dad and older sister to Big Bend National Park, the least popular of all the national parks. While this is a little better than the family's usual vacation of visiting their grandmother, it's still a lot of hiking in the woods with bugs and high temperatures. Theo's dad, a typical high school science teacher, loves nature and is a bit too eager for the trip--he has also not planned all that well. Luckily, Laura excels at planning and has brought better snacks, found more amusing activities, and has even upgraded their overnight stays. Since their mother's death from cancer a few years ago, Laura's taken on the role of family organizer. Theo isn't thrilled about the idea of the long drive with limited electronics time, or doing any of that outdoor camping stuff, but those things end up being the least of his worries. Theo goes from one unpleasant situation to another (including sweltering heat, his dad's new hiker "friends," and a close encounter with wildlife) until he finally discovers that his dad's big secret is a woman he's been seeing and he wants them to meet. This is a good, realistic, and a funny book about a family in transition. There are plenty of funny moments, and the scenes with Lucrecia hit just the right note. VERDICT Sure to be a popular title, especially with fans of humor, road trip adventures, and James Patterson's books.--Amy Caldera, Dripping Springs M.S., TX Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2220449 Rescue at Lake Wild (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Terry Lynn Johnson Everyone knows that twelve-year-old Madison "Madi" Lewis is not allowed to bring home any more animals. After she's saved hairless mice, two birds, a rabbit, and a stray tom cat that ended up destroying the front porch, Madi's parents decide that if they find one more stray animal in the house, she won't be allowed to meet Jane Goodall at an upcoming gala event. 978-0-358-33485-9 Clarion Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 4.0	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When someone shoots beavers whose dam has caused a flood in the Canadian small town of Willow Grove, Madi, Jack, and Aaron rescue kits, find the culprit, and figure out how to keep the beavers from attracting further violence. This middle-grade wildlife mystery makes explicit homage to the work of Jane Goodall, whom Madi, who introduces herself as an "animal whisperer" like her late grandmother, is dying to meet. But after a gripping opening during which Madi swims underwater and up into a beaver lodge to rescue two orphaned kits, readers learn she has a choice: She can see Goodall in person at an upcoming gala or she can bring home the two kits, though her parents have forbidden her rescuing any more wildlife. She chooses to bring the kits home anyway. The rest of her first-person, present-tense narrative balances the difficulties of hiding and nurturing beaver kits with the work she and her friends--all 12 years old--do to solve the mystery and the town's beaver problem. Johnson sets this firmly in the present day; they use iPods, smartphones, and ATVs. There's helpful information about animal rescue, but she makes clear that the process isn't easy. A professional wildlife rehabilitator praises Madi's work but adds that ordinary people keeping wildlife "usually does more harm...than good." The cover illustration suggests that Madi and Aaron are White while Jack, who hopes to be a game warden, has brown skin and long, straight black hair. An appealing and informative wildlife adventure. (author's note, wildlife tips) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Twelve-year-old Madi Lewis has a big problem. If she brings home one more stray animal, she won't be allowed to see her idol Jane Goodall at an upcoming gala in her honor. But when Madi discovers two orphaned beaver kits, she can't help rescuing them. Madi stashes them in a shed that only she visits until she can find a way to get them to a rehabilitation center. Madi gets her animal-whispering ability from her Nana, who used to be the only animal rehabilitator in the area. Since her death, no one has replaced her. When adult beavers start turning up dead, Madi and her best friends have a mystery to solve. Just who is trying to reduce the beaver population, and why? Can Madi find out why beavers are suddenly being hunted down, and can she do it before her parents discover the hidden kits? Animal-loving and eco-friendly readers will appreciate this story that involves both informative discussions about ecosystems and a mystery involving beaver poaching. Adventurous boat excursions and perilous ATV rides keep the action going strong. An instructive piece after the novel offers advice on how to handle a real wildlife encounter. Madi is cued as white. VERDICT Madi is a free-spirited, admirable heroine, and readers will delight in her adventures and her quirky friendships. An enjoyable addition to animal and nature stories.—Carol Connor, Cincinnati P.S., OH

#2226959 Even and Odd (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sarah Beth Durst

Even and Odd are sisters who share magic. Lately, though, it seems like that's the only thing they have in common. Odd doesn't like magic, and Even practices it every chance she gets, dreaming of the day she'll be ready to be a hero.

978-0-358-35038-5 Clarion Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Twelve-year-old Emma Berry, known as Even, and her 11-year-old sister Olivia, called Odd, share a knack for wielding magic, but the power alternates between them daily, frustrating both Even, who dreams of becoming a fully accredited hero of magical realm Firoth (whence the family originates), and Odd, who prefers all things mundane. When the portal between Stony Haven, Conn., and Firoth malfunctions, leaving Even stuck in the form of a skunk, the sisters investigate. Stranded on the magical side with a young unicorn, they discover that border magic has gone haywire, causing upheaval. Now they must find a way to fix the magic and reopen the portals. Juxtaposing the sisters' real world with a whimsical one populated by unicorns, dragons, mermaids, and more, Durst (Catalyst) inserts a subtle message about the separation of families through closed borders. Even's drive to excel in the magical field is countered by Odd's practicality, balancing their varying personalities and separate goals. A straightforwardly told, feel-good portal fantasy. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Andrea Somberg, Harvey Klinger. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–5—Sisters Emma and Olivia may live in the most ordinary town in Connecticut, Stony Haven, but the town sits on the border between the mundane and magical worlds. Although they are the children of magical parents, the sisters must share their magical ability; each girl is able to work magic on alternating days, hence their nicknames Even and Odd. Twelve-year-old Even fully embraces her magical heritage, but Odd, one year younger, is a more reluctant spellcaster. One day Even is practicing transformation, turning herself into a skunk, when she becomes stuck, unable to revert. The sisters discover magic is malfunctioning, causing the gateway between Stony Haven and Firoth, the magic world, to fade in and out. Investigating the phenomenon, Odd, Even, and their new friend Jeremy the Unicorn become trapped in Firoth, a community now in chaos due to diminishing magic. When the trio uncover the individual responsible for siphoning off the magic, they work together to rescue Firoth and find their way home. This novel highlights the tension between the sisters over the use of magic and the eventual resolution of conflict. During their time in Firoth, Even and Odd learn of their parents' past, and Even faces a decision that could change her life. In a world populated by unicorns, elves, fairies, and goblins, the sisters' ethnicity is not defined beyond human. VERDICT A cozy mystery for unicorn and magic lovers. Firoth and its denizens will delight fantasy fans, and the light suspense peppered with humor is sure to keep young readers engrossed until the happy ending. Purchase where easy fantasy is in demand.—Nancy Nadig, Penn Manor Sch. Dist., Lancaster, PA

#2280933 Shelterlings (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sarah Beth Durst

Holly, a grey squirrel, and her animal friends have accepted that they will never be wizards' familiars. Though they are each magical, their powers are so offbeat-Holly herself can conjure pastries (and only pastries)-that no professional magic-worker would choose any of them as a companion for noble quests. So instead of going on adventures, they languish at the Shelter for Rejected Familiars, where they are known as "shelterlings."

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

978-0-358-35039-2 Clarion Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Hoping to enhance her magical powers, a clever squirrel embarks on a journey of self-discovery. Holly lives at the Shelter for Rejected Familiars with other disappointed animals. All shelterlings once hoped to become wizards' familiars, but when their magical powers were deemed too insignificant to be of use, they were sent instead to the shelter, a pleasant enough place but one none of them wanted to end up in. Holly's supposedly useless magic is an ability to conjure pastries; her barn owl pal, Gus, can transform himself into a granite statue; and a lemur named Periwinkle finds lost things. When beaver Charlie, a former shelter resident, suddenly returns seeking help in locating seven magical ingredients critical to recasting a spell to cure the shelterlings' defective magic, Holly volunteers. Despite her misgivings, she longs for adventure and surprises herself by negotiating with a greedy dragon to retrieve a magical flower, convincing a hungry orca to recover a magical pearl, and coaching Periwinkle to find a piece of fallen star. When Holly discovers Charlie intends to betray the shelterlings by transferring their magical powers to himself, she must stop him. In an action-packed finale, Holly and the shelterlings rely on one another and discover their unusual magic may not be useless after all. The bevy of animal characters with their peculiar personalities and special powers provide humor and variety. An amusing, fast-paced fantasy with an impressive rodent hero. (Animal fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2158221 Golden Arm (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Carl Deuker

Laz Lazarus "Laz" Weathers finds baseball helps him escape from the world of poverty and drugs. When he gets an opportunity to pitch for the rich kids across town, he has a chance to get drafted by the major leagues. But playing for the other team means leaving behind his family, including Antonio Laz's younger brother. Now Laz will have to choose between being the star pitcher he always dreamed of becoming and the team player his family needs.

978-0-358-01242-9 Clarion Books ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 690

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 7-11 Starred Review Nineteen-year-old Lazarus (Laz) Weathers and his half brother, Antonio, live with their mother in Jet City, a dilapidated trailer park in Seattle. When the boys' high school scraps its baseball program, the former coach convinces a few guys to play in the summer, among them Laz. The ragtag team goes up against other high schools in the area, and Laz's incredible pitching catches the attention of Mr. Thurman, the father of a star player at affluent Laurelhurst High. Mr. Thurman offers Laz a room in their house so that he can attend Laurelhurst, play baseball, and help his son's team win the state title (the main reason for his generosity). Itching to get out of Jet City, Laz knows this could be his chance at a better future and accepts. Just as everything seems to be going his way, including catching the eye of some major league scouts, Antonio gets into trouble, forcing Laz to weigh the value of family against getting an offer from the pros. With short, fast-paced chapters, Deuker's realistic novel pits poverty, friendship, teamwork, self-reliance, and supportive adults against wealth, privilege, overambition, and overbearing helicopter parents. Even readers who don't like baseball will be riveted to this human-interest, underdog story. Readers who still love Matt Christopher's and John Feinstein's books won't want to put this down. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Laz Weathers knows that a pitching career is a long shot, but if he can just catch the eye of a scout in his upcoming senior year, his talent and determination could get him there. Then a perfect storm of bad luck hits at once: his public school team is disbanded; the trailer park where he lives with his single mom and stepbrother, Antonio, is sold; his part-time job is scheduled to end; Antonio is hanging out with a small time drug dealer; and Antonio's father has moved into their trailer. However, there's also Mr. Thurman, a booster for upscale Laurelhurst, who has watched Laz strike out his very talented son, and he knows that Laz could help the Laurelhurst team finally win State, a goal that has eluded them for years. Deuker serves up a groaning smorgasbord of tropes, but rather than allowing Laz to wallow in challenges, he picks them off one by one. Stepfather Curtis turns out to be a good guy; the Thurmans invite Laz to move in with them for the season and prove to be a fair-minded family; the trailer park closure forces the Weathers family into a better apartment; Laz gets good tutoring, a better education, and scout exposure at Laurelhurst; even baseball divo Ian Thurman, initially a brat, ultimately has Laz's back. That narrows the field to Antonio, the painful pressure that Laz can't relieve and can't ignore, who becomes the critical threat to Laz's success, and readers will be plenty worried about Laz's future. This doesn't end miraculously, or even fairly, but it does end hopefully, leaving readers to cheer for Laz's next longshot chance. EB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A high school baseball player fights for his dream of pitching in the major leagues. Lazarus "Laz" Weathers--so named because he almost died while being born--is a pitcher living in Jet City, a trailer park in Seattle. With a speech impediment and a learning disability, Laz believes that baseball might be the only path available to him after high school. His half brother, Antonio, is 18 months younger and also likes baseball--but lately, Antonio has been hanging out with Garrett, a small-time drug dealer, which worries Laz. After the baseball program closes at North Central High, it's announced that Jet City will be demolished by developers, and his mother decides to move out of the city. Laz receives the opportunity of a lifetime: transfer to Laurelhurst High, which has the city's top team, and live with the family of their star player. Knowing he'll get better training and more exposure to college scouts in Seattle, Laz must decide whether to leave his family and chase after his dream. Deuker (Gutless, 2016, etc.) weaves an interesting plot dealing with socio-economic inequality and drug use into a cast of varied characters. Unfortunately, the secondary characters at times prove to be more interesting than the protagonist, whose characterization falls flat. With few physical descriptions or cultural markers, ethnicity is difficult to determine. An entertaining visit to the ballpark. (Fiction. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7 Up--As he enters his senior year of high school, Lazarus "Laz" Weathers's life already seems to be heading toward a dead end. Laz stutters, his struggles in school mean college isn't an option, the trailer park where he lives is about to be shut down, and his beloved brother has started hanging out with the local drug dealer. The only bright spot on Laz's horizon is baseball. Laz is a gifted pitcher, but his hopes of getting recruited for the minor leagues are dashed when his high school team forfeits at the beginning of their season. Fortunately, a last-minute chance to pitch for a wealthy school across town gives him one final chance to escape the trailer park and make a life for himself. Acclaimed sportswriter Deuker deftly weaves baseball action into a solid coming-of-age tale, as Laz navigates the class divide when the well-off Thurmans take him in when he switches schools. Pressures from coaches and scouts build, and Laz is forced into a reckoning as he must decide what is truly important to him--his career or his family. VERDICT Short chapters and easy-to-follow writing make this book a strong choice for any school with a collection of sports fiction.--Bobbi Parry, East Baton Rouge Parish School System, LA Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2162217 Catalyst (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sarah Beth Durst

Zoe named the kitten Pipsqueak. Then the kitten grew and grew now she's bigger than a horse and talking as well! Fleeing into the woods to escape. Zoe and her best friend, Harrison, must keep the giant cat hidden as they desperately search for a way to return her to normal size. But why did she grow so large in the first place? And what if trying to change her back leads to even greater danger?

978-0-358-06502-9 Clarion Books ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 4.5 Lexile HL 630

Quantity 1 Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When animal lover Zoe begs her parents to let her keep the tiny kitten she finds just before her 12th birthday, they agree, provided she assumes all responsibility. But after the newly named Pipsqueak starts growing at an exponential rate and reveals her ability to talk and read, Zoe turns to her best friend Harrison and then her estranged aunt Alecia for help, hoping to return Pipsqueak to normal. Now Zoe and Harrison must ride the mountain lion: size (and still growing) Pipsqueak to Alecia's home, several hours away in the mountains of New Hampshire, while avoiding detection. Along the way, they attract other weird talking pets, including a mouse with butterfly wings and a green terrier. Durst (Race the Sands) imbues her tale with humor, thoroughly embracing its unusual premise with a sense of wonder. Though conflict and danger are limited to the interpersonal and familial; Zoe's parents are no-nonsense, while her beloved older brother, Alex, is leaving for college soon; the real emphasis is on friendship and found family, as Zoe's misfit companions bond throughout their journey. While the resolution feels a little too easy, the concept lends itself well to follow-up stories. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Andrea Somberg, Harvey Klinger Literary. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Pipsqueak is a tiny little kitten that Zoe has promised to take care of. Zoe found the kitten out by her family's garage right before her 12th birthday. She has always loved animals and brought home quite a few strays in the past. Zoe takes Pipsqueak in and introduces him to her best friend, Harrison. Zoe's parents reluctantly agree to let Zoe keep Pipsqueak since Zoe's older brother left for college in France. Everything is going great until the kitten begins growing. He gets bigger and bigger until Pipsqueak is no longer a pipsqueak. Knowing that this is not normal, Zoe takes him to the vet, who doesn't see a problem. But as Pipsqueak continues to grow to the size of a horse, Zoe knows she needs to make a plan. She contacts her Aunt Alecia, who lives in the mountains of New Hampshire. Along with Harrison's cousin, Surita, Zoe convinces her parents to let her go away to the summer camp where Surita is a counselor, and she uses this time to travel to her aunt's house instead, via Pipsqueak. When Zoe finds out that there are local reports of a green flying poodle who looks a lot like a dog Zoe saw at the vet, she knows that she has made the right choice. She needs to figure out what is going on and fast. Zoe's family obviously cares for her, and their interactions are amusing. It would have helped, though, to know more about Aunt Alecia before the adventure continues at her house. VERDICT A fast-paced, engaging fantasy novel that cat lovers will adore and fans of the author will read vigorously. A solid purchase for fantasy lovers.—Amy Caldera, Dripping Springs M.S., TX

#2323477 Epic Ellisons: Cosmos Camp (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

written by Lamar Giles

School's out, and Wiki and Leen Ellison are facing a new challenge... their first summer apart! Genius inventor Leen has been accepted to Petey Thunkle's world-famous summer training program for STEM prodigies with their eyes on the stars. But the night before Leen's departure, the twins find out that Wiki has also been accepted into the same camp (even though she didn't apply). Someone (or something) has been tampering with the company's upcoming big-deal rocket launch. Now the sisters are undercover, dealing with hypercompetitive campers by day and trying to stop the mysterious saboteur by night.

978-0-358-42337-9 Versify ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist Stepping out of supporting roles in Giles' Legendary Alston Boys novels, the 12-year-old Ellison twins find themselves at odds and in danger after Wiki, the one with perfect recall and good social skills, is suddenly invited to join her awesomely brilliant but insecure gadgeteer sister, Leen, at a STEM summer camp sponsored by Petey Thunkle, the world's richest technocrat. Even fans accustomed to the author's distinctively screwy premises are in for a wild ride as not only has Thunkle disappeared just weeks before the scheduled launch of his mighty Interstellar-Z rocket but also Wiki is suddenly beset with weirdly conflicting sets of memories. Both situations turn out to be related, and their last-tick resolution is complicated by corporate spies and guilty techno secrets. Despite some friction (they had both been looking forward to a bit of separation), Leen and Wiki make a great team, and watching them in action as they work on their own relationship while simultaneously averting cosmic catastrophe juices up the emotional resonance as well as the action in this epic exploit.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Twelve-year-old African American girls attempt to solve a complicated mystery that also threatens their tight familial bond in this stand-alone novel that reunites readers with characters from Giles' Legendary Alston Boys series. Twins Evangeleen and Victoria Ellison, who go by Leen and Wiki, respectively, have always done everything together. But now, Leen is excited to attend the STEM-focused summer Cosmos Camp on her own, while Wiki is looking forward to doing her own thing and helping with the family farm. Anna Thunkle, wife of the wealthy tech entrepreneur whose company is behind the camp, causes tension between the sisters by offering Wiki a camp scholarship--even though she didn't even apply. Neither girl is happy about this, but their parents are enthusiastic about the opportunity. Shortly after their arrival, Anna asks the sisters to help find her missing husband, Petey. The mission is made more complicated when Wiki's eidetic memory starts glitching and Leen struggles with imposter syndrome after being placed on a team with bullies. The sisters must work collaboratively to try to figure out what is really going on at Camp Cosmos and in Petey's company. This story highlights the valuable impact African American women and girls can have in science and technology. The relationship dynamics between the engaging, likable sisters will resonate with many readers, who will enjoy accompanying them on this adventurous journey. An imaginative, thrilling story exploring family and team dynamics through the lens of invention. (Science fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--This action-packed book combines elements of science fiction, mystery, and social commentary into an exciting, quickly read narrative. The story revolves around African American twin prodigies, 12-year-olds Wiki and Leen, who win scholarships to the prestigious STEM-focused Camp Cosmos located in Virginia Beach. There, they quickly become involved in a stimulating competition where child wunderkinds are challenged to create the best prototype for a futuristic space shuttle. As they embark on this exciting enterprise, they discover the camp's sponsor and amazing entrepreneur Petey Thunkle, whose inventions have shaped the modern world, has disappeared. The twins, armed with their incredible memories, amazing problem-solving skills, and scientific knowledge, join forces with new friends to rescue their generous, but not necessarily ethical, funder. Rich social commentary is woven throughout, addressing issues such as sibling rivalry, bullying, gender disparity, and the unequal distribution of resources and opportunities in society. References to science concepts like time travel, artificial intelligence, the butterfly effect, and space travel encourage future research topics for the curious reader. The book is illustrated throughout with pencil drawings that add details to the narrative. While working well as a standalone, this story could be considered a companion book to the "Legendary Alston Boys Adventures" series and foreshadows a promise of more adventures to come. VERDICT Highlighting the strength of female characters and the possibilities of young minds, this book will find an audience in fans of young science fiction adventure tales.--Lynne Stover Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

#2315257 Global Warning (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Steven B. Frank

For sixth grader Sam Warren and his friends Catalina, Alistair, Jaesang, and Zoe, the effects of climate change are too pressing to ignore. Adults don't seem to be up to the challenge of taking action to make real change, but kids know it's their futures on the line. If their parents, teachers, and government officials won't step up, well, then they will! And these young people will stop at nothing--including outside-the-box high jinks and civil disobedience--to save the planet and their futures on it. But can a bunch of twelve-year-olds really draft an amendment that protects the planet, get it passed by Congress, and change enough hearts and minds across the country to get it ratified before the clock runs out?

978-0-358-56617-5 Clarion Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The intrepid middle schoolers who took a case to the U.S. Supreme Court in Class Action (2018) aim higher. Again challenging credibility but delivering a bracing lesson in motivational civics, Frank unleashes his quartet of seventh grade crusaders--with new allies and legal coaching from a nonagenarian neighbor--on the climate crisis. Motivated by frightening signs of climate change and incidents of heedless pollution, 12-year-old Sam Warren and his friends determine that the quickest way to short-circuit impending catastrophe would be a constitutional amendment guaranteeing the right to a planet free from "pollution and unnatural warming." All they have to do is get a proposal through Congress and then have it ratified by three-quarters of the states. The first turns out to be relatively easy...but the second becomes a nail-biting campaign against a negotiated deadline that tests the ingenuity of the young eco-warriors and finally forces them into a desperate, spectacular, last tick public protest. Along with a reference to the Juliana v. United States climate suit and other real-life examples of youth activism, Frank slips actual figures into the cast, some thinly disguised (West Virginia Gov. Jim Law, a congressperson whose initials happen to be AOC) and others not (like the indomitable Greta Thunberg), and rounds off the buoyant close with an annotated list of constitutional amendments--all 28 of them. Names and other cues point to a racially diverse central cast. Implausible but engagingly suspenseful--and not, tantalizingly, actually impossible. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2362854 Unbeatable Lily Hong (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Diana Ma

A smart, funny, and heartfelt middle grade novel about Lily Hong's attempts to save her parents' Chinese school and the town's community center using all the resources she has--devoted friends, ingenuity, a passion for filmmaking, mediocre dance moves (at best), and perhaps even her archnemesis. If there's one thing Lily Hong can't stand, it's being second best. That's why she and Max Zhang have been bitter rivals ever since he swooped into town as the new kid with the cool clothes and his fancy downtown Chinese school and showed her up in the fifth-grade reading challenge. She had wanted to be the one to win the pizza party for their class. Okay, so that was two years ago . . . her best friends Kelli and Lauren didn't totally get it, but they were on her side. And that's why they agreed to help Lily with her submission for the Clarktown's Got Talent video competition.

978-0-358-61723-5 Clarion Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Lily Hong, a seventh grader who dreams of becoming a filmmaker, turns each school assignment into another episode in her ongoing feud with Max Zhang, her rival for academic honors. In every situation, her loyal friends stand by her, though sometimes wondering if she's taking it all too seriously. When financial woes threaten the rundown community center where Lily's parents run a Chinese school, Lily is expected to help by participating in a Chinese dance performance at the center's fundraising showcase, but rehearsals conflict with the video project she's secretly working on with her friends. Attempting to complete two demanding endeavors at once, she runs the risk of disaster, and the plot takes a few unexpected twists along the way. Lily comes across as headstrong and sometimes unsympathetic, depending on her friends' and family's goodwill while keeping secrets from them. Still, readers who tend to take on more than they can handle may sympathize with her distress when faced with challenging predicaments. Written from Lily's perspective, the first-person narrative moves swiftly toward its feel-good conclusion.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Hui Chinese Muslim tween living in a small town outside Seattle struggles to find balance between family obligations and her passion for film. If Lily Hong isn't making films with her best friends from Clarktown Middle School, Kelli and Lauren, or attending Hong Chinese Academy, her family's business located in the community center, she's competing with her nemesis, Max Zhang. But Lily's project for the upcoming Clarktown's Got Talent video competition is interrupted by the news that the community center is going to be sold to developers--Max's parents. To help raise the $100,000 needed to save the center, Lily's mom plans a traditional Chinese dance show featuring performances by the students of Hong Chinese Academy. Torn between creating her film and participating in the dance, Lily attempts to do both, but when she lies in an effort to appease everyone, she ends up alienating her friends. Eventually Lily cracks from the strain and spills everything to Max, who is surprisingly empathetic, though she later questions her trust in him. Ultimately, Lily must find a way to make amends with her friends and figure out what she really wants to do. Ma touches on friendship issues, racism, gentrification, and balancing family expectations with personal goals. There's a nice balance between the action-packed plot, the serious themes explored, and Lily's comedic antics. Lauren is cued Black; Kelli presents white. A delightfully adventurous romp with a lovably scrappy protagonist. (folktale, author's note) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A Chinese American tween has a dream; and a plan; to save her family business in this humorous middle grade debut by Ma (the Daughters of Dynasty series). Twelve-year-old Lily Hong and classmate Max Zhang are "destined to be archenemies forever." The two have been competing academically since they were in elementary school, and now they're battling in Lily's favorite activity: filmmaking. Lily, along with her best friends, puts her all into getting ready for an upcoming film competition. But when her parents' financial troubles start affecting the Chinese school that they own, Lily endeavors to help save the business by supporting her family's efforts to host a dance performance fundraiser. As Lily struggles to keep her family's financial challenges a secret from her friends, she also juggles taking Chinese dance lessons, completing schoolwork, and preparing for the film competition. She soon discovers that Max is also keeping secrets, and if the two want to accomplish their goals, they'll have to bury the hatchet and partner up. Strong character relationships and meticulously balanced interweaving plots make this a lighthearted tale that emphasizes how friendship; both expected and unexpected; can help save the day. Ages 8: 12. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8--Against all odds, a fiery narrator saves the day in YA writer Ma's debut middle grade novel. Aspiring filmmaker Lily always gets one-upped by her nemesis Max, the only other Chinese student in their small-town middle school outside of Seattle. The competitive heroine is determined to win the annual school district film competition; but her project suffers as she also tries to save the community center where her parents work and she grudgingly attends Chinese school. Lily's distractions pull her away from her loyal friends and closer to Max, who may be helpful in rescuing the center. Lily is a wonderfully flawed and believable character, quick to anger and judge, and funny in her sarcasm. Not all the others are as well developed, such as Lily's parents and other adults, but the book includes a nice array of people of diverse backgrounds. Fans of Buffy the Vampire Slayer and Star Trek will also enjoy the many references and subculture portrayals, as well as those interested in Chinese mythology. There are abrupt scene changes and implausibly happy endings to complex problems, along with some bumpy wording along the way, but nothing to deter enjoying the tale. VERDICT A feel-good story with a simmering romance that will likely lead readers to Ma's YA novels.--Elissa Cooper Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2310931 Windeby Puzzle (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lois Lowry

Estrild is not like the other girls in her village; she wants to be a warrior. Varick, the orphan boy who helps her train in spite of his twisted back, also stands apart. In a world where differences are poorly tolerated, just how much danger are they in?

978-0-358-67250-0 Clarion Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist There are two sides to this book: In one, it shares the true story of an ancient body dug up from a north German peat bog in 1952. In the other, Lowry asks what might be the true tale of the bog discovery, and she imagines two fictional lives in the pondering of that story. In this unusual approach, she outlines the process of both wondering and writing, fleshing out possibilities for what befell the discovered Iron Age teen. Was the person in the bog male or female? Were they murdered or simply an accidental victim? Slowly, a picture emerges of the tough lives of these pre-Christian people, of how growing up within tight cultural confines could position some as outsiders. In the fictional portion, Estrild is a feisty girl who would prefer to be a warrior than do domestic chores. Her friend Varick is a disabled orphan scraping by in a community that ostracizes him. Which of these two unlikely friends was ultimately forgotten in the German swamp? Interspersing their stories with historical facts and info about the real bog discovery, now called Windeby I, and with news of anthropological advances, Lowry creates a mystery appealing to history lovers. HIGH-DEMAND BACKSTORY: Two-time Newbery medalist Lowry is something of a living legend, and the unusual approach of this latest historical fiction should draw interest.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In 1952 the body of an Iron Age child was discovered in a bog in Germany. In this hybrid volume -- part fiction, part nonfiction -- Lowry takes the known archaeological facts of this real-life discovery and crafts them into two different stories. In the first, the child, a girl named Estrild, rebels against the restrictive role of women in her agrarian village and presents herself, with the boys, to be a warrior. She is killed, punished for her boldness. The second story's protagonist is Varick, a boy who had appeared as a supporting character in the first one. Disabled and neglected, he is a keen observer of nature, a thinker, a proto-scientist. He dies of pneumonia. Interspersed with each of these stories is an essay; in these, Lowry casts a wide net, covering the art and science of archaeology, natural history, Iron Age lore, and, most innovatively, her own process in writing historical fiction. In what ways can we connect to the past without imposing our own realities on a time that was so different? How does one's own life conform to the accepted shape of fiction? The stories are tightly woven and moving, built of gritty, convincing detail and written in the cadenced rhythm of which Lowry is a master. But it is in the essays that she tackles, head-on, big questions of mortality and meaning in a way that is most unusual, honest, and deeply respectful of her young audience. Sarah Ellis(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A venerated author interweaves an archaeological mystery--the 1952 discovery in Germany of an adolescent mummified in a peat bog two millennia ago--with the stories it inspired her to write. The book opens by providing scientific and historical context from similar finds elsewhere and explaining how peat bogs preserve bodies and the way radiocarbon dating works. Lowry describes how she felt inspired to create a story for the Windeby Girl, whom she names Estrild, and whose tale follows, told in two linked stories. Estrild persuades Varick, a sickly boy, to teach her warrior skills forbidden to girls. When the druid priests next select the boys who will become warriors, Estrild's determined she will stand with them. A middle section describes how recent scientific discoveries changed theories about the Windeby Girl, leading Lowry to write the second iteration centering Varick. In the final part of the book, Lowry explains how it felt to tell the stories of these young protagonists and why she was compelled to do so. While both stories feature vintage Lowry strengths--strong worldbuilding, compassionate characters--it's the sections explaining her authorial decisions that stand out and will encourage readers to reflect upon how history is told and about whom. This book, her answer to probing questions, beautifully illustrates the interaction between idea and execution, illuminating the architecture of storytelling. Dramatic full-page art by Stroh as well as photographs add intrigue. Valuable metafiction for young readers. (photo credits, bibliography, historical notes, discussion questions) (Fiction/nonfiction hybrid. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly tween conversational history and evocative storytelling, Newbery Medalist Lowry creates a contemplative narrative around an Iron Age bog body found in northern Germany. A factual introduction describes the 1952 discovery of the 2,000-year-old body, Lowry's fascination with the "small-in-stature, middle school: age blond person" called the Windeby Girl, and the author's assembling known facts into a narrative to "solve the puzzle" of the figure's story. The first resultant telling centers 13-year-old Estrild, who longs to become the first female warrior in her Iron Age community and secretly practices warrior chants with her friend, budding naturalist Varick. A subsequent historical section reveals a recently discovered detail about the body, leading to a second fictional reimagining of the story involving Varick. In this brief, evocative work that examines the past through a meta lens, a vividly sketched portrayal emphasizes the community's rigid gender roles and rhythms of daily life amid the natural world. Occasional art by Stroh links the sections with a recurring motif. Includes a bibliography, discussion questions, and b&w photographs. Ages 10: up. Agent: Emily van Beek, Folio Literary. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Nicely preserved, the 2,000-year-old body of a small teen girl was found in a bog in 1952 on Windeby Estate in northern Germany. Master storyteller Lowry wondered why. Estrild becomes the main character in this fusion of history and fiction. Unlike other girls, Estrild desires to become a warrior during a time when women are expected to stay at home, cooking, cleaning, and raising the children. Her dear friend Varick, an orphan boy unwanted by society, is happy to help her train in the warrior ways. The friendship that ensues is carried out to a heartrending ending that provides one interpretation for how a young girl ended up dying and buried in a bog. VERDICT Expertly written and beautifully engaging, readers will be transfixed with actual photographs and more than one explanation of this grim mystery. A first purchase for libraries.--Tracy Cronce Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness In her moving and engrossing The Windeby Puzzle, two-time Newbery medalist Lois Lowry (Number the Stars; Son; The Giver) imagines two possible lives for the Iron Age youth whose body was discovered in a peat bog in 1952.

#2349668 Wand (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Landra Jennings

Eleven-year-old Mira wishes everything could go back to the way it was. Before she changed schools and had to quit gymnastics. Especially before Papa died. Now she spends her days cooking and cleaning for her stepsisters and Val-who she still won't call mom and still won't forgive for the terrible thing she did.

978-0-358-67457-3 Clarion Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

#2368540 Little Bit Super: With Small Powers Come Big Problems (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Gary D. Schmidt

In these hilarious stories by some of the top authors of middle grade fiction today, each young character is coping with a minor superpower-while also discovering their power to change themselves and their community, find their voice, and celebrate what makes them unique.

978-0-358-68342-1 Clarion Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Heavy-hitting, notable writers join forces in a memorable collection of short stories "about middle-school kids who discover in themselves some sort of small superpower." And by "small," the authors took this assignment seriously. These aren't characters who can lift cars or fly, but, rather, consist of an emotionally intuitive time jumper with no control over which host body he'll inhabit, a restaurateur's daughter whose ability to magically discern perfectly ripe avocados saves their bottom line, and even a lonely seventh-grader whose "right arm is now possessed of a . . . demon in the shape of a claw." And there are rodents. So many rodents. In other words, these are not your run-of-the-mill, cape-and-tights-clad superheroes. These are kids with relatable struggles learning to embrace that quirky bit of themselves that makes them unique, and empathetic lessons follow. The book's 13 digestible, independent stories are divided into two sections, the first featuring characters gazing inward toward self-acceptance, and the second with kids harnessing their potential to serve their community's greater good. Numerous award-winning contributors (think Meg Medina, Kyle Lukoff, and coeditor Schmidt) keep delightfully inclusive and accomplished company in this emotionally grounded, compassionate collection that's perfect for sharing alongside Flying Lessons & Other Stories (2017), edited by Ellen Oh, and the authors' individual works. Interstitial art was unavailable for review.

#1974218 Wish (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Barbara O'Connor

Eleven-year-old Charlie Reese has been making the same secret wish every day since fourth grade. She even has a list of all the ways there are to make the wish, such as cutting off the pointed end of a slice of pie and wishing on it as she takes the last bite.

But when she is sent to the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina to live with family she barely knows, it seems unlikely that her wish will ever come true.

978-0-374-30273-3 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 6.0 RC Lvl 5.5 Lexile 850

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Charlie Reese has been sent from the big city, Raleigh, to the little burg, Colby, North Carolina, to stay with Aunt Bertha and Uncle Gus until Mama gets "back on her feet." Despite the warm welcome she is given, Charlie still manages to find plenty to complain about: the other fifth-graders are squirrel-eating hillbillies; her older sister, Jackie, has a better berth with a friend back home; canning jars are stored in her bedroom; Sunday school is boring; and the only kid who wants to be friends, Howard Odom, has a weird limp. It's clear that her daily wishing routine (stars, clovers, ladybugs, you name it) isn't getting her what she wants. Bertha and Gus are relentless in their loving care, though, and Howard is relentless in his quest for friendship, and there's a stray dog in whom Charlie finds a kindred spirit, so even with her bad temper and impulsive tendency to hurt others' feelings, she is destined to come around. O'Connor again finds the sweet spot for young readers who are beyond early chapter books but not quite ready for the cynicism and/or complexity of much tween-into-teen lit. Bertha, Gus, and the Odoms are certainly awash in goodness, but their big-heartedness never devolves into sentimentality. Moreover, Charlie's tribulations are grounded in reality: Dad may get out of jail, but he'll never stay out of trouble; Mom's depression isn't going away. Even the dog is just a dog—a nice dog, a comforting dog, but just a dog. It won't take much guesswork for readers to figure out what Charlie wishes for through every superstitious ritual she can muster; the family she wants so badly is right there in Colby, NC. EB

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Eleven-year-old Charlie is sent to live with heretofore-unknown Aunt Bertha and Uncle Gus in western North Carolina, and she wishes—every day—to go home. The wish doesn't come true, but Charlie has a lot going for her, including neighbor friend Howard and adopted stray dog Wishbone. What in lesser hands could have turned sappy develops here as a slowly evolving character study. (Copyright 2017 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine il and her mother unable to get her feet on the ground, eleven-year-old Charlie is sent away to live with Aunt Bertha and Uncle Gus, two heretofore-unknown relatives living in western North Carolina. Mad as all get-out, Charlie expresses her anger with that old triumvirate of fighting, sassing, and holding pity parties. And she wishes. Every day. The same wish: to go home. But it doesn't come true. Far from abandoned, however, Charlie has a lot going for her. A neighbor boy, Howard Odom, may be the most generous friend a person could wish for, and Gus and Bertha clearly care for her. There's also the dog Wishbone, a stray she adopts who, like Charlie, just needs a home. Still, Charlie is so busy wishing for her old life that she fails to recognize the love and care that surrounds her in this new one. As Howard reminds her: If all our troubles were hung on a line, you'd choose yours and I'd choose mine. What in lesser hands could have turned sappy develops here as a slowly evolving character study. O'Connor has the setting and colloquial mountain speech down pat, but most important, she gets at the heart of Charlie's unhappiness, showing that wishes may come true, but perhaps not in the ways we expect. betty carter (Copyright 2016 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Sent to stay with her aunt and uncle in Colby, North Carolina, an angry girl makes the same wish daily. Charlie's daddys in jail, her mama stays in bed all day, and her older sisters living with a friend. Daily, the almost-11 white girl wishes for her broken family to heal. (The many ways she wishes form something of a catalog of folk and family traditions and are delightful all by themselves.) When the social worker sends her to live with Bertha and Gus, Charlie feels like a loser that nobody wanted and hates living with total strangers in a hillbilly town. Bertha and Gus, on the other hand, seem truly thrilled to have Charlie with them, even when she's rude, sulking, or getting into trouble at school. Charlie doesn't know what to make of affable, white Howard, the class geek, who walks with a limp and befriends her even though she ignores him. With Bertha and Gus, Charlie finds a stable, loving home. With Howard, Charlie finds a steadfast friend who helps her catch a stray dog she names Wishbone. After weeks living with Bertha and Gus, playing with Howard and Wishbone, and slowly fitting into Colby, Charlie learns Mama wants her to come home. But where is home? Speaking in an honest voice revealing her hurt, resentment, and vulnerability, Charlie explains how her wish comes true. A warm, real, and heartfelt tale. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2016) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Eleven-year-old Charlie Reese is heartsick that she's been sent to live with an aunt and uncle she doesn't know in the boondocks of North Carolina, because her dad, Scrappy, is in jail getting "corrected" and her mama can't get up off the couch to care for her. O'Connor (How To Steal a Dog) pens a touching tale of resilience sure to resonate with children who have ever felt like they didn't belong. Charlie feels she doesn't fit in and has built up a tough exterior, which, coupled with a short-tempered fuse, gets her nowhere in her "temporary" home with kind Aunt Bertha and Uncle Gus. Charlie resists becoming friends with Howard, an odd but kindhearted boy with an "up down walk" who comes from a boisterous and loving family, which is far from what Charlie is used to. Every day, Charlie has to find something lucky in order to make a wish, a ritual she's done every day since fourth grade, whether it is a bird singing in the rain, or blowing on an eyelash. Feeling kinship with a stray dog, Charlie is overcome with desire to give "Wishbone" the loving home she, too, is desperately searching for. When Wishbone disappears and she is compelled to search for him, Charlie learns there are people worth holding on to and what you wish for may not be what you really want. VERDICT Poignant and genuine, this is a tale that will resonate with readers long after they finish it and have them cheering for the underdogs-both of the two-legged and four-legged varieties.-Michele Shaw, Quail Run Elementary School, San Ramon, CA Copyright 2016. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Eleven-year-old Charlie Reese has plenty of reasons to make a wish--a father in jail, a mother who can't get out of bed and "getting shipped off to this sorry excuse for a town to live with two people I didn't even know"--but there's just one wish she makes every day. Charlie wishes on the first star at night, three birds on a telephone wire, a camel-shaped cloud, a cricket in the house. But if you tell a wish, it won't come true, so even when she becomes friends with Howard, a "little ole redheaded up-down boy" (one of his legs is shorter than the other, so he walks with a hitch), she keeps her wish a secret as long as she can. Charlie doesn't get off to a terrific start in Colby, N.C. She antagonizes her teacher and fights with her classmates. But with the help of Howard, a stray dog named Wishbone and Aunt Bertha and Uncle Gus (her remarkably tolerant temporary guardians), Charlie begins to learn not only how to tame her temper but to understand that the long-wished-for "family that wasn't broken" may not be the one she was born into. Barbara O'Connor (How to Steal a Dog; The Small Adventure of Popeye and Elvis; The Fantastic Secret of Owen Jester) captures a traumatic transition in a young girl's life without resorting to sentimentality or hard-to-believe happy endings. Charlie's prickly behavior is real, understandable and even charming at times, but readers will cheer as she settles and softens into authentic happiness. COPYRIGHT(2016) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2160054 How to Make Friends with the Sea (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Tanya Guerrero

Twelve-year-old Pablo is homesick Now they are residing in the Philippines, and his mother is charged to care for an orphaned child, Chiqui, who has an unrepaired cleft lip. As he and his mother adjust to having Chiqui in their lives, Pablo must face his ever-increasing anxiety. But as it turns out, in his efforts to help Chiqui, he learns a thing or two from her as well, even finding the courage to confront his lifelong and deep-seated fear of the sea.

978-0-374-31199-5 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 510

Quantity 1 Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Ever since his parents' divorce, Pablo has accompanied his zoologist mother all over the world. While her work to save endangered wildlife is noble, it has prevented Pablo from truly finding a home. Their latest stop is the Philippines, where his mother finds a new, unexpected task—caring for a young girl found in a chicken coop with no family and an unknown past. The presence of this new member of the household forces Pablo to confront several truths about himself: his fractured relationship with his distant father; his feelings for his neighbor, Happy; his phobias about germs, dirt, and large bodies of water; and his connection to the orphan girl who desperately needs someone to trust. Guerrero's heartfelt debut brings to life the colors, textures, and tastes of the Philippines, while also showing a boy's struggles with crippling anxiety. The book evolves in light touches, focusing on Pablo's emotional journey. Presented with care and compassion, Pablo's quest to find courage when another's welfare depends on it will touch and inspire readers.

#2329011 Forty Words for Love (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Aisha Saeed

Moonlight Bay is a magical place-or it was once. After a tragic death mars the town, the pink and lavender waters in the bay turn gray, and the forest that was a refuge for newcomers becomes a scourge to the townspeople. This includes the two teens at the heart of our story: Yasmine and Rafay. Yasmine and Rafay have been friends since Rafay first arrived, nearly ten years ago. The forest elders have long warned that falling in love with "outsiders" will lead to devastating consequences for anyone from Willow Forest. But is this actually true? Can Yasmine and Rafay find a way to be together despite it all?

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

978-0-593-32646-6 Kokila ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.
Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 550

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Eighteen years ago, when a climate crisis forced the Golub people from their home, they were welcomed by the people of idyllic Moonlight Bay. The town has changed dramatically in the last year, though, after tragedies struck and caused the loss of industry and tourism as the bay's famous pink and purple waters receded, leaving only grey ocean behind. Raf blames himself, in no small part due to his uncle, who implies that his feelings for Moonlight Bay local Yas betrayed Golub tradition and caused the tragic events. His guilt is compounded by also feeling responsible for running the diner that supports the community and helping his mom raise his younger brothers. Meanwhile, Yas' family business is struggling without tourism to support them, and Yas herself has lost faith in the charms they make and sell. As the citizens of Moonlight Bay continue to struggle with their collective grief, the mayor hatches a desperate plan to attract wealthy investors, with possibly terrible cost. Saeed's magical realism addresses real-world problems through the comforting layers of fantasy and beautiful prose; despite its fantastical elements, Moonlight Bay maps onto many real-world towns facing a changing economic and environmental landscape, and the growing crisis of climate refugees, like Raf and his family, is also reflected here. While Yas sees her family growing apart as her father takes work in another town, Raf's people face the town's xenophobia and Raf himself copes with the tension between the home and culture he left behind, and the new one he and the Golub people live in now. Saeed beautifully balances these complex concerns and offers up a victorious ending where community action saves the day; even though Moonlight Bay can never go back to what it was, they can still move forward to something new. AT Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Love blooms between two best friends in a magical town grieving a tragic loss. Raf and Yas have been best friends since the former's home was destroyed and his people fled to Moonlight Bay via the enchanted Golub tree in the Willow Forest. Despite warnings from his community elders, Raf decides to confess his romantic feelings to Yas—but he finds her with Moses, the Holler Candy empire heir. The golden leaf-shaped birthmark burns against Raf's wrist, and he runs to the shoreline, where he discovers 5-year-old Sammy Holler dead. Now, a year later, Moonlight Bay is struggling—the Hollers have moved away, the once pink-and-lavender waters have turned dark gray, several local businesses have shut down, and tensions between the locals and the Golubs are rising. Yas, whose parents are struggling to make ends meet, faces the prospect of leaving her hometown. Raf, once excited about college, becomes resigned to staying home to support his family. When the wealthy Naismiths move into the Holler Mansion, the townspeople are desperate to make them stay, but Yas and Raf question what their true intentions are in Moonlight Bay. Saeed takes readers on a gentle exploration of losing faith, finding yourself, and grief's impact on a community. Unfortunately, the slow-burn romance is sluggish, and the secondary characters feel underdeveloped. Readers who don't mind light worldbuilding that allows them to imagine details for themselves may enjoy this lightly magical story. Characters are racially ambiguous. Intriguing but lacking in impact. (Fabulism. 12-17)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two teens navigate grief and first love in this romantic fantasy by Saeed (Omar Rising), set in a magical world. Moonlight Bay local Yas and Raf; who has a leaf-shaped birthmark and is part of the Golub people; have been friends since Raf and his family moved to town as climate refugees when he was young. Determined to confess his feelings for Yas, Raf seeks her out, only to catch her in a seemingly tender moment with Moses Holler, the heir of Moonlight Bay's most influential family. Raf later stumbles upon the corpse of five-year-old Sammy Holler, setting into motion a chain of events with disastrous implications for everyone in town. Moses and his family move away, taking with them the town's economic security, and the ocean, once a soothing pink and lavender, becomes a grimy gray. Thin worldbuilding deflate the intriguingly rendered landscape and a jam-packed plot stymie Yas and Raf's budding, Romeo and Juliet: esque romance. Still, skillful characterizations keep readers invested as Saeed weaves a tale of a grieving town on the brink of financial collapse and the resourceful, minimally described protagonists intent on saving it. Ages 12: up. (Aug.)

#2201381 Karma Moon: Ghost Hunter (Library Binding (Trade))
written by Melissa Savage

Karma Moon is a firm believer in everything "woo-woo," as her dad calls it. So when she asked her trusty Magic Eight Ball if the call asking her dad to create a ghost-hunting docuseries was her dad's big break, it delivered: "No doubt about it." Because the universe never gets it wrong. Only people do.

978-0-593-30280-4 Crown Publishing Group ©2021 6 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Avid researcher Karma Moon Vallinari, 12, is accompanying her cinematographer father on the break of a lifetime: filming a Netflix docuseries focused on the haunted Stanley Hotel in Estes Park, Colo. The catch? The team, which includes Karma, her best friend Mags, and portly pug Alfred Hitchcock, must capture an actual ghost on film to satisfy the production company. Unfortunately, Karma's "what-ifs" (a propensity to catastrophize) and her uncertainty over her mother's abandonment join her on the trip. On-site, the team encounters personalities straight out of a Scooby-Doo caper, such as Nyx Brown, a local boy with a head full of paranormal knowledge, including about Harry Houdini's connection to the area. Karma's voice is front and center as readers are introduced to paranormal film classics such as The Shining, filmed at the Stanley, while being drawn into the world of a girl dealing with things beyond her control. Studded with occasional doodle-like illustrations by Savage (Nessie Quest), the mystery's mix of unshakable friendship, spooky excitement, and life lessons pops with an empowering protagonist who's full of promise. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Laurie McLean, Fuse Literary. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—The call from Netflix comes on a Tuesday, and by the end of the week it's settled: Karma Moon and her dad, along with the rest of the Totally Rad film crew, will be spending spring break at the haunted Stanley Hotel in Colorado. If there's one thing Karma—queen of the anxious what-ifs and believer in all-things paranormal—knows for sure, it's that this trip is a big mistake in the woo-woo department. But with her dad's dreams hanging on finding a ghost and securing a second season, Karma's all-in, no matter what her what-ifs have to say. Set mostly in Colorado at the famous Stanley Hotel, Savage's latest novel is one readers are sure to devour. Karma is fun, quirky, but also real; she's open about her anxieties, as well as her doubt that her mother will return if the Netflix show is a success. Other characters lack her depth, unfortunately, but a snappy, spooky plot makes up for their shortcomings. All characters present as white. VERDICT With a witty, authentic lead and a story line that's just spooky enough to keep readers on the edge of their seats, this is a perfect read for fans of Patti Kim, Ellen Oh, and Neil Gaiman alike.—Kaitlin Frick, Darien Lib., CT

#2252340 Long Road to the Circus (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Betsy Bird

Twelve-year-old Suzy Bowles dreams of life outside the small town of Burr Oak Michigan, but when she stumbles on the opportunity to learn ostrich-riding with the infamous Madame Marantette her obligations to her family on the farm threaten to derail her dreams of a bigger life. Includes photographs and information on Madame Marantette.

978-0-593-30393-1 Alfred A. Knopf ©2021 6 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 810

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist The close-knit Burr Oak community is difficult to escape; almost no one leaves the rural Michigan neighborhood, and those who do leave eventually return, like Suzy's wayward uncle Fred. Twelve-year-old Suzy loves her deeply rooted family and friends, but she secretly dreams of setting off to see the world. After noticing her uncle's frequent absences from their farm and tailing him at sunrise, Suzy is astonished to discover that he's been working for a local circus legend, the extraordinary Madame Marantette—and with her flock of ostriches! Suzy begs to be included, and as her relationship with Madame Marantette deepens, Suzy wonders if her new human (and feathered) friends may be a ticket to a different kind of life. The sunny story seems delightfully far-fetched, but Madame Marantette was a real person (ostrich photos are included), and Bud, her horse trainer, is a fascinating amalgamation of her actual trainer and a successful Black jockey. This unconventional tale is a hoot and an encouraging call to live an adventurous life on one's own terms.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this spirited historical adventure set in 1920, tenacious 12-year-old narrator Suzy Bowles longs for a life beyond her farm in small-town Burr Oak, Mich., and finds purpose under the tutelage of a former circus queen. Using a colloquial first-person narration, Bird (The Great Santa Stakeout) effectively portrays Suzy's longing for a larger life, and her curiosity as she follows her recently returned, purportedly "deadbeat" uncle Fred to his secret job with the nearby Madame Marantette, a former circus performer who is attempting to train her ostrich Gaucho to pull a carriage alongside a horse. Tension and comedy escalate as Suzy volunteers to ride cantankerous Gaucho, and Madame invites Suzy to weekly teas for lessons in comportment. Caldecott Medalist Small's expressive, humorous b&w illustrations infuse the narrative with further personality. All characters cue as white, and an author's note chronicles the life of the actual Madame Marantette who inspired the novel. Ages 10: up. Author's agent: Stephen Barbara, InkWell Management. Illustrator's agent: Holly McGhee, Pippin Properties.(Oct.)

#2330216 Barely Floating (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lilliam Rivera

Natalia de la Cruz Rivera y Santiago, also known as Nat, was swimming

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

neighborhood kids out of their money at the local Boyle Heights pool when her life changed. The L.A. Mermaids performed, emerging out of the water with matching sequined swimsuits, and it was then that synchronized swimming stole her heart. People often underestimate her swimming skills when they see her stomach rolls, but she knows better than to worry about what people think. Sometimes, she feels more like a submarine than a mermaid, but she wonders if she could be both.

978-0-593-32312-0 Kokila ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 590

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Starred Review Nat Santiago knows she can outswim any kid at her local pool, and if they underestimate her because of her age (12) or size (fat), that's their problem. In fact, she's turned a nice profit by regularly betting her opponents that she can beat them in a race. Her focus shifts when the L.A. Mermaids perform their synchronized swimming routine at the pool to promote upcoming team tryouts. Immediately, Nat becomes obsessed with these swimmers' grace, strength, and sequined costumes, and she dives down an Esther Williams rabbit hole, emerging with the conviction that she must join the Mermaids. Unfortunately, her parents don't agree, citing the sport's unhealthy focus on physical appearance. With the help of her older cousin, Nat sneaks to the tryouts, where she makes the team but is saddled with keeping her new hobby a secret. Rivera's layered, sparkling middle-grade debut is Julie Murphy's Dumplin' (2015) by way of Lisa Fipps' Starfish (2021). Nat and her family come across as multifaceted, loving, and flawed. Her outspokenness and (mostly) unwavering self-confidence as a fat, beautiful Latina is a splendid thing to see, and her dip into the world of synchronized swimming is eye-opening. Well-integrated subplots involving a fractured friendship and a character coping with being outed add more depth to an already excellent story. Display this empowering novel with Esther Williams' classic Million Dollar Mermaid. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books "Fat and proud" middle grader Nat is winning swim races for cash at the Roosevelt Pool on summer break when she sees a performance of the synchronized swim team LA Mermaids, who then announce they're hosting tryouts. Nat's parents-community activists who emphasize body positivity-worry synchronized swimming may promote negative ideals around beauty and won't allow her to join. So, Nat decides to join the team in secret, pulling her older cousin Sheila in to help her get to practices; Nat is sure once she attains some synchronized acclaim her parents will come around and see how important this is to her. Rivera brings a freshness to a conventional middle-grade story with flowing prose that effortlessly captures the complicated and often conflicting emotions of being a tween, especially one who has to face microaggressions for being fat, brown, Latina, and not rich. Nat's also got a short fuse, but the story never shames her in a gendered way for her temper, instead presenting a fully realized character who sees the real fallout of her anger in her relationships and begins to work toward channeling it in healthier ways. Nat spends much of the novel comparing her thin, conventionally gorgeous, much-beloved activist mother to other maternal figures in her life, wanting to spend more time with her mom while also pushing against the constraints of her rigid feminism. For all that, the story still depicts what a healthy family dynamic looks like, giving everyone space to be real with loveable qualities as well as believable faults. Hand this book to angry kids, to fat kids who deserve to see someone liking their own body, or really to any kids who are looking for a fun read. ART COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Twelve-year-old first-person narrator Nat (short for Natalia de la Cruz Rivera y Santiago) is all about body positivity and female strength. She feels conflicted, however, when her mother's values around feminism clash with her own love of pretty things -- lipstick, fashion magazines, and especially the spangles on the swimsuits of the L.A. Mermaids, a synchronized swimming group that Nat is desperate to join. She blackmails her older cousin, Sheila, into covering for her and facilitating her participation on the team, but the secrets come between the two cousins and other people they care about. Nat navigates the rough waters of racial bias, fat-shaming, economic class hierarchies, and her own issues with impulse control and anger management, all while she wishes (and doubts) that her parents could be proud of her choices. By building community with her artistic swimming team, whose training Rivera describes in detail, Nat learns that she cannot win every battle, and she reconfigures her concept of what winning means. Although the novel itself occasionally succumbs to Nat's conviction that sometimes "teachable moments have to be forced," ultimately Nat as well as her mother and even ultra-feminine Sheila each grow into a new understanding of what it means to them to be a chingona -- a fearless Latina. Lara K. Aase(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Tough-talking 12-year-old Natalia never backs down from a challenge. Whether it's a fistfight with a boy who is disrespecting her cousin or a swimming race against a much older teen at the city pool, Nat's confidence and tenacity compel her to finish anything she starts, no matter what the odds. Nat's parents, a community activist and a college professor, have instilled a strong sense of justice in her and her three older brothers. When she becomes enchanted with Black-owned synchronized swimming team the L.A. Mermaids, she knows she needs to try out--even if her fat body and Latina heritage aren't the norm for the sport. Her parents veto the idea, citing the dominance in elite synchronized swimming of thin, White girls. In an ill-conceived plan, headstrong Nat decides to join the team anyway and begins learning the sport in secret. Joining the L.A. Mermaids brings her new friends--Daniel, whose race is not specified and who is the sole boy in a female-dominated sport, and Ethiopian American Ayana, who struggles with an overzealous mom. In contrast to these blooming friendships, Nat's connection with her best friend has frayed over the summer, and she isn't sure why. She must tame her temper and learn to own her mistakes to keep her relationships with family and friends afloat. Nat's radical self-acceptance is a beautiful example for readers: Her unapologetic self-love and empathy make her a compelling character. A body-positive story of growing up that's sure to make a splash. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Rivera (We Light Up the Stars) makes a splash with this charming novel about a fat Latinx 12-year-old who dreams of becoming a synchronized swimmer. Natalia De La Cruz Rivera y Santiago knows it's "hard to contain a person like me," a short-tempered hustler who spends her summer days at the public pool challenging other young swimmers to races she knows she'll win. After watching a performance by Black-owned synchronized swimming team the L.A. Mermaids, Nat is spellbound and immediately wants to join the squad, but her hyper-activist mother forbids her from trying out, believing that the sport is anti-feminist because of its focus on costuming and traditionally slender and white beauty standards. Nat secretly joins anyway, making new friends and finding security in her fatness. But clashes with thin, affluent teammates and increasing emotional distance between Nat and her best friend sour her newfound passions. Nat is a confident protagonist whose stalwart self-acceptance makes her a character worth rooting for. In laugh-out-loud, blunt prose, Rivera cultivates a touching and unapologetically positive interpretation of one tween's desire to break the mold. Supporting characters are racially diverse. Ages 9: 12. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Twelve-year-old Nat has never hesitated to speak her mind or to stand up for what she believes in, even if it sometimes gets her in trouble for being angry and confrontational. But when her parents forbid her from joining the L.A. Mermaids, a local synchronized swimming team, she is afraid to try to convince them. Her mother has always actively opposed any activity that is overly focused on physical appearance or traditional female beauty norms. Nat joins the team without telling her family, and although she loves the way synchronized swimming makes her feel, she is soon struggling to pay for equipment, find transportation, and juggle her practice schedule, homework, and time with her best friend. She also has to find ways to deal with people who imply that synchronized swimming should only be for thin white girls, not Latinas with curves like hers. Eventually, her secret is discovered, and Nat has to find a way to explain her feelings to her parents without damaging her relationship with them. The strength of this novel lies in its complex, believable characters. Nat loves and respects her parents, who are presented as encouraging and progressive, but she chafes against her mother's dismissal of fashion and make-up, and sometimes wishes her mother would take time away from her various political causes to be with her. She is extremely confident and self-assured, but still has occasional moments of doubt when faced with comments about her physical appearance. One subplot featuring a cousin who becomes estranged from her mother for being gay, is left unresolved at the end of the book. But it serves as a counterpoint to the complicated yet ultimately strong relationship between Nat and her mother. The novel features a diverse cast of characters from a wide range of backgrounds, and Nat's first-person narrative is sprinkled with Spanish words and phrases. VERDICT This compelling character-driven novel will leave readers wanting to spend more time with Nat and her family. —Ashley Larsen

#2250941 Clarice the Brave (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa McMann

She and her brother, Charles Sebastian, were taught to be careful-as all mice are-but caution is no match for the sea, which took their mother, and it is certainly no match for Special Lady, the horrid cat who ate their sister. Now the siblings hide in their pantry crate, knowing every move they make could be their last.

978-0-593-32337-3 Putnam Pub Group ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 710

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Clarice the mouse lives aboard a sailing vessel with her brother, Charles Sebastian, avoiding humans and felines. After whispers of mutiny spread below deck, mutineers set the captain and his comrades adrift in a small launch, and a panicked Clarice is separated from her brother. She ends up on the tiny boat, along with the captain's fearsome cat, but as the situation worsens, the desperate animals come to a shaky understanding. Meanwhile, Charles Sebastian receives a crash course in survival on the larger vessel, finding an ally in a young girl. Can the separated siblings find a way to reunite? The rodents split storytelling duties, alternating between cozy details of their small vantage points on the terrifyingly vast sea and occasionally misunderstood human world. There is real peril and death on the water, but the delicate cat-mouse and mouse-girl relationships are a joy to watch unfold, and a recurring theme of the power of belief in oneself and others is a cheering antidote to the bleak circumstances. An absorbing adventure from an unexpected perspective.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Delicately balancing hope and despair, McMann (the Unwants Quests series) lovingly brings to life the tale of ship's mouse Clarice and her runt-of-the-litter brother, Charles Sebastian. Life aboard a ship at sea is all that cunning, pragmatic Clarice and intelligent yet impulsive Charles Sebastian have ever known. While they have plenty, dangers abound; including the "three horrid ship cats," one of whom devoured their sister; disease, which killed their other siblings; and unexpected waves, which took their mother, leaving them with only each other. A mutiny, however, sets the siblings on a bleak, wondrous journey of self-discovery, as they search for one another and find salvation in the most unlikely places. Leaning heavily on the theme of loss, the novel normalizes feelings of sadness and grief for younger readers, relayed in an assured tone and elegant prose. Caparo's full-page, fine-lined b&w illustrations emphasize the relationships from varying, carefully sketched angles. Told from the shifting viewpoints of each mouse, the narrative keenly focuses on the obstacles placed in their paths and the growth processes; both the positive and negative; each must follow to find their way to a new normal. Ages 8: up. Agent: Michael Bourret, Dystel, Goderich & Bourret. (Oct.)

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

#2366251 Across So Many Seas (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ruth Behar

In 1492, during the Spanish Inquisition, Benvenida and her family are banished from Spain for being Jewish, and must flee the country or be killed. They journey by foot and by sea, eventually settling in Istanbul. Over four centuries later, in 1923, shortly after the Turkish war of independence, Reina's father disowns her for a small act of disobedience. He ships her away to live with an aunt in Cuba, to be wed in an arranged marriage when she turns fifteen. Though many years and many seas separate these girls, they are united by a love of music and poetry, a desire to belong and to matter, a passion for learning, and their longing for a home where all are welcome. And each is lucky to stand on the shoulders of their courageous ancestors.
978-0-593-32340-3 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 In a novel that profiles four 12-year-old Sephardic Jewish girls (three of them grandmother, mother, and daughter), Behar introduces Sephardic history, culinary culture, music and poetry traditions, and Ladino language. Each girl's story is told in its own section, moving readers from the distant past to more recent times. In 1492, Benvenida and her family flee Toledo, Spain, eventually settling in Turkey. Reina is exiled to Cuba in 1923, where she is betrothed to another Turkish Jew. Alegra flees Castro's Cuba for Miami in 1961. And in 2003, Paloma travels from Miami to Toledo, Spain, where she learns about her history while visiting the Sephardic Museum there. Behar's sprawling saga, based in part on her own family history, captures the poignancy of being expelled from one's home. Ladino poetry appears throughout, and a family heirloom, a stringed instrument known as an oud, connects all the sections. While the final section is fraught with coincidences, the return to Spain brings the story full circle and provides readers with a satisfying conclusion. Generous author notes are appended. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine This welcome historical novel traces a Sephardic Jewish family whose members travel from one country to another with first-person narrators from four generations and spanning centuries. In 1492, Benvenida and her family leave Toledo, Spain, for what is then Constantinople to escape the Spanish Inquisition. In 1923, Reina sneaks out at night and sings for a group of boys against her father's wishes and is sent from Turkey to Cuba for an arranged marriage. In 1961, Alegra teaches literacy as a brigadista but then flees Cuba for Miami with Operation Pedro Pan. And in 2003, Paloma and her family travel back to Toledo and learn what they can about their long-ago family history. The family saga provides glimpses of several moments in world history and gives readers opportunities to spot connections among the generations, sometimes knowing details about the past that the characters can only guess at. (An overly earnest tone in narration and dialogue sometimes detracts from the characters' believability.) A Ladino song and the oud that it is played on add echoes from one section to another. The author's note provides context and personal connections; back matter also includes source notes with accessible explanations. Shoshana Flax(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Four 12-year-old Sephardic Jewish girls in different time periods leave their homelands but carry their religion, culture, language, music, and heritage with them. King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella's expulsion of the Jews from Spain in 1492 sends Benvenida fleeing from Toledo with her family, though she promises to remember where she came from. In 1923, Reina celebrates Turkish independence with her longtime friend and neighbor, a Muslim boy, causing her strict father to disown her and send her to live with an aunt in Cuba as punishment. Reina brings her mother's oud with her and passes it on to Alegra, her daughter, who serves as a brigadista in Castro's literacy campaign before fleeing to the U.S. in 1961. In Miami in 2003, Paloma, Alegra's daughter, who has an Afro-Cuban dad, is excited to travel to Spain with her family to explore their roots. They find a miraculous connection in Toledo. Woven through all four girls' stories is the same Ladino song (included with an English translation); as Paloma says, "I'm connected to those who came before me through the power of the words we speak, the words we write, the words we sing, the words in which we tell our dreams." Behar's diligent research and her personal connection to this history, as described in a moving author's note, shine through this story of generations of girls who use music and language to survive, tell their stories, and connect with past and future. Powerful and resonant. (sources) (Historical fiction. 10-15) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Behar (Lucky Broken Girl) delivers a moving tale about four generations of a Sephardic Jewish family navigating cultural and societal upheaval from 1492 to 2003. When the Spanish Inquisition forces 12-year-old Benvenida and her family to flee from Toledo, Spain, the religious refugees settle in what is now Istanbul. In 1923, an act of defiance sees Benvenida's descendant, 12-year-old Reina, banished by her father from Turkey to Cuba. Subsequent years follow Reina's daughter Alegra who, in 1961, teaches literacy in the Cuban countryside, until political unrest prompt her to emigrate to Miami. And in 2003, Alegra's Afro-Cuban daughter Paloma unravels her ancestors' history during a trip to Spain. Divided into four parts, this enlightening read depicts one family's determination to embrace and preserve her Jewish identity and offers glimpses into the long history of Jews in Spain. Behar crafts each included era with painstaking period detail and lush language, delivering a stunning portrayal of immigration and Jewish culture and religion that expounds upon the importance of remaining true to oneself, explores themes of prejudice and racism, and exposes the harm that bigotry can inflict on both individuals and society. The author includes English translations alongside songs and words in Ladino; concluding source notes add further historical context. Ages 10: up. Agent: Alyssa Eisner Henkin, Birch Path Literary. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Beginning with the Inquisition and the expulsion of Jews from Spain in 1492 and spanning over 500 years, this powerful historical novel by Behar relates the journeys and discoveries of four young girls from different generations of the same family. The stories of Benevida, Reina, Allegra, and Paloma are linked through the Spanish songs that they learn and pass along through an oud, a musical instrument that becomes a precious family heirloom and symbol of hope. Another recurrent connecting theme is travel—each protagonist embarks on a journey, whether fleeing persecution, searching for liberty, or discovering her past and her future. The plot takes readers from Spain to Naples and Turkey to Cuba, Miami, and back to Spain. The simple, resonant, and lyrical narrative transmits the hope and trust that have sustained Sephardic Jewish communities through the generations. Even the names of the title characters speak a blessing. Benevida means welcome; Reina means queen; Allegra means happiness; and Paloma means peace. An author's note explains Behar's connection to this important history. This moving historic tale treats every word used as if it is a fleeting and impossibly beautiful note in a song that can never be forgotten, as it illuminates a people and a past that deserves to be forever remembered. VERDICT This will appeal to fans of Jane Yolen's Briar Rose, and is highly recommended for all collections. —Kelly Kingrey-Edwards

#2260397 Code Name: Serendipity (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Amber Smith

Eleven-year-old Sadie's school year is off to an awful start. But when she comes across a stray dog, she discovers something wonderful and magical--she and the dog, Dewey, are able to communicate telepathically. Dewey is quickly captured and sent to a shelter. The only solution: break Dewey out of doggie jail.

978-0-593-20491-7 Razorbill ©2022 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 770

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Sadie's best friend just moved away, her older brother has developed a mean streak, and Gramps is living in the guest room after some mysterious mishaps. She feels like even more of an outsider at school after being diagnosed with a processing disorder and enrolled in a specialized education plan. A wonderful distraction arrives in the form of a sweet stray dog in her backyard, and miraculously they seem to have a telepathic connection! The pair knows they're meant to be together, but the dog is due to be put down in less than a week. Sadie conspires with her increasingly forgetful grandfather and a former school nemesis to save the magical pup and put her world to rights. Sadie is a wonderfully compassionate and introspective narrator, and her family, including two mothers, is realistically complicated and loving. There's a beautiful emphasis on learning to see the world through different perspectives, and all of the characters are given room to grow. A touching tale of dogged determination and the magic in unexpected connections. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Fifth grade is off to a rough start for Sadie: she's still reeling from a learning disability diagnosis, bestie Jude has moved to Utah, and something's wrong with Gramps, no matter what her moms keep saying. One morning Sadie's feeling especially frustrated but then hears a strange voice calling to her for help, a voice that belongs to an equally lonely pup named Dewey, who's as surprised as Sadie that she can understand her. When Dewey is brought to the shelter where Mom works and labeled a bite risk, the race is on to save her before she's euthanized. At least Gramps believes in Sadie's connection to Dewey, and Macy, a former bully who could use a friend, offers help too. Smith's ambitious middle grade debut runs a gamut of difficult topics, with everything from changing friendships to parental death. However, Sadie's first-person narration, full of asides and frequent focus changes, keeps heavy worries from feeling insurmountable, and Sadie's family is a wholesome, hopeful clan, if a bit chaotic. The slow slip of affable, loving Gramps into anger and confusion is painful for everyone, but especially Mom, who admits to Sadie that she can't make her feel better right now. Fortunately, Mama offers oodles of warmth and comic relief while being the first to lay down boundaries and hard truths. Brother Noah's "butthead" antics are all too real to anyone who has lived with a teenager, and while he takes a turn for the nicer in the third act, the change is cleverly orchestrated and genuine, quietly promising that he'll get on Sadie's nerves again soon. Most readers will know a happy ending is inevitable, but this journey is truly greater than the destination. KP COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A girl's telepathic connection to a stray dog helps her process change. Fifth grader Sadie Mitchell-Rosen is feeling frustrated. Her best friend has moved away, she and her brother can't get along, and her moms are trying to hide her grandfather's worsening dementia from her. She doesn't know how to feel about the new IEP for her processing disorder, which sometimes makes focusing difficult. But everything changes when she discovers an injured dog named Dewey in the woods. They are able to communicate telepathically, and Sadie learns from Dewey that she has one week to be claimed by her owners from the kennel at Sadie's Mom's vet clinic before being euthanized for aggression. Making it her mission to rescue Dewey, Sadie recruits her Gramps, who has just moved in with her family, and a classmate she used to dislike. While there are plenty of bumps along the way, the happy, hopeful ending is satisfying. Sadie's first-person narration balances action and introspection, creating a thoughtful exploration of interpersonal relationships and what it means to do right by others and ourselves. Sadie and Dewey's telepathic connection is never explained or deeply explored, but readers who feel profound bonds with their pets won't be bothered by this. Sadie's family is described by skin tone: Mama reads as White, Mom has dark-brown skin, and Sadie's and her brother's complexions are somewhere in between. A quiet winner for animal lovers and fans of realistic fiction. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old narrator Sadie Mitchell-Rosen lives with her mothers (brown-skinned Mom and cued-white Mama) and 14-year-old brother, Noah (the siblings are "gold and sand": skinned). Recently diagnosed with a processing disorder, "or as my moms always say, a difference," the young artist dreads "the carnival of suckage that fifth grade has become." Sadie has recently drawn the ire of "Mean Machine" Macy, who's of Japanese descent; her best friend has moved away; and her increasingly confused grandfather comes to live with the family for reasons her moms won't share. The one bright spot is a dog, Dewey, whom Sadie encounters in the woods near her home and who communicates telepathically with her. So when Dewey is slated for euthanasia at the shelter where Sadie's veterinarian mother works, the girl becomes intent on saving Dewey's life, and Gramps hatches a plan to hide the animal. Smith (Something Like Gravity) creates three-dimensional characters and a warm family dynamic, sensitively portraying learning differences and a beloved grandparent with dementia, and exploring difficult feelings without offering easy answers. Sadie's struggles with friendship and being taken seriously ring true, as do her sympathetic voice and heartfelt love of dogs. Ages 8: 12. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Turning 11 has meant nothing but trouble for Sadie. School is awful, her best friend has moved away, her older brother has turned into a brat, and now her grandfather, who is fighting dementia, is coming to live with them. If only something good would happen in her life, she might just make it through this terrible year. For Sadie, that something good wanders into her yard one day and she instantly makes a connection. It's a dog, but not just any dog—Sadie swears they can communicate telepathically. The dog is scared and wants nothing more than a good meal and a warm place to sleep. Sadie knows her moms will never allow her to have a dog, not with Gramp's arrival and the changes that are about to come with taking care of him. If only she could tell someone about her ability to communicate with the dog, whom she names Dewey. With the help of a possible new friend and, surprisingly, Gramps, Sadie decides to rescue Dewey anyway and bring her home. But if she's caught, it could be big trouble for everyone. In this heartening tale, readers will meet families with two moms, single parents, as well as extended families. Each shares the bonds of love in unique ways. Characters also confront learning disabilities, mental health issues, and bullying in ways that are uplifting and positive. Sadie finds release in her art and her highly active imagination as well as her deep love for her grandfather. Even her brat of a brother has a heart. Realistic issues are depicted with honesty and reach satisfying conclusions. VERDICT Charming and touching, this novel will find a place with fans of realistic fiction who enjoy a bit of sentimentality.—Carol Connor

#2332472 Only Girl in Town (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ally Condie

For July Fielding, nothing has been the same since that summer before senior year. Once, she had Alex to be her loyal best friend, the one who always had her back. Now, July is alone. Every single person in her small town of Lithia has disappeared. July's only chance at unraveling the mystery of their disappearance is a series of objects, each a reminder of the people she loved most. And a mysterious message: GET TH3M BACK.

978-0-593-32717-3 Dutton ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 590

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Suddenly faced with being the only living soul left in her small town, teen cross-country runner July is determined to get her loved ones back and figure out the meaning—and person—behind the strange messages she's finding in unlikely places. With only her cat for company in the present, July shares her story in alternating time lines of before and after everyone went missing, leading to a surprise ending that brings out themes of loyalty and doing the right thing. With limited characters for July to interact with, the pace is maintained through the driving question of "What happened?" This question applies both to the mysterious disappearances and to July herself, who repeatedly alludes to events in her many relationships, without specifics, until her story draws to a close. A novel that sometimes dips into verse, The Only Girl in Town may appeal to fans of the classic Z for Zachariah and Virginia Bergin's H2O. High-Demand Backstory: Condie is a frequent name on the New York Times best-seller list, and her many fans will be eager for her latest book.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A teenage girl finds herself alone after everyone else in her town mysteriously disappears, leaving her scrambling to figure out how to find them all. One late summer day, everybody in July Fielding's town disappears. She is left to piece together what happened, following a series of cryptic signs she finds around town urging her to "GET THEM BACK." The narrative moves back and forth between July's present and the events of the summer before, when her relationship with her best friend, cross-country team co-captain Sydney, starts to fracture due to a combination of jealousy over July's new relationship with a cute boy called Sam and sweet up-and-coming freshman Ella's threatening to overtake Syd's status as star of the track team. The team members participate in a ritual in which they jump off a cliff into the rocky waters below at the end of their Friday practice runs. Though Ella is reluctant, Syd pressures her to jump. Short, frenetically paced sections move the story along quickly, and there is much foreshadowing pointing to something terrible that occurred at the end of that summer, which may be the key to July's current predicament, but there is much misdirection too. Ultimately this is a story without enough setup to make the turn the book takes in the end feel fully developed or earned. All characters read white. A high-concept premise that falls short in its execution. (Fiction. 14-18)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly One summer day, rising high school senior July Fielding is walking back to her car from an afternoon at Fall Creek when she has the sudden realization that she's all alone; not just in the woods, but in her town as well. Her family isn't at home, no one is answering her texts, and when she tries to leave town, an invisible barrier prevents her from crossing city limits. As July frantically tries to uncover who or what is leaving her mysterious "GET THEM BACK" messages and determine where everyone went, alternating sections titled "Once" and "Now" chart her life before and after her loved ones' disappearances. But as July delves deeper into the current mystery, memories of previous drama begin to unfurl, blurring the line between past and present. Liminal-feeling therapy session interstitials provide glimpses into July's struggles with her mental health. July's raw and sometimes unreliable narration amps up the suspense in this cleverly rendered speculative read by Condie (The Last Voyage of Poe Blythe), who ruminates on issues of anxiety and depression in a way that feels at once fresh and grounded. Characters read as white. Ages 12: up. Agent: Jodi Reamer, Writers House. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 9 Up--From "Matched" trilogy author Condie comes this new novel. The story opens with July Fielding experiencing a nightmarish reality: everyone in town has disappeared. Or have they? She does find her cat, Yolo. Upon visiting her high school, July discovers that someone has written "Get Th3m Back" on the marquee. Readers and July are left with more questions than answers as that phrase appears in other places. As the book continues, July discovers objects referencing locations around town and memories of the summer before her senior year. The plot builds expertly, pulling readers in as they wonder what trauma July experienced and how the story will resolve. Through flashbacks, text messages, and counseling sessions, readers gain tidbits of July's summer. The ending may leave readers wondering what just happened, but the story is a relatable coming-of-age tale and one can forgive this abrupt landing. Plus, (spoiler alert) it has a happy ending. Condie's sparse text could be enjoyed by teens at a variety of reading levels. She also chose to leave the characters as mirrors in terms of ethnicity and physical characteristics. VERDICT Recommended where Condie's other titles circulate well.--Sarah Sieg Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2332440 Lalo Lesperance Never Forgot (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Phillippe Diederich

Lalo Lesperance lives with his older brother and Mexican American mother in a low-income apartment building in Fort Myers. They moved there from a subdivision after the family lost Lalo's Haitian American father. At school, Lalo is known as the boy who can't remember anything and needs special help in all his classes. But when the first COVID lockdown hits, he finds himself in a friendship of convenience with Vivi, a Mexican American kid his age who gets perfect grades and who never gave him a second thought when they were in school.

978-0-593-35428-5 Dutton ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile HL 600

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books The COVID lockdown has plenty of downsides for eleven-year-old Lalo Lesperance, but at least he's free from school, where his mixed Mexican Haitian heritage makes him an outcast and where he especially struggles with the strange gaps in his memory that have plagued him most of his life. Now he spends days with an elderly neighbor, who teaches him Spanish and tells him stories of Mexican magic, and her granddaughter Vivi, Lalo's classmate-turned-friend who joins him in spying on the mysterious occupant of a creepy motor home parked nearby. This new normal is upended again when Lalo finds a magical old radio in the building's storage, which lets him glimpse a past and father he can't remember. As Lalo pieces together his own story, he finds strength to face his fears and heartbreaks, both old and new. The COVID-19 lockdown makes a recognizable backdrop for a unique, refreshing story and character; the old radio, meanwhile, makes an accessible introduction to magical realism. Equal parts honest, naïve, and determined, Lalo is an appealing narrator, and the twin mysteries of the neighbor and Lalo's missing memories make for a compelling page-turner. The resolution is far from happy, but Lalo emerges with resilience thanks to his strong family, supportive friends, and new sense of self. Hand this to empathetic readers ready to revisit the strange years of lockdown with a new friend. ACM

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In the early months of the COVID-19 pandemic, middle schooler Lalo Lesperance is doing his best to adapt to virtual school and make social connections in his Florida apartment complex. Lalo struggles with severe short- and long-term memory loss, triggered by childhood trauma. He is also frustrated by others' inability to accept him as both Mexican and Haitian American. Diederich's descriptive writing stimulates all five senses as Lalo learns about Mexican culture from his neighbor Vivi's abuela and finds ways to manifest some of his key missing memories with a little help from a seemingly magical vintage radio and belief in traditional Mexican spiritualism. Lalo's character offers an important portrayal of Afro-Latin identity for contemporary readers. His story provides an example of how discrimination can come from outside and within the Hispanic/Latin community and how traumatizing that can be for a young person trying to form a sense of self. By framing Lalo's memory issues positively as a reason for "accommodations" in school, Diederich elevates and supports the character's unique life journey. Nicholas A. Brown(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An 11-year-old struggles to connect with his past and survive the tumult of his present. From recollections of Papi, his late Haitian father, to what happened yesterday, Lalo Lesperance's memories feel "like secret notes in bottles floating in the ocean." Even when he finds one, it's "usually vague or written in code." Now that Covid has forced everyone online for school, his neighbor Vivi and her grandmother Alita welcome Lalo and his 17-year-old brother, Claudio, over to use the internet for online classes. Lalo, whose mom is Mexican American, loves to escape into Alita's stories about Mexico, especially ones about magic. One day, Vivi and Lalo spy a strange motor home in the parking lot of their apartment building. Vivi believes it belongs to a roba chico, or kidnapper. As they devise ways to catch him, Lalo discovers a mysterious old-fashioned radio in a storage closet. He becomes certain that the radio is helping him find his memories--but he isn't sure if remembering is good or bad. Diederich immerses readers in Lalo's confused emotional landscape: The uncertainties surrounding his identity, friendships, and place in his family push readers to explore these questions, both in terms of Lalo and themselves. The definition of memory and how integral it is to understanding oneself are heavy themes made accessible for younger audiences without sacrificing depth. A slow-burn of emotional exploration. (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An 11-year-old endeavors to build a machine to recover his lost memories in this thoughtful novel by Diederich (Diamond Park), set at the beginning of the Covid-19 pandemic. Lalo Lesperance has always had trouble remembering things, including details about his deceased father. When lockdowns begin, he's stuck in his Fort Myers apartment complex with his older brother and forced to attend online school with neighbor kid Vivi. He spends his free time tinkering with his brother's broken PlayStation, hoping to turn it into a memory machine and teams up with Vivi to investigate a mysterious motor home parked outside their building that's rumored to kidnap children. His discovery of an old radio that seemingly helps him remember his past might be the answer to his woes; or the beginning of a whole new set of problems. Subplots starring neighbors and challenges within his apartment block provide insightful looks into one community's experience navigating the pandemic. In spare, resonant prose, Diederich dives into the complexities of family, identity, and memory through Lalo, who feels it's impossible to define who he is when he can't remember the events; and people; that shaped him. Lalo is Mexican and Haitian American; the supporting cast is racially diverse. Ages 10: up. (Sept.)

#2332357 Warrior Girl (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Carmen Tafolla

Celina and her family are bilingual and follow both Mexican and American traditions. Celina revels in her Mexican heritage, but once she starts school it feels like the world wants her to erase that part of her identity. Fortunately, she's got an army of family and three fabulous new friends behind her to fight the ignorance. But it's her Gramma who's her biggest inspiration, encouraging Celina to build a shield of joy around herself. (Novel in Verse)

978-0-593-35471-1 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile NP

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist ple have tried to suppress Celina's expression of her Mexican heritage, but her grandmother is one of the few who have taught her to be proud of who she is. It has not been easy dealing with the constant moving as her father tries to find work, and more recently, his deportation has left Celina feeling lost. Celina and her mother decide to stay with her grandmother as they work through their situation. At school, she starts to experience some blossoming friendships. Only, just as Celina begins to find her voice through her writing, the pandemic pauses her progress. However, with the help of her friends, Celina gains the courage to be the warrior she was meant to be by making a difference with her writing. Readers who enjoy novels in verse will be moved by Tafolla's touching story. This is an emotional novel about the journey of finding where you belong, making your voice heard, and the friendships you can forge along the way. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books A mix-up on a birth certificate changes Celina's last name from Guerrero Amaya to Guerrero, and the identity of a guerrera—warrior girl—is who she's been trying to be since first grade, when her teacher angrily insisted she was pronouncing her own name incorrectly. Now at twelve years old, Celi uses poems to connect with friends, to educate her teachers and peers about Mexican contributions to history, and to navigate her feelings about her father's deportation, the COVID quarantine, the murders of Ahmaud Arbery and George Floyd, and the climate crisis. The narrative voice falters in this middle grade outing, where Celi sometimes sounds believably tween, sometimes like a much younger child, and sometimes like an adult, not so much as wise beyond her years as like an adult proxy. The many important, emotionally weighty issues only get surface level engagement, which may be realistic to an overwhelmed child facing all these crises at once but takes away from their impact in the story, and in some places almost diminishes the real-world events. Still, Celi demonstrates invaluable self-care practices in social justice work, inspired by her grandmother, who was involved in Chicano Movement protests; the book emphasizes the power of coming from a place of love and joy when trying to make progressive change and the importance of building celebration of your people to maintain your spirits in the face of pain. In an author's note, Tafolla states her hope to inspire children to start conversations on issues important to them, and Celi—earnest, if a bit didactic—has enough heart and verve to do just that in helping poets to find their voices too. ART

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 12-year-old girl claims her place in a turbulent world. After years of being silenced at school, Mexican American Celina is ready for a clean start. It's not easy starting middle school in a new town, and now her dad has been deported yet again. While she, her mother, and Gramma trust her papacito will find a way to return, as he has before, his absence is always painful. Still, Celi makes one friend, then two more, and the four middle schoolers quickly find refuge and strength in each other. The friendships become lifelines over the course of the year as they face ordinary middle school challenges--homework, mean kids--and broader social turmoil with the emerging Covid-19 pandemic, the killings of Ahmaud Arbery and George Floyd, increasing awareness of global warming, and more. Tafolla skillfully weaves these significant recent historic moments and the hopeful stories of leaders like Emma Tenayuca and César Chávez together with the more specific experiences of the four friends as Celina is racially profiled by a teacher and a Covid death hits close to home. The friends, who are Chicano, are distinct enough, but a few are more thinly drawn; protagonist Celi, an emerging poet, is consistently and vividly rendered, though, and her righteous, powerful, and joyful voice carries the day. An exuberant, rousing celebration of youth activism. (author's note, land acknowledgement) (Verse fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Using rhythmic first-person verse, Tafolla (I'll Always Come Back to You) presents messages about the importance of family and friends, social justice, and using one's voice to incite change. Celina Teresa Guerrero Amaya, 12, is used to frequently moving house, especially because of her Mexican immigrant father's odd jobs. When her father is deported, she and her mother move to San Antonio to live with Celi's Gramma. Starting at yet another new school is tough, but Gramma teaches Celi about the history of her ancestors and encourages her to draw strength from their stories. The two develop a strong connection that buoys Celi during difficult times ("Talking with Gramma can be/ a splash of sunshine/ in a dark, cold cave"), and Gramma's steadfastness, as well as new friendships at school, help Celi navigate the onset of Covid, the Black Lives Matter movement, and fraught familial dynamics. Via the protagonist's journey to articulate her complex feelings through succinct and polished phrases, Tafolla crafts an astute and evolving heroine. The lyrical verse; structured as Celi's own poetry, which teachers and Gramma embolden her to pursue; eventually culminates in powerful vocalizations of Celi's values. Ages 10: up. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Mexican American Celina Teresa Guerrero Amaya and her family follow traditions from both cultures. However, in school, her teachers only want her to be American and don't care about her Chicana identity; she tries to go by Tere and the teachers tell her she pronounces her name wrong. Thankfully she has a loving and supporting family and finds friends who understand and respect her culture. With inspiration from her grandmother and the support of a teacher trying to do better, Celina and her friends decide to put on a celebration of different cultures. Things take a turn when a global pandemic hits and the world shuts down. Now, on top of her worries about her father who has been deported, Celina must face a challenging pandemic, fear of her grandmother catching the virus, and finding joy despite it all. But she is a Guerrero, a woman warrior; she has a voice and writing talent, and she can still use that to show the world the beauty of all cultures. Written in verse, this is a timely novel that tackles various struggles teens face, including desire to belong, family conflict, and fighting for what you believe in. Tafolla skillfully writes Celina's voice as a young girl, and allows it to mature as she does. The pandemic is one of the main plot points in the book's second half, and readers should be mindful as it can be a triggering topic for some. For those ready for books covering this era, they will get an insightful, timely, and discussion-worthy read. VERDICT This beautifully written contemporary novel is a highly recommended purchase for library collections.—Amanda Borgia

#2285397 Camp Scare (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Delilah S. Dawson

Parker Nelson can't wait for summer camp. She'll have fun and make amazing memories, far away from the bullies who made seventh grade unbearable. But then something terrible happens: The mean girl who made life a living nightmare is in Parker's cabin. Soon all the other girls turn on Parker, too--no one wants to be her friend. Except Jenny.

978-0-593-37326-2 Delacorte Press ©2022 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 900

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A group of girls learn hard lessons at summer camp. Seventh grade lover of poetry and model student Parker is used to being an outsider in search of a friend group, but when popular girls led by classmate Cassandra bully and humiliate her, she becomes desperate for new experiences. Hoping for a fresh start at a summer camp away from everyone she knows, Parker decides to put her best foot forward. Instead of new friends, Parker finds an unhappy surprise--she's assigned to share a cabin with Cassandra, who quickly spreads gossip that keeps the other cabin mates from wanting to get to know her. It gets worse: There are creepy rumors about the camp's past, Parker is blamed for thefts, no one believes her when she says something tried to drown her, and other incidents occur that leave her feeling ostracized and afraid. As the other girls continue to shun her, Parker makes one friend among the mostly White main characters--a quiet girl named Jenny staying in another cabin and having similar experiences of alienation. While the problems escalate, the well-meaning but secretive camp director waxes nostalgic about the camp's ideals, but Parker is convinced he's hiding something sinister about its past. Uneven pacing bogs down the plot, but after a long buildup, Dawson offers readers some disturbing imagery and good scares. Some of the twists feel expected, but the book delivers in character growth. Satisfyingly spooky adventure. (Horror. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Dawson (Mine) conjures campfire urban legends in a page-turning novel of summer camp cruelty. After an agonizing cyberbullying experience at school, 12-year-old poet and "teacher's pet" Parker Nelson receives a scholarship to Camp Care, a Georgia summer camp committed to campers' emotional well-being. There, she hopes to "reinvent herself... as a new, improved, unbullyable" Parker. But one of the mean girls from Parker's school also attends, and she spreads rumors that leave Parker isolated from the other campers, save for a bond with loner Jenny McAllister, with whom she exchanges friendship bracelets. The counselors take the bullies' side, but when Parker's cabinmates begin suffering violent accidents, she dredges up secrets from the camp's dark history, wondering if camp legend "Gory Tori" might have taken matters into her own ghostly hands. Dedicating the novel to "every kid who's ever been told... just be yourself and everyone will like you," Dawson intersperses haunted camp tropes with realistic depictions of forcibly cheerful adults naively attempting to reassure bullied youth. Third-person narration follows Parker's internal dialogue, balancing emotional turmoil with ominous, sometimes gory details, and constantly ratcheting up suspense for a fast, immersive ride. Characters cue as white. Ages 10: up. Agent: Stacia Decker, Dunow Carlson & Lerner. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Seventh grader Parker Nelson is heartbroken to discover a mean girl, Cassandra, is a part of her new camping group. Trying to escape the cruel bullying inflicted on her at school, Parker had jumped at the chance for a scholarship to attend Camp Care, where she was assured that absolutely no bullying was allowed. This turns out to be far from the case, as Cassandra immediately turns all the girls in her bunkhouse against Parker. Miserable and lonely, Parker discovers a fellow loner, Jenny. At first she feels a special kinship with Jenny, but as their friendship continues, Parker becomes increasingly alarmed at Jenny's part in the mysterious accidents that keep occurring to her bunkmates. After all, Parker doesn't like that the girls are mean to her, but she doesn't wish for them to be physically hurt. The injuries start to pile up—first with Cassandra's broken arm, then Addison is shot in the arm with an arrow, and Sydney experiences near-death food poisoning. Parker realizes she must put a stop to her friend's malicious behavior. Standing up to Jenny only serves to put Parker in her evil crosshairs. The suspense is satisfyingly engaging throughout the narrative, though the inability of the adults in Parker's life to believe her protests of bullying is frustrating to read. Ethnicity of characters are not overly evident. VERDICT An easy-to-digest horror camp romp with a deeper message about the impact of bullying and ostracization.—Julie Shatterly

#2290653 1-2-3 Scream! (Hardcover (Trade))

written by R. U. Ginns

Stop! Unless you want to be scared, do NOT read this book. These tales of terror are so horrible, so alarming, they had to be bound up between these pages forever! You'll discover The Boogerman, an oozing horror that lurks in mirrors. You'll read about Instagrave, a popular new app that tells kids how they are going to die. In Epizeuxis, you'll learn what happens if you speak the name of a-wait. We've said too much already. The things between these covers are too dangerous to ever be let out.

978-0-593-37407-8 Delacorte Press ©2022 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$12.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Tales short and creepy. In the delightfully deranged introduction, author Ginns shares his writing process: "I usually use my index finger. I raise it high above my head and bring it down, with three or four quick taps in a row. Then I stop and I look around. It's important to know if anyone, or anything, is watching." He's especially concerned about librarians and birds. This sets the tone well for the entries to come, each of which involves some unusual twist of the imagination. Like any collection of stories, readers will find different ones appealing. Some use gross-out humor, others focus on interpersonal conflict, and the opening story is a meditation on social media and fate. A particularly clever one follows a student who forges a permission slip in order to sneak on to a field trip full of troublemakers who are doomed to be replaced by well-behaved replicas. There are also plenty of spooky creatures, an evil bobblehead, and an encyclopedia entry about birds and the dangers they pose. Most pages feature lively black-and-white art by Espila that, combined with character names, indicates some racial diversity. A good pick for kids who want something that leans to the funny side of creepy without requiring sustained attention. Strange fun. (Horror. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2249372 Kind of Spark (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Elle McNicoll

I'm autistic. I see things that others do not. I hear sounds that they can ignore. And sometimes I feel things all at once. I think about the witches, with no one to speak for them. Not everyone in our small town understands. But if I keep trying, maybe someone will. I won't let the witches be forgotten. Because there is more to their story. Just like there is more to mine.

978-0-593-37425-2 Crown Children's Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 580

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Addie is eleven, autistic, and struggling in her Scottish school with an unsympathetic teacher and an ex-friend who's joined forces with a bully. Her best support is her older sister, Keedie, who's also autistic, and there's a growing friendship with a new girl, Audrey, but she's still keenly aware of her outsider status. She's therefore intrigued when she discovers her town has a history of witchcraft-based persecution that resulted in the torture and execution of women deemed outsiders, and, seeing herself as someone who would have been targeted, she crusades for the town to memorialize the women it destroyed. McNicoll, herself autistic, writes Addie's narration with power and determination; it's especially strong at revealing the sheer labor required for Addie to negotiate the world ("The real Addie is behind a mask of social rules, regulations, and strange neurotypical customs") and the toll it takes, which is evident in Keedie as well. The witch plot interweaves effectively, and it gives a contemporary immediacy to the history as well as making emotional sense for Addie. Whether they're facing similar neurodivergent challenges or not, readers will appreciate Addie's honesty, and they may follow her lead in reconsidering history. DS COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Protagonist Addie is a girl with autism who is on a mission. Learning about her Scottish village's history of witch trials in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, Addie is moved to persuade the civic powers-that-be to create a memorial to the victims of those witch hunts. In parallel with this project Addie deals with her own challenges, from a malevolent teacher to a mean former best friend, and develops a metaphorical bond with historical characters who, like herself, were pilloried for being different. Many readers, on and off the spectrum, will relate to Addie's physical sensitivities, her pleasure in taking a deep dive into a single research subject, and her stress at trying to pass as "normal." As Addie says, "I spend every moment of my life, when I am outside our family home, second-guessing everything that I think and do." The writer (autistic herself) busts some myths about neurodivergency as she presents a flawed, loving, believable family and a convincing, nuanced, and very likable main character with a distinctive voice. Sarah Ellis(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An autistic girl campaigns to memorialize women branded as witches. Eleven-year-old Addie knows what it's like to be different. Her acute hearing makes loud sounds painful. Hugs, eye contact, and certain textures are hard to tolerate, and she can't always understand people's expressions. Her prickly older sister Nina is hard to read. Addie's mean-spirited teacher publicly scorns her work, dismisses her capability, and even joins her classmates' taunts. Only Addie's other older sister, outspoken Keedie, who's also autistic, really understands her fascination with sharks or the fatigue of "masking" her natural behavior to appease neurotypical people. So when Addie learns that her Scottish village once killed nonconforming women accused of witchcraft, her keen empathy compels her to petition for a memorial. But how can she convince a committee that doesn't believe she can think for herself? Though exposition is occasionally heavy-handed and secondary characters somewhat one-dimensional, the author, herself neurodivergent, imbues Addie's unapologetically autistic perspective with compassion and insight. Addie's accounts of constantly second-guessing herself ring painfully true, and her observations are diamond sharp; she scrutinizes people's faces to ensure they're "never confused or offended" but wonders, "Are any of them ever doing the same for me?" The bullying Addie endures will leave readers' stomachs in sympathetic knots, but Addie's nuanced relationships with her sisters and a new friend, Audrey, infuse humor and heart. Most characters default to White. Earnest and perceptive. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In McNicoll's contemporary debut of advocacy and allyship, an autistic 11-year-old seeks to memorialize the women once tried as witches in her Scottish village. School is a mixed bag for Addie: while librarian Mr. Allison supports her interest in sharks, and new girl Audrey represents a promising friendship, teacher Ms. Murphy mocks Addie openly in class, and the tween can "see the stares, hear the whispers and the giggles" among her classmates. At home with her presumed-white family, older sister Keedie, who's also autistic, understands many of Addie's experiences, including the strain of masking in a largely neurotypical world, but faces her own difficulties at university. Keedie's twin Nina, meanwhile, is often irritable and jealous of her sisters' bond. During a school lesson about women who were tried, tortured, and executed for witchcraft, deeply empathic Addie draws parallels between history and her own present-day interactions, and begins to campaign for a memorial, undeterred by the town council's detractors. Though the unvarnished cruelty that Addie experiences can be painful to read, McNicoll, herself neurodivergent, portrays with clarity Addie's neurological reality, interpersonal bonds, and thoughtful reflections. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Middle schooler Addie is autistic, and this year will be one of great change. When the teacher she had hoped for gets sick, she is stuck with Ms. Murphy, a bully who doesn't want Addie in her class just because she is different. When Addie learns that her small Scottish village used to try "suspicious" women and execute them as witches, she feels a deep and concerning connection with these outcasts. She realizes that it is up to her to ensure that this piece of history, and these women, are not forgotten. But will Addie be able to pull strength from her family and herself while facing opposition from school and the city council because of her autism? This deeply honest, at times painful story brings a much-needed look at middle school from the perspective of neurodiverse students. Addie's twin older sisters, one of whom is also autistic, provide strong examples of healthy family relationships, and her new friend Audrey loves Addie for who she is. This debut novel from neurodivergent author McNicoll will bring readers to tears and have them cheering for Addie as she learns how much she has to offer the world. Addie and her family are cued as white. VERDICT A first purchase in middle grade collections; a must-read for students and adults alike.—Emily Beasley, Omaha Public Sch., NE

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2280879 Before Takeoff (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Adi Alsaid	1	$18.99

James and Michelle find themselves in the Atlanta airport on a layover. Where James is passive, Michelle is anything but. And she quickly discovers that there is a flashing green button. Which she presses. Which may or may not unwittingly break the rules of the universe—at least as those rules apply to Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta.

978-0-593-37576-1 Knopf Doubleday Publishing Group ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.
Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile 910

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An engaging look at the airportlike maze of the human mind. At the Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport, two teenagers meet while staring at a blinking green light on the wall that only they seem to notice. Latinx James is heading home to Chicago after visiting relatives in Tampa; Thai and French Michelle, who was raised in Switzerland, Indonesia, and Argentina, is heading to her current home in Quebec. They meet before the blackouts, the snow--falling inside the airport--and other bizarre occurrences that take place after Michelle presses the light, which in fact turns out to be a button. Bored after waiting around with his family, James at first welcomes the distraction, as he wants to get to know Michelle better. Soon, though, it becomes obvious that they're trapped inside an airport that no one can enter or leave. This original narrative feels mature and contemplative, with its omniscient narrator describing ominous events that draw parallels between the strange corridors and passages of both the airport and the human mind. The focus alternates between the protagonists and random adult passersby as the two young people attempt to set things right. Although James and Michelle share a lot of chemistry from the get-go, their romance never detracts from an inward look into human nature that questions what makes us tick. This is a creative literary work with some thriller and romance elements that broaden its appeal. An intelligent narrative featuring introspective characters. (Fiction. 13-18) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Using an omniscient third-person narrator, Alsaid's (Brief Chronicle of Another Stupid Heartbreak) speculative airport adventure reimagines an ordinary layover in Atlanta. Sparks fly when Latinx-cued James, 16, meets French and Thai Michelle, 18, while passing the time by inspecting a mysterious blinking green button on the terminal wall. Unknown to James, Michelle curiously presses the button and, soon after, a power surge causes flight delays, putting travelers on edge. Waiting for their flights, the teens wander the airport in a pseudo: first date filled with philosophical conversation about imminent adulthood, past regrets, and future plans. Their initially lighthearted reaction to the disturbance ("I hope it lasts all night. Like one big slumber party") turns panicked when a second surge leaves the airport without power. Chaos ensues as people loot stores and form disgruntled mobs, and myriad surreal calamities, such as indoor blizzards and frightening earthquakes, begin surfacing across the terminals. The urgent external situations parallel the pair's internal fears and uncertainties while maneuvering disaster and searching for their families. Alsaid's ominous, high-stakes narrative steadily creeps toward a gripping resolution, balancing suspense, fantasy, drama, and cinematic romance for a multilayered read. Ages 12: up. Agent: Peter Knapp, Park & Fine Literary. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7 Up--This exquisite piece of speculative fiction powerfully highlights the challenges facing young adults by creating a microcosm of the world's problems inside the Atlanta airport. Disasters including the development of extreme indoor "airport microclimates" and the unexplained disappearance of over 300 people lead to a variety of reactions, altogether providing a nuanced portrait of human nature. Strangers James, cued as Latinx, and Michelle, biracial French and Thai, witness and experience the prejudice driving many acts of fear and rage. They move through the chaos while sharing vulnerable conversations, particularly the fears of facing a world that often seems more bad than good. The juxtaposition of their discussions within the rampant senselessness allows numerous themes to flourish, from the power of storytelling to the capacity of humans to find joy. The defining feature of this novel is the narrative voice, which has a snarky omniscience that deftly balances empathy and humor, gifted with an engaging self-awareness. The narrator's insistence that the events are random and largely unexplainable nimbly manages reader expectations for the book's resolution. Glimpses into the lives and minds of basically every person who enters the story provides truly excellent characterization, humanizing individuals who would otherwise be part of a nameless mass. This technique is a perfect example of James's final suggestion to Michelle: the world is scary when you only see the big picture, but if you zoom in to look at individuals, it seems like a better place. VERDICT An honest, evocative, and multilayered examination of humanity, full of both fear and hope. Recommended for first purchase.--Elizabeth Lovsin Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2324104 Actually Super (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adi Alsaid

Isabel is having an existential crisis. She's three years into high school, and everything she's learned has only shaken her faith in humanity. Late one night, she finds herself drawn to a niche corner of the internet—a forum whose members believe firmly in one thing: that there are indeed people out in the world quietly performing impossible acts of heroism. You might even call them supers. So, the day she turns 18, she sets off on a journey that will take her from Japan to Australia, and from Argentina to Mexico, with many stops along the way. She longs to prove one—just one—super exists to restore her hope for the future.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

the mystery of the magician's plan--before it's too late.
978-0-593-37866-3 Knopf Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 810

Reviews by: Booklist Orphaned Eva speaks to the dead during her nightly shows—or that’s what her caretaker would have their audiences believe. She doesn't believe real magic exists, until a performance when she hears a voice whisper that she must come see the fair. A fortunate run-in with an unusual boy, Henry, on a Chicago-bound train suggests that the fair may be the 1893 World’s Fair. Eager to explore the remarkable event, Eva and Henry meet a mysterious Mr. Magister, keeper of the enchanted Pavilion of Magic. Though initially the two are taken in by the endless wonders, it becomes increasingly clear that real magic may require more than they can give, and the seemingly sweet Mr. Magister may have something sinister up his sleeve. It’s a terrific premise with a strong start, and the incredible fair springs to life via gloriously evocative descriptions. The ambitious story may become tricky to follow, however, thanks to repetitive incidents of magically muddled memories. Still, those who enjoy magic mixed in with their history will be rewarded with a remarkable visit to this World’s Fair.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After Mrs. Blodgett adopts Eva Root from Miss Augusta Grandage's Home for Unwanted and Destitute Girls, the seven-year-old is quickly schooled in the ways of running seances, a craft to which she is well suited. Nearly seven years later, a seance in Ohio yields more than the usual when a voice in Eva's head tells her, "Come see the Fair!" Learning that Mrs. Blodgett plans to abandon her that night, Eva preemptively steals a wad of the cash she's helped to earn and boards a train to Chicago, en route befriendng a talented artist named Henry Poole. Henry is traveling to the 1893 Chicago World's Fair, summoned there by his own drawings, which have been mysteriously taking the form of Chicago Fair panoramas; and, strangely, of Eva, whom he's never met. There, a hidden, mysterious Pavilion of Magic, and enigmatic overseer Mr. Magister, quickly lure Eva, threatening to trap her and her abilities in a web of dark magic. Interweaving Chicago's fiery history with a sinister world's fair setting and a memorable heroine, Savit (The Way Back) sketches a complex, high-stakes take on magic's underpinnings and seductive powers. Characters read as white. Ages 10: up. Agent: Catherine Drayton, Inkwell Management. (Apr.)

#2328924 True True (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Don P. Hooper

This is not how seventeen-year-old Gil imagined beginning his senior year-on the subway dressed in a tie and khakis headed towards Manhattan instead of his old public school in Brooklyn. Then after a racist run-in with the school's golden boy on the first day ends in a fight that leaves only Gil suspended, Gil understands the truth about his new school-Augustin may pay lip service to diversity, but that isn't the same as truly accepting him and the other Black students as equal. If the school isn't going to carve out a space for him, he will carve it out for himself.

978-0-593-46210-2 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.
Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 660

Quantity Unit Price
1 $19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 9-12 When Gil is accepted into Manhattan's Augustin Prep, his family and community are thrilled at the opportunity, though Gil has reservations about leaving behind his comfortable Jamaican corner of Brooklyn. His fears prove to be correct when a popular, well-connected, white football player instigates a fight with him, resulting in a one-week suspension for Gil--more, he suspects, for his skin color than anything he actually did. During that time, Gil finds The Art of War, by famous Chinese general Sun Tzu, and declares war on the school's racist leadership. But he's not prepared for the extent to which his crusade may hurt those he loves the most. Hooper unflinchingly shows Gil's torment at the hands of hostile peers and ignorant school officials. However, the author is similarly unafraid to highlight how Gil's single-minded quest for justice negatively affects his family and friends, showing Gill to be tough and smart but also reckless. Featuring a rich and layered rendering of New York City few other YA books can match, this debut novel is ideal reading for politically minded young readers. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A senior transfer student quickly learns that his prestigious, predominately white private school is a war zone for Black kids like him. To cope with all that’s going on, proud Brooklynite, second-generation Jamaican American, and bookish robotics nerd Gil Powell is advised to read Sun Tzu after the long, difficult trip to Augustin Prep on the Upper West Side takes an even more daunting turn. When a racist classmate and his goons bait Gil into deploying his martial arts training to defend himself, he’s suspended and placed on probation. The interpersonal bigotry reveals systemic patterns affecting students of color at Augustin, but even as this takes its toll, Gil relies on The Art of War to guide him through an abundance of stressors: School commitments take him away from family and community, his father’s in Jamaica struggling with his immigration documents, and his grandmother’s dementia is worsening. Even as romance enters his life, Gil is at war on so many politically justified but all-encompassing fronts that he struggles to find time for himself and hurts those he cares about. At times, the presentation of the conflict is a bit on the nose, and ultimately, as Gil takes it upon himself to rage against the machines of inequity, the rage, stress, and anxiety pose threats that Gil, his community, and empathetic readers may all need help navigating. An intense, insightful take on the art of surviving the war on your existence. (Fiction. 12-17)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Seventeen-year-old Gil, who is of Jamaican descent, is anxious about starting at a new school in Manhattan, away from his predominantly Caribbean Brooklyn neighborhood. But with a partial scholarship and Augustin Prep's top-notch robotics program on offer, Gil can't pass up the opportunity. Gil is also dealing with worries surrounding his grandmother's worsening dementia and his father's struggles with emigrating from Jamaica to the U.S. While trying to navigate the majority-white school's social politics, Gil meets Tammy, president of the Black Culture Club and editor-in-chief of the school newspaper. As favoritism and racism run rampant at Augustin, Gil; accompanied by Tammy and a group of BIPOC classmates; resolves to take a stand. In his efforts to better his new school, however, he neglects his friends and family. In this compassionate debut, a love letter to Brooklyn and Caribbean culture, Hooper paints an organic portrait of a Black teenager who feels caught between two different worlds. Gil's determination to lift up his peers often results in him disregarding his own needs and wants; through his earnest first-person POV and natural-feeling prose, Hooper presents valuable lessons on the healing power of community, forgiveness, and sharing one's truth. Ages 12: up. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 6-9--A Black teen from Brooklyn gets into a predominantly white prep school in Manhattan and is thrust into a world of microaggressions and outright racism. But before one begins to think this is a tale as (unfortunately) old as time, readers are introduced to Gil--Hooper's martial-arts practicing, Jamaican flag-waving, poetry and robotics team-loving protagonist who quickly assures readers that this story is anything but stale. When Gil is given a copy of The Art of War at his dojo, the book really picks up as he uses Sun Tzu's time-honored strategies to gather a following and take on the racist underpinnings of his new school. Infused with the modern and quick language one expects from a contemporary YA novel, mixed with the energy of New York City seen through the eyes of Jamaican immigrants, Dreamers, and first-generation kids, the author takes readers on a journey as Gil figures out how a place at the school of his dreams mixes (or doesn't) with the only life he has ever known in Brooklyn. VERDICT A timely YA novel that takes on heavy themes of race and immigration with freshness, hope, and a dash of Jamaican patois.--Whitney Bates-Gomez Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2285481 12 To 22: POV You Wake up in the Future! (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Jen Calonita Turning 12 1/2 shouldn't be the most exciting birthday in the world. It's a half birthday after all. But Harper is thrilled because she is getting the biggest gift of all: her parent's approval to finally get social media accounts. Except when she goes to post her first photo, there is a filter she has never heard of before. One that shows you what you will look like when you are older. Curious, Harper clicks on it...but ends up flash forwarding in time to when she is 22. 978-0-593-43336-2 Delacorte Press ©2022 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 256 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 660	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews On her half birthday, 12-year-old Harper's ready to grow up, but maybe it's better not to rush things. Harper wants to launch a dog-walking business with BFF Ava and start posting on social media. Although her parents won't agree to Harper's business plan, they let her start posting. Harper happily uploads a makeup tutorial featuring Taylor Swift's "22"--and it's a TikTok hit. She and Ava are invited to queen bee Celia's birthday party. Ava is skeptical, but Harper, initially thrilled, is crushed when she learns from members of Celia's clique that she was only included because her mom did Celia's mom a favor. Despite her burgeoning online popularity and Celia's envy of her success, Harper feels humiliated about the party and wishes she were already 22, just like in Taylor's song. With the help of a photo filter, her wish comes true: She jumps ahead a decade and is now the successful marketing director for her social media influencer idol's cosmetics company. But her relationships are a mess, she's in a business partnership with manipulative Celia, and she's earned the nickname Hellish Harper. Harper wants to fix things and asks herself, WWTD: What would Taylor do? Can she go back in time for a redo? While the themes in this tween drama are familiar, Harper's giddy narration bounces along, admirably expressing her hope and determination. Most main characters read White; Ava is Mexican American. Irresistible fun. (Science fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2380489 With Just One Wing (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Brenda Woods Everyone expects Coop to be musical like his beloved parents, but he's not. That's one of the few things he finds awkward about being adopted-well, that and the fact that he sometimes wonders why his birth mother didn't love him enough to keep him. This summer, he's stuck at home with a broken arm after falling out of a tree trying to get a closer peek at a mockingbird nest. 978-0-593-46153-2 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5 As an infant, Coop was left in a designated "Safe Haven" at the hospital and adopted the following day by his parents, Willow and Thelonious Garnette. Occasionally he fields awkward questions about inheriting their musical talents, and sometimes he wonders why his mother abandoned him. While recovering from a serious accident, 11-year-old Coop spends his summer watching birds in his grandparents' yard. Drawn to a young mockingbird that was born with one wing and is unable to fly, he names it Hop, nurtures it, and becomes very protective of it. When he makes a painful decision to take Hop to a bird sanctuary, he likens his emotions to his birth mother's when leaving him at the hospital. Woods, whose The Red Rose Box (2002) was a Coretta Scott King Honor Book, writes Coop's first-person narrative with simplicity and directness, whether detailing the observations of an increasingly avid bird-watcher or his reflections as he balances his personal longing to keeping Hop with his realization that Hop will be happier elsewhere. A warm, accessible family story with credible conflicts and satisfying resolutions. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Coop is looking forward to a summer full of fun, but when he tumbles from a tree as he tries to check in on nesting birds in his grandparent's backyard, he's stuck in a cast and healing from a concussion, hoping to soon go back to his favorite activities. Meanwhile, one of the birds from the nest is born with only one wing, and Coop and his grandparents' neighbor, Zandi, decide to adopt the bird, which they lovingly name Hop because he hops instead of flies. Coop knows all about being adopted because his parents adopted him, yet as Coop and Zandi take care of little Hop, Coop comes to understand more about adoption as he deals with the possibility of giving Hop up so the bird can have a better life. The story offers an opportunity for readers to better understand adoption along with Coop and to expand notions of what it means to be a family. Coop learns how to share the responsibilities of caring for Hop with Zandi, the importance of having trusting adults in his life, and makes a new friend who can introduce him to other kids his age interested in bird watching. The chapters are short and include various adults teaching Coop and Zandi new words that readers can add to their own vocabularies, making it an accessible read for struggling readers. While everything doesn't work out exactly how Coop hopes, the story ends with him believing he's done the right things for both himself and his bird friend. Includes a note from the author. JMM COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly During a "summer of curveballs," an adopted boy draws parallels between his own life and that of the injured, abandoned bird he rescues in this emotionally grounded tale of family, love, and perseverance by Woods (When Winter Robeson Came). Twelve-year-old Coop is ready to spend summer break playing video games at G-Pop and Nana's house and scoring three-pointers for his youth league basketball team. But G-Pop's newfound enthusiasm for bird-watching gets Coop and his friend Zandi hooked on the hobby. Things take a literal dive when Coop suffers a concussion and broken arm after falling out of a tree while investigating mockingbird eggs in a nest. After discovering that one of the nestlings has only one wing, Coop and Zandi rescue it and educate themselves about its care and behavior. They also learn that they can't legally keep the chick, leading Coop to realizations of his own. Woods presents Coop's ponderings about his birth mother, and how he fits into his adoptive family, with tenderness and sincerity in this smoothly plotted story that captures the fine-tuned rhythms of Coop's busy, engaged, and musical family. Characters read as racially diverse. Ages 10: up. (May)

#2317455 Eb and Flow (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kelly J. Baptist

Ebony and De'Kari (aka Flow) do not get along. How could they when their cafeteria scuffle ended with De'Kari's ruined shoes, Ebony on the ground, and both of them with ten days of at-home suspension? Now Eb and Flow have two weeks to think about and explain their behavior--to their families, to each other, and ultimately to themselves. (Novel in verse)

978-0-593-42913-6 Crown Children's Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile NP

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Book Page Eb didn't mean to mess up Flow's brand-new shoes, and Flow would never hit a girl, but in Kelly J. Baptist's Eb & Flow, an accident leads to angry words, then a fistfight and then a 10-day suspension from school for seventh graders Ebony (Eb) and De'Kari (Flow). As they stare down two weeks at home, where they'll be surrounded by parents, grandparents, siblings, cousins, chores, homework and a whole lot of time to think, Eb and Flow must find a way to explain to their families and friends--and to themselves--what really happened.

Reviews by: Booklist Two seventh-graders throw punches over a stepped-on pair of shoes and earn a 10-day suspension in this novel in verse that follows both Ebony and Flow over the course of the suspension. While the two find themselves at odds, through their dual points of view, readers see they are both dealing with similar issues: single-parent homes, military fathers, older siblings with their own baggage, and a desire to change their own destinies to avoid more trouble. Baptist's verse flows easily and nicely captures the voices of Eb and Flow, and while the mundanity of 10 days out of school comes and goes, there's an underlying current of possible violence that keeps the reader on their toes. Though the pace occasionally drags, it picks back up when new twists unfold. Baptist, a teacher herself, knows how to capture the interest of students, and following two kids out of school for violence allows the chance to look at how our environments shape the choices we make. Hand to fans of Jason Reynolds and Jacqueline Woodson.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Ebony (Eb) and De'Kari (Flow), both seventh graders, are suspended from school after a fight in the cafeteria that neither thinks is their fault. On the surface, this looks like a case of two unruly adolescents acting out. Flow is hurt and angry that Eb ruined the shoes his deployed father gave him; Eb says, "It was all just an accident! / Nobody was trying to mess up / his Stupid Ugly Shoes." Over the course of their two-week suspensions, both narrators have the opportunity to reflect and to rethink their actions. Are they really "bad kids," or are they just kids dealing with bad situations? This engaging verse novel reveals the complexities of their home lives, which, despite the kids' enmity, have similarities and are intertwined in surprising ways. Their alternating narratives employ authentic language and tone that give readers the opportunity to empathize with them as their stories unfold. Baptist (The Swag Is in the Socks, rev. 11/21) explores the effects of parental absence, inequitable school discipline, and social issues such as gang violence. This story will resonate with readers struggling to express their emotional lives in ways that society deems appropriate. Monique Harris (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Suspended from school, seventh graders Eb and Flow find peace even as life doesn't make it easy for them. Ebony's on her eighth suspension from Brookside Junior High, and 10 days at home in her strict grandmother's crowded house isn't exactly where she wants to be, but with both parents all but out of the picture, it's the only option. De'Kari goes by Flow, a nickname from his rapper father, but he wants to forge his own path. Yet hitting Eb over her dirtying his new sneakers makes him reflect during his 10 restless days at home on the type of person he wants to be--and on memories of his dad hitting his mom. In parallel first-person verse narration, the two Black tweens reveal that they have a lot in common, including struggling with fathers away in the military. Throughout their suspensions, they unknowingly stay so close to each other that they peacefully pass one another by during a snowstorm. Breadcrumbs--sometimes heartbreaking, always poetic--scattered throughout the story gradually offer readers a path toward what really happened in the now-viral fight between the two, and as tensions escalate and extended families get involved along Brookside crew lines, the future is especially murky. A shared nightmare of the worst-case scenario puts a lot into perspective for Eb and Flow, returning optimism to the negotiating table and potentially pointing toward reconciliation. A moving and layered story of reflection and connection. (Verse novel. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Black seventh graders Ebony "Eb" Wilson and De'Kari "Flow" Flood contemplate the conflict that sees them both suspended from school. Following a heated exchange resulting in Eb sullying the sneakers that Flow's father gave him for Christmas, and Flow hitting Eb, the tweens face a 10-day stint at home, and neither of their families is happy. Eb, who lives at her grandmother's bustling, full house, spends her eighth suspension doing as her Granny says and contemplating her perception of herself as a "bad" kid. Flow spends his time taking care of chores, doing boot camp: style workouts with his uncle Reggie, and considering his recent actions alongside a memory of his dad hitting his mom. While the tweens evaluate their families, friendships, and futures, their fight; which has gone viral online; grows into a dispute that threatens to involve their extended community. Personal-feeling lines slowly reveal the duo's similarities and the truth behind the fight as Baptist (The Swag Is in the Socks) expertly taps into the minds of two tweens navigating accountability. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Hannah Mann, Writers House. (Mar.)

#2349368 Ready, Set, Dough! (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kelly J. Baptist

Spunky sixth-grader Zoe Sparks has discovered a unique way to get the laptop of her dreams--to win it! If Zoe can sell more tubs of cookie dough than anyone in her school, the laptop is hers. It's the first step to becoming a prize-winning journalist! But her win-at-all-costs attitude is starting to drive a wedge between Zoe, her best friend Felix, and her family. Zoe may be a top cookie-dough seller in her class, but is winning the prize really worth it?

978-0-593-42917-4 Crown Children's Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Sixth-grader Zoe Sparks is on a mission to sell more cookie dough than anyone else at her school and win the coveted Horizon WordPro GT, the laptop of her dreams. Zoe is an aspiring journalist, but her family can't afford a new computer. With the help of her best friend, Felix, Zoe sets out to sell enough tubs of dough to win the contest and outsell her classmate, Amaya, whose family already has enough money to buy her a new computer. Zoe becomes consumed with reaching her goal, and it comes at a cost. She must take on the responsibility of managing all the orders and money, which she fumbles, and deal with the strain that her tunnel vision puts on her family and friends. It's enough to make anyone hate cookie dough. Partially inspired by Baptist's own experiences with school fundraisers, Zoe's story has some rousing moments--like when her community rallies to help her sales--and touches on the necessity of school fundraisers in the first place. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Sixth grader Zoe dreams of becoming a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist, but her family's unreliable old computer is cramping her style. She has her sights set on the Horizon WordPro GT laptop, and since her parents won't buy one for her, she takes matters into her own hands. A school fundraiser offers Zoe the perfect opportunity: top prize for selling the most tubs of cookie dough is, in fact, the Horizon WordPro GT. Determined to walk away with the computer and defeat her nemesis, Zoe is laser-focused on winning and will do whatever it takes to come out on top -- even if it tests her relationship with her best friend. Zoe's experiences are relatable; her passion for both her short- and long-term goals is believably conveyed. Baptist uses humor to explore themes of navigating family, school, and community; this story will resonate with anyone who has dreamed of winning big. Monique Harris(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An aspiring journalist raises funds for a new computer. The family computer keeps crashing while Zoe attempts to finish writing a feature for the school paper, but her parents are indifferent. Money is tight, and buying a new computer is the last thing on their minds. What's an enterprising young writer to do? Then she sees it, the solution to all her problems: a cookie dough-selling contest at her school. The winner gets a brand-new Horizon WordPro GT laptop. What starts out as an earnest quest to outsell her rival turns into a desperate race to sell, sell, sell. When Zoe attempts to reach out to relatives, including one who turns out to be dead, Mom steps in to slow her down. But the owner of the flower shop where Mom works allows Zoe to sell cookie dough there in exchange for working after school during their Valentine's Day rush. Zoe finds herself on a roller-coaster ride of trials and tribulations. Baptist does a great job of building suspense. Though the first half of the book feels a bit slower, once the momentum picks up, readers will be hooked. This tale of entrepreneurialism run amok isn't new, but it is fun. Readers will root for Zoe while relating to the exasperation of those around her. Zoe and her family are cued Black. A funny, heartfelt romp, with a charming protagonist at its heart. (Fiction. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Kentwood Academy sixth grader Zoe, an aspiring journalist, dreams of owning a Horizon WordPro GT laptop. Her parents aren't in a position to buy her an expensive device, however, so she splits her time between the computers at the library and her older brother's friend's house to crank out her column for the school's paper. When Kentwood's Spring fundraiser rolls around; during which students sell cookie dough to help fund their extracurriculars and win prizes; Zoe realizes that one of the fundraising rewards is a WordPro. She persuades her best friend Felix to help her come up with ideas to win the competition, but selling cookie dough isn't easy; especially when the competition, privileged classmate Amaya, has access to her affluent family's connections to drive sales. Zoe becomes laser-focused on achieving her goals, and uses any opportunity to sell cookie dough, even if it means missing family and friends' important milestones or putting herself in potentially dangerous situations. Baptist explores themes of class and wealth disparity through Zoe's stubbornly determined first-person POV, and enriches the narrative with distinct and unforgettably rendered characters. Protagonists are racially diverse. Ages 8: 10. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—The premise of Baptist's latest will be familiar to all middle grade readers. Zoe, a highly motivated Black girl in sixth grade, has set her sights on selling the most cookie dough in her all-school fundraiser. As an aspiring journalist with computer problems, she wants to claim the campus top-seller prize, a laptop computer, and has plenty of competition to keep her busy. Zoe must learn to keep her fiercely competitive personality in check and remember that people and relationships are more important than winning a contest, even though she sees it as beneficial to her family in the long run. Middle grade readers will enjoy Zoe's quick comebacks and witty banter with her best friend, Felix, and her older brother, Mark. Baptist crafts a spunky, focused female character who has tons of drive, great goals, and funny insight. The book ends as expected and exemplifies the mindset that goals are always achievable if one works hard—which may not be completely realistic but makes for a fun read. This title will appeal to readers who enjoy books with confident, empowered female protagonists like Kelly Yang's Front Desk and Janae Marks's From the Desk of Zoe Washington, and also to reluctant readers who enjoy a succinct, tight story. VERDICT A fun, relatable realistic fiction title recommended for all middle grade readers and collections.—Kim Gardner

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2380451 And Then, Boom! (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lisa Fipps Joe Oak is used to living on unsteady ground. His mom can't be depended on as she never stays around long once she gets "the itch," and now he and his beloved grandmother find themselves without a home. Fortunately, Joe has an outlet in his journals and drawings and takes comfort from the lessons of comic books—superheroes have a lot of "and then, boom" moments, where everything threatens to go bust but somehow they land on their feet. And that seems to happen a lot to Joe too, as in this crisis his friend Nick helps them find a home in his trailer park. But things fall apart again when Joe is suddenly left to fend for himself. (Novel in verse) 978-0-593-40632-8 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Starred Review Joe Oak is a sixth-grader with a love for superheroes and their "and then, boom" moments, when everything terrible can change in an instant. He also has a mess of a mom who takes off whenever she gets "The Itch," abandoning him for days, weeks, or months at a time. Luckily, Joe has an adoring grandmother, but another mom-related disaster leaves the Oaks penniless, and Joe and Grandmum lose their home. After a spell secretly living in their car, they gratefully find shelter in a local trailer park, but another calamity sees Joe left alone to fend for himself. Terrified of the foster system, a desperate Joe works to keep himself alive, his sanity intact, and his secret safe. But after a true "and then, boom" moment of his own, his life will change in a way he never imagined. As in her Starfish (2021), Fipps focuses on another young person on the fringe of their peer group, and the novel-in-verse narrative works beautifully here, invoking urgency and intimacy. Vivid descriptions of housing and food scarcity are intense and unforgettable, sure to spark empathy from any young reader. Though the story tackles heavy subjects, Joe is a wonderful companion, and there are also deep, dear relationships and an undercurrent of kindness that keeps hope afloat throughout. An exceptionally compassionate examination of existence on the edge. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Abandoned by his mother, sixth-grader Joseph is living with his Grandmum in their car, "poorer than poor," until generous strangers and friends give them a leg up, and they move into a mobile home. Though they too often go without, they have each other, until Grandmum gets sick and suddenly dies. Joseph tries to hide the fact that he's living alone with no access to food or money, and the plan sort of works until a tornado touches down in his neighborhood, launching him into the air "like Superman." His resulting injuries lead to a stay in the hospital, where he admits that he needs help, and, once in foster care, he finally finds a safe place to be a kid. This verse novel's conversational tone, linear timeline, and dialogue-heavy writing will ease readers nervous about poetry, and the first-person narration shows Joseph's intelligence and joyful creativity. What Joseph goes through is horrible (scenes where he forces himself to eat dog food to stay alive or gets trapped under rotting garbage while dumpster diving are particularly visceral), but not completely without hope. Joseph is surrounded by a wonderful secondary cast, from his teacher who attempts to support kids living in poverty by changing unfair school systems to a neighbor who models generosity and healthy community building. While the didacticism is sometimes clunky, Fipps' indictment of how society treats and ignores people who need help ("It's amazing / how long you can live / without anyone realizing / how you live") paves the way for compassionate discussion about how cyclical poverty affects kids. CBR COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews How do you cope with the unexpected moments that change everything in your world? Until what he calls "the Mess with Mom," sixth grader Joseph Oak and his widowed English grandmother were doing okay. Between the house Grandmum owned, the money she made cleaning houses and offices, their food stamp benefits, and Joe's free school meals, they were getting by. But about a year ago, when Joe's mostly absent mother got arrested, Grandmum put the house up for bail money. (Joe knows nothing about his dad.) Then Mom fled, and "BOOM!"--they were living in their car: "I felt like we were goldfish in a fishbowl." Grandmum and Joe find an old mobile home to rent, but then, "BOOM!"--Grandmum dies, and Joe's left on his own. Fortunately, he has two best friends who always have his back: Nick, whose mother struggles with depression and who's been in foster care, and Francophile Hakeem, who pays for Joe's convenience store treats. The verse format, combined with Joe's comic book and superhero metaphors, works exceptionally well at conveying honest emotion while maintaining a sense of humor and hope. Fipps doesn't sugarcoat poverty, nor does she romanticize it or treat it as a moral failing; instead, she provides critical representation to the many schoolchildren who are living in poverty. Joe's courage and individuality shine on every page. Most main characters read white; Hakeem is cued African American. A big, bold, engaging, and important story. (Verse novel. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Fipps (Starfish) depicts situations of abuse, financial precarity, houselessness, and hope through easy-to-read verse in this elucidating work. Eleven-year-old Joseph Oak loves superhero comics and his British-born Grandmum, whose "arms are like Captain America's shield,/ protecting me,/ defending me." In contrast, he views his mother as Thanos, "destroyer of worlds"; when she gets "The Itch" and leaves, consequences of her legal troubles result in Joe and Grandmum living in their car. Joe's pragmatic voice explains, "I think I know a lot of things/ kids shouldn't/ have/ to know" about how much his grandmother makes cleaning buildings and what their U.S. government: provided benefits cover (and don't). Things look up when they find an affordable mobile home, but then Grandmum starts feeling sick. Writing from personal experience, as discussed in a foreword, Fipps employs resonant verse to portray Joe's bleak reality as well as the bright spots he experiences due to the kindness of his best friends, who help him get food, and his teacher, who advocates for change in the school's free meal system and opens a food and clothing pantry for students in need. Joe is depicted as white on the cover; other characters cue as racially diverse. Ages 10: up. Agent: Liza Fleissig, Liza Royce Agency. (May)

#2308947 Infinite Questions of Dottie Bing (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Molly B. Burnham

Ten-year-old Dottie Bing is a problem-solver and question-asker who is never more gleeful than when she's encountering a new dilemma-- whether it's her own, or someone else's. But when her Grandpa Walter comes to stay (and stay, and stay!) he brings the biggest question that Dottie has ever encountered: How do you heal a broken heart? You see, Grandpa Walter is grieving the loss of his beloved wife, Dottie's Grandma Ima. Even though she knows every solution starts with a question, for the first time in her life, Dottie isn't sure what to ask.

978-0-593-40666-3 Dial Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 600

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Ten-year-old Dottie's treehouse-construction plans are interrupted when Grandpa Walter shows up at the family's front door, a Chock full o'Nuts coffee can in tow. Mourning the recent loss of Dottie's grandma, Grandpa Walter now consoles himself by talking to her via the Chock full o'Nuts can. Soon both Grandpa and the can have taken up long-term residence in Dottie's room (and changed the wall color). Dottie endures this disruption bravely, trying to emulate her beloved grandmother, but the situation causes what already feels like a menagerie of animals inside her to grow (an alligator soon joined by a porcupine, an octopus, and a kangaroo). Dottie's friend Sam, with his extensive vocabulary, and their antagonist-turned-friend Miles are going through personal struggles too: Sam's mom is having a new baby, and Miles's parents are getting divorced. By joining forces, they each find their way by questioning everything, trying to create space for themselves (primarily through the ambitious treehouse project), and helping one another along -- sometimes effectively and sometimes slightly less so. Dottie's realistic inner emotional journey contrasts well with her more whimsical day-to-day antics. Though centered in processing grief and change, the short, question-titled chapters filled with humor, quirkiness, and spot illustrations create a warm and buoyant story of family and friendship. (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Ten-year-old Dottie's treehouse-construction plans are interrupted when Grandpa Walter shows up at the family's front door, a Chock full o'Nuts coffee can in tow. Mourning the recent loss of Dottie's grandma, Grandpa Walter now consoles himself by talking to her via the Chock full o'Nuts can. Soon both Grandpa and the can have taken up long-term residence in Dottie's room (and changed the wall color). Dottie endures this disruption bravely, trying to emulate her beloved grandmother, but the situation causes what already feels like a menagerie of animals inside her to grow (an alligator soon joined by a porcupine, an octopus, and a kangaroo). Dottie's friend Sam, with his extensive vocabulary, and their antagonist-turned-friend Miles are going through personal struggles too: Sam's mom is having a new baby, and Miles's parents are getting divorced. By joining forces, they each find their way by questioning everything, trying to create space for themselves (primarily through the ambitious treehouse project), and helping one another along -- sometimes effectively and sometimes slightly less so. Dottie's realistic inner emotional journey contrasts well with her more whimsical day-to-day antics. Though centered in processing grief and change, the short, question-titled chapters filled with humor, quirkiness, and spot illustrations create a warm and buoyant story of family and friendship. Julie Roach(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A child deals with loss. When 10-year-old Dottie Bing's Grandpa Walter shows up at her house, he is carrying a Chock full o' Nuts coffee can and his suitcase. He is there to visit after the death of Dottie's grandma Ima. Dottie soon realizes Grandpa Walter goes everywhere with the coffee can, which is filled with Ima's ashes. He brings it to the kitchen, where he pours two cups of coffee; he reads out loud to it; and he plays cards with it. Dottie is puzzled, but she is dealing with her grief in her own way--building a treehouse, because Ima always wanted one. Her best friend, Sam, is excited to help in this mission--a word Dottie knows Sam will like, since he loves using complex vocabulary, introduced throughout (which readers will delight in learning and using). Tucked into this brilliant mix of a plot is Miles, an unfriendly boy who is always making fun of Sam and Dottie, and Dottie's younger sister, Jazzy, a force of nature in a 4-year-old body. As Dottie and Sam build the treehouse, Dottie focuses on all the animals in her stomach--an effective, original metaphor for her churned-up feelings of grief and change. Embellished with black-and-white illustrations, this surprisingly humorous story has narrative details that fold seamlessly into the overall plot while cleverly enriching it. Most characters read as White in the artwork; Sam is trans. Profound in its own sparkling, humorous way. (Fiction. 8-10) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Ten-year-old Dottie Bing processes grief surrounding her grandmother Ima's death in this earnest novel by Burnham (the Teddy Mars series). Following Ima's passing, Dottie's mission of building a tree house to honor her ("She told me how she was sure that if there was a tree house to play in, she would have been the happiest kid in the world," Dottie says) is interrupted by her grandfather Walter's sudden decision to stay with Dottie and her parents. Dottie feels that Walter's grief is something she needs to fix, believing that if she can make him happy, "everything will be perfect." She endeavors to figure out a new plan with her trans friend Sam, who's working through complicated feelings regarding his mother's pregnancy, and cantankerous neighbor Miles, who's navigating uncertainty amid his parents' divorce. Tender b&w illustrations by Liem artfully depict the youths' adventures. As Dottie learns more about her grandfather and works through her own feelings of loss; which manifest as metaphorical "animals" churning in her stomach; she maintains a curious, constantly questioning attitude. Through Dottie's evolving, conciliatory relationship with grief-stricken Walter, Burnham conjures a warm and compassionate tale about myriad paths toward healing. Characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Connection randmother terribly and isn't thrilled when Grandpa Walter shows up with Ima's ashes in a Chock Full O'Nuts can. Grandpa carries the can with him everywhere, talks to it, plays cards with it, even pours it a cup of coffee. Just seeing the can reminds Dottie of her playful, talkative, wise grandmother and makes her feel like wild animals are running around inside of her. Grandpa is a self-contained stranger compared to Ima. Dottie thinks she will feel happier if she and her best friend Sam build a "majestic" tree house in the tree outside Dottie's bedroom window. The construction of the tree house lures in classmate Miles, who has been a thorn in Dottie's side in the past but who turns out to be a surprisingly empathetic and clever building partner. When even the tree house isn't purging the wild animals from Dottie's insides, the boys help her brainstorm ways to make Grandpa Walter happy again so that he'll go back to his own house. The only thing for it, they decide, is for Dottie to hide the can of Ima's ashes. Of course, this does not go well and only adds to Dottie's anxiety until a climactic scene at school leads to a revelatory conversation with her grandfather. Brief chapters, zippy dialogue, and gentle humor move this story right along. Dottie is a well-intentioned, spunky girl, who, with the help of loyal friends, works out her grief in a satisfying way. Jan Aldrich Solow, Elementary School Librarian, Retired, Kingston, New York

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Burnham has crafted a delightful story about grief and the joy of friendship featuring 10-year-old Dottie Bing. Recently widowed Grandpa Walter comes to stay with Dottie, her parents, her four-year-old sister, Jazzy, and MacFurry, their spunky cat. While Dottie mourns the loss of Grandmother Ima, her neighborhood friends are dealing with their own challenges. Miles's parents are getting divorced, and Sam's mom is having a baby. Their group project of building a tree house brings them all together to deal with their feelings in a genuine and communal way. Sparse but appealing black-and-white illustrations help bring the dazzling cast of characters to life, and humor is infused in all the right places so the plot never feels too heavy (the lunch monitor Mr. Park who goes by "Mr. Shark" because, "I never stop moving, and I'm always watching you," is an especially fun addition). The characters appear white; readers learn that Sam is trans, but it's not part of the primary arc. VERDICT An endearing story about grief and friendship that will resonate with readers. Recommended for public and elementary school libraries where realistic fiction is popular.—Carrie Voliva

#2295282 Big Dreams of Small Creatures (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Gail Lerner

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Ten-year-old Eden's quiet life is upended when she saves a paper wasp nest from destruction and discovers, to her awe and amazement, that she and its haughty queen can talk to each other. This first conversation is the start of a grand adventure, leading Eden to The Institute for Lower Learning, a secret laboratory devoted to the peaceful coexistence of humans and insects. The Institute is more fantastic and idyllic than Eden could've imagined but hidden deep within its tunnels is an old secret that could spell the end for all insects on earth.

978-0-593-40785-1 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 950

Reviews by: Booklist After Eden saves a wasp nest from destruction, she discovers she can communicate with the grateful wasp queen. It's revealed that insects have been attempting to speak with humans for centuries, but people tend to shoo (or squish) bugs in their vicinity. There are rumors of an institute built to further human-insect coexistence, but it's unclear if it actually exists. Meanwhile, young August is a self-declared insect enemy due to a series of unfortunate run-ins, and after declaring war on the six-legged kingdom, he gets wind of a hidden storehouse of a deadly pesticide. Both Eden and August go on the hunt for these rumored locations, putting them on course to intersect in the strangest of places. They'll realize that they need other people—and insects—to become the best version of themselves. Lerner's entertaining, unconventional novel sees humans and insects share narration duties, allowing for a wide range of perspectives, deep empathy, and a marvelous sense of humor. An inventive, endearing story that will make an entomologist and environmental activist out of anyone.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Can Eden find a way to stop insect-hating August from killing all the bugs? In this debut by the writer and director of Black-ish and other hit TV shows, 9-year-old August, a White boy who is the victim of bullying, hates insects: A cockroach climbs up his arm during a school play, a fly lands in his mouth and he vomits on his favorite teacher, and a spiderweb causes him to drop a box of his mother's homemade jelly. August schemes to get his hands on a pesticide that is rumored to be exceptionally toxic—only its inventor is missing. On her 10th birthday, Eden, who has a White Jewish mother and Black father and comes from a musical family, learns she can talk to wasps using her kazoo. She saves a paper wasps' nest from a group of destructive children, and, taken by her kindness, the wasp queen informs her of a mysterious school dedicated to teaching communication between insects and humans. Eden finds a card in a library book for the Institute for Lower Learning: Could it be the right school? Eden's and August's quests intersect at the institute. Though the prose is beautiful, the novel creeps along, with extensive passages of narration that are not broken up with dialogue. Despite the protagonists' young ages, older middle-grade readers may be drawn to the strong messages about environmentalism, friendship, and self-discovery. A slowly unfolding read for bug lovers and environmentalists. (Morse code and semaphore charts) (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two kids at cross purposes intersect over insects in this environmentally invested novel from Black-ish writer and director Lerner. August, who cues as white and is often bullied at school, has big dreams of performing on stage. When a cockroach crawls into his costume during a school performance, though, Augie's reaction results in him "shirtless and gasping" on the stage floor, and a fly landing in his mouth soon sees him vomiting on his favorite teacher. Vowing revenge on insect-kind, Augie seeks a mysterious man rumored to have engineered a powerful pesticide. Meanwhile, anxious budding entomologist Eden, who has a white Jewish mother and a Black father, saves a wasp nest and finds that she can speak with the wasp queen via kazoo. Told of a school that focuses on communication between humans and insects, Eden begins a search for it, leading to the kids' connection. Expository third-person prose can sometimes feel heavy-handed, but the alternating arcs invest readers in a world where curiosity leads to discovery, empathy proves a key ingredient in multiple kinds of conflict, and interspecies bonding is portrayed as key to global survival. Ages 10: up. (Oct.)

#2332629 Dark Lord's Daughter (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Patricia C. Wrede

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Kayla is just an ordinary girl... or so she thinks. When a day at the state fair is interrupted by the news that she's the daughter of a "Dark Lord," she and her family are quickly whisked to another world—one that's chock-full of magic but lacking in technology! As her family encounters fantastical creatures in place of their Earthly gadgets, Kayla must prepare for the unpreparable: meeting her father, the Dark Lord himself, for the very first time. All Kayla wants is to go home, but she must learn magic to do so. The catch? For the Dark Lord's daughter, the road to mastering magic is filled with evil traditions.

978-0-553-53620-1 Random House Children's Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 770

Reviews by: Booklist Fourteen-year-old Kayla is visiting the Minnesota State Fair with her younger brother and Riki, her adoptive mother, when they are magically transported to a medieval-like realm by Waylan, a sword-wielding “commander of the Dark Hordes.” Having sworn allegiance to Kayla as “the Dark Lady of Zaradwin,” he informs her that she has magical powers and is the heir to her father, the previous Dark Lord, now deceased. Curious about her birth parents and this magical realm, but also dealing with Riki’s rules, her safety concerns, and her determination to take her kids back home, Kayla wonders what kind of Dark Lady she could be. Given her ancestors’ cruel, violent governance, she hopes that she would do better. Within the fantasy, one inventive premise is that objects transported between worlds transform into their cultural equivalents: a cellphone turns into a “messenger mouse” and Kayla’s tablet computer is transformed into a talking-monkey familiar, seated on her shoulder and dispensing information upon request. With believable characters and interesting dialogue, here’s a fresh, engaging fantasy with a sequel to come.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly ate Fair with her adoptive mother and brother, 14-year-old Kayla Jones is approached by Waylon, second commander of the Dark Hordes of Zaradwin, who bids her to take her late Dark Lord father's throne. The family is promptly transported to Zaradwin, where Kayla is greeted as the realm's prospective Dark Lady, a role in which she would follow in her father's footsteps. The Jones family would prefer to return home, but accessing enough magic to transport them back requires Kayla to embrace her new function, and the power that comes with it; if she can survive until the official ceremony of investiture. Kayla is nevertheless reluctant to perform the duties of a Dark Lady (battling rivals, waging war, and executing minions), and her presence may upset a land caught in a perpetual war between Light and Dark. In a tongue-in-cheek survey of epic fantasy tropes, Wrede (the Enchanted Forest Chronicles) creates an intentionally generic fantasy world that's keenly devoted to its traditions. Featuring droll chapter headings ("So You Are a Potential Dark Lord," "Discovering Your Dark Heritage") that structure an exposition-heavy telling of family dynamics and character growth, this is an amusing story of finding one's place amid the unfamiliar. Its fantasy-world-incompatible technology-turned-familiars are particularly memorable. Most characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ginger Clark, Ginger Clark Literary. (Sept.)

#2349250 Alice Atherton's Grand Tour (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Lesley M. Blume

Ten-year-old Alice Atherton is sent by her father to spend the summer with his dear friends the Murphys who live with their three children and pet monkey in the French Riviera. There, Alice will meet and learn from some of the most extraordinary luminaries of the time. She visits a junk yard with Pablo Picasso looking for objects to make into art, performs a dance inspired by celestial bodies with the renowned Ballet Russes, and imagines magical adventures with Zelda and F. Scott Fitzgerald.

978-0-553-53681-2 Alfred A. Knopf ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 800

Reviews by: Booklist After her mom dies, 10-year-old Alice Atherton becomes listless in her grief, so her father sends her to the South of France, where she spends the summer with Sara and Gerald Murphy, who were friends with her mother. Alice is welcomed as a sister by the three Murphy kids, and together they enjoy a series of surprise classes presented by Mr. Murphy's notable friends, such as Pablo Picasso, Ernest Hemingway, and Sergei Diaghilev of the Ballets Russes. Their final lesson comes from F. Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald, who prepare a treasure hunt at the beach. As she tries new experiences with the Murphy family, Alice blossoms, and by the end of summer, Mr. Atherton is pleased to see that his daughter is full of life again. The all-star teaching cast seems too extraordinary to be true, but the author's note reveals that although the story is fictional, the Murphy family was real and socialized with many famous creatives. This historical fiction will appeal to readers interested in unschooling or family stories like the Vanderbeekers series.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Alice Atherton, a fictional 10-year-old, visits real-life American expatriates Sara and Gerald Murphy in Antibes-- and meets luminaries such as Pablo Picasso and Ernest Hemingway. Simple yet elegant text immediately sets the time and place: New York, 1927.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Stuck in the stuffy parlor, Alice fantasizes about playing outside in the snow instead of listening to boring Old Miss Pennyweather. When she starts to drift off, the governess becomes worried and hustles her to bed. After a visit from the family doctor, Alice's father agrees that she is suffering due to her mother's recent death. His solution: send Alice and Miss Pennyweather to France to stay with his friends the Murphys; there, Alice will acquire "the art of living fully." Miss Pennyweather, a rigid and easily scandalized stock character, presents plenty of humorous diversion on the ocean voyage and subsequent travels, returning home almost immediately after arriving at the unconventional Murphy household. Alice, on the other hand, is delighted to stay. In no time, she's running about barefoot, riding donkeys with the Murphy children, and, indeed, learning valuable life lessons. Occasionally, the text references Alice's grieving process, but mostly the story revolves around a fast-paced, humorous series of adventures, including a treasure hunt instigated by Zelda and Scott Fitzgerald. Uplifting though didactic messages about overcoming loss and finding oneself are woven through tantalizing bits of period artifacts, history, and biography. Characters are cued white. Sweetly entertaining. (author's note, afterword, biographies of the real-life people mentioned, photographs) (Historical fiction. 7-11) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Based on real-life American expatriates who hosted creative luminaries at their Antibes home, "Villa America," this entertaining 1927-set novel from Blume (Julia and the Art of Practical Travel), follows 10-year-old New Yorker Alice Atherton, an only child grieving her mother's death six months earlier. Hoping to revive her spirits, her publisher father sends Alice to the South of France to stay with his friends Gerald and Sara Murphy, experts on "the art of living fully." Welcomed to the Murphys' home in Antibes, Alice joins their three children, pet monkey, and famous visitors, including Sergei Diaghilev, F. Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, and Pablo Picasso. Offered a summertime education "unlike any other," the children make art with Picasso, learn to appreciate simple things with Hemingway, and embark on a treasure hunt with the Fitzgeralds, hijinks that help Alice learn to enjoy life while grappling with the loss of her mother. Comedic characterizations and standard adventure plotting accompany an amusing premise, idyllic French Riviera ambiance, and introduction to era-specific creatives in this upbeat escapade. Characters present as white. Capsule biographies of the historical figures conclude. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Molly Friedrich and Lucy Carson, Friedrich Agency.(Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--It's the 1920s, and Alice Atherton is a precocious 10-year-old who is sent to spend the summer on the French Riviera with her father's friends, their children, and a pet monkey. Alice is delighted to go on an adventure in France, as her father thinks this will help her after the death of her mother in New York City. While abroad, she meets various historical figures, such as Pablo Picasso, Ernest Hemingway, Sergei Diaghilev, and F. Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald. This is an easygoing read for young fans of historical fiction. Books in this genre can be a hard sell for young readers, but this will be a hit with the right audience. Although American adults may know most of the historical figures, middle grade students may be less familiar with them and their works. The afterword helpfully features small biographies of each luminary. VERDICT The lessons taught by the historical figures incorporated into this fiction title will impact readers and bring fresh air to the genre. Alice's tale will resonate with contemporary tweens.--Maeve Dodds Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2324338 Clementine (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ann Hood

New York Times best-selling author Ann Hood pens a poignant story of grief and adolescent despair in this follow-up to Jude Banks, Superhero.

978-0-593-09410-5 Penguin Workshop ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 760

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist In a spin-off of Jude Banks, Superhero, Hood turns her attention to a now slightly older Clementine, who continues to grieve the sister who died after a nut exposure. Wracked with guilt and struggling, too, with a best friend who relocated states away, Clementine leans into unhealthy coping mechanisms despite a support network that includes her mother and Jude. Like many dealing with grief, Clementine experiences feelings of isolation and a sense of numbness, which she attempts to handle through risky behavior. Importantly, Clementine represents often unseen populations—both that of bereaved siblings and of 14-year-old characters. Giving voice to these groups, Clementine runs into the same mistakes as she grapples with her grief, trying to honor her sister while reaching for contentment and joy in her life again. This seems impossible and paradoxical to Clementine, who sorts through the conundrum from a slightly different and equally important perspective as Jude's in the initial novel. Facing her own mortality, Clementine seeks external help but must ultimately dig within herself to find the courage to move forward. Like Amy Besheal's We Are All Constellations (2022) and Christine Webb's The Art of Insanity (2022), Clementine examines the most human of experiences through the lens of family disruption and loss, magnifying feelings of being adrift and what it means to grieve and come-of-age at the same time.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Still haunted by the death of her younger sister two years previous, fourteen-year-old Clementine is losing touch with everything: her only remaining family, her lifelong friends, and reality in general. Now she's suddenly expected to start a new school, where her untreated grief and rumors of her suicide attempt only make things harder. Soon, acting out, skipping school, and sleeping all day land her briefly in a residential facility, where even the best-intentioned counselors can't seem to help. Desperate to regain some sense of normalcy, or at least pretend for her mother's sake, Clementine pushes herself to make new friends, even managing to make tepid connections and a few potential real relationships that may just allow her to find beauty and her own place in the world again. An emotionally evocative portrait of the crushing weight of grief, this beautifully crafted novel ends with hope yet avoids trite platitudes or easy solutions. The first-person narrative voice keeps raw emotion at the fore, drawing readers into Clementine's struggles without wallowing in melodrama or despair. Characterization is deeply compassionate: Clementine's self-destructive behavior may push family and friends to the edge, but readers will find her surprisingly easy to love, and her mother emerges as a realistically struggling person, both with her own sadness and her failure to help her remaining daughter. A companion novel to Hood's earlier, similarly themed Jude Banks, Superhero, this works successfully as a standalone or as a bridge back to the previous work. AM COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A teen struggles to cope with her younger sister's death in the follow-up to Jude Banks, Superhero (2021). Ever since her younger sister, Halley, died from a peanut allergy two years ago, 14-year-old Clementine Marsh has felt like the world outside is overwhelming and that she's trapped in a snow globe. Her new high school is chaotic, and gossip has made her a target of bullying. Her best friend moved to Vermont and feels like a stranger. Worst of all, her widowed mother has fallen in love. How can Clementine cope with losing Halley when it feels like she's losing her mom too? Clementine's narrative, which drifts between past and present, candidly explores depression and grief. Unfortunately, some scenes, such as Clementine's vividly recounted suicide attempt, risk triggering readers with similar struggles, and there are no mental health resources included. Realistically, Clementine's path toward healing is not linear; hopeful moments alternate with physical and verbal outbursts and periods of inertia. Readers will root for Clementine as she learns to manage her emotions with help from a support group, though Hood's dashing of potentially positive developments becomes emotionally taxing. Most secondary characters are lightly developed, but Clementine's relationship with her mother--who remains steadily supportive amid her own grief, worry, and exhaustion--is touchingly three-dimensional. Clementine reads White; secondary characters bring some diversity. An unvarnished portrait of grief and healing; approach with care. (Fiction. 12-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Since her younger sister Halley died from an allergic reaction to peanuts two years prior to this book's start, now-14-year-old Clementine Marsh, who cues as white, has experienced depression and grief that led to a suicide attempt. Now, she's transitioned out of her beloved Montessori and started ninth grade at a chaotic new school where she experiences bullying, slaps a smirking classmate, and believes she's seen as "the one who has lost her mind." Meanwhile, she also feels as if she's stuck in a snow globe where tears fall instead of snow. Clementine's widowed mother provides support via a residential program and therapy, a support group, a trip to see old friends, and, finally, what Clementine; whose snarky first-person narration is candid and sometimes funny; calls a "low-rent Outward Bound." The program emphasizes activity, community, and routine, but nothing really helps, especially when Clementine's mother starts dating. Balancing each of Clementine's steps forward with one back, Hood's follow-up to Jude Banks, Superhero offers a difficult, emotionally keyed portrayal of grief, depression, and suicidal ideation in which healing comes slowly, and in fits and starts. Ages 10: up. Agent: Gail Hochman, Brandt & Hochman. (May)

#1980983 Bicycle Spy (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Yona Zeldis McDonough

Marcel loves riding his bicycle, whether he's racing through the streets of his small town in France or making bread deliveries for his parents' bakery. He dreams of someday competing in the Tour de France. But ever since Germany's occupation of France began two years ago, in 1940, the race has been canceled.
 978-0-545-85095-7 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2016 208 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 5.0 RC Lvl 3.7

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-It is 1942 in German-occupied France. The Tour de France has been cancelled for the last two years, and Marcel, a young French boy, must keep two very big secrets: his parents are part of the resistance, and the new girl in town, a friend and fellow bicycle enthusiast, tells him that she is Jewish. Marcel must decide if he will help his new friend, even if it means putting his life and the lives of his parents at risk. This story takes readers on a historical adventure as they follow Marcel, astride his trusty bicycle, along the streets of German-occupied France. History seamlessly meets fiction as readers learn about a snippet of life in World War II Europe. Marcel is often frightened when he has to go through various checkpoints, where soldiers question his every move. However, he uses his love for cycling to get him through these dangerous times. The brief histories provided at the end of the story and the glossary of terms offer additional background and support for students just learning about this time period. VERDICT This would be a great resource in a World War II unit. Students will become engrossed in Marcel's exploits as he attempts to save his family from an awful fate.-Elizabeth Anne Ragain, Springfield Public Schools, MO Copyright 2016. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2281027 City of Magic (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Avi

In Italy, 1492, King Claudio sends Mangus the Magician and his faithful servant boy, Fabrizio, to Venice to steal a manuscript that explains a revolutionary way of accounting -- double-entry bookkeeping. But Venice is a dangerous place, full of informers, prisons, and harsh punishments for those who steal its secrets. When Mangus is snatched away into prison, it is up to Fabrizio -- and his mysterious new friend, Bianca -- to navigate the countless islands and foggy canals to find Friar Pacioli before their enemies do, and to save Mangus from being executed.

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

978-0-545-32197-6 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 8.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review Fabrizio is a kind but naive lad and a devoted servant of Mangus the Magician, who lives in an Italian kingdom in 1492. When King Claudio orders elderly Mangus to travel to Venice and procure a book explaining a secret of acquiring wealth (Claudio's misunderstanding of double-entry bookkeeping), Mangus must go. Thirteen-year-old Fabrizio accompanies him and, when his frail master falls ill, takes charge. During the journey, the boy thoughtlessly shares information with strangers, endangering their mission and their lives. In Venice, Mangus is immediately imprisoned. Befriending a local girl and a friar, Fabrizio attempts to complete his master's quest, despite mortal danger from a rival in Claudio's court as well as Venetian authorities. In this companion book to Avi's Midnight Magic and Murder at Midnight (2009), he transports readers to a series of vividly realized Italian Renaissance settings and continues the adventures of Fabrizio, a flawed but lovable character who means well, frequently acts on impulse, and stubbornly clings to his hope that Mangus can perform magic, despite the "magician's" protests that he cannot. The novel's pace is quick, and tension is often high, particularly during the chase scenes. Readers who have followed Fabrizio's perilous journey will find the story's ending completely satisfying. HIGH-DEMAND BACKSTORY: Avi is a pillar of kid's historical fiction, and this companion to a beloved series is sure to attract his stalwart fans. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Rumors of a new kind of magic draw young Fabrizio and his aging master, Mangus, to Renaissance Venice in this follow-up to Murder at Midnight (2009). Fabrizio and Master Mangus are dispatched by the king of their town of Pergamontio, who has heard of a mysterious new way of making money, explained in a book by Franciscan friar Luca Pacioli. Superstitious Fabrizio discovers a world of seemingly magical wonders as he shepherds the increasingly sick and feeble Mangus through the cosmopolitan city of canals. They are pursued, for no evident reason aside from drumming up tension, by the king's tax collector and an equally sinister confederate. Fabrizio quickly falls in with Bianca, a fellow orphan who serves as a local guide and who has an Egyptian gondolier (the one character with a speaking part who doesn't present as White) on call for transportation. She even turns out to be trained in the new magic, otherwise known as double-entry bookkeeping. Some chases, captures, escapes, and nighttime boat rides provide at least a framework of a plot, but along with providing no real rationale for the bad guys' pursuit, they offer Mangus no active role beyond prisoner in need of rescue and barely sketch in the distinctive setting. The author seems chiefly interested in introducing readers to Pacioli, a real historical figure, before finishing off with a happy ending...for the good guys, at least. Despite the manufactured suspense, this may draw middle-grade students of accounting history to the series. (author's note) (Adventure. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2167560 Artifact Hunters (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Janet Fox

With the help of his new friends, Isaac has to unlock his powers and unravel the reason his parents sent him Rookskill Castle. But he's not the only artifact hunter, and soon he finds himself in a race against Nazi spies and an even more sinister magical enemy. Can Isaac solve the puzzle, save his parents, and defeat the evil in our world and beyond, all before the clock runs out?

978-0-451-47869-6 Viking ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 740

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Evil forces are closing in on 12-year-old Isaac Wolf. Isaac overhears his parents arguing that he must "escape" and be "trained." Escaping makes sense; the Nazis have invaded his native Prague and many of his friends have disappeared. But what does he need to be trained for? It is too dangerous for his parents to teach him their secrets, so instead they grant him two gifts: an ancient watch and an eternity-symbol pendant. With these, he must discover the secrets of time-traveling and being an artifact guardian. Puzzling out the secrets of his destiny won't be easy with a dark fae named Moloch stalking him. Moloch wants the magical pendant for his own evil designs. Isaac's parents send him to Rookskill Castle in Scotland, the one place that can shelter him against the wicked fairy. Once a school, now Rookskill is a training ground of the MI6 Special Alternative Intelligence Unit, where magical children use their gifts to help the Allies win the war. There Isaac meets Kat, who has a magical object of her own, a cursed chatelaine that was the subject of the companion novel The Charmed Children of Rookskill Castle. With the help of his newfound friends, Isaac must learn to harness his magical powers and become a guardian before Moloch can break through the castle's protective wards. VERDICT This fast-paced fantasy will appeal to fans of Carlos Hernandez's "Sal and Gabi" series. A strongly recommended purchase where adventurous fantasy is popular.—Jocelyn Charpentier, Acton-Boxborough Regional School Dist., MA

#2155644 Bad Best Friend (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rachel Vail

Niki Ames can't wait to start eighth grade, that all-important year before high school. She and her best friend Ava have shared so many plans for the coming year. But then the unthinkable happens: at gym class pair-up, Ava chooses someone else to be her partner. Niki is devastated. It's clear that Ava wants to be part of the popular group, leaving Niki behind. Meanwhile, life at home is complicated. Niki's nine-year-old brother Danny continues to act out. Their mother refuses to admit that Danny is somewhere on the autism spectrum, but it's clear he needs help. Niki doesn't want to be like her brother, to be labeled as different. She just wants to be popular! Is she a bad sister and a bad best friend?

978-0-451-47945-7 Viking ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 580

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When the gym teacher tells the eighth-grade class to pair up with their best friends, Niki is stunned when her longterm bestie Ava edges away from her and partners up with a more popular classmate. While it's clear their friendship is circling the drain, mercurial Ava sends mixed signals, and Niki, fixated on her identity as the person who understands Ava and her underlying fragility, keeps hanging on and hoping for a return to full inclusion. Meanwhile, at home, Niki's younger brother is increasingly struggling, but her relentlessly bright-sided mother insists that getting him tested for autism would just harm him and hurt the family's reputation on their small Maine island. As usual, Vail adroitly depicts personality and human dynamics with deceptive simplicity, revealing the complicated facets of this friendship drift. Ava is superbly characterized in her mix of manipulative gaslighting and age-appropriate emotional clumsiness as she grabs onto people and pushes them away according to her momentary need, but Niki does much the same thing to her hastily created new friend group, and Niki's family dynamics clearly set her up to accommodate at all costs. Readers who've experienced the serrated edge of friendship will sympathize with Niki's anguish, and they'll be glad to see her coming into her own. DS

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Protagonist Niki has been best friends with Ava since the latter moved to their small Maine island in third grade. So Niki is crushed when, in eighth grade, Ava suddenly ditches her for the popular girls. She blames herself: she didn't give Ava enough attention; she's immature; she's annoying; and so on. Niki has a tendency toward negative self-talk; she dreams of having a time machine to "erase all my dorkiness." What's worse, she isn't sure what to do about the fact that she like-likes her next-door neighbor, and she's worried about her younger brother, Danny, who's undergoing testing for an autism diagnosis. To her surprise, however, Niki discovers that she isn't alone: her best friend before Ava, Holly, is there for her. And Holly is totally different from Ava; she shows Niki what having a real friend is like, teaching her that mistakes are, if not erasable, then forgivable. Through her protagonist's pitch-perfect narration, Vail re-creates the experience of being thirteen, from the awkwardness to the cutthroat friendship dynamics to the slang ("I'm fully tragic," Niki explains to her classmates about needing glasses). The subplot about Danny adds warmth to the drama; it's clear that Niki is a compassionate sister in a loving family, even though she doesn't always see it that way. With a few missteps, she gains confidence; by book's end, when she is finally able to stand up to Ava, it's with the knowledge that she is complete--and cool!--without her. (Copyright 2020 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An eighth grader's world is thrown into turmoil when her best friend publicly identifies another girl as such instead. Required to team up with a best friend in gym class, Niki's mortified when Ava chooses Britney, leaving Niki by default with "wonky, nerdy, wholesome" Holly, her best friend in third grade (before Ava moved here to Snug Island, Maine). Bonding with Holly and her friends holds little appeal. Niki's desperate to restore the status quo, but Ava won't answer her texts and now hangs out with the superpopular Squad. Confronted, Ava defends her behavior by attacking Niki, who's still mourning their lost friendship. Niki's social anxiety echoes her mother's. (She exhausts herself pretending that Niki's little brother, Danny, is doing fine; later, testing places him on the autism spectrum.) Niki feels guilty for repeatedly blowing off Holly, who single-handedly saves Danny's ninth birthday party. While Danny's needs and crises increasingly demand parental attention, Niki herself becomes a person of interest to neighbor and classmate Milo. Occasionally, the plot spirals into melodrama; Holly's mature intelligence and Ava's manipulative selfishness can seem excessive next to the perfect-pitch presentation of other characters, Niki especially. Danny--high-functioning but self-absorbed, sweet but annoying, impervious yet vulnerable--is an appealing standout among fictional characters on the spectrum, a fully rounded individual. Niki and her family are white, as are most--but not all--of her classmates. Vail's gift for channeling adolescent angst is the icing on this funny, moving tale. (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eighth graders Niki and Ava have been best friends since Ava moved to Snug Island, Maine, in third grade and claimed Niki from then-friend Holly. But now critical Ava needs a break. Niki strives to be what Ava wants, even as Ava begins hanging out with their class's most popular girls. Holly works to befriend Niki again, despite their past, but Niki only wants Ava back; that and maybe to spend more time with her crush, Milo. Things at home are charged, too: Niki's nine-year-old brother, Danny, has meltdowns that have led to the school asking that he be tested, while their mother tries to pretend everything is fine. It's not until Niki attends a party where things go very wrong that she realizes what a good friend really is. The story contains powerful moments, and Niki is a relatable character, but it can be difficult to understand why she would want to remain friends with someone who is repeatedly unkind to her, and Ava's sometimes overly explanatory dialogue makes her feel less developed than her counterpart. Ages 10: up. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Eighth grader Niki Ames is trying to navigate the complexities of middle school friendship and feelings. Early on, she discovers her best friend, Ava, might not be her best friend after all. This sad realization prompts Niki to second-guess herself and her behaviors as she weighs each of her words and actions against how Ava may perceive her. She deals with the push-and-pull of texting; she regrets there isn't a delete for sending a message. She worries she'll tell people too much about her family, especially about her younger brother, who is on the autism spectrum. She has a loving and supportive family, but her brother's behavior can be challenging for both her and her parents. There is a plethora of middle school concerns that will prompt thought and discussion, including a first, and unwanted, kiss; maintaining and acquiring friendships; being and feeling left out; supporting siblings; and more. All are handled with Vail's deft hand and balanced with keen insight and a splash of humor. The story unfolds in Niki's authentic voice. The conflicts, though numerous, do not make this a "problem" novel but rather an insightful look at the dramas surrounding students in middle school. Readers will see good and bad elements of the many characters, just like real life, and will be curious to understand their behaviors. VERDICT This page-turning, solid friendship story will be savored by middle grade students. A welcome addition to library collections.—Helen Foster James, University of California at San Diego

#2252184 One Smart Sheep (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gary D. Schmidt

Wilson is a curious sheep, and after he foolishly climbs into the back of a piano movers' truck, he ends up alone in the big city, far from the farm. But Wilson is also one smart sheep, and soon enough he's finding his way home to his worried owner by recognizing the sounds that he heard while he was trapped in the truck—a jackhammer, a calliope, a hotdog man.

978-0-544-88835-7 Clarion Books ©2021 6-1/4 x 8 80 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 1.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this beginning chapter book authored by previous collaborators (A Long Road on a Short Day) Schimdt and his late wife Stickney, a sheep named Wilson makes an unexpected journey via delivery truck. It takes Wilson's resourceful owner Abigail Atwood, a border collie named Tippy, and a crusty, loud machine: loving neighbor named Jeremiah Jefferson to restore Wilson to his place on Abigail's farm. The narration proceeds in real time, describing Wilson's remarkably friendly personality; he always trots over for a pat; and developing a subplot of crabby exchanges between Abigail and Jeremiah ("I suppose he'd look handsome to some," Jeremiah says grudgingly when asked to admire Wilson). Affectionate passages recall Wilson's idyllic babyhood in Abigail and Tippy's cabin; it's an interest in finding the "warm and comfortable" that leads Wilson into a piano delivery truck, setting off further gambols. Rhythmic narration often comes in threes, as when Wilson discovers his error: "No Tippy. No Abigail. No woodstove, either." Manning (Jumping Off Library Shelves) contributes green, misty watercolors, with pink-skinned characters whose friendly, expressive faces befit this pure-hearted comedy. The creators celebrate the quirky dilemmas of rural life in a way that radiates affection for animals and their owners. Ages 8: 12. Authors' agent: Rick Margolis, Rising Bear Literary. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 2–5—Wilson, an unusual sheep, gets lost but finds his way back home. Wilson is no ordinary sheep; he feels emotions and has characteristics like a human. He lives with 26 other sheep on a farm owned by Abigail Atwood. Abigail and her dog Tippy have always observed that Wilson isn't ordinary, and they gravitate toward him. When Abigail goes for her daily visit and upkeep of the sheep pen, Wilson always comes to her to be petted and talks to her in his sheep language. She has had this special sheep on her farm since he was a baby and has always treated him differently. For instance, she gave him bottles of milk when he was little and treats him as more of a pet than a farm animal. One evening, Abigail forgets to close the pen. Wilson ends up in a delivery truck and is left alone in the big city. When Abigail realizes he is missing, she frantically goes looking for him with the help of Tippy and her neighbor Jeremiah. Wilson, realizing he is no longer on the farm, relies on the sounds of his memories to find his way back home. He succeeds, as Abigail finds him headed back to the farm. VERDICT A jovial tale of a human and animal bond where it's least expected. Children will enjoy reading about an animal who doesn't always take center stage, and will be awed by Wilson's bravery and intelligence. Great for any children's library collection.—Annmarie Braithwaite, New York P.L.

#2182197 Long Road on a Short Day (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gary D. Schmidt

In a story of perseverance and determination told with warmth and sparkling with

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

humor, a short winter day finds Samuel and Papa walking a long road on Samuel's first trading trip. Meeting strangers, practicing good manners, and proud to be in Papa's company, Samuel watches and learns as Papa trades up from almost nothing to the milk cow Mama is yearning for.

978-0-544-88836-4 Clarion Books ©2020 6-1/4 x 8 64 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 1.0

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine When Samuel's mother expresses an ardent wish for "a brown-eyed cow to give us milk for the baby," Samuel and his father pack a couple of apples and their best Barlow knife to trade and set out down the road as the cold January clouds gather. At each stop, the boy, who loves animals and longs for a pet, wishes, "just a little bit, it wasn't a brown-eyed cow his mother was wanting." As they swap the Barlow knife first for two tin lanterns and then, successively, briefly come into the possession of a book of poetry, a blue-and-white pitcher, a lamb, and a pony and cart, the daylight begins to wane and the snow begins to fall in earnest. Along the way, readers are privy to the warm interactions between father and son as well as their easy rapport with their neighbors. The narrative is spare and engaging with a folktale-like tone and storyteller's flair for repeated phrasing. Yelchin's lively full-color paintings are full of motion and realistic natural detail. The period and the setting are not specified; rather, this is a bit of timeless rural Americana. The circular journey is a successful one, and Samuel proves his mettle as a companion and helper -- and has earned his heart's desire. Luann Toth November/December 2020 p.82(c) Copyright 2020. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Samuel's mother wishes one winter morning for "a brown-eyed cow to give us milk for the baby." A man of action, Samuel's father takes his good knife off the mantelpiece and sets out to trade. "It's a long road on a short day," he tells Samuel, urging him to keep up; they know the winter sun will set soon. In a series of neighborly negotiations, the knife is exchanged for a pair of tin lanterns, the lanterns for a book of poetry, the poetry for a fine pitcher, and so on, until Samuel and his father return with the treasure they sought. Early American scenes by Yelchin (Spy Runner) capture driving snow, rural scenery, and the many farm animals Samuel encounters. In short, vivid chapters, Schmidt (Pay Attention, Carter Jones) and his late wife, Stickney, show Samuel's father's canny judgment (he knows just who might like the book of poetry) while paying attention to Samuel's inner life, too. He longs for a pet of his own: he "wished again, just a little bit, it wasn't a brown-eyed cow his mother was wanting." Underpinning this deliberately paced story with an old-fashioned feel is the relationship between Samuel and his strong, reliable father, whose pride in his son is quiet but evident. Ages 8: 12. Authors' agent: Rick Margolis, Rising Bear Literary. Illustrator's agent: Steven Malk, Writers House. (Nov.)

#2252241 Bookshop of Dust and Dreams (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mindy Thompson

It's 1944 Sutton, NY, and Poppy's family owns and runs, Rhyme and Reason, a magical bookshop that caters to people from all different places and time periods. Though her world is ravaged by World War II, customers hail from the past and the future, infusing the shop with a delightful mix of ideas and experiences.

978-0-593-11037-9 Viking ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist While WWII rages overseas, Poppy spends much of her life in her family's magical New York City bookstore, and it's no wonder: the front door acts as a sort of portal, miraculously pulling in people in need of hope from different decades and locations. The extraordinary shop, prone to emotional outbursts, is one of a string of similar stores scattered about, all part of a long tradition of magical bookshop keeping. Each shop abides by strict guidelines—the most crucial rule stating that no personnel can use the time magic for themselves—though when tragedy strikes, Poppy's older brother desperately plots to skirt the regulations and set their world right again. This excruciating test of Poppy's loyalty takes all of her kindness and creativity to keep her family, bookstore, and larger world safe. It's a splendid setup, and the story takes the time to establish the cozy bookshop world while adding enough twists to keep things interesting, with details to delight in, and emotional avenues to explore. Stop by this bookshop for a magical, moving tale.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Set in 1944 in Sutton, N.Y., against the backdrop of WWII, this moving examination of pain and power stars bookish, white 13-year-old Poppy Fulbright, who must navigate the painful death of a friend, her brother's all-consuming grief, and their father's sudden illness while managing the family's magical, moody bookshop, which appears to individuals throughout time who need books and community. Despite the promise that she and her brothers, nine-year-old James and 18-year-old Allan, would adhere to the shop's generations-old rules; including never using its magic for their own gain; Poppy begins to suspect something is amiss when the store begins acting out of character. Worried that Allan is at fault and determined to set things right, Poppy enlists the help of Theo Devlin, a young white shopkeeper at another magical store who understands Poppy's heartache; 14-year-old Ollie Bell, the energetic, light brown: skinned courier who delivers to the shop; and regulars at the shop whom Poppy has come to consider family. Just as the sentient, time-traveling bookstore functions as a comforting haven, Thompson's poignant debut offers an opportunity for readers to gently explore the ways in which people respond to and accept loss. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Sarah Landis, Sterling Lord Literistic. (Oct.)

#2368317 Summer at Squee (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Andrea Wang

Phoeny Fang plans to have the best summer ever. She's returning to Summertime Chinese Culture, Wellness, and Enrichment Experience (SCCWEE for short and "Squee" to campers in the know), and this year she's a senior camper. That means she; her best friend, Lyrica Chu; and her whole Squad will have the most influence. It almost doesn't matter that her brother is a CIT (counselor-in-training) and that her mom and auntie are the camp directors. Time spent at Squee is sacred, glorious, and free.

978-0-593-11131-4 Kokila ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 800

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Phee can't wait to be reunited with her besties ("the Squad") for their last year of summer camp, lovingly called Squee after its acronym, SCCWEE (Summertime Chinese Culture, Wellness, and Enrichment Experience). But Phee, who holds tradition and routine near to her heart, is thrown for a loop when five new girls join, forcing the Squad to break into two separate groups for all their camp activities. What's more, the new girls don't even seem to want to be there. While Phee struggles with these changes, she also grapples with confusing signals from the cute new counselor-in-training and a stressful atmosphere caused by internet trolls targeting Squee with anti-Asian hate messages on social media. Wang, whose Watercress (2021) received a Newbery Honor, takes on a lot here. Squee is a place where important lessons are taught and learned, and that's what this book feels like, as well. The number of traditional Chinese arts, crafts, sports, and mini language tutorials come at the reader fast--as do the sheer number of characters--at the risk of overwhelming them with details and overshadowing the plot. None of this is to say that these aren't lessons worth learning, and Wang spends a lot of time examining the complexity of being bicultural and how that experience can look and feel very different from one person to the next. Best for classroom use when it can be paired with extension activities or broader lessons on Chinese culture. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After surviving the loneliness of seventh grade, Phoenix can't wait to be with her favorite people in her happy place just one last time, before she's too old. SCCWEE, or Summertime Chinese Culture, Wellness, and Enrichment Experience, is Phoeny's sanctuary. She loves all the fun camp traditions and the heritage classes, like Chinese rice dough sculpting and ribbon dancing. But her plans for a perfect time are interrupted by the arrival of new girls who don't share her positive attitude toward camp and Chinese culture, which leaves Phoeny feeling confused and threatened. Plus, she's competing with one of them for the attention of the same boy. Thankfully, Phoeny has her passion for sewing clothes to help her deal with the stress. Once she learns that the new girls are transracial adoptees from white families and face their own unique set of challenges, Phoeny opens up, and a virtuous cycle of vulnerability, empathy, and acceptance ensues. When trolls post racist comments on the camp's social media, the campers use their joyful creativity to resist the fear and hate. Through careful research and interviews, Wang has crafted a narrative that reflects many transracial adoptees' feelings and experiences. The believable dialogue questions and explores deeply held beliefs about culture. Phoeny's lovingly detailed, introspective viewpoint will positively influence readers' awareness of their own emotional and cultural landscapes. Blending moxie and grace, this novel is a worthy guide through cultural expansiveness and summer camp antics and angst. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Phoeny Fang looks forward to Squee--a Chinese heritage summer camp--every year. As senior campers, she and her friends--the Squad--plan to make the most of their final experience. But things go awry from the start when the Squad is broken up due to an influx of new, unenthused campers. Phee tries to be as welcoming as possible, but in attempting to befriend her group members, she finds herself butting heads with McKenna, who is irritated by Phee's probing personal questions. This new group doesn't take to martial arts, language lessons, and other Chinese cultural activities as easily as the Squad and, upon learning that they're all adoptees, Phee and the rest of Squee's senior campers shift their perspectives. Over the next two weeks, Phee experiences transformative moments and first crushes, and her love for her friends and community deepens. With light prose and even pacing, Wang (The Many Meanings of Meilan) relays themes of identity, belonging, and acceptance, deftly communicating the feelings of both the senior campers and Squee's newest members without minimizing their plights. An author's note speaking to Wang's own experience at a camp like Squee as well as adoptee resources conclude. Ages 8-12. (Mar.) Copyright 2023 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8--After a lonely seventh grade year due to her friend group breaking up, Phoeny Fang is looking forward to her summer at Squee, otherwise known as the Summertime Chinese Culture, Wellness, and Enrichment Experience. Phoeny and her summer camp friends are excited to experience the camp traditions as senior campers this year--until their group, the Squad, is split up to include a new group of campers. At first Phoeny tries to be friendly to the new members, sharing everything she loves, but they aren't as interested in traditional Chinese activities. The new campers are facing their own set of challenges as adoptees, and with the fact that some of Phoeny's favorite parts of camp make them feel excluded. This knowledge changes the perspective of the senior Squee campers, and over the next few weeks, themes of identity, belonging and acceptance surface as both new and returning campers explore what it means to be Chinese American. An author's note shares the experience of Wang's family with cultural heritage camp as well as resources about the adoptee experience. VERDICT A fun summer camp coming-of-age story for all students, but especially those traversing issues of cross-cultural identity.--Sarah Polace Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2179679 Closer to Nowhere (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ellen Hopkins

For the most part, Hannah's life is just how she wants it. She has two supportive parents, she's popular at school, and she's been killing it at gymnastics. But when her cousin Cal moves in with her family, everything changes. Cal tells half-truths and tall tales, pranks Hannah constantly, and seems to be the reason her parents are fighting more and more. Nothing is how it used to be.

978-0-593-10861-1 Putnam Pub Group ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 490

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist The queen of gritty YA novels-in-verse enters the realm of middle-grade literature with this story of a white, middle-class family fracturing under myriad pressures yet refusing to be broken. Hannah Lincoln is monumentally annoyed when her cousin Cal moves in with them after his mother dies. His mood swings and prank-playing have cemented his “weird kid” status both at home and at school—of course he’s in her class, too—and the arguments between Hannah’s parents have skyrocketed since Cal’s arrival. Hopkins reveals the already-fraying edges of the Lincolns’ domestic life as it begins to unravel more rapidly. Hannah’s dance recitals and gymnastics meets provide a veneer of normalcy by routinely bringing everyone together, but Cal’s PTSD over losing his mother and suffering abuse by his drug-addicted father forces everyone to reassess the truth of their situation. Hannah and Cal narrate in free-verse passages, providing insight into their psyches and Cal’s tumultuous past. Hopkins paints a realistic picture of a family undergoing upheaval and learning to better care for one another.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly ose poems, Hopkins (People Kill People) tells the story of cousins Hannah Lincoln and Calvin Pace, both sixth graders. Following his mother's death three years prior and subsequent difficulties with his father, who struggles with drug addiction, Cal is living with Hannah's family. He likes it there, but he's been through a lot and doesn't feel completely safe, and he knows that popular gymnast Hannah isn't crazy about having a housemate who melts down at school and whose tall tales and disappearances bring chaos into her home life. She admits that things haven't been great for a while, but it's hard not to blame Cal when her parents' marriage seems to be fraying, in part because they disagree about how to handle him. Cal's an aspiring writer, and his chapters question their own accuracy ("FACT OR FICTION: / Owls Are Bad Luck"); Hannah's sections are framed as definitions, as she tries to pin down what's what. While the headers can feel forced, Hopkins creates realistic portrayals of two kids trying to do their best even when it's not easy. Ages 10: up. Agent: Laura Rennert, Andrea Brown Literary. (Oct.)

#2216059 We Belong (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Cookie Hponia Everman

Stella and Luna know that their mama, Elsie, came from the Philippines when she was a child, but they don't know much else. So one night they ask her to tell them her story. As they get ready for bed, their mama spins two tales: that of her youth as a strong-willed middle child and immigrant; and that of the young life of Mayari, the mythical daughter of a god.

978-0-593-11220-5 Dial Books ©2021 5 x 7 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 830

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist From debut author Everman comes a novel in verse that blends the magical and the real. As Elsie’s three children prepare for bedtime, they beg her for a story—Elsie’s own story. She instead tells them about Mayari, the moon goddess, who journeys with her siblings from one land to another. Mayari’s story parallels Elsie’s, as well as how her family fled the Philippines and came to America. It is, at times, a painful but familiar new immigrant story of struggle and hardship, but it also showcases not only the very tight bonds of Filipino families but also their perseverance. The book’s strength lies in Everman's ability to weave a plot that incorporates Filipino mythology with a personal immigration story. The challenge is in keeping track of all the characters, some with more than one name. Everman’s novel is a nice addition to the modern Filipino voices in children’s literature, including the similarly themed Fresh Off the Boat (2005), by Melissa de la Cruz, and Erin Entrada Kelly’s The Land of Forgotten Girls (2016).

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books In this verse novel, adult Elsie tells her two daughters bedtime stories about her past, intertwining scenes from her childhood in the Philippines and immigration to America with Pilipino myths about the moon goddess Mayari. Parallels abound and intertwine in this deceptively gentle verse novel punctuated with rounded, friendly illustrations: Elsie's relationship with her siblings often mirrors Mayari's, especially in their love for their younger sisters, while both struggle with love and pain as they remember a mother "who sang the world to life for me, / whose heart was not shaped like a fist." Elsie narrates her young life under the dictator Marcos, who would be ousted a few years after her family emigrates; the stakes of her parents' decision to make a life in the United States; and her struggles to hold onto her whole, multifaceted self when familial and social pressures seem intent on tearing her into Pilipino and American halves. Mayari's story takes her from idyllic childhood with a human mother and godly father to battles with her divine siblings for a role in the heavens as colonialism and Catholicism alter the geographies of mortal and divine life. While the themes of immigration and identity are familiar, the interweaving with mythology makes them feel fresh, as do Elsie's reflections on motherhood, her own daughters, and her determination to "know my name is safe in your mouths." This book packs a lot into spacious, spare lines, and it would work well in conversations about family, immigration, Pilipino history, and world mythology. Lullaby translations, a very useful glossary with pronunciation guide, and author's note are included. FHK

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Pilipino mother recounts a bedtime story about gods and her own family mythology. Speaking in free verse, Elsie, mother to young mixed-race girls Stella and Luna (their dad is White), weaves a moving and ethereal story about family, loss, pain, and hope. Beautifully steeped in Pilipino culture and cosmology, the story she tells is that of Mayari, the moon goddess, and how she came to make it her life's work to reflect light. Her heartfelt narration brings the gods to life. Mayari and her siblings, Apolaki and Tala, believe they have humble beginnings but later learn their father is Bathala Maykapal, or God Creator. Forced to choose between Earth and Heaven, the siblings take only what they can carry and follow their father to Heaven despite their fears. Their fight to belong with the other gods mirrors Elsie's other tale, that of her family's tumultuous immigration to the United States from the Philippines during Ferdinand Marcos' reign amid violent protests and rolling blackouts. Like Mayari, Elsie could bring only so much with her and was forced to leave behind more than her toys--like the yayas, or nannies, who cared for her and the neighborhood she grew up in. Woven together in captivating parallels, Elsie's and Mayari's stories (the former in black type and the latter in light blue) reflect the struggle and hardship many immigrants face in search of a new life. Sometimes raw and traumatic, other times hopeful and inspiring, Elsie's bedtime story rings true, encapsulating the heart of Pilipino culture. A beautiful and poignant tale of immigration fused with Tagalog myth. (glossary, songs, afterword) (Verse fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Filipino mythology beautifully intertwines a personal immigration story in this free verse novel. Half-Filipino, half-white Stella, nine, and her younger sister Luna request a bedtime story from their mother, Elsie Aguila. Elsie tells the Tagalog myth of Mayari, goddess of the moon, and her siblings, Apolaki and Tala; god and goddess of the sun and stars; who were raised on Earth until the death of their mother. There they learn their father is Bathala Maykapal, Great Creator God; they must leave Earth with only a few belongings to follow their father to Heaven, where they struggle to assimilate. Mirroring the myth, Elsie and her family are forced to leave their homeland during the violence of Ferdinand Marcos's presidency, "tak only what can carry" to the U.S. in a 50-pound suitcase. Deeply poignant, at times involving trauma, the tales are relayed in blue and black type, picking up where the last leaves off in alternating chapters. Infusing the heart of Pinoy culture into a moving, accessible bedtime narrative, this "story of outsiders" will resonate with anyone who has felt estranged in the place they call home. Ages 10: up. Agent: Sarah Burnes, the Gernert Co. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up--Sisters Stella and Luna ask their mother, Elsie, for a story one night before bed. Elsie shares with them two stories that weave together and complement each other. First, she tells the story of Dalisay, mother of three demigods; second, the story of Elsie's own childhood and mother who was abusive. Because of this, Elsie found herself always searching for other, better, mothers in stories. Told in verse, mixing Tagalog and English, the plot takes place through flashbacks and current moments. This sweet tale jumps around between Elsie's childhood in the Philippines, her eventual move and adjusting to life in the United States, Filipino culture and mythology, and present-day moments between mother and daughters. A glossary of Tagalog words used is included in the back of the book. VERDICT Everman's debut tackles timely topics such as immigration, and something that all adults and kids yearn for: a sense of belonging. A short, charming tale perfect for easing students into middle grade and longer chapter books.--Alicia Kalan, The Northwest Sch., Seattle Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2162659 Unadoptables (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Hana Tooke

Egbert, Lotta, Sem, Fenna, and Milou. They are the unadoptables: children who have lived their whole lives at the Little Tulip orphanage in Amsterdam. But with the sea captain hunting them down, and a nosy neighbor threatening to reveal them to the authorities, the unadoptables will have to work fast to uncover the truth and find a way to save each other.

978-0-593-11693-7 Viking ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist s at an orphanage in Amsterdam, Milou is confident her parents will eventually return for her. In the meantime, her only place is in four orphan friends, all possessing unusual talents and skills. When a shady stranger arrives to adopt the ragtag bunch, a suspicious Milo convinces her friends to escape before they're whisked away to certain doom. A puzzling clue in her original belongings may lead them to her family?and, hopefully, freedom?but when their travels point them to an abandoned windmill and a derelict puppet theater, it's clear their search will be anything but straightforward. Tooke's absorbing tale evokes the nineteenth-century Netherlands, including a smattering of Dutch vocabulary and it's a pleasure to explore the quirky and occasionally foreboding settings alongside the curious crew of orphans. Flashes of suspense and peril are balanced by lighthearted moments, with the bonds between the children creating a coziness even in the grimmest of circumstances. Always breezy, never dreary, this is a lovely testament to the power of family, in whatever form that may take.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Targeted in a wicked scheme, five resourceful kids flee their orphanage in 1892 Amsterdam. Each longs to be adopted, but would-be parents reject them when they see the kids' atypical attributes: Lotta's 12 fingers, Egg's East Asian ancestry (other characters default to white), Fenna's muteness, clumsy Sem's ears, and Milou's wild ferocity. That is, until sinister Meneer Rotman sees their remarkable gifts--but Milou's special sense warns her that Rotman's evil. Indeed: They discover he intends to buy them as slave labor to crew his ship. Milou, who keeps a Book of Theories regarding why her birth family hasn't claimed her, persuades them to escape to the puppet-making Poppenmaker family she's sure she belongs to. Loyal if not convinced, the others join her. Lotta's math and Egg's cartographic acumen help them follow coordinates on Milou's mysterious timepiece to the Poppenmakers' windmill home and puppet theater, now abandoned. Thanks to Lotta's technical ingenuity, Egg's artistry, Fenna's culinary prowess, and Sem's needlework--assisted by clockmaker and dike warden Edda Finkelstein--it's almost home. Then Milou forgets the other orphans have family longings, and the orphans discover Rotman has not forgotten them....While the vivid, Dickensian setting--grim orphanage, icy mists, and shadowy dockyards--and quaint clockwork creations and life-size puppets spin a web of Gothic creepiness, the bonds among this found family of lively orphans add plenty of warmth and light. Unfolding with the clarity of a fairy tale, this sure-footed debut casts a delightfully spooky spell. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In 1880, five babies were abandoned at Amsterdam's Little Tulip Orphanage without adhering to the institution's orderly rules. Named by the cruel Matron Gassbeek, their monikers are as unique as they are: 12-fingered Lotta, a master of mathematics; gentle Egg, a budding cartographer; timid Fenna, a mute culinary expert; and protective Sem, a sewing whiz. The fifth, Milou, whose ear-prickling sense warns her of impending danger, has written a book of theories about why her parents abandoned her in a small coffin. Twelve years later, these inseparable children, all considered unadoptable, are suddenly courted by a merchant who wants them to join him aboard his ship. Instead, the five escape to an abandoned windmill once owned by Milou's family; however, even their lifelike puppet guardian and Milou's sixth sense may not protect them from the dangers of the outside world. Despite employing a well-trod conceit; orphans frantic to escape a miserable life creating a found family; this story stands out for its enchanted setting, daring escapades, and an arch, vividly wrought third-person narrative by debut author Tooke. Ages 8: 12. (July)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Five orphans dropped off at the Little Tulip Orphanage within months of each other in 1880 remain there 12 years later. Growing up under the thumb of the duplicitous matron Gassbeek, who makes Miss Hannigan look like Mother Teresa, the orphans have banded together to create a tight-knit family. The leader of their group, the smart, creative and daring Milou, encourages them to mount an escape when an advantageous situation presents itself. Each orphan possesses a special skill which comes in handy when needs arise. Lotta, born with six fingers on each hand, is mechanically inclined and technically savvy. Egg is an artist and cartographer, Sem is a genius with a sewing needle, and Fenna, although mute, speaks the language of animals fluently. Each orphan has a clue or two about their birth parents, but no one is as eager to find their mother and father as Milou; that becomes the group's first order of business. The plot thickens with the arrival of a dastardly villain, a nosy yet helpful neighbor, and complications of the children's own doing. The Amsterdam setting lends a theatrical feel and perilous situations keep the pages turning. Milou finds some unexpected answers, but the book leaves many questions about the others should there be a sequel. VERDICT These resourceful orphans will quickly captivate readers who enjoy mysterious adventure stories. The concept of what makes a family is examined with surprising results. Recommended.—Sara-Jo Lupo Sites, George F. Johnson Memorial Lib., Endicott, NY

#2280799 Midnighters (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Hana Tooke

Ema Vaskova has always felt different. In a family of famous scientists, there hasn't been much room for superstition or omens. When Ema is sent to stay with her eccentric uncle in Prague, she fears she'll lose the chance to ever fit in. But then disaster strikes. Silvie goes missing-and it's up to Ema to find her. Now she must gather the courage to hunt the city, find her friend, and uncover the secrets of the one clue Silvie left as to where she might be-inside the mysterious Midnight Guild...

978-0-593-11696-8 Viking ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 12.0 Lexile 850

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An anxious child finds a friend, a secret circus, and a mystery to solve in 19th-century Prague. Ema Vasková has been gifted with an education in the sciences by her 11 older siblings, has uncommon knacks for reading faces and entering rooms unnoticed, falls into fugue states when she's thinking hard, and possesses the inner stuff to face her fears--given proper prodding. That prodding initially comes from mysterious and wild-spirited Silvie, a girl who leads her on a series of thrillingly daring nighttime adventures...and then disappears suddenly. Screwing her courage to the sticking place, Ema sets out alone to track her down and, after clever sleuthing, discovers a subterranean carnival of illusions and pseudoscientific marvels with which Silvie was somehow involved--and which is in turmoil following the supposedly accidental death of a resident ghost whisperer. Along with narrow squeaks and daring exploits, the author tucks in subtle cues and clues on the way to a classic whodunit climax in which Ema gathers cast members into a room to rehearse the evidence and not only exposes the guilty to vindicate her friend, but, most significantly, satisfies a deep yearning to be seen by her busy but, as it turns out, educable parents. Ema leads a cast that largely presents White. Tooke's afterword suggests that her protagonist is, like herself, neurodivergent; she demonstrates positive attributes that accompany a label that is often framed in terms of difficulties. Adventures beguilingly rich and strange beneath a series of "full-ish" moons. (Adventure. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A daredevil's heart beats at the center of a whimsically dark, adventurous mystery from Tooke (The Unadoptables), which is equal parts Tim Burton and Agatha Christie. Born in 19th-century Prague as the 12th child of ambitious scientist parents, Ema Vaskova struggles to find her place within her clinically minded family. Naturally cautious Ema possesses keen stealth and an aptitude for reading people, as well as precognitive instincts that make her insides itch. The 12-year-old's timidity is challenged when she befriends cavalier neighborhood girl Silvie, with whom she engages in clandestine, swashbuckling midnight meet-ups that cement the girls' friendship. When Silvie suddenly disappears, Ema employs her budding moxie to find her friend, putting her at odds with the Midnight Guild, a secret collective that's both responsible for an underground pseudoscience carnival and reeling from a recent murder. Balancing the comfort of an intricately plotted caper with death-defying action, this rollicking, shadowy thriller blurs the line between magic and science, maintaining a lightly creepy charm through every revelation. Black-and-white illustrations by Rubio introduce each chapter. Most characters cue as white; an author's note discusses Ema's characterization in terms of neurodivergence. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Jenny Savill, Andrew Nurnberg Assoc. (U.K.). (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--A thrilling, magical adventure, this murder mystery involves Ema, a 12th child born at midnight just as her grandmother takes her last breath. Ema doesn't feel as though she fits into her large family where every older sibling has a scientific passion and has been accepted at a prestigious academy. When her parents go on a research trip, they leave her with her estranged but kind uncle. He is an ideal support system for Ema, caring for her unceasingly while giving her the space she needs to grow. While there, she meets a mysterious friend who challenges her to face her fears. When this friend goes missing under curious circumstances, Ema begins an investigation into 19th-century Prague's magical underworld. This is a coming-of-age novel combined with an exciting mystery where surprises and revelations abound. Readers will appreciate familiar themes like friendship, discovering and sharing your true self, and seeking acceptance that are woven throughout. This book may be too long for younger readers but has satisfying intrigue and resolution for those who see it through. VERDICT This murder mystery is a thrilling choice for upper elementary and early middle school collections.--Christina Salazar Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2330066 Her Radiant Curse (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elizabeth Lim

Channi was not born a monster. But when her own father offered her in sacrifice to the tiger witch, she was forever changed. Cursed with a serpent's face, Channi is the exact opposite of her beautiful sister Vanna--the only person in the village who looks at Channi and doesn't see a monster. The only person she trusts.

978-0-593-30099-2 Knopf Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.
 Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 670

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 9-12 Starred Review Channi was small when her sister, Vanna, was born, but she still remembers the beguiling golden light that emanated from Vanna even at birth. She also remembers how, as her mother lay dying from childbirth, her father brought Channi into the forest as a sacrifice for Angma, the infamous Demon Witch. It was there that Channi's destiny was forged, as the king of serpents sacrificed his life for her in turn and gifted her with a poison so strong that Angma couldn't devour her. In exchange, the Demon Witch cursed her with a serpent's face and a bargain: if Channi brings Angma Vanna before Vanna's eighteenth birthday, Angma will lift the curse. Now that birthday approaches, and Channi, an outcast, loves no one more fiercely than her sister, except perhaps for the snakes who are her only friends. She trains to face Angma again, but the village prepares to auction Vanna off to whichever king will pay the most for her beauty, and both she and Channi are about to be caught up in a political and mythical battle that only one of them can survive. This stand-alone adventure from Lim's Lor'yan universe (Six Crimson Cranes, 2021) is artfully rendered, precisely paced, and piercingly true. Against the rich folkloric backdrop, Lim's complexly rendered characters come heartbreakingly alive. A fantasy to savor. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A curse shapes two sisters' lives. Channi was 2 the day Vanna was born. Adah, their father, tried to sacrifice Channi to the witch Angma in return for saving her mother's life. When his effort was thwarted by a snake, "the king among his kind," Angma punished Channi, giving her a face covered in snake scales that her father makes her cover with a mask. Unless Channi delivers her sister to Angma by Vanna's 17th birthday in just three days' time, Angma will destroy them. Now 19, lonely Channi is shunned in their village but revered by the island's poisonous snakes and by Vanna, whose beauty, enhanced by the mysterious golden glow radiating from her heart, attracts widespread love, admiration, and gifts. Adah arranges an auction, inviting local royalty to bid for Vanna's hand. When wealthy old King Meguh matches the bid of Vanna's choice, young Crown Prince Rongyo, the dispute is to be settled through combat. Channi leaps into the fray to help her sister, fighting the dragon Meguh puts forward on his side--who she discovers has a connection to her past. Realizing that there is much she doesn't know, Channi faces even more threats. Fast-paced, frenetic action scenes deliver high body counts. The characterization is occasionally inconsistent, but Lim's vivid worldbuilding is a unifying, overarching strength, drawing from the landscapes, mythologies, and cultures of Southeast Asia. Action-fueled fantasy deepened by a compelling setting and well-constructed cosmology. (Fantasy. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two sisters strive to save each other from a persistent evil in this thrilling fantasy adventure by Lim (the Six Crimson Cranes duology). Channi's Adah intended to sacrifice her newborn sister Vanna to Angma, the Demon Witch, in return for a blessing to spare his wife from death. Adah; enraptured by Vanna's beauty and the enigmatic light radiating from within her; instead offers three-year-old Channi. When she's saved by the serpent king, Angma curses Channi to resemble a snake, promising to undo it so long as Channi delivers her sister to Angma before Vanna's 17th birthday, otherwise Angma will hunt them both. Now 19, Channi is ostracized in her hometown for her reptilian face by all except her almost 17-year-old sibling. During Vanna's betrothal selection, in which suitors compete for her hand, her prospective match with kind Crown Prince Rongyo is derailed by brutal King Meguh. Channi battles and defeats King Meguh in Prince Rongyo's stead and, impressed by her face and abilities, King Meguh kidnaps Channi. As Angma begins her pursuit, Channi must rely on unlikely allies to reunite with Vanna. Occasionally dense but lush storytelling evokes East Asian folklore mixed with Helen of Troy vibes, culminating in an intriguing tale about one sisterhood that endures against all odds. Ages 12: up. Agent: Gina Maccoby, Gina Maccoby Literary. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7 Up--A spellbinding adventure that focuses on the bond between sisters and the strength it takes to be our true selves. Channi's father was supposed to sacrifice her new sister to the demon witch, but when the baby is born beautiful and radiating golden light, he drags Channi into the jungle instead. Channi survives her encounter, but at a cost--now she looks like a monster, her blood is poison, and the witch swears to come on her sister Vanna's 17th birthday to kill them both if Channi doesn't give her sister up to save herself. Channi won't sacrifice her sister and trains her whole life to fight the demon witch. On her 17th birthday, Vanna is more beautiful than ever, and their father hosts a selection for Vanna's suitors to bid on her. When Vanna's cruelest admirer wins, Channi duels the man's champion for her sister's freedom and finds herself suddenly the focus of his attention. Lim's latest novel broadens the horizons of her "Legends of Lor'yan," standing alone and highlighting traditional folklore and fairy-tale elements. Channi deals with the consequences of her actions as she grows out of her impulsiveness to grapple with the weight of prophecy and the sacrifices it entails. Readers familiar with the other books will recognize some side characters, but prior knowledge of the world is not required. Characters are coded a variety of Asian ethnicities. VERDICT Highly recommended for new and experienced fantasy readers. Hand to fans of Judy I. Lin's A Magic Steeped in Poison or Melissa Bashardoust's Girl, Serpent, Thorn.--Emmy Neal Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness This action-packed, evocative fantasy is replete with intriguing magic and East Asian folklore.

#2349480 Song of the Swan (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Karah Sutton

Olga is an orphan and a thief, relying on trickery and sleight of hand to make her way in the world. But it's magic, not thievery, that could get her into trouble. When Olga and her partner-in-crime Pavel learn of a valuable jewel kept in a secluded castle, Olga sees an opportunity to change their lives: a prize so big, they'd never have to steal again. But the castle is not as it seems, ruled by an enchanter who hosts grand balls every night, only for the guests to disappear each morning, replaced by swans.

978-0-593-12169-6 Alfred A. Knopf ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 800

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 More than anything, Olga wants freedom, freedom from the deceitful Mr. Bulgakov who forces her to use her Heartstring magic to swindle innocent villagers and from the hunger that drives her to do it. When she encounters a palace rumored to house a great treasure, she jumps at the chance to buy a new life--with the help of Pavel, her goodhearted, if distractible, companion. But something's wrong with the magic at the palace, and the baron there is planning something terrible. Ripe for fairytale fans, Sutton's magic system is easily understood, and interspersed short stories pose moral questions directly to the reader. As in her acclaimed debut, A Wolf for a Spell (2020), Sutton conjures a folkloric Eastern European setting in this Swan Lake retelling, and illustrator Hannuniemi lends a cozy feel with angular black-and-white renderings. Like the ballet it's inspired by, this middle-grade fantasy emphasizes the power of choice, and Olga is driven and practical as she wrestles with whether to chase her fortune or dig a little deeper to stop the baron's evil plan. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews No granted wish comes without strings attached. Left alone when her mother died, wild-maned moppet Olga, who knows nothing about her father, now runs with the nefarious Mr. Bulgakov and bighearted older-brother figure Pavel. For years, the three have kept moving, swindling villagers for food and profit, often using a form of magic possessed by Olga to create illusions. Olga does not feel good about this lifestyle, but years of being taught to look out for herself have inured her to it. That is, until an escape from law enforcement lands them in the Kamen Mountains, where legend tells of the Scarlet Heart, a jewel that could change their lives. Escaping from Mr. Bulgakov to search for it, Olga and Pavel find themselves in the lavish Sokolov Palace, complete with a swan-filled aviary and extravagant balls hosted by the enigmatic Baron Sokolov. Of course, it's all too good to be true, and Olga soon must try to unlock a "distorted, infected" magic, unaware that her own fate is inextricably linked to it. Segments of the story are cleverly previewed by an omniscient spider storyteller who addresses readers and asks them thoughtful questions. The characters are interesting, and the story, lovingly inspired by the ballets Giselle and Swan Lake, is well developed and moves briskly. Engaging illustrations, reminiscent of woodcut prints, add interest and context as the tale unfolds. In this Eastern European-influenced world, characters read white. An enchanting fairy tale. (author's note) (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Wise spiders, magical threads, and flawed illusions anchor this traditionally structured fantasy that nods to Swan Lake, focused on a child who uses her magical powers to help her swindling merchant caretaker. Desperate to escape the nomadic life she has endured since her mother's death when she was six, 13-year-old Olga determines to find a legendary jewel, the Scarlet Heart. She runs away with loyal 18-year-old giant Pavel, the third cohort of the swindler's trio, to a reputedly haunted valley that's home to Sokolov Palace, rumored both to be abandoned and to house the jewel. Not only is the palace not empty, but exuberant Baron Sokolov hosts hordes of guests nightly at glittering balls. Pavel is enchanted, but Olga, single-minded about finding the treasure and well aware of illusions' nature, quickly grows suspicious, and the presence of magic-bound swans raises further questions. Organized into eight tales and formally narrated by an omniscient spider who interrupts regularly to provide context for readers (addressed as "little ones"), this complicated and suspenseful work by previous collaborators Sutton and Hannuniemi (A Wolf for a Spell) is sometimes encumbered by Olga's distrustful nature as she resists succumbing to a compassionate use of her magic. Occasional b&w illustrations create an animated-film ambiance. Human characters present as white. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal d her companion, 18-year-old Pavel, both depicted as white in Hannuniemi's stylized black-and-white illustrations, feature in Sutton's Swan Lake-inspired Slavic tale. The story is divided into sections, each introduced by a male spider talking directly to readers and providing small clues. Olga is an orphan and a magical swindler who seeks a legendary gem, the Scarlet Heart, which seems like the answer to her hard-scrabble existence. Searching for it in the remote Sokolov Palace, Olga and Pavel encounter the genial Baron Sokolov who hosts nightly festivities for his guests. Conversations with the local talking spiders convince them to investigate further, as Olga is faced with an ethical conundrum—use her magic to try to break the palace's enchantment, or act in her own self-interest. Sutton transforms the celebrated ballet into a children's folk tale with some success. Olga is a refreshingly flawed individual whose bravery and initiative will appeal to readers. Lengthy descriptions of the foods at the Baron's feasts are unilaterally mouth-watering. Turning a tragic ballet into a hopeful children's tale creates some strained story threads which sit awkwardly alongside several of predictable plot twists. In the story's conclusion, Sutton spends time telling readers what lessons they should learn rather than having Olga demonstrate them. Accompanying illustrations are by turns textured and soft with waves and fine lines, and an engaging author's note sheds light on the book's inspiration and sources. VERDICT Sutton's prose is fluid and readable—certainly young balletomanes and fans of fairy-tale retellings will overlook the stumbles. Suitable for larger fantasy collections.—Caitlin Augusta

#2216138 Amazing Beef Squad: Never Say Die! (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jason Ross

Nick Rhodes and his friends Pratchett, Hogue, and Jared--together known as Beef Squad--have got seventh grade totally hacked. They have the smarts to make perfect grades by day, pull spectacular pranks by night, play video games in between, and do it all with a zany sense of humor. (Because someone has to celebrate National Asparagus Appreciation Day.)

978-0-593-12475-8 Delacorte Press ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 740

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In trying to save a favorite teacher from being fired, a tight quartet of seventh grade pranksters and a newbie uncover a web of small-town chicanery. Keying off a traditional middle-grade fiction trope, the new kid, motorcycle-boot-wearing, hip urban kid Karla Woo, is both a girl and smarter than her four classmates combined--as she demonstrates by not only beating them repeatedly in the video game "Dynamus," but hacking several phones and security systems...almost in time to save them from being caught in a bit of nighttime breaking and entering. In their defense, though Hogue, Jared, Pratchett, and Nick (the narrator) aren't above concocting fiendishly clever schemes to drive a succession of substitute teachers nuts, they are decent sorts at heart, and it's really their high regard for unconventional science teacher Mr. Easton that fuels most of their shenanigans. Discovering that he's being railroaded out of town by certain prominent local citizens eager to cash in on some suddenly valuable real estate, the middle schoolers do ultimately stumble their way to an improbable but devastating exposé that puts Easton back in the classroom and the villains in deep legal soup. This amiable caper features a young cast that is as smart as it is smart-mouthed, mildly caricatured grown-ups, and comical pratfalls aplenty on the way to a triumphant close. Everyone presents as White excepting Karla, who is cued as Korean American. More belly laughs than surprises, but a well-buffed debut novel. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—In the town of Leonardsville, a famous swindle has been hanging over residents' heads since the town's beginning. And the charter members of the Amazing Beef Squad, four smart but mischievous middle school boys, are about to get a chance to make things right. Nick, Pratchett, Jared, and Hogue get good grades, but you wouldn't necessarily know that from all of the time they spend playing video games and pulling pranks. Their latest escapade—adding made-up words to the glossary of the school's science textbooks—has landed each of them in suspension and under the overly watchful eye of school resource officer, Officer Jim. Even though they have to play it safe for awhile, the firing of their favorite teacher Mr. Easton is enough to spring them into action in a scheme that is bigger than they imagined. This tale suffers from lack of plot and character development. In the beginning, the blurred time lines make it hard for readers to understand what is happening in the present and what is merely background information. Readers might also have a hard time suspending disbelief. Overly flat characters coupled with exaggerated plot points (the school has students digitizing city documents as a part of their schoolwork) may make it hard for readers to stay invested. Even the interactions between the characters, especially between parents and kids, are not authentic and shift wildly from moment to moment. Although this is on the shorter side for middle grade novels, the overuse of descriptive language and labored dialogue causes the pacing to drag. For books with a similar tone but better results, consider John H. Ritter's The Boy Who Saved Baseball or John David Anderson's Ms. Bixby's Last Day. VERDICT This book is not recommended for purchase.—Louie Lauer, Jefferson Elem. Sch., Fargo, ND

#2178102 Circus of Stolen Dreams (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lorelei Savaryn

After Andrea's brother, Francis, disappeared, everything changed. Her world turned upside down, and there was nothing she could do to right it. So when she discovers a magical dream world called Reverie in the woods near her home, Andrea jumps at the chance to escape her pain and go inside. But the cost of admission is high: Andrea must give up a memory in order to enter. And she knows exactly which memory she'd like to give up.

978-0-593-20206-7 Penguin Young Readers Group ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 860

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Three years after her little brother, Francis, went missing from their shared bedroom in the middle of the night, Andrea is desperate to escape her pain and guilt. When she happens upon a flyer for “Reverie: Land of Dreams,” a fairground that promises to help you forget your troubles for the price of one memory or dream, she’s happy to pay the admission, ridding herself of the recollection of that horrible evening. Reverie’s proprietor, Mr. Sandman, has fashioned a circus of wonders where every tent contains discarded memories. Anyone can enter and experience the exhilarating dreams or thrilling nightmares, all in the safety of the fairground's embrace. Initially, Andrea is delighted to throw herself into the enchantment, but when she happens upon one of Francis’ nightmares, she realizes that the magical setting may be hiding her brother—along with something much more sinister. Savaryn’s unconventional story makes for a bewitching debut, filled with dazzling descriptions and real surprises. The dreams—and nightmares, too—are incredibly vivid, and readers will find themselves transported; the bittersweet musings on the importance of embracing both the good and bad in life are an encouraging balm to anyone trying to make sense of the beauty and pain that the world has to offer.

#2198115 Good War (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Todd Strasser

There's a new afterschool club at Ironville Middle School. Ms. Peterson is starting a video game club where the students will playing The Good War, a new game based on World War II. They are divided into two teams: Axis and Allies, and they will be simulating a war they know nothing about yet. Only one team will win. But what starts out as friendly competition, takes an unexpected turn for the worst when an one player takes the game too far.

978-0-593-17365-7 Delacorte Press ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 750

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Through a grant, "Extra Credit" Caleb Arnett has secured top-of-the-line gaming computers for Ironville Middle School, a largely white institution whose football team was cut due to funding, and he's now one of the inaugural members of the school's eSports club. With teacher approval, the kids, including team captains Emma Lopez and Gavin Morgenstern, select The Good War; a WWII game in which players take the sides of Axis or Allies. The students react in various ways to their new knowledge of Nazism: after a few weeks, Gavin's team asks to be Axis for every round, and they begin trying out German accents and clothes, seemingly unaware of these actions' implications. Online, an older white supremacist begins grooming one of the players, employing hateful rhetoric that coincides with outside intrusions of Nazi slogans and images into the club's chat box and matches. Strasser (The Summer of '69) packs a lot into this brief tale; while his damning of hate groups is anything but subtle, by using a gaming lens to explore the students' entree to prejudice and radicalization, he succeeds in lending immediacy and accessibility to his cautionary tale. Ages 10: up. Agent: Stephen Barbara, InkWell Management. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–7—The kids at Ironville Middle School love "The Good War," a popular WWII-based video game. It's no wonder that when math teacher Ms. B starts an esports club, that's the game they want to play, with two teams competing against each other as Axis vs. Allies. It's not long before symbols of hatred from that era in history show up in the mannerisms and clothing of the kids on the Axis team, leading to a violent confrontation between the two sides. Strasser tells a compelling, character-driven tale, demonstrating a keen understanding of how tweens think. Juggling eight different characters, including upstanding Caleb, socially anxious Emma, misunderstood footballer Gavin, and bullied Zach, Strasser creates authentic and appealing individuals. Reminiscent of the characters in The Breakfast Club, the esports members evolve over the course of the novel, changing the way they see themselves—and their peers. None of the students' race or ethnicity are described; the town of Ironville is described as "mostly white." The novel drives home the consequences of the Axis students' dangerous embrace of hate images they have not been educated about and don't understand. The lesson is a bit undermined by the flawed premise that a public school teacher would permit seventh graders to play a rated M, first-person shooter game in a school club, even if they enjoy it at home. VERDICT A timely message, engagingly told. Purchase for middle grade collections.—Marybeth Kozikowski, Sachem P.L., Holbrook, NY

#2317556 Amelia Gray Is Almost Okay (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jessica Brody

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Twelve-year-old Amelia Gray has changed schools thirty-nine times (!!!) because of her dad's job, which doesn't leave a lot of time for making friends. But that's okay. Amelia loves her "life on the go" with Dad and their adorable supermutt, Biscotti. But when her dad announces that he wants to stay in their new town for the whole summer—maybe even forever—Amelia realizes she's going to have to do the one thing she's never had to do: fit in. Yet despite her best efforts, she still can't answer the most important question of all: Who is the real Amelia Gray?

978-0-593-17372-5 Delacorte Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 14.0 Lexile 700

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 Twelve-year-old Amelia loves life on the road with Dad. Every month, he takes a new job in a different place, and Amelia starts over at another school (39 and counting). She's learned not to try to make friends, but she has her father and her dog for company, and she enjoys their dependable routine. When Dad takes a three-month job in the small town where her deceased mom grew up, Amelia is upset, but she seizes the opportunity to discover her passion. Reimagining herself as Amie (a track star), Mellie (journalist), and Lia (a musical theater enthusiast), with different looks and personalities, she joins three programs, makes several friends, and frantically tries to keep them away from one another. Brody portrays Amelia as an intelligent, independent, yet vulnerable character, dashing from one activity to another and feigning enthusiasm for each one, while her plan unravels in ways that are both amusing and touching. A feel-good story with a lovable protagonist, this well-paced middle-grade novel is engaging and enjoyable in equal measure. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Identity struggles, moving, and navigating relationships with family and peers are at the center of this middle-grade novel. Amelia Gray, who prefers blending into the crowd, is experiencing her 39th last day of school—that's approximately one new classroom per month. Surprisingly, Amelia's life is actually fairly routinized; for example, she and her itinerant handyman dad pick a different subject to master via YouTube in each new town. When they arrive in their latest town near Pittsburgh, Amelia notices that each student's yearbook picture is captioned with their crowning achievement. She aims to find her special skill over summer break. Amelia flits from one hobby to the next, trying her hand at track, journalism, and even drama, using a different name for each. Trouble ensues when her dog, Biscotti, has a run-in with Ketchup, the dog belonging to Finn, another new kid. Schedule conflicts and other mishaps also create a challenge for Amelia as she attempts to keep her multiple identities hidden. The lives she and her dad have built together since the death of her mother in childbirth may be about to change forever as Dad begins to put down roots. The novel would have benefited from stronger character development to bolster readers' emotional connections with the themes touched on, including the search for identity during the preteen years, peer relationships, and single-parent families' experiences. Main characters read White. Skims the surface in exploring commonly addressed issues. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly As 12-year-old Amelia Gray, who reads as white, finishes up sixth grade at her 39th school, she's ready for yet another four-week stay in a new place with her single father, who travels the country revamping hotels. Happy with their unattached "life on the go" and their "supermutt" Biscotti, she is stunned when her father announces that they'll stay in their next destination; Summerville, N.Y.; for an entire summer. He also challenges her to join an activity for the duration, and promises that if she sticks with it, he'll secure the thing she wants most: a dog DNA test for Biscotti. Flummoxed by the realization that she lacks a "Thing" of her own, Amelia reinvents herself as three separate people, each with a different name, to find out which persona suits her best. As Amie the "track superstar," Mellie the journalist, and Lia the performer, she makes friends; and enemies; and digs herself into a deepening pit of small-town drama as she tries to keep her identities separate and her father seems to put down roots. Aptly literalizing the perennial theme of reinventing oneself, this light comedy of errors from Brody (I Speak Boy) features laugh-aloud shenanigans and tender insights. Ages 10: up. Agent: Jim McCarthy, Dystel, Goderich & Bourret. (Mar.)

#2174390 Millionaires for the Month (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Stacy McAnulty

Felix Rannells and Benji Porter were never supposed to be field-trip partners. They find a wallet. A wallet that belongs to tech billionaire Laura Friendly. They're totally going to return it-but not before Benji "borrows" twenty dollars to buy hot dogs.

Because twenty dollars is like a penny to a billionaire, right? A penny doubled every day for thirty days is $5,368,709.12! So that's exactly how much money Laura Friendly challenges Felix and Benji to spend. They have thirty days.

978-0-593-17525-5 Random House Children's Books ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 570

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A reward of $5,000,000 almost ruins everything for two seventh graders. On a class trip to New York City, Felix and Benji find a wallet belonging to social media billionaire Laura Friendly. Benji, a well-off, chaotic kid with learning disabilities, swipes $20 from the wallet before they send it back to its owner. Felix, a poor, shy, rule-follower, reluctantly consents. So when Laura Friendly herself arrives to give them a reward for the returned wallet, she's annoyed. To teach her larcenous helpers a lesson, Laura offers them a deal: a $20,000 college scholarship or slightly over $5 million cash--but with strings attached. The boys must spend all the money in 30 days, with legal stipulations preventing them from giving anything away, investing, or telling anyone about it. The glorious windfall quickly grows to become a chore and then a torment as the boys appear increasingly selfish and irresponsible to the adults in their lives. They rent luxury cars, hire a (wonderful) philosophy undergrad as a chauffeur, take their families to Disney World, and spend thousands on in-app game purchases. Yet, surrounded by hedonistically described piles of loot and filthy lucre, the boys long for simpler fundamentals. The absorbing spending spree reads like a fun family film, gleefully stuffed with the very opulence it warns against. Major characters are White. Cinematic, over-the-top decadence, a tense race against time, and lessons on what's truly valuable. (mathematical explanations) (Fiction. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Upstate New York seventh graders Felix Rannells and Benji Porter have nothing in common: Felix is small, serious, and a star basketball guard, while Benji is a tall, carefree class clown, so neither is pleased to be partnered for a class field trip. When they find billionaire Laura Friendly's lost wallet but decide to steal $20 for a snack before returning it, she issues a challenge: spend $5 million in a month ("a penny doubled every day for thirty days"). If they succeed and follow all the rules, including keeping the contest secret, they will receive $10 million each. Benji's family is wealthy, while Felix's single mom works two jobs, but both boys are eager to win. At first it's easy: they hire a driver, book hotel suites, and take a private jet to Disney World. But the money eventually causes tension in both families, and both boys are seen as "selfish jerks." The duo is relatable, and the realities of middle school are well wrought, with crushes and crushing embarrassment alike. While the final message about money rings true, reading about wasteful spending during a grim economic reality may not appeal. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Lori Kilkelly, LK Literary. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8—The saying "money can't buy happiness" has been tested time and again, but what about spending money—specifically five million dollars? While on a school field trip, the unlikely duo Felix Rannells and Benji Porter discover the lost wallet of tech mogul and billionaire Laura Friendly. As the teen boys failed to return the wallet without spending $20 on lunch first, Friendly offers them a challenge: spend five million dollars in 30 days in order to receive a penny doubled each day, meaning $5,368,709.12! From private trips to Disney World, whole school pizza lunches everyday, to a personal driver, the teens rake up quite the bill—but what will they lose as they gain? With specific rules such as preventing purchases for anyone else, the boys risk looking like (or becoming) selfish jerks. Highly reminiscent of the film Brewster's Millions, McAnulty's work will engage a new generation with a fresh teen perspective. Readers will cheer Felix and Benji through their quest, indulge as they imagine the possibilities of spending five million dollars, but also feel stressed as the money threatens family, friends, and their moral compasses. The quick pace of the challenge is mirrored by short chapters and alternating perspectives between the boys, heightening reader engagement. Each chapter also provides a check-in on the boys' total spending to keep readers on track and to offer some light math concepts. VERDICT This novel's unpredictable money twists, paired with the notion of spending five million dollars, topped with a sprinkling of pop culture references, will captivate tweens.—Mary-Brook J. Townsend, The McGillis Sch., Salt Lake City

#2223046 Down to Earth (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

written by Betty Culley

Henry has always been fascinated by rocks. As a homeschooler, he pours through the R volume of the encyclopedia (to help him identify the rocks he finds). So, when a meteorite falls in his family's field, who better to investigate than this rock enthusiast—with his best friend, James, and his little sister, Birdie, in tow, of course.

978-0-593-17573-6 Crown Children's Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 760

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review Ten-year-old Henry, homeschooled and fascinated by rocks, lives on the outskirts of a small town in Maine. He very much hopes that, like his father and one of his uncles, he will also have the ability to find water by dowsing, a gift said to reveal itself at his age. When a meteor blazes earthward one night, he's the only one to see it slam into the field beside his home. The next morning, he finds the enormous, amazing meteorite but doesn't expect the dramatic events that will follow. Wells in town begin to dry up, while water floods his family's field and destroys their home. Is the meteorite drawing water toward itself? Who can put things right? Henry's first-person narrative signals his scientific bent: the night after their home is inundated, he likens his father to "a nocturnal animal, awake when everyone else is asleep," and his mother to "an animal going into hibernation, eating less and slowing down her movements to conserve energy." From Henry, his best friend, and members of his extended family to a visiting geologist from a museum, the characters have layers of complexity that are gradually revealed as the story unfolds at its own steady pace. A captivating middle-grade novel. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books In retrospect, ten-year-old Henry Bower had a couple of clues that his life was about to change. When he practiced with his dowsing rod, hoping to confirm that he had inherited the family gift, it pointed skyward, and his two-year-old sister Birdie reported hearing "Hizzz hizzzz." Now a huge meteorite has crashed into the ground in his family's field in northern Maine, and the amazing event Henry hoped to keep secret is drawing public concern: a heavy stream of water is flowing from the site, flooding the roads, even as local wells are running dry. The strength and delight of this awe-infused novel derive from Culley's deftly blurred line between fantasy and realism (for readers), and between cause and correlation (for Henry and the townspeople). Plausible explanations abound for the odd goings-on—a damaged aquifer could account for the flooding and the dry wells; the sudden appearance of sandhill cranes may be related to the flooded land; the indestructibility of the meteorite is because space matter is mysterious and weird. But what about the improved health or recovery of people exposed to the water, or Birdie's sudden ability to use complete sentences? And most of all, what of Henry's successful plan to redirect the water flow with the gift of a treasured pebble given to him by a scientist, who shared a similar experience in his youth? This is the perfect match for middle graders starting to sort through what we do know, what we don't know yet, and what might be unknowable. EB Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After 10-year-old Henry witnesses the fall of a meteorite, disaster finds his Maine home. Henry Bower, of Bower Hill Road, comes from a family of water dowzers, but he hasn't yet shown any talent in this area—his current skills include reading the most books at the library and writing questions about the world in his home-schooling notebook. Henry has a passion for rocks and minerals and is thrilled when he and his little sister find a meteorite to rival the 31-ton Ahnighito in Greenland. An author's note describes, among other things, the controversy over its fate and the "sad and disturbing history of the Inughuit people brought to New York City, along with the meteorite." Henry tries to keep it a secret to protect it from similar theft. A paean to science, the text can be laudably earnest ("I learn that no matter how big or special a meteorite is, someone always wants to take it or chip it") but the dialogue is occasionally stilted. Brief quotes, mostly from nonfiction science resources, open each chapter, intriguing readers who might otherwise wonder where Henry's narrative is going and why. The flood that overtakes Henry's house traumatizes his family, especially when some people in the town blame them for it, but Henry shows impressive kindness and resilience. The main cast reads as White; a visiting scientist who mentors Henry is Black. A meandering, idealistic tale for budding scientists. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Fascinated with geology, Henry spends hours breaking rocks open. His family members are water dowzers, people who sense sources of water using a dowsing rod. Henry is anxious because water dowsing is not something one can learn from a book, and not everyone in the family has the "gift." When he tries to use a dowsing rod to find water, he feels an urge to hold the stick toward the sky instead of the ground. Soon, a giant meteorite falls to Earth. Henry is ecstatic to find and analyze the rock from space. But the meteorite has brought more than just media attention and a collector offering a giant financial reward—the rock has caused a disaster, and Henry feels responsible. Culley perfectly illustrates Henry's complicated feelings and insecurities. He reacts like any child would, especially when the small town seems to hold him responsible. Poignant, lyrical prose and an engaging mix of geology, astronomy, and wonder will make this title popular, especially for fans of Nancy Viau's Samantha Hansen Has Rocks in Her Head. Henry is cued as white. VERDICT Heartwarming and absorbing, this is a solid choice for middle grade collections. Perfect for readers who want a great small-town story mixed with STEM.—Patrick Tierney, Pascoag P.L., RI

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2235110 Elfie Unperfect (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Kristin Mahoney Elfie Oster was sure that Hampshire Academy was going to be the perfect school for	1	$16.99

her. She was sure about it right up to the minute she got expelled. On her first day.
 978-0-593-17582-8 Alfred A. Knopf ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 670

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 An excellent student who takes her Student Lunch Monitor duties seriously, friendless Elfie has never really fit in at her local school, Cottonwood Elementary. In fifth grade, she enters prestigious Hampshire Academy as a scholarship student. Her high hopes are dashed on her first day, however, when she's suspended and faces possible expulsion for a supposed honor-code violation. Elfie is shaken by the accusation and, soon afterward, by the news that her beloved, long-term babysitter has cancer. After a series of uncomfortable truths jolt her into seeing herself from others' perspectives, she begins to realize that her exacting, unsympathetic attitude toward her peers may have something to do with her lack of friends. Still, shifting her mindset isn't easy. Initially, Elfie is very relatable yet somewhat unlikable as a character who gladly leaves her old classmates behind in hopes of finding better ones at the Academy. Santat's inviting jacket art, the many vivid characters, and Elfie's spot-on conversations with both kids and adults will draw readers into her involving story of turmoil, discovery, and change. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Upscale Hampshire Academy-where academics are challenging, facilities are topnotch, and students are motivated and honorable-was supposed to be a better fit for Elfie Oster than Cottonwood public school. Before the close of her first day of fifth grade, though, one of Hampshire's honorable students, who also happens to be the scion of a major donor, has framed her for swiping his cell phone, landing her on indefinite suspension until an honor committee holds a formal hearing. Now it's back to Cottonwood with dashed hopes and a heap of embarrassment, particularly regarding her cousin and classmate Jenna, who has always lagged behind her scholastically but outshone her socially. Top that off with the news that her beloved babysitter and confidante has been diagnosed with cancer, and Elfie, who always has problems processing her need for perfection and control, is in a very bad place. There are a few rays of light, however, if Elfie will only choose to acknowledge them: a new teacher at Cottonwood who actually gets her; clunky but heartfelt overtures from Jenna to steer their relationship toward actual friendship; even the dreaded group project (Elfie, like so many control freaks, hates group projects) on caring for an egg baby is unexpectedly engrossing. That Elfie will ultimately turn down her chance to return to Hampshire is a foregone resolution that generates little tension, but Mahoney leaves her star with a couple of uncertainties to resolve and new resilience and friendships to help her meet them head-on. EB COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Can a perfect student find a way to belong in the "unperfect" world around her? Studious Elfie yearns for a place where her academic devotion and drive for perfection are appreciated. So she's thrilled when she earns a scholarship and a place as a fifth grader at a fancy private school. Unfortunately, on the very first day Elfie's good intentions get her in trouble with a legacy student, and she finds herself back at her old public school. Elfie is crushed, but as time passes, she begins to realize she's not the only one experiencing hardship and unfairness. Ultimately, Elfie learns that finding community and supporting your friends and family are much more important than perfect grades. Elfie's specific ways of observing and navigating the world are brought to vivid life in the first-person narration of this realistic story. The tension between living up to your principles while also trying to be a good friend rings true. Elfie also explores new emotional territory as she processes loved ones' health and emotional crises. Through it all, there's just the right mix of gentle humor, unconditional love from her mother and father, and Elfie's own compelling brand of heart. The main cast is satisfyingly developed, which makes up for a few one-dimensional minor characters. Most characters seem to default to White; Elfie's teacher is Filipina American. A solid story about the importance of community rather than perfection. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Elfie strives for excellence. But for a girl with no friends, fifth grade is chock-full of challenges. First, Elfie is expelled from her dream school. Second, Elfie's babysitter and confidant becomes ill. And finally, Elfie's aunt and uncle's impending divorce and her return to the dreaded Cottonwood Elementary bring Elfie face-to-face with Jenna, her nemesis cousin. So how does a smart girl sans chums survive? In this well-plotted, realistic read, Mahoney shows readers that when presented the impossible, people can change for the best. Expertly honing in on the social skills that grow with friendship, Mahoney gently reminds tweens that others' perspectives, expectations, and intentions often differ from their own—and that other's intentions can be good. VERDICT A sure pick for booksmart readers who might need a boost making friends, and an excellent candidate for illustrating social-emotional learning skills.—Jennifer Strattman, Cambridge, NY

#2222930 Happily for Now (Hardcover (Trade))
 written by Kelly Jones

Fiona may have problems, but she's no damsel in distress. She'd rather be the one wielding the wand in the story: she wants to be the fairy godperson. So when her mom sends her off to stay with relatives in a place called Cold Hope for the summer, Fiona decides it's time to start training for the role.

978-0-593-17952-9 Alfred A. Knopf ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 288 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Fiona aspires to be a fairy godperson, helping others to solve their own problems the way her social worker, Ms. Davis, helps her. When her mother, who struggles with addiction, checks into rehab, Fiona goes to stay with Great-aunt Alta, Great-uncle Tim, and Alta's daughter Becky in the small town of Cold Hope (an allusion to this book's inspiration, Stella Gibbons's Cold Comfort Farm, with occasional black-and-white illustrations helping set the scene). Becky and Tim run the family bakery, which has always served the same boring menu. Alta isn't happy when Becky, with Fiona's encouragement, starts baking new recipes, but the rest of Cold Hope appreciates the new flavors. Following the fairy-godperson lessons Ms. Davis sends her by email -- and aided by the offbeat residents of Cold Hope -- Fiona looks for ways to assist her relatives in working through old grudges and to discover what makes them happy. Fiona's tendency to look at the world through the framework of fairy tales makes an effective structure for the story and creates a setting where even grouchy and eccentric Great-aunt Alta feels entirely plausible. Jones believably depicts Fiona as the child of an addict, with a blend of knowledge and naivete that keeps her from seeming precocious or sentimental. The book's lower-stakes conflicts -- a baking competition, Great-uncle Tim's hidden art -- are treated with as much gravity as the bigger issues, making for an emotionally satisfying read. Sarah Rettger July/August 2021 p.114(c) Copyright 2021. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Jones (Sauerkraut) delivers a witty play on traditional fairy tales with a healthy dose of emotional maturity. White, red-haired protagonist Fiona would rather help her mother at home than journey to live with unfamiliar relatives in a "creepy old house" in a town called Cold Hope. But when her mom enters treatment for addiction, Fiona; with the help of social worker Ms. Davis, cued as Black; channels her worries about both situations into "fairy-godperson training," which involves helping others navigate their circumstances. Through Fiona's frank narrative voice, Jones offers humorous allusions to familiar fairy tales with a timely slant; about Cinderella, "When you read about some girl going around covered in ashes... it's pretty clear somebody should get that girl some help." As Fiona attempts to work her magic with her tired relatives, who run a failing bakery, she inadvertently starts a war between their most creative alchemist, Aunt Becky, and a competing operation. Whimsical without being treacly, this on-point fairy tale handles its subject matter sensitively as Fiona learns that helping people isn't as easy as it seems. Occasional illustrations by Murphy (Faraway Things) include detailed maps of the town. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Mandy Hubbard, Emerald City Literary. (May)

#2088815 Lost Girl (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Anne Ursu

When you're an identical twin, your story always starts with someone else. For Iris, that means her story starts with Lark. When fifth grade arrives, however, it is decided that Iris and Lark should be split into different classrooms, and something breaks in them both.

978-0-06-227509-7 Walden Pond Press ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 760

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly identical, but not the same." Iris is down-to-earth; Lark has her head in the clouds. The girls have always looked after each other, and when they are placed in different classrooms and after-school activities (art camp for Lark, a library girls' group for Iris) during fifth grade, they are devastated. Nothing feels right to Iris, whose dismay is exacerbated by a series of unsettling events: meeting the peculiar owner of an antique shop who claims he's doing magic, noticing objects gone missing from the twins' home, and being followed by a giant crow. The occurrences connect to a dark secret that proves dangerous to Iris and could separate the twins forever. As intriguing as it is eerie, this imaginative tale by Ursu (The Real Boy) is told from the point of view of the crow, who observes Iris's actions and emotions as she faces life and peril, for the first time without her sister. This suspenseful mystery offers a story of empowerment, showing how one girl with the help of others can triumph. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Tina Wexler, ICM. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6: Ursu's latest novel follows the story of Iris and Lark as they start fifth grade. Iris prides herself on her knowledge, rationality, and assertiveness while Lark is more dreamy and artistic. When they find out that they have been assigned different teachers for the first time ever, their world is shaken. Lark's shyness and anxiety seem to make her wilt and Iris has difficulty connecting to her new classmates while worrying about her twin. Meanwhile, a new store called "Treasure Hunters" sets up shop in their Minneapolis neighborhood. The odd messages on the sign intrigue the sisters, setting Iris on the trail of an ominous mystery as Lark retreats inside herself. Although the sisters initially seem to be too purposely disparate in character, the characterization is not all that it seems. In fact, the magical realism of the book allows an almost metaphoric view of the world as Iris grapples with both supernatural and psychological threats. The style of the novel echoes the mysteriousness of the plot: the viewpoint shifts between Iris, an unnamed observer, and the omniscient chronicler of the disappearance of state treasures. The prose is lovely, unafraid to echo the mysterious questions posed or Iris's comforting refrain that she and Lark have better outcomes when they are together. The sense of adventure and mystery make this appealing to a wide audience. VERDICT A beautiful, timeless tale of love conquering darkness in the midst of mystery and the angst of change. A must-have for any middle grade collection.: Erin Reilly-Sanders, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Quantity	Unit Price
----------	------------

#2363148 Not Quite a Ghost (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Anne Ursu

The house seemed to sit apart from the others on Katydid Street, silent and alone, like it didn't fit among them. For Violet Hart-whose family is about to move into the house on Katydid Street-very little felt like it fit anymore. Like their old home, suddenly too small since her mother remarried and the new baby arrived. Or Violet's group of friends, which, since they started middle school, isn't enough for Violet's best friend, Paige. Everything seemed to be changing at once. But sometimes, Violet tells herself, change is okay.

978-0-06-227515-8 Walden Pond Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Booklist Ursu serves up a chilling, middle-grade tweak on Charlotte Perkins Gilman's short story, "The Yellow Wallpaper." Violet's anxiety is kicked into high gear after starting middle school and moving into an old Victorian fixer-upper, all in the same week. She barely sees her two best friends now, and they no longer seem like the people she knew in elementary school. It's an isolating feeling that's exacerbated when Violet catches a virus she can't seem to shake, which leaves her suffering from extreme exhaustion and spending more time than she'd like in her creepy new attic bedroom, whose yellowed, vine-patterned wallpaper starts to reveal something sinister within its tangled pattern. Ursu cultivates dread on several fronts as Violet battles insecurities and the dark presence in her room, is beset by her mysterious illness's symptoms, and navigates middle school's bewildering social landscape. Less a haunted-house story than an empathetic examination of one girl's fight to regain normalcy, the narrative validates the reality of the unseen. A heartfelt author's note discusses frustrations that can come from having an invisible illness.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books See this month's Big Picture, p. 125, for review. COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine The transition to middle school is often a time of tumult, with the upheaval of old elementary school routines and friendships. But for eleven-year-old Violet Hart, the changes are even more far-reaching. Her blended family has just moved into a long-empty, ramshackle house, and her new bedroom is a creepy third-floor attic, wallpapered with twisting vines. After an upsetting sleepover with both old and potential new friends, Vi retires to her room feeling ill. She rides out her virus (she tests negative for COVID-19 and mono) but continues to be plagued by lingering exhaustion and brain fog. Her parents are proactive, but multiple doctors can't find anything physically wrong and suggest that she is merely seeking attention or is in need of mental health counseling. Vivid nightmares, complete with tendrils from the wallpaper slithering down the wall and across the room, slow her recovery, demanding her attention. Ursu (The Troubled Girls of Dragomir Academy, rev. 9/21) maintains a light but decidedly eerie touch as she weaves her "not quite a ghost" story, in which the house itself becomes a character and slowly reveals its secrets. She simultaneously writes in a compelling way about difficult-to-diagnose, recurring illnesses. And just as with such conditions, there is no neat and facile wrap-up to the haunting narrative. Luann Toth(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews This novel set in Minneapolis combines the stress of changes with a haunting. Eleven-year-old Violet is about to enter middle school. If that wasn't anxiety-inducing enough, her mom and stepdad announce that they will be moving. To Violet's relief, she'll still be in the same school district with her two best friends. The move to a larger if decrepit Victorian means that Violet and Mia, her older sister, won't be sharing a room anymore, something Violet has mixed feelings about. Her new attic room is private, but the ugly wallpaper in a mustard-and-green vine-filled pattern is decidedly creepy. Soon after starting school, Violet begins to have nightmares about the wallpaper coming to life, and she starts to feel weak and tired. Doctors can find nothing wrong, and her best friends become skeptical, implying it's all in her head. Meanwhile, Violet tries to navigate the strains of middle school--fitting in and changing friendships--with the ever-increasing menace of the haunted attic and its link, presented possibly as a metaphor, to her chronic illness. This storyline works pretty well, addressing the experience of invisible disabilities, which are too rarely represented in middle-grade fiction, but some readers may wish for the connection between Violet's illness and the ghost to feature a clearer resolution. Violet and her mom are white; Violet's stepfather is Black, and other characters bring diversity in race and sexual orientation. An ambitious presentation exploring resonant themes. (author's note) (Paranormal. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Sandwiched between moody older sister Mia and three-year-old half brother Owen, Minneapolis sixth grader and middle child Violet Hart feels as if she's the one who's supposed to "make things easy" on her mother and stepfather, resulting in her reluctantly agreeing to take the disconcerting, wallpapered attic bedroom in the family's new home. At school, Violet's besties Paige and Ally are determined to expand their friend group now that they're in middle school, but a sleepover with potential new recruits goes disastrously awry, leading to a mysterious sickness that Violet can't shake. While enduring unrelenting exhaustion, the 11-year-old struggles to balance schoolwork and shifting friendship dynamics, as well as nightmares brought on by her bedroom's disturbingly illogical wallpaper. Upon Violet discovering a haven in the school library with Will, a bespectacled boy researching ghosts, she wonders if there's something sinister in her home. Inspired by Charlotte Perkins Gilman's "The Yellow Wallpaper," as addressed in an author's note, Ursu (The Troubled Girls of Dragomir Academy) perceptively incorporates middle school drama into a page-turning tale about the difficulties of managing an invisible illness and any accompanying skepticism from friends and healthcare providers. Violet is white; there is racial diversity among the supporting cast. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Tina Dubois, CAA. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8--Violet's new house has the space her growing family needs, but as soon as they move in, the house feels odd and lonely. Violet's older sister Mia declares the attic room with the peeling yellow wallpaper to be "creepy," so by default, that room becomes Violet's. Violet is dealing with a lot of personal issues, including nervously starting middle school, and it doesn't help when she gets sick the first week of school. When she's finally able to return, she's too tired for PE class, so she's sent to study in the library. There she meets a boy named Will who regularly sits out PE due to health reasons. He's researching ghosts and hauntings for a science credit, which Violet finds fascinating. She wants to help her new friend with his project, but her illness returns and she isn't getting better. Visits to multiple doctors lead nowhere, and she ends up homebound in her attic room. The vines on the yellow wallpaper seem to be moving now, and she thinks she sees the shape of a girl trapped beneath them. She's terrified, both of the girl, and her mysterious illness. Loosely based on Charlotte Perkins Gilman's 1892 short story "The Yellow Wallpaper," this is a story about a haunted house--but it's also a fresh, modern look at unexplained health issues, COVID-19 anxiety, changing friendships, and blended families. VERDICT Compulsively readable and relatable, Ursu's twisty middle grade novel is highly recommended.--Mandy Laferriere Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2330096 No One Leaves the Castle (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Christopher Healy

The Lilac. The bard songs say that she's the world's most fearsome bounty hunter. That there's no criminal she can't catch, no mystery she can't solve. None of that is true. Yet. In reality, the Lilac is just a kid, and the bard who wrote all that is her best friend, Dulcinetta. But Lilac has set her goals on becoming the best bounty hunter in the 13 Kingdoms
 978-0-06-234194-5 Walden Pond Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Dungeons & Dragons meets Clue in this capital-Q Quirky stand-alone murder mystery set in the Hero's Guide series world. When Baron Vargus Angbar's ancestral treasure goes missing, butler Gribbinsnood Flornt must hire a bounty hunter to capture the famous wizard the baron believes to be guilty. Lured by a bard's song, Flornt hires the Lilac--before learning that she's 14 and in cahoots with the bard, Dulcinetta. The wizard hunt is an extended setup to get the Lilac and Netta to the baron's castle, where they are invited by the baroness to dinner and the real mystery can begin. The narrator intrudes to occasionally remind readers what they're really here for--a murder mystery; someone's going to end up dead. The Lilac, sealed in the castle by a magically shrinking bubble with a roster of wacky suspects, must figure out whodunit. There's the baron and his equally unpleasant noble dinner guest, the baroness who seems a bit too familiar with dead bodies, the baron's wizard-in-training son, the baron's prim and proper daughter, said daughter's coarse yet highly competent etiquette master, a surly goth gnome cook, the butler, and an ogre guard. Every last one of them--including the Lilac and Netta--harbors secrets and isn't what they seem. The Lilac must untangle the (sometimes excessive and tedious) red herrings (frequently delivered in long, expository backstory passages) to deduce the truth. Characters read white. Where the execution falters the premise carries the book. (Fantasy mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When the priceless Emerald Axe of Angbar is stolen, the Angbar family hires infamous bounty hunter the Lilac to track down the purported thief, wizard Runar the Unknowable. What the Angbars don't realize, however, is that the Lilac is a white-cued 14-year-old girl whose bard companion Dulcinetta; described as having "tawny cheeks and an array of short braids"; has greatly overexaggerated her reputation. Nevertheless, the Lilac successfully brings Runar (who claims innocence) back to Castle Angbar, where the missing axe has mysteriously returned; and is stolen again. To capture the true thief, Runar places the castle in an inescapable magical bubble, but his sudden murder makes the enchantment seem permanent. Now the Lilac must track down an assassin in a castle full of secrets before the culprit kills them all; if the rapidly constricting bubble doesn't do it first. The Lilac and Dulcinetta make for a congenial crime-solving team, especially when pitted against the scandal-ridden residents of Castle Angbar. In this frenetic, tongue-in-cheek whodunit, Healy (the Perilous Journey of Danger and Mayhem series) blends magic and pandemonium with a locked-room murder mystery, invoking familiar Agatha Christie flair while throwing in copious amounts of dry humor. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Cheryl Pientka, Jill Grinberg Literary. (Aug.)

#2280935 Hurricanes of Weakerville (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Chris Rylander

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

All his life, Alex Weakerman has had one passion: baseball. Specifically, the Hurricanes of Weakerville, Iowa-the scrappy independent-league team owned by his Grandpa Ira. When Grandpa Ira passes away, though, Alex is crushed. He's lost his best friend, and he doesn't see any way that the team will survive. But Ira, it seems, has one last trick up his sleeve: his will names Alex as the new manager of the Hurricanes. Will he be able to save his team, his hometown, and his family legacy?
978-0-06-232750-5 Walden Pond Press ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 12.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Smart but easily flustered, Alex can scarcely put two coherent sentences together when speaking with anyone but his parents, his best friend, or 86-year-old Grandpa Ira. Everyone in Weakerville knows Ira, who seldom sits in the owner's box at Mustard Park, where the Hurricanes play independent league baseball. Instead, he roams the stands, talking with fans and especially with Alex, who analyzes the Hurricanes. After Ira's death, Alex learns that he is to manage the team, which is in a slump, and that the Hurricanes' future existence depends on making the playoffs. He takes on the challenge with help from his best friend, who knows nothing about baseball but everything about Alex, and a 13-year-old girl who understands pitching better than many seasoned players. Readers will quickly warm up to Alex, whose self-deprecating humor brightens his perceptive first-person narrative. The story's pace is leisurely until he starts managing the team, overcoming obstacles while trying to live up to his beloved grandfather's example of caring about people. A middle-grade baseball novel that's more heart-to-heart than play-by-play. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Alex Weakerman's ancestors founded Weakerville, Iowa, but now all that's left of their legacy is Mustard Park and the semi-pro Hurricanes, a team in which the community has pretty much lost interest. Under Grandpa Ira's tutelage, Alex has grown into a middle school baseball fanatic, worthless on the field but an ace at record keeping and statistical analysis. When Ira dies, the team passes into the ownership of Ira's brother-in-law, brash and wealthy Tex Coahaagen, who had been quietly keeping the Hurricanes afloat for years. More of a shock is Ira's direction that Alex be installed as team manager, with the caveat that he has one season to make play-offs or Tex can dissolve the team and sell the property for development. If you think this is boilerplate middle grade wish-fulfillment sports fiction, you got it in one: friends support Alex, adult players reluctantly cooperate, lessons are learned, and the satisfying ending (after the last-minute big play by the underdog) is assured. The formula is skillfully executed, though, and Rylander freshens things up with a nicely individuated cast and bursts of hilarity whenever Tex takes the stage, all tall tales and jovial menace. This serves double duty: easy to enjoy under the summer sun, and easy to write about when book reports are due in fall. EB COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young baseball superfan realizes his dream, but is he up to the challenge? Alex Weakerman comes by his love of baseball naturally. His elderly Grandpa Ira owns the Weakerville, Iowa, Hurricanes, "the greatest independent professional baseball team in the whole world," in Alex's not-so-humble opinion. This doesn't mean that Alex is a skilled athlete. He still harbors memories of childhood sports ineptitude under the watchful eye of Aliyah Perkins, the sportiest girl in Weakerville. When Ira passes away, the team is inherited by his brother-in-law, wealthy (and very tan) used-car magnate Parnell "Tex" Coahaagen, who is as flamboyant as his name implies. Alex fears for the team's future, doubly so when Ira's will stipulates the firing of Hurricanes manager Buddy LeForge. Tex pitches a mind-blowing curveball when he reveals Ira's second stipulation: that Alex be hired as the team's manager. Buoyed by the encouragement of his best bud, Slips, Alex stumbles into the unknown, one step at a time. With Ira's notes to guide him and a newly enlisted Aliyah also at his side, how can he possibly fail? Rylander fills his warm coming-of-age story with crackly sports slang and tucks colorful minor characters into the nooks and crannies. Lovable nerd Alex is an ideal first-person narrator, infusing his tale with wonder and joy as well as an insider's knowledge of the game. Slips immigrated from Poland; characters seem to default to White. A peppy, inspirational tale with a sports backdrop. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2162554 Five Things About Ava Andrews (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Margaret Dilloway

Ava hopes middle school will be a fresh start. Ava is shocked when her writing abilities impress her classmates and they invite her to join their improv group, making up stories onstage. Determined to prove she can control her anxiety, she joins and discovers a whole new side of herself, and what it means to be on a team. But as Ava's self-confidence blossoms, her relationship with Zelia strains, and she learns that it isn't enough to just raise your voice it's how and why you use it that matters.

978-0-06-280349-8 Balzer & Bray ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Ava Andrews, 11, is more nervous than usual at the beginning of sixth grade: not only is middle school intimidating, but her best friend, Zelia, has just moved across the country. Zelia always stood up for Ava when the clinically anxious girl, who has a genetic heart condition and attendant pacemaker; encountered social difficulties that upped her anxiety and her heart rate. Though Ava doesn't like to stand in front of groups, and dreads attending social events organized by her father's Cotillion business, she discovers a supportive community when she joins an improv group predicated on a foundation of celebrating mistakes and working with what one is given. The group is soon shocked to discover that the theater in which they rehearse is in danger of being developed. They decide to fight the onset of gentrification in their San Diego neighborhood, and with the help of her improv skills, Ava finds her voice. Alongside a sensitive portrayal of Ava's invisible disabilities, well-wrought subplots, such as problems with an unkind classmate and the growing distance between two once-close friends, support the journey of Dilloway's (Summer of a Thousand Pies) thoughtful protagonist from timid observer to well-liked social activist. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Patricia Nelson, Marsall Lyon Literary. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Dilloway (Summer of a Thousand Pies, Momotaro) returns to middle grade with this hopeful story of invisible disabilities, friendship, and advocating for one's beliefs. Like the author, 11-year-old Ava has non-compaction cardiomyopathy and uses an ICD (Implantable Cardioverter Defibrillator) to help manage her condition. Ava is also quite anxious, and she's quiet around everyone but her best friend, who just moved across the country. Ava finds confidence and friendship when she begins taking improv classes, and together the group works to save a favorite locale from gentrification. Along the way, Ava discovers she's not the only one struggling with unseen hurdles, and tender moments reveal what it's like to be on both sides of assumption. Dilloway covers a lot of ground including social justice, mental health, physical ability, and prejudice, but all the while the narrative is hopeful and encouraging. Ava describes herself as having her mother's Japanese features, and a diverse cast is implied through brief descriptions. VERDICT Dilloway's latest provides a valuable perspective on living with a heart condition and anxiety as a tween; many will relate to Ava, even if their own experiences aren't an exact reflection of hers. Ideal for book clubs and discussions, this is recommended as a general purchase.—Taylor Worley, Springfield P.L., OR

#2227078 Hollow Chest (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brita Sandstrom

Charlie has been having nightmares. Eyes watching him in the night, claws on his chest, holding him down. His dreams have been haunted for years, ever since German bombs rained down on London, taking his father's life, taking his city's spirit, taking his beloved brother, Theo, off to war in France. Now Charlie is left to take care of his grandpa Fitz while his mother works, waiting for the day when Theo will come home. And with World War II nearly won, that day is almost here.

978-0-06-287074-2 Walden Pond Press ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.9 AR Pts 12.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist With WWII ending, Charlie's older brother, Theo, is finally returning home from fighting overseas. Charlie has done his best to look after the family since his father died in a German bombing, but an 11-year-old boy can only do so much for his harried mother and increasingly addled grandfather, and Charlie can't wait for a return to something resembling normalcy. When Theo finally materializes, however, it's clear that he's not the funny, easygoing sibling that left for the front. Worse, Charlie has begun seeing enormous, quietly menacing wolves that seem to track his every movement around the broken city. They're called war wolves, and they feast on broken hearts. The only thing Charlie can do is protect his own damaged heart while helping his brother recover his missing one—no matter the cost. War-ravaged London and its battered inhabitants spring vividly to life in Sandstrom's exceptional debut, which skillfully balances hopefulness and horror. While there is a necessary grimness to the proceedings, plenty of heartening details keep the story from tipping into despair: the familial bonds are strong and sincere, and newly forged friendships (along with the best cat a boy could hope for) buoy Charlie on his journey. The literal and figurative rubble of combat provides a rich setting through which to examine the fragility and incredible resilience of the human heart. It's a both wrenching and wondrous world.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old Charlie, a cued white English boy living in bombed-out 1945 London, helps his mother care for his grandfather Fritz, a wounded WWI veteran prone to trauma-induced trances, and desperately awaits his older sibling Theo's return from war. But when the reunion day arrives, Charlie hardly recognizes the mirthless soldier who returns, wounded by a grenade and with PTSD-like symptoms. Fear subsequently creeps into Charlie's shock and disappointment as he notices huge, wolflike beasts lurking in the shadows of his city. When "Mad Mellie," a local woman whose son died in the Blitz, lets slip that war wolves are involved in taking the hearts of returning soldiers, Charlie gains both a name for the monsters he's been seeing and a steadfast resolve, alongside his clever cat Biscuits, to bargain his brother's heart back from those who took it. In this poetic debut, Sandstrom tells a story that is equally tender and terrifying, balancing a family's emotional gravity with the chilling war wolves. With moody occasional illustrations by Shin, a relaxed pace, and tender prose, this historical fantasy expertly employs anxiety and empathy to demonstrate war's devastating effect on individuals and families. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Tina Dubois, ICM Partners. (June)

#2332223 Nimbus (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jan Eldredge

Nimbus had a rough start as a kitten. But her fortunes changed the day she met Fletcher. The boy nursed her back to health from a life-threatening injury and adopted her. But when Fletcher's aunt brings home a mysterious jar, an ancient nightmare demon is unwittingly unleashed. Despite battling the monster to save her friend, Fletcher's superstitious aunt blames Nim for the attack and secretly abandons her at a dump.

978-0-06-268037-2 Balzer & Bray ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A loyal black kitten's boy is under supernatural attack. Eleven-month-old Nimbus loves Fletcher, the boy who nursed her back to health following life-threatening injuries. When Fletcher becomes curious about a strange jar and opens it, releasing a terrible goblin, loyal Nim protects Fletcher, taking heavy damage in the process. But Fletcher's aunt, who's caring for him over spring break, believes Nim attacked Fletcher and dumps her far from home. Rhett, a stylish rat with star quality, befriends injured Nim and leads her to a witch's house. While the witch cares for Nim, the witch's cats (maternal Fern, bookish Rochester, standoffish Bianca, and openly hostile Abraxas) teach Nim important cat skills. She also discovers she has a supernatural ability: In destroying one eye of the nightmare demon in the fight to protect Fletcher, Nim gained its "dream sight." But she also learns it might come back for Fletcher, who no longer has Nim to protect him, posing a time-sensitive, high-stakes threat. Even though the witch's home is nice and magic itself seems to be telling her to stay put, Nim wants to find a way back to Fletcher. As a hero, Nimbus is as gritty and determined as she is adorable. Tear-jerker moments explore pet abandonment--readers may want their own pets on hand to hug--all the way through the magical, action-packed finale. Fletcher and the witch read white. A deeply imaginative journey that puts the "cat" in cathartic. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this affecting tale by Eldredge (Evangeline of the Bayou), a cat struggling to make it home to her owner finds that she has magical powers. Black cat Nimbus is devoted to her young human owner, Fletcher. So when Fletcher is attacked by a strange monster that he accidentally frees from a jar, Nimbus defends him. Both boy and feline are hurt in the fray; Fletcher's cat-distrusting aunt blames Nimbus for his injuries and abandons her far from home. Nimbus encounters and befriends a fashion-conscious, would-be actor rat named Rhett, and takes refuge with Agatha, a reclusive human witch whose four cats reluctantly accept Nimbus's presence while she heals. There, Nimbus discovers her ability to dreamwalk. Though desperate to return to Fletcher, Nimbus soon realizes that her destiny may lie elsewhere. Fanciful, optimistic, and filled with a gentle humor, this heartrending tale is also offers a thoughtful exploration of animal abandonment and trauma, and the bond between owner and pet. As Nimbus discovers the tragic circumstances that brought each of her new friends to live with Agatha, she confronts her own fears and tumultuous kittenhood, while never losing sight of her goals or beloved owner. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Elena Giovinazzo, Pippin Properties. (Sept.)

#2154686 Escape from Hat (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adam Kline

An epic battle between good and bad luck shakes out when a lucky rabbit undertakes a perilous journey into the magical otherworld of Hat to save the boy he's sworn to protect from the evil of the bad-luck cats.

978-0-06-283997-8 HarperCollins Publishers ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist As we all know, luck comes in two sorts: one brought by black cats, the other by rabbits. When his loving bunny, Leek, disappears down an inept magician's hat, young Cecil Bean's previously idyllic life takes an immediate turn for the worse, thanks to his feline nemesis, Milliken. Meanwhile, Leek finds himself trapped in the surprisingly extensive land of Hat, frantic to get back to his assigned human but relentlessly hunted by Milliken's malign cohorts. Fortunately, Leek finds sturdy allies in fierce Morel, a warrior doe who speaks exclusively in heroic prose, and Hamlin, an itinerant minstrel mouse. Unfortunately, the path home is a dangerous one. Kline embroiders his rodentine romp with what he bills "five-dollar words," pop-culture references, heroic feats, and, natch, really lucky coincidences—the last leading to an epic, cinematic battle and a host of happy unions and reunions. Fans of Despereaux and like small heroes with hearts as outsize as their ears will cheer. Taylor's color illustrations not seen.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Screenwriter Kline and artist Taylor collaborate in this funny, originally self-published saga meshing fantasy and farce and pitting good against evil. Cecil Bean's assigned black cat, Millikin, and rabbit, Leek, are respectively responsible for the boy's swings of bad and good luck. But things run amok when Leek disappears into the top hat of a swindling magician and surfaces in the land of Hat, home to Millikin and fellow nefarious felines and to other (quickly multiplying) banished rabbits. Learning that a tower in the cats' fortress holds magic that can return him and his peers to their humans, Leek and another rabbit set out to find it. On their madcap journey, they encounter a traveling minstrel mouse, a potbellied pig (king of the Miniature Potbellies), and a cave monster who's afraid of the dark. Meanwhile, Cecil embarks on his own risky quest to procure the itinerant magician's hat in hopes of bringing Leek home. Distinct, droll voices and comedic wordplay help maintain a breakneck pace, while vibrant pictures of the wide-eyed rabbits and their dastardly counterparts radiate an energetic cartoon sensibility. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. (Mar.)

#2268165 Beast of Buckingham Palace (Hardcover (Trade))

written by David Walliams

The kingdom has fallen into darkness. Prince Alfred has never left the safety of Buckingham Palace. But there are strange goings on inside the palace walls--and Alfred's life is about to change forever. In the dead of night something terrible stalks the corridors. When Alfred's beloved mother, the queen, is dragged off to the Tower of London, the boy must summon all his courage to embark on an epic quest to save her...and the entire world.

978-0-06-284012-7 HarperCollins Publishers ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Walliams' latest features lots of high-volume Brit-style buffoonery but with distinctly angry undertones. A century from now, England is shrouded in permanent darkness in the wake of a comprehensive, humanity-inflicted eco-catastrophe. London lies in ruins and the royal family has either gone missing or been locked into Buckingham Palace by a sinister Lord Protector (a title with Cromwellian associations, though that's less meaningful this side of the pond). It's left up to puny, 12-year-old Prince Alfred to save his family and to counter the Lord Protector's nefarious bid for supremacy, which involves subjugating 10 mighty griffins linked to different parts of Great Britain using spills of royal blood. If some of the jokes and references will pass over American readers' heads ("I haven't had this much fun since that man streaked at Royal Ascot!"), there's gunfire, heroic sacrifice, chasing about, and large explosions aplenty keep the pages turning as Alfred faces down the would-be tyrant with help from a comically malfunctioning robot butler and a crew of aging but doughty ladies-in-waiting. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2315231 Code Name Bananas (Hardcover (Trade))

written by David Walliams

1940: BRITAIN IS AT WAR WITH NAZI GERMANY. Eleven-year-old Eric practically lives at the London Zoo. And there's one animal in particular he loves to spend time with: Gertrude the gorilla. But with German bombs raining over London, Eric realizes Gertrude is in terrible danger, and together with his uncle Sid, a keeper at the zoo, the three go on the run. But while hiding out at the seaside, they uncover a top-secret Nazi plot..

978-0-06-284015-8 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist In this WWII-era farce, Walliams spins an 11-year-old orphan's concern for the safety of the animals of the London Zoo during the worst days of the Blitz into a hilariously improbable spy thriller. Alarmed by news that loving and beloved gorilla Gertrude has been ordered put down as a dangerous wild creature, Eric enlists his zookeeper great-uncle Sid (a war vet who lost both legs and has secretly gathered a menagerie of similarly disabled zoo residents in his apartment) to help spring her. The caper leads to several droll episodes and ultimately culminates with the group (gorilla and all) captured by Nazi secret agents and bundled aboard an explosives-filled U-boat dispatched to blow up the Houses of Parliament! That, of course, won't do. Gertrude provides plenty of assistance (not to mention frequent massive belches and grossly juicy raspberries), so mostly it's all in fun, though the author does tuck in the occasional exploding bomb and hail of bullets, as well as appended notes on the Battle of Britain and tragic wartime events.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Some plans are bananas from beginning to end. Eleven-year-old Eric Grout is a victim of the times, having lost both his parents to World War II--his father at Dunkirk and his mother when the factory where she worked sewing parachutes was bombed. He's left with two relatives: his nearly deaf paternal Granny, with whom he goes to live, and Uncle Sid, his maternal great-uncle, who is a zookeeper at London Zoo. Eric takes joy in assisting Uncle Sid, and his favorite animal is by far Gertrude, the old gorilla who has a knack for mimicking Eric's gestures, often to the delight of the wartime crowds. When, during the Blitz, tragedy strikes again, Eric and Uncle Sid are left trying to save Gertrude from being euthanized by overzealous zoo director Sir Frederick Frown and his horrendous henchmen. Television personality Walliams isn't afraid to throw everything and the kitchen sink at readers, so be prepared for terrifying Teutonic twins, grand escapes, tea with royals, and a lot of smelly body humor. Fans of Walliams' previous outings will find themselves on similar ground here, and new readers, especially those who love toilet humor, will happily go along with the madcap zaniness. Sticklers will point out one or two inconsistencies along the way, such as a disregard for wartime rationing, but logic and kooky camp rarely coexist. All characters read White. Readers will go ape. (historical notes) (Adventure. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2107544 Hoax for Hire (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Laura Martin

Unlike the rest of his family, twelve-year-old Grayson hates hoaxing and wants nothing to do with the business--even when the McNeils land a huge job and must pull off four sea-monster hoaxes in a week. But when things go disastrously wrong and Dad and Gramps go missing, Grayson and his brother, Curtis, are the only people who can finish the job and save their family.

978-0-06-280380-1 HarperCollins Publishers ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.1 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 Preteen Grayson McNeil longs to get out of his family's traditional business and attend an exclusive private high school where he can pursue his interest in photography. Martin takes this relatively conventional premise for a dizzying spin: that family business happens to be the staging of cryptid sightings, crop circles, and other cons. Grayson has painful choices to make when longtime rivals in the same line of work kidnap the adult McNeils and steal their elaborately crafted monster models and suits. Without help from the police (duh), can Grayson and his only somewhat more experienced older brother pull off a scheduled Champ sighting in Vermont and a rescue? Giving her sometimes comically hapless duo an unasked-for ally in Clare, a biracial classmate of Grayson's who has secrets of her own (but is more resourceful than all of the males in the tale combined), the author piles hoaxes atop hoaxes on the way to a climactic end. The McNeil motto, Keep the Legends Alive, takes on new meaning for Grayson, as it will for readers.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books For generations the McNeil family have been monster hunters, but more recent generations have also been fraudsters, making the bulk of their income from elaborate monster hoaxes as their belief battles with skepticism. After twelve-year-old Grayson McNeil and his older brother are forced to pull off a risky hoax on their own, Grayson wants out. However, the Gerhards, rival cryptid hunters, have abducted Grayson's dad and granddad right before the deadline for a final hoax in Lake Champlain, Vermont, and Grayson must come to the family's rescue. While Martin's take on cryptozoology isn't as thoroughly detailed or even culturally aware as Fisher's The Cryptid Catcher (BCCB 7/18) or Brown's Monster Club: Hunters for Hire (BCCB 7/19)-the way Africa and its cryptids are depicted as a singular homogenous space is, at best, uninspired-the family dynamics at play are convincing as Grayson and co. seem to be struggling in varied ways in the wake of his mother's death and the gradual decline of the McNeil name. The novel ends predictably yet satisfyingly as Grayson accepts that his family holds a special place in the mysteries of the world. WJ

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Can Grayson extricate himself from the family's monster-making business? Twelve-year-old Grayson McNeil loves his camera, which is never allowed on hoaxes, the family business. For generations the McNeil family has orchestrated elaborate scams for pay, bringing "to life" the Chupacabra, Bigfoot, Mothman, and various sea monsters. Grayson has secretly applied to prestigious Culver Academy for a scholarship in hopes of escaping a life as a hoaxer. When his dad is arrested in Scotland and Gramps vanishes, Grayson and his 16-year-old brother, Curtis, must complete the hoax their family's been hired to pull, but a rival hoaxing family plans to steal this hoax and eliminate the competition all at once. Can the boys beat the baddies and complete their dad's contract? Martin's cryptid caper joins a flooded field of similar tales, but it holds its own. Grayson is an engaging, Everyboy narrator, and the cryptozoological factoids are legion. As with many others of the subgenre, readers must check their credulity at the door whether they believe in crop circles or not; it's the mundane events of the story that can cause the head-scratching. The cast is largely white. The combination of adventure and light humor makes for a pleasant diversion--best where there is strong interest in imaginary zoology. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Have you ever seen a Loch Ness Monster? The MacNeils see them every day because they pull off hoaxes, tricking people into thinking their creations are the real thing. A sea monster, Bigfoot, a yeti, a Bunyip, and more are all part of their "research." Grayson's family comes from a long line of cryptid hunters and adventure seekers. But the 12-year-old struggles with this life of lies about creatures that don't exist. His older brother, Curtis, is all in, but Grayson wishes he could study photography and attend school full time. Just once, he would love to capture his adventures on film and write about them. Even though Curtis hurls rude comments at his brother daily—Grayson calls them "poetic"—the family's commitment to one another is strong. VERDICT Martin weaves a wonderful adventure of hoaxes, legendary monsters, and the importance of family connections. Children will appreciate the creative and difficult steps the family takes to accomplish each hoax and the surprises along the way.—Paige Bentley-Flannery, Deschutes Public Library, Bend, OR

#2252319 Faceless (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kathryn Lasky

Alice and Louise Winfield are sisters and spies in the Tabula Rasa. They're growing up in wartime England, where the threat of Nazi occupation is ever near. But Louise wants to live an ordinary life and leaves the agency. Now, as Alice faces her most dangerous assignment yet, she fears the threat of discovery, but worst of all, she fears losing her own sister.

978-0-06-269331-0 HarperCollins Publishers ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Born into a family of British secret agents, 13-year-old Alice has undergone extensive training before her first mission is assigned. She and her mother parachute into Germany in 1944 and join her father in Berlin, where she quickly establishes her new identity as Ute Schnaubel at school and in the patriotic League of German Girls. Soon she's assigned to help with housekeeping services for the Third Reich within their Berlin stronghold, a maneuver enabled by British intelligence, which wants Alice to report on Hitler's emotional state. Meanwhile, she secretly befriends a homeless Jewish boy who forages in garbage cans for his food. After Hitler's death, Alice's family must immediately escape from Germany on their own. In this historical novel, Lasky makes the idea of a competent 13-year-old spy seem surprisingly convincing. The narrative has its moments of high tension when Alice plays her part as Ute. Somewhat disconnected from the main story, a subplot revolving around Alice's estranged older sister is resolved in the end. A page-turner, particularly for readers intrigued by WWII.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Set during WWII, Newbery Honoree Lasky's intense historical drama follows a white family of spies whose tradition of serving Great Britain dates back to Henry VIII. Thirteen-year-old Alice Winfield has for years trained for her first A-level mission, and her celebrated older sister, Louise, once promised to be her guide. But when Louise opts out of the family business, only Alice and her mother join the teens' undercover father on a secret mission in Berlin: taking down Hitler. Upon arrival, Alice becomes Ute, a German girl "certified to be... Aryan, with no contamination of foreign blood." As Alice works to achieve high marks in school and remain as unnoticeable and unmemorable as the "tabula rasas" from which she is descended, she finds herself dangerously drawn to an unhoused boy. With a well-detailed historical backdrop and a puzzling familial mystery, this novel delivers intrigue via tense scenes involving Hitler himself. Albeit fictional, this up-close glimpse at the historical figure's inner circle and last days centers an unnervingly calm protagonist maintaining an elaborate ruse while navigating the increasingly dangerous streets of Berlin, where knowing who is friend and foe determines survival. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Brenda Bowen, the Book Group. (Oct.)

#2149104 Home Games (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Benjamin Markovits

Twelve-year-old Ben is a shy, quiet kid. His life isn't perfect, but he feels at home in New York City. However, when his dad takes a job in London, his world is turned upside down. His parents separate, and Ben's mom moves them back to her hometown of Austin, Texas. There he meets Mabley, who becomes one of the only bright spots in Ben's complicated life.

978-0-06-274230-8 HarperCollins Publishers ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Twelve-year-old Ben is quiet and reserved. He is content in his New York City apartment, but his workaholic dad and overprotective mother aren't getting along. After his dad is transferred to London, Ben and his mother move to Austin, Texas, to live with her mother. Ben has no say in the decision and feels miserable from all these changes. Making matters worse, Ben has to share a bedroom with his mother in Granma's small house and his mother will be teaching at his middle school. Understandably upset, Ben debates moving to London and resists making friends. While eating lunch alone on a bench, Sam, the school's groundskeeper, befriends Ben and teaches him how to shoot hoops well enough to join the school basketball team?as a manager, anyway. Unfortunately, the other boys on the team bully him, but an opportunity at the excitingly written playoff game helps Ben begin to find his footing. Markovits nails the feelings of this awkward tween as he navigates his parents' impending divorce while discovering where he belongs.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Ben Michaels' workaholic father has been offered a job in London, and his mother refuses to go, leaving the twelve-year-old feeling powerless amid the adult decision making. Mom moves him from New York to her mother's home in Texas, where he first tries to convince himself that his parents will eventually reconnect, or at the very least he will have some options if or when they divorce. Instead, the year ends up an extended, friendless limbo: Dad seldom calls and cancels plans to visit; Mom takes a job in his middle school and dates his social studies teacher; Granma spars with Mom; and the girl next door, who looks like true friend material, turns out to be uniformly nice to everybody rather than Ben in particular. Probably worst of all, however, is Ben's realization that part of his misery is of his own making—he has been drifting along with his parents' and his only buddy's plans all his life, and now he has to strategize to make his voice and wishes heard. Markovits' novel never devolves into the pity party this plot outline suggests; Ben's growing self-awareness emerges amid spot on and often quite funny observations of parental bumbling and middle-grade folkways. His final decision on where to make a stable home may throw many readers for a loop, but readers will appreciate his growing realism about the complicated dynamics of families. EB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When his parents split up, Ben enters the choppy waters of his new life in Austin. Ben's workaholic dad heads to London while Ben moves with his mother from New York to her hometown. Introspective Ben retreats into himself, feeling pulled between his parents and indecisive about what he truly wants—to stay with his mother or to move in with his dad. Adult novelist Markovits' (A Weekend in New York, 2018, etc.) debut book for children starts slowly as readers live through Ben's uneventful summer days and he begins school. Though both his parents encourage Ben to express his opinions and speak up for himself, Ben finds himself lonely and the target of bullies. Readers may find themselves unengaged as the author methodically introduces story elements, but things pick up at the halfway point. Ben is coerced into managing the popular basketball team--coached by a teacher his mom is dating--while on the side, groundskeeper Sam teaches Ben basketball basics on an abandoned outdoor court. When Ben gets the chance to participate in a playoff game, his newly acquired skills are, refreshingly, not a magic fix to his problems. The story moves slowly, and not all the pieces introduced get a proper payoff, but Ben's realistically rocky emotional journey ends on a satisfying note. The cast of characters is a primarily white one. Not quite a slam dunk but an honest portrayal of a family in transition. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Twelve-year-old Ben is feeling lost when his parents announce they are separating. His workaholic dad is moving to London, and his mom decides to move with Ben from New York City to her hometown of Austin, TX, to stay with his grandmother. Starting over in a new place isn't easy: shy, quiet Ben struggles to make friends at his new school. To make things worse, his mom starts working at his school as a part-time teacher. One bright spot for Ben is shooting hoops during lunch at the abandoned basketball court, where he befriends the school grounds keeper Sam. To get him more involved at school, Ben's mom encourages him to be the manager for the basketball team, which is coached by one of his teachers who is also dating his mom. While he works hard at the job, he finds himself being bullied by some of the kids on the team. Meanwhile Ben is struggling to decide whether he should stay in Texas or move to London where his dad has told him there is a special school for American kids. While the pace of the story is slow, the author paints a realistic picture of a family in transition and their nuanced emotions as they figure out a new normal. VERDICT A moving coming-of-age story that will bring hope to those going through times of transition.—Sarah Polace, Cuyahoga Public Library System, OH

#2272698 Unfadeable (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Maurice Broaddus

A wiser-than-her-years graffiti artist known for tagging walls and bridges in her Indianapolis neighborhood, the Land, Bella plans to spend her summer break lying low and steering clear of anyone who might tip off to social services that she's living on her own. But keeping a low profile is all but impossible when Bella discovers people in high places are trying to defund the Land. She has to find a way to fight back. Getting involved will mean putting herself out there—making connections with unlikely friends and attracting potential enemies. But if Bella doesn't put her trust in her neighbors and learn how to bring her community together, her home—and her future—will never be the same.

978-0-06-279634-9 Katherine Tegen Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Starred Review Ever since her father left and her mom was committed to an institution for her schizophrenia, eighth-grader Isabella Fades has been on her own, unhoused in her neighborhood of the Land. So when school lets out, leaving her without the predictability of a daily schedule, Bella relies on the work of her not-so-secret tagger lifestyle--under the name -Unfadeable--to keep her busy. Seeing the potential in her art, mentor and friend Ms. Campbell encourages Bella to channel her work in a more organized way by starting a summer arts program for youth. But, after a hard rejection and a little bit of digging, Bella finds that something's off when it comes to the community's finances. Reluctantly, Bella teams up with an unlikely crew, and, together, they fight the misuse of the Land's resources. In this timely story of place and displacement, Bella's gritty and steadfast nature will resonate with young people determined to see their ideas to fruition. Equal parts action and mystery with a heavy yet middle-grade friendly nod to 2000s street lit, Broaddus' novel will leave readers rooting for Bella and hoping she puts her pride aside in exchange for her brilliant problem-solving skills. Coupled with a vivid depiction of Indianapolis' overlooked splendor, this heart-wrenching story of friendship, family, and belonging is a perfect read for the middle-grader looking for action and attitude with a considerable dose of do-good. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 13-year-old girl faces unethical decision-makers to save her beloved Indianapolis neighborhood. Isabella Fades, known for her graffiti tag, Unfadeable, makes sure to keep to herself so no one finds out her secret--that she doesn't have caregivers or a home of her own. Over summer break, Bella attends a community meeting. She suggests an art project--her mother was an art teacher--but runs up against Mattea Larrimore, newfound nemesis and chair of the neighborhood association. Lost in the overwhelming world of politics and money, Bella must balance her immediate need for survival as an unhoused teen against her desire to enrich her community. With powerful observation skills but few resources, she goes against her better judgment in whom to trust, but as she finds her voice and the courage to make herself known, Bella realizes that taking risks and forming connections isn't such a bad thing. The author introduces a compelling, honest protagonist readers will immediately root for throughout this well-paced story that addresses the impact of gentrification and the power of young voices. The clear narration sends readers a strong message about civic responsibility and how they're never too young to get involved in decision-making that affects their communities. Bella's mom is Black, and her father is White; the remaining cast is majority Black. An engrossing story with a captivating protagonist that will inspire realistic change. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Broaddus's (The Usual Suspects) endearing novel is a testament to personal empowerment, community, and art. Thirteen-year-old mixed-race (Black and white) Isabella Fades is a graffiti artist known as Unfadeable. Previous familial incidents have made Bella independent and cautious, and left her unhoused, squatting in an abandoned home in The Land, her Indianapolis neighborhood. After Ms. Campbell, a member of the Northwest Planners neighborhood association, invites Bella to one of the group's meetings at the local library, she meets Mattea Larrimore, the association's board chair. Citing a lack of funds, Mattea opposes Bella's initiative for a community art project. A meeting with the enigmatic M leads Bella to investigate the association and its nefarious dealings, plunging her into a world of local corruption and gentrification that could put her entire livelihood at risk. Broaddus delivers an optimistic story that champions community engagement and encourages standing up against oppressive systems. Bella's growth and confidence is nurtured throughout by mentors who support her in her decisions without hesitation, and her journey symbolizes a passing of the torch toward younger generations. Ages 8: 12. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal nforgettable protagonist in this novel that deals with creating community and fighting back against injustice. Bella "Unfadeable" Fades doesn't need anybody's help. The 13-year-old, known for her graffiti, plans to spend summer break laying low and avoiding anyone who might alert the authorities that she's living on her own. But laying low becomes impossible when she finds out people in high places are taking money from her beloved Indianapolis neighborhood, the Land. Bella will have to work with unlikely allies and trust her neighbors in order to make sure they all get the beautiful neighborhood they deserve. Readers will find Bella relatable and funny. The plot is fast-paced and twisty enough to keep kids engaged. Broaddus deftly weaves in in-depth discussions of a variety of topics, from anti-Black racism to gentrification to homelessness. The story emphasizes the power of young people's voices and the importance of civic responsibility. Bella's mother has schizophrenia, which is mostly handled with care. Most characters are Black; Bella is biracial (her dad is white, and her mom is Black). VERDICT A must-buy for elementary and middle school collections. Sure to be popular with readers who enjoy books by Kelly Yang, Jason Reynolds, and Crystal D. Giles.—Ness Shortley

#2196113 Unplugged (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gordon Korman

As the son of the world's most famous tech billionaire, Jett Baranov has always gotten exactly what he wanted. So, when his father's private jet drops him in the middle of Little Rock, Arkansas, at a wellness camp called the Oasis, Jett can't believe it. He's forced to hand over his cell phone, eat grainy veggie patties, and participate in wholesome activities with the other kids.

978-0-06-279889-3 Balzer & Bray ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 750

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After one too many escapades, Jett Baranov, 12-year-old heir to a Silicon Valley empire, is shipped off to the Oasis of Mind and Body Wellness in Arkansas, where, stripped of technology and subjected to vegetarian food and yoga, he's expected to mend his ways. Jett isn't so easily thwarted, however: if he can't get kicked out, he'll bend every rule to breaking, even going into the candy-smuggling business to disrupt the program's routine. After fellow attendee Grace Atwater, who actually enjoys the retreat, finds a stray lizard, Jett joins her and others, including Brooklyne Feldman, resident girl of mystery, and allergic-to-everything Tyrell Karrigan, in caring for the illicit pet and sneaking out to a nearby town. When the group discovers inconsistencies in the Oasis's management style, Jett must overcome his own reputation as a troublemaker and expose a cunning mastermind. Korman injects his signature dry humor throughout, but Jett's persistent obnoxiousness can drown out the other alternating first-person narratives, and many of the story's twists are telegraphed early on, resulting in an entertaining if predictable arc. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Elizabeth Harding, Curtis Brown. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–5—Jett Barnov is the most spoiled kid in Silicon Valley, and he is always getting into trouble. Finally, his father sends him to a retreat at The Oasis of Mind and Body Wellness in the middle of Arkansas. This retreat, complete with no meat, no pets, and worst of all, no screens of any kind, is meant to help Jett get his act together. As a notorious bad boy, Jett wreaks havoc throughout the retreat; but then he finds a strange lizard, and entices a few other kids to help take care of it. Together, they uncover some mysterious happenings at the oasis, and link them to the unknown lizard and enigmatic millionaire in town. This plot-driven, intriguing story is told through the viewpoints of four characters, so readers are likely to find one who resonates with them. The four narrators have well-developed personalities, although some of the secondary characters are flat and mostly used to move the narrative along. The antics are sometimes over the top but always amusing, and young readers will sympathize with the lack of access to daily creature comforts. Though not expressly a humor title, Korman also sets up some very silly situations, in his typical fashion. VERDICT This fast-paced, funny friendship story will delight realistic fiction readers and fans of Korman's work. A suggested purchase for middle grade collections.—Ellen Conlin, Naperville P.L., IL

#2167455 Storm Dog (Hardcover (Trade))
written by L. M. Elliott

Whip-smart Ariel doesn't fit in. Only in the winds of the Blue Ridge Mountains and spring storms that mirror the unhappiness she feels at home. There, during a raging storm, Ariel finds a lost dog who leads her to the safety of a cabin and Sergeant Josie, a former Army K-9 handler. Together with music, dog-dancing, and a storm-child-crazy plan--the three outcasts find themselves.

978-0-06-243000-7 Katherine Tegen Books ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2154761 Ice Monster (Hardcover (Trade))
written by David Walliams

Read all about it! Read all about it! ICE MONSTER FOUND IN ARCTIC! When Elsie, an orphan on the streets of Victorian London, hears about the mysterious Ice Monster; a woolly mammoth found at the North Pole; she's determined to discover more. Then, a chance encounter brings Elsie face-to-face with the creature and sparks the adventure of a lifetime; from London to the heart of the Arctic!

978-0-06-256111-4 HarperCollins Publishers ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 496 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this bombastic illustrated adventure set in 1899 London, a 10-year-old orphan named Elsie helps revive a 10,000-year-old woolly mammoth from suspended animation, kicking off a series of madcap events across the city and onto the high seas. After running away from the physically and emotionally abusive Wormly Hall: Home for Unwanted Children, where the children are forced to eat cockroaches for every meal, Elsie is drawn to the exhibits of the Natural History Museum. There, she helps a strange old professor hiding in the basement to revive the newest exhibit, a baby mammoth she names Woolly. Determined to save Woolly from a life of captivity and study, Elsie and her newest friend, a professional cleaner named Dotty, must do everything in their power to elude pursuit; even if it means stealing a historic ship and heading for the North Pole. Ross's b&w doodles highlight the characters' fluid, nonstop action. Descriptions of the urchins' lives, including ruthless beatings and endless classist insults, strike a seriously discomfiting note, but Walliams peppers this frenetic, sometimes anachronistic tale with plenty of scatological humor, resulting in a chaotic slapstick comedy. Ages 8: 12. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--Readers should buckle their seatbelts for Walliams's new novel, a fast-paced and funny story about a young girl and a woolly mammoth. All of the characters are introduced at the outset, but the star of the story is a spirited, resourceful, homeless orphan named Elsie. It's 1899, and 10-year-old Elsie, who is white, has just run away from the cruel headmistress at Wormly Hall. She is living on the streets of London when she hears about the discovery of a 10,000-year-old woolly mammoth. Elsie sneaks into London's Natural History Museum, the mammoth's new home, and connects with Woolly, who is as "lost and alone" as she is. The following pages are rich with onomatopoeia, hyperbolic adventures, and narrow escapes. Elsie and her new friend Dotty, a kindly cleaning woman at the museum, join forces with a group of retired soldiers to confront a devious villain and bumbling police officers as they outwit their pursuers--and return Woolly safely to the North Pole via the HMS Victory. VERDICT A tale with twists and turns, references to British landmarks, and lots of heart, this title will appeal to reluctant readers and fans of prehistoric animals.--Shelley Sommer, Inly Sch., Scituate, MA Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2240480 Final Season (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Tim Green

Ben's whole life is turned upside down when his dad is diagnosed with an incurable disease called ALS, no doubt triggered by those hard hits he took on the field. Ben's

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

mom is now determined to get Ben to quit football forever.
 978-0-06-248595-3 HarperCollins Publishers ©2021 6 x 9 304 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Booklist Ben, the quarterback of his sixth-grade football team, is looking forward to a special season. His teammates are friends, and his coaches are Ben's beloved father, who is a retired NFL player, and his two older brothers, former high-school football stars. When Dad tells his sons that he has been diagnosed with ALS, they're shaken yet confident that he can carry on as usual. But as the season progresses, the disease takes its toll. Mom becomes adamant that Ben should quit football to avoid concussions and possible brain damage. Meanwhile, a girl who joins Ben's football team meets some initial resistance from fellow players, but she earns their respect with her courage, skills, and tenacity. Green, a writer, attorney, and former NFL player who announced his ALS diagnosis in 2018, based the story on his experiences while coaching his youngest son's team along with his two older sons. While football fans will enjoy the play-by-play action, the heart of the story lies in its depiction of strong family relationships. A winning sports novel, on and off the field.

#2315209 Leeva at Last (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sara Pennypacker
 What are people for? That's the burning question on the mind of Leeva Spayce Thornblossom. Fame! says Leeva's mom, the mayor of Nutsmore. Money! says her dad, the town treasurer. With the help of an orphaned badger, a risk-averse boy in a hazmat suit, and the town's librarians, Leeva sets off to discover her own answer-- setting off a chain of events that will change Nutsmore forever.
 978-0-06-311442-5 Balzer & Bray ©2023 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 320 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Leeva wants to figure out what people are for. Her mayor mother is certain that people are meant for fame, while her town-treasurer father thinks that wealth is the only point. Ever since they realized that having Leeva would make them neither rich nor famous, the girl has been relegated to servant status. Life is bleak until Leeva sneaks into the building next door and discovers the wonders of a public library and the marvelous humans who keep it running. When her parents prove a threat to the library's well-being, Leeva flees her horrible home to save her town and newly found friends from ruin. If it sounds grim, be assured that Pennypacker tells the story with warmth and whimsy, recalling the tone and charm of Matilda. Though stuck in comically gloomy situations, Leeva is a delight, her eccentric companions are lovable, and the writing sparkles (including possibly the most magical description of toast ever put to paper). A terrifically funny, tender tribute to the power of perseverance, community, and kindness. Final art not seen.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Lonely, neglected Leeva Thornblossom's greedy parents believe her job is to make them rich and famous. Since this hasn't happened yet, they require Leeva to follow her Employee Manual and perform such duties as washing dishes and cooking the books for the town of Nutsmore, where her mother is mayor and her father is treasurer. Versatile author Pennypacker (Clementine, rev. 1/07; Pax, rev. 3/16) has written a book that is by turns outrageous and wise, funny and touching, fantastical and true; Cordell's sketches contribute to the levity. Although forbidden to leave the Thornblossoms' property, Leeva begins her exploration of the outside world by sneaking to the library next door, where she befriends the kind librarian, Pauline Flowers, and her nephew. Under Mrs. Flowers's direction, Leeva begins reading books to answer her question, "What are people for?" Leeva's social circle and her understanding of the world expand exponentially, and eventually she and her new friends (and a badger) play a role in ridding the town of the adult Thornblossoms and returning all the money they stole. By story's end, Leeva knows exactly what people are for: "Everything that happens is better when someone else shares it with you." Maeve Visser Knoth(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A neglected child asks a poignant and essential question: "What are people for?" Leeva Thornblossom only knows that she's around 8 or 9, but when she learns that a school will open in her town, she longs to go. But her mother, the mayor, and her father, the town treasurer, only love power, fame, and money. Their Employee Manual (Leeva is the sole employee) forbids Leeva to leave the grounds. What Leeva knows of the world comes from reading the Nutsmore Weekly and watching the soap opera The Winds of Our Tides. The accumulation of injustices propels Leeva beyond the hedge surrounding their property, and she discovers a building next door filled with books. A young man named Harry runs the library for his librarian aunt, whose skateboarding injuries hinder her from doing the work she loves. Leeva learns that most of the problems in her town can be attributed to her parents. Harry helps her befriend Osmund, so afraid of disasters that he wears a hazmat suit, and Fern, who must care for several siblings and her aging grandparents. Leeva also takes charge of Bob, a cranky badger whose family was displaced to make room for the mayor's statue. Pennypacker delivers a hugely entertaining mix of outsized comedic villainy, dreadful parents, delicious cookies, and kindness rewarded. Leeva's sturdy instincts for both survival and justice are worth celebrating, as is the gift of books that expand her world. Main characters read White. Final art not seen. Splendid fun. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Thoughtful Leeva Thornblossom, who's "somewhere between eight and nine," lives a life of servitude to her dreadful parents. Leeva desires to attend school, but her fame-absorbed mother, the town's mayor, and her money-obsessed father, its treasurer, forbid her from going, an act that proves the last straw. Though Leeva, raised on soap operas and periodical Nutsmore Weekly, is seldom allowed to leave her home, she sets out each day, seeking to answer the question "What are people for?" She first visits the Nutsmore library next door, where a kindly librarian and her nephew introduce the girl to the astonishing worlds of literature, friendship, and freshly baked cookies. When an opportunity to meet more new people arises, Leeva jumps at it, soon encountering hazmat-suit-wearing, risk-averse Osmund and good-natured, familiarly obligated Fern. Learning that her greedy parents are responsible for many of Nutsmore's financial struggles, Leeva resolves to keep her identity a secret while attempting to set things right. Strongly recalling elements of Roald Dahl's Matilda, this archly narrated satire from Pennypacker (Here in the Real World) slyly integrates potent themes such as fairness, responsibility, and trust. Characters default to white. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Steven Malk, Writers House. Illustrator's agent: Rosemary Stimola, Stimola Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness A girl wonders "what people are for" in this sharp-witted and absorbing middle-grade novel from National Book Award-longlisted Sara Pennypacker (Pax) and Caldecott Medal-winning Matthew Cordell (Wolf in the Snow).

#2365621 Partition Project (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Saadia Faruqi

In this engaging and moving middle grade novel, author Saadia Faruqi writes about a contemporary Pakistani American girl whose passion for journalism inspires her to learn more about her grandmother's experience of the Partition of India and Pakistan--and the bond that the two form as she helps Dadi tell her story.

978-0-06-311581-1 Quill Tree Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books As far as seventh-grader Mahnoor is concerned, the arrival of her Pakistani grandmother is nothing to celebrate, seeing as Mahnoor has to not only give up her bedroom but also her free afternoons so she can, as ordered by her parents, look after Dadi. Resentful about having to move from her homeland to the U.S. in the first place, Dadi is as pleased about the arrangement as Mahnoor, but the two slowly warm to each other as Mahnoor asks Dadi about her life in Pakistan. Their discussions eventually lead aspiring journalist Mahnoor to make the Partition of Pakistan and India the topic of her journalism class documentary project. Researching the violence and tragedies of Partition isn't easy, but as Mahnoor learns more and spends time with Dadi, she begins to feel more connected to her Pakistani heritage. As an introduction to Partition, this is an accessible and informative read, providing both a broad overview of the conflict as well as detailed, personal specifics of the human toll. As a narrative, however, the book is less successful, with an uneven pace and shoehorned infodumps. Dadi is especially underserved here; her personality in real time differs wildly from the dialogue in the documentary, and her voice at points becomes almost indistinct from Mahnoor's. Nonetheless, Partition is not yet a common topic in school curriculums, and this provides a solid springboard for additional research and discussion. KQG COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Borders and roots take on new meaning in this coming-of-age story. Pakistani American seventh grader Mahnoor Raheem, an aspiring journalist, and Talha, her older brother, are instructed by Abba to greet their grandmother with "happy faces"--Dadi is leaving Lahore to live with them in Sugar Land, Texas. But smiling is hard for Maha. She's had to give up her bedroom for Dadi and move into the attic, and she even has to take care of her after school. She's excited about media studies, her new elective, but even that goes awry when they're assigned to make documentary films, something Maha believes isn't real journalism. Meanwhile, she meets Ahmad, a new student from Pakistan, and her best friend, Kim Hoang, unsuccessfully tries to interest her in their book report project. But she's immersed in conversations with Dadi about the Partition, something Maha knew nothing about. The Partition forced Dadi to leave her home in the Punjab and settle as a refugee in the newly created Pakistan. Replete with food-related memories, heart-wrenching stories, and warm tales of friendship, this is a riveting read. Maha confronts her own prejudices about the value of stories and what constitutes newsworthiness. In the process, she personally unravels her history and heritage (in ways that resonate with her American classmates who are also made to feel that they look like they're "from somewhere else") and forges a new understanding of herself and her relationships. Powerful and timely. (author's note) (Fiction. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Only the facts matter to 12-year-old aspiring journalist Mahnoor Raheem, so when she partners on a study project for English class with best friend Kim Hoang, Maha finds herself largely uninterested in the fiction books Kim suggests they read. Maha instead focuses on her media studies assignment for which she must create a short documentary with a storytelling hook. Her unlikely subject is Dadi, her gruff Pakistani grandmother, who lives with Maha and her parents following a permanent move to Sugar Land, Tex. Initially resentful of Dadi's sudden arrival, Maha is soon drawn to her grandmother's childhood stories, especially as Maha's busy parents have imparted little of their Pakistani heritage. Through Dadi, Maha learns of the Partition, the violent severing of British India into Muslim Pakistan and Hindu India, as well as the horrors her grandmother witnessed as a young refugee. Meanwhile, Kim views Maha's preoccupation with Dadi's stories as interfering with their English project, and their friendship fractures. In this vivid rendering of how growing cultural awareness and identity exploration can shape one's adolescence, Faruqi (Yusuf Azeem Is Not a Hero) presents an empowering story of family that will bolster tweens negotiating blended identities. Supporting characters are racially diverse. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Kari Sutherland, KT Literary. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Maha is a future journalist, obsessed with everything about the news. What's new in her life is the arrival of her dadi who has just moved from Pakistan and into Maha's bedroom. Along with her new room and new job as her grandmother's "babysitter," Maha has a school documentary project taking up her time. Slowly, stubborn and grumpy Dadi begins to soften and bond with Maha through sharing memories from her childhood, in particular the events surrounding the 1947 partition of India. When Maha confronts her own lack of knowledge surrounding her family's past, she begins to see the importance of history to the present moment. Diving full force into an exploration of the partition for her documentary tests Maha's stamina, patience, and relationships. Maha navigates her school project and new friendships while collecting interviews and recollections of the partition. Readers will discover along with Maha how our separate histories connect to our shared future, and the importance of archiving and protecting the personal stories of collective moments. VERDICT A heartwarming exploration of history through personal stories perfect for middle grade readers.—Hayley Morgenstern

#2362906 Zombie Train (Hardcover (Trade))

written by David Macinnis Gill

Dax has been riding out the zombie apocalypse on his crew's cobbled-together train for what feels like forever. It's a hopeless journey; the train running a loop that covers thousands of miles across the western U.S. But when a mysterious girl arrives with stories of a so-called Nirvana and a potential cure for the zombie parasite, Dax must decide between searching for the cure and protecting those entrusted in his care.

978-0-06-311651-1 Greenwillow Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist In the wake of a zombie apocalypse that has left all the grown-ups mindlessly roaming the Great Plains in vast herds like the buffalo of yore, a group of preteens has stolen a train to ride away from danger—at least until the zombie parasite inevitably catches up with them at puberty. Adding to those dim prospects, Wyatt, who unexpectedly finds himself in charge, has to cope with not only a new batch of much younger children but also other newbies with mysterious links to the outside world who are scheming to hijack the train. The tale has a surreal quality, but along with vividly drawn characters (some in advanced stages of decomposition), Gill offers zombie fans no few scary, macabre encounters that climactically escalate into a running battle, replete with sudden crises and courageous exploits. By the time readers leave the train huffing off into the sunset, headed toward a rumored cure, they will feel as if they've been on a wild ride.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Kids survive the zombie apocalypse on a train to nowhere. Nearly a year ago, a parasite turned all the grown-ups into zombies. Twelve-year-old brakeman Wyatt is leading his riders on an endless loop "from Colorado to Wyoming to Utah and back," hoping that they can find a cure. In the caboose, the nurse experiments on patients with a blood serum, but the passengers struggle with the knowledge of how they'll inevitably end up: 14 is the age when people become susceptible to the parasite's effects. Wyatt and the crew hope to find Nirvana, a military medical facility that may hold the cure. Along the way, Wyatt grows closer to Ryle, a girl who's survived the harsh conditions of the wasteland. Meanwhile, mutiny threatens the train as narcissistic crew member Diesel uses others to try to seize power after Wyatt is made conductor. Diesel isn't the only threat, however, with feral children planning coordinated attacks on the train. The characters are diverse in physical appearance, background, personalities, and skills. Appropriately disgusting descriptions and puns establish the dark humor that pervades the work, and natural-sounding tween dialogue and a fully developed dystopian world are strengths. The novel feels overly long, however, and the action sequences become repetitive; the storyline surrounding the search for the cure moves very slowly. The abrupt ending may point to a sequel. Jam-packed and unevenly paced. (Adventure. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2331802 Rayleigh Mann in the Company of Monsters (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ciannon Smart

When Rayleigh sneaks out to go trick-or-treating on All Hallows Eve, he gets way more than he bargained for—in the form of a jumbie straight out of his Nana's stories from The Book of Night Things. The weirdest part? This jumbie tells Rayleigh that the father he never knew is actually the Bogey Mann and he has been kidnapped!

978-0-06-308125-3 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Smart (Witches Steeped in Gold, 2021) welcomes every kid who feels a touch monstrous to an underground world where monsters of all types live in an uneasy balance. Drawn to Below-London, Rayleigh Mann searches for his missing father, the infamous Bogey Mann. Yet even in the land of monsters, not all is well. With Below-London on the verge of falling apart and its monsters on a citywide treasure hunt, Rayleigh will need to rely on friends who are jumbies, ghosts, and witches to keep his new family safe. Full of crackling British humor and Caribbean folklore, Smart's story evokes the perfect Halloween: children snatched from their beds, ominous prophecies peddled by seers, and plenty of chocolate—a must-have for readers who love Tracey Baptiste and Lora Senf. What are you ghouls waiting for? Toss a token in your laundry hamper, hop inside the swirling vortex, and embrace the monster within.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly On his birthday; the same day as All Hallows' Eve; Black British 12-year-old Rayleigh Mann can't wait to join his troublemaking classmates for annual trickery. After sneaking past his snoozing grandmother, who is from Jamaica, Rayleigh searches for his friends. But he can't find them, and with London's mandatory "Lights Out to Help Out" curfew swiftly approaching, he makes his way back to his family's fancy high-rise apartment, only to be intercepted by a girl named Marley. She introduces him to Thelonus, a creature called a jumbie seemingly straight out of his Nana's Caribbean monster stories. Thelonus claims to be Rayleigh's uncle and informs the tween that he's a monsterling, and son of the infamous Bogey Mann; a legendary "Supreme Scarer"; who's gone missing. After agreeing to help search for his father, Rayleigh journeys to Below-London with Marley and Thelonus. On top of his quest, he must pass a series of trials, be accepted by the leader of the underworld, and settle a power struggle. In this action-packed fantasy adventure, Smart (Witches Steeped in Gold) combines organic-feeling descriptions of eerie London streets with Caribbean folklore to craft a world teeming with ghoulish scares and creepy creatures of the night. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

#2293023 Children of the Stone City (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Beverley Naidoo

Adam and his sister, Leila, are Nons-second-class citizens, living under the Permitted ruling class. Though their life in the Stone City is filled with family, stories, and music, they must carefully follow the rules, have all paperwork on hand, and never, ever do anything to anger a Permitted. When their father unexpectedly dies, they are even restricted in how they are allowed to grieve. Soon, Adam and Leila are back to school and practicing music again. But when Adam's friend Zak plays a bold prank on a group of Permitted boys, and Adam is implicated in Zak's "crime," Adam knows their lives will never be the same again.

978-0-06-309696-7 Quill Tree Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–7—Twelve-year-old Adam and his sister Leila live in Stone City, a society divided into the ruling class called Permitteds and the lower class called Nons. Despite the disadvantages of being Nons, Adam and Leila enjoy going to school and taking music lessons. When their father dies suddenly, they must worry about their mother losing her permit to stay in Stone City. Then Adam is arrested when he and his friend Zak are falsely accused of attacking a group of Permitted teens. Adam fights to clear his name and save his mother from being displaced. Naidoo creates a dystopian allegory illustrating the divisions existing among societies around the world and the need to stand up for equality and justice. The story is told in present tense from both Adam's and Leila's points of view. Adam's chapters include occasional free verse poems. The character names are a mixture of Israeli and Arabic. While the dystopian worldbuilding is limited and young readers may not connect the classical music references, they will find themselves immersed in Adam's desperate struggle. VERDICT Recommended for students who enjoy books about characters overcoming injustice, such as Aisha Saeed's Amal Unbound and Margaret Peterson Haddix's Among the Hidden. —Maile Steimer

#2315236 Bit of Earth (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Karuna Riazi

Growing up in Pakistan, Maria Latif has been bounced between reluctant relatives for as long as she can remember--first because of her parents' constant travel, and then because of their deaths. So when old friends of her parents offer to "give her a better life" in the United States, Maria is shipped to a host family across the world. When Maria arrives on Long Island, things are not quite what she was expecting. Since she's never been good at following rules, Maria decides to investigate and discovers something she never thought she'd find: a place where she feels at home.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

978-0-06-309866-4 Greenwillow Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist A Bit of Earth is a contemporary, multicultural rendition of Frances Hodgson Burnett's classic novel, The Secret Garden. It takes place in Long Island, New York, and features a cranky Maria Latif, newly exiled from Pakistan and Bangladesh, as the protagonist. Like Mary Lennox, Maria is grappling with the twin traumas of being orphaned and displaced and finds respite in a garden and an unexpected connection with a peer. Riazi flavors her rendition with heavy doses of cultural references, nostalgic trappings of the people and practices that Maria left behind and then learns anew in the Bangladeshi diaspora on Long Island. Despite some narrative gaps and incongruities, A Bit of Earth sustains credibility in plot and character. A nice difference from The Secret Garden is the presence of a larger sense of community and adults who are held accountable for their actions. Mary had Colin and Ben (and the robin), but Maria gains quite a gaggle of friends and family.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Roots, both tangible and intangible, come together in this coming-of-age story. Maria Latif is used to being defined by others as unpleasant, ungrateful, and ill-mannered, but it's a veneer to protect herself. Grappling with the grief of being orphaned, she is now being shunted from relatives in Pakistan to live with her late parents' friends in the U.S. All she has left is a pocketful of words that take the shape of verses interspersed between the prose, giving glimpses into her feelings and thoughts. Maria finds herself in Long Island with Mr. and Mrs. Clayborne, a strange couple coded as White. They live in an even stranger house with secrets and taboos. There's also Mr. Clayborne's biracial son, taciturn Colin Clayborne, whose mother, Saira, passed away. But then a bright green gecko leads Maria to a secret garden--and the possibility of friends. Despite knowing it's off limits, Maria begins to revitalize this mysterious garden, turning the soil, finding new life, and discovering possibilities. This retelling of The Secret Garden offers an interesting twist on the classic's colonial, racist tone. It opens with promise as the evocative text highlights Maria's grief, isolation, and resignation at being cast adrift. Each character has their own story arc that is explored even as Maria finds ways of becoming her own person. While the book sags toward the middle, it explores themes of home, belonging, identity, and humans' intrinsic connection to nature. This book tackling hefty themes will grow on readers. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A foreboding feeling permeates this mystery-driven novel, a The Secret Garden retelling from Riazi (The Gauntlet). Having grown up staying with relations in Bangladesh and Pakistan, young Maria Latif, though often considered "unpleasant," has experience abiding without her immediate family. But she's thrust into another new situation after her parents die while traveling, and their alumni friends in New York City seek to provide her with opportunities. When the distant cousin with whom she's supposed to stay is unexpectedly called away, she's forced to head to the "cold, unhappy" Long Island estate of the Claybornes, who read as white. There, she's hosted by "the second Mrs. Clayborne" as well as Mr. Clayborne's mother, who forbids Maria from visiting parts of the home, including the yard. Flouting the rules while navigating the residence's tense atmosphere, Maria feels happier upon finding an unlocked, unloved garden to tend; and inside it a beautifully embroidered sari. The outdoors has always been Maria's favorite place, and working in the secret garden feels just right to her. When he's sent home from boarding school for misbehavior, she also befriends young Colin Clayborne, the biracial-coded son of the late first Mrs. Clayborne, Saira. Chapters alternate experiential free-verse poetry with a third-person narrative as Maria excavates the garden's past and her own isolation in this thoughtful, emotionally honest take on the source material. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Thao Le, Sandra Dijkstra Agency. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8--This contemporary reenvisioning of The Secret Garden features Maria Latif, a Pakistani-Bangladeshi Muslim girl. Orphaned after her parents' accident, Maria has been labeled difficult and is bounced from house to house. She is dispatched to stay with a friend of her father's on Long Island, but arrives to find he is away on business and she is in the care of his second wife Lyndsay, his judgmental mother, and indifferent son, Colin. Exploring the grounds to escape the tense household, Maria discovers a locked gate and an old unkempt garden. With the help of new friends Mimi and Rick, Colin, and resources from Lyndsay, they collaborate to resurrect the garden that was originally cultivated by Colin's deceased mother, Saira. Found family is a central theme as Maria struggles to find a place she can truly call home. The undertones of colonialism in the original version are changed appropriately. Maria's character evolves, gently showing readers the coping skills she has developed to deal what she has been through, and how she is making new connections. Her Desi identity is represented authentically via foods, scents, clothing/dupatta, prayers, and mehndi, and the bit of earth she tends to brings up with memories of her parents. All of this provides comfort and familiarity. The hybrid prose/verse format provides a narrative that feels genuine, raw, and allows readers into the minds of the characters. A content warning is advised regarding the death of parents, racism, and colorism. VERDICT Destined to be a new classic, this refreshing of the canon is long overdue.--Lisa Krok Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2330283 Jayson Goes for It! (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brayden Harrington

Eighth grader Jayson Linden has had a stutter his whole life. Though his fellow classmates can sometimes be mean, Jayson tries not to let it get to him; he enjoys playing basketball and spending time with his friends. Then Jayson's best friend, Gloria, is kicked off the debate team because of her stutter and Jayson starts to notice other injustices happening at their school.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Stutter notwithstanding, eighth grader Jayson Linden runs for class president against the coolest kid in middle school. Teen author Harrington (who shared his own story in the 2021 picture book Brayden Speaks Up) stirs strategies and grievances alike into his debut novel, co-authored with Ritz. Jayson, who, like Harrington, speaks with a stutter, is pitted not only against rival candidate Mack--basketball star, local mayor's son, and all-around A-lister--but also insensitive teachers, a hostile principal, and a wrongheaded speech therapist. Initially motivated to run by indignation at seeing Mack insist that champion arguer Gloria Lopez be barred from debate club speaking due to her stutter and best friend Chuck Neville arbitrarily rejected at basketball tryouts for clashing with Mack, Jayson goes on to run an inclusive students' rights-based campaign against his opponent's smooth promotions of school spirit and a refurbished gym. Fortunately, he has peer allies as well as a new therapist more attuned to his needs than the old one to help him get past his profound lack of confidence, a disastrous public speaking performance, and the interference of his plainly partisan principal on the way to a triumphant, feel-good close. If the story overall seems predictable, there is at least one unexpected twist in a significant character's arc. Except for Chuck, who is Black, and Gloria, whose name cues her as Latine, the cast reads White. Weighted by heavy messaging but buoyant enough to stay afloat. (letter from Brayden) (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2308382 What Happened to Rachel Riley? (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Claire Swinarski

Anna Hunt may be the new girl at East Middle School, but she can already tell there's something off about her eighth-grade class. Rachel Riley, who just last year was one of the most popular girls in school, has become a social outcast. But no one, including Rachel Riley herself, will tell Anna why. As a die-hard podcast enthusiast, Anna knows there's always more to a story than meets the eye. So she decides to put her fact-seeking skills to the test and create her own podcast around the question that won't stop running through her head: What happened to Rachel Riley?

978-0-06-321309-8 Quill Tree Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Book Page Last year, Rachel Riley was the most popular girl at East Middle School in Madison, Wisconsin. This year, she's persona non grata with the entire eighth grade class--except for Anna Hunt.

Reviews by: Booklist Moving from Chicago to Madison, Wisconsin, for eighth grade is an unwanted change for bookish Anna Hunt, but at least she has it better than Rachel Riley. Anna can't spot anything that would make her classmate such an outcast, but after doing a little digging, Anna realizes that Rachel used to be extremely popular. Why was she utterly alone now? What happened to Rachel Riley? This question crawls under Anna's skin, ultimately becoming the focus of her application (a mock podcast) for a youth podcasting summit led by her hero, investigative journalist Mimi Miller. What begins as a look into bullying and the social politics of middle school expands into a revealing study of sexual harassment in the ways that "minor" incidents can both be normalized and have significant negative effects on victims. Told largely through embedded emails, texts, and interview transcripts, the novel pulls in a variety of adult and student perspectives as Anna follows clues and endeavors not to become shunned herself. She emerges as a complex protagonist, whose struggles over leaving her friends and Polish community in Chicago are threaded throughout, as is the war raging between her sense of justice and introverted nature. An empowering and empathetic companion to Barbara Dee's Maybe He Just Likes You (2019) and Brigit Young's The Prettiest (2020).

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Anna Hunt has a unique insight into the eighth-grade class at East Middle School, having just moved to Madison, Wisconsin, from Chicago, and she's confused but intrigued by a story that involves the once-popular student Rachel Riley--a story no one wants to talk about. As Anna takes on a podcast project for her Social Issues class she interviews her peers, steps on many toes, and tracks down the events that led Rachel to burn down a barn in the middle of the night the day before the seventh-grade dance. What starts as curiosity ends with the discovery of a sexual harassment game the boys of East Middle School play on the girls, and now Anna's stuck figuring out what to do with that knowledge. Anna is likeable and compelling, utilizing humor and quirkiness to get the information she needs and providing a buffer to some of the dark themes of the novel. Her narration is interspersed with her findings: voice recordings, emails, notes passed in class, flyers, and text messages provided to her as evidence. The unraveling mystery of the game itself is compelling as Anna identifies the players as well as the people who are complacent in the harassment and other girls who blame Rachel for ruining their dance. If the administration's eventual response is a bit too neat, the story ends on a hopeful but bittersweet note as Anna understands the culture that feeds sexual harassment behaviors can't end overnight. Pair this book with Maybe He Just Likes You (BCCB 10/19) for a much-needed conversation with middle schoolers about the harassment they will likely face at school. NB COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews How did the most popular girl in school become persona non grata? New kid and aspiring podcaster Anna Hunt could have taken the easy route for her social issues assignment about any subject that was important to her. But somehow Anna always comes back to the question, "What happened to Rachel Riley?" Does it have anything to do with the mysterious game the boys have been playing? Anna's investigation unfolds in emails, text threads, personal narratives, articles, and voice recordings as she asks difficult questions, struggles to make friends, and questions how and if the world can change for the better. Ultimately, Anna's un-essay explores sexual harassment between middle school peers, specifically boys giving each other points for slapping girls' butts and snapping their bra straps. As in Barbara Dee's Maybe He Just Likes You (2019), there's social pressure to stay silent and laugh it all off as a joke. Given the central focus on teasing apart this issue, it's understandable that many of the characters lack depth. Anna's mother emigrated from Poland, and Anna is bilingual; some supporting characters have names that point to non-European heritage. With its highlighting of fun and educational facts, the writing style and subject matter make this a good fit for classroom or book club reading and discussion. A useful addition to the pool of middle-grade books about sexual harassment at school. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Wis., middle school, Anna Hunt isn't surprised to be sitting alone in the cafeteria. But another eighth grader; Rachel Riley; is too, and when Anna finds that Rachel used to be one of the grade's most popular girls, she wants to know what happened. Anna, who wants to be "the next Sarah Koenig," frames her investigation as a podcast, hoping to apply to a summer camp with the results: an exploration of "bullying. Social classes.... A middle school caste system." But no one will talk, not even Rachel, who admits she knows the reason behind her being ostracized. In a quietly suspenseful book, Swinarski (The Kate in Between) uses Anna's emails with her beloved Polish grandmother, as well as her thoughts and interactions at home and school, to give readers a good sense of the 12-year-old, who's a year younger than her classmates, and happier reading than socializing. Amid universal discouragement, Anna keeps asking awkward questions, eventually garnering help from classmates and her computer-genius older sister. With a slow reveal, the novel shows how frequently written-off behavior can constitute sexual harassment, and how individuals can create change by having the courage to question the narrative. Most characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Alex Slater, Trident Media Group. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--As East Middle School's newest student, Anna Hunt has noticed that her classmate, Rachel Riley, is treated like a social outcast. When she is assigned an un-essay project for her Social Issues class, Anna decides to investigate why. Inspired by her favorite podcaster, Mimi Miller, and hoping to land a spot in her summer camp, Anna begins to dig into the past year, recording her process as a podcast. Her findings reveal a "game" wherein boys received points for "slapping girls' butts," which somehow led to a fire that canceled an end-of-year dance and is the reason for Rachel's predicament. When the harassing game is reignited this year in the form of snapping bra straps, and Anna herself is targeted, she's inspired to incite social change through her project. This book is incredibly relevant and empowering for readers and would serve as a powerful conversation starter. Anna is a determined yet vulnerable protagonist, who eventually realizes that change starts with her. Swinarski's writing is compelling and multifaceted, using traditional chapters, letters, emails, and text messages to tell the story. Tackling themes of friendship, betrayal, and harassment beautifully, while keeping them accessible to middle schoolers, this book will resonate with readers, and will inspire them to speak up about unjust situations. VERDICT A necessary purchase for all collections serving middle school readers. Hand to fans of Barbara Dee's Maybe He Just Likes You.--Amy McInerney Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2332841 Max Fernsby and the Infinite Toys (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gerry Swallow

Max Fernsby is a typical 10-year-old kid who spends his time avoiding his foster parents and palling around with his two best friends, Baxter and Leoni. But when a red bag literally falls from the sky onto his head, Max discovers that he has the power to produce any toy he wishes for! With his magic red bag in hand and newfound toy-summoning abilities, Max soon realizes that the bag can do more than just supply him and his friends with all the new toys they ever wanted.

978-0-06-321475-0 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young boy comes into possession of a miraculous bag. Two weeks before Christmas, the continued shenanigans of North Pole elves Eldor and Skhiff result in their being given the less-than-desirable job of "fertilizer relocation engineer" (shoveling reindeer poop). Meanwhile, a 10-year-old foster child named Max Fernsby takes an ill-fated, snowy bedpan ride (he and his friends couldn't afford a toboggan)...and winds up careening into Steve Bozeman, the greedy CEO of Rainforest.com. Though the kids run off, they haven't seen the last of Bozeman. When a hankering for pizza prompts Eldor to borrow Santa's sleigh, an almost-collision sends Santa's red bag falling through the sky onto Max's head. The bag produces whatever toy he asks for, and he and his friends start a business to support themselves and provide presents to the neighborhood at much lower prices than Rainforest.com offers. The elves need to find that bag, especially before Bozeman gets his hands on it! Opening with a promise that readers have never heard a Christmas story quite like this one, Swallow and Gaulke certainly deliver in the unique zany shenanigans department. Despite a couple of missteps--a key beat of the climax happens abruptly offscreen, and the end has an odd twist--young readers looking for humor with a holiday twist will have fun here. Occasional illustrations depict the primary characters as light-skinned, though people of color appear, too. General tomfoolery, affectionate and otherwise. (Fiction. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two calamity-prone elves and three human friends team up to save Santa's bag from an avaricious e-tailer in this madcap Christmas adventure from screenwriters Swallow and Gaulke. Lost out of Santa's sleigh during an elfin pizza run, the famous sack lands on the head of 10-year-old Max Fernsby, who lives with foster parents following his mother's death. Max; whose lean allowance recently saw him sledding on a rusty bedpan rather than a toboggan; quickly discovers that the bag magically supplies any toy he asks for, and begins to conjure more for sale, undercutting Rainforest.com's prices in a neighborhood that just lost its last toy store. But Rainforest.com founder and CEO Steve Bozeman is watching Max closely after a sledding collision, and he soon plots to steal the sack, just as elves Eldor and Skhiff; recently demoted to fertilizer relocation engineers; work to retrieve the bag. Though the plotting is formulaic, nonstop action and toilet humor will find their audience in this double debut filled with "high jinks, shenanigans... tomfoolery... funny business... horseplay, and... buffoonery." Occasional b&w cartoons from Kissi render most protagonists with pale skin. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--Eldor and Skhiff, two elves who are abject failures at the North Pole, are seemingly always in trouble. They kick up their antics a notch when they borrow Santa's sleigh one night and lose his famous red sack. Falling from the sleigh, the sack lands on the head of Max Fernsby, a foster kid with skinflint guardians who only want chores done and a check in their hands. However, Max and his two friends, Baxter and Leoni, make their own fun through numerous adventures. The only element missing in the story is, of course, a greedy toy maker. Enter Steve Bozeman, CEO of Rainforest.com, who finds fun in forcing small toy stores out of business. The antics of the elves, the action of Max and his friends, and the cruelty of Bozeman are revealed in alternating chapters, but all the seemingly unrelated story lines come together at the end where the narrator is also revealed. Constant action, comic situations, and sarcastic banter make for a fun ride all the way to the end of the story, where there's a great surprise for readers. VERDICT Fast-paced and laced perfectly with a little irreverent humor. Highly recommended.--Laura Fields Eason Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2315338 Bea and the New Deal Horse (Hardcover (Trade))

written by L. M. Elliott

Bea wakes to Daddy's note in a hayloft, where he abandoned her with her little sister after the stock market crash took everything: Daddy's job at the bank, their home, Mama's health and life. How is Bea supposed to convince the imposing Mrs. Scott to take in two stray children? Mrs. Scott's money and Virginia farm are drying up in a drought and the Great Depression, too. She might have to sell her beautiful horses, starting with a dangerous chestnut that has caused tragedy in the past and injures her stablehand shortly after Bea arrives.

978-0-06-321900-7 Katherine Tegen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Bea, 13, and younger sister Vivian are secretly abandoned by their father on the farm of their late mother's friend. After Bea rescues a temperamental chestnut horse with colic, the girls are discovered by the farm owner, Mrs. Millicent Scott, whose brisk demeanor initially dissuades Bea from revealing their connection. That "beaten-up horse and beaten-down girl" prove quite a pair and potentially Mrs. Scott's best hope of saving her farm from foreclosure. Bea shows resilience as she confronts hardships and navigates life within her newfound family. Riding terminology and Virginia hunt-country gentility infuse the emotional text while Depression-era cultural facts, economics, and racial tensions color interactions among side characters. An extensive note details Elliott's (Louisa June and the Nazis in the Waves, 2022) admiration for notable female horseback riders as well as research that informed this work. Distrustful but determined Bea has a lot riding on her, but she harnesses her stubbornness amidst sorrow in this blue-ribbon pick for fans of Kimberly Brubaker Bradley's The War That Saved My Life (2015).

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews orse in a Depression-era effort to save a family farm. It's not her family's farm: Thirteen-year-old Beatrice Davi and her 8-year-old sister, Vivian, have been riding the rails with their father. Two years ago, when Daddy lost his bank job in Richmond, they lost everything, including Bea's pony. Then Mama died. Now Daddy's abandoned them in a hayloft belonging to Mama's Sweet Briar College friend's mother. The girls successfully stay hidden until Bea reveals their existence by saving one of Mrs. Scott's horses from colic. Cantankerous Mrs. Scott allows them to stay in exchange for picking peaches but soon enlists Bea to help attract rich buyers by riding some of her horses in an upcoming show--including a beautiful chestnut who's hurt several people. Elliott weaves in historical threads: near-historic droughts in Virginia in 1930 and 1932, 1919 race riots in which Black World War I veterans were attacked, the racially integrated Bonus Army's 1932 march to Washington, and presidential hopeful Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal. Bea is a vivid, sympathetic character. She and Mrs. Scott stand up to their multitude of losses with brave honesty and pragmatism, and the victories they achieve feel earned. Elliott knows horses down to her toes. Main characters are White; major supporting character Malachi is a Black veteran blinded during a parade in the U.S. in honor of his regiment. Hurrah for bold riders and the horses who love them. (author's note, selected sources) (Historical fiction. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In a richly characterized novel set against a precisely drawn Great Depression backdrop, a resourceful 13-year-old enters horse competitions to stave off bankruptcy at her adopted home. Awakening in the hayloft of a once-grand Virginia horse farm, Beatrice Davis is horrified to discover that her father has abandoned her and her eight-year-old sister, Vivian, "like unwanted kittens." Claiming that he cannot care for them, the former banker leaves a note suggesting that they appeal to the farm's owner, Mrs. Scott, whose daughter knew the girls' late mother. Horse-loving Bea soon saves a feisty chestnut with colic, forging a unique connection with the horse and alerting Mrs. Scott to their presence. The formidable woman, once a renowned horse trainer, is loath to take on additional dependents, but she keeps the sisters on to work after an accident incapacitates her only stable hand. As Bea endeavors to become indispensable and learns more about the rural community's Depression-era plight, she trains to compete with the difficult horse. Elliott (Louisa June and the Nazis in the Waves) nimbly layers historical events; including the devastating effects of the stock market crash and FDR's promise of a "New Deal"; and equine details into an engrossing novel for fans of The War That Saved My Life. Protagonists read as white; a secondary character cues as Black. Ages 10: up. Agent: Katelyn Detweiler, Jill Grinberg Literary Management. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--This fits snugly within the canon of plucky girls overcoming massive trials. Written in the vein of A Little Princess or Anne of Green Gables, this title sets the titular Beatrice in the depths of America's Great Depression. Bea's father abandons her and her younger sister Vivian on the farm of a distant and rather prickly acquaintance, Mrs. Scott. Although she's hesitant about the two foundlings, Mrs. Scott soon finds a use for them on her floundering farm. Once Bea, who is white, reveals her innate horse training sense, there's hope and great risk on the horizon as the women try to save the farm through taming a traumatized horse. Bea's journey is gorgeously told through refined but accessible writing. The conflicts are heartbreaking without a heavy hand. The scenes of horse jumping are equally exhilarating and exhausting, enough to make any horse skeptic a full-on fan. With a dash of social issues through veterans, racism, and the Hoover/FDR presidential race, Elliott's novel is as informative as it is entertaining. VERDICT A gorgeous, almost bygone-era tale of overcoming adversity, full of wisdom for all. Upper elementary students, high schoolers, and beyond can learn resilience and wisdom from these characters.--Cat McCarrey Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2277784 Camp Famous (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jennifer Blecher

Eleven-year-old Abby Herman is normal normal normal. She's never stood out, and she never knows quite how to find her place in a group of friends, even though she notices everything and writes it all down in her notebook. When Abby learns that she'll be attending summer camp, she is beyond excited at the idea of a fresh start and a place where she might find what she's always wanted: a best friend. Desperate to fit in with the pop stars, princesses, and geniuses, Abby creates a fake identity as a famous author. But as camp comes to a close, Abby finds herself torn between who she has pretended to be and who she truly is.

978-0-06-314068-4 Greenwillow Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 After a particularly embarrassing playground incident draws the sympathy of her well-connected teacher, lonely Abby is given the opportunity to attend Camp Summerah, a remote summer camp for starlets escaping the spotlight. An ordinary child suddenly surrounded by performers and a princess, 11-year-old Abby pretends to be a famous author with a pseudonym, allowing her to fit in among the camp's UFCs (unrecognizable famous campers). As the lies build, Abby crumbles, recognizing that "lying, faking, pretending to be somebody different was not the answer." A second chance from her new camp pals helps Abby realize that being true to yourself is enough to make you special, and genuine friendships follow. Although close readers may pause over gaps in time and superficial characterizations, the short chapters, generous margins, and relatable themes of insecurity will broaden the book's appeal. Blecher (Out of Place, 2019) delivers a satisfying middle-grade story showcasing the makings of real friendship and the possibilities that await over a summer of growth (even if your summer doesn't include a royal BFF). COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Abby longs to leave the troubles of fifth grade behind for a typical overnight summer camp experience. Instead, her teacher, noticing Abby's social troubles and unhappiness at school, finagles her a place at Camp Famous, where celebrity kids go to escape the pressure of the public eye. Finding herself among royalty, pop stars, children of social media influencers, science prodigies, and even Oliver -- a classmate from school who, it turns out, does reporting for national news outlets -- Abby feels self-conscious about being "regular" and pretends to be a best-selling author. Meanwhile, the famous kids all like Abby immediately -- and she could develop close friendships were she not hindered by the false identity she has created. The atmosphere is idyllic: likable counselors in cozy cabins, a lake, evening campfires, loads of activity choices and free time blocks, and a tightknit group of campers with complicated lives and a desire for real connection. Abby's first-person narration, alternating with journal entries in her green fuzzy notebook, builds as the summer of her dreams unfolds, until her secret comes out, upending everything. This enjoyable story of finding self-acceptance through a summer escape is ideal for veteran campers as well as for those who daydream about the experience -- and the new friends they might make there. Julie Roach(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Abigail Herman spends a lot of time trying to figure out the mysterious rules of fifth grade friendship. Everyone knows that you should tuck in your shirt before doing a cartwheel. Everyone, that is, except 11-year-old Abby. Just like she doesn't know the words to the latest songs or the names of the characters on the popular TV shows her mom won't let her watch. She thinks a fresh start at summer camp might be the answer to her friendship problems, and she has her sights set on Camp Longatocket, which her old babysitter reminisced about. But when her teacher, Ms. McIntyre, arranges for Abby to go to a camp run by her brother, it's someplace completely different: Camp Famous, where the high-profile campers include a princess and a pop star. Being the only nonfamous kid makes her feel like an outsider, so Abby pretends to be a bestselling author to fit in. She can only be her true self when she's writing in her fuzzy, green, sequined notebook and when she's spending time with Oliver Frank, her classmate and fellow camper who promises to keep her secret--and has one of his own. This plot-driven, upbeat novel will have readers relating to Abby's awkwardness while enjoying the fanciful situation in which she finds herself. At its heart, it's a sweet story of friendship, being true to yourself, and finding common ground. Most characters default to White. A quirky and fun summer read. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old white Abby Herman attempts to make friends in Blecher's (Stick with Me) bighearted novel about truth and self-acceptance. When "ordinary" Abby gets the opportunity to attend sleepaway camp, she's excited for a new cohort of eligible friends. It's not until she arrives at the airport that her parents reveal that this is not a typical camp: Camp Famous is where famous kids go to get away from the pressures of public life. Despite the other campers' inviting personalities, Abby pretends to be a famous writer to fit in, and ropes preeminent child reporter Oliver Frank, who's white, into her scheme. As Abby finally makes friends, she begins to understand fame's complexities, and realizes that her popular peers are not so different from her. Even so, she's scared to admit her lies, and as these mistruths grow bigger, tension brews within her fledgling relationships. Through Abby's fully realized loneliness and desire for connection, Blecher cleverly presents the pain of being left out, the joy of being seen, and the challenges along the road to accepting and celebrating oneself. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Alexander Slater, Trident Media Group. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Blecher's latest is a fun summertime romp with a spotlight on coming into your own. Abby is an ordinary 11-year-old white girl, trying to navigate who she is and what she wants. After an embarrassing incident at school alerts Abby's teacher to possible bullying, her parents give in and enroll her in a summer sleepaway camp she has always wanted to attend. Little does she know that she is in for anything but a typical summer camp experience—she is headed to Camp Famous, where famous kids escape to be themselves. Abby isn't famous but wants to fit in, so tells a lie about being a renowned author. Keeping up the lie and making friends with celebrities isn't easy, but Abby will do anything to make this summer the best ever. Readers will be connect with Abby as the story unfolds. Blecher skillfully crafts relatable experiences and feelings within a unique story arc. Abby is a great example of a kid learning to be patient and comfortable with who she is; growing up can be tough, but being true to herself wins in the end. VERDICT A sweet summer read for realistic fiction fans. Recommended for tween readers who enjoy light coming-of-age tales.—Elizabeth Pelayo

#2310929 Grace of Wild Things (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Heather Fawcett

Grace has never been good at anything except magic--not that anyone believes her. While other children are adopted from the orphanage, nobody wants Grace. So she decides to make a home for herself by running away and offering herself as an apprentice to the witch in the nearby woods. After all, who better to teach Grace to use her magic? Surely the witch can't be that bad.

978-0-06-314262-6 Balzer & Bray ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine The setting is Prince Edward Island, sometime close to the turn of the twentieth century. "The dirt road was reddish, like all the earth on the island, as if it were flushed with pride at its own prettiness." A spirited, impulsive orphan -- romantic about nature, self-dramatizing, and fond of poetry -- is taken in by a grumpy old woman. What the child passionately longs for are connection, friendship, and kindness. So far, so Green Gables -- Grace is certainly a literary second cousin to Anne. The twist is that she is also a witch, and so is the grumpy old woman. The plot involves a series of tests, a year's worth of spellcasting as Grace apprentices to her craft. The stakes are high. If she cannot master all one hundred (and a half) spells, she will lose her magic powers, and thus her identity. A supporting cast includes a crow familiar, a bullying mean girl, a wish-granting fairy (and nascent romantic interest), and a sensible, supportive best friend. This alternative-universe romp is perfect for those who like their fantasy light and sentimental and enjoy a bit of L. M. Montgomery pastiche (yes, the raspberry cordial disaster resurfaces, and there's even a hint of Matthew). Sarah Ellis(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Grace, a 12-year-old witch, runs away from the orphanage to find a better life for herself. With plenty of respectful nods to Anne of Green Gables, this delightful story set on Prince Edward Island features fledgling witch Grace. Escaping the orphanage she hates, Grace ventures with her familiar, a crow named Windweaver, to the cottage of Miss Puddlestone, a reputed witch who is rumored to eat children. But Grace is not afraid; she is there to offer her services and, in return, to learn more about magic. Unfortunately for Grace, the witch is not at all interested in taking her under her wing but agrees eventually (after failing to roast Grace in her giant oven) to consider it--but only if Grace correctly performs all the spells in the witch's grimoire to prove her potential. Richly imagined and terribly funny in its interactions between Grace and the witch, the narrative's essence honors the plots points and characters of L.M. Montgomery's iconic story. Grace is voluble, imaginative, and a lover of poetry and all things in the natural world. Her endearing character--just as charming as the original Anne (no mean feat)--is by turns funny, wise, determined, and poignant. Most characters read default White except for Sareena, Grace's best friend, who is Lebanese and French Canadian. A magical, witchy, and thoroughly successful homage to a classic. (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Told in the spirit of Anne of Green Gables, this highly imaginative fantasy novel by Fawcett (The School Between Winter and Fairyland) follows 12-year-old Grace Greene's path toward becoming a learned witch. After discovering that she has magical powers, Grace feels isolated from her peers at the Prince Edward Island orphanage where she lives. When losing herself in reading poetry no longer seems sufficient as distraction from her loneliness, she and her crow familiar, Windweaver, run away to the home of local witch Miss Puddlestone. There, Grace is offered a deal: if she can cast the spells within Miss Puddlestone's first grimoire by the time the cherry trees bloom, she will take Grace on as an apprentice. As Grace embarks on her endeavor, she meets neighbor Sareena Khalil, 12, and Rum, a fairy boy whose skin shifts tones, both of whom agree to accompany Grace on her quest. Frequently event-foreshadowing works from Grace's favorite writers, including Emily Dickinson and E. Nesbit, begin each chapter. Fawcett utilizes Grace's over-the-top expressiveness to convey with cheerful candor themes of bullying, loneliness, and regret; character interactions embody many flavors of friendship, which together merge into an exuberant tale of belonging and hope. Most characters read as white; Sareena is Lebanese and French Canadian. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Brianne Johnson, Writers House. (Feb.)

#2308402 Figure It Out, Henri Weldon (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tanita S. Davis

Seventh grader Henrietta Weldon gets to switch schools--finally! She'll be "mainstreaming" into public school, leaving her special education school behind. She can't wait for her new schedule, new friends, and new classes. Henri's dyscalculia, a learning disability that makes math challenging to process and understand, is what she expects to give her problems. What she doesn't expect is a family feud with her sister over her new friends, joining the girls' soccer team, and discovering poetry. Henri's tutor and new friend, Vinnie, reminds her to take it slow. One problem at a time.

978-0-06-314357-9 Katherine Tegen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Book Page When Henrietta Weldon's parents decide that she should switch from private to public school for seventh grade, Henri is excited--and determined to hide her nerves. Between her messy bedroom and her struggles with math, Henri's family of competitive overachievers treat her like "a problem to be solved." Her older sister, Kat, refuses to answer Henri's questions about Alterra Junior/Senior High School, instead insisting that Henri needs to "figure things out for herself," which makes Henri eager to prove her whole family wrong.

Reviews by: Booklist Henri, who has been attending private school to bolster her math skills, switches to public school for seventh grade. She finds the workload heavier than expected and making friends more challenging. When her mother tells her that she doesn't have time for soccer, because "Black girls have to work twice as hard to get half as far," she considers that advice, but since Ana, her new friend at school, is urging her to try out, she does and joins the team. Meanwhile, Henri's older sister warns her against befriending Ana but doesn't adequately explain why. Tension builds at school and at home, but in the end, Henri begins to recognize the allies who surround her. The author of Serena Says (2020) and Partly Cloudy (2021), Davis does a particularly good job of portraying Henri's sister and parents as individuals, while keeping the narrative focused on the main character. Henri makes understandable mistakes, and her reactions involve meaningful reflection about issues such as letting others down. An involving middle-grade narrative with a very likable protagonist.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When Henrietta Weldon transfers into public school for seventh grade, she leaves behind the special education program that accommodated her learning disability that impedes her understanding of math concepts. Big sister Kat cautions her not to overcomplicate everything and to stay away from the Morgans, a family of foster children with a bad reputation, but her advice conflicts with Henri's assessment of Vinnie Morgan, her math tutor with a big heart and shared love for nontypical pets. Positive reinforcement from peers and educators encourage Henri to try new things, like soccer and writing poetry--just as long as she can keep up with school. Davis (Partly Cloud, BCCB 07/21) shines with this story of a well-meaning adolescent whose learning disability seems to add an extra layer of complication to an already turbulent stage of life. Mismanaging time, emerging organization skills, and a tendency to concern herself with others' perceptions of her impact her performance at school, and the expectations placed on her at home aren't particularly helpful. Although Henri's apprehension toward math seems rooted in her disability, much of that is reinforced by her own family, especially her mother, who emphasizes that Black girls have to work harder to be taken seriously in the world. Davis successfully drives home the importance of finding one's own path and accepting the journeys of others. QB COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A girl with a learning disability navigates the demands of her new school and family dynamics. Henrietta "Henri" Weldon, a Black tween, is cautiously excited about starting seventh grade. It'd be helpful if her older sister, Kat, answered any of her probing questions about what to expect, but she's acted strangely ever since Henri completed her math placement test. In the middle of a mentally taxing first day, the last thing Henri needed was to drop her change in the lunchroom, but it results in her meeting Vinnie Morgan and his multiracial group of foster home siblings. As they form friendships, Henri craves the bond that the Morgans possess; it contrasts with her own competitive, driven family. Kat warns her to stay away from the Morgans, however, seeing them as troublemakers. But Henri doesn't have much time to worry about this, as she tries to stay on top of parental schoolwork expectations, playing soccer, and writing poetry. The story's brisk pace and accessible vocabulary help readers quickly get to know Henri and the interesting supporting cast. Without sacrificing the story's light tone, the author highlights the daily obstacles that Henri confronts due to her dyscalculia (which is never explicitly named in the text) and her longing for a tighter family unit. Skillfully realized, this is an affirming and inspiring tale for readers who are only ever told what they can't accomplish. Uplifting and amusing, this book will leave readers with valuable lessons. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Seventh grader Henri Weldon is determined to start the new school year on a high note, though she wishes her older sister Katherine were more supportive. As the two start classes, Katherine refuses to answer Henri's questions about what to expect, won't sit with her at lunch, and treats her as a "problem to be solved." Henri's unnamed learning disability, which reads as similar to dyscalculia, often leaves her feeling disconnected from her classmates, so she's heartened when she meets friendly Vinnie Morgan, a foster kid who later becomes her peer tutor. The support Henri receives from her committed teachers and Vinnie allow Henri to flourish, but when she tells her parents she wants to try out for soccer, her mother worries about whether Henri can juggle everything at once. Henri's struggles with her learning disability, her feeling overwhelmed with her increasingly busy life, and her contentious relationship with Katherine are matter-of-factly portrayed via a complex character who is not singularly defined by her personal challenges. In this hopeful, well-paced volume, Davis (Partly Cloudy) centers accommodation, community, and understanding. The Weldons are Black; supporting characters are racially diverse. Ages 8: 12. (Jan.)

#2288338 Anisa's International Day (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Reem Faruqi

Anisa is super excited about International Day and can't wait to share her mother's samosas with her class. But when someone has the exact same idea, Anisa is crushed. Going to her aunt's dholki party gives her an idea for the perfect activity instead - mehndi! There's only one problem, Anisa's best friend doesn't seem to like the idea - she doesn't even seem to like Anisa anymore. Will Anisa ever get to enjoy International Day?

978-0-06-320623-6 HarperCollins Publishers ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 112 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In Atlanta, spirited third grader narrator Anisa Zakaria, who is Pakistani American, enjoys drawing; baking with first grader sister Zineera, with whom she runs a small bakery for family; and laughing with jokester best friend Katie, who reads as white. When Anisa wears a new kurta that her Nani sends from Pakistan, it gives her beloved teacher the idea to hold an International Day, for which each student will choose a state or country to which they have a connection. Looking for an "ingenious" idea for the celebration, the occasion of Anisa's beloved aunt's pre-wedding dholki inspires her to plan on bringing mehndi for International Day. But after Katie seems to laugh at Anisa's decorated palms, Anisa surveys classmates about the ingredients required of a good friend, determining that Katie no longer measures up; and resulting in a fallout. Exploring a cross-cultural friendship alongside interpersonal dynamics at home and school, Faruqi (Unsettled) uses a light touch to articulate one student's multifaceted struggles around sharing an intersection of her identity in a slice-of-life chapter book that deftly portrays elements of Pakistani culture. Final art not seen by PW. A glossary, recipes, and activities conclude. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Rena Rossner, Deborah Harris Agency. (Sept.)

#2282354 Breda's Island (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jessie Ann Foley

After Breda Moriarity gets caught stealing one too many times, Breda's mom sends her to Ireland—a place she has never been—to live with the grandfather she has never met. While Breda doesn't want to be in this strangely beautiful land, she finally gets to meet her granda, her mom's father. He's a grumpy farmer who is also a seanchai, a traditional Gaelic storyteller. But the most important story to Breda is the one nobody will talk about: what happened to her absent father. If nothing else this summer, Breda is determined to figure out the truth about her family's history—and herself.

978-0-06-320772-1 Quill Tree Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Twelve-year-old Breda lives in Chicago with her mom, Maura, and knows nothing about her dad. Maura, as a single parent and undocumented immigrant trying to run her own business, has been working around the clock, leaving Breda feeling invisible both at home and at school. Aching for attention and feeling alone, Breda gets caught stealing one too many times and is sent to Ireland to spend the summer with Granda, her grumpy old grandfather whom she's never met and from whom her mom has been long estranged. As Breda unravels the mysteries surrounding her mom and Granda's estrangement as well as the identity of her father, she must navigate the complexities of familial bonds and challenges. Foley folds in Gaelic storytelling traditions, Irish language, and poetic descriptions, creating a rich atmosphere that transports and immerses readers. Well-drawn characters and emotionally charged scenes keep audiences invested. As it explores issues that include undocumented immigration, generational trauma, and emotional and physical abuse, Breda's touching journey through her family's secrets evokes empathy and the need for healing. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books After Breda Moriarity's latest episode of petty theft, her mother Maura ships her off for the summer to Granda's farm on Ireland's Dingle Peninsula-an unexpected choice, given that a pregnant teenaged Maura fled to Chicago years ago to escape Granda's anger and disappointment. Granda's not especially warm to Breda, either, but the farm is beautiful, and Breda surprises herself as well as her grandfather with her affinity to and skill with the livestock. Granda also reveals an unexpected role in the small community as a seanchaí, the valued transmitter of traditional lore who can hold a pub-and a granddaughter-beguiled. However, his declaration that any relationship with the local Fahey family is forbidden runs afoul of Breda's need to make some friends, and when she joins that clan for Gaelic football matches, the Faheys shed light on closely guarded Moriarity family secrets. The plot outline may be a familiar one, but the specific revelations contextualize middle schooler Breda's immediate trials within her family's history, particularly Maura's struggle to make an American life as an undocumented small business owner and Granda's distressing, emotionally-crippling childhood. There's more than a touch of the seanchaí in Foley's own silky prose, and readers who witness the Moriarity family's rapprochement will recognize that it may not promise a fairy tale ending, but it does deliver the right ending. EB COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Breda didn't believe her single mother would really send her from Chicago to Ireland's Dingle Peninsula for the summer if she got caught stealing again, but her theft of a classmate's gym shorts earns Breda a visit to the grandfather she's never met. Granda is the epitome of the elderly taciturn farmer, and although he at first seems as unenthused as Breda is about the arrangement, he slowly warms up to her. Breda settles in, exploring the village and finding friends on a Gaelic football team, and she wonders if she might also meet the father who's never been part of her life. When a health crisis waylays Granda, Breda is able to both take charge and rely on the community she's developed, putting her newfound confidence to work and expanding her definition of family. She also develops a new appreciation for her mother, an undocumented immigrant who has spent years working for others and is finally able to start her own business. Foley does an excellent job of building the Irish setting -- with the help of Granda's role as a traditional storyteller. Foley's forthright approach to puberty and periods, which are among Breda's experiences, is refreshing. This is a quiet book, with an emotionally charged conflict that often simmers beneath the surface of the page, made possible by the authentic and fully realized characters. Sarah Rettger(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Answers to long-held mysteries in Breda Moriarity's family dramatically change her life. Her mother has never revealed any information about her father, not even his name. Why does Mom remain undocumented after leaving Ireland when she was pregnant, and why has Breda never met Granda? Lonely and angry--her colorfully glamorous mother is absorbed with her new beauty salon--"awkward and mousy," blue-eyed Breda acts out in unacceptable ways. Mom decides to send her to stay with Granda on his farm near the village of Ballyglass for the summer before eighth grade. Breda is immediately enamored by the beauty of the land, but she is resentful toward and confused by Granda, who can be cold and bitter but surprises her with acts of generosity. He tells stories of banshees from Irish lore and has screaming night terrors. Amid a defiant, forbidden friendship with local girl Nellie Fahey, unexpected confessions, discovered information about Granda's horrifying childhood, and a terrible accident that threatens his life, Breda finds answers to some pressing mysteries but not without resulting regrets and pain on all sides that leave future relationships uncertain. Foley describes settings and events in beautiful, descriptive language and employs evocative Irish expressions. The third-person narrative is devoted to Breda's point of view, with italicized asides indicating her own thoughts and opinions, which are wholly in keeping with her age and experiences. Readers will empathize with Breda and wish her well. Sad, tender, and immensely touching. (map) (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Foley's (You Know I'm No Good) atmospheric story follows 12-year-old Breda Moriarity during a transformative summer in her mother Maura's native Ireland. Pregnant with Breda at 17, Maura left her stern widowed father for Chicago, building a life for them there as an undocumented immigrant and opening a successful beauty salon while avoiding any mention of Breda's father. When Breda, lonely for her mother's attention, turns to petty thievery, Maura sends her for the summer to taciturn, aging Granda, a vigorous farmer and respected storyteller of Irish legends who has secrets of his own. In County Kerry, on the westernmost edge of Ireland, Breda and Granda's relationship proceeds from rocky to grudgingly respectful to loving. As Breda explores the countryside on her mother's refurbished bike, she makes real friends for the first time, discovers her skill for playing Gaelic football, and tries to learn her father's identity, all while falling in love with her family's farmland. The narrative arc builds steadily in a book that stands out for its distinctly Irish language and poetic landscape descriptions: "gray crashing water, silent green cliffs, and jackdaws and gannets wheeling against the cloud-streaked sky." Characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Sara Crowe, Pippin Properties. (July)

#2315340 Hamra and the Jungle of Memories (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Hanna Alkaf

On Hamra's thirteenth birthday, she receives nothing but endless nagging and yet another errand to run in the Langkawi jungle that looms behind her home. No one has remembered her special day. And so, stifled and angry, Hamra ignores something she shouldn't: the rules of the jungle. Always ask permission before you enter. Hamra walks boldly in. Never take what isn't yours. Hamra finds the most perfect jambu and picks it. Of course, rules exist for a reason, and soon an enormous weretiger is stalking her dreams, demanding payment for her crimes--or her entire family will suffer.

978-0-06-320795-0 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 12.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Book Page Hamra and the Jungle of Memories is a stunning retelling of "Little Red Riding Hood" that brims with big emotions, big adventure and very big teeth.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Hamra's thirteenth birthday is shaping up to be truly awful: her parents are both completely involved with peak COVID work, her ailing grandparents require significant attention, and isolation is wearing her thin. A fit of frustration leads her to ignore long-established rules when she enters the Malaysian jungle bordering her home: she doesn't ask permission to enter, she uses her true name, and, worst of all, she steals a piece of fruit. To make up for her transgressions, a weretiger insists she find a way to make him human again (he stayed too long in his animal form and forgot how to transform back), and Hamra goes from cranky teen to heroic quester in just a few days. She draws from her Muslim religion, Malaysian cultural stories, and her own strength to keep going in the face of daunting odds, all the way to a bittersweet end. This is an immersive story, with Malay language woven into the text along with folktales and culturally specific characters (the fairies are familiar but distinct from the Anglo versions for example). The quest itself, structured by the sacrifices the weretiger must make to regain his humanity, is compelling from the start, exploring loss, grief, and vulnerability as core human experiences. Thoughtful readers will likely contemplate the weight of being human long after they finish the novel. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Hamra has just turned thirteen, though no one in her family seems to have noticed. Due to COVID-19, her home country of Malaysia is under quarantine, leaving her mother working long hours in an overrun hospital hours away, her father distracted by his duty to get supplies to those in need, and Hamra at home to care for her grandparents. While her grandfather often annoys her with his many far-fetched stories, her grandmother's increasing dementia worries and even angers her. Adults are supposed to take care of children, after all. To escape the pressures of caring for elders, Hamra goes to the jungle. When she recklessly takes fruit from the magical jambu tree, a weretiger demands she accompany him on a quest as payment for stealing. If she succeeds, the weretiger will remember his humanity, and her grandmother's dementia will be cured. Accompanied by her best friend, Ilyas, Hamra embarks on a quest where she must face her fears and find the courage to save her family and herself. A compelling story about family, friendship, and the power of memory, filled with Islamic traditions and Malay folklore. S. R. Toliver(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews There are rules for children who go into Malaysian jungles, and they shouldn't be broken. On Hamra's 13th birthday, Malaysia is under lockdown because of the pandemic, leaving her mother working long hours at the hospital, her father preoccupied with the vulnerable people his aid organization serves, and Hamra stuck at home looking after her grandparents. Hamra's grandmother has begun forgetting things, wandering farther and farther away from home and leaving Hamra upset and perpetually concerned. In the middle of all this, Hamra stumbles upon a beautiful jambu air tree in the forest, but when she plucks a fruit from it, she angers the weretiger of Langkawi, leading her to make a deal to settle her debt and perhaps help her grandmother at the same time. Accompanied by the weretiger and Ilyas Chang Abdullah, her best friend and neighbor, Hamra sets out on a quest that will bring her face to face with creatures from Malaysian legends as well as her own fears and flaws. A retelling of "Little Red Riding Hood" that manages to both feel distinctly Malaysian and capture and interrogate contemporary concerns, this is a tale of family, friendship, and sacrifice. Hamra's journey to find strength and understanding within herself is well matched with her physical journey through the jungle. Hamra is Malay; Ilyas is cued Malay and Chinese. Both mature and whimsical, demonstrating how magic and modern-day anxieties can intersect. (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly During the Covid pandemic, 13-year-old Hamra contends with perilous fantastical situations and internal struggles stemming from familial concerns in this riveting jungle adventure by Alkaf, a "Little Red Riding Hood": inspired Malaysian fantasy. When Hamra isn't taking care of her grandmother, who grows more forgetful each day, she spends most of her time during the pandemic dreaming of grand adventures. On her 13th birthday, Hamra sets off into the woods to pluck ulam leaves to make nasi ulam for her grandmother. But in her eagerness to accomplish her task, Hamra; accompanied by her best friend Ilyas Chang Abdullah; forgets to heed one of the most important rules of the jungle: "Always ask permission before you enter." As the duo venture further into the woods, they break another rule; "Never take what isn't yours"; and inadvertently anger a weretiger, with whom they must make a deal if they hope to leave the forest alive. Creatures from Malaysian mythology appear throughout, adding texture and imbuing the girls' tale with peril. Alkaf employs lively prose alongside Hamra and Ilyas's dynamic personalities and earnest friendship to deliver a tale about sacrifice, perseverance, and the enduring bonds of love. Ages 8: 12. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Alkaf brings Malaysian folklore into the modern day through this quest of Hamra, a girl just turning 13 who lives on the edge of the Langkawi jungle. The jungle can be dangerous, and so there are six rules her family has taught her about entering (such as asking permission and never taking what's not yours). On her birthday, in an angry tantrum, Hamra purposely disobeys all the rules and takes a magical fruit home to give to Opah who is suffering from dementia. The fruit seemingly cures Opah, but at what cost? This event prompts a magical journey that Hamra must go on to fix the consequences of her disrespect to the enchanted jungle. Hamra, with her neighbor and friend Ilyas and the ambiguous weretiger Pak Belang, set out through the jungle into the realm of fae and creatures, some helpful and some harmful. While making deals with magical favors, Hamra learns lessons about family and friendship. The COVID-19 pandemic and its global effects are also mentioned throughout the story, as Hamra's frustration is driven by the lockdown and her parents' stressful work on the front lines. During the journey, they question what it means to be human, what happens to those who are not the hero of the story, and what it means to pay debts and take care of your community. Alkaf also uses family events to bring the story full circle. The reluctant hero Hamra will appeal to young and older readers alike, and the action will keep tweens engaged. VERDICT A welcome addition to libraries that serve children and tweens. This fresh take on Little Red Riding Hood is a necessary purchase for libraries and fantasy shelves.—Helen Prince

#2293097 Decomposition of Jack (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kristin O'Donnell Tubb

Middle school is always hard, but when you're known as the Roadkill Kid, well, it's even harder. Jack's mom collects roadkill—it's her job and she's very good at it. Ever since Jack's mom and dad got divorced, Jack has become Mom's assistant. He feels like it's his responsibility to keep her spirits up and step into the role of co-scientist. Except Jack just wants to play video games with his friend Andre and finally talk to Zoe, his conservationist classmate with bright green eyes.

978-0-06-321226-8 Katherine Tegen Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 His scientist parents study the decomposition of roadkill, so Jack is accustomed to having disintegrating carcasses in the backyard. He's less accustomed to his parents' recent separation—a split that leaves Jack to observe and dissect the decay in his own family's life. A spot of brightness arrives in the form of a magnificent cougar that Jack spots in the forest behind their house, but the sighting also raises questions, as cougars haven't been officially detected in Tennessee for years. Is Jack imagining things? Setting out to prove the cougar's existence, he devises a way to stop his family from disintegrating like the unfortunate animals out back. Roadkill is an unconventional basis for a novel, but it turns out to be the perfect jumping-off point for a poignant, playful exploration of deep family ties, the joy of kindred spirits, and the importance of conservation. Squeamish readers may occasionally struggle to stomach detailed descriptions of death, but all readers will be rewarded with a frank and funny examination of decay—and the new life it encourages. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A parent-child duo collect and research roadkill. Tennessee middle schooler Jack Acosta can handle maggots, blood, and intestines. But the "stench of decay" involved in transporting carcasses (his scientist mother studies decomposition) is a big nope. Between being called "Roadkill Kid," his mom and dad's divorce, and extracurricular "roadkill undertaking," Jack has a lot going on. In spite of the "work, work, work," Jack finds time to hang out with his best friend, André, and fret over his budding friendship with his crush, Zoe. A live cougar's surprise appearance in the backyard "Roadkill Garden" inspires Jack to research the species—one that has been declared extinct in the state—for a school report. His mom sees the cougar as a "data nightmare," but to Jack, it's a call to action. Tubb, known for humorous dog books, diverges from her oeuvre to deliver a moving narrative with a distinct point of view. Jack's references to the stages of the decomposition process as he grapples with his parents' divorce offer unique parallels to grieving. Laugh-out-loud moments balance the heavy with the humorous. The strong conservationist message and assignment-based structure, however, make the story a bit bloated. Race and ethnicity aren't explicitly stated; some cues suggest possible diversity (e.g., Zoe's mom wears a headscarf). Niche but surprisingly fascinating. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A self-aware seventh grader with a roadkill researcher mother ruminates on life, maturation, and decomposition in this jam-packed observational novel from O'Donnell Tubb (The Story Collector). Following his parents' divorce, Jack Acosta spends most of his time helping his mom with her research, scraping roadkill from asphalt and recording details about recent finds, while developing an interest in photography. At school, he navigates a crush and contends with bullies who call him the Roadkill Kid. But tensions build after Jack observes a cougar from the family's roadkill-riddled backyard, and chooses the mammal; thought to be extinct in Tennessee; for a school project. The cougar poses a "data nightmare" for his mother, who'd like to chase it off, but Jack becomes interested in confirming the animal's presence, which results in his advocating for his own identity outside of helping his mom. Incorporating the stages of decomposition as a means of describing his parents' divorce, Jack's wry first-person narration highlights his own concerns and growth, changing family dynamics, and lessons around conservation. Jack reads as white; other characters are racially ambiguous. A detailed author's note contextualizes the book's scientific content. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Josh Adams, Adams Literary. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Tubbs's latest middle grade novel (following A Dog Like Daisy and Zeus, Dog of Chaos) departs from dog narration and introduces readers to seventh grader Jack Acosta, also known as "Jack Splat." Jack is learning to live with his parents' divorce while helping his mom with her career studying roadkill and its decomposition (hence the nicknames, which also include "Roadkill Kid"). He is also providing feedback on his best friend's comics and figuring out how to get the attention of his crush, "Algebra Green Eyes," who happens to head the school's conservation club. Although he's a scientist, Jack finds himself in danger of failing earth science; but he may be able to turn things around if he can prove that cougars are not extinct, because there's one living in the woods behind his house. Heavy themes of divorce and extinction loom large, but Tubb offers humorous moments and a caring mother-son relationship to balance them. Animal lovers and budding conservationists will be especially drawn to the ongoing mystery of whether cougars still live in Tennessee. An author's note provides further information about roadkill collectors and cougars. VERDICT An engaging coming-of-age tale for the environmentally minded tween.—Carrie Voliva

#2332576 Bee Bakshi and the Gingerbread Sisters (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Emi Pinto

Bee is spending the summer trapped at Storm Lake with her too loud, too thrifty, and too Indian family. Luckily, Bee finds a place to escape her family—a magical house across the lake that transforms her into the cool girl she always wanted to be. But strange dreams are haunting Bee, and there's a chill in her bones she just can't shake.
 978-0-06-327572-0 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A family vacation to a lakeside cottage goes awry in this "Hansel & Gretel": inspired ghost story, Pinto's debut. Indian Canadian 12-year-old Binita Bakshi has always felt embarrassed by her family ("If there was a prize for Most Embarrassing Things Parents Say, Bee's mom would be the undisputed champion," she thinks). And as one of the only brown-skinned families vacationing in the predominantly white town of Storm Lake, Bee's desire to fit in feels even more out of reach. She soon discovers a magical house across the lake where she can be "the version of yourself you want to be." There, she meets local girl Alina, who also has brown skin. Bee revels in their immediate friendship, but when Alina tells Bee about the legendary Gingerbread Witch who lives near Storm Lake, things around town take on a sinister aura. As her vacation becomes plagued by unsettling happenings, Bee endeavors to unravel the mystery behind the witch with the help of Alina and new friend Lucas, who reads as white. Bee's self-effacing personality and her embarrassment of her family is occasionally overwrought, distracting from the lively plot and multifaceted tween cast. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

#2328032 Fire, the Water, and Maudie McGinn (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sally J. Pla

Maudie McGinn lives for the summers she spends in California with her dad, but this year, she's shouldering the weight of a big secret, one that her mom warned her never to tell. As much as Maudie wants to confide in her dad, she's scared to. As Maudie navigates unfamiliar waters, she makes new friends, and her autism no longer feels like a big deal. But her secret is still threatening to sink her.
 978-0-06-326879-1 Quill Tree Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Summers in California with her dad are the highlight of 13-year-old Maudie's year. When a wildfire forces Maudie and her dad onto the road, Maudie's mom insists that because Maudie is autistic, she won't be able to handle the disruption of routine and the sensory issues. But Maudie is determined not to go home, so she and her dad spend the summer in an old camper by the beach in the town where Maudie's dad grew up. There she meets the locals, including Etta, a famous surfer who gives Maudie surfing lessons in preparation for a competition where Maudie hopes to win money to replace some of what was lost. Maudie feels more at home and accepted than she does with her mom and stepdad. But she's also hiding a dark secret, and as the summer draws to a close, she has to find a way to tell the truth. Any reader who has ever felt different will be able to relate to Maudie's journey to finding her home and her people.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews er of changes. Thirteen-year-old Maudie McGinn is desperately looking forward to leaving Houston and spending th summer with her dad in Molinas, California. Unlike Mom, a YouTube influencer who exploits Maudie's autism, Dad doesn't treat her like she' helpless or berate her for having meltdowns or panic attacks. And unlike Ron, her stepfather, he doesn't erupt in rages or leave bruises on her a ms. But when a wildfire forces them to evacuate, Maudie and Dad find themselves scraping by in Conwy, Dad's hometown on the Mexican borde It's overwhelming, especially when Maudie's secret burns inside her alongside Mom's and Ron's demeaning words, like incapable and ridiculous. If she tells Dad about Ron's abuse, though, she could be taken from her family altogether; Mom said so. But as Maudie makes friends, including Paddi, a bubbly girl with ADHD, and Etta, an easygoing woman who teaches her to surf, she wonders: Is keeping secrets good? Is she stronger than she thinks? Through Maudie's earnest, occasionally poetic narration, Pla vividly explores the ways that physical and verbal abuse can distort self-perception. Notably, she illustrates how pressure to comply with neurotypical authority figures can complicate self-advocacy. Though Mom's ableism is less firmly addressed than Ron's abuse, Dad, who's also neurodivergent, provides a compassionate counterpoint by consistently reaffirming Maudie's self-worth. Most characters read White; Dad's mom was from Venezuela, and Paddi is cued South Asian. A perceptive, poignant tale of self-discovery. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Autistic 13-year-old Maudie McGinn loves spending summers with her father in his California cabin. But this year, she carries a terrible secret, one that her mother insists Maudie not tell him. But her existing trauma deepens when a wildfire forces Maudie and her father to evacuate and they retreat to the Southern California beach town where Dad grew up. Even amid the challenging situation and her sensory overload, however, she's happy to be with him instead of her mother and stepfather back in Houston. Maudie soon takes up surfing under the mentorship of an effusive elder and enters an end-of-summer Surf Bash offering a beginner's prize of cash and a raffle ticket entry to win an RV, surprise gifts that Maudie wants for her father. But fearful feelings surrounding her imminent return to Texas threaten her newfound peace. Pla (The Someday Birds) gradually reveals the physical and verbal abuse Maudie endures in Texas in a way that is appropriately harrowing but never gratuitous. Interstitial poems provide further emotional depth to Maudie's intimate first-person narrative, fashioning a vulnerable portrait of one girl seeking to empower and redefine herself outside of her personal traumas. Maudie is of white and Venezuelan descent. Ages 10: up. Agent: Sara Crowe, Pippin Properties. (July)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--Maudie McGinn has been waiting for summer all year, from the minute she had to leave her father in California last summer and go back to live with her mother and stepfather in Texas. Maudie doesn't feel safe in Texas, but between her autism and fear she hasn't been able to tell anyone why. The summer is her safe place. However, just as Maudie and her dad are getting settled in his forest cabin in Northern California, disaster strikes in the form of a sudden massive wildfire that causes them to flee without any of their possessions. Despite her mother's protestations, Maudie is allowed to stay with her father, and they end up living in a campground in a small coastal town near San Diego thanks to the kindness of her father's childhood friend. In their new summer home, Maudie works through the trauma of having to start fresh with none of her belongings and also keep herself entertained while her father attempts to find work every day. Once she finds the beach and the surfing community, however, she is newly determined to learn how to surf and enter a surfing competition to earn money. Standard prose is interwoven with free verse throughout the book, and the narrative shifts from the present day to widening glimpses of Maudie's life and the dangers she faces in Texas. While the plot races along with ample suspense regarding Maudie's safety and the surfing competition, ultimately the tale wraps up hastily and without the slower pacing the solid ending deserves. VERDICT Themes of autism, child abuse, and the impact of wildfires combine for a unique and memorable story that will appeal to middle grade readers open to a creative format and heavier themes.--Kate Olson Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2323625 Jake Show (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joshua S. Levy

For TV-obsessed Jake Lightman, his parents' divorce is like his favorite show getting canceled: the worst. His strictly Orthodox Jewish mother wants him to play the role of "Yaakov," a Torah-loving kid who never watches TV. His secular father wants "Jacob" to focus on science and math, and leave all that Jewish stuff behind. On Jake's first day at a new school, Caleb and Tehilla barrel into his life. Suddenly he has two friends who seem to like the real Jake. And when they invite him to Camp Gershoni for the summer, Jake knows he has to go--even if his parents won't let him.

978-0-06-324819-9 Katherine Tegen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Torn between polarized parents after a messy divorce, 12-year-old, TV-loving Jake Lightman pleases everyone but himself by adopting different personas for each parent: devout Yaakov when with his mother and secular Jacob with his dad. Jacob sticks to the script of dotting son, supposing it is "better to be a few different people that everybody loves than one person everybody hates." At Jake's latest school (his seventh, postdivorce), new friends Caleb and Tehilla convince Jake he can be himself at their beloved Camp Gershoni, with its summertime cabal of girls named Shira and secret handshake. There, the trio stages an elaborate camp bluff that mires Jake in deeper drama before a reckoning that tidily resolves all relationships. Levy (Seventh Grade vs. the Galaxy, 2019) veers from sf in this contemporary-fiction story where positive stepparenting steals the show. Lessons are learned about the risks of compromising for peace and about the importance of bravery even when scared. This comical, authentic, and firmly Jewish caper should play to rave reviews with both secular and spiritual audiences.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An Orthodox Jewish seventh grader who has watched way too much television negotiates new schools and divorced parents. Readers who are familiar with television-land tropes will enjoy this knowingly comic novel, in which an extremely self-conscious Jewish boy processes his experiences as if they were elements of a long-running TV show. At school, he's Forgettable Kid #5, who goes by Jake if asked.

But at his mother's house--post-divorce, she's married a rabbi and become extremely Orthodox--he's quiet Yaakov, who wears a black suit and fedora. His father's remarried to a non-Jew and is now fully secular; there, he's lively, goofy Jacob in jeans and T-shirts. His parents have been using the courts to yank him between schools representing various denominations of Judaism, moving him so frequently he can't make friends. But two kids at his latest stop--Broward County Jewish Day School--just won't let him slip into the background. Caleb, who's gone through a lot to come out as gay, and Tehilla, whose mother's low-paying jobs don't always cover the basics, help Jake devise a madcap scheme to join their beloved Jewish summer camp, one too secular for his mother and too religious for his father. The web of lies, the fake camp websites, a wild caper scene at the airport--have they pulled off "the greatest sleepover switcheroo in history"? All characters are presumed White. Astutely depicts the pain of a contentious divorce, the balm of friendship, and the complexity of Jewish culture. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--This novel has a tropey premise in middle grade novels: the seventh-grade kid caught between warring divorced parents. However, it is distinct from so many others because the root of Jake's angst is his parents' wildly differing approaches to their Jewish faith and culture. Jake's parents can't even agree on his name; Jake's dad calls him Jacob and his mom--or Imma--calls him Yaakov, his Hebrew name. The differences and expectations ramp up from there, causing Jake to create three versions of himself: Yaakov, the Orthodox version, pleasing to his mother; Jacob, the non-observant, earnest math and science student for his dad; and Jake, as he refers to himself, the kid who is just trying to make it through each day. Jake manages to assimilate into his fifth school in two years and makes friends with Caleb and Tehilla, who, like all kids, have their own personal issues. The story takes some unrealistic turns as Jake, Caleb, and Tehilla come up with a convoluted plan for them all to attend a Jewish summer camp, tricking both of Jake's parents into thinking the camp would fit their criteria for appropriate summer activities. Readers might like the story because the kids take the reins and make adult-worthy decisions. But even Jake admits that "turning on subtitles" might be helpful to non-Jewish readers. Not true. Jake does a good job of explaining. The climax contains unrealistic histrionics, but the ending is nice and tidy and will please most readers. VERDICT A representative novel with enough broad drama to circulate in middle grade libraries.--Kim Gardner Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2349535 Tethered to Other Stars (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Elisa Stone Leahy

Seventh grader Wendy Toledo knows that black holes and immigration police have one thing in common: they can both make things disappear without a trace. When her family moves to a new all-American neighborhood, Wendy knows the plan: keep her head down, build a telescope that will win the science fair, and stay on her family's safe orbit. But that's easier said than done when there's a woman hiding out from ICE agents in the church across the alley--and making Wendy's parents very nervous

978-0-06-325548-7 Quill Tree Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Wendy Toledo would like nothing more than to reclaim a fraction of her own mental space, but every inch is filled with worries over being the new kid at school, experiencing casual racism, and potentially being detained by ICE, merely for being Latina. Unfortunately, some of her classmates are bullies, and neither the school's culture of fake equality nor the principal's own dismissive attitude helps to alleviate the toxicity. Wendy, for the most part, keeps it all in and focuses on completing her science-fair project. Even in one of the more severe instances of bullying, the seventh-grader observes from the sidelines, torn between the desire to stay safe and the urge to help. It takes an explosive family secret to rouse her out of her paralysis and finally make her stand up for herself and others. This theme of social activism dovetails with a brief exploration of how vulnerable people may refrain from participation. Leahy's debut, while at times heavy-handed, joins the growing list of fearless middle-grade fiction that trusts its readers' capacity for critical empathy.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Latine seventh grader Wendy Celestina Toledo loves outer space, but she's worried about things happening right here on Earth. After a U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement raid on her community leads to disappearances of several people she knows, including her best friend, Wendy and her Salvadoran-Guatemalan family move to a new neighborhood in Columbus, Ohio. Aspiring astronomer Wendy enters a school for gifted and talented students, makes a diverse group of new friends, and sets her sights on building a telescope and winning the science fair. However, with ICE vans patrolling the streets and a woman named Luz claiming sanctuary in the church down the street, her parents are fearful. Not only are Wendy and her friends enduring racist bullying at school, but someone Wendy loves is seriously threatened, and she must tap into her own inner resources to do what's right for herself and those she cares for. The stakes start out high but manage to continue to build throughout the story, culminating in an unexpected plot twist. Heavy topics like bullying, familial hardship, and academic pressures are explored in ways middle-grade readers will understand and are grounded in well-rounded characterization. Readers will resonate with the characters' three-dimensional personalities regardless of their and their families' own immigration experiences. A beautifully executed, character-driven tale of family, courage, resilience, and the meaning of what is right. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement raids result in numerous neighbors' deportations, Salvadoran-

Guatemalan seventh grader Wendy Celestina Toledo and her family move from Melborn, S.C., to Columbus, Ohio. It's a new start at a new school in a new city; Wendy's parents' number one rule is for Wendy and her older brother to keep their heads down. Still, Wendy is excited for her first day at Leopold Preparatory, a public school for gifted students, and the opportunity to enter the upcoming science fair. At school, she befriends artist Mal, student government hopeful K.K., and enthusiastic Etta, the daughter of the local pastor. Wendy's family isn't adjusting as well: her brother has been behaving recklessly, her mother rarely leaves the house, and both her parents feel uneasy about the woman taking sanctuary from ICE agents in the church next door, afraid that her situation will bring unwanted government attention to their home. When Wendy uncovers a family secret that could change everything, she must find the courage to stand up for what she believes in. Via a propulsive narrative that seamlessly balances typical tween worries with one girl's social justice awakening, debut author Leahy crafts a powerful meditation on the difficult choice between what one views as right vs. safe with resounding empathy and skill. The supporting cast is racially diverse. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Brent Taylor, Triada US. (Oct.)

#2326409 Probability of Everything (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sarah Everett

Eleven-year-old Kemi Carter loves scientific facts, specifically probability. It's how she understands the world and her place in it. But everything Kemi thought she knew changes when she sees an asteroid hover in the sky, casting a purple haze over her world. Amplus-68 has an 84.7% chance of colliding with Earth in four days, and with that collision, Kemi's life as she knows it will end.

978-0-06-325655-2 Clarion Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Four days until the end of the world. These are the conditions under which Kemi, an 11-year-old statistics enthusiast, decides to assemble a time-capsule record of her family for the next Earthlings to find after the incoming asteroid destroys all life. In a story ultimately about trauma, grief, and the life that continues after, Kemi's countdown to the apocalypse reveals itself to be about a different—and more personal—end-of-days. Nigerian American Kemi's unreliable narration adds depth to an already poignant and emotionally complex story about the ripple effects of violence (including gun and racial violence) and loss. While initial apocalyptic world building may feel conspicuously unexplored, the reconciliation of Kemi's version of events with the truth provides much-needed explanations, and the emotional through-line of Kemi's reckoning with mortality ties the two narratives together in an effective reveal that careful readers may anticipate. Amidst the catastrophe, the charming characters of Kemi's family add humor and warmth to Everett's middle-grade debut. An empathetic, unflinching portrayal of childhood bereavement, this gut-punch of a story brings familiar themes from Everett's YA works to a younger readership.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An 11-year-old girl processes the end of her world and prepares for a new beginning. What happens after the world ends? Kemi Carter contemplates this as she counts down the last four days before a possible apocalypse brought about by the looming presence of Amplus-68. The asteroid has an 84.7% chance of colliding with Earth. Keen scientist Kemi knows that the likelihood of survival is slim. She looks up facts about asteroids and investigates what the end of the world would be like, but she realizes that her family members are handling this differently than she is. Kemi decides to start a time capsule preserving something each of them loves so "the next earthlings could find it and know about us." As Kemi, who has an African American dad and a Nigerian mom, gathers mementos, she reflects on what life has been like since they moved to their new, prosperous, primarily White neighborhood—a change that has brought complications. These memories lead up to a shocking plot twist that will have readers questioning her reality. Everett skillfully uses Kemi's love of facts and statistics to process her feelings; as the story slowly reaches its climax, this element helps tie its many themes together. Individual family members are fleshed out as they share stories of their cherished possessions and demonstrate their support of Kemi in various ways. This realistically drawn, gut-wrenching novel will stick with readers long after they've finished reading. A powerful exploration of grief. (author's note, resources) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After learning that an asteroid is set to destroy Earth, a sixth grader builds a time capsule to commemorate her family in this pensive read from Everett (How to Live Without You). With her parents and younger sister Lo, 11-year-old Nigerian American Kemi Carter, an aspiring scientist obsessed with probability statistics, makes up one of the few Black families living in a predominantly white neighborhood. And despite some tension with a prejudiced neighbor, Kemi feels that she has a pretty good life with a loving family. So when she learns that there's an 84.7% chance that Earth will be destroyed in four days by asteroid Amplus-68, Kemi determines to collect her family members' "most important stuff, the things we love most," to create a time capsule, hoping that their memory will survive even after they're gone. But as her family and friends go about their lives, Kemi feels as if she's the only person taking their seemingly imminent demise; and her time capsule; seriously. Kemi's astute voice resonates with a deep love and loyalty for her family, rendering her insistence in honoring them and subsequent narrative reveals as heartrending, hopeful, and palpably felt. Ages 8: 12. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Nigerian American Kemi Carter, 11, considers herself a scientist, in particular a scientist of probability. When a giant asteroid, AMPLUS-68 has an 84.7 percent chance of hitting Earth in four days, Kemi decides to create a time capsule to make sure future earthlings know how incredible her family was. They may not be famous, or have invented anything, but each member of Kemi's family deserves to be remembered for what makes them special. While gathering items from her family, including her pregnant mom, little sister, and cousins, she realizes she doesn't know what one item represents her dad. He recently left his time-demanding job to be with their family, and their move to a predominantly white neighborhood has had bumps, with some not accepting them because of their race. As the apocalypse quickly approaches, Kemi finds each family member supportive of her plan, but continues to seek out her dad's true passion. As the countdown progresses, readers will likely be contemplating their own time on Earth, when a huge plot twist hits. Everett has woven together big themes of racism, mortality, and grief with a heartbreaking story that will stick with readers long after the conclusion. Teachers will find much to discuss, making it a perfect choice for read-alouds or book groups. VERDICT Thought-provoking and utterly unique, this is an impactful book that deserves a place in all middle grade classrooms and libraries.--Michele Shaw Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2326416 Wishing Season (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Anica Mrose Rissi

Lily doesn't believe in making wishes. Not anymore. Not since Anders died. Wishes can't fix the terrible thing that happened. Wishing won't change how it feels. But Lily does believe in the impossible. She has a secret so extraordinary, so magical, no one would believe that it's true. No one except Anders, of course.

978-0-06-325890-7 Quill Tree Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 Lily and her twin, Anders, were in fifth grade when he died. Months later, she has yet to emerge from her grief and the guilt she feels for having helped him hide his illness initially. Their mom, still overwhelmed by sadness, has withdrawn to her room. Lily's greatest comfort is that she can still see, hear, and interact with Anders daily in an outdoor space they call the overlap. Summer comes, and she befriends Quinn, a high-school student who takes her to feed a neighbor's chickens, listens to her, and broadens her world. Meanwhile, Lily is devastated to realize that the overlap is shrinking and Anders is gradually withdrawing, visiting her less often and leaving sooner. This sensitive third-person narrative follows Lily's shifting perspective as she reacts to ongoing changes in her life. Expressing the girl's emotional state throughout the novel, Rissi shows Lily taking satisfaction from the chickens' fondness for her, Quinn's friendship, her mother's return to parenting, and her own increasing confidence that she can handle challenges. A heartening portrayal of a resilient character. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Eleven-year-old Lily Neff struggles to accept the death of her twin brother, Anders. Summer break has begun, but Lily, emerging from the school bus and trudging up to her home on Deer Isle, Maine, isn't looking forward to it. Her single mother, deeply depressed following Anders' death from cancer four months earlier, doesn't greet her--and Lily doesn't expect her to. Lily also feels Anders' death keenly, but she has a secret: She can go to a space in the field behind her house that she calls the overlap, and Anders shows up, just as solid as he was in life. The two play and talk together, and this eases Lily's grief. Less a ghost story than a poignant allegory, the scenes of Lily and Anders together are peppered with an appealing gallows humor ("Anders grinned and took a practice stroke. 'Croquet chaos. I like it. Rule Three: Dead kid starts, ' ") that sidesteps the maudlin and adds a delightful layer of wit. As the weeks go by, Anders appears less frequently and becomes less substantial, and Lily panics, trying not to lose him. Meanwhile, Lily is befriended by Quinn, an older girl, and starts to accept a new friendship. By turns gentle and forthright, this well-paced story leads readers to questions about loss and the durability of relationships. The island setting is authentically and lovingly described, adding measurably to the story's ambiance. Characters read White. A droll, well-paced, and deeply moving book about loss and friendship. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After her twin brother, Anders, dies of a sudden infection following a cancer diagnosis, 11-year-old Lily Neff "folded herself into his absence" until she finds him lingering near the tire swing in their Maine island's woods, "real and present and hers" but invisible to everyone else. When summer arrives (which Anders calls "wishing season" thanks to the months' plentiful dandelion puffs), Lily retreats daily to their secret meeting place; "the overlap"; for relief from their spiraling single mother, her callous former best friend, and her guilt around helping keep Anders' symptoms secret from their mother. But Anders can't move beyond the overlap, and Lily can't know what being dead is like, making her feel less connected to him. When Anders doesn't appear in the overlap, Lily distracts herself by helping teenager Quinn do chores for neighbors, and as Lily forges new relationships in her community, the overlap begins to shrink, leaving her wishing desperately for a way to control it. Building a small-town atmosphere via a frank third-person narration and concrete, considered prose, Rissi (Hide and Don't Seek) builds an empathetic voice that cradles Lily's grieving process and experience of change. Characters default to white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Michael Bourret, Dystel, Goderich & Bourret. (June)

#2328127 Very Unfortunate Wish of Melony Yoshimura (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Waka T. Brown

Melony Yoshimura's parents have always been overprotective. They say it's because a

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

demonic spirit called the Amanjaku once preyed upon kids back in Japan, but Melony suspects it's just a cautionary tale to keep her in line. So on her twelfth birthday, Melony takes a chance and wishes for the freedom and adventure her parents keep her from.

978-0-06-323076-7 Quill Tree Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Melony Yoshimura has parents of the helicopter variety, loving but highly protective to the point where the newly minted 12-year-old isn't allowed to ride her bike alone and has never experienced a sleepover. Tired of being babied, Melony makes a birthday wish for freedom, which has unforeseen consequences, as wishes often do. At first, it seems she finds some liberty in her friendship with new-girl Chloë Yoshida, but then the Amanjaku arrives on Melony's doorstep, and everything changes. This shape-shifting, evil spirit is one of the reasons Melony's parents moved from Japan to the U.S., hoping to leave its harmful influence behind them. However, Melony is susceptible to its suggestions, which lead her to commit increasingly unkind acts that, nevertheless, chafe against her morals, which readers will hope can triumph over the insidious Amanjaku. Brown takes the Japanese folktale ""The Melon Princess and the Amanjaku"" and updates it here for American readers, many of whom will identify with Melony's middle-school tribulations and desire for independence. A fresh take on the "be careful what you wish for" motif. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Sixth grader Melony tries really hard to please her overprotective Japanese immigrant parents and be the good girl they expect her to be, but inside she's raging against their strict rules. Her mother won't let Melony have a phone but does decide she's old enough now at twelve to hear the real reason the family left Japan for Oregon years ago: apparently, they were running from an evil spirit. Melony scoffs, thinking it's just a silly story -- until the creature shows up at their house while her parents are out. Though terrified at first, Melony quickly falls under the Amanjaku's spell; the wily shape-shifting demon somehow knows she's yearning for adventure and freedom -- and a phone! -- and provides her with everything she desires, including revenge on the mean boys at school. Although the Amanjaku convinces Melony that it's all harmless, she slowly realizes that plenty of people are getting hurt, especially her new friend Chloe. The demon has become more and more dangerous; is it too late for Melony to fight back and save everyone? Brown's (Dream, Annie, Dream, rev. 3/22) eerie tale is a suspenseful, just-scary-enough story of the supernatural; the author's note reveals how she incorporated elements of her favorite Japanese folktale, "The Melon Princess and the Amanjaku," into the novel. Jennifer M. Brabander(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A shape-shifting demon takes over an Oregon girl's life in this chilling tale. Twelve-year-old Melony is sure life would be better if her strict, overprotective parents gave her the same freedoms as other kids, not to mention cool clothes and a new phone, and if her real name, Uriko, wasn't fodder for bullies. Melony's parents have lived in the U.S. for years, and she hates the way they constantly talk about Japan and how things were different there. So Melony fights back by being the opposite of the "good girl" she's supposed to be--and it feels amazing! Unknowingly, this opens the door for an Amanjaku, a demon who feeds on a person's most base desires. At first, Melony is drawn in by its playful nature. But as time goes on, its horrifying true nature begins to sour everything good, including Melony herself. Can she realize the error of her ways and save her family and friends before it's too late? Based on the Japanese folktale "Urikohime to Amanjaku," or "The Melon Princess and the Amanjaku," this modern Japanese American version is woven throughout with intergenerational, as well as cultural, tension and specificity. This well-paced story uses foreshadowing to create suspense and build anticipation while exploring themes of independence and autonomy so important to tween development. Blurring the lines of reality, it relies on psychological elements, rather than leaning on blood and gore, before ultimately leading to a safe, comforting homecoming. A satisfyingly scary story about pushing boundaries. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Brown (Dream, Annie, Dream) explores intergenerational trauma and cultural identity in this eerie interpretation of the Japanese folktale "The Melon Princess and the Amanjaku." On Melony Yoshimura's 12th birthday, her Japanese emigrant parents tell her about the shape-shifting demon spirit Amanjaku, the reason they left Japan for Oregon. But Melony doesn't care about the Amanjaku or her parents' memories of Japan; she wants to be like other American kids who have smartphones and get to attend sleepovers. That night, Melony makes a birthday wish for freedom from her overprotective parents. Soon after, she meets the Amanjaku, a "fuzzy gray creature; kind of like a person in a wolf suit," who offers to grant her wishes. But even as things in Melony's life seem to be looking up, she begins to realize that her relationship with the Amanjaku portends disaster. Brown conveys practical lessons on morality via an empathetic protagonist; by interweaving Melony's contemporary struggles surrounding autonomy and independence with the origin text's foundational narrative, the author delivers an evenly paced speculative tale whose anticipatory atmosphere sows tension. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Penny Moore, Aevitas Creative Management. (July)

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2362903 Slugfest (Hardcover (Trade))	1	$19.99
written by Gordon Korman Yash is the best athlete at Robinette Middle School. So good, in fact, that's he's already been playing on the high school's JV sports teams. Imagine his shock when he learns that his JV practices have kept him from earning a state-mandated credit for eighth-grade PE. To graduate, he has to take Physical Education Equivalency-PEE- which is also known as "Slugfest," in summer school.

978-0-06-323809-1 Balzer & Bray ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Book Page Superstar athlete Arnie "Yash" Yashenko can't believe it when Principal Carmichael tells him he won't graduate eighth grade unless he goes to summer school--for gym. When it comes to sports, Yash is no slouch: He already plays on the high school's JV teams. But thanks to a change in state requirements, he's going to be a slug, which is what everyone calls kids in the Physical Education Equivalency summer program (whose super-embarrassing acronym is indeed "PEE"). So, instead of training for high school football with his best friends Hammon and Amir, Yash grouses through gym class with the likes of sweet but super-uncoordinated Kaden; insightful former athlete Cleo; self-righteous wannabe journalist Arabella; twins and sworn enemies Sarah and Stuart; and oft-destructive class clown Jesse.

Reviews by: Booklist Yash is such a superstar athlete that the middle-school principal allows him to skip gym class to practice and play on the high-school sports teams. But when the state decrees that no middle-school student will graduate and proceed to high school without first completing the eighth-grade physical education requirement, Yash must take the class (rudely called Slugfest) in summer school. Their teacher, a somewhat elderly woman who used to teach second grade, has them playing tag and duck, duck, goose, and some of Yash's peers find even those activities challenging. But miraculously, this ragtag group of basically decent kids bonds sufficiently to compete in a junior-high flag football tournament. The first-person narrative rotates chapter by chapter among members of the Slugfest team. While not every writer can use this technique successfully, Korman makes it look effortless, and his ability to create memorable individual characters will help readers keep the narrators straight. There may be some surprises along the way, but fans can count on a satisfying conclusion.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Eighth grader Arnie Yashenko hits a lot of home runs playing for the high school's JV baseball team. Problem is, he's been missing middle-school gym classes to practice at the high school, and now the state has changed the rules: if he doesn't take summer school PE, he won't graduate and can't start high school in the fall. But if he does the class, he'll miss the workouts necessary for pitching for the JV Comets. Besides (and Yash knows he sounds like a "stuck-up jerk" here), he can't mingle with the uncoordinated unfortunates who attend summer school PE. "There's a name around here for the people who end up in that class -- slugs! That's why they call it Slugfest!" Chapters alternate between Yash and other reluctant summer school attendees, including Cleo Marchand, who's there because of incompletes for missed time due to a skiing accident. (The others' first-person narratives save readers from an overload of Yash's self-absorption.) Star athlete and local legend Yash starts the season playing tag; duck, duck, goose; and musical chairs and, by the end of the term, is part of a team he loves. The team's musical-chairs experience even serves them well in a city-wide seven-on-seven flag football tournament. Yash learns the value of friendship and teamwork in this big-hearted novel. Dean Schneider(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Unlikely teammates in a summer school PE class go for glory on the gridiron. Korman rewards readers willing to suspend their disbelief with a middle school romp that takes the "Bad News Bears" premise for a wild ride. Thanks to a new state rule that eighth graders can't graduate to high school without a PE credit, summer school sees a motley assortment of students assembled in the gym--from world-class klutz Kaden Cooperman, who skipped that class all year to avoid being bullied, to multisport superstar Arnie "Yash" Yashenko, left high and dry after being led to believe that he had been excused to play with the high school's varsity teams. When the class falls under the management of a retired second grade and home ec ("Family and Consumer Studies") teacher named Mrs. Finnerty, the stage seems set for a wasted summer--but the author has other plans. If none of the classmates (except for Yash) initially show much enthusiasm for sports, by the time the annual all-city flag football tournament rolls around, they've become a quarrelsome, disorganized, laughably inept...team. Even elderly Mrs. Finnerty demonstrates hidden depths, plus an apparently limitless supply of baked goods that will keep readers salivating alongside this lively, large-hearted, sharply seen cast of middle schoolers. Characters largely read white. The pastries aren't all that's sweet in a tale rich in wins both public and personal. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After spending all year playing on the local high school's JV sports teams, middle schooler and athletic superstar Arnie "Yash" Yashenko is shocked to learn that he's failed PE due to numerous unexcused absences. And because he won't graduate eighth grade or be eligible to try out for high school sports until he attends summer school, he reluctantly joins the Physical Education Equivalency class known as Slugfest. His schoolmates include perpetually bickering twins Stuart and Sarah, practical joker Jesse, clumsy genius Kaden, and former athlete Cleo, who was held back a year due to a serious injury. The unlikely assortment of unhappy students bond over their dislike of the class, whose retired elderly teacher prefers baking to instructing, and even develop close friendships. And when Yash concocts a plan to compete in the citywide flag football tournament as a way for him to try out for the high school football team, he determines to turn his athletically disinclined classmates into champions. Korman (Mixed Up) balances humor and heart, delivering a tale that is both plausible and a little outlandish, realistic and just a bit goofy. Snappy dialogue, idiosyncratically depicted characters, and a madcap plot keep this lively, good-natured story moving at a brisk pace. Most characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. (Jan.)

#2315212 You Are Here: Connecting Flights (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ellen Oh

An incident at a TSA security checkpoint sows rumors and chaos, creating a chain of events that impacts twelve young Asian Americans in a crowded and restless airport. As their disrupted journeys crisscross and collide, they encounter fellow travelers--some helpful, some hostile--and discover the challenges of friendship, the power of courage, the importance of the right word at the right time, and the unexpected significance of a blue Stratocaster electric guitar.

978-0-06-323908-1 Allida ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity

Unit Price

1

$18.99

Reviews by: Book Page If you've done any amount of air travel, you know that airports are perfect places for people-watching. And if you've ever encountered a flight delay, you've seen firsthand how overcrowded terminals combined with the frustration of changed or canceled plans can become a recipe for a uniquely stressful environment. That mixture makes a busy Chicago airport the perfect setting for Reviews by: Booklist This short-story collection is unusual in several ways. Each story features a different East or Southeast Asian American young person. Some of them will observe, meet, or talk with others from the group. And all 12 stories take place on the same day in the same place: Gateway International Airport in Chicago, where a thunderstorm has led to numerous flight delays and cancellations, unhappy travelers, and crowded terminals. Each story has a different author and is complete within itself, yet the collection becomes more than the sum of its parts when readers become aware of the connecting characters and thematic links among the stories. A bystander in one narrative might be the protagonist in another, and one character's choices may unintentionally affect another's thoughts, decisions, and actions going forward. Some help others even when it involves some personal risk, while several stand up for themselves or their friends by explaining microaggressions, confronting prejudice, or speaking candidly to their parents. The list of authors includes familiar names such as Linda Sue Park, Erin Entrada Kelly, Grace Lin, and Christina Soontornvat as well as other writers. The individual narratives are consistently engaging and rewarding, and together they form a unique collection of interconnected stories about young, contemporary Asian American characters. High-Demand Backstory: With a roster of high-profile authors in the contributor list, expect those writers' fans to be eager to get their hands on this one.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books authors come together in this collection to tell the interweaving stories of a dozen young Asian Americans and their families, stuck in a Chicago airport on a stormy Fourth of July weekend. Each story is devoted to one of the teen's points of view, as they challenge familial customs, reconsider what home means, and navigate bigotry and racism, both subtle and more direct. Christina Soontornvat gives readers the story of Paul, a Thai American who protects his grandmother's coffee canister that contains his grandfather's ashes from the TSA security checkpoint. Meanwhile, Natalie, the main character in Traci Chee's offering, struggles with her Japanese American identity, confronting her cosplaying friend Beth after she makes stereotypical comments: "My face isn't a costume. It's something I live with every day." Asian American electric guitarist Lee from Mike Chen's contribution has a newfound dream of becoming a role model for future Asian guitarists as he shreds Van Halen's "Eruption" in front of skeptical airport security guards. Ellen Oh's final tale of Soojin brings the collection together, as the young girl convinces her mother to stay in America and not move to Korea. The airport setting is cleverly utilized to allow many people from all over the country to encounter one another on the same weekend, leading to different characters recognizing and acknowledging others' experiences and talents to make a difference in their communities. Readers will feel seen and heard while reading this compassionate and compelling collection. Includes an editor's note. DR COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In this collection of linked short stories, a nasty storm strikes Chicago's (fictional) Gateway International Airport, delaying flights and suspending travel plans. Twelve-year-old Paul and his family, who are flying to Thailand to visit family, are stopped by security when his grandfather's remains, which his grandmother is trying to bring aboard the plane, trigger an alarm; then Paul's missing little sister causes subsequent delays. In the midst of the chaos, readers meet eleven other Asian American young people throughout the airport who find themselves in situations where they witness and experience (and also stand up to) racism: Mindy, an adoptee from Korea who doesn't feel ready to visit the country of her biological origin; Ari, who is tired of explaining that she is Jewish and Chinese; Jane, whose Gonggong (grandfather) was attacked for simply being Asian. Oh and the other eleven short-story authors -- who include Erin Entrada Kelly, Grace Lin, Linda Sue Park, and Christina Soontornvat -- paint a picture of what it means to navigate being Asian American in a post-2020 world, where the burden of being blamed for COVID-19 is thrust on young shoulders. An editor's note defines the term Asian American and explains the rationale for highlighting East and Southeast Asian American experiences. Gabi K. Huesca(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Interwoven stories explore themes of identity and belonging from the perspectives of 12 young Southeast and East Asian Americans. Noted crowd pleasers, including Erin Entrada Kelly, Grace Lin, Linda Sue Park, Randy Ribay, and Christina Soontornvat, contribute to this volume. As a storm rages outside a chaotic Chicago airport, an interruption at a TSA checkpoint involving Thai American Paul and his family sparks racist rumors and confusion. The event has a ripple effect on each of the protagonists' lives, prompting them to find their voices and fight for what's right in their own ways as uncomfortable feelings bubble to the surface. Each story is seamlessly interconnected with the whole, allowing moments to be revisited from multiple points of view and creating a sense of intrigue as readers piece together the larger picture. Although each character's journey leads them to different destinations--a guitar jam session, a basketball tournament, a first trip to Vietnam--there are glowing moments of solidarity ranging from the subtle to the profound as they cross paths. The stories are imbued with a strong sense of authentic lived experiences as well as moments that will resonate with readers of other backgrounds, prompting examination of their own interactions or unconscious biases; it welcomes non-Asian readers to learn and connect. This remarkable anthology offers a warm and heartfelt reassurance to all those who recognize themselves reflected in its pages: You are seen, and you do belong. Compelling and nuanced. (editor's note, meet the authors) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Written by 12 authors, including Erin Entrada Kelly, Minh Le, Grace Lin, Linda Sue Park, and editor Oh, a dozen vibrantly told, overlapping stories center East and Southeast Asian American characters at a Chicago airport as a thunderstorm delays departing flights. "Something to Declare" by Christina Soontornvat sets the stage, describing a TSA checkpoint incident involving Thai American Paul and his family. The event triggers a discriminatory domino effect that echoes throughout the other narratives, which converge seamlessly. In Mike Chen's "Jam Session," security guards harass musician Lee Chang about his instrument case: "You don't look like someone who plays guitar." Traci Chee's "Costumes" involves Natalie Nakahara confronting her white best friend about trying to look Japanese: "My face isn't a costume... it's not something you can just parade around in like a cosplay outfit." Witnessing characters across the stories take a stand, each protagonist is empowered to speak out against cultural assumptions, model minority stereotypes, and racism. Callbacks and details are effectively interwoven throughout each telling, making for an intersectionally diverse, multifaceted collaboration that's artfully conceived and executed. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Marietta Zacker, Gallt and Zacker Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--In this beautifully written short story anthology edited by Oh, every main character has three things in common: they are all East or Southeast Asian American; they are all stuck in an international Chicago airport with every flight delayed or canceled; and they all have racist interactions, most of them with the same white woman in a pink sweater who repeatedly spouts anti-Asian xenophobic comments. As quoted in Linda Sue Park's introduction, each author (including Erin Entrada Kelly, Grace Lin, and Christina Soontornvat) is "refusing to buy into the model-minority fraud, they're exploring what it means to be Asian American on their own terms." All of these characters are on unique journeys (shuttling between divorced parents, aspiring to become a rock star, visiting family in Thailand) and readers can feel how the authors bring their own life experiences to them. Every intertwined story builds on one another, allowing readers to see the same interactions from different angles and perspectives. Many of the characters experience racism so casual (and in a setting heavily informed by contemporary pandemic-related sinophobia) that it will probably make some readers examine their own biases, unconscious or not. In a world where anti-Asian hate is on the rise and a mass shooting occurred on the Lunar New Year, this collection is not only important, but essential. VERDICT A must-purchase for all middle grade collections.--Kerri L. Williams Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness You Are Here, the inaugural title from Allida, an imprint from Clarion/HarperCollins designed to showcase marginalized creators, offers 12 reassuring and absorbing illustrations of contemporary Asian American young people as they face seemingly insurmountable intolerance.

#2332727 Between Monsters and Marvels (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Alysa Wishingrad

Dare Coates is sure of it. No drifter or ruffian could have killed her father, the captain of the guard, while he was on patrol. But everyone insists that monsters have been gone for years now. Dare's mother. Her classmates. Even the governor, who swiftly marries her mother just months after her father's death. Dare's suspicions grow even stronger when the governor suddenly ships her off to the mainland, away from any hope of uncovering the truth about her father's death. Or so she thinks.

978-0-06-324487-0 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Dare Coates is feisty, unkempt, and opinionated, and she doesn't care who knows it. These qualities don't earn her many—make that any—friends on her island home, so she's beyond heartbroken when her father, the only person who understands her, dies in a suspicious accident. She's barely begun to grieve when her mother marries the governor, who literally ships Dare from Barrow's Bay to her estranged great-aunt Emily's home in City-on-the-Pike. Wishingrad (The Verdigris Pawn, 2021) dreams up a rich fantasy setting akin to a magical Victorian London, but don't confuse magic with whimsy. City-on-the-Pike is overpopulated, starkly divided by class, and rife with crime, the filth of industrialization, and—whether people want to admit it or not—monsters. While Dare gets her bearings, she endeavors to figure out the truth about her father's death and, in so doing, exposes a dark ring of corruption that goes all the way to society's top. Colorful characters and genuine friendships make the mystery's darker themes easier to swallow as Dare confronts what actually makes something a monster. Hand to fans of Thomas Taylor's Eerie-on-Sea series.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Wishingrad (The Verdigris Pawn) tackles themes of exploitation, perception, reality, and trust in this high-stakes tale. Everyone on the island of Barrow's Bay is convinced that the monsters that once plagued the community were killed off years ago. But when 11-year-old Dare Coates's father, the Captain of the Guard, is killed, Dare believes it was by monsters, not humans. Not long after, her new stepfather, the island's manipulative governor, sends her to the mainland City-on-the-Pike to stay with her retired actor aunt. The city proves full of mysteries, and Dare soon discovers that the monsters are still very alive. She finds herself caught between two warring factions: those who wish to kill the monsters and those who want to save them. As she works to puzzle out the truth about her father's death, she uncovers information that makes her question everything she knows not only about the creatures, but about her father as well. Bouncy prose builds toward an engaging and optimistic exploration of how power and privilege can be wielded for both good and bad, as observed by one take-charge heroine who seeks to define her place in the world. Main characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Victoria Marini, Irene Goodman Literary. (Sept.)

#2330051 Peril at Price Manor (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Laura Parnum

Halle dreams of becoming a scream queen. She practices her loudest scream every day and has learned a lot from studying the horror movies of her favorite director, Maximus Price. Maximus lives just outside town, and when the chance to go to his home arises, Halle grabs it with both hands. She doesn't realize that real-life horrors await her at Price Manor.

978-0-06-324953-0 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Twelve-year-old Halle dreams of being a Scream Queen in a horror movie, and so she immediately seizes the opportunity to deliver flowers from her family's shop to Maximus Price, legendary horror filmmaker. What she doesn't know is that a true horror scenario is currently unfolding at Price Manor as sheltered twins Paisley and Argyle Price fail to realize that their father's yearly birthday prank has gone terribly wrong and that the tentacle creatures leeching off of the faces of their caretakers are more than mere horror props. Used to adults taking care of their every whim despite being a day shy of thirteen, Paisley and Argyle are rather helpless against the creatures (once the siblings figure out what's going on), but after Halle joins them, the trio must use their strengths to repel the tredecapuses, save the world, and find Dad. Parnum's whip-smart narrative pokes fun at its own genre with a classic middle-grade cheekiness, giving each character depth beyond their archetypes. The three main characters have a delightful combination of bizarre talents-Halle's genre-savvy insight allows her to steer the group away from horror movie cliches, while the twins' knowledge of tapestry weaving and sousaphone playing come in handy when calling for help. A playful acknowledgement that overbearing parents stop their kids from fully experiencing the world, this is a fantastic combination of mild locked-room horror and heroes who manifest in unlikely and hilarious ways. NB COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A trio of preteens find friendship while combating comically grotesque tentacled blob monsters. Halle Thompson, a scary movie devotee, is excited to deliver flowers from her mother's shop to imposing, isolated Price Manor, home of famous fright film director Maximus Price. His children, Paisley and Argyle, are preparing for an ordinary day, flanked by a coterie of servants in their grandiose abode. But the house seems eerily quiet. When the twins finally locate their staff, they discover that all the adults are possessed by squidlike creatures who affix themselves to people's faces and effectively zombify them. Halle, approaching through a thick mist, finds a similar scene on the mansion's lawn. The three kids meet and swiftly join forces to combat the mysterious foes in a series of outlandish situations. Halle's vast knowledge of horror tropes combines with the idiosyncratic skill sets of the long-cloistered Price offspring, and between a roller-skating disco, sousaphone practice, and a horrifying foray into a stinky cheese cellar, they tackle the tickly nemeses and prove themselves resourceful and brave in the process. Playing lightly on the tropes of classic B-movie horror, Parnum's imaginative and satisfying debut is packed with high-spirited hijinks. Characters are implied White. Playful energy propels a laugh-out-loud scary story that doesn't tread too far into truly terrifying territory. (Light horror. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this good-humored romp, horror film mega fan Halle Thompson, 12, leaps at the chance to deliver flowers to the lavish home of Maximus Price, creator of one of her favorite movies, The Manic Marmoset Invasion. Meanwhile, on the morning before their 13th birthday, Price's twin children Argyle and Paisley abruptly awaken to find their usually orderly estate in shambles. Upon investigation, they discover that the heads of the mansion's adult caretakers have become encased in slimy, squidlike creatures; these appear to be controlling the adults, and they spontaneously replicate when they sense a new host. Initially believing their trickster father was pulling a prank, the twins are ill-prepared to handle the mayhem, until they meet Halle, who teaches them the rules for surviving "Dire Circumstances" ("Number one rule: Avoid Peril at All Costs"). By combining Argyle's vast knowledge of animal behaviors, Paisley's acrobatic prowess, and Halle's expertise on all things horror, the trio works together to defeat the multiplying invaders. Debut author Parnum keeps the scares gentle but gooey via lively prose that conveys a vibrant setting. Quick-moving chapters and alternating perspectives that showcase the characters' dawning agency make for a propulsive creature feature. Characters default to white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Kaitlyn Johnson, Belcastro Agency. (Aug.)

Quantity	Unit Price
----------	------------

#2349666 Underdog City (Hardcover (Trade))

1

$19.99

written by Chris Negron

Mortimer Bray is not okay. It seems like everything in his life is changing for the worse. After his own much-loved dog dies, he can't bring himself to carry on with his dog-walking business; there's a strange new girl who's moved into the house next door; and suddenly there's a buzzing feeling of anxiety in his head and heart when he's faced with something new.

978-0-06-325187-8 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Nothing in 12-year-old white-cued Mortimer Bray's beloved home of Townsend Heights has felt the same since elderly Mrs. Opal; the community council president and Mortimer's good friend; moved away and passed the title on to Mortimer's mother. Even worse, though, was the death of his pup following an incident while on their regular walk. Now, Mortimer is too anxious to continue with the dog-walking business he founded with his best friend, and he hasn't spoken to Mrs. Opal in a long time. A Puerto Rican family moving into the house next door with their pet rooster, who crows loudly every morning at 5 a.m., further upends life in Townsend, as does the knowledge that the history behind a nearby vacant lot is spreading apprehension throughout the community. Things begin looking up for Mortimer when he persuades Will, the visiting granddaughter of his new neighbors, to help him investigate the property, but overheard, racially charged conversations about her family sow tension around town. Mortimer's anxiety is powerfully portrayed and realistically permeates every aspect of his life. Kind community members, both human and dog, help him manage his constantly racing thoughts and support him during his grieving process in this discerning celebration of connection and healing. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

#2333013 Ghost Job (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity

Unit Price

1

$19.99

written by Greg Van Eekhout

Zenith and her friends were thick as thieves long before an unfortunate lab accident sent them careening into the afterlife. So when they hear about a machine that could return them to the land of the living, they are determined to steal it. Fortunately, they're great at heists. Pulling off the score of their deathtimes is no job for an amateur.

978-0-06-325333-9 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 5.0

Reviews by: Booklist In this latest caper from the ingenious van Eekhout, the discovery that a local necromancer has a device that revives the dead spurs four San Diego seventh-graders killed in a school-lab accident to plan a daring heist. As said necromancer commands cutting-edge ghost-catching tech as well as spectral hounds and other unexpected allies, things don't go smoothly at all. But, as it turns out, there's a whole ectoplasmic community willing to help deal just deserts to the bad guy and that, along with the four teens' complementary ghostly powers and strong bonds of loyalty, proves enough to get the job done—in a way that leaves the racially diverse quartet poised to continue a life (er, afterlife) of crime. Readers will enjoy the banter, which occasionally steers into some deep territory (“Is this all a computer simulation? Am I just a globule of algae in a test tube dreaming he's a human being? What am I, Zenith? Can you answer me that?” “You're a dork,” said Vanessa. “Does that help?” “It's a start.””) as much as the topsy-turvy action.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews lab accident, a group of friends pull off heists in the hope of returning to life. Zenith, a Dutch Indonesian 12-year-old, and her best friends have a lot of fun being dead, but they all agree they'd rather be alive again. And as her family prepares to move away from the area she haunts, Zenith in particular needs to return to life as soon as possible. Using their diverse set of ghostly powers, they work together to steal artifacts, books, and other magical objects that could return them to life, under the guidance of a medium. Nothing works...but then they attempt to take a device called Redeemer from a necromancer, who's using it for nefarious purposes. When one of her friends gets caught in the middle of the botched job, Zenith must take on the role of leader and save her friends, but at what cost to herself? The kids' clever antics keep the levity up through what could have been a somber story. Their respective powers, like Zenith's ability to move physical objects, complement their unique personalities and are organically incorporated into their plans to swipe objects and rescue their friends. The blunt storytelling style brings some reveals on too early but otherwise works to great effect to keep the tone light even while delivering mature messages about death and the meaning of life. A fun ghostly romp. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this animated San Diego: set heist novel from Van Eekhout (Fenris & Mott), the ghosts of four middle schoolers killed in a science lab gas explosion use their newfound skills to seek a return to life. Since "being alive is precisely a billion times better than being dead," the four close friends form a crew following their demises, haunting their school's theater and engaging in heists of supernatural goods. Kind team leader Nicholas can project his voice to "meat-walkers," as the kids term the living; goth performer Vanessa can possess beings and objects; science-minded Eddie feels electricity as a sensation; and object-manipulating poltergeist Zenith serves as the crew's muscle. When a ghost hunter comes looking for them, they learn that a wealthy necromancer is seeking ghosts, and possesses a device that can take; and restore; lives. Thoughtful ethical dilemmas soon cause them to reconsider the lengths to which they'd go to reunite with their loved ones. Zenith's candidly funny first-person narrative applies a light, portmanteau-riddled touch to themes of death and grief, while the protagonists' close relationships and powers offer up sheer spectral fun. Zenith is of Dutch Indonesian descent; cover art portrays the other protagonists with various skin tones. Ages 8-12. Agent: Holly Root, Root Literary. (Sept.)

#2349643 Nowhere Special (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Matt Wallace

The isolation and bullying Stan suffers at school are nothing compared to the war at home. After he tries and fails to defend his mom by standing up to his abusive father, Stan decides there is only one solution to finding a new self-confidence: he must learn how to fight.

978-0-06-325400-8 Katherine Tegen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Trauma brings together two 12-year-olds living in a financially compromised desert village in an unflinching novel by Wallace (The Supervillain's Guide to Being a Fat Kid). After Elpidia's family house burns down in a fire and her parents are incarcerated for illegal substance use, the events open a rift between the maternal Cahuillan and paternal Peruvian sides of her family. Elpidia is sent to live with her abuela at Lakeshore Estate in Southern California and attends a local school with her Cahuillan cousin, who constantly bullies her. Abuela insists that Elpidia learn to defend herself and signs her up for martial arts classes taught by Filipino American veteran Charlie. There, she meets and befriends schoolmate Stan, bullied for being "fat and white and slow," who wants to protect himself and his mother from his physically abusive father. Wallace's succinct middle grade drama considers heavy subjects such as systemic racism, substance reliance, intergenerational trauma, financial precarity, domestic violence, and anti-fat bias. Elpidia and Stan's affectionate and steadfast relationship, as well as their conversations surrounding wide-eyed dreams for their imagined future together, grants this viscerally told story both levity and hope. Ages 8-12. Agent: DongWon Song, Howard Morhaim Literary. (Oct.)

#2332304 Mossheart's Promise (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rebecca Mix

Twelve-year-old fairy Canary Mossheart knows this better than most. A few years ago, the mold took her papa, and even her famous, former-chosen-one Gran never found a cure. So when Ary's beloved mama falls ill, Ary decides it's taken enough.

Armed with only a bucket and a prayer, she sneaks out to find a magical, underground lake whose healing waters are straight out of Gran's adventures.

978-0-06-325405-3 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 14.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Canary "Ary" Mossheart's no hero, but if adults won't save Mama from the mold that's killing her, she'll have to try anyway. Ary, a 12-year-old mold-scraper, lives in Terra--a terrarium world designed by the gardener to be a haven for fairies. She should get her wings any day now; they'll be ground into magic dust to beat back the mold that is rotting Terra's food, poisoning the water, and sickening and starving everyone except the privileged. Everyone expects Ary to be a hero like her legendary Gran, who journeyed to the Underground to bring back the cure for a plague, but all she wants is to help Mama. Ary braves the Gloom beyond the fence, where she makes unexpected friends and learns that Terra is built on multiple lies. If, before week's end, a Mossheart doesn't give their life to release the fairies from Terra, their world will die. Mix's straightforward, magic-laced writing doesn't shy away from hard but age-appropriately addressed truths of poverty, privilege, and natural disasters. Through tears and laughter, readers will easily follow this exciting, honest, and hopeful tale that speaks gently and clearly to kids' fears and needs. It urges them to value their own experiences, reassures them that it's OK to be angry when they're left to pay for the mistakes of adults, and reminds them that kindness must guide us, even when we're afraid. A wonderful story for all the scared people doing the right thing because nobody else will. (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Like all fairies of Terra; the terrarium where the Gardener once placed fairies for safety; 12-year-old Canary "Ary" Mossheart grew up hearing the legend of her heroic grandmother saving the town from plague 50 years earlier. Now, though, food has become scarce, and her grandmother can save the residents from neither growing darkness nor creeping rot. To help keep the decaying community alive, Ary scrapes mold and, like other fairies, prepares to sacrifice her wings, which will be ground into a magical dust that helps the community. When her beloved mother is struck with the deadly mold, usually timid Ary sets out to find a cure, accompanied by irritating, wingless Owl, who believes Terra is dying, and a taciturn pill bug named Shrimp. As Ary makes her way underground, she discovers cracks in everything she thought she knew about Terra; and her Gran. Boasting rich, confident worldbuilding and complex interspecies relations in a starkly rendered setting, this stirring middle grade debut from Mix (The Ones We Burn) passionately explores the courage it takes to lead with empathy and to become a hero in the face of older generations' failures. Characters are described as having various skin tones. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jim McCarthy, Dystel, Goderich & Bourret. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Twelve-year-old Ary Mossheart lives life like any fairy, but when her mother starts to get sick from mold, she must find a cure for her. She goes on a journey of self-discovery and understands that the past has played a big hand in events she's had to face. With the help of some friends and her courage, she undertakes an impossible task of finding a new path for her and her people, leading with empathy and strength. This coming-of-age story, perfect for middle graders, shows how kids have to live with the mistakes of previous generations. Ary learns to take a stand for change, even if that means others will not follow. VERDICT Flowing with imaginative characters against the odds of natural disasters, privileges, and past generational mistakes, this book will show young readers how empathy for others can make strong positive changes.—BreAnn Weeks

#2387141 Wander Lost (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Laura Martin

When their mom suddenly disappears, the boys are reunited with their long-lost grandfather, Ace, who reveals that their family is descended from a board game character who escaped his game and lived in the real world. Because of this ancestor, their family has the ability to enter the world of any game they want—but this gift also comes with a price.

978-0-06-332621-7 HarperCollins Publishers ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity

1

Unit Price

$19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly White-cued 12-year-old twins Rhett and Nash have always chafed at their mother's board game prohibition. It's only after she vanishes that they finally learn the truth. They're picked up by their estranged, taciturn grandfather, who takes them to stay at his home in remote Indiana woods, where he informs the siblings that members of their family can enter the worlds within board games by exchanging places with the game's inhabitants. But their mother did not go willingly. They discover that she's been kidnapped and stashed in one of myriad game worlds by pirate captain Ogden, a former enemy who escaped into the real world years ago. With their grandfather's mentorship and assistance from 13-year-old Cress, a brown-skinned board game character capable of bounding between worlds, the twins must hone their powers, search the games, and thwart Ogden's nefarious revenge plans, all to rescue their mother. Combining the mechanics of Jumanji with the interconnectedness of Wreck-It Ralph, Martin (Vanishing Act) spins a humorous and heartfelt homage to classic board games via fictional creations as real and evocative as any childhood favorite. Idiosyncratic characters, thoughtful worldbuilding, and a palpable sense of possibility permeate this fanciful adventure. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jodi Reamer, Writers House. (June)

#2365557 Princess Protection Program (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alex London

Every fairy tale ends with its characters living happily ever after, right? A valiant prince quests long and hard to reach the castle where the sleeping princess lies. And with a kiss, he will awaken her. But what if the princess does NOT think a kiss from a stranger is a very pleasant way to wake up? Yuck!

978-0-06-330387-4 Greenwillow Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity

1

Unit Price

$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist What can a princess do when she no longer wants to be part of her own story? For Rosamund, a kiss from a prince wasn't all it was cracked up to be, and she flees through a Door of Opportunity that takes her to the modern world. Here, she discovers she isn't the only fairy tale leading character who wanted out, and she finds herself in a school setting with a fairy godmother as the headmistress. Except, she starts to notice some things are just . . . off. Rosamund and her new friends eventually decide that they want, quite literally, to take control of their own stories once they uncover the truth about the princess protection program. This is a fresh twist on several classic Western fairy tales, which gets the most inspiration from the darker original versions of events in which some of the princesses, like the Little Mermaid, have gruesome fates they wish to escape. Fans of twisted fairy tales will enjoy piecing together who the different characters are and matching them with their stories.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Fairy tale: based messages of empowerment come through loud and clear in this fun yet thought-provoking adventure by London (Search and Rescue). After waking to a strange prince's lips on hers, 16-year-old Princess Rosamund, or Sleeping Beauty, arrives at Orphans' Home Educational Academy, or HEA, with no clue as to how she got there. She is soon absorbed into a training program for "wayward fairy-tale characters, to prepare them for new and happy lives in the wide world known as 'reality.'" With her two new friends, princesses Sirena and Rana, Rosamund begins exploring reality which, "as the teachers reminded her all day long, was no fairy tale." She's particularly engrossed in Pizza Arcade, an establishment run by three teen boys and their mother. The more time passes, the more comfortable Rosamund becomes in her new normal, until story-specific beasts called Uponatimes arrive, determined to drag each escapee back to their origins. In this tale of tales whose protagonist sometimes reads as too mature for the target audience, Rosamund evolves from a timid princess archetype into an inquisitive heroine who uses her voice to question what she's told and shake up the status quo. The narrative's emphasis on the power of embracing change and standing together against adversity provides a solid foundation for an engaging, lighthearted adventure. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Robert Guinsler, Sterling Lord Literistic. (Feb.)

#2365620 Lucky Duck (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Chris Kurtz

A heartwarming animal adventure story about Frank, the odd one out in a family of ducks, who discovers both his courage and unique identity as he braves the unknown to save his family from an invading fox.

978-0-06-331134-3 Clarion Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Frank the duckling treasures his family and their cozy home on a small pond. He looks a bit different from his significantly smaller siblings and secretly prefers nibbling grass to snacking on disgusting bugs, but nonetheless, life is good. When the snug setting is threatened by a fiendish fox, some teenage ducks convince Frank that he alone can protect the pond's population by heading out on a quest for unusual amulets that will imbue him with the ability to defend his flock and family. Frank has to break the rules, partner with forbidden fauna, and stretch himself to his limits to save the day. This darling novel nods to "The Ugly Duckling" but delves much deeper in its message of self-acceptance and celebration. Replete with memorable characters and gentle humor, the story spotlights Frank's deeply kind heart as an enormous asset and gives him room to grow on his own terms. A wonderful woodsy adventure about the thrill of finding one's true self—and true friendship—in unexpected places.

#2349572 Coyote Queen (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jessica Vitalis

Twelve-year-old Fud feels trapped. She lives a precarious life in a cramped trailer with her mom and her mom's alcoholic ex-boyfriend of a boyfriend, Larry. Fud can see it's only a matter of time until Larry explodes again, even if her mom keeps on making excuses for his behavior. If only Fud could find a way to be as free as the coyotes roaming the Wyoming countryside. Strong, smart, independent, and always willing to protect their own.

978-0-06-331440-5 Greenwillow Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve-year-old Felicity Ulyssa Dahlers, "Fud," lives in a trailer in rural Wyoming with her mom and Larry—her mom's abusive, ex-boyfriend who's in the grip of alcoholism. Fud's used to being picked on at school for her poverty, but being unhoused with her mom was better than sleeping on Larry's pool raft and living in constant fear for their psychological and physical safety. A new neighbor, classmate Leigh, offers Fud a bright spot, but as the situation with Larry worsens, a speculative twist tilts this story from tough realistic fiction into slightly dark Animorphs territory, and the fantastical elements may require handselling to readers. Scrappy Fud demonstrates admirable coping mechanisms alongside awareness she shouldn't have to live in fear, and the book's coyote facts and symbolism nicely bolster Fud's survivor mentality: "Sometimes leaving one pack meant finding another." Vitalis (The Wolf's Curse, 2021; The Rabbit's Gift, 2022) lends lived experience from "the fringes of society" to Fud's journey, per a note with resources, and offers readers an honest, slice-of-underrepresented-life story with a speculative twist.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A 12-year-old contends with financial precarity and domestic abuse in this realistic read with a fantastical twist by Vitalis (The Wolf's Curse). In small-town Wyoming, Felicity Ulyssa "Fud" Dahlers walks on eggshells around her mother's volatile, alcohol-dependent boyfriend Larry, a former boxer, and tries to block out the adults' frequent arguments by imagining herself running free with nearby coyotes. Fud is initially wary of new girl Leigh, who's just moved into the trailer next door. But Leigh suggests that they enter the Miss Tween

Black Gold Pageant together, and Fud commits after discovering that the prize money could facilitate her and her mother's escape from Larry. When her mother's health takes a turn and Larry's abuse becomes physical, Fud finds herself manifesting coyote-like traits as she struggles to survive while preparing for the pageant. The challenges that Fud and her mother endure; some of which are based on Vitalis's childhood experiences, per an author's note; are sympathetically wrought, and Fud's resilience and compassion drive the narrative to a complex yet optimistic resolution. Fud is of Spanish descent; the supporting cast is racially diverse. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Sara Crowe, Sara Crowe Literary. (Oct.)

#2332416 Library of Shadows (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rachel Moore

Radcliffe Prep. The third most haunted school in the country, where a student disappearance isn't uncommon and no one dares stay in the library after dark. And where Este Logano enrolls with the hopes of finding her dead father. Not literally, of course. She doesn't believe in ghosts. But then Este meets Mateo, who is maybe-probably-definitely-a real ghost. And an annoying one at that.

978-0-06-328463-0 HarperTeen ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 8-12 Starred Review In her debut, Moore has created a story that perfectly mixes gothic elements with romance and mystery. When Este receives a scholarship to her deceased father's alma mater, Radcliffe Prep, she sees it as an opportunity to learn more about him. The school's library quickly becomes central to the story, and book lovers will enjoy visualizing the immense and eerie space, complete with secret passageways and a resident ghost. Despite Radcliffe's reputation for being extremely haunted, Este only realizes the library truly is haunted when she meets the mysterious (and incorporeal) Mateo, who is eager to discuss the library's shrouded history. Plus, he needs her help getting a dangerous tome about soul-harvesting fades from the restricted section. The unusual pair begins to investigate why so many students have disappeared from the grounds over the years, growing closer in the process. Moore incorporates the enemies-to-lovers trope wonderfully, penning rapid and engaging banter between the sassy Mateo and curious Este as they try to ignore their connection. The book kicks into high gear when The Book of Fades goes missing, along with crucial pages that could help solve Radcliffe's dark secrets. This unique novel blends different genres in a magical way, and readers will happily lose themselves in its twisting passages. Recommend to lovers of gothic tales, such as Lyndall Clipstone's Lakesedge (2021) and Adalyn Grace's Belladonna (2022). COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Este Logano is thrilled to be pursuing her prep school dreams and following in her father's footsteps with a scholarship to attend Radcliffe Prep, but she doesn't make a great first impression. After discovering an old key hidden in one of her late father's picture frames, Este sneaks off during orientation to see what the key unlocks. She meets the infuriating-and attractive-Mateo, who urges her to unlock the spire that houses the library's heirloom collection. Unfortunately, the school's head librarian Ives catches them in the act, and Mateo mysteriously disappears along with one of the heirlooms, the Book of Fades. Ives gives Este a chance to make things right by working the evening shift in the creepy, possibly haunted archives, so now she must track down Mateo and retrieve the book or face expulsion from the school of her dreams. Moore's debut has cozy chills and spooky thrills perfect for the fall season, but a predictable plot and shallow characterization will limit its appeal. Este's friendship with her roommate is given a lot of importance towards the climax of the book despite the two having spent very little time together on page-the majority of the narrative is focused instead on Este's romance with Mateo. However, the blank slate characters are perfect for young readers to project onto, and Moore's good pacing and evocative prose offer some light escapism for the dark academia crowd and fans of Netflix's Wednesday. AT COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A haunted library holds the key to Este's late father's secrets--if she lives long enough to uncover them. On learning she's receiving a legacy scholarship to her father's school, Radcliffe Prep, 16-year-old Este doesn't care that it's purportedly haunted. That's before she tours its spectacular library and meets the gorgeous and enigmatic Mateo, who is not quite what he seems. After cajoling her into a restricted area to find an ancient tome about soul-harvesting Fades and (hopefully) how to eliminate them, Mateo vanishes with it, nearly getting Este expelled. Working night shifts as reparation, Este and the irritatingly irresistible Mateo follow clues left by her father about crucial missing pages in the book. Time is ticking, though; the deadly Fades infesting the library, responsible for multiple student disappearances, are now hunting Este. Lyrical prose builds a complex plot featuring a sympathetic protagonist whose growing connections with the labyrinthine library and its haunts push her living connections aside, to her detriment. A lively enemies-to-lovers romance offers a sweet counterpoint to Este's poignant grief over her father's death. Some plot elements may feel confusingly convoluted to readers, though, and the ultimate villain is easy to spot. Also, certain unaddressed practical issues may pull readers out of the story. Main characters read white; some racial diversity is cued in secondary characters. A compelling, ghostly tale interweaving romance and mystery with a thread of horror. (Supernatural. 13-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Debut author Moore entwines fairy tale horrors and heady romance to craft an eerie boarding school mystery. Sixteen-year-old Este Logano has just received a legacy scholarship to attend prestigious; and rumored haunted; Radcliffe Prep high school, the academy her now dead father once dropped out of. Este soon meets handsome teen Mateo, who persuades her to explore the off-limits spire full of the school's rarest treasures, from which Mateo steals a magical text called The Book of Fades and vanishes. Caught by the imperious head librarian and threatened with expulsion unless she returns the book, Este seeks out Mateo, who reveals that he is the ghost of the school founder's son, who went missing in 1917. He also informs her that a student is kidnapped each decade by enigmatic spirits called the Fades, and that the book is the only way to stop the specters. But the tome is missing pages, and if the duo want to succeed, Este will have to dig into both Mateo's and her father's shadowy pasts. While densely rendered worldbuilding and plot points occasionally befuddle, the swoony paranormal courtship between Este and Mateo burns brightly in this dark-academia adventure. Ages 13: up. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 8 Up--Este Logano is looking forward to attending Radcliffe Prep, the third most haunted school in the country, to learn more about her dead father's legacy. Rumors fly regarding the haunted library and ghostly souls such as Mateo. No one wants to go there at night. When Mateo blames Este for stealing an archived book, The Book of Fades, the paranormal romance begins to brew even though it seems unlikely. Este finds more than just books in the library during her investigation. Trap doors and secret passages are only part of the mysterious setting that Moore has created where the library is center stage. Readers that appreciate academic libraries and what they have to offer will enjoy the nostalgic research practices; however, those familiar with old collections will understand that some of the preservation practices are not authentic. The pacing of the story varies, meaning some situations resolve too quickly while others are well thought out. The paranormal investigator, Posy, starts with a dominant role but seems to be brushed off. The characters deal with grief and loss in a genuine manner. The ending is predictable but satisfying. VERDICT Fans of ghost stories and dark academia will embrace this debut novel. Recommended.--Karen Alexander
Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2326237 Call Me Adnan (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Reem Faruqi

Adnan Zakir loves table tennis. One thing he doesn't like is losing. He's colorblind, left-handed, and has a fondness for the aviation alphabet. He's super close with his sister, Aaliyah, who is a great dancer and memorizer of the Quran, and he loves his little toddler brother, Rizwan, who only wants to grow up and play table tennis like his big brother.

978-0-06-328494-4 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Adnan Zakir, a 12-year-old Pakistani Muslim boy living in Florida, wants to become a professional table-tennis player or a pilot. He lives with his parents and his older sister, Aaliyah, and his two-year-old brother, Riz. Adnan is colorblind and small for his age, and his teacher repeatedly mispronounces his name at school. But he spends a lot of time at the masjid, which is where he first fell in love with table tennis. He ends up qualifying for the table-tennis tournament finals over Eid weekend, during which his whole family gathers. Tragically, Adnan's little brother drowns in a pool. This horrible situation and the devastated family's grief are handled in a manner that is appropriate for the intended audience. The author's style of verse writing—including the use of short stanzas, creatively and thoughtfully arranged—enhance the emotional impact of the story. Additional resources include an author's note that discusses personal inspiration behind the story, safety resources, and a glossary. A realistic, moving exploration of family, loss, and healing.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Twelve-year-old Adnan Zakir is looking forward to going to Florida to see cousins and participate in a table-tennis competition when tragedy strikes, changing his family forever. Adnan lives in Atlanta, Georgia, with Abu, Amma (who is pregnant), 13-year-old sister Aaliyah, and 2-year-old brother Riz. He dreams of playing table tennis professionally or maybe becoming a pilot. When Adnan qualifies for the Ultimate Table Tennis Championship Tournament taking place in Orlando over Eid weekend, his family decides to make it a vacation with extended family. What was supposed to be a fun-filled trip turns tragic when Riz drowns in the pool of their rented house. Adnan blames himself: "If I hadn't gone to Florida to play table tennis, / Riz would still be here." But with support and guidance from his parents, friends, and table tennis coach, he starts to accept that he is not at fault. Observing his mother channel her grief into educating others about water safety, Adnan finds the courage to return to what he loves. In this verse novel, Faruqi depicts strong community bonds, seamlessly interweaving Adnan's Pakistani Muslim identity. The story includes details about the family's time at the masjid (where Adnan also discovered his love for table tennis), Eid rituals, Riz's funeral, and more. An author's note discusses a real-life experience that inspired this story. An emotional tale of a family's grief and healing, full of courage and hope. (swimming resources, ABCs of water safety, recipe, glossary) (Verse fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In stirring, lilting verse, Faruqi (Golden Girl) delivers a heartbreaking novel about grief and moving forward in which a tween attempts to cope with the death of a loved one. Effervescent 12-year-old Adnan Zakir knows exactly who he is: an avid table tennis player, a loved member of his tight-knit Muslim family, and big brother to and frequent caretaker for his toddler brother, Riz. Excited to participate in a prestigious table tennis tournament in Orlando, he's looking forward to his family traveling from their Atlanta hometown to visit relatives during Eid. But when Riz drowns in the pool at their rented house, Adnan wrestles with guilt ("Abu always says,/ Watch out for your baby brother./ But I didn't watch him.../ and now he's gone") and feelings of loneliness, and struggles to find joy in his passions. Faruqi renders this tender story of loss with a deft hand, employing vivid details surrounding Adnan's Pakistani Muslim identity; including sensate depictions of Eid celebrations, attending masjid, and Riz's funeral; and nuanced characterizations to present a tear-jerking ode to family. Swimming resources and a glossary conclude. Ages 8: 12. (June)

#2349537 Mari and the Curse of el Cocodrilo (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adrianna Cuevas

If Mari Feijoo could, she would turn her family's Peak Cubanity down a notch, just enough so that her snooping neighbor and classmate Mykenzye wouldn't have anything to tease her about. That's why this year, there's no way that Mari's joining in on one of the biggest Feijoo family traditions—burning the New Year's Eve effigy her abuela makes.

978-0-06-328549-1 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Cuevas mixes Cuban culture and traditions with magic and themes of belonging in this engrossing fantasy adventure. Mari Feijoo struggles with her Cuban heritage, as it makes her feel like an outsider at school—largely due to a classmate who constantly teases her about it. When Mari decides not to participate in her family's important Cuban New Year's Eve tradition, she finds herself cursed by the creepy El Cocodrilo and dogged by increasingly troublesome supernatural situations. As the curse gains power and begins to spread, Mari's bravery shines as she endeavors to protect her friends and realizes that her family's ancestry might just be what will save the day. Cuevas vividly showcases the struggles that can arise in tween friendships and highlights the power found in a united family and in embracing one's culture and differences. This book will not only captivate readers with its fantasy elements; it will leave them deeply touched by the characters and their adventures. Fans of Claribel A. Ortega's Ghost Squad (2020) and Tehlor Kay Mejia's Paola Santiago books will be enamored.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Twelve-year-old Mari loves her family but tries to avoid "Peak Cubanity," the times she feels their Cuban heritage sticks out in her small Texan town. When everyone else burns effigies in the backyard on New Year's Eve to ward off bad luck, Mari refuses to burn hers, worried that a neighbor girl, who bullies her for her ethnicity, is watching. This curses Mari: a crocodile-shaped mark appears on her arm, bugs follow her in school, and her violin attacks her during mariachi practice. Worse, the curse spreads to a friend. Luckily, Mari has a newfound power to summon the ghosts of her ancestors, some of whom died trying to flee Cuba alongside her abuelitos. They explain that she has the curse of El Cocodrilo, who feeds on misery. The plan she concocts to vanquish "this Cocodrilo guy" relies on the embrace of her Peak Cubanity. Although the text deals with heavy themes, Cuevas keeps a light tone and inserts moments of humor (a young ancestor's superpower is super-snot). Readers will relate to Mari's self-consciousness and fear of change in her friend group, and an explanation of microaggressions from one of Mari's peers is easy to digest. Spanish is interspersed, translated contextually for readers, and an author's note gives more details on Cuevas's bilingual family and Latine New Year's traditions. Monica de los Reyes (Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Cuban American girl who's ashamed of her heritage contends with a curse--and a gift--from her ancestral land. Twelve-year-old Maricela Feijoo just wants to be a normal sixth grader and avoid the scorn of her racist white bully neighbor, Mykenzye. But her family's "ridiculous traditions" are constant sources of shame. On New Year's Eve, when they "reach Peak Cubanity" and the time comes to burn the effigy representing last year's bad luck, Mari spots Mykenzye recording her and pockets the doll instead. Later, a painful black crocodile-shaped mark appears on Mari's arm and with it, all manner of bad luck and scary visions befall her: Maggots infest her food, her pencils turn into worms, and a creeping black shadow writes ominous messages. The curse jeopardizes her upcoming mariachi audition; worse, her best friend, Keisha, develops the same mark, imperiling her shot at the elite fencing team. When Mari accidentally summons the ghosts of dead relatives, she learns she has the family gift of magic. By learning about her ancestors, Mari realizes that only by embracing her Cubanity--and her family, past and present--will she be able to break the curse. Dynamic action scenes rendered in vivid detail bring Cuevas' imaginative (and terrifying) interpretation of Cuban cultural traditions to life, while Mari's relationships provide a rich emotional backdrop. Strong plotting, high stakes, and the curse's evolving rules of engagement make this a satisfying page-turner. A delightful horror novel with emotional and cultural resonance. (author's note) (Paranormal. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this uplifting tale by Cuevas (The Ghosts of Rancho Espanto), a Cuban American 12-year-old must reckon with the mystical consequences of breaking tradition. Maricela Yanet Feijoo's family is proud of its Cuban identity and customs. Sometimes, though, their "Peak Cubanity" embarrasses Mari, and a white classmate's frequent racist remarks add to her discomfort. When she shuns her family's annual New Year's Eve burning of an effigy to expel bad luck, her refusal to participate awakens a powerful ghostly entity called El Cocodrilo. Realizing that feeding off Mari's negative emotions boosts his power, El Cocodrilo engages in disruptive mischief; possessing Mari's belongings and sabotaging her school pursuits; that causes her public humiliation. After El Cocodrilo begins haunting her bestie, Mari must rely on her family, friends, and ancestors to expel the spirit. El Cocodrilo's schemes include humor-laced, unsettling situations starring black lizards and flooded backpacks that add levity to this meditative look at the literalization of how rejecting one's identity can have detrimental ramifications. Strong tween friendships, tight-knit familial bonds, and an emphasis on taking pride in one's roots round out this eerie supernatural adventure. An end note discusses Latin American New Year's celebrations. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Stefanie Sanchez Von Borstel, Full Circle Literary. (Oct.)

#2328026 Haru, Zombie Dog Hero (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ellen Oh

One stormy day, Mrs. Greene argues with Luke, and Haru runs out to defend him. She quickly calls the police, but instead of being put down at the animal shelter, the officers send Haru to a local lab. Scientists give Haru an immortality serum that kills him. But what they don't know is that Haru comes back to life and turns into a zombie dog!

978-0-06-327229-3 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Oh's latest has all the trappings of a thriller blended with horror (page-turning action, sickening reveals) but is grounded with the simple, touching, and at times heartrending story of the love between Haru the dog and his human, Luke. After Haru heroically protects Luke and his friends from a rabid raccoon, he spends the night at the vet, where he meets a neglected dog named Bruno. This encounter, and a later one with abandoned cat Penny, introduces Haru to a harsh truth for many animals: you can't trust humans. Interwoven into this intimate character story is a plotline dealing with the Sinclair corporation, headed by a billionaire that controls most of the town. After an accident at a secret research facility unleashes a horror upon the town, it's Haru's love for and belief in Luke that saves them both from monsters, both internal and external. On-the-page racism and animal cruelty might make this a tough read for some, but the power of the story is in its tender relationships and well-drawn characters, both animal and human.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books No one can break the loving bond between Korean American Luke and his sweet dog Haru who both live above the family's grocery store in Painted Lake, Virginia. However, when the eleven-year-old tries to protect his family from the harassment of the store's animal-hating landlady Mrs. Sinclair-Green Haru defends Luke, which she unfairly describes as an attack, and Haru is taken away. Instead of going to the animal shelter where he is supposed to be put down, however, Haru finds himself in a lab where scientists experiment with strong and capable dogs in hopes of developing a vaccine to make humans, specifically the billionaire Dr. Anton Sinclair, immortal. After putting Haru through horrific experiments, the scientists kill him, but Haru soon rises as a zombie dog determined to reunite with Luke. Oh covers heavy, relevant topics in this tense middle-grade novel, informing young readers about animal cruelty, environmental pollution caused by biotechnology facilities, and racial microaggressions within social-economic classes. Third-person point of view shifts among humans, domestic animals, and strays as they navigate the horrendous mysteries of the Sinclair facilities. Haru's shifting from a regular dog to a zombie dog is especially heartbreaking; his youthful innocent spirit is stripped away by his experience at the labs, and even as he tries to control his violent urges to attack, he fears Luke will reject him if they meet again. The grim dialogue between dogs and cats of all kinds shares insight on the complexities of human treatment of animals, from which Haru develops his own opinion that there are still decent, caring humans. Even in a zombie apocalypse, Luke and Haru's deep connection with each other, other animals, and the community will not falter. DR COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Oh (the Spirit Hunters series) centers the relationship between a dog and his human in this spellbinding tale with Frankenweenie vibes. In third-person chapters that follow canine Haru Haru, the pooch recounts how he saves his 11-year-old Korean American: cued human Luke from a rabid raccoon while traipsing through the woods. The event is quickly eclipsed by a chemical fire at Sinclair, a local research laboratory that has been polluting a nearby lake. Stray cat Penelope informs Haru that Sinclair is a "bad place" where "animals go in, but they never come back out." When Luke and Haru return to Luke's family deli, racist remarks from their white landlady prompt a physical altercation, and after Haru lunges in Luke's defense, he's seized by animal control, which takes him to Sinclair. But even in his dire situation, he remains determined to return to Luke, no matter what. This riveting adventure is not without its melancholy moments, but Oh skillfully balances inexplicit descriptions of animal abuse with adrenaline-fueled action. Tender character relationships between both pup and human, and the myriad fully realized animals Haru meets along his journey, combine for a multilayered and thoroughly heartfelt must-read. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Nancy Galt, Galt & Zacker Literary. (July)

#2287034 Black Slide (Hardcover (Trade))

written by J. W. Ocker

Griffin Birch isn't known for being brave, but there's something about the new black slide on the elementary school playground that's made him curious. Against his better judgment, he just has to follow his best friend, Laila, down. But the Black Slide is no ordinary piece of playground equipment.

978-0-06-299055-6 HarperCollins Publishers ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1 Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-8 This horror phantasmagoria follows 11-year-old Griffin as a trip down the school's eerie slide results in him and his friends being transported from the playground to the ""painground,"" a nightmarish world where monsters are out to get them. Ocker's foray into middle-grade horror brings fresh material to the category, including tropes and themes typically relegated to YA or adult books. Readers should be aware of the content warnings (animal harm, child abuse) before proceeding, as well as the fact that a thinly veiled metaphor for abuse pops up throughout the book. Otherwise, this is a knuckle-tightening trip into a haunting environment from which Griffin and his friends must escape before it's too late. Readers will appreciate the moments of friendship in the face of death and danger, which bring some much-needed levity and warmth to a dark, dreary story line. While this book may not be a fit for every horror fan, it weaves an interesting premise and promises poignant moments between the characters as they try to escape the hellscape they've found themselves in. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Griffin has an awful feeling about the black slide that suddenly appears in his school's playground, but when a relentless bully promises to leave him alone if he is the first to go down it, Griffin weighs the misery of the known against the fear of the unknown and chooses the slide. His experience is traumatic and leaves him with a broken arm, but at least he emerges. His best friend and fifth-grade peers aren't so lucky, however, as they're drawn to the slide against their will and never come out. Griffin tosses aside his better judgment and follows them, but this time he lands in a gruesome, harsh world where creatures seek immortality by experimenting on different beings. His peers are locked in cages, tortured in the hopes their duress can be useful to the aptly named Merciless. Griffin teams up with his best friend and the aforementioned bully to escape, but the horrors of this world do not end with the Merciless, and success will require unimaginable pain, sacrifice, and endurance. Ocker pushes the boundaries of middle grade horror, and the extreme and vividly described violence, torture, and casual cruelties make this novel a likelier fit for an audience older than its fifth-grade protagonists. However, Griffin is well-developed and slowly comes into his own role as necessary hero, with vulnerability that adds some welcome depth to the horror framework. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After a mysterious black tube slide appears at their school playground, kids start going missing. If Griffin goes down the Black Slide, becoming the first kid to try it out, then bully Ozzie says he will lay off him for the rest of the year. The subsequent surreal, painful, too-long tumble through darkness drops Griffin in an alien world before he snaps back to reality with a broken arm and nightmares for his troubles. In the following days, fifth graders go missing at an alarming rate, their absences unnoticed by adults; two of them Griffin observes go down the Black Slide but never come out. Trying to prevent his hypnotized best friend, Laila, from going down it too, Griffin ends up taking his second trip with her, and they land in the Painful Place, a hard world of rock and metal where children are subjected to painful experiments by the sadomasochistic inhabitants. Accurately described in the acknowledgements as "Hellraiser for kids," the descriptions focus on the way pain feels rather than physical injuries, and emotional pain is given equal weight. Griffin and Laila must find a way to escape and save their classmates in a plot packed with endless dangers and unexpected alliances. The "happy" ending shows the consequences of their ordeals before landing on a final stinger. Physical descriptors of the kids are absent. An intense, disturbing read as likely to give nightmares as to become a new favorite. (Horror. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly rious black tube slide brings unease to the Osshua Elementary School playground, capitalizing on the fear of impending adolescence, in this genuinely bloodcurdling thriller by Ocker (The Smashed Man of Dread). When bully Ozzie Aldridge dares fifth grader Griffin Birch to be the first down the eerie Black Slide in exchange for a year's reprieve from Ozzie's torment, Griffin readily agrees but upon entering the tube, feels like "something grabbed him by the ankles and yanked." After falling for an indefinite duration ("The Black Slide was not this long. Not this long by a lot. And yet he kept sliding"), he experiences a "lifetime inside that darkness," and finally emerges ith an inexplicably broken arm. But that's the least of Griffin's concerns as his classmates begin disappearing at an increasingly alarming rate, including his best friend. While a seemingly singular focus on the sinister elements over character makes it occasionally difficult to connect with the cast, Ocker's contemplative, metaphor-laden narration ("Griffin felt the inevitable next moment like a choking haze in the room") lends pensiveness and gravitas to this dread-inducing novel. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Alex Slater, Sanford J. Greenburger Assoc. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—A creepy horror novel that fans of Stranger Things will gravitate toward. When a large black slide suddenly appears on the playground just outside his fifth grade classroom window, Griffin Birch cannot stop staring out at it. Griffin wants nothing to do with the terrifying slide as his classmates start disappearing down it and no one seems to notice. Despite his fear, he follows his friend Laila down through the tube, and, instead off emerging on the playground, they land in a plane called the Painful Place. There, children are experimented on by white, chalky, metal-studded creatures. One of the scariest aspects is how the children in the Painful Place seem to succumb and accept the torture as inescapable. While the pacing occasionally drags, the author builds a vivid universe. Griffin and Laila's friendship is well developed, although there are flat secondary characters. This title may need a trigger warning for some, as Griffin goes through an experience that abruptly makes him relive being physically and psychologically abused by a parent. VERDICT A good choice for libraries where readers are moving on from "Goosebumps" and are in search of something to bridge the gap to YA horror.—Claire Covington

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2323476 Greatest Kid in the World (Hardcover (Trade)) written by John David Anderson Zeke Stahls is not the best kid in the world. Some days he struggles just to be good.	1	$19.99

Which is why Zeke and his entire family are shocked when they receive word that he has been selected as a contestant in an online competition to find the World's Greatest Kid. Still, with a $10,000 cash prize on the line and Zeke's mom struggling to hold the family together on her single-parent salary, he decides to give it his best shot. As Zeke concocts various plots to show the world just how "great" he is, however, he finds himself wondering what that word even means and who gets to decide.

978-0-06-298603-0 Walden Pond Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 13.0

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve-year-old Zeke lives with his mother, his older sister, and his younger brother. More than three years after Dad's death in an accident, the family is barely getting by, financially and emotionally as well. Generally considered a smart, creative, mischievous boy with a liking for stunts and pranks, even Zeke thinks it's ludicrous when he is named a finalist in "the Greatest Kid in the World competition." The process of being filmed by a cameraman for several days makes Zeke question his enjoyment of risky challenges and reflect more on his actions. Maybe he's endangering his adoring brother. Maybe he's being unfair to Jackie. Almost certainly, he's letting his mother down. What kind of person does he really want to be? The author of Ms. Bixby's Last Day (2016), Posted (2017), and Riley's Ghost (2022), Anderson portrays a middle-school kid with problems as well as untapped resources that can help him pull through. The novel's premise and the understated wit of Zeke's engaging first person narrative make this title easy to booktalk and rewarding to read.

#2222726 Finding Junie Kim (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ellen Oh

Junie Kim just wants to fit in. From We Need Diverse Books cofounder Ellen Oh comes a relatable and powerful own voices tween novel about Junie's road to embracing herself and her Korean heritage. This book was inspired by Oh's family's real-life experiences facing both modern-day racism and heartache and bravery during the Korean War. Perfect for fans of Other Words for Home and When My Name Was Keoko.

978-0-06-298798-3 HarperCollins Publishers ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Starred Review Twelve-year-old Junie is determined to navigate middle school with grace, even as she is bullied by students who consider her Korean heritage worthy of ridicule and suspicion. She's not alone, though. Her diverse group of close-knit friends have all been subjected to similar aggressions. After racist graffiti is discovered in the gym, Junie's crew decides it's time to speak up about the abuse, but she thinks that will only bring more trouble. When a school project has her interviewing her grandparents, their stories of perseverance and bravery in the face of both a terrible war in Korea and ongoing racism in the U.S. make Junie wonder if she, too, can find her courage and her voice. The text switches between Junie's first-person narration and her grandparents' childhood stories told in third person, but they're beautifully woven into a captivating whole. Oh notes that this work was inspired by her own family's experiences, and it's an obvious labor of love, shedding light on both present-day problems and an often-overlooked war, tackling extremely challenging subjects like racism, depression, suicidal ideation, death, and even gruesome war crimes. But there is also fierce familial love, supportive friendship, and an undercurrent of hope that buoys Junie in her worst times and helps her endure and grow. Junie's difficult journey is certainly one worth taking. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Her grandfather's story about growing up during the Korean War mobilizes a girl against racism in her own town. When someone defaces the gym of her suburban Maryland middle school with racist graffiti, Korean American Junie Kim at first doesn't want to join her outraged friends in protesting. Instead, Junie, who has been facing the racist taunts of a school bus bully every morning, becomes cynical, negative, and depressed. Her resistance alienates her friends, and she endures a brief bout of suicidal ideation; fortunately, her family finds her a therapist she trusts. A school assignment to interview an elder gives Junie a chance to hear about her beloved grandfather's boyhood during the Korean War. His harrowing tale and her grandmother's similarly traumatic story offer valuable perspective, and she is inspired to take action by working with her friends to create a video about diversity for an upcoming assembly. Extraneous details sometimes slow the story, the dialogue can feel unrealistically expository, and the alternating narration and time jumps are at times disorienting, but the brutal depictions of life during the Korean War, including the desperate hunt for food and the chaos of evacuation, ring true. Junie's love for her grandparents--and theirs for her--is movingly portrayed. Their conversations and Junie's relationships with her diverse friend group sensitively unpack a range of subjects relating to identity and prejudice. An intergenerational tale that highlights a girl's growing confidence and awareness. (author's note) (Fiction. 9-13)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Oh (The Dragon Egg Princess) conveys the legacy of bravery, tenderness, and forgiveness alongside the fallout of intergenerational trauma in a complex novel that touches on gender discrimination and racism, mental health, and imperialism and civil war. Following a series of racist incidents at her largely white middle school, including graffiti targeting Black, Jewish, and Asian students, Korean American student Junie Kim, 12, falls out with her friend group and into a fatalistic spiral, eventually receiving a diagnosis of depression. As prejudicial bullying continues at school, an assignment leads Junie to interview her beloved grandparents, Doha and Jinjoo, about their experiences during the Korean War, an experience that gives her renewed resilience and courage. Oh alternates Junie's first-person tale of a contemporary America replete with MAGA hats and "fake news" with her grandparents' stories of war-torn South Korea, injecting experiences of painful realism through wartime events, ethnic slurs, and a description of suicidal ideation. Junie's healthy and inclusive family dynamic contributes warmth and hopefulness, and her grandparents' backstories and personal integrity in the face of hardship are thoughtfully drawn. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Marietta B. Zacker, Gallt & Zacker Literary. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—Twelve-year-old Korean American Junie Kim's first morning of seventh grade turns into a police scene when racist graffiti is discovered in the school gym. Junie has been bullied by a racist white boy who calls her hateful names. Back in 1950, Korean children Doha and Jinjoo endure a brutal civil war. The book moves back and forth between then and now, illustrating the evils and effects of war and racism. In this personal narrative inspired by the author's mother's life, Oh writes about the ravages of war and the depths of Junie's depression with unflinching honesty. She seamlessly provides insight into Korean history and culture for the uninitiated and captures the human condition during wartime through frank portrayals of Junie's modern-day struggles. The portions of the book dealing with the Korean War move more swiftly, but Junie's journey out of depression—through friends, family, therapy, and the discovery of her special talent—still develops poignantly. VERDICT A first purchase for middle school and upper elementary collections, Oh's powerful novel sheds light on the devastating effect racism can have on mental health, and tells a history often overlooked.—Kate Fleming, Hosford M.S., Portland, OR

#2263950 Operation Do-Over (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gordon Korman

Mason and Ty were once the very best of friends, like two nerdy sides of the same coin. Until seventh grade, when Ava Petrakis came along. Now Mason can trace everything bad in his life to that terrible fight they had over the new girl. The one thing he'd give anything for is a do-over. But that can't happen in real life--can it?

978-0-06-303274-3 Balzer & Bray ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Mason knows how lucky he is to have his longtime best friend, Ty, who shares his nerdy interests and sense of humor. In seventh grade, when both boys are attracted to Ava, the beautiful new girl who takes pride in her geekiness, they make a no-dating-Ava treaty to protect their friendship. Disaster strikes: a bully posts a photo of Mason and Ava kissing to the seventh-grade chat. Five years later, Ty still hasn't forgiven Mason--and Mason has just been expelled from high school. But after a car accident, Mason is transported back in time to his seventh-grade year, and he has a chance to redo the mistake he most regrets and create a different future. Mason makes an engaging narrator, reporting events in a candid, fair-minded way. In the concluding chapters, when he suddenly returns to senior year with no knowledge of what has happened in the intervening time period, it's intriguing to watch him try to pick up the pieces while gradually discovering what he has changed or preserved because of his choices. A rewarding time-slip story. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Seventh graders and proud nerds Mason and Ty share identical interests, which makes a great foundation for a friendship but causes serious trouble when they're both crushing on the new girl, Ava. Despite making a "non-Ava" treaty with Ty, Mason ends up kissing Ava, destroying his relationship with Ty (and eventually Ava). Fast forward five years: Ty and Mason still don't talk to one another, even as high schoolers, but Mason gets a chance to set things right when a car accident somehow sends him back in time into the body of his twelve-year-old self. If he can prevent the fateful kiss, then Mason can save their friendship--but how will the other choices he makes in this "do-over" affect the rest of his life? Korman proves yet again to have a keen ear for middle grade dynamics, especially how new arrivals shift old relationships and how jokey humor can only do so much to soothe wounded hearts. This is also a thoughtfully constructed portrait of a people-pleasing kid whose tendency toward peacemaking often has the unintended result of taking away other people's agency. The ending falls flat, as Mason basically gets everything he wanted with little consequence for some of his more questionable actions, but Korman's signature blend of comedy, drama, and middle grade angst will leave readers with a warm fuzzy feeling, if not an examination of the ethics of Mason's time travel. KQG COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A high school senior tries middle school again. Seventh graders Mason Rolle and Tyrus Ehrlich are more than best friends, they're platonic soul mates. That is, until cool New Yorker Ava Petrakis shows up at Pasco Middle School, befriends them both, and starts flirting with Mason. The boys attempt to create a bros-before-girls pact, promising that they won't ruin their friendship by trying to date her, but when Mason kisses Ava during a freak storm at the Harvest Festival, he sets in motion a chain of events that destroys their friendship and ends with his getting expelled from school in his senior year after accidentally assaulting his favorite teacher. A near-death experience mysteriously thrusts Mason back to that fateful middle school moment, and he tries to figure out both how he traveled through time and how he can fix his future. Watching Mason learn from mistakes and explore new aspects of himself (especially with a 17-year-old consciousness trapped in a preteen body) is vicariously satisfying, and the sheer fascination of his predicament will keep readers turning pages, anxious to find out if he succeeds. The story ends well but with no conclusive answers to the questions Korman tantalizingly dangles throughout. Main characters read as White. A satisfying story--right up until readers are left wanting more. (Fiction. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Korman (Unplugged) brings smart plotting to an absorbing time travel narrative that examines the long-term impact of actions. Mason Rolle has shared a "two-brain hive mind" with Tyrus Ehrlich since elementary school, initially bonding over a sports phobia and deep love of science and time travel. When new girl Ava Petrakis arrives from New York City and both boys develop crushes, the friends agree to a "non-Ava treaty" to maintain their friendship. But a time jump five years into the future reveals a terrible falling-out between them when Mason and Ava are caught kissing in a photo. Narration alternates between Mason at ages 12 and 17, until an incident sends 17-year-old Mason back to his 12-year-old body and life. Given this opportunity for a do-over, he seeks to right wrongs as well as try new things, leading to a climax in which both he and readers see what, if anything, has changed. Full of warmth and middle grade humor, the novel centers, among other protagonists who read as white, sympathetically flawed Mason, whose chatty narrative proves engaging at both ages, and whose desire to do right by his friend is inspiring. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Elizabeth Harding, Curtis Brown. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Twelve-year-old Mason and his best friend, Ty, are obsessed with all of the same things: science, Star Trek, time travel, and—unfortunately—Ava, the new girl in their class. After breaking their "non-Ava treaty," Mason finds himself without a best friend and has to forge his own path. Fast-forward to senior year of high school, where the rift between the two former friends leads to a disastrous incident that gets Mason expelled from school. Driving home, he gets into a car accident and wakes up in his 12-year-old body, just days before Ava arrives. Realizing that he has a chance to make amends and alter the future, he avoids Ava at all costs, joins the football team, and tries hard not to give away the fact that he knows the future. Eventually another head injury transports him back to his 17-year-old body, where he discovers which of his efforts have paid off. Right from the beginning, Korman's storytelling engages readers, who will root for Mason as he tries to preserve his friendship with Ty, keep his parents married, and prevent his dog being hit by a car. While there's not much new ground broken here, there are lots of laughs and chances to consider how people's choices in the present affect their future. Main characters are cued white. VERDICT Just plain fun from start to finish, this story will appeal to Korman's many fans and others who enjoy humorous fiction.—Sarah Reid

#2293138 Sparrows in the Wind (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gail Carson Levine

Cassandra, a princess of Troy and follower of Apollo, is delighted when the god himself appears to her. Apollo asks to love her in exchange for giving her future sight, and she agrees—but recoils when he kisses her. Enraged, the god transforms his gift into a curse: Cassandra's visions will never be believed. After horrifying images of coming war and death pour into her mind and with no one to heed her warnings, Cassandra risks her safety again and again to avert the disaster awaiting Troy.

978-0-06-303907-0 Quill Tree Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Pleased with Cassandra's offering, Apollo gives her the gift of prophecy, but when she turns down his sexual advances, he curses her so she won't be believed. Cassandra then foretells the sack of Troy and her own enslavement and murder -- a grim premise for a novel, but Levine's Cassandra never stops trying to avert the tragic future she sees. Her efforts win her a few crucial allies, including her brother Hector, a minor wind god named Eurus, and (once the Amazons side with the Trojans against the Spartans) the Amazon princess Rin. But all of Cassandra's attempts fail, even barring Paris and Helen from seeking refuge in Troy. Through a clearly evoked Aegean setting, unique customs, and certain poetic turns of phrase, Levine immerses readers in a Bronze Age society, contrasting the strictures placed around Cassandra and other Trojan women with the freedom and agency enjoyed by the Amazons, whose culture is also meticulously portrayed. Cassandra's friendship with the Amazon princess adds another intriguing strand to the narrative. Purists may object to Levine's modifications, but modern readers most interested in grrrl power won't mind. In the end, does Cassandra succeed in saving Hector from death at the hands of Achilles and the city of Troy from the wooden horse outside the gates? I could tell you -- but best to read it for yourselves. Anita L. Burkam September/October 2022 p.89(c) Copyright 2022. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A nonconformist epic fantasy by Levine (A Ceiling Made of Eggshells) centers the events of the Trojan War around two courageous female protagonists. Fourteen-year-old Trojan princess Cassandra worries about the responsibility of acting as kanephoros; balancing a full basket on her head while leading the city to celebrate a god or goddess. Apollo blesses her with the gift of prophecy when all proceeds smoothly; after she rejects his kiss, however, he appends a curse: no one will believe her portents. Cassandra allies with wind god Eurus to forestall the war she sees coming, but a combination of divine meddling and human willfulness, including the malicious actions of Cassandra's twin Helenus, bring it about anyway. As the war rages, the narrative's focus switches to Rin, a young Amazon princess eager to prove herself in battle. When the Amazons ride to aid the Trojans, Rin befriends Cassandra, and together, the prophet and the warrior work to avoid the terrible future Cassandra has foretold: the enslavement and murder of her family, and the burning of her beloved Troy. Twining the source material with contemporary sensibilities, Levine emphasizes strong female protagonists in a richly imagined, urgently told mythological variation. Ages 10: up. Agent: Ginger Knowlton, Curtis Brown. (Oct.)

#2266099 Comb of Wishes (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa Stringfellow

Ever since her mother's death, Kela has felt every bit as broken as the shards of glass, known as "mermaid's tears," that sparkle on the Caribbean beaches of St. Rita. So when Kela and her friend Lissy stumble across an ancient-looking comb in a coral cave, with all she's already lost, Kela can't help but bring home her very own found treasure. Far away, deep in the cold ocean, the mermaid Ophidia can feel that her comb has been taken. And despite her hatred of all humans, her magic requires that she make a bargain: the comb in exchange for a wish. But what Kela wants most is for her mother to be alive. And a wish that big will exact an even bigger price...

978-0-06-304343-5 Quill Tree Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-7 It's been months since Kela lost her mother. Grieving and heartbroken, she pushes away those around her, since no one can fill the void left by her mom. When walking along the St. Rita beach in search of sea glass, or mermaid tears, she discovers a very curious-looking box with a beautiful comb inside. Unbeknownst to her at the time, the comb belongs to a mermaid named Ophidia who wants to get back what is hers. In exchange for her comb, Ophidia offers to grant Kela one wish. Kela immediately knows what she wants to wish for, though Ophidia warns her that every grand wish comes at a price. Is Kela ready to accept the consequences of her wish in order to have her mother back? Stringfellow's middle-grade debut is a wondrous and original story that incorporates Caribbean culture and folklore. Told in alternating points of view between Kela and Ophidia, the novel leads us through a story about family that spans hundreds of years and will captivate readers until the end. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Grieving for her mother's death, twelve-year-old Kela has pushed away her father, her artistic aspirations, and her connections to vibrant life on the fictional Caribbean island of St. Rita. When she finds a box containing an old, beautiful comb, its owner, an ancient mermaid named Ophidia, is desperate to get it back: it's the soul cage in which she treasures the stolen soul that keeps her young. Ophidia offers Kela a wish in exchange for the comb, but Kela's wish that her mother be restored to life has unforeseen consequences, and human interference keeps preventing her from returning the comb as promised, leading to potential disaster for the whole island. Kela's primary narration allows for a harmonious blend of contemporary island life and Afro-Caribbean lore, while chapters focusing on Ophidia draw on elements of Andersen's "The Little Mermaid." The third-person narration of the interspersed sections echoes a rhythmic traditional call-and-response that links the teller and the listener ("I say Crick, you say Crack. Crick. Crack. This is a story. COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine After her mother dies in a tragic accident, twelve-year-old Kela Boxhill becomes a shell of her former self. She pushes away her father, her best friend, and her vibrant Caribbean community of St. Rita. She neglects her artistic ambitions because her creative activities remind her of the storyteller mother she's lost. One day, while searching for sea glass on the beach, Kela finds a magical comb belonging to the mermaid Ophidia. Desperate to retrieve the comb because its magical power keeps her young, Ophidia offers Kela a wish. But magic always comes at a price. Kela's wish to bring her mother back has unexpected consequences, and well-meaning adults prevent her from immediately returning the comb as promised, which incites the mermaid's wrath. As the island faces potential devastation from a hurricane caused by Ophidia's rage, Kela must figure out how to appease the vengeful mermaid while also protecting her loved ones, her community, and herself. The story is imbued with magic, but Stringfellow's powerful writing makes the fantastical feel like reality. Through narrative perspectives centering both Kela and Ophidia, the author recalls the call-and-response structure prevalent in Black storytelling traditions. Fans of Baptiste's The Jumbies and Rhodes's Bayou Magic will enjoy spending time with Kela as she navigates a journey filled with grief, love, loss, and discovery. S. R. Toliver(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young girl discovers a mermaid's comb and is granted the chance of a lifetime. Kela Boxhill is a 12-year-old Black girl from the fictional Caribbean island of St. Rita who enjoys collecting sea glass that she turns into jewelry, something her mother taught her how to do. It's the only activity she has found any pleasure in since her mother's passing left her devastated and adrift. One day, while walking the beach, Kela feels called to explore a cave in a protected and off-limits area of the shore. She discovers an ancient-looking box and takes it home with her. She finds a decorated comb inside and, remembering the many stories her mother shared with her, suspects it contains magic. Unbeknownst to Kela, it is the property of a mermaid named Ophidia, who is none too pleased to have had her precious property taken. According to the rules, the only way that Ophidia can get her comb back is to grant Kela a wish. Will Kela ask for what she most desires--to have her mother come back to life--despite Ophidia's warning of the risk this entails? Stringfellow weaves an enchanting tale of loss, longing, and discovery infused with Caribbean folklore. Readers will be captivated by Kela's story and become invested in her journey as she tries to deal with the grief of losing her mother as well as regret for her past actions. Will tug at readers' heartstrings. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In her debut, a folkloric fantasy set in Caribbean-inspired island St. Rita, Stringfellow manifests magic strong enough to grant the wish of a grieving heart. Twelve-year-old artisan Kela Boxhill, who is Black, copes with her grief about her mother's death by turning sea glass into jewelry. When Kela hears a hum in the wind one day that leads to a sinkhole in a protected (and off-limits) nature park, she finds a battered box that "breathed a strangeness she couldn't shake," and, inside, a comb that she believes; based on her mother's stories of the island; could be magical. Mermaid Ophidia, the box's owner, becomes enraged when the box is taken, knowing that its absence could lead to her death. But lore requires that Ophidia grant Kela a wish in exchange for the comb, posing a moral quandary that's further complicated when the comb breaks. Stringfellow brings a fantastical approach to one character's processing of grief as, with the support of secondary characters, Kela begins to truly navigate her pain while unearthing the stories and lore that are her heritage. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Lindsay David Auld, Writers House. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—Readers will be invested in the twisted tale of Black middle schooler Kela and Ophidia, an aging, vindictive mermaid. Kela is still reeling from the abrupt loss of her mother in a car accident. Her father has been drowning in his grief, and she feels emotionally frozen in place. While visiting the local coral reef in St. Rita one day, Kela grudgingly lets Lissy tag along. The girls used to be inseparable, but Kela has refused to open up to her close friend after her mother's death. Kela feels drawn to an odd object on the coral reef and barely manages to grab the strange item to place in her bag before the tide washes everything away. Through alternating narrators, readers learn that the treasure Kela discovered is a magical comb belonging to Ophidia, who is enraged that someone has taken her comb but is bound under strict magical law to grant a wish to the person who returns the item to her. Of course, the devastated Kela desires nothing else in the world but having her mom back. Kela makes the wish for her mother's return, but would never have guessed the terrifying consequences. Kela's heartbreak rings true as she struggles to navigate healing over her mother's loss. Ophidia's backstory is equally intriguing. Characters are engaging, and the narrative will hook young bibliophiles to the end. VERDICT A unique blend of Caribbean folklore and realistic grief with a vindictive mermaid twist. Hand to fans of mermaid tales, general fantasy lovers, and readers seeking a rare gem in the genre.—Julie Shatterly

#2252314 Circus at the End of the Sea (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lori R. Snyder

Maddy Adriana knows that magic is real. All her life, her heart has pulled her toward things too perfect to be ordinary. One day, that tug leads her to a magical street circus, hidden in plain sight among the canals and boardwalks of Venice Beach.

978-0-06-304710-5 HarperCollins Publishers ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Parentless, brown-skinned, black-haired Maddy Adriana, 12, has been shuttled from one group home to another nearly all her life. Perpetually known as "the weird new kid," Maddy sees magic in the world, always feeling a tug to follow it. En route to a new group home for sick children on Venice Beach, Calif., Maddy spies an uncanny cat and feels a pull so strong she pursues it through a mysterious white fog, arriving at a magical seaside circus. In the aftermath of the Ringmaster's sudden disappearance, however, acts have grown stale. Maddy, urged by her newfound friend; blonde, pale Vanessa the Muse; embarks on a mission to recover the Ringmaster. Along the way, she encounters wondrous, sometimes frightening experiences: murals and statues brought to life, a roller coaster race through the clouds, and a dangerous bridge, where she confronts an intense manifestation of all her fears and sorrows. Inspired by actual landmarks detailed in an author's note, Snyder crafts a bittersweet, boundlessly imaginative story that emphasizes the bright and dark sides of life. Classic motifs help this enticing debut conjure its own special blend of magic. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ammi-Joan Paquette, Erin Murphy Literary. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Madeline Adriana has always felt drawn to magic, and she's able to perceive magical things that others cannot see. She has spent her life moving from one group home to another, never knowing her real parents. En route to yet another new home, Maddy feels herself led to a pier where she begins a journey through a magical but defunct circus intertwined with the bohemian community of Venice Beach, CA. The motley circus folk enlist Maddy's help to find the ringmaster and restore the show. The book is full of action and page-turning excitement. Maddy's quest keeps her on the move, and readers will be engaged by her hair-raising adventures. However, some of the scene descriptions are a bit lengthy, which breaks the flow of the story at times. There are also conceptual elements which may go over the heads of the target audience. The circus is never portrayed in the conventional sense as a contained show under a big top, so readers may find it difficult to envision a circus mingling with the community around it. Nevertheless, the book is a worthwhile read with positive messages included about perseverance, friendship, and following your own path. Maddy is described as having thick, wavy hair. VERDICT A worthy addition to middle grade fantasy collections.—Kelly Jahng, South Park Elem. Sch., IL

#2363169 Between Two Brothers (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Crystal Allen

Isaiah "Ice" Abernathy has always worshiped his older brother, Seth. For years they've been not just brothers but best friends-and as Seth starts his senior year, Ice is eager to spend as much time with his brother as he can, making memories before Seth goes to college. But when Seth announces he's leaving much earlier than expected, and then he misses an important event-one he'd promised to attend-it causes a major fight. Filled with regret, Ice plans to apologize to Seth later the next day, but later never comes, as he finds out Seth was in an accident-one that leaves him in the hospital. And the doctors say he may never recover.

978-0-06-304729-7 Balzer & Bray ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A Black family must come together following a tragic event in this heartrending novel by Allen (How Lamar's Bad Prank Won a Bubba-Sized Trophy). Worried about his older brother Seth's upcoming departure for Texas A&M on an athletic scholarship, 13-year-old Isaiah Abernathy endeavors to overcome his inner "shy guy" and build self-confidence without Seth's help. When Seth's attending an A&M meeting results in him missing the sibling sports competition which they entered at the local rec center, the brothers have an uncharacteristic physical altercation. Following the fight, a car accident involving Seth and an 18-wheeler leaves Seth critically injured and in a medically induced coma. Desperate to apologize to Seth and believing that "I'm going to be his compass, his light in that dark place. I'm going to lead him back home," Isaiah determines to do whatever it takes to help Seth recover. Rendered in touching prose via Isaiah's empathetic first-person voice, this tender ode to siblinghood showcases the occasional precarity of life's best-laid plans and emphasizes that compassion and familial support can imbue one with the strength and resilience to overcome any obstacle. Ages 8: 12. (Jan.)

#2277782 Dear Friends (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa Greenwald

When Eleni comes home from a lonely summer at camp only to get dumped by her BFF since kindergarten, she figures there's got to be something wrong with her. Who loses two friends in the span of a couple of months? Along the way, Eleni reconnects with her across-the-street neighbor, a friend-turned-mean-girl from Hebrew school, and a friend who moved away in Pre-K-and finds herself stumbling into new friendships along the way. But will she ever get over the burn of losing her BFF?

978-0-06-306267-2 Katherine Tegen Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Eleni Klarstein, feeling like a friendship failure after Sylvie Bank ditches her, launches a Friendship Fact-Finding Mission to set things right. Leni is looking forward to starting sixth grade with bestie Sylvie by her side, but even before school starts, Sylvie distances herself. Leni is heartbroken--she lost her camp friend over the summer, too. When she thinks about it, other friendships in the past have also lapsed. In this heartening tale, Leni decides to take a long look at friendship by conducting a dedicated investigation. Through her first-person narration, readers feel up close and personal with all Leni's emotions: the pain, the humor, and the shock. As she reconnects with friends past, Leni discovers much about others and how they experienced their relationships with her, and she bravely faces some hard truths about herself. In the process, Leni brings closure to some relationships and develops new ties. It's the rare individual who can take such an awkward, glorious deep dive, and readers will be grateful to go through everything with Leni as their guide. Ultimately, she learns that sometimes the right thing is accepting that relationships grow and change. In case readers need reminding of this, there's a handy list of "Top Ten Takeaways" for being a good friend at the end. Leni is White and Jewish; there is some diversity in the well-rounded cast of secondary characters. Uplifting. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Len, real name Eleni Belle Klarstein, named after her grandmothers, is a soon-to-be middle schooler. Just back from summer camp, she's anxious to reunite with her best friend Sylvie. It's hard reigniting their friendship since it feels as if they have been apart forever, and Sylvie has made other friends. Len feels left out. Her mother is too controlling and doesn't help her navigate the choppy waters of middle school. Len writes in her journal in an effort to understand conflicts, and she tries not to go down what she calls her "worry spiral." In fact, she feels all her friendships have unraveled, so she decides to embark upon what she calls Eleni Belle Klarstein's Friendship Fact-Finding Mission. She will study all of her ended friendships, retrace all her steps and discover what happened, what was her fault, what she could have done better, and most importantly, how to get Sylvie back to being her true confidant. Readers will be amused by the different friend categories Len comes up with, and her dedication to her mission. Len, who is Jewish, is depicted with light skin and dark hair. VERDICT Middle schoolers trying to navigate ever-shifting relationships will relate to this sweet story. Recommended for juvenile realistic fiction collections.—Lisa Gieskes

#2329977 We Still Belong (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Christine Day

A thoughtful and heartfelt middle grade novel by American Indian Youth Literature Honor-winning author Christine Day (Upper Skagit), about a girl whose hopeful plans for Indigenous Peoples' Day (and asking her crush to the dance) go all wrong--until she finds herself surrounded by the love of her Indigenous family and community at the intertribal powwow.

978-0-06-306456-0 Heartdrum ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Wesley--seventh-grader, gamer, and member of the Upper Skagit tribe--has two important things in her backpack: the poem she wrote for Indigenous People's Day and a card for Ryan from Gamer Club asking him to the school dance. But the school's reception to her poem is lackluster at best, and her perfect plan to reach Ryan keeps getting interrupted by girls she barely knows. Why can't she celebrate her heritage in the way that feels right, not however other people expect her to? And will she ever get to talk to Ryan? Award-winning author Day (Upper Skagit) writes with compassion and precision in this story that digs into the magnitude of small moments. Readers will root for levelheaded Wesley as she navigates familiar adolescent curveballs: family changes, unexpected allies, and the frustration of not being seen. Cozy descriptions, likable characters, and teachable moments animate this occasionally didactic but ultimately heartwarming story about belonging. Acutely relatable and contemporary, this snapshot of a single day in Wesley's life authentically captures the struggle of being 12 and of finding--and using--your voice. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Twelve-year-old Wesley Wilder is excited to have her poem, "We Still Belong: An Indigenous People's Day Poem!" published in the school paper. When the time comes, she's unprepared for some of the reactions she receives, for better or worse. The story takes place during one day -- Indigenous People's Day -- with well-timed extended flashbacks and first-person rumination rounding out the characters, setting (Everett, Washington), and main narrative. Wesley lives with her single mother, grandfather, aunt, uncle, and baby cousin; her matrilineal tribal affiliation is Upper Skagit, though she does not qualify for enrollment. She has a supportive best friend, Hanan, and wants to ask a cute fellow gamer to the school dance. Readers learn these details organically as the day unfolds; it's an effective, relaxed way for Day (The Sea in Winter, rev. 3/21) to convey information and endear readers to her protagonist. As Hanan says, when Wesley's poem is discounted by a teacher for not having a "clear thesis statement": "You are enough...You always have been. You have nothing to prove...You're a gamer and a poet and a good friend. You're kind and funny and nerdy and weird." This is a story of quiet determination and triumph, with well-defined characters who push each other and are there for each other, and which culminates in sweet heart-to-heart conversations at a powwow in a high-school gym. An appended author's note provides further detail about the story's setting, tribal citizenship (Day is a tribal citizen of the Upper Skagit Tribe), and names and naming. Elissa Gershowitz(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A coming-of-age story bringing awareness to Indigenous Peoples' Day, "a holiday no one in this school seems to care about." Seventh grader Wesley Wilder, an Upper Skagit Indian Tribe descendant living just north of Seattle, proudly awaits the publication of her celebratory work, "We Still Belong: An Indigenous Peoples' Day Poem!" But when her English teacher doesn't mention her poem, despite always giving extra credit and class discussion time to students who are published in the school paper, she feels hurt and confused. Later, Wesley's plans to ask the boy she's crushing on to the school dance are derailed, adding to her emotional roller coaster. Day (Upper Skagit) crafts believable, complex characters: Wesley lives in a multigenerational Native family, is an outstanding student, a musician, and a gamer. She is kind and helps others in need. Her grandfather's words--"the things that scare us the most in this world are usually the most worthwhile things in our lives"--help ease her vulnerability and self-doubt. This story, which weaves diversity into the supporting cast, incorporates layers of Native identity throughout, as Wesley connects with a new friend who is a young Native activist, learning more about Christopher Columbus. The triumphant ending shows Wesley raised up by family, friends, and community. A rich, captivating story that will resonate with readers. (author's note, note from Cynthia Leitch Smith of Heartdrum, We Need Diverse Books statement) (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly During a "rough patch," 12-year-old Wesley Wilder and her mother move into her maternal grandfather's house in an Indigenous community outside of Seattle, which he shares with Wesley's aunt, uncle, and baby cousin. Seeking a place to fit in at her new school, Wesley joins the Native/Indigenous Student Union and the Gamer's Club, where she meets and crushes hard on white classmate Ryan. But when a teacher harshly criticizes a poem she writes celebrating Indigenous People's Day, and she discovers that Ryan is attending an upcoming school dance with another girl, Wesley struggles with feelings of inadequacy. These emotions amplify when she learns that she can never formally belong to the Upper Skagit Indian Tribe; because her verbally and physically abusive father, who left her mother before she was born, is white, Wesley's "blood quantum is too low to gain citizenship." Upper Skagit author Day (The Sea in Winter) presents Wesley's multilayered emotions, as well as myriad facets of Native life (including citizenship parameters), with crystal-clear prose. Via Wesley's self-aware and astoundingly perceptive first-person voice, Day highlights everyday tween conflicts about fitting in alongside experiential concerns surrounding identifying with one's heritage in this warmhearted approach to searching for; and finding; community and inclusion. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Suzie Townsend, New Leaf Literary. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Wesley Wilder, whose family are members of the Upper Skagit Tribe, is about to have a big day. Not only is it Indigenous People's Day, but her poem celebrating the occasion has been published in the school newspaper and will be discussed in her seventh grade English class. She has also prepared the perfect card referencing her favorite online game to ask blond-haired, green-eyed, suntanned, good-smelling Ryan to the school dance. The school day does not go according to plan, and though comforted by her best friend Hanan, she arrives home in tears. Things only get worse as her grandpa and mom have a fight about her job, and Wesley learns her aunt and uncle might move out of the house with her baby cousin. In the midst of all this, Wesley makes a new friend and by the time the family arrives at the local powwow, she is looking forward to the dancing and food. Her day has turned completely around and ends on the highest note. Wesley is a believable seventh grader who struggles with family, social, and identity issues as an Indigenous student in Washington state. All of that and more happening in just one day might stretch believability, but there is enough background from past scenes to provide context, and readers will get a well-rounded view of her life. There is also context of Upper Skagit tribal culture and politics to provide even unfamiliar readers an understanding of this central theme. The text realistically touches on discrimination by dismissal, lack of understanding, and complete ignorance, encouraging tweens to consider why Wesley had to write a poem called "We Still Belong." VERDICT A creative peek into the life of a relatable gamer girl who is finding her place in the social and emotional world of middle school while dealing with the ways Indigenous peoples are ignored and celebrated. —Clare A. Dombrowski

#2319911 Creatures of the In Between (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Cindy Lin

Prince Jin is running out of time. He must find a monster companion before his thirteenth birthday or lose the throne completely. And that means travelling to the only place where monsters still live: the legendary, dangerous Whisper Island. But untold perils await Jin there. The magical creatures he seeks are not so easily swayed, and an even greater threat looms on the horizon—one that could threaten everything Jin hopes to achieve.

978-0-06-306479-9 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Lin (The Twelve, 2019) brings to life a lush fantasy world for middle-grade readers to explore in Creatures of the In Between. Prince Jin must find a monster companion before he turns 13, or else he must relinquish his claim to the throne of the Three Realms—and thus begins a fast-paced, high-stakes adventure to save everything the prince holds dear. But to find said monster companion, Jin must journey into Whisper Island, the land of monsters, from where most visitors never return. Lin's fantastical adventure follows a determined boy who must defy his given fate as he attempts to approach the monsters on their home turf, win one over, and somehow defeat a greater evil in the process. Filled with detailed settings and descriptions that will engage every sense, plus likable characters that readers will root for until the final scene, this is perfect for fans of monsters, magic, myth, and learning about the stories and heroes of East and Southeast Asian lore.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly mperial family visits a monster-filled island in order to secure the throne in this action-packed, East and Southeast Asian folklore: inspired duology starter from Lin (The Twelve). In the empire of Samtei, also known as the Three Realms, crown prince Jin approaches his 13th birthday and subsequent ascension to the Triad Throne. But tradition requires emperors to gain the trust of a monster companion, and no such creatures have been seen in the kingdom for years; save for his powerful empress dowager grandmother's malicious phoenix. Inspired by an overheard conversation and planning to return with a monstermate, Jin travels to legendary monster sanctuary Whisper Island, joined by his dog, Shishi, and a stowaway servant, Bingyoo. Upon arriving at the island's ruined village, he encounters creatures he's only read about and slowly befriends the handful of people living there following an attack. With their help, Jin learns the art of Whispering, a skill used to bond with magical beings, and finds an even greater conflict than his own looming large. Court intrigue, daring escapades, and quick-moving battle sequences characterize this entertaining read. Though supporting personalities are not as developed as Jin's, Lin's lush descriptions bring her mythical creatures and the mysteries of Samtei's past to life. A bestiary concludes. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Josh Adams, Adams Literary. (Apr.)

#2323623 Boomi's Boombox (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Shanthi Sekaran

When Boomi's dad dies of COVID, the rest of her life topples like a row of dominoes. Then Boomi is given one last gift from her dad: his old boombox. Inside it, she finds a mix tape and a note: You can change your life. When she presses play on the boombox, her life really does change: she's magically transported to Thumpton-on-Soar, England, 1986. And her dad's there! But he doesn't know he's her dad--he's twelve, just like Boomi. Is she supposed to save her dad? Or change her life?

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

978-0-06-305158-4 Katherine Tegen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 8.0

Reviews by: Booklist "Do you know what potential is? Potential is a long, bony finger pointing to everything about you that's not good enough." Infused with grief, joy, and sardonic humor, this tale of a preteen finding out that a note left by her sorely missed father after his COVID-19 death, which reads, "You can change your life," is true in several surprising ways offers a generous measure of comfort as well as entertainment. After failing an audition at her California ballet academy and, as a consequence, being forced into weight-loss plans by her mom, Boomika Gopalan discovers that the antique tape player that came with the aforementioned note is a time machine. Its old tunes keep sending her back to 1986 to meet her 12-year-old dad in a racially divided British factory town, convincing her that she's been given some sort of mission. But what? Unraveling that mystery leads to adventures, bold choices, a climactic Bollywood-style gala in the past, and—with Boomi's reclamation of her own heritage in dance—a buoyant, upbeat ending in the present. Boomi's strong, distinctive narrative voice will sweep readers into her world, and her nuanced relations with a truly colorful supporting cast enhance her tale's humor and emotional resonance.

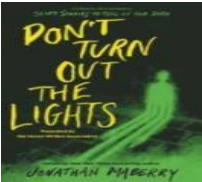

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine It's 2021 in San Francisco, the "second spring of the pandemic," and twelve-year-old Boomi Gopalan is grieving the loss of her father, a physician who recently died of COVID-19. She's also feeling dejected about a botched ballet audition: although she has had ambitions to be a dancer all her life, she isn't selected to move on to the next level at her snobby ballet academy. When she's given her father's old boombox, Boomi discovers a crumpled note in the battery compartment that reads "you can change your life." The boombox transports her back in time to 1986 to a small English town called Thumpton-on-Soar, where she meets her father as a boy. Boomi experiments with time travel, going back and forth as she tries, indeed, to change her life and somehow prevent her beloved father's death. In the end, Boomi learns about the roots of her family's secrets, finds joy in dancing again with the classical Indian dance of Bharatanyam, and fights against the racist treatment of South Asian immigrants in Thumpton. Boomi learns lessons about staying true to herself and her heritage and that a "big change can start with the smallest action of the very smallest person." Sekaran's well-crafted prose, sharp sense of humor, and knack for building suspense will keep readers interested until the surprising, time-bending conclusion. Julie Hakim Azzam (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A grieving Indian American girl finds healing through time travel. Boomi Gopalan has had a terrible year. The 12-year-old ballet dancer lives in San Francisco with her mother and Paati, her paternal grandmother who has dementia. Boomi's doctor father died of Covid-19 last year, and it's thrown her off balance. When his friend gives Boomi her dad's old boombox that contains a mixtape, insisting that he wanted her to have it, she finds a note he wrote tucked inside reading, "you can change your life." By playing the cassette, Boomi travels back in time to 1986 and her father's North of England hometown of Thumpton-on-Soar, where she meets him as a boy her own age. When an accident in the past threatens to change the future, Boomi must reach across the timelines to find a solution. Along the way, she tries to understand her loss and find her true self. The book tackles complex issues, including body image, as both Boomi's mother and ballet teacher make negative comments about her weight; complicated friendships; and racism and xenophobia, explored in 1980s England in ways that parallel Boomi's present-day awakening. Sekaran keeps all the plates spinning at a fast pace. The characters are vividly portrayed, including Boomi's father, his rebellious older sister, and vibrant and wise Paati. Bharatanatyam, an Indian classical dance that is rich in beauty and symbolism, becomes a link between grandmother and granddaughter and a way for Boomi to honor herself. A warm and empowering story. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

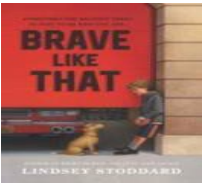

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Boomi is having a hard year. Her dad died of COVID-19, her best friend isn't talking to her, and her mother is caught up in her own grief, making her simultaneously distant and overly involved. She has put Boomi on a restrictive diet and scheduled a "make up" audition to be admitted into an advanced ballet class Boomi no longer has any interest in. In the midst of the chaos, a family friend gives her an old boombox that her father asked him to pass on to her. After discovering a mixtape and a message from her father inside that tells her she can change her life, Boomi plays the tape, and is instantly teleported back in time to 1986 and her father's childhood home in a fictional English town. Though Boomi knows she can't tell her father who she is to him, she becomes fast friends with him and eventually with his rebellious sister, as well as her grandmother, who lives with them in the present but has nonverbal dementia. While jumping back and forth across time, Boomi comes to realize that her experiences in the past are impacting the present, which eventually causes a problem in the 1980s that she must fix to make things right in her own time. Sekaran masterfully balances the harsh reality of Boomi's present with the fantastical elements of the novel. Both time periods read with equal interest, as readers wonder if Boomi can indeed change her own and her family's circumstances. The chapters are themed and structured by the songs on the 1980s mixtape, most of which will be unfamiliar to younger readers but may pique their interest to investigate. All major characters in the family are East Indian and the plot deals with the prejudices of the eras. VERDICT Sensitive captures the isolation of COVID-19 and loss of a parent. Boomi is a relatable, self-aware character readers will be rooting for as she navigates myriad social, familial and personal issues in both time periods. Highly recommended.--Juliet Morefield Copyright 2023 School Library Journal,

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2154685 Dragon Egg Princess (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Ellen Oh Jiho knows better than anyone else the horrors that live deep in the magical forest and how those who go in never come back. Now the ancient forest is in danger from foreign forces that want to destroy it, and a long-forgotten evil that's been lurking deep in the Kidahara for centuries finally begins to awaken. Can a magicless boy, a fierce bandit leader, and a lost princess join forces and save their worlds before it's too late? 978-0-06-287579-2 HarperCollins Publishers ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 8.0	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This Korean mythology: inspired adventure follows a teenager whose family legacy of magical nullification draws him into the schemes of those looking to exploit his home's resources. In Joson, a kingdom where magic holds strong despite other countries' technological advances, 14-year-old Jiho Park struggles with the expectation that he become a ranger like his paternal ancestors and protect the Kidahara, especially since his father voluntarily walked into the supernatural forest five years ago and never returned. Desperate to help his beleaguered family, Jiho agrees to serve as a guide for Omni Murtagh, a foreign company intent on razing the forest in the name of modernity; little realizing their even darker agenda. On the trail, Jiho must join a long-missing princess and the Kidahara's inhabitants to save the land. The world Oh conjures is populated by diverse and fanciful characters, but the juxtaposition of Jiho's secluded homeland and the modern trappings of the outside world is less effective than one might hope. Slight characterization and inconsistent pacing lead to a hasty climax and abrupt conclusion. Nevertheless, this enjoyable read should appeal to fantasy fans. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Marietta B. Zacker, Gallt & Zacker Literary. (Mar.)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2168549 Don't Turn Out the Lights: A Tribute to Alvin Schwartz's Scary Stories to Tell in the Dark (Hardcover (Trade)) Featuring stories from R.L. Stine and Madeleine Roux, this middle grade horror anthology curated by New York Times bestselling author Jonathan Maberry is a chilling tribute to Alvin Schwartz's Scary Stories to Tell in the Dark. A life-size baby doll that stalks its prey. A flesh-hungry ogre who jingle jangles when he walks. A haunted house just dying for a visitor. What do all these things have in common? 978-0-06-287767-3 HarperCollins Publishers ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 730	1	$19.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine "This book is dedicated to Alvin Schwartz, for scaring the snot out of generations of young readers. And for making being scared a whole bunch of fun!" Maberry has compiled thirty-five short stories by contributors -- Schwartz fans all, per the foreword -- including R. L. Stine, Kami Garcia, Jonathan Auxier, and Tananarive Due. Each tale is creepy, eerie, or just plain weird. Terrifying toys, freaky felines, evil electronics. "The Weeping Woman," "The Knock-Knock Man" "The Green Grabber," "The Neighbor." All the entries are pithy and punchy...perfect to "tell in the dark." Brief contributor bios are appended. Elissa Gershowitz September/October 2020 p.50(c) Copyright 2020. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2162534 Brave Like That (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lindsey Stoddard Cyrus was just a baby when his firefighter dad found him abandoned on the steps of the firehouse. Cyrus feels as out of place as the stray dog who captured his heart. But if fitting in means pretending to be someone he's not, maybe this is the year Cyrus can decide to be his own kind of normal and there's nothing braver than that. 978-0-06-287811-3 HarperCollins Publishers ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 272 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 9.0	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A sixth grader who's struggling to find a path forward that doesn't disappoint his adoptive father befriends a bullied boy who's delightfully comfortable in his own skin. His father was a talented football player, so Cyrus believes that if he doesn't succeed on the gridiron, he won't live up to his expectations. But last year was the first year of full tackle, and Cyrus hates it. He finds far greater satisfaction helping out alongside some friendly girls at the local animal shelter, where a stray dog that he befriended has been taken. To volunteer there he must lie his way out of practices and deceive his father, too. Meanwhile, he conceals another serious problem: Even though he reads fluently, he comprehends almost nothing. When his two football-star friends begin to unmercifully pick on puny, smart, and unconventional Eduardo, Cyrus is faced with a daunting challenge. He's convinced he's not brave, but can he find the courage to stand up to his friends and protect the boy he finds understands him much better than they do? Cyrus is movingly supported by his grandmother, who can no longer speak after a stroke but whose love shines through. Cyrus' plight believably expands to seem almost insurmountable, but help comes from surprising directions in this moving, character-driven tale. Cyrus and his family seem to be white; Eduardo is Latinx. With a strong, never-preachy anti-bullying message, this one scores a touchdown. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—When a dog is left at the firehouse where his dad works, Cyrus immediately feels a connection. As a baby, he'd been abandoned there, too. The only person who could soothe him was Brooks Olson, the firefighter who ultimately adopted him. His dad has a strict no pets policy and warns Cyrus not to get attached to the dog he named Parker. The undernourished dog has health issues, and after dropping him off at the vet, Dad instructs Cyrus to forget about Parker and focus on middle school football tryouts. The problem is, Cyrus no longer wants to play football. He hasn't found a way to share the news with his dad, who is also a local football legend. He also hasn't figured out how to explain his struggles with reading. This issue becomes even more troubling when Cyrus is instructed to write a book report for language arts class. Balancing these secrets becomes harder, especially when Cyrus begins skipping football practice to volunteer at the shelter where Parker is housed. When Cyrus is caught in a lie, it is time to come clean with his father about who he wants to be. Stoddard has created complex, heartfelt characters. Cyrus's grandmother, who has lost the ability to speak after a stroke, helps Cyrus navigate his struggles with reading and foster a love for music. The passages featuring their unique way of communicating are extraordinary. His burgeoning friendship with nonconformist new student Eduardo, who is bullied by Cyrus's former football friends, is authentically written, and it's a joy to see Cyrus finding his own voice as he defends him. VERDICT This heartfelt and triumphant novel touches on bullying, stereotypes, and learning differences in a straightforward fashion. Cyrus's journey toward self-acceptance will inspire readers of all ages.—Juliet Morefield, Multnomah County Lib., Portland, OR

#222722 Bea Is for Blended (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lindsey Stoddard

Bea and her mom have always been a two-person team. But now her mom is marrying Wendell, and their team is growing by three boys, two dogs, and a cat. As if finding her place in her new blended family isn't tough enough, Bea's also facing her first year of middle school, where she finds out the girls are just a few players short of forming their first all-girls soccer team.

978-0-06-287816-8 HarperCollins Publishers ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up—Bea's life has centered on her mom, grandmother, and aunt Tam. Now she has to handle a stepdad and three stepbrothers, one of whom is her nemesis from school and the soccer field. Bea juggles complex emotions as she deals with moving, sharing her mom, and coping with Bryce, the stepbrother she tries to ignore. Bea's old life revolved around the women in her family, her best friend Maximilian (who is neurodiverse), and her fame as a soccer star. She doesn't need anything else, except the all-girls soccer team that her school has promised. However, more conflict is on the horizon, in the form of a new soccer-star neighbor girl and the school principal/soccer coach, who is not a fan of the spunky protagonist. A twist midway through includes a new soccer player who uses American Sign Language. Stoddard's dialogue is readable, the story is well paced, and the characters are endearing. The character development highlights overlapping strengths and weaknesses among the various players, all building to create a rich community of schoolmates and family. Bea and Bryce slowly realize they have some common emotional bumps and bruises as they each grow in unexpected ways. Characters' skin tones are not described. VERDICT A little bit coming of age, family drama, sports hype, and school shenanigans all rolled into one for an appealing read.—Linda Annable, Newport P.L., OR

#2271364 Ceiling Made of Eggshells (Library Binding)

written by Gail Carson Levine

At first, Loma relishes her adventures with Belo, adventures that are beyond the scope of most girls of the time. But the older she gets, the more she longs for a family of her own if Belo will ever allow her to leave his side.

978-0-06-287820-5 HarperCollins Publishers ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.89

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This sweeping historical novel illuminates the plight of a Jewish family in Spain during the late 15th century. Precocious narrator Loma is just seven when her facility with numbers endears her to her influential financier abuelo after his wife, her beloved abuela, dies in a plague outbreak. Her status as his favorite proves a mixed blessing and one of the narrative's essential tensions. Loma becomes increasingly indispensable to her grandfather as he travels across Spain collecting taxes for the country's monarchs. As she grows older, however, his requirements of her mean that she must postpone her desire to marry and have children. Infusing her title with historical details about costume, food, and customs, Newbery Honoree Levine (Ella Enchanted) deftly conveys the obstacles facing the Jewish community under King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, among them the Inquisition, pressure to convert to Christianity, and eventually expulsion from Spain. Though the narrative unspools slowly, pacing builds considerably in the final chapters as 16-year-old Loma memorably navigates tumult and danger, bravely taking control of her destiny. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ginger Knowlton, Curtis Brown. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—Readers first meet Loma, a young Jewish girl living in late 15th-century Spain, when she is seven years old. Readers watch as she navigates life as the granddaughter of a powerful Jewish leader. As the title of Levine's new novel suggests, Spain in the late 1400s was a perilous place for Jewish people. This was the time of the Spanish Inquisition, during which the Jewish community was persecuted and ultimately exiled from Spain. Loma's grandfather is one of the wealthy Jewish figures who uses his connections, money, and skills to help Jewish people and tries to prevent forced conversions to Christianity. As her grandfather's traveling companion across Spain, Loma gets a firsthand look at the superstitions, ceremonies, and sacrifices that governed daily life during a cataclysmic and dangerous time. Loma witnesses, up close, King Ferdinand's and Queen Isabella's efforts to "defeat the infidel," meaning Spain's Muslim people. She also observes her grandfather's efforts to keep her people temporarily safe from harm. Although she loves and respects her grandfather, Loma is also devoted to her parents and siblings and looks forward to being married and starting her own family. She is loyal to her beloved grandmother's memory and is a loving aunt to the "littles," as she refers to her growing number of nieces and nephews. Levine skillfully juxtaposes the larger religious battles taking place in Spain with Loma's dreams for her future. VERDICT This story of adventure and bravery under unstable circumstances will appeal to mature readers who enjoy historical fiction and tales of courage.—Shelley Sommer, Inly School, Scituate, MA

#2162533 Zeus, Dog of Chaos (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kristin O'Donnell Tubb

Zeus's new human, Madden, is diabetic, and he wants to be invisible, too. And it's even harder because Madden makes this noise called music that gives Zeus funny feelings--and draws attention to Madden as the star tuba player in band. Zeus's mission becomes clear: he must destroy music.

978-0-06-288593-7 Katherine Tegen Books ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

#2326408 Conjure Island (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Eden Royce

Del has never even heard of Nana Rose, and she has no interest in spending the summer with a stranger on an unbearably hot island off the South Carolina coast. And when Nana Rose starts talking about the school she runs dedicated to their family's traditions--something called "conjure magic"--Del knows she's in for a weird, awkward summer.

978-0-06-289961-3 Walden Pond Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-8 Del Baker has never known what it's like to have a large family, or "roots," as her grandmother says. It has always just been her, her grandmother, and her father, who is frequently deployed. When her grandmother gets ill, Del finds out that she has a great- grandmother who lives on an island in South Carolina. Further surprises arise as Del learns that not only did her grandmother keep her own mother a secret, but she also hid the fact that she comes from a magical community. Del is soon immersed in the enticing world of conjure magic, a branch of magic that stems from her ancestors who were once enslaved. Royce has created a unique world that celebrates the magic and folklore of the African diaspora. This book has a quieter plot than other fantasy adventures, deferring instead to the internal struggles of identity, familial belonging, and friendship. An excellent read for anyone who enjoys getting lost in a world of magic. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Because her father is in the Air Force, eleven-year-old Delphinia Baker moves to a new state every year, making it difficult to form lasting friendships. Del is grateful for the one constant in her life: her grandmother. However, when Gramma falls ill while Del's father is deployed, Del is sent to stay with her great-grandmother, Nana Rose, who runs a school on an island off the coast of South Carolina. Del didn't know she had a great-grandmother -- nor did she know that she comes from a long line of conjurers, spell workers whose magic is tied to the land and the community. At first, Del wants nothing to do with the strange school, but she soon learns that magic is more than incantations and enchantments. Magic is family, community, and life. Still, the mystery remains: why did her grandmother hide the existence of the school, the island, and her family? This heartfelt fantastical novel discusses resonant topics such as belonging, friendship, and grief. Royce's (Root Magic, rev. 3/21) narrative is filled with magic, but the heart of the story lies in its connection to Southern conjure and Gullah Geechee culture. Share with readers who enjoyed Dumas's Wildseed Witch and Clayton's The Marvellers (rev. 5/22). S. R. Toliver(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A family emergency sends a tween to live with a relative she didn't know existed and who holds the secret to her beloved grandmother's past. Eleven-year-old Delphinia Baker is used to being uprooted. Her dad's in the military, and changing duty stations means Del and her grandmother must pack up and move too. However, when Gramma suddenly falls ill, Del's world changes unimaginably. With her father deployed, she's sent to stay with Nana Rose, Gramma's mother, on one of South Carolina's Sea Islands. Nana Rose runs a boarding school dedicated to keeping the lore and traditions of the Gullah people alive, including conjure magic. Del is skeptical about magic, and her worries about Gramma plus the island's isolation weigh on her mind. The school, the teachers, and even the other students feel strange. Eva, Del's roommate, is friendly, but Del is reluctant to open up to her. Soon it becomes clear that the magic is real, and Del is determined to discover why Gramma kept this part of her life hidden. Her struggles to work magic cause her to worry whether she will ever understand her family's past--and land her in some precarious situations. Following her acclaimed debut, Root Magic (2021), Royce offers readers another strong fantasy steeped in Gullah culture, featuring mythic creatures, ghosts, and brooms that facilitate spells. Del is a fully realized protagonist who convincingly changes from a wary observer to a young person embracing her heritage. A rich window into a unique cultural community. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly magical ancestry after meeting a distant relative in this beguiling family mystery by Royce (Root Magic). Because of her father's military career, 11-year-old Delphinia Baker is used to moving every year or so. Though she's never really had a chance to settle anywhere, Del insists that she's fine as long as she has maternal grandmother Gramma ("I don't need friends... I have you," Del says). But when Gramma has a health scare, Del is sent to South Carolina to spend the summer with Gramma's mother Nana Rose, her estranged great-grandmother, whom Del has never met. Nana Rose is nothing like Del expects: she travels on the back of an alligator and runs Vesey Conservatory, a school that teaches conjure magic based in Gullah traditions. While Del is skeptical of magic's existence at first, when faced with ghost butlers, enchantment-casting teachers, and sentient brooms, her disbelief is replaced by two big questions: Why did Gramma never mention this place, and why did she leave it all those years ago? Royce employs Del's observant first-person narration to seamlessly weave together an engaging tale of magic, friendship, and family steeped in Black Southern culture that highlights the importance of knowing one's history. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Adriann Ranta Zurhellen, Foundry Literary & Media. (June)

	Quantity	Unit Price
	1	$16.99

#2167410 Girl and the Ghost (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Hanna Alkaf

Suraya is delighted when her witch grandmother gifts her a pelesit. She names her ghostly companion Pink and the two quickly become inseparable. But Suraya doesn't know that pelesits have a dark side--and when Pink's shadows threaten to consume them both, they must find enough light to survive before they are lost to the darkness. 978-0-06-294095-7 HarperCollins Publishers ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 840

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Growing up, Suraya's best friend has always been Pink, a pelesit?a kind of parasitic demon-ghost that feeds on the blood of its host?inherited from her witch grandmother. He's her playmate, caretaker, and defender against bullies, but when Suraya makes her first human friend, Pink feels his relationship slipping away. Flaring insecurity unleashes his demonic nature, plaguing Suraya's new friend with various horrors in an attempt to push her away. As Pink and Suraya struggle to hold on to that which is dearest to them, they discover the tangled roots of a troubled family history, heal their wounds, and grow. Alkaf's (The Weight of Our Sky, 2019) middle-grade debut is unapologetically?and beautifully?Malaysian, its characters, setting, and story steeped in the culture's folklore, language, religion, and food. As a ghost story, grounded in Suraya's and Pink's alternating points of view, it sizzles with tension and safe-but-ghoulish imagery (Pink's MO is unleashing a swarm of creepy crawlers) without letting go of the heartfelt thread of love between a girl and her ghost.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When the witch he is bound to dies, a ghost seeks out her next of kin, her granddaughter Suraya. The ghost-whom Suraya names Pink-is by her side throughout childhood until his retaliation against school bullies and physically manifested jealousy of Suraya's new friend Jing draws unwanted attention. In a bid to escape a sinister ghost hunter, Suraya, Jing, and Pink decide it's time to find Pink's hometown and put him to rest. Pink's excessive protectiveness and jealousy cause plausible friction with gentle Suraya, whose angelic perfection makes her a rather static character in comparison to her more complex mother and interesting but inconsistently drawn grandmother. Pink and Jing's rivalry is enjoyable once they're forced to work together, however, and Malaysian ghost lore runs alongside pop cultural touchstones such as Star Wars, making an entertaining convergence of the supernatural with the everyday. Even when the narration indulges in well-worn anti-bullying rhetoric, touches of contemporary Malaysian life enrich the background: ethnic and religious diversity, layers of rapid social change, and loving descriptions of food abound, making this a plausible addition to ghost story collections looking to diversify. FHK

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After the death of the village witch, her pelesit, a cricketlike trickster ghost-familiar, must seek a new master who shares the witch's bloodline. Suraya, a lonely, impoverished child who is shunned by the local children and held at an emotional distance by her mother, embraces her pelesit inheritance, lovingly naming him Pink. Pink serves as Suraya's friend and protector, but his retribution against those he believes have slighted Suraya is impulsive and malicious. Disturbed, Suraya extracts a promise from Pink not to hurt others, ever, unless she is in absolute danger. Pink soon breaks his promise when Suraya is bullied by other girls, but when she finally makes her first human friend, Jing Wei, Pink's protectiveness takes a dangerously jealous turn. As Suraya struggles with the decision to cut Pink loose, darker forces remind them that Pink is not the only malevolent being around. Alkaf's middle-grade debut immerses readers in Malaysian culture and food as well as weaving in both Islamic elements and pre-Islamic views of ghosts and death. Though aspects of the novel embrace the disturbing and grotesque (which will delight many readers), its conclusion is grippingly heart-wrenching and speaks to deeper themes of family, trauma, and friendship. Suraya and her family are Malay Muslims while Jing Wei is Chinese Malaysian. A fascinating, page-turning tale. (Supernatural adventure. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2163544 Dan Unmasked (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Chris Negron

After an accident at baseball practice--an accident that Dan is certain he caused--Nate's fallen into a coma. Now, if Dan ever wants to talk to Nate again, he's got to figure out a way to wake him up.

978-0-06-294305-7 HarperCollins Publishers ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 690

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Comics and baseball are all Dan needs--before the accident. Things couldn't really be going better for 13-year-old Dan. The Mira Giants have just qualified for the Western New York Double Elimination Tournament, and a new Captain Nexus comic is about to come out. Dan's father is too busy for him these days, but it's OK, because Dan shares comics and baseball and everything great with his best friend, Nate, the Giants' amazing pitcher. So Dan's world seems shattered when Nate is hit with a baseball during practice. Now Nate's in a coma, and Dan's falling apart. Maybe if he and Nate's kid brother make a Captain Nexus fan-fiction comic, that will be the talisman that wakes Nate up? While Nate spirals through rage, fear, and magical thinking, he tries to draw lessons from his beloved comics. But if comics can't save Nate, Dan's got nothing left--except encouraging the now-underdog Giants through a series of inspiring speeches and cinematic epiphanies. Long passages describing the Captain Nexus comics are lovingly detailed, showing a passion for the art of the superhero comic, but these moments drag the action to a crawl; in a visual medium, the dynamism depicted would complement the baseball tropes, but in prose, they detract. Dan and most characters appear to be white, though it's left unclear. Though uneven, stirringly hits every despairing low and thrilling high of a sports movie. (Fiction. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8--A story of comic books, baseball, and friendship. Dan and his best friend, Nate, love reading about the comic book adventures of Captain Nexus and the Zone. And the two boys are so close that they can tell by a tap of the nose what the other person is thinking--which comes in handy when Nate, a powerhouse pitcher on their baseball team, is pitching. When their team makes it to the playoffs, they are elated. Then Nate gets knocked out by a ball during practice, and a coma is induced to keep his brain from swelling. Dan is sure that this is the end of their championship hopes. Worse, he believes that he is responsible for the accident and that it is up to him to save Nate. Dan, Nate's brother Ollie, and Ollie's friend Courtney start trying to make that happen, with some surprising help from the comic book creator himself. In the end, readers learn it takes finding their own strength and goodness inside to make things happen. The baseball scenes from the tournament are engaging, and side characters are strong. Both baseball and comic book fans will enjoy this title. Fans of Mike Lupica and John Feinstein will also want to follow this engaging author. Dan is cued as white. VERDICT Recommended for all libraries, this book about sports, comics, and the power of friendship will be widely read.--Deanna McDaniel Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2154683 Coo (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kaela Noel

One young girl's determination to save the flock she calls family creates a lasting

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

impact on her community and in her heart.

978-0-06-295597-5 Greenwillow Books ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Abandoned in a parking lot as an infant, Coo was rescued and raised by a flock of pigeons. If readers are willing to suspend disbelief on this point, Coo's saga will reward them with a heartwarming story of finding family. Ever since Burr got his flock to fly Coo up to their dovecote, the little girl has never left the birds' rooftop home. That changes when Burr injures his wing, forcing Coo to descend and give him to the healer, an older woman named Tully, who feeds and cares for the birds. Coo's tatterdemalion appearance doesn't escape Tully's notice, and she takes in the girl. Noel's debut takes a unique approach to adjusting to a new culture and language (Coo initially only speaks in Yoda-like pigeon), without ignoring practical concerns, like Child Protective Services, adult responsibility, and anxiety. Coo is endearingly strange, and her perception of the human world is fresh and humorous. A subplot involving a city program to curb (i.e., poison) pigeon populations adds drama to what is otherwise an engrossing character study. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When Coo was a baby, she was abandoned in a railyard and carried to a rooftop by pigeons, and the human girl has lived in the dovecote on a New York roof with her flock ever since. Then one late fall day a particularly bold hawk, undeterred by Coo's size and shouts, nearly snatches Burr, the pigeon Coo most relies on to look out for her. Coo must venture off the roof to bring an injured Burr to the "healer," but she isn't prepared for how small the sky is when one stands on the ground or just how foreign human language and behavior is. Living with the healer, a retired postal worker named Tully, Coo offers amusing insights into the things humans take for granted from freezers where food is stored in "icy piles of snow behind a plastic door" to beds, "a human's nest." As Tully grows increasingly attached to Coo and worries they will be separated if she reports the girl to the authorities, Coo begins to worry about her flock's safety after she hears that some pigeons are being poisoned. Noel builds an immersive pigeon culture that includes prioritizing the flock over any individual bird and opinions about humans ("Not smart like birds, humans. Very sad, it is"). Coo's final desperate move to help her flock offers a movie-worthy climax to this excellent raised-in-the-wild (well, the wilds of urban rooftops) story that will appeal to a wide range of readers. ML

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Abandoned in Queens, a white human infant was rescued and raised by a flock of pigeons; now it's her turn to rescue them. Occupying an old dovecote on an abandoned factory roof, Coo's flock survives on a dumpster's stale bagels and doughnut crumbs, nesting on shredded newspaper and plastic bags. Coo earns her keep shooing predators away. When Burr, the flock member responsible for her survival, is savaged by a hawk, Coo, who speaks only pigeon (represented as pidgin English), descends to the ground for the first time in order to seek Tully, a human woman (likely also white) who feeds pigeons, restoring injured ones to health. Tully takes Burr and gives Coo her hat, scarf, and food, but she fails to persuade the girl--thin, dirty, clothed in plastic--to come too. Starvation threatens the flock when their dumpster disappears. Again, Coo braves the human world; this time, she lets Tully bring her home, where she finds Burr--alive and healed but permanently flightless. Learning English, Burr and a human friend help Coo adapt. When forces attacking city pigeons threaten her old flock, Coo mounts a desperate rescue. Despite a compelling setting and engaging characters, jarring contradictions hobble this debut. Dumpster diving and scavenging nest materials are detailed with grim realism; bird (and human) droppings are mentioned once. Fantasy's soft focus blurs the hard issues raised--child abandonment, the scourge and plight of urban birds--diminishing their impact. Lovers of animal fantasy may flock to it, but it's not likely to win over genre skeptics. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When a human baby is abandoned near their Queens, N.Y., dovecote, a flock of pigeons raises her as one of their own. Clothing her in plastic bags and feeding her from dumpsters, they name her Coo and teach her to speak pigeon, protect the birds, and fear humans. But when Coo's closest ally is injured, she must risk leaving the roof to find "healer" Tully, who feeds the pigeons and helps birds that are hurt. Though reluctant to trust the woman, Coo seeks her help again when dwindling winter food supply makes her a liability to the flock. Under Tully's care, Coo learns about the human world: its comforts, its language, and its dislike of pigeons. As Tully and Coo discover that someone seeks to hurt the birds, Coo must decide whether she belongs with Tully or the flock that raised her. The story conveys powerful messages about love and friendship, compassion and belonging. Sweetest of all is endearing Coo's steadfast affection and loyalty for those she loves; pigeons and humans alike. With this troop of quirky pigeons whose rooftop world is both strange and familiar, Noel has written a debut replete with hope, humor, and heart. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Katie Grimm, Don Congdon Assoc. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6—The unconventional tale of an abandoned child who is adopted and raised by a flock of New York City pigeons. Coo is left on the doorstep of a guard shack by her young mother. A pigeon squab named Burr discovers the human child in a mysterious bundle. Recognizing it as a helpless hatchling, he convinces his flock to swoop in and save her by transporting her to their rooftop dovecote. Fast-forward 10 years and readers are introduced to Coo's life on the roof. She has survived on doughnuts and bagels, and dresses in plastic bags and newspapers scavenged for her by her bird family. The first time she leaves the roof is to get help for her father-figure Burr when his wing is broken in an eagle attack. She is then thrown into a strange new world filled with humans and terrifying predators in the form of house cats. Coo must learn how to survive in the human world, which gives her the unique advantage to help her flock and all the pigeons of the city when grave danger threatens them all. Though the conceit of the novel pushes the limits of reality, readers will nevertheless shed a tear over the pigeons and root for Coo's success. VERDICT If readers can suspend disbelief that a baby could successfully be rescued and kept alive by a flock of pigeons, they'll find this a charming tale of a young girl raised in the wild being slowly reintroduced into society in the same vein as Tarzan.

Purchase for collections where series with anthropomorphized animals, like Erin Hunter's "Warriors" or W. Bruce Cameron's "A Dog's Purpose," are popular.—Sara Brunkhorst, Glenview Public Library, IL

#2374938 Cats of Silver Crescent (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kaela Noel

With her mother busy curating an art show, Elsby isn't thrilled to be spending a few weeks with her great-aunt Verity. Luckily, she has her notebook and a lush garden to sketch to help pass the time. But a visitor takes Elsby by surprise: a cat standing on its two hind legs and dressed like a sailor dashes across the garden and into the neighboring woods.

978-0-06-295600-2 Greenwillow Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist When her mother leaves for a work trip, Elsby finds herself in the care of her great aunt in a small Rhode Island town. While keeping busy with her art supplies in the dilapidated garden, she glimpses an incredibly odd sight: a cat on its hind legs, fully outfitted in tiny human clothes. A bewildered Elsby questions the sighting until the same cat taps on her window late at night, desiring a chat. There are actually four talking, walking, attired cats living in the empty residence next door, and they're in desperate need of human help to maintain their magical existence. It's up to Elsby to uncover the town's secrets and aid the fascinating felines before time runs out. Both eerie and enchanting, the story offers a slightly creepy slice of New England life with a feline focus. The atmospheric writing gives the proceedings a fanciful, friendly air, and Elsby is deeply relatable as she navigates new jealousies and responsibilities. Animal lovers will eagerly sink their claws into the marvelous, magical mystery.

#2222770 Shape of Thunder (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jasmine Warga

Cora hasn't spoken to her best friend, Quinn, in a year. Despite living next door to each other, they exist in separate worlds of grief. Cora is still grappling with the death of her beloved sister in a school shooting, and Quinn is carrying the guilt of what her brother did.

978-0-06-295667-5 Balzer & Bray ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Gun violence isn't a topic that has made its way into many middle-grade novels, though it is a reality that too many American children have had to face, if not directly then nonetheless intrusively when enduring lockdown drills. Warga, in her first book since her Newbery Honor-winning Other Words for Home (2018), wades into the trauma left by a high-school shooting. Seventh graders Cora Hamed and Quinn McCauley had been best friends since they were toddlers, but they haven't spoken since Cora's sister, Mabel, died. Quinn understands--it's her brother Parker's fault that Mabel's gone--but Quinn has an idea that can fix everything: time travel. The catch is she and Cora will have to work together to make it happen. Chapters alternate between Quinn and Cora's perspectives, gradually revealing the details of what happened the day of the shooting, as well as the complex and messy emotional process of grieving in a healthy way. Warga also touches upon hate crimes, white nationalism, and Cora's struggles with her Lebanese American identity. This will spark meaningful discussions. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Cora Hamed is studious and precise; Quinn McCauley is dreamy and imaginative. That balance has made them the best of friends--until Cora's sister Mabel is killed in a possibly anti-Muslim school shooting, and Quinn's brother Parker is the shooter, who also took his own life. Both girls are immersed in grief for a lost sibling, and Cora acts it out in seething rage against Quinn while Quinn is numbed by ostracism and intra-family guilt and blame, and, of course, neither tween has her best friend to pull her through. Quinn, however, hatches a plan that she's certain will appeal to Cora: they'll time travel back to avert the tragedy, with the tacit understanding that they'll restore their friendship as well. There's no science fiction at play here: both girls find distraction and purpose in researching and seeking out a wormhole and even make an attempt at opening one in a venerable old tree, but readers will realize before either of the girls do that the portal they need to reopen is between themselves. Warga limns a tale that downplays sensationalism while acknowledging the deep fear that many readers may carry regarding school shootings, and she concentrates her focus on healing the survivors rather than excavating specific motives for the perpetrator. An author's note and resources will be included in the bound book. EB COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine A dual-perspective novel follows two girls in the aftermath of a school shooting. Almost a year after her older sister was killed in that shooting by a classmate, twelve-year-old Cora still struggles to make sense of life without her. Cora also misses her now estranged best friend Quinn, whose brother, also dead, was the shooter. In alternating chapters, both girls deal with processing their grief and defining their roles at school and at home. Academically focused Cora tries to connect with her Quiz Bowl teammates and her Lebanese heritage, while Quinn latches on to the idea of traveling back in time to prevent the shooting from happening. Quinn persuades Cora to join her in trying to create a wormhole that will allow them to time-travel, but Cora continues keeping her distance until a minor crisis leads them to reconnect and gives both girls the chance to explain to their families what they need in order to make peace with their losses. Warga (Newbery honoree for Other Words for Home, rev. 7/19) skillfully develops unique voices for her narrators, and the novel's alternating-perspective structure works well. Emotions run high throughout the book without weighing down the plot, and the portrayal of middle-school life is utterly authentic. Warga tells a quiet story despite the dramatic events that led up to it, presenting a sad but not overwhelming narrative. Sarah Rettger (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Two best friends haven't spoken in the year since the tragedy that upended their lives. Cora Hamed lives with her Lebanese father and White American maternal grandmother; her mother left years earlier. She is mourning the loss of her older sister, Mabel, who died in a school shooting. Quinn McCauley, who is White, is coping with the emotional fallout of her brother Parker's life-changing actions. While Cora's family grieves openly and makes sure she sees a therapist regularly, Quinn's parents fight constantly over who is to blame for what Parker did. The story unfolds in chapters that alternate between the two girls' viewpoints; Quinn's chapters open with movingly honest letters to Parker. On Cora's 12th birthday, she finds a box on her front porch: Quinn believes she has discovered a way to fix everything, but she needs Cora's help. Eventually the two begin to work together on a time-travel project, seeking a wormhole that will allow them to travel back in time and prevent the shooting. Throughout, Quinn struggles with her guilt and a secret she's keeping while Cora struggles with her last interaction with Mabel, wondering whether she can still be friends with Quinn, and understanding the Lebanese heritage she knows relatively little about but that shapes people's perceptions of her. Both characters are well developed, and Warga skillfully handles both their delicate, emotional friendship and larger subjects of grief and gun violence. Powerful and emotionally complex. (author's note, resources) (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly The longtime friendship of two 12-year-olds; Cora Hamed, who is of Lebanese descent, and Quinn McCauley, who is white; is shattered when Quinn's older brother, having become immersed in white supremacy and misogyny, carries out a school shooting that results in his death and that of Cora's older sister. Though the friends have been close since age two, Cora's grief, explored in therapy, is layered with anger at Quinn over the events. Quinn, meanwhile, is knotted with guilt over her perceived failure to stop her sibling, conveyed through letters she writes to him. When Quinn, an artist who sometimes stutters, starts researching the possibilities of time travel for changing past occurrences, she clutches onto it as a way to "fix everything" and persuades science-minded Cora to join her. Short chapters alternate the girls' voices, tracing each one's struggles to accept her loss alongside the slow, one-step-forward, two-steps-back rebuilding of their bond. The story builds steadily toward a moving conclusion; Warga's (Other Words for Home) lyrical language and credible rendering of both middle school life and of the tensions of two families coping differently with personal devastation make for a perceptive, sensitively told novel about the effects of gun violence. Ages 8: 12. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–8—Twelve-year-old Cora's older sister, Mabel, was killed in a school shooting; Cora's best friend Quinn's older brother was the shooter. Told in alternating perspectives, this novel chronicles Cora and Quinn's desperate attempt to unlock the secret of time travel and undo the event that shattered their friendship. The novel confronts readers with devastating questions about school shootings, access to firearms, Islamophobia, and the radicalization of white teenage boys via web forums. Quinn, who is white, is plagued with persistent guilt at the signs she noticed, like Parker calling her a "stupid female" and Cora's father a "nasty foreigner." Cora, whose father is a Lebanese immigrant, wants to learn more about her heritage but fears the way that being Muslim made Mabel a target. Warga's characters are full, complex figures who deal with Quiz Bowl practice and first crushes alongside therapy sessions and panic attacks during lockdown drills. This sensitive title holds space for the grief and pain of all of the characters, whether they are related to the shooter or his victims. VERDICT With taut pacing, nuanced characters, and compassionate depictions of grief and trauma, Warga's novel is both timely and transcendent; a must-purchase for all collections.—Molly Saunders, Manatee County P.L., Bradenton, FL

#2349532 Treasure Island: Runaway Gold (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jewell Parker Rhodes

Zane is itching for an adventure that will take him away from his family's boarding house in Rockaway, Queens. So when he is entrusted with a real treasure map, leading to a spot somewhere in Manhattan, Zane wastes no time in riding the ferry over to the city to start the search with his friends Kiko and Jack and his dog, Hip-Hop.

978-0-06-299835-4 Quill Tree Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist "Yeah, I know," young narrator Zane writes. "Pirate treasure in Rockaway? Queens? Ridiculous." But aarrgh, mateys, there do be a trove of long-lost loot in this modern-day version of the Robert Louis Stevenson yarn! Rhodes doesn't so much rewrite the classic as borrow elements from it wholesale—from the fatal "Black Spot" and a treasure map passed to Zane by a salty old sea captain at his mom's boarding house to a gang of (skateboarding) pirates led by a smooth talking hustler named "John," who is kitted out with dreads, a parrot named "Captain Flint," and a ring of (wink, wink) silver. That map, it turns out, leads not only to rousing "island" adventures aplenty but also to eye-opening revelations about the history of enslaved and free African Americans in New York as Zane; his trusty terrier, Hip-Hop; and loyal friend Kiko Kitaji engage in a breathless round of chases, ambushes, captures, and betrayals in their search for the glittering prize. Along with awesome skateboarding exploits, the author punctuates her protagonist's choppy, fast-break narrative with appropriately dramatic, dark-toned illustrations of figures in tense stances against photographic backgrounds. The whirl of conflicting loyalties, quick pacing, acts of courage and cowardice, pirates, and high stakes create the same rich, compelling mix that makes the original such a timeless read.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews a classic centering a majority Black cast, a boy's search for riches leads him to lesser-known parts of American history. After his father's untimely death, Zane's mother takes in boarders to make ends meet. Zane has mixed feelings about one of them, the enigmatic "Captain Maddie of the Turbulent Underground Sea," and her strange ramblings and warnings. But as her predictions materialize, their bond cements. What about her instructions to "sail on that board of yours. Find the treasure"—is there really treasure waiting to be found? Zane's friends Kiko (who is Japanese and Black and from a prosperous home) and Jack (whose trucker father is an abusive alcoholic), plus Zane's feisty pup, Hip-Hop, set off to explore Manhattan, with the kids on their skateboards. Guided by an old, riddle-filled map, they visit several sites of historical events with echoes of the past. But they're not the only ones interested in treasure, and they don't know whom they can trust. Whether or not readers are familiar with Robert Louis Stevenson's original, they'll be drawn into this accessible, action-packed adventure, full of mysteries, pirates, skateboard drama, and a whole new underground world. The artful, verse-like sentence structures intentionally and effectively evoke the "resonance and rhythm of the African American oral tradition." Select scenes are represented with appealing full-page illustrations. Daringly honors old heroes, stunningly integrating past and present with pitch-perfect success. (skateboarding trick glossary, historical note) (Adventure. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Following his father's death, Black middle schooler Zane's mother must take in several boarders; "all of them old, smelling of Vicks VapoRub and mothballs"; to afford their Queens home. But the bills still pile up despite the extra income, and Zane worries that he and his mother will be evicted. One of the boarders, elderly Captain Maddie, who claims she has a hidden treasure, urges Zane to protect her hoard before dying suddenly. In her room, Zane finds an old treasure map of Manhattan containing mysterious clues, and Zane; accompanied by his two best friends and his dog Hip-Hop; subsequently embarks on an epic treasure hunt. While attempting to evade a group of skateboarders intent on stealing the map and claiming the treasure for themselves, Zane and company encounter an enigmatic man named John who offers to help piece together the clues. As the mission grows more treacherous, Zane must determine whom to trust. In this contemporary spin on Robert Louis Stevenson's Treasure Island, Rhodes (Paradise on Fire) employs lush descriptive language and engaging dialogue teeming with historical facts, and crafts a sincere protagonist whose compassion for others radiates from the pages of this high-octane romp. Ages 10: up. Agent: Michael Bourret. Dystel, Goderich & Bourret. (Oct.)

#2264075 Supervillain's Guide to Being a Fat Kid (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Matt Wallace

Max wishes he could fight back, but he doesn't want to hurt Johnny . . . just make him feel the way Max feels. In desperation, Max writes to the only person he thinks will understand: imprisoned supervillain Master Plan, a "gentleman of size." To his surprise, Master Plan wants to help! He knows what it's like growing up with everyone only thinking of you as the "fat kid," and suggests a way for Max to get even with Johnny Pro, and change how the other kids at school see them both.

978-0-06-300803-8 Katherine Tegen Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A fat boy battles bullies in a tale full of villains, heroes, bullies, and good guys. Maxwell Tercero is 11 and in his first year of middle school--where he finds that, just like elementary school, things are no fun for a fat kid. He is mercilessly and cruelly bullied by older students, led by popular eighth grade athlete Johnny "Johnny Pro" Properzi, and while Max doesn't necessarily want to hurt Johnny, he does want to give him a sense of the pain he's causing. Max eventually reaches out to incarcerated supervillain Maximo "Master Plan" Marconius III, who is also fat and who agrees to help Max change his life, inside and out. Master Plan helps Max along his own journey to body positivity, as well as toward victory over the bullies, with some very good advice. However, this help does not come without strings attached, and things rapidly spin out of control for Max, his friends, and others. Body positivity is usually the province of books about girls, so it is refreshing to see the focus here on a boy. Master Plan understands what it's like to be dismissed as the fat kid, and his advice is so good it is a shame that he is writing from prison. Main characters read as White. An exciting romp full of good advice and featuring a fun protagonist. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old baking enthusiast Max Tercero, who is fat and reads as white, hopes that his first year at Captain Clobbertime Memorial Middle School will offer a respite from being bullied for his size. But when he becomes the favorite target of school water polo captain Johnny "Johnny Pro" Properzi, he knows that nothing has changed. Desperate, Max seeks advice from Maximo "Master Plan" Marconius III, an incarcerated supervillain and fellow "gentleman of size and intellect," who once took on environmentally conscious escapades. Receiving Master Plan's covert email guidance, Max begins gaining confidence and readying to take down Johnny Pro by using Johnny Pro's increasingly aggressive behavior against him, all while navigating the anxieties of middle school, including the locker room and new and changing friendships. An epistolary conceit is well deployed here, creating a safe space for Max to voice his concerns and gain needed empathy and wisdom from an understanding (if not necessarily trustworthy) adult. Confronting the assumption that physical appearance correlates to morality or worth and reinforcing the idea that individual choices and actions show a person's true self, Wallace (Bump) writes a triumphant arc of self-acceptance that extends to developing personal ethics and boundaries. Ages 8: 12. Agent: DongWon Song, Howard Morhaim Literary.(Jan.)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness The Supervillain's Guide to Being a Fat Kid by Matt Wallace (Bump) is heartfelt, reassuring and gracefully humorous, and spotlights the benefits of body positivity via a clever protagonist desperate to assert his worth. Eleven-year-old Max is bullied for being fat. He won't tell teachers ("what they think is bullying is a lot different from what I think it is") or his mom (her getting sad won't help him) so he writes to his hero, a fat supervillain named Master Plan, asking for advice. "Other kids don't see me the way I see me," shares Max, who wants his classmates to give him a chance. What ensues is a dynamic mentor-apprentice relationship that equips Max with the faculty to ward off his nemesis and befriend his crush. As his bullies' attentions drift away, his fear subsides. But soon, he's not sure that being left alone is a big enough goal. Max's authentic voice shows the difficulties victims of bullying endure--he avoids normal activities (changing for PE class, looking in mirrors) and copes by cooking because it "shut[s] his brain off"--and his struggles ("anything cool is never in my size") acknowledge social discrimination against fat people. Luckily, Master Plan is there to correct harmful stereotypes, like "people of size are weaker or less intelligent" than their thinner peers. This fun, well-paced and smartly structured middle-grade novel is packed with insightful commentary on how simply existing when different can be a challenge. Wallace exemplifies how, with the necessary support system, tools and motivation, kids can regain or maintain self-esteem when allowed to harness their individuality. COPYRIGHT(2022) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2288355 You Only Live Once, David Bravo (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Mark Oshiro

Middle school is the worst, especially for David Bravo. He doesn't have a single class with his best (and only) friend, Antoine. After he injures Antoine in a cross-country accident, he just wishes he could do it all over. He doesn't expect his wish to summon a talking, shapeshifting, annoying dog, Fea, who claims that a choice in David's past did set him on the wrong timeline, and she can take him back to fix it.

978-0-06-300815-1 HarperCollins Publishers ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 In a determined exploration of intersectional identities and self-understanding, seventh-grader David grabs the chance to travel back in time--not only in hopes of repairing a rift in a closer-than-ordinary friendship with classmate Antoine, but to learn more about his birth parents. Unfortunately, Juanita, his guide, is a spirit of the dead with annoying habits and unfinished business of her own, and David's repeated efforts to fix things only seems to make them worse. Oshiro plays much of this as comedy, but it's David's growing frustration and confusion that will stand out most sharply for readers--that, and perhaps how lucky he is both in his loving adoptive parents (one Japanese American, the other of Mexican and Brazilian descent), who gladly pitch in to help him investigate his Latinx background and the circumstances of his closed adoption, and in steady Antoine. It's David's belated understanding that real change is based not on past choices but future ones that fuels a memorably heady sense of possibility at the upbeat close. A fresh, strong workout for the well-used Groundhog Day premise. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books for chronically indecisive David Bravo, and with his best friend Antoine Harris now in at her class, David's anxiety quickly gets the better of him. He flubs a presentation about his family history, unnerved by questions he can't answer about his closed adoption, and then a bad batch of cafeteria spinach makes him so woozy he trips Antoine during their pivotal cross-country placement run. David just wants a do-over, and that's exactly what Fea, a chaotic, shapeshifting entity working for the Powers That Be, grants him. But David's do-over (and then repeat do-overs) lead to unintended consequences across timelines, leaving him and Fea to navigate identity, regret, and love as they fix both the present and the future. Dates and times at the start of each chapter helpfully keep readers largely oriented across the timeline jumps, as Fea drops David into new timelines without context for what has been altered based on the things he changed. Oshiro maintains their eye for intentional, thoughtful diversity among David's classmates and family in the Riverside, California, setting, and it's especially welcome to see how keen David's parents are to help their son navigate his identity, including his Latinx heritage and his sexuality. David believably doesn't put a label on his growing feelings for Antoine, but Oshiro includes a decades-old queer love story that develops Fea beyond her role as the funny, if sometimes grating, sidekick. Multiple ending twists provide feel-good closure to all involved, leaving David with a newfound appreciation of himself and the people he loves. AMM COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews David Bravo is having the worst day ever when a time-traveling dog shows up and offers him a chance to do it all over. Tuesday, Sept. 12, truly takes the cake as the most awful day of 11-year-old David's entire life. It starts with him anxiously fumbling through his first middle school presentation about his heritage: He has a Brazilian and Mexican American father and a Japanese American mother from Hawaii, and he has difficulty explaining that he is adopted. This is followed by an embarrassing food-poisoning incident that ends with David's causing an accident that hurts his best friend Antoine's ankle during cross-country practice. His wish to redo everything is granted by the arrival of Fea, a talking, shape-shifting dog who says her new mission is to help David repair his timestream. His first thought is to fix things for Antoine, worried their friendship may be on the line, but when that doesn't help, David and Fea end up going back and forth in time trying to make things right. This funny, brave, charming novel is packed full of delights. The plot goes to utterly unexpected and beautiful places in a journey about heritage, culture, choice, and, above all, love and connection. David learns to navigate the many aspects of his identity--his anxiety, his budding romantic feelings for Antoine, and his background as a Latinx by birth--and brings the entire well-developed, diverse cast of characters together while doing so. A joyful, surprising, time-traveling delight. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In California, an 11-year-old given the chance for a redo makes mistakes over; and over; again in a joyful novel with a pick-your-path vibe. For David Bravo, a transracial adoptee of Latinx descent, the first week of middle school is riddled with mistakes and disappointments: he gets food poisoning from hot-lunch spinach, accidentally hurts his closest friend during cross-country, and is bullied about his adoption during a presentation on family heritage. The solution to his do-over desires shows up at his back door: a magical hairless hound, Fea, who communicates telepathically and can send him into the body of his past self. For David, it's the perfect way to fix his relationship with his best friend; for Fea, it's another step toward finishing her job as a "non-corporeal timeline guide." As Fea and David endeavor to repair his timeline, it rapidly becomes apparent that fixing small mistakes is not what destiny has in store. Through turns both lighthearted and deeply moving, Oshiro (The Insiders) identifies how day-to-day choices ("Do I quickly make a decision before desks are occupied? Oh, absolutely not") can have long-term effects in this novel of self-discovery that reminds readers: "The future is unwritten.... That's always up to you." Ages 8: 12. Agent: DongWon Song, Howard Morhaim Literary. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—After a disastrous start to middle school, a talking dog offers David Bravo the chance to go back in time to fix the moment where it all went wrong—if only David could pinpoint where that moment was. Was it the school assignment about his culture and where he comes from? Or an unfortunate food poisoning incident that ruins his best friend's chance at making varsity cross-country? David keeps reliving certain moments up and down his time line, but instead of fixing things, he just keeps making them worse. Along the way, David must confront his feelings about his identity as a transracial adoptee (his mom is Japanese American and his dad is Mexican-Brazilian-American, his biological parents were Latinx, but the adoption was closed) and the true nature of his feelings for his best friend Antoine. Through his discussions with Fea, his "non-corporeal time line guide" (who, in addition to appearing as a dog, also shows up as a mosquito, giraffe, and several other animals to great comedic effect) and her backstory, he learns that sometimes it's not past decisions, but future ones that matter most. VERDICT A funny and unexpected twist on the time loop novel with moving and memorable results.—Jennifer Rothschild

#2256729 Gussy (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jimmy Cajoleas

Being a village Protector is a big job, even if Grandpa Widow makes it look easy. On her very first night in charge, a mysterious newcomer arrives in search of shelter, forcing Gussy to break the number one rule of being a Protector: When the sun goes down, keep the gates shut.

978-0-06-300877-9 Quill Tree Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A young ritualist with an outsize sense of duty attempts to hold her own in Cajoleas's (Minor Prophets) rambling frontier fantasy. For the residents of an unnamed desert outpost within Darkling Valley, all that keeps them safe from lurking supernatural force The Great Doom are Grandpa Widow and orphaned protegee Gustavina Mithridates Pearl; Gussy; two protectors tasked with performing granular daily Rites meant to ward off infection. When Grandpa Widow is summoned by the powerful Council of Protectors, Gussy is charged with shielding the town on her own, a task that becomes exponentially more precarious after she in a sympathetic moment that directly violates a Rite; opens the town gates after dark, welcoming a lone girl in during a terrible desert storm. Gussy's belief structure and colloquial narration dominate the novel's languid first act. Though secondary characters lack the detail of Gussy's daily rituals, Cajoleas gracefully builds to a rousing climax, portrayed alongside a refreshingly positive message of grit, gumption, and community. All characters are cued as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jessica Regel, Foundry Media. (Nov.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Part fantasy, part dystopian tale, this is a unique, genre-bending story of friendship, trust, and found families. Gussy is a determined, independent girl who is in training as the protector of her village out in the desert. The Great Doom has been fought off by her Grandpa Widow for many years, so when he suddenly gets called away, Gussy is left to defend the town against this dark and magical force. The biggest rule of them all is not to open the gate after dark, so when Gussy does (to save a life), she has to face the repercussions. Gussy's strong personality and unwavering commitment to her grandfather, against common sense, may turn off some readers. There are also points in the story where the characters become possessed by the Great Doom, which switches this story from fantasy and dystopian to pure horror, with humans crawling on top of the ceiling and hissing. Even with repetitive plot points, the story moves along quicker in the second half, and there is a happily ever after for all the characters that will leave readers satisfied. VERDICT Fans of fantasy and horror may enjoy this unique tale, but some shortcomings may cause it to fall flat for others.—Erin Decker, Discovery Intermediate School, Altamonte Springs, FL

#2196160 Clues to the Universe (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Christina Li

Benjamin "Benji" Burns doesn't like science, but he can't get enough of Spacebound, his favorite comic book series. When he finds a sketch that suggests his dad created the comics, he's thrilled. Too bad his dad walked out on the family years ago and Benji has no way of contacting him.

978-0-06-300888-5 Quill Tree Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist two disparate seventh graders find themselves pulled into each other's orbit. Ro, a science/space fanatic and excellent student, is adjusting to a new school and life without her recently deceased father. Benji, a talented artist but disinterested pupil, is preoccupied with a series of comics written by the father he never knew. A chance mix-up sparks a careful confidence between the two quiet kids, and their rapport grows to a place where they reveal their secrets: Ro plans to finish an enormous rocket she'd been constructing with her dad, and Benji seeks to reunite with his father. The pair join forces to see things through, all while navigating the maze of middle school. This sweet story tackles big subjects--bereavement, growing up in a mixed-race family, familial estrangement--with a light touch, grounding the quirky characters in warmth and humor. It's impossible not to root for Ro and Benji as they discover the fun of imperfection, the wisdom that comes with failure, and the joy to be found in unexpected friendships. COPYRIGHT(2020) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books After his best friend moved away, Benji has no one with whom to talk comics, particularly Spacebound, a series created by his out-of-contact father. A serendipitous mixup creates an avenue for a friendship with a brilliant new student, Ro, whose father was killed by a drunk driver. The two combine forces on their individual goals: Benji wants to reunite with the father he hasn't seen since he was four; and Ro wants to finish the rocket she had been building with her father and enter the regional science fair (and launch his belongings into space). Chapters alternate narration between Benji and Ro, making seamless shifts in points of view in this story set in the space-shuttle era of the early 1980s. While Ro's intelligence is always on display, Benji's talent for drawing has to be coaxed into the spotlight (and ultimately admired by his father). There's a clever echo in the plot of Spacebound itself, which involves the heroine's finding her father, and it's plausible that in his yearning Benji takes this as a sign to find his own dad. Benji's quiet hopefulness coupled with Ro's reasoning skills make this novel's premise believable, right down to the way each discovers and navigates their faults. Interestingly, the book ends as it starts, with a friend moving, but this time the protagonists know that connection is not lost with distance. QB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An aspiring scientist and a budding artist become friends and help each other with dream projects. Unfolding in mid-1980s Sacramento, California, this story stars 12-year-olds Rosalind and Benjamin as first-person narrators in alternating chapters. Ro's father, a fellow space buff, was killed by a drunk driver; the rocket they were working on together lies unfinished in her closet. As for Benji, not only has his best friend, Amir, moved away, but the comic book holding the clue for locating his dad is also missing. Along with their profound personal losses, the protagonists share a fixation with the universe's intriguing potential: Ro decides to complete the rocket and hopes to launch mementos of her father into outer space while Benji's conviction that aliens and UFOs are real compels his imagination and creativity as an artist. An accident in science class triggers a chain of events forcing Benji and Ro, who is new to the school, to interact and unintentionally learn each other's secrets. They resolve to find Benji's dad--a famous comic-book artist--and partner to finish Ro's rocket for the science fair. Together, they overcome technical, scheduling, and geographical challenges. Readers will be drawn in by amusing and fantastical elements in the comic book theme, high emotional stakes that arouse sympathy, and well-drawn character development as the protagonists navigate life lessons around grief, patience, self-advocacy, and standing up for others. Ro is biracial (Chinese/White); Benji is White. Charming, poignant, and thoughtfully woven. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Debut author Li explores themes of bullying and cultural identity, volleying between two seventh grade narrators who, on the first day of school in 1984 Sacramento, mistakenly switch folders in science class. Budding scientist Ro, who is "exactly half Chinese, a quarter Scottish, and a quarter Irish," lives with her mother and dreams of sending a rocket to space to honor her late father. Benji, a talented white artist who's not fond of school, is obsessed with comics series Spacebound, which he's convinced is authored by his absentee father, whom he thinks is communicating with him through the story. After the swapped folders lead to a friendly bond, the pair strike a deal: Ro will help find Benji's dad if Benji helps Ro build a science fair: winning rocket. But with a bully in their class determined to thwart them both and their plan hitting roadblocks, their friendship suddenly seems anything but certain. Though the plot unfolds slowly into a predictable arc, alternating first-person chapters provide insight into each character's fears, worries, and hopes, creating two compelling, relatable protagonists who recognize the strengths in their differences and help each other forge new paths forward. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jessica Regel, Foundry Literary. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Twelve-year-olds Ro and Benji are both having a rough start to the school year. Ro's father recently died, and her mother can no longer afford her private school tuition. Transferring to a school where she knows no one proves difficult, and overhearing conversations of students trying to guess her biracial ethnicity (she is white and Chinese) is painful. Benji, who is white, is lonely and aimless because his best friend, Amir, moved across the country. When Ro and Benji begin working on a science fair project together, an unlikely friendship is formed. While the two are very different in terms of personality and interests, they bond over the shared experience of not having a father. The combination of Ro's aptitude for science and logic and Benji's artistic talents and laid-back personality results in a good team. Soon the two are working on more than a science fair project. They are helping each other fulfill a dream that will bring them closer to their absent fathers—building the rocket Ro and her dad were going to work on together and tracking down Benji's comic book creator father. Since the story is set in the 1980s, before use of the internet was widespread, finding Benji's father is no easy task. The novel feels contemporary, so the setting may be somewhat confusing for readers who don't understand the technological limitations. Ro and Benji alternate narration, which helps the reader see their evolving perspectives of each other and provides a mechanism for telling their backstories. The book would have benefited from a stronger distinction between the two voices, though a heading at the beginning of each chapter indicates which character is speaking. It is refreshing to see a strong friendship between female and male characters depicted in a middle grade novel; it's the authenticity of this relationship that drives the heart of the story. VERDICT The message of resilience, courage, and friendship will resonate widely with young readers. Themes touched on include grief, fears, bullying, and identity, making the work highly discussable and a good candidate for classroom use.—Juliet Morefield, Multnomah Cty. Lib., Portland, OR

#2323585 Ruby Lost and Found (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Christina Li

Thanks to her Ye-Ye's epic scavenger hunts, Ruby Chu knows San Francisco like the back of her hand. But when he dies, she feels lost. She finds herself working with Liam, who might not be as annoying as he seems, to help save a historic Chinatown bakery that's being priced out of the neighborhood. Alongside Nai-Nai, who is keeping a secret that threatens to change everything, Ruby retraces Ye-Ye's scavenger hunt maps in an attempt to find a way out of her grief--and maybe even find herself.

978-0-06-300893-9 Quill Tree Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grieving for her beloved grandfather, who died in January, 13-year-old Ruby also misses her two best friends (one moved from San Francisco to New York City, the other to the girls' soccer table in the lunchroom). Still, in retrospect, getting caught ditching school during lunchtime just weeks before summer vacation wasn't smart, as her parents grounded her until summer, which she must spend mainly with Nai-Nai, her grandmother, who lives nearby in Chinatown. Gradually, she begins to enjoy being with Nai-Nai and her friends at a nearby senior center and getting to know a classmate who volunteers there. Ruby's concerns about Nai-Nai's memory escalate when her grandmother gets lost close to home. Eventually, Ruby's parents begin to readjust their thinking. Reflecting Li's knowledge of Chinese American immigrant culture, Ruby's first-person narrative is particularly engaging when she begins retracing her steps from her grandfather's legendary scavenger hunts and, with her grandmother, shares a moment of healing and unity with the past. Vividly imagined characters, relationships, and family dynamics are at the heart of this involving novel, in which building tension causes troubles that seem to dissipate but then lead to a crisis that cannot be ignored. A moving, intergenerational story with a narrator who becomes increasingly aware of others.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Thirteen-year-old Ruby Chu is grieving the death of Ye-Ye, her paternal grandfather, who would devise elaborate scavenger hunts around San Francisco's Chinatown for her. Ruby has also lost her best friends Mia, who moved away, and Naomi, who has become closer with her soccer teammates. Even her sister, Viv, is moving across the country for college at the end of the summer. When Ruby gets caught ditching school, her parents send her off to Nai-Nai's house for the summer. She spends the weekdays with her grandmother, visiting her friends ("a bunch of old Chinese ladies") at the senior center, making tea, and watching Chinese dramas. An otherwise boring summer is interrupted when a newcomer, Liam, also no stranger to grief, appears at the senior center with his Maa-Maa. Summer slowly rolls on, Nai-Nai begins exhibiting signs of dementia, and Ye-Ye's favorite bakery, a staple of Chinatown, threatens to close due to development. What begins as an isolating and overwhelming journey through grief turns hopeful as Ruby makes new friends, opens up to the people she loves most, and learns that she doesn't have to navigate change alone. Gabi Kim Huesca(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Big feelings are uncomfortable but to be expected in this story of finding joy and community amid change and loss. With her best friend, Mia Ortega-Anderson, moving across the country to New York, Chinese American Ruby Chu was already afraid of seventh grade, but nothing prepared her for another close friend drifting away and the unexpected death of her beloved paternal grandfather. After Ruby's caught ditching school, her parents decide she'll spend summer weekdays with Nai-Nai, her paternal grandmother. At first reluctant to stay somewhere her grandfather is noticeably absent, Ruby's walls lower as she and Nai-Nai speak openly about their grief. As Ruby begins to open up and find a comfortable routine, more big changes threaten her fragile sense of safety. When a family friend's bakery is poised for closure, Ruby and classmate Liam Yeung set out to save it. The San Francisco Chinatown community is realistically presented: Mandarin and Cantonese are spoken, not every older adult is an immigrant, and a variety of professions and experiences are portrayed. It's unclear if impulsive, restless Ruby, who struggles in school, is neurodiverse or just stands out compared to the rest of her driven, focused family. Readers will identify with Ruby's roller coaster of emotions amid the challenges of growing up: loved ones leaving, friendships waning, and fitting into the world authentically. Ruby is incredibly self-aware, and her emotions are given space and validity without excusing harm done. Empathetic and emotionally intelligent. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In an affecting contemporary novel from Li (Clues to the Universe), Chinese American Ruby Chu, 13, struggles to process the death of her beloved paternal grandfather, Ye-Ye; her sister's impending departure for college; and the splintering of her friend group. After Ruby gets in trouble for ditching school, her parents decide that she will spend summer weekdays and weeknights with her Nai-Nai, who lives near San Francisco's Chinatown. Despite some initial awkwardness, Ruby finds comfort and stability in the routine of visiting Nai-Nai's friends at the senior recreation center, where she also befriends schoolmate Liam Yeung. But the news that May's Bakery; a Chinatown institution as well as a beloved spot for Ruby and Ye-Ye; may sell to developers, and Nai-Nai's worsening memory, threaten Ruby's fragile peace. Interspersing the present-day narrative with past scenes of Ruby and Ye-Ye's time together, Li balances youthful optimism as Ruby and Liam seek to save the bakery with harder realities as Ruby contends with her guilt about Ye-Ye's death and her own grief. It's an economically told, emotionally driven story that deftly incorporates multiple strands; around community care, gentrification, and the messy parts of familial change; while representing an inclusive Cantonese- and Mandarin-speaking Chinatown community. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jessica Regel, Helm Literary. (May)

#222885 Da Vinci's Cat (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Catherine Gilbert Murdock

Federico doesn't mind being a political hostage of the Pope, especially now that he has a cat as a friend. But he must admit that a kitten walking into a wardrobe and returning full-grown a moment later is quite odd. Even stranger is the man named Herbert, apparently an art collector from the future, who emerges from the wardrobe the next night.

978-0-06-301525-8 Greenwillow Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly As a political hostage of Pope Julius II, 11-year-old Federico Gonzaga is witness to the historic rivalry between artists Raphael and Michelangelo as the latter works on the Sistine Chapel ceiling. Federico's pampered life is opulent but lonely, until he discovers a cat in an enigmatic closet designed by Leonardo da Vinci. The cat's mysterious movements link him to only child Bee, an intrepid 21st-century Brooklynite who discovers a drawing of herself; purportedly by Raphael; in the home of elderly neighbor Miss Bother, who's struggling to pay her bills. Using the wardrobe to travel to 16th-century Rome, Bee seeks a variation on the sketch's creation, this time with a signature, to ensure that its sale in the present day can provide for Miss Bother. Though the plot holds few surprises, Murdock (The Book of Boy) crafts an arresting blend of speculative time travel and art mystery with a sumptuously imagined Renaissance Italy setting filled with evocative sensory details. The unlikely pairing of cosseted Federico and bold Bee, both cued as white, provides comedic moments, and historical figures, such as the volatile Michelangelo and the suave Raphael, are vividly rendered. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jill Grinberg, Jill Grinberg Literary. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—Newbery Honor winner Murdoch's middle grade novel is an engaging adventure story with a lot of time traveling. Bee and Frederico are two children from different time periods—Frederico is from 16th-century Rome, while Bee lives in current-day New Jersey. They are brought together through a mysterious magical wardrobe and an adventurous time-traveling cat. Their quest is to rewrite the past to save the future, and the cat shows them the way, revealing how to use a time machine. Murdoch will captivate readers with her knowledge of medieval Europe and the city of Rome, and her vivid depictions of each character's distinct lifestyles. Readers may be surprised by the contrasts between Bee's and Frederico's perceptions of gender roles and certain cultural expectations. As a modern-day girl, Bee's appearance and behaviors initially strike Frederico as foreign—but Frederico soon learns that girls can be just as empowered and outspoken as boys, and that it is a good thing. Character's skin tones are not described. VERDICT This time-travelling friendship book will be a hit for fans of C.S. Lewis's The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe and Lloyd Alexander's Time Cat.—Lisa Gieskes, Richland County P.L., Columbia, SC

#2287770 Stars Did Wander Darkling (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Colin Meloy

Maybe Archie Coomes has been watching too many horror movies. He keeps telling himself that this is Seaham, a sleepy seaside town where nothing ever happens. Or at least nothing did, until his dad's construction company opened up the cliff beneath the old-some say cursed-Langdon place. Soon, though, he and his friends can't deny it: more and more of the adults in town are acting strangely. An ancient, long-buried evil has been unleashed upon the community, and it's up to the kids to stop it before it's too late.

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

978-0-06-301551-7 Balzer & Bray ©2022 6-1/4 x 8 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 13.0

Reviews by: Booklist With a brush of nostalgia, Meloy takes readers to 1980s Oregon, where a picturesque town is about to unearth something sinister. A construction project, led by 13-year-old Archie's father, grinds to a halt after digging reveals a destabilizing cave beneath the site. This discovery coincides with a surge in unusual occurrences around town and strange behavior among the adults, noticed primarily by the ragtag foursome at the novel's heart. A general sense of unease is elevated when Archie and his friends (Athena, Chris, and Oliver) sneak to the construction site for a peek at the cave and Oliver falls into a sort of epileptic fit. Meloy expertly teases out the suspense to foster an atmosphere of otherworldly mystery, while concretely establishing the story's sense of time and place. Delectable details stud the narrative with an '80s sensibility—a video store, a character wearing Jams, myriad music references—as the kids pedal their bikes madly to confront the increasingly dangerous threat besetting their home. Written for his young self, whose only horror option was Stephen King, Meloy delivers a solid middle-grade horror story with authentic chills and splashes of gore. The friendship between the four main characters drives it all, much like in Stranger Things and Stand by Me, ensuring readers' hearts are engaged as much as their adrenaline.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this aesthetically eerie novel by Meloy (The Whiz Mob and the Grenadine Kid), set in 1987 Oregon, it's up to a quartet of friends to save their small seaside town when a real estate development awakens a long-buried evil. The plan was to build a resort in place of the long-vacant Langdon House, a Victorian-era legacy of Seaham's founding family; until excavation reveals the nearby promontory to be permeated with holes. Thirteen-year-old Archie Coomes, whose father owns the construction company, is looking forward to a fun summer with friends Athena, Chris, and Oliver, including a much anticipated camping trip. But odd occurrences soon arise: an elderly woman mutters "They shoulda left it hid," local adults act strangely out of character, and Oliver's "unexplained episodes" turn into increasingly vivid visions. All that coupled with the arrival of three poetry-spouting newcomers in old-fashioned suits, and the friends find themselves delving into the town's history and the true nature of the mounting threat. Evoking 1980s adventures such as The Goonies, and referencing horror flicks of various eras via the town's resident sage; owner of a Betamax-only video store; Meloy constructs an oddly ambiguous menace within a nostalgic summertime adventure involving cinematic chase sequences, uncanny occurrences, and psychological unease. Characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Steven Malk, Writers House. (Sept.)

#2231233 Halloween Moon (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joseph Fink

Esther Gold loves Halloween more than anything in the world. So, she is determined to go trick-or-treating again this year despite the fact that her parents think she is officially too old. Esther has it all planned out, from her costume to her candy-collecting strategy. But when the night rolls around, something feels off.

978-0-06-302097-9 Quill Tree Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist You're never too old to go trick-or-treating. That's a core belief for 13-year-old Esther Gold, the main character of this middle-grade debut from Fink, creator of the popular podcast Welcome to Nightvale. Esther's practically obsessed with Halloween—it was the theme of her bat mitzvah, after all—but her parents think she is too old for trick-or-treating. And when she sneaks out with her best friend, Augustfn, anyway, things do not go as planned. They encounter an eerie Halloween moon and a queen who can put everyone in their neighborhood to sleep, except for a dentist and the school bully. Fink folds in Esther's fear of change for some nice emotional grounding, but being trapped in a dream forever with no possibility of ever growing up is even scarier. There's plenty of humor to complement the creepy atmosphere, with monsters wearing monster costumes, scary ice cream truck drivers, and a dentist who wasn't always a dentist. Kids captivated by Katherine Arden's Small Spaces (2018) will find a similar blend of chilling tales, hair-raising adventures, and deeper themes here.

#2284236 Fenris and Mott (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Greg Van Eekhout

Mott knows how important it is to keep a promise. So when she finds a puppy abandoned in a recycling bin and promises to keep him safe, she is ready to do everything she can to protect him. What she doesn't realize, however, is that this is no ordinary puppy. He's a legendary wolf named Fenris, who's prophesied to bring about the end of the world by eating the moon. Mott vows to protect Fenris, rescue him from his destiny, and prevent the world from ending. But will she be able to keep her promise? Or has she bitten off more than she can chew?

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

978-0-06-297063-3 HarperCollins Publishers ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 5.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review The fates of all nine of the realms of Norse mythology, including ours, pivot on events in Culver City, California, after the cute white puppy that lonely Mott rescues from a recycling bin turns out to be Fenris--the all-devouring wolf of Ragnarok, destined to consume everything at the end of the world. A heart-deep promise to take care of her adorable new pet is tested by a sudden series of scary encounters with Loki and other Asgardians and puts Mott firmly on the horns of a dilemma--massive storms and other signs of impending doom are intensifying, and it looks like there's no way to save both pup and planet. Along with trotting in young Valkyrie Thrudy, a staunch, if bloodthirsty, ally, for both support and comic relief ("You don't know what chocolate is?" "No, we don't have such a thing in Asgard." "This is important: Let's get some chocolate in you right now." "First, I shall pee"), Van Eekhout gives readers both a redoubtable human protagonist who shows hidden depths of courage and resilience on the way to an ingenious resolution and a canine one who is at once irresistibly winsome and terrifyingly destructive (not unlike many nonmythical dogs). COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews "Things done could not be undone. Things destroyed could not be undestroyed. But sometimes they could be fixed." There's a lot Mott, a young girl of Indonesian and Dutch descent, doesn't expect about the abandoned puppy she finds. She doesn't expect to be able to keep him. She doesn't expect him to be a wolf. And she certainly doesn't expect that wolf to be Fenris of Norse mythology: god-foe, moon-eater, ender of worlds. The very universe seems destined for destruction, brought about by Fenris, but Mott made a promise to keep Fenris safe, and she knows only too well the pain of broken oaths. In this Rick Riordan-esque epic, modern and ancient worlds collide in a vividly sketched adventure that begs to be adapted for the screen. The exhilarating pace comes somewhat at the expense of characterization. Only toward the very end, however, does this cause some believability to be lost as deeper emotions and motivations and some themes remain loosely explored. Still, the text strikes a remarkable balance between the hollowness of inevitable destruction and the hope hiding within the darkest voids. Unlike with most stories of this type, readers will at times be utterly convinced that Mott will fail, which only makes her determination to do right by her vows more rewarding to witness. The idea of the downfall of the world feels all too relevant, and the book imparts a subtle warning to readers that while the inevitable may be delayed, it can never truly be reversed. Thrilling and touching in equal measure. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Young Mott finds a fluffy white puppy dumped in an alley near contemporary Los Angeles and vows to keep it safe, only to learn the animal's true capacity for destruction, in this mythological romp. Mott's surprised when a man clad in leather and fur tries to nab the pup, indicating that it's not just any ordinary canine but the legendary wolf Fenris; son of the Norse god Loki and known as "ender of worlds." But Mott's denial proves short-lived when Fenris promptly eats the man whole, soon followed by benches and trees, entire vehicles, and more people. But Mott, unlike her estranged father, intends to keep her promises, even if she's not strictly allowed to have a puppy. As figures of lore appear in Fenris's vicinity, Mott refuses to believe that Ragnarok, the prophesied end of the world, is imminent; or that the only way to avert it is to kill Fenris. Witty dialogue brightens Mott's growing friendship with Valkyrie-in-training Thrudi as the two seek means to avert the apocalypse without causing harm to the adorable, havoc-wreaking puppy. Van Eekhout (Weird Kid) applies a deft touch to Mott's difficult ethical dilemma, imbuing the quickly paced story with tenderness and genuine surprises. Mott is of Indonesian and Hollander descent; Thrudi reads as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Holly Root, Root Literary. (Aug.)

#2332780 Widely Unknown Myth of Apple and Dorothy (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Corey Ann Haydu

Every winter solstice, today's earthly descendants of Greek gods, nymphs, and muses must visit Mount Olympus to preserve their near-god status. Until Dorothy's mother refuses to go, sealing her fate and dying a human death shortly after. In retaliation, the gods release an ultimatum: return to the heavens as gods or live as humans on earth. Everyone must now make a choice.

978-0-06-297693-2 Katherine Tegen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Haydu (One Jar of Magic) ponders on heartfelt insights surrounding loss in this modern fantastical retelling of classic Greek myths. To remain immortal, the inhabitants of Our Hill; all descendants of Greek gods; must climb a silver ladder to Olympus each winter solstice and take a bite of a golden apple. When Dorothy Hardy's mother refuses, she becomes human and dies soon after. Because of her lineage as a descendent of Pandora, community members blame the goddess's curious nature for Dorothy's mother's actions, shunning Dorothy as a result. The gods soon send an ultimatum: upon the next winter solstice, everyone in Our Hill must choose between returning to Olympus as gods forever or remaining on Earth as humans. As the solstice nears, Dorothy's "nearly perfect" best friend Apple Montgomery, a descendent of Zeus and Hera, grows concerned over Dorothy's burgeoning understanding of her mother's choice, worried that she might lose her friend. Haydu's worldbuilding is suffused with playful details and rich juxtaposition between the strict demands of Olympus and Earth. Through Dorothy and

#2277786 Drifters (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kevin Emerson

Jovie is adrift. She'd been feeling alone ever since her best friend, Micah, left her behind for a new group of friends-but when Micah went missing last fall, Jovie felt truly lost. As strange storms beset Far Haven, she is shocked to discover that Micah isn't just missing-she's been forgotten completely by everyone in town. And Micah isn't the only one: there are others, roaming the beaches, camped in the old bunkers, who have somehow been lost from the world. Something disastrous is heading for Far Haven, and Jovie and Sylvan soon realize that it is up to them to save not only Micah, but everyone else who has been lost to the world and set adrift-now, in the past, and in the future.

978-0-06-297696-3 Walden Pond Press ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 592 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity

1

Unit Price

$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-8 Micah and Jovie were best friends who began to drift apart, until one day Micah vanishes into thin air. Months later, the search for Micah has ceased, and Jovie feels like she is the only one who's still looking for her old friend. Through her searches, Jovie learns of the many disappearances and strange events that have taken place in her small town of Far Haven for decades. Her suspicions are only heightened when she witnesses supernatural forces and discovers that a government organization, Barsuda, may be doing more in the town than they have let on. Jovie, along with her new friend Sylvan, will have to uncover Far Haven's well-kept secrets to find Micah. Emerson's elaborate story will have readers theorizing as they piece together Far Haven's concealed history along with Jovie. There is more to this town than meets the eye, where the seemingly impossible is possible. This is an intricate sci-fi mystery for voracious readers who love an extraordinary adventure that transcends space and time. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Jovie feels strongly that her missing best friend Micah is still alive and needs her help, even if the two had drifted apart in the months before Micah's disappearance. When Jovie and a new pal, Sylvan, begin to look deeper into the history of their small town and the odd events that happen with increasing regularity (radiation exposure, disappearances, and mysterious illnesses, for example), it becomes clear that this is much bigger than Micah being gone. Indeed, the fate of the world may rest on Jovie and Sylvan's ability to bridge a portal and face beings who want Earth for themselves. Behind the zippy sci-fi plot line, there is a stark examination of loneliness, and how people can grow so disconnected from other people that they all but become invisible (in this book, literally so) and are therefore not missed when they are gone. Emerson slowly metes out details of how Micah went from popular and confident to self-doubting, removed, and isolated, and this is made particularly poignant given Jovie had been holding back her love and support for Micah after their estrangement. A satisfying action plot, complete with a shady (but well-developed) government agency and villainous (but strangely sympathetic) beings, is effectively grounded in the emotional realism of the girls' shifting friendships. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Strange doings in a run-down coastal Washington town include all the people who suddenly vanish and are quickly forgotten. Emerson puts a science-fiction slant on the notion of how important it is to see others--and how devastating being or feeling unseen can be. Four months after her former best friend Micah's disappearance, Jovie hasn't forgotten her but has to repeatedly remind everyone else, including the school principal, that she ever existed. More shockingly, one day she sees through a spyglass a young stranger sitting in Micah's empty desk in class, someone invisible to everyone but tangible enough to be unconsciously given space in the hallways. Hoping he'll lead her to Micah, Jovie follows him to a group of other drifters awaiting one of the mysterious electrical storms that have been blasting in over the past century, opening a way to somewhere else. Flashing backward and forward in time while having his protagonist fret at length over how she had failed as a friend by not noticing that Micah was troubled, and shoehorning in sheaves of other mysteries ranging from black vans that appear in the wake of an accident at the nearby nuclear plant to a conveniently key bit of technology tied to a previous trilogy, the author runs up the page count without tying off loose ends or letting the pace of events get much beyond an easy amble. The cast is predominantly White. A worthy theme but an overstuffed and ponderous story. (author's note) (Science fiction. 11-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

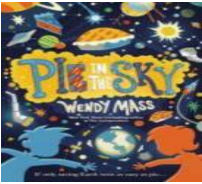

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Emerson (Lost in Space: Infinity's Edge) ambitiously juggles multiple timelines in this speculative tale. Far Haven, Wash., is a small town filled with mysteries stemming from an incident at the old nuclear plant, such as inexplicable illnesses and dangerous storms, with the secretive Barsuda Solutions, a local sanitation company, always in the background. In 2022, 14-year-old Sylvan is once again interrogated by Far Haven authorities regarding classmate Jovie's disappearance four years prior. In 2018, 13-year-old Jovie desperately searches for her best friend Micah, whom no one seems to remember after she vanished a year before. When Jovie meets Mason, a boy only she can see via a spyglass she was given anonymously, she discovers Drifters, people whose corporeal forms are disconnected from the world, and suspects that was Micah's fate. But as Jovie, Mason, and Sylvan search for the truth about Far Haven, they uncover a terrible secret that spans centuries. The connection between the novel's myriad themes; such as government conspiracies, supernatural intervention, and alien contact; is sometimes ambiguous and makes for a jam-packed read, but the protagonists' perseverance and the narrative's countdown toward an unknown event maintain gripping tension throughout. Most characters cue as white. Ages: 8: 12. Agent: Robert Guinsler, Sterling Lord Literistic. (May)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2049158 Ambrose Deception (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Emily Ecton Melissa is a nobody. Wilf is a slacker. Bondi is a show-off. At least that's what their middle school teachers think. To everyone's surprise, they are the three students chosen to compete for a ten thousand-dollar scholarship, solving clues that lead them to various locations around Chicago. 978-1-4847-8838-7 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2018 368 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 4.4 Lexile 610	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Chicago middle-schoolers and noted underachievers Melissa Burris, Bondi Johnson, and Wilfred “Wilf” Samson exceed everyone’s low expectations when they’re invited to participate in what looks to be a prestigious $10,000 scholarship competition. As the three traverse the city to decipher their respective riddles—each given a debit card, a cell phone, and a chauffeur, but contractually bound to secrecy—the competition becomes increasingly suspicious and, despite the rule prohibiting collusion, Melissa, Bondi, and Wilf begin to work together to solve the larger mystery of what’s going on. What eventually seems like an elaborate multimillion-dollar con may in fact be the greatest prank in the history of the city of Chicago, and these three kids are caught square in the middle. Ecton pens a suspenseful narrative with epistolary elements—various letters, text messages, notes, and emails—that help progress the story in engaging ways. Still, uneven pacing and flat characterizations pose some limitations, as several scenes featuring all three protagonists seem noticeably clumsier than the characters’ individual chapters. Likewise, when Bondi is presented simply as the black kid, as if it’s a compelling enough character trait, the implication that the rest of the Chicago cast is presumably just non-racial reads as lazy. As a result, it takes time for the story to establish its footing, but the research- based puzzles emphasizing real-life exploration beyond Google are diverting.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8-Melissa, Wilf, and Bondi-an enterprising money-maker, a slacker, and a smooth talker, respectively-are unlikely recipients of a mysterious scholarship offer, but that doesn't stop them from trying to win it anyway. They're given a driver, a cell phone, a debit card, a camera, and three clues, with the instruction that they are to tell no one what they're doing. The first kid to answer all three clues correctly wins a $10,000 scholarship. But as the chase progresses, the kids soon see that things aren't adding up. This realization forces them to work together, prove that they aren't slackers or criminals, and win a prize bigger than anything they've ever dreamed. This fast-paced story set in Chicago takes readers on a scavenger hunt to some of the city's most famous landmarks, with interesting trivia and history to accompany them. Ecton creates an eclectic and vivid cast of characters from varied backgrounds, lending authenticity to this Chicago-set tale. The addition of text messages, emails, and written notes provides a fun interlude between chapters. VERDICT An appealing adventure story likely to be in high demand. A must-buy for all libraries serving middle graders, especially those in the Chicago area.-Jessica Holland, Univ. of Kentucky, Lexington Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1769426 Pi in the Sky (Prebound) written by Wendy Mass Joss is the seventh son of the Supreme Overlord of the Universe. His older brothers help his dad rule the cosmos, but all Joss gets to do is deliver pies. That's right: pies. Of course, these pies actually hold the secrets of the universe between their buttery crusts, but they're still pies. 978-1-4844-2598-5 Little, Brown & Company ©2014 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 272 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 4.4 GR Lvl U Lexile 710	1	$19.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2026741 Peculiar Incident on Shady Street (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lindsay Currie When lights start flickering and temperatures suddenly drop, twelve-year-old Tessa Woodward, sensing her new house may be haunted, recruits some new friends to help her unravel the mystery of who or what is trying to communicate with her and why. 978-1-4814-7704-8 Simon & Schuster ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.	1	$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Tessa is wildly disappointed that her family has to relocate from Florida to Chicago right before the start of seventh grade. Despite the hardship of leaving sunny weather and her best friend behind, she determines to support her dad in his new job and tries to acclimate to her surroundings. Immediately after moving into their ramshackle older home, strange things begin happening. Crying is heard in the night, the house turns icy cold, and her brother's ventriloquist dummy appears to be shedding real tears. Tessa confides in a few welcoming classmates, and together they work to uncover exactly what is going on in the house on Shady Street and who, or what, is reaching out to Tessa. Their research includes fact-finding missions to the library and a graveyard, where some strange weather patterns make for a terrifying time. Balancing goose bump-inducing frights with relatable scenes of the friends navigating middle school, sibling relationships, and family issues makes the book scary but not horrific. Tessa, like her mother, is an artist and seeing events through her creative perspective adds an interesting element to the narrative. VERDICT. Give this page-turner to readers seeking a spooky thrill reminiscent of books by Mary Downing Hahn and filled with strong family relationships, budding friendships, a local history, mystery, and creepiness.-Sara-Jo Lupo Sites, George F. Johnson Memorial Library, Endicott, NY Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2156197 Great Upending (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Beth Kephart

Trouble is the last thing Sara and her brother need. Sara's got a condition, Marfan syndrome and its causing her heart to have problems, the kind of problems that require surgery. But the family already has their share of problems, let alone a surgery to fix those problems. Sara can feel the weight of her family's worry, and the weight of her time running out, but what can a pair of kids do?

978-1-4814-9156-3 Atheneum ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 760

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This warmhearted, meandering novel about a tight-knit Pennsylvania farm family also offers a mystery. Twelve-year-old Sara suffers from Marfan syndrome, which makes her tall and thin ("I'm a body built out of stretch"), and strains her lungs and heart so that she desperately needs surgery. Kephart (Wild Blues) keenly conveys the stark economic reality of the drought-ridden farm, intensified by a devastating fire that burns their shed and hay supply, and the intense financial pressure Sara's family faces just to survive, let alone afford additional medical expenses. Sara and her younger brother, Hawk, become increasingly interested in the older man who rents their renovated barn and about whom questions emerge when a big-city editor visits the farm. Though the mystery proves less believable than it might, the literary tone and occasional poemlike chapters convey palpable emotion alongside the strong portrayal of the siblings' relationship, the intertwined family, and the effects of Sara's disease. Ages 11: 14. (Mar.)

#2123605 Shine! (Hardcover (Trade))

written by J. J. Grabenstein

Shine on! might be the catchphrase of twelve-year-old Piper's hero--astronaut, astronomer, and television host Nellie Dumont Frisse--but Piper knows the truth: some people are born to shine, and she's just not one of them. That fact has never been clearer than now, since her dad's new job has landed them both at Chumley Prep, a posh private school where everyone seems to be the best at something and where Piper definitely doesn't fit in.

978-1-5247-1766-7 Random House Children's Books ©2019 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 650

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Piper is smart, kind, and obsessed with astronomy, but she has always been overshadowed by her beloved late mother's legacy of excelling at, well, everything, and as Piper starts the spring semester of seventh grade at her mom's former prep school, that shadow engulfs her even more fully. When the school announces that a mysterious new award will be given to a student who excels, Piper wonders if she can finally find a way to truly shine and match her mother's glory. This is a story that happily upsets the trope of the lonely new kid in school, with Piper having an array of quirky friends and helpful teachers, plus a doting father and female astronomer role model to help her navigate the maze of middle school as well as the competition. The Grabensteins' writing is warm and humorous, sneaking in the occasional astronomy fact along the way. This gentle book offers a wonderful reminder that kindness, generosity, and love far outweigh the importance of money, awards, and prestige.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews lly finds a way to shine in a school full of would-be stars. Piper's father's new job is choral director at Chumley Prep a tony independent school where everyone's an achiever. It comes with full tuition for Piper, who's now able to attend the school where her deceased mother once shone. Feeling out of place and extremely untalented in this new, more competitive world, seventh grader Piper eventually finds friends and discovers that her empathy and willingness to help others make her stellar, too. She even finds it possible to do something nice for the classmate who has made fun of her and her father from their very first encounter. From a characterization standpoint, Piper's enthusiasm for astronomy helps her stand out as a protagonist in this novel about finding one's place in middle school, but her nemesis, Ainsley Braden-Hammerschmidt, is drawn as an all-too-familiar arrogant child of privilege. The puzzle here is more subtle than in some of co-author Chris Grabenstein's previous Mr. Lemoncello books: There's a new prize at Chumley Prep, the Excelsior Award; every student hopes to win it, but no one knows quite how. A subplot involving a teacher who hasn't gotten over her resentment of Piper's mother seems extraneous, but there's plenty of believable dialogue and humor. The cast is default white; Piper's friends have names representative of different cultures and are gratifyingly quirky. A crowd-pleasing reminder that kindness pays. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In the married coauthors' collaborative debut, seventh grader Piper believes that only some people are "meant to shine. Others are better off blending in." Her mother, who died when Piper was three, was a talented cellist, and her father is a choir director, but Piper herself "can't carry a tune in a lunch box." After her dad gets a job at posh Chumley Prep; prompting a transfer for Piper, too, to the school where her mother once excelled; the girl becomes the target of class mean girl Ainsley. When an all-school award with deliberately vague criteria ("excel") is announced, Piper is sure she has no shot. When she wins the science fair, though, thanks to her interest in astronomy, her friends think she is a front-runner. They work to find Piper something at which she can shine, but she becomes sure she won't be chosen when outside occurrences (helping a lost kindergartner and a cafeteria worker in need) make her constantly late to class. Whatever the contest's outcome, the girl's realization that she has been shining all along is the true victory. This encouraging story of self-discovery celebrates friendship, kindness, and self-actualization, and readers will relate to the realistic middle school dynamic and well-developed characters. Ages 8: 12. (Nov.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—Seventh-grader Piper is heartbroken when she learns that she has to leave her public school and begin mid-year at Chumley Prep, the local independent school. Her father, a choral teacher who dreams of writing Broadway musicals, has been offered a position at Chumley which comes with full tuition for Piper. Since Piper's mother died when she was three, she and her father have supported each other, and Piper knows how important this opportunity is to him. Just as Piper expects, she initially feels out of place and some of the Chumley students are not very welcoming—especially Ainsley Braden-Hammerschmidt, who tries to sabotage all of Piper's attempts to thrive at her new school. When an award for the student who "most fully demonstrates overall excellence" is announced, some of the students plan strategies to win the anonymous judge's favor. Piper, who shines primarily in science, does not feel confident about winning the award. By the end of the book, Piper has embraced a diverse group of new friends, connected with several teachers, and learned to love her school. VERDICT Piper is likeable and empathetic and the "bad guys," while exaggerated, make this a lighthearted and fast-paced book. The strong message about the power of kindness will be encouraging to readers, and fans of Grabenstein's "Mr. Lemoncello" series will enjoy a different kind of puzzle.—Shelley Sommer, Inly School, Scituate, MA

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Realistic, humorous and a bit satirical, Shine! is performer J.J. Grabenstein's middle-grade debut, co-written with her husband, the prolific author Chris Grabenstein (Word of Mouse). When Piper, unassuming middle schooler and astronomy enthusiast, starts attending a ritzy private school where her music teacher father has just landed his dream job, she's not ecstatic. Although her cellist mom (dead for many years) was a star at Chumley Prep, Piper is not sure it's the place for her. Then the Excelsior competition for excellence is announced, and Piper sees it as a chance to make a mark equal to her mom's at Chumley: "I could have a plaque right next to one of Mom's." Can Piper win? And how can she stand out in a school full of wealthy, overachieving, snobby students? The breezy text highlights the ups and downs of school life, the science fair, the talent show, class assignments that allow Piper to consider her life, and the mean girl behavior of Ainsley Braden-Hammerschmidt as contrasted with the welcoming attitudes of the Hibbleflitts (a group of Piper's nerdier classmates). Piper also gets a chance to show her stuff in many small but important ways: her willingness always to lend a hand (to overburdened nannies, school employees and frightened kindergarten students); her devotion to friends and science; and her optimistic approach to life. Though Piper doesn't share her parents' musical talents, she is a genuinely kind person whom readers would likely love to meet. With rockets and stars related to Piper's scientific interests decorating chapter beginnings and endings, Shine! is a quick read that gives kids a protagonist who is a thoroughly good person with some insecurities and a very positive attitude. COPYRIGHT(2019) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2155593 Kingdom of Back (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Marie Lu

Born with a gift for music, Nannerl Mozart has just one wish to be remembered forever. As Nannerl's hope grows dimmer with each passing year, the talents of her younger brother, only seem to shine brighter. His brilliance begins to eclipse her own, until one day a mysterious stranger from a magical land appears with an irresistible offer. He has the power to make her wish come true but his help may cost her everything.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Lu (Rebel) deftly layers fantastical elements and historical fiction to craft an expansive tale of rivalry based on two Mozart siblings, both talented pianists and composers. In 1759 Salzburg, eight-year-old Marianne "Nannerl" Mozart is poised to play in front of royalty, but the audience she must first impress is distracted when her younger brother, the nearly four-year-old Wolfgang "Wofelr," enters the room, leading to a small error in her playing. Blaming Wofelr for the mistake and fearful of his burgeoning talent, Nannerl makes a wish that is heard by a magical entity, Hyacinth; he promises to help Nannerl achieve immortality through her music if she helps him regain his crown in the Kingdom of Back. Initially the siblings are intrigued, enjoying adventures in the fantastical kingdom, where they explore magical grottos and outsmart a witch, but when things take a darker turn, Nannerl begins to understand that she has entered a Faustian pact. Carefully constructing a magical kingdom while crafting the historical cities of Europe where the Mozarts played as children, Lu shows her knack for creating detailed worlds while seamlessly building a complicated sibling relationship with a balance of rivalry and love. Ages 12: up. Agent: Kristin Nelson, Kristin Nelson Literary Agency. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7 Up—Sci-fi/fantasy heavy-hitter Lu brings her talents to historical fiction in this magic-infused telling of the lives of the young Mozart siblings. Nannerl Mozart, elder sister to Wolfgang, is skilled enough at the clavier that her father believes she could gain renown as a child prodigy. Her passion for music extends beyond her exacting father's expectations—she composes music in secret, dreaming of achieving fame despite it being a craft forbidden to women. But as she grows and Wofelr's superlative talents begin to become apparent, Nannerl realizes that it is assumed she will eventually abandon her art to become a wife and mother while Wofelr pursues musical glory. Hope arrives unexpectedly one quiet afternoon when a magical world opens up to the siblings: the Kingdom of Back, a faerie realm illuminated by twin moons, populated by forests of mysterious trees whose roots stretch up into the sky, with edelweiss blanketing the ground. Hyacinth, the mysterious fae-like boy who inhabits the forests, promises that if Nannerl completes tasks for him, he will grant her deepest wishes. But as the years pass and events in the Kingdom of Back correspond unsettlingly to real-world calamities, Nannerl begins to question Hyacinth's true motives and weigh her intense desire to be remembered against potential consequences and her fierce love for her brother. Lu strikes a perfect harmony between fantasy and historical fiction that is at once satisfyingly intricate and excitingly paced. In Nannerl she has created a passionate voice that will resonate particularly with readers learning to wield small defiances as the large weapons they can be. VERDICT A beautifully composed historical fantasy that will enthrall readers, especially those with music in their hearts. A first purchase.—Darla Salva Cruz, Suffolk Cooperative Library System, Bellport, NY

#2324011 Eyes and the Impossible (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Dave Eggers

Johannes, a free dog, lives in an urban park by the sea. His job is to be the Eyes--to see everything that happens within the park and report back to the park's elders, three ancient Bison. But changes are afoot. More humans, including Trouble Travelers, arrive in the park. A new building, containing mysterious and hypnotic rectangles, goes up. And then there are the goats--an actual boatload of goats--who appear, along with a shocking revelation that changes Johannes's view of the world.

978-1-5247-6420-3 Knopf Books for Young Readers ©2023 6-1/2 x 8 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 790

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Johannes has always lived his life as a free dog in a vast park by the sea. Three captive elderly bison are the Keepers of the Equilibrium and overseers of the land, and they've dubbed Johannes "the Eyes," as his agility and observant gaze allow him to notice the park's happenings and report back to the bison. An assortment of wild animals assists Johannes on his daily intel gatherings, and he's content in his dear friendships and freedom. But change is afoot: an enormous building containing mesmerizing rectangles is being built, a herd of mysterious creatures has set up shop in a field, and a heroic act brings Johannes intense human scrutiny that impedes his duties as the Eyes. It will require all of Johannes' ingenuity, kindness, and speed to navigate the new developments while maintaining his precious independence. The utterly delightful book is narrated by a distinctly canine voice similar to the narrator's in Eggers' short story "After I Was Thrown in the River and Before I Drowned," and though Johannes is prone to matter-of-fact bragging and hilarious exaggeration, he's also capable of profound introspection and appreciation of life's wonders. Eggers touches on deep topics with a light hand, effortlessly building suspense and a wonderful sense of adventure. A merry reminder to face the truth about the world and ourselves with compassion, curiosity, and joy.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Johannes is a quicker-than-lightning dog, spotting everything as he explores the park where he and other animals live, and his speed and dutiful reports of the park's ongoings have made him essential to the Keepers of the Equilibrium (three wise but cloistered bison). A new building sparks a series of events that lead to Johannes discovering human art, being captured for the first time ever, finding out his true lineage, and, ultimately, outgrowing what he imagined the rest of his life would be. Johannes' escape from captivity, aided by the motliest of inter-species crews, demonstrates the closeness of the animals in the park and how important Johannes is to the balance (and goodness) of their home. Johannes is a brilliant narrator as he speculates wildly (he estimates the bison, for example, to be six thousand years old), approaches life with a mixture of experience and wonder, wryly comments on the unreliability of ducks, and captures the world around him with a poetic framing that makes everything seem amazing. In a brief author's note, Eggers emphasizes that none of these animals are human stand-ins: this is a world where humans are mostly destructive and not central to the story other than as beings to be avoided. The goats are laser-focused on goat things (e.g. eating), the raccoons are cranky if woken during the day, and the seagulls are dramatic as heck, an accurate assessment of their nature. Double-page spreads reproduce famous landscape painting, mostly from the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, with a speedy Johannes cleverly integrated to create the striking, memorable artwork; a note at the end offers readers more information about each of the original paintings. Animal lovers will be enthralled, and even for readers who mostly stick with humans, this is a standout example of the power of chosen family rather than biological ones. AS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A wild dog who serves as the Eyes for Bison living in a park enclosure devises a plan to free them. Exuberant, observant dog Johannes runs daily throughout the park, which is visited by humans, reporting to Freya, Meredith, and Samuel, three old Bison who are the Keepers of the Equilibrium. Johannes and other Assistant Eyes--a sea gull, a squirrel, a pelican, and a raccoon--describe an art museum being built in the park, a "building full of chaos-rectangles." Johannes finds it captivating, leading to his capture by humans--and subsequent rescue by the other Eyes in a demonstration of interspecies cooperation. This gives him the idea to free the Bison. The appearance of goats, who have been brought in to eat weeds, provides a friend, a revelation, and a new plan and purpose: "to pull off the impossible." Johannes' first-person narration is an interesting mix of poetic language, sophisticated vocabulary, philosophy, humor, hyperbole, and both short declarative and run-on sentences; his estimations of time, size, and quantity are particularly exaggerated. Johannes' loyalty, friendship, and commitment to a noble purpose, even as his sense of self shifts, the stakes are raised, and last-minute changes to the plan occur, make him an admirable character. The artwork consists of double-page spreads reproducing magnificent fine art landscapes into which Harris has seamlessly inserted Johannes, cleverly adapting to each painter's style and color palette. One remarkable creature vividly shows readers that "there is so, so much to see." (author's note, sources) (Fiction. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this exuberant illustrated novel by previous collaborators Eggers and Harris (What Can a Citizen Do?), high-spirited narrator Johannes is an "unkept and free" dog entrusted by the Keepers of the Equilibrium; three penned Bison who oversee the park where they all live; to be the park's Eyes. Aided by a team of "comrades, allies" known as the Assistant Eyes (seagull Bertrand, squirrel Sonja, pelican Yolanda, and raccoon Angus), Johannes reports each day's occurrences to the Bison, including anything that might upset the Equilibrium. When construction activity is detected, Johannes encounters "rectangles full of gorgeous commotion"; an art display that transfixes him, leading to his being leashed. After a dramatic cooperative rescue devised by the Assistant Eyes, Johannes realizes the "glory of liberation" and determines to free the Bison from their enclosure. Studded with strong opinions about the park's residents ("The ducks know nothing"), a quick-moving first-person voice melds the dog's background, beliefs, and observations. Eggers crafts a marvelous, fully fleshed protagonist in Johannes, who is at once an ebullient braggart, a faithful and intrepid operative, and a drolly humorous reporter whose compassionate narration delivers a rousing tale of community, joyful self-reliance, and the pleasures of running very, very fast. Aligning with themes of art and perspective, Harris contributes illustrations of Johannes as added to full-page reproductions of classical landscapes. Ages 8: 12. (May)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Animals have very full lives that humans never see. Johannes the dog introduces readers to his life in a bustling and vibrant urban park in the immersive middle-grade animal adventure The Eyes and the Impossible by Dave Eggers and Shawn Harris, the team behind Her Right Foot and What Can a Citizen Do?

#2378496 Secret Language of Birds (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lynne Kelly

Nina is used to feeling like the odd one out-- school, in her neighborhood, and especially in her large family. But while trying to fit in at summer camp she discovers something even more peculiar: two majestic looking birds and a nest in the marsh behind one of the old cabins. No one had seen a whooping crane nest there for about a hundred years...and now there are two of the rarest birds getting ready to lay eggs.

978-1-5247-7027-3 Delacorte Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Thirteen-year-old Nina decides to attend her aunt Audrey's summer camp, where she befriends three cabinmates who call themselves the Oddballs. Like Nina, an avid birdwatcher, they are new to the camp and "kind of weird." One night, they join other older campers for a forbidden midnight excursion to the old infirmary, which is said to be haunted. Intrigued by a tall white bird she spots by moonlight in the nearby marsh, Nina returns by day and verifies that it's a whooping crane, a member of an endangered species. In the weeks that follow, she and her friends secretly watch the bird and its mate. Nina reports her discovery to a wildlife agency but worries about telling Aunt Audrey because she's been breaking camp rules. Kelly sets up an enjoyable, traditional summer camp story before sending Nina off in an entirely different direction as she takes a leadership role and learns from the experience. From the lively characters to the secret at the heart of the plot, this book takes readers on an unusual and rewarding adventure.

#2235974 $150,000 Rugelach (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Allison Marks

Exploding with loud, rock 'n' roll attitude, eleven-year-old Jack Fineman dreams of becoming the greatest pastry chef who ever lived. His plans are thrown off course when his butterscotch basil brownies are upstaged at his sixth-grade holiday party by a simple plate of chocolate rugelach brought in by Jillian Mermelstein-the new girl at school whose mother has just died and who only wants to be left alone.

978-1-4998-1210-7 Yellow Jacket ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist 1-year-old Jillian Mermelstein and her father relocate to Ohio to live with Grandma Rita. Jillian's one joy is baking the recipes perfected by Mom, especially chocolate rugelach. Classmate Jack Fineman enjoys baking, too, but his goal is fame and fortune like that of his idol, Phineas Farnsworth, a local businessman who sponsors an annual bake-off. When Jack and Jillian are paired in a child version of Bakerstown Bonanza, the two must develop a rapport (in terms of cooking styles and showmanship) to make it work. The Marks excel at creating goofy but appealing characters: extrovert Jack seems beyond embarrassment, yet he honors Jillian's wish to keep her mom's story private; Grandma Rita has no cooking skills, but she rocks at martial arts and plumbing repairs; and Phineas Farnsworth exploits everyone he encounters but has a soft spot for the memory of the nanny who raised him. Although the ending feels a bit contrived, it will please the intended audience. Recipes for relevant treats are appended.

#2290577 Ghosts Come Rising (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adam Perry

After twelve-year-old Liza Carroll and her ten-year-old brother John's parents die, they are placed in the custody of their uncle, a traveling photographer named Mr. Spencer. Mr. Spencer, realizing the gift he has in his young relatives, uses them to help create fraudulent spirit photographs, which he sells to the grieving. Chased from one town to another, they arrive at a settlement that is different than the others they've been to-a Spiritualist commune in Pennsylvania named the Silver Star Society. They are told they are at a Thin Place between the worlds of the living and the spirits.

978-1-4998-1354-8 Little Bee Books Inc. ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve-year-old Liza Carroll helps her adoptive uncle, Mr. Spencer (“a liar and a fraud”), create fake photographic images of deceased loved ones using cotton, newsprint, and a double exposure of the film. The pair, along with Liza’s sickly younger brother, John, arrive at the Silver Star Society, a Spiritualist community in rural Pennsylvania, in the fall of 1920 to con its true believers. There Liza begins seeing “shadows” of the departed who become increasingly menacing as they broach the thin veil between the worlds of the living and the dead, seeking to claim John. Perry deftly teeters between suspenseful and scary with an immersive story set during a relatively unexplored era in middle-grade fiction. Although Liza admonishes readers early, “Don’t believe a thing I say,” the photography scam frames careful revelations about the lies Liza tells herself and others. A helpful note introduces spiritualism, and striking photographic images appear throughout. This gripping paranormal story should be an easy sell for R. J. Palacio’s Pony (2021) and future fans of the Miss Peregrine series.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young girl in 1920 upstate New York becomes an expert on helping convince people they can see the dead. After 12-year-old Liza's parents died in the influenza pandemic, she and her younger brother, John, are left in the custody of itinerant-photographer-turned-con man Mr. Spencer. Now they work together on a spiritualist scam, double-exposing photographic plates to make it seem as if the dead are among the living. When they arrive at the Silver Star Society, a spiritualistic center in rural Pennsylvania run by a woman named Ms. Eldridge, their luck seems to spin in both directions at once: They're welcomed and believed, but at the same time, mysterious storms wreak havoc on the center, and Liza begins to see nighttime shadows she's convinced are threatening John. Liza, as narrator, warns us upfront not to believe a single thing she says, yet she seems so utterly grounded and convincing that the story she tells slides from historical fiction into supernatural suspense before readers realize it. The novel is well paced and well plotted, but the ending, especially the epilogue, lacks emotional punch. Black-and-white photographs that, like the story, aren't quite what they seem appear throughout. Most characters seem to be White. Ghost-story fans will stay up reading past their bedtimes. (photo credits) (Historical paranormal. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2330077 Secret of the Dragon Gems (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rajani LaRocca

Eleven-year-olds Tripti Kapoor, a feisty "word nerd" from Massachusetts, and Sam Cohen, a shy, imaginative, budding geologist from California, are both miserable at Camp Dilloway, a summer camp in upstate New York. On the last night of camp, they follow a shooting star to a quiet creek. There they find two silvery rocks glowing in the night. They each take one home, and their long-distance friendship begins.

978-1-4998-1463-7 Little Bee Books Inc. ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Tripti Kapoor has recently returned home to Massachusetts from a terrible summer camp experience, having made only one new friend while away from home. Tripti met geology-obsessed Sam on the last night, after they both followed shooting-star fragments to a quiet nearby creek and each retrieved one glowing rock to keep. Post-camp, Tripti writes a letter to Sam at his California address to fulfill a class assignment, and as their correspondence continues, it becomes clear that those souvenir rocks are no ordinary stones. They work together from afar to unravel the deepening mystery before another interested party, the delightfully menacing camp director with unclear intentions and a murky past, can interfere. The absorbing adventure is cleverly told through a series of varying media forms, from simple letters, journal entries, and book excerpts to formatted chat services and video transcripts. There are codes to be broken and puzzles aplenty, and the slowly revealed sci-fi elements add real suspense to the proceedings. A modern-day mystery brimming with deep familial bonds, cross-country connections, and lots of magic.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A suspenseful epistolary novel about two new friends who find some extraordinary rocks. On the last day of their miserable stay at Camp Dilloway, two young campers escape Campfire Night and connect after they find two unusual glowing rocks. Tripti Kapoor, an 11-year-old Indian American girl from Massachusetts, and Sam Cohen, a sixth grade Jewish boy from California, take the rocks home, and their long-distance friendship begins. They call the rocks Opal and Jasper, names taken from their favorite book series, Dragon Gems. Soon, Tripti and Sam notice unusual things about their rocks--they move around, become warm, and even leave coded messages. Communication between the two kids occurs through handwritten letters, emails, video chats, and instant messages. Mixed in are excerpts from the Dragon Gems books, MeTube video transcripts, and journal entries by Sanford P. Dilloway III, an eccentric scientist and the camp's owner. The multiple channels of communication feel current and effectively propel the action, and the scientific information about comets and geology is engaging. As the rocks become more sentient, things become more urgent and dangerous. Themes of estrangement and forgiveness quietly run alongside the excitement of the mystery surrounding Opal and Jasper. Tripti and Sam's friendship authentically traverses the tough and tender waters of middle school, and their friendship proves to be powerful. A strong, suspenseful read about navigating friendship that includes a touch of the extraterrestrial. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly On the last night of summer camp, 11-year-olds Tripti Kapoor and Sam Cohen discover a pair of rocks near the creek, which they name Opal and Jasper in homage to their favorite book series, The Dragon Gems. They keep them as souvenirs to remember each other by before returning to their respective homes in Massachusetts and California. During their regular correspondence via letters, emails, text messages, and video chat they realize that the rocks are acting oddly: moving when no one is looking, becoming "too hot to hold," and somehow writing coded messages. Interspersed throughout the story are excerpts from the Dragon Gem books, online video transcripts, and journal entries written by the camp's director, Sanford P. Dilloway III, who's been keeping tabs on the friends for an unknown reason. In this adroitly crafted epistolary tale, LaRocca (Red, White, and Whole) and Baron (The Gray) explore themes of friendship and connection by way of a drawn-out geological mystery. The pair's back-and-forth exchanges outline their investigation while also allowing them to share slice-of-life details about Sam's Jewish background and Tripti's Indian heritage, particularly through depictions of holiday traditions and food, making this a well-balanced and pleasant adventure. Ages 8: 12. Agent: (for LaRocca) Brent Taylor, Triada US; (for Baron) Rena Rossner, Deborah Harris Literary. (Aug.)

#2158730 Forever Glimmer Creek (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Stacy Hackney

Rosie Flynn doesn't know how to get a Miracle but knows for sure they're real. It's the same way she's certain her and her Mama are the perfect team of two. But when someone Rosie loves goes missing, she just might discover that the true Miracle of Glimmer Creek is much different than she'd always believed and that the relationships she holds dear are the most fortunate gift of all.

978-1-5344-4484-3 Simon & Schuster ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 720

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Every year one person in Glimmer Creek survives great danger, after which they seem to acquire subtle magical abilities. Spurred in large part by a longing to impress the actor father she's never met, right now filming only two hours away, 12-year-old budding film director Rosie Flynn is determined to make a documentary about her town's Miracles and premiere it at its Festival of the Fish. Solving the 100-year-old mystery of what causes them would prove she has real talent as a filmmaker. But Rosie, who has secretly invited her father to the showing, has only 17 days to make the movie! She enlists her two best friends, Henry and Cam (all together they are HenRoCam), to help. These three have always been there for one another, but everything seems to be different once they start seventh grade. Hackney authentically covers a lot of middle school ground in this well-crafted debut. Rosie grapples with changing friendships, worries that she and her mother no longer seem "snapped together like the two halves of Mama's locket," and even questions if the Miracles are real. By turns gripping and suspenseful, especially when Henry goes missing, and also emotionally insightful, the story weaves together small-town lore (a 100-year-old skeleton, lost treasure) with a strong sense of community in which love, kindness, and faith quietly emerge. Most characters seem white; Cam has light-brown skin. Readers will be caught up as the lens through which this likable protagonist sees her world expands. (recipes) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Glimmer Creek is known for its Miracles. Every year, one lucky resident receives a potentially life-changing Miracle. Seventh grader Rosie is an aspiring filmmaker who is enthralled with the Miracles and is determined to make a documentary to prove they are real. She struggles to make her film when her best friends, Henry and Cam, suddenly become busy with new friends and new interests. Meanwhile, her mom and Sheriff Parker seem to be a little too friendly for Rosie's comfort. With all of these obstacles, will Rosie be able to finish her documentary in time and make up with her friends? Although this book focuses a lot on the Miracles of Glimmer Creek, it is really a story about friendship, family, and how those things can change as you grow up. Kids will relate to Rosie, who tries to do the right thing but sometimes makes mistakes and has to figure out how to right them. Hackney perfectly captures the challenges of navigating middle school when your interests do not align with those of your friends and classmates, as well as the confusion of friends growing apart. VERDICT Part realistic fiction and part mystery, this character-driven book is a good read for kids who enjoyed Ingrid Law's Savvy and Natalie Lloyd's A Snicker of Magic.—Kristin Williamson, Metropolitan Library System, Oklahoma

#2150311 We Could Be Heroes (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Margaret Finnegan

Hank Hudson is in a bit of trouble. After an incident involving the boy's bathroom and a terribly sad book his teacher is forcing them to read, Hank is left with a week's suspension and a slightly charred hardcover--and, it turns out, the attention of new girl Maisie Huang.

978-1-5344-4525-3 Atheneum ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Autistic Hank Hudson lives in his own world; he's happy to go unnoticed by the classmates he can't keep straight and feels protected by a trio of rocks he chooses and carries each day. After a rare rebellious incident, Hank attracts the attention of classmate Maisie Huang, who invites him to see her geologist parents' rock collection. The authoritative Maisie has an ulterior motive, however: guilting Hank into rescuing her elderly neighbor's dog, Booler, a pit bull who experiences seizures. Booler lives outside, tied to a tree because of his condition, and due to Hank's earlier audacity, Maisie believes that Hank has "the meatballs to save him." Sensitive Hank, who is excited to have a friend but horrified by Maisie's emotional manipulation, refuses and has a meltdown; author Finnegan uses an illustrative geological metaphor (a "lava flow where the lava moved and cooled at different rates") for Hank's meltdowns. Maisie is determined to "save" Booler and recruits Hank in other rescue schemes that both get him in trouble and offer him ample social experience (and provide comedic moments, as when the exceptionally honest Hank tries to lie). Debut author Finnegan, parent to a child with autism and epilepsy, deftly captures Hank's difficulties in dealing with emotions; his own and others'; in this good-natured tale of two unlikely friends determined to save a life. Ages 8: 12. (Feb.)

#2118087 Island of the Mighty (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Padraic Colum

Among the greatest storytellers of the world, the ancient Celts told tales that, after more than a thousand years, still bristle with life and excitement. This beautifully illustrated book includes fifteen of these enchanting stories, including bold exploits at the Court of King Arthur.

978-1-5344-4561-1 Aladdin ©2019 6 x 8 240 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 1020

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

#2156188 Blue Skies (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Anne Bustard

The war ended three years ago, but Glory Bea's father never returned home from the front in France. Glory Bea understands what Mama and Grams and Grandpa say--that Daddy died a hero on Omaha Beach--yet deep down in her heart, she believes Daddy is still out there. But miracles, like people, are always changing, until at last they find their way home.

978-1-5344-4606-9 Simon & Schuster ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 630

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly, fifth grader Glory Bea's father is still MIA. Everyone assumes he's dead except Glory Bea, who refuses to give up hope of a miracle: "he's going to find us." When her father's soldier buddy Randall Horton comes for a visit, she isn't pleased with the attention her mother pays him, especially after Randall becomes a permanent resident of their small Texas town. As the adults' relationship grows romantic, resentful Glory Bea strives to drive Randall away. She eagerly awaits the arrival of the Merci Train, delivering, as thanks for wartime help, boxcars full of gifts from France and, she believes, her father ("Why else would it stop in Gladiola?"). Bustard (Anywhere but Paradise) captures a patriotic spirit in post-WWII America in this novel inspired by the real-life Merci Train. Although the book's outcome is fairly predictable, it offers well-researched details about the era and themes relatable to a modern audience. A subplot regarding Glory Bea's playing matchmaker for her two best friends adds humor and interest, highlighting the protagonist's determined attitude. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Emily Mitchell, Wernick & Pratt Agency. (Mar.)

#2235992 One Kid's Trash (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jamie Sumner

Hugo is not happy about being dragged halfway across the state of Colorado just because his dad had a midlife crisis and decided to become a ski instructor. It'd be different if Hugo weren't so tiny, if girls didn't think he was adorable like a puppy in a purse and guys didn't call him "leprechaun" and rub his head for luck. But here he is, the tiny new kid on his first day of middle school.

978-1-5344-5703-4 Atheneum ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 700

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Irish American rising sixth grader Hugo O'Connell, 11, is used to being picked on and passed over, thanks to his small stature. When he and his parents move from Denver to Creekside, Colo., so his ex-engineer dad can pursue his passion of ski instructing, Hugo hopes he'll have a fresh start, despite his anguish at having to leave his only friends behind. Starting middle school with his affable half-Indian, half-white cousin, Vijay, whose thoughtful inclusion often leaves him feeling coddled ("I love my cousin. But I wish I didn't need a tour guide for my own life"), Hugo builds tentative friendships with Vijay's friends, who are launching a school newsletter, and begins leveraging his unusual skill at garbology; the practice of inferring information about a person from their trash; to help classmates make sports teams, finagle rides from older siblings, and more. With his dad becoming increasingly absent and the arguments between his parents growing more frequent, Hugo leans into his growing popularity to distract himself and take on a bully. Sumner (Tune It Out) renders Hugo's journey toward embracing his strengths and recognizing the power of kindness painfully believable, not shying from his own hurtful and immature behavior as he learns valuable lessons about friendship and family. Ages 10: up. (Aug.)

#2227551 Arrow (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Samantha M. Clark

For the first twelve years of Arrow's life, he has grown up as the only human in a lush, magical rainforest that's closed off from the rest of the world. He was raised by the Guardian Tree, the protector of the forest, which uses the earth's magic to keep it hidden from those who have sought to exploit and kill it. But now the magic veil is deteriorating, the forest is dying, and Arrow may be the only one who can save it.

978-1-5344-6597-8 Simon & Schuster ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 400 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 610

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Wrapping a tale with Jungle Book overtones in a near-future dystopian setting, Clark introduces Arrow, an abandoned, one-handed child raised alone since infancy by a wise old sentient tree. Brought up in an enclave of lush rain forest hidden beneath a magical veil, Arrow is pitted against ruthless corporate developers: the intangible Anima that keeps the forest both healthy and hidden is being rapidly poisoned by seeping pollution, and rents in the veil have allowed newcomers to stumble in from the environmentally wasted outside world. Can Arrow, who has never seen another person before, rise to this sudden flood of threats and challenges? Even the Guardian Tree, who serves as the anxious first-person narrator, has doubts. Rise he does, though, and if Clark goes with a too-easy “be sincere and wish hard” route to the tidy resolution, she does lay out a suspenseful tale with perceptively explored themes of trust and hope, glimpses of a nightmarish future, and an admirably resilient protagonist with a unique perspective. A lengthy afterword includes a list of activist organizations.

#2240840 Welcome to Dweeb Club (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Betsy Uhrig

In the second week of seventh grade, Jason Sloan signs up for the brand-new HAIR Club. He and his friends have no idea what it's about, but since they're the first to sign up they figure they'll be in charge in no time. The club turns out to be super weird: using fancy new equipment donated by a mysterious benefactor, the members are supposed to monitor school security footage.

978-1-5344-6768-2 Margaret K. McElderry ©2021 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 700

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An eclectic group of seventh graders join a mysterious, life-altering after-school club. At the beginning of seventh grade, Jason Sloan joins Flounder Bay Upper School's new H.A.I.R. Club at an activity fair, motivated by his popular, perfectly coiffed friend Glamorous Steve's enthusiasm. The members soon realize that the club isn't actually about hair; it's a secret club in which the kids must monitor an anonymous donor's high-tech video system for any security breaches on school grounds. The club's first big assignment is to determine who has been stealing the cafeteria's stash of croutons, but as the eight members review the footage, they eventually notice something creepy and unbelievable--it shows themselves eating lunch five years in the future. Most of the kids don't like what they see of themselves as seniors (Steve's lost his enviable hairdo, Nikhil has an embarrassing mustache, Sonia seems to have questionable taste in clothes and boys, and Jason barely has any friends), and they team up to solve the real mystery: Who's behind the time-bending tech, and what they can do to alter their trajectories? The story's premise is compelling, and Jason's family relationships are refreshing and well drawn, but the seventh graders' issues can seem superficial, and the character development is uneven. The club is majority White by default, but three kids' names cue them as Asian. A funny and original story about friendship and the future. (Science fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2365413 Drawing Deena (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Hena Khan

Deena's never given a name to the familiar knot in her stomach that appears when her parents argue about money, when it's time to go to school, or when she struggles to find the right words. She manages to make it through each day with the help of her friends and the art she loves to make.

978-1-5344-5991-5 Salaam Reads ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 "Thirteen is no time to be stressed," Deena's mom admonishes. On the surface, she's right: Deena and her brother have a roof over their heads, parents who are doing their best, and a wider community of Pakistani Americans in Falls Church, Virginia. Still, kids the world over know otherwise, even those like Deena who live in relative privilege. They aren't always afforded the opportunity to express this emotion in a healthy manner, if at all. Deena's stress manifests itself physically--in her nighttime teeth clenching and persistent nausea during the daytime. It's unclear, too, whether the seventh-grader finds any relief by creating art. Despite an obvious talent for drawing, internal drive, and encouragement from friends and teachers, Deena remains unsure of the validity of her pursuits. Possible resolutions to these issues are introduced about halfway, including a budding relationship with a fellow Desi artist and mentor figure. Although Deena's anxiety isn't officially diagnosed until well after the midpoint, it's a minor flaw in an otherwise extremely relatable story. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Pakistani American Deena from northern Virginia is stressed to the point of physical illness; her chronic insecurities about being an artist-and even just a well-adjusted teen-aren't helped by her parents constantly fighting over money.

In hopes of easing the family burden and showcasing her artistic abilities to gain recognition, she decides to help promote her mother's Pakistani clothing boutique online. But when business at the shop picks up and familial relationships and friendships are torn apart, Deena struggles to ask for help and is unsure about what to do, until she reaches her breaking point. First-person point of view and thoughtful Urdu and English conversations flow seamlessly in Khan's middle grade novel, and the book tenderly covers topics about social media, mental health, art, and generational barriers in parent-child relationships. When Deena creates social media accounts for both her mother's boutique and her art, for example, Deena and others discuss making safe decisions online, and dialogue between Deena and her cousin underscores the message that photo-editing apps don't necessarily reflect true beauty. Deena finds a role model in desi artist Salma and expresses how innovation and representation are needed in the art world as "art gives us space to claim our narratives, to speak out truths, and to inspire change." Despite her persistent self-doubt and her parents' unrealistic expectations, Deena ultimately triumphs, advocating for herself and persuading them to join a therapy program with her to manage her anxiety. This is an effective reminder that everyone is a work in progress and that young readers have the power to courageously draw their future. DR COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Thirteen-year-old Deena Rahman's world revolves around spending time with her friends, creating art, and appeasing her Pakistani American family. Deena also helps her mother run a clothing boutique selling Pakistani outfits, hoping to alleviate tension in their home over finances. Deena often overhears her parents fighting about money and feels guilty for their having to spend it on things she needs, such as dental work. She also hesitates to tell them about things she and her brother, Musa, would benefit from, such as art classes for her and talent scouts to further Musa's chances at a soccer scholarship. She tries to ignore the daily nausea and gnawing in her stomach, but soon the physical manifestations of stress demand attention. Both Deena and her parents must confront her anxiety issues and the importance of support. With helpful friends and an artist mentor, she learns to deprioritize others' expectations and advocate for herself, including pushing back against her parents' reluctance to allow her to see a school psychologist. A sensitive look at the effects of anxiety and the pressures of today (including social media) on young people's mental health. Sadaf Siddique(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Seventh grader Deena has a passion for art, a supportive Pakistani American community--and anxiety. Deena feels nauseated every morning; her clenched jaw has even resulted in a cracked tooth. Her parents already fight over finances, so an expensive nightguard adds to the stress. If Mama could earn more from her small home business designing and selling desi clothing, the family would also have enough money for Deena to take drawing lessons. With the help of cousins and friends, Deena successfully executes an online marketing campaign for her mom's business, unfurled with careful attention to internet safety and featuring a logo she designed herself. These achievements, plus encouragement from a new artist customer, help grow Deena's confidence in her creative abilities. But now that she's getting accolades, she encounters relationship turmoil. That, plus the impact of her parents' fighting, leads to a scary panic attack in math class. Deena embraces help from a team of adults at school, but will her parents be able to understand and accept her mental health needs? Meanwhile, through her art, Deena goes on a journey of personal and creative discovery and self-expression. Readers will delight in Deena's endearing voice: She's an inventive and relatable protagonist. Khan skillfully weaves in cultural references and Urdu phrases alongside thoughtful questions about the arts, mental health, social media, parent-child relationships, and the pressures adolescent girls face about their appearances. A nuanced and quietly powerful story. (Fiction. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Palestinian American middle schooler Deena is experiencing stress so severe it's affecting her body, resulting in panic attacks, daily nausea, and a cracked tooth. Some of her anxiety stems from interpersonal relationships: her cool cousin Parisa is a social media star, but Deena isn't allowed to have her own account and doesn't want to make one without her super-smart best friend Lucia anyway. Worries relating to her family's finances and how often her parents fight about money, as well as her desire to become an artist; despite the disapproval she suspects she'd receive from her family were she to voice her dreams; further exacerbate her stress. When Deena decides to make a social media account for her mother's tailoring business, she hopes that the exposure will help the boutique take off and ease her worries; but they only get worse. Mildly uneven pacing gives way to authentic-feeling and engaging character interactions. Through candid first-person narration, Khan (Zara's Rules for Living Your Best Life) examines adolescent anxiety and its various triggers and depicts adaptive coping mechanisms, including making the most of mentorship and support from one's community. Ages 8: 12. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Deena, a seventh grade Pakistani American girl, has such stress and anxiety over things like growing up, her family's finances, and not feeling quite as mature as her cousin, that she grinds her teeth at night and has trouble eating breakfast first thing in the morning. When she tries to use her artistic talents to help her mother's clothing business, she quickly hits some snags with family and friends. Can she get past her worries and find her voice to express her feelings? Like Khan's other middle grade novels, this book is written with an authentic middle school voice and blends culture, realistic worries, and mental health in a way upper elementary school and young middle school readers will appreciate. Deena is figuring out who she is in relation to her artistic skills, but still has to tow the line with her mother's expectations and concerns about what others will think of her. The chapters are quick and fast-paced, making the story fly by with proper resolutions. Readers will root for Deena because her struggles will resonate with their own. VERDICT An excellent read for elementary and middle school collections not the least because of its authentic voice and pacing.—Molly Dettmann

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2165000 Grasping Mysteries: Girls Who Loved Math (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Jeannine Atkins Told in vibrant, evocative poems, this stunning novel celebrates seven remarkable	1	$18.99

women who used math as their key to explore the mysteries of the universe and grew up to do innovative work that changed the world. (Novel In Verse)
978-1-5344-6068-3 Atheneum ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.2 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 960

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 In this companion book to Finding Wonders (2016), Atkins presents the lives of seven girls who excelled in mathematics and later, often after overcoming significant obstacles, made significant contributions in related fields. Caroline Herschel discovered a comet, and Vera Rubin provided evidence of dark matter in the universe. Inventor Hertha Ayrton became the first woman electrical engineer. Meticulous statistical records were key to Florence Nightingale's success in changing hospital care and Edna Lee Paisano's progress in gaining significantly greater representation for Native Americans in Census Bureau reports. Marie Tharp turned a mountain of data into maps of the Atlantic Ocean floor, while Katherine Johnson calculated trajectories to the moon. Written in free verse, the text is welcoming, informative, pithy, wry, very readable, and occasionally haunting: as Florence Nightingale carries her lantern through the hospital wards at night, soldiers reach out to touch the shadow she leaves behind. Still, doctors resentful of her authority refer to her not as the Lady with the Lamp but as the Lady with the Hammer. A heartening celebration of mathematically gifted women. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Three Girls Who Changed Science (BCCB 6/16), Jeannine Atkins presents a distinguished sorority, drawing readers beyond the customary strictures of collective biographies and into a sensitive exploration not only of accomplishments but the resilient inner lives of women who struggled to navigate male-dominated fields. Seven chapters in verse highlight the familiar-Caroline Herschel, whose calculations led to multiple comet discoveries; Marie Tharp, whose sea floor maps forced geologists to take sea floor spread seriously; Katherine Johnson, whose mathematical work at NASA is finally receiving public acclaim. They also shed new light on a familiar name: nurse Florence Nightingale, whose data collection and graphing opened inroads in public health. Three less familiar figures add depth to the field: Hertha Marks Ayrton, for whom math led to a pioneering career in electrical engineering; Edna Lee Paisano, whose analytical work at the Census Bureau led to a career dedicated to redress of the decennial undercount of fellow Native Americans; and Vera Rubin, whose groundbreaking research on the speed of outer stars in spiral galaxies provided evidence for the existence of dark matter. Although longer biographical works are seldom grist for readalouds, Atkins' respect for the particularities of each life manifests in the image-rich poetry that recommends itself to oral presentation. For Caroline Herschel, for instance, "Winter offers long nights with more time/ to sweep the sky, moving the telescope like a broom/ meant to gather every star." Notes and bibliographies are appended for each entry. This is a must-buy for STEAM collections. EB

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Atkins's (Finding Wonders: Three Girls Who Changed Science, rev. 7/16) latest collective biography in verse spotlights seven "women who used math to frame and solve problems, fix things, or understand the size of the universe." Tracing her subjects' lives from childhood to adulthood, Atkins stitches together intimate slice-of-life moments and impressive professional accomplishments, taking poetic license with "dialogue and sensory detail." First up is astronomer Caroline Herschel (1750-1848), who "writes a note to Dr. Maskelyne / at the Royal Observatory, announcing her second comet. / Then she measures sugar to make gooseberry jam." By pairing comet-discovering with jam-making, and subversively categorizing both as women's work, Atkins underscores what would have been an outrageous notion in late-eighteenth-century England. Similarly multilayered and thoughtful are Atkins's portraits of nurse and statistician Florence Nightingale; inventor and electrical engineer Hertha Marks Ayrton; geologist and oceanographic cartographer Marie Tharp; NASA mathematician Katherine Johnson; Census Bureau statistician Edna Lee Paisano; and astronomer Vera Rubin. Astute and richly detailed, Atkins's free-verse biographies address head-on the challenges -- both shared (sexism) and distinct (financial hardship, racism, work-family balance, illness) -- that these passionate and determined trailblazers overcame. And it's entirely fitting that Atkins's lyrical tributes are keenly evocative when referencing math: "Subtraction is soothing, though she dislikes / landing on zero. Something is missing. She wants more." An author's note, brief biographical profiles, and a selected bibliography are appended. (Copyright 2020 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews This collective verse biography "honors women who used math to frame and solve problems, fix things, or understand the size of the universe." Atkins opens with German Caroline Herschel (1750-1848), the first woman to discover a comet, and closes with American Vera Rubin (1928-2016), an astronomer who proved the existence of dark matter. Throughout, she illustrates how each woman faced personal obstacles as well as gender bias but never allowed "insults or lack of faith to stop" her. Florence Nightingale (1820-1910) revolutionized the nursing profession through use of medical statistics, and Hertha Marks Ayrton (1854-1923) became the first female electrical engineer, registering 26 patents; both women were English. American geologist Marie Tharp (1920-2006) helped develop the first map of the entire ocean floor while her countrywoman mathematician Katherine Johnson (1918-2020) endured segregation as she calculated trajectories for NASA. At the U.S. Census Bureau, statistician Edna Lee Paisano (1948-2014) used math to "give everyone a fair chance." With the exception of African American Johnson and Nez Perce Paisano, the women profiled are white. Presented chronologically in engaging verse with a feminist tone, the text artfully weaves scientific data and history with imagined "dialogue and sensory detail based on what's known about the time, places, and questions" of these remarkable math mavens. A line drawing introduces each woman's biography, and the "Women Who Widened Horizons" section summarizes their achievements. Thoroughly researched, creatively presented, inspiring real-life role models for girls who love math. (author's note, selected bibliography) (Verse biography. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2161586 Girl and the Witch's Garden (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Erin Bowman

The grand house and its garden hold many secrets--some of which may even save her father--and Piper will need to believe in herself, her new friends, and magic if she wants to unlock them before it's too late.

978-1-5344-6158-1 Simon & Schuster ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 740

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—Twelve-year-old Piper Peavey lives with her father Atticus in Connecticut. As her father faces terminal cancer, Piper is dumped at the Mallory Estate, owned by her estranged mother Sophia and grandmother Melena. Steeped in magical rumors, Mallory Estate is also home to foster children Julius, Kenji, Teddy, and Camilla, who possess magical gifts. Under Sophia's instruction, they work to locate the estate's enchanted garden where the elixir of life is hidden. Desperate to save Atticus, Piper develops her own ability and reaches the garden first, teaming up with Teddy to solve three magical riddles. The children, Sophia, and Melena each are motivated by different goals, and Piper's family secrets guide the final outcome. Bowman's third-person limited perspective gives readers a close understanding of Piper's emotions as she faces her mother's desertion and her father's prognosis. The writing is smooth, and Piper's dialogue with the children and her mother purposefully advances the plot. As with any Faustean bargain, Piper's desire to have the elixir at any cost creates an uncomfortable tension that electrifies the story. The world-building, however, has a tenuous quality. At times, Bowman has to inform readers how Piper figures something out or what the magical rules are. Her explanations seem more the writer's construct than a tight-knit magical universe. VERDICT An intriguing premise whose execution is acceptable though not outstanding, saved by Piper's honest grief. Purchase where interest indicates.—Caitlin Augusta, Stratford Library Association, CT

#2161587 Dream Weaver (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Reina Luz Alegre

Twelve-year-old Zoey navigates the tricky waters of friendship while looking for a way to save her grandfather's struggling business.

978-1-5344-6231-1 Simon & Schuster ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.
Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 810

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–5—Twelve-year-old Zoey is used to going along with her dad's ever-changing dreams, even if it means moving every few months. After all, he's the only parent that Zoey and her older brother JosT have left. When Zoey's father announces that he's heading to a new job in New York City and leaving Zoey and JosT to stay with their Cuban grandfather at the Jersey Shore, she's not sure how to feel. However, Zoey is soon distracted by trying to save her grandpa's bowling alley from bankruptcy, and a middle school bowling league that desperately needs another member. Zoey is a realistic and likeable protagonist doing her best for her family and new community in a stressful situation. Grief is a frequent topic, but it never dominates the story: Zoey and her family are still dealing with both her mom and abuelita's recent deaths, and their absence is often mentioned. While Zoey's family members are sometimes self-absorbed, their affection for each other and their care for Zoey is always clear. The outcomes for the bowling league and bowling alley are slightly predictable, but earned all the same. VERDICT Alegre has written a warm, funny, empowering book that's sure to appeal to fans of Meg Medina's Merci Suarez Changes Gears or Pablo Cartaya's The Epic Fail of Arturo Zamora. Recommended for all collections.—Kelsey Socha, Springfield City Library, MA

#2293304 Fly (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Alison Hughes

Felix Landon Yarrow, a fourteen-year-old with cerebral palsy, is captivated by the noble, chivalrous ideals of knighthood. So when he fears a school villain poses a danger to his lady love, finding a way to save her becomes his quest. In the elaborate plot he creates, Felix will triumphantly conquer his enemy and rescue his "damsel in distress."

978-1-5253-0583-2 Kids Can Press ©2022 5-1/4 x 9 1 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile NP

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Free verse poems voiced by a wheelchair-using 14-year-old with cerebral palsy form a unique, Cervantes-tinged novel from Hughes (Hit the Ground Running). Felix Landon Yarrow; F.L.Y., or Fly; carries his late father's well-worn copy of Don Quixote at all times as "physical proof/ to ignorant people/ that there's a/ mind/ in this/ body of mine." Often disregarded by his peers, Felix nevertheless suggests that "invisibility/ is my superpower" as he observes his crush, Daria, and watches out when popular Carter, whom Felix considers dangerous, also takes an interest in her. After Carter initiates a criminal money-making enterprise at school, Felix channels his hero Quixote, beginning a ploy to protect Daria and bring Carter to justice. Hughes's complex characterization of Felix; private, well-intentioned, frustrated with others' low expectations for him; eloquently rings through each observational stanza, especially through his evolving relationship with his "extra, extra" extroverted school aide Levi. The poems, most a page or two in length, stagger words for emphasis and emotional impact, resulting in a seamless and immersive narrative about one teen's "quest/ for a noble life." Felix, Carter, and Levi cue as white; Daria is brown-skinned. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Hilary McMahon, Westwood Creative Artists. (Oct.)

#2350037 Cricket War (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Tho Pham

The gripping story of a boy's escape by boat from Communist Vietnam in 1980. Eleven-year-old Thọ Phạm lives with his family in South Vietnam. He spends his afternoons playing soccer and cricket fighting, but life is slowly changing under the Communists. His parents are worried, and Thọ knows the Communist army will soon knock on their door to make his brother, and then him, join them. Still, it shocks him when his father says he's arranged for Thọ to leave, immediately. Thọ tries to be brave as he sets out on a harrowing journey toward the unknown.

978-1-5253-0655-6 Kids Can Press ©2023 5-1/4 x 8 160 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 930

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Booklist It's been more than 40 years since many in Vietnam fled in the aftermath of war, stealing away with boats on dangerous journeys through the South China Sea. Pham's fictional chapter book about his own childhood journey will fascinate readers who are both interested in history and its social ramifications, as well as those who love a story of pure adventure. Just 11, a boy named Tho, like Pham himself, boards a boat without family members and endures a trip fraught with pirates, starvation conditions, and storms until he is rescued by a German boat. On shore in a refugee camp, he bonds with a family he meets, as well as one he knew from home, and perseveres, though sometimes feeling as trapped as the crickets he used to collect to fight in neighborhood bug battles. Like the tough insects, though, Tho is resilient and can fight for himself and others—especially his new makeshift family—without hurting his enemies, and eventually, he finds his way, by plane this time, to his brother in Canada. Inspiring.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In 1980s Vietnam, a boy suddenly becomes a refugee, lost amid a sea of uncertainty. Th? loves cricket fighting, and he and his best friend, Lâm, eagerly compete to see whose cricket will win. Despite this childhood joy, there are certain unsaid rules in their small village. It is not uncommon for young men and even families to disappear. No one talks about why this is happening, and if they do it is never the truth: People are trying to leave Vietnam to escape the required conscription of young men in the Communist army. If any of the families are caught, the surviving relatives will pay dearly. Though Th? knows this, it doesn't dull the pain of finding Lâm and Lâm's brother, An, gone one day. Th?'s own older brother, Vu, is also nearing conscription age, and Th? overhears his parents whispering at night and notices them quietly selling their furniture to earn money to send the boys away. Vu leaves first, and a year later, Th? boards a small boat. He stows away with pirates who raid the boat and eventually navigates life at a refugee camp in the Philippines; through it all, he longs to reunite with his brother. Based on Ph?'m's own experiences of leaving Vietnam at age 12, this action-packed, emotionally intense story is counterbalanced by moments of kindness and joy. A harrowing yet hopeful account of a compelling journey. (pronunciation guide, map, afterword, a brief recent history of Vietnam) (Historical fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Debut author Pham and McTavish (Life Skills, for adults) weave a vividly wrought story of hope, loss, and inner strength in this semiautobiographical recounting of Pham's experience fleeing Vietnam. In 1980, 11-year-old Tho lives in Communist Ho` Chi Minh City with his family and spends his days enjoying cricket racing with his best friend Lam. Then, Lam leaves without warning or a goodbye, like many others have, to escape the war draft. Suddenly, Tho 's older brother Vu disappears, too. A year later, Tho is floored to learn that his father has arranged for Tho to leave as well, on a boat to America, where he will live with his uncle. But the boat on which he escapes is repeatedly ransacked by pirates. When one pirate crew offers the children on the boat sweets, Tho decides to stow away on their ship ("any pirates who give out treats must have kind hearts. These are the right pirates"). While the protagonist's journey is plagued by trauma and upheaval, and the authors detail Pham's and other Vietnamese refugees' experiences to tear-jerking effect, the creators also offer comfort via joyful interactions throughout this carefully crafted, fast-paced read. Ages 9: 12. (Oct.)

Quantity
Unit Price

#2325682 (Vol. 01) Boy with Wings (Hardcover (POB))
written by Lenny Henry

1 $21.99

When Tunde sprouts wings and learns he's all that stands between Earth and total destruction, suddenly school is the least of his problems. Luckily, his rag-tag group of pals have got his back, and with his new powers, Tunde is ready to fly in the face of danger.

978-1-5248-8471-0 Andrews McMeel Publishing ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 208 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 800

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly British actor and comedian Henry (Black British Lives Matter, for adults) touches on issues of inclusivity, prejudice, and personal pride in this lively fantasy adventure. While Tunde, an adopted British-born Caribbean 12-year-old, publicly claims that he doesn't mind not knowing anything about his birth family, his private feelings are "bendier and twistier than a rubber band in a microwave." Still, he's happy with his parents, who share and help him connect with his heritage, and who support him through relentless school bullying surrounding his "beaky" nose. When birds of all kinds begin defending Tunde from bullies, Tunde is grateful for their help, if a little weirded out. But nothing about the events could have prepared him for his suddenly sprouting wings. Tunde is soon summoned by a bird-like people called the Aavians to help combat their enemies, the mammalian Furleenians. Animated illustrations by Ferrell (Looking for Happy) depict Tunde's school struggles alongside his high-flying adventures. Though Tunde's unearthing of his paranormal past evokes standard superhero fare, Henry's effusive first-person prose and solid grasp on heartwarming familial and friendship dynamics make for a high-spirited origin tale. A classic-feeling superhero comic by Buckingham (Dead Boy Detectives) concludes, depicting further adventures. Ages 8: 12. (June)

#2329720 Nell and the Netherbeast (Hardcover (POB))
written by Adi Rule

Quantity 1 Unit Price $21.99

Twelve-year-old Nell Stoker loves animals. She's been working toward becoming a junior volunteer at her local animal shelter for what feels like forever. But now it's summertime, and her parents are making her go to her Aunt Jerry's old bed and breakfast in Deer Valley with her older sister Lulu. When Nell crosses paths with the Netherbeast (a creature that is decidedly not a cat), his hijinks leave her wondering if she's made a new best friend or if Netherbeast will destroy the whole B&B (not even by accident). It's up to Nell to help save her aunt's B&B and solve the mystery of what might be in the basement. Between the mysteries of Rose Cottage and the creepy Netherbeast-Nell is in for an unforgettable summer adventure.

978-1-5248-8472-7 Andrews McMeel Publishing ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/3 288 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 600

#2278365 Best Friends, Bikinis, and Other Summer Catastrophes (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kristi Wientge

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Alex has always known her best friend and next-door neighbor, Will, will be there for her. Until a girl from the pool named Rebekah comes over to them and says hi. Suddenly, Will is changing his clothes, restyling his hair, and breaking all of their summer plans and Alex is not happy about it. Every summer, she and Will come up with a new challenge. This year, it's a treehouse. Now Alex is wrangling up summer jobs and keeping tabs on the new girl, hoping that in completing their treehouse, she can keep from losing her best friend and her summer from falling apart.

978-1-5344-8502-0 Simon & Schuster ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 730

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 The summer before eighth grade is supposed to be full of the fun and interesting challenges that Alex and her best friend, Will, create together. But when popular girl Rebekah starts hanging out with Will and Alex at the pool, Alex notices things changing between herself and Will. As Will starts acting differently, their friendship feels like it's starting to fracture. Here, Wientge (Honeybees and Frenemies, 2019) masters the awkward in-between moments of growing up and the world changing around you without you being ready for it.

Alex navigates not only her changing friendships but also her family dynamics, with her grandfather moving on after her beloved Nana's death. The characters are well developed, and nothing in Alex's journey is easily answered. Her inner voice and turmoil ring true as Alex moves from feeling like a kid to becoming a teen. A perfect choice about the emotional in-between experience for middle-schoolers. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews During the summer before eighth grade, Alex experiences challenging changes. One day at the pool, her longtime best friend, Will, suddenly becomes interested in Rebekah, a popular, well-off girl from school. Alex starts to wonder about body image and wearing a bikini, like Rebekah does. She rejects Rebekah's friendly overtures, not trusting that Rebekah might genuinely like her company, too. She resents Will's efforts to attract Rebekah but also worries that Rebekah may be toying with Will's affections. Alex is also upset about other aspects of her life. She feels that her mother, a busy therapist, expects too much in terms of household chores, caring for her younger brothers, and forcing her to take a babysitting class to get other jobs. Alex has a great relationship with her dad, however, and he helps her build a treehouse with Will, a project she hopes will keep Will away from Rebekah. Will and Alex must earn money to buy materials, industriously finding odd neighborhood jobs like painting and picking up dog poop. As the summer slips by, things improve on many fronts for Alex, from friendships to family relationships. Containing some limited dramatic tension, this realistic story about tween emotional swings reads easily and rings true. Characters in this suburban town are presumed White. An enjoyable read about changing friendships and responsibilities. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2235371 Carry Me Home (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Janet Fox

Twelve-year-old Lulu and her younger sister, Serena, have a secret. As Daddy always says, "it's best if we keep it to ourselves," and so they have. But hiding your past is one thing. Hiding where you live-and that your Daddy has gone missing-is harder. 978-1-5344-8508-2 Simon & Schuster ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 790

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Reviews by: Booklist After her mother's death, 12-year-old Lulu has been living in a run-down SUV with her younger sister, Serena, and their devastated father. Montana is a far cry from their familiar Texas, but they've made it work, setting up camp in an RV park, spending days at school and work, and sleeping in the car at night. Dad promises better days ahead, but their precarious existence is upended when, one day, he fails to return home. An increasingly anxious Lulu carries on as usual, fearing sibling separation if anyone finds out. Waiting for her father's return, she dodges questions and cares for Serena while navigating middle school and increasingly suspicious (but kind) townspeople. Fox's moving story is told in flashes of the "Now," "Before," and "Way Before," slowly and affectingly filling in the family's history, as well as a detailed explanation of their situation. A reassuring but realistic ending encourages readers to ask for help when needed and emphasizes that there is always someone who will care. A compassionate and empathetic examination of being unoused.

#2227545 Glasshouse of Stars (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Shirley Marr

Meixing Lim and her family have arrived at the New House in the New Land. Her parents inherited the home from First Uncle who died tragically and unexpectedly while picking oranges in the backyard. Her Ma Ma likes to remind Meixing the family never could have afforded to move here otherwise, so she should be thankful for this opportunity. 978-1-5344-8883-0 Simon & Schuster ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 870

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly rr's (Little Jiang) uneven sophomore middle grade follows quiet, pensive Chinese child Meixing Lei, her pregnant Ma Ma, and Ba Ba, "Old People" and new immigrants to the "New Land," where recently deceased First Uncle has bequeathed them a house that Meixing names "Big Scary." Seemingly shifting and growing to reflect Meixing's emotions, the house contains a mystical glasshouse, where Meixing sees past and future visions and interacts with First Uncle. But when tragedy strikes, the family must rely on their Vietnamese neighbors, the Huynhs, including sullen Kevin, a classmate of Meixing's. Certain elements, including a lunch box moment and Ma Ma's pressure on Meixing to become a doctor and bring honor to the family, will be familiar to readers of similar diasporic titles. While the narration doesn't always feel age-appropriate ("Ailing, so highly foreign educated but completely ignorant about the proceedings of a traditional funeral") and the prophetic glasshouse feels underutilized, the second-person perspective allows direct access to Meixing's rich inner landscape, and the hopeful end to this gentle speculative novel will satisfy. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Gemma Cooper, the Bent Agency. (June)

#2365458 Unstuck (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Barbara Dee

A middle grade novel about a girl whose struggles with anxiety and writer's block set off unexpected twists and turns, both on and off the page.

978-1-5344-8986-8 Aladdin ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Seventh-grader Lyla wants to—no, has to—submit her fantasy novel to the local writing contest. Overshadowed by her older sister (who’s refusing to apply to college) and now rejected by her used-to-be best friend, Lyla feels like she has something to prove. But she’s so desperate to be seen as a writer that she ends up completely blocked. With her teacher’s help, Lyla gradually learns to embrace the writing journey rather than the destination. Lyla’s slow progress to make meaningful changes to her story or relationships can drag at times, but dynamic side characters, such as her older sister and new friend, Journey, add color to Lyla’s more insular perspective. With well-established insight into the interior lives of middle-schoolers, Dee (Haven Jacobs Saves the Planet, 2022) nails some of the tiny, painful intricacies of hesitant new friendships and feeling boxed in by other people’s expectations. Lyla’s passion and frustrations will be relatable to any aspiring young writer who’s struggled with feeling blocked by their own big idea, and they may find Lyla’s techniques helpful in their own writing.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Seventh grader Lyla Benjamin is bursting with ideas for the extravagant fantasy novel she's been plotting for a year, which centers on witches, feuding sisters, and a one-toed beast. But when her English class begins a creative writing unit that will end with the students participating in a town-wide writing contest that Lyla's apparently perfect older sister Dahlia once won, Lyla experiences unexpected writer's block. Even though she knows where she wants her novel to go, Lyla feels paralyzed by her goal to create an impressive story, resulting in distractions when she's supposed to be writing. Her stress over the fast-approaching deadline is amplified by interpersonal complications including a growing rift with her best friend Rania, who's attending a different middle school, and Dahlia confiding in Lyla that she's uncertain about attending college. Through Lyla's by turns earnest and anxious first-person perspective, Dee (Haven Jacobs Saves the Planet) deftly depicts the complex and sometimes turbulent writing process, and the self-doubt that can come with it. A section titled "Twenty-Five Ways to Get Unstuck" concludes. Lyla and her family are white; the supporting cast is racially diverse. Ages 9: 13. Agent: Jill Grinberg, Jill Grinberg Literary. (Feb.)

#2323048 Firefly Summer (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Morgan Matson

For as long as Ryanna Stuart can remember, her summers have been spent with her father and his new wife. Just the three of them, structured, planned, and quiet. But this summer is different. This summer, she's received a letter from her grandparents--grandparents neither she nor her dad have spoken to since her mom's death--inviting her to stay with them at an old summer camp in the Poconos.

978-1-5344-9335-3 Simon & Schuster ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 12.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Eleven-year-old Ryanna doesn’t remember her mother, who died eight years ago, but she’s curious about her. So, when her mother’s parents invite her to spend the summer at their home on a Pennsylvania lake, she agrees to go. They used to run a children’s camp there. Now their children and grandchildren return every summer, living in cabins and gathering for shared meals, campfires, and adventures. Ryanna quickly warms to her grandparents and the unusual degree of freedom and camaraderie that she and her cousins enjoy. It’s a heady experience for an only child. Learning that a ruthless developer claims to own her grandparents’ property, Ryanna attempts to save their home by following a trail of mysterious clues left by her mother. Matson, whose previous books were written for young adults, makes her middle-grade debut with this endearing book for tweens. The characters, young and old, have their quirks and differences of opinion, but the lakeside camp has a mellowing effect on nearly everyone. Ryanna’s first-person narrative offers a balanced record of events and reflections while bringing the characters to life as people with different needs, moods, and motivations. The mystery and a related treasure hunt bring additional drama, which mounts until the novel reaches its satisfying conclusion.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When a tween accepts an invitation to stay with her estranged maternal grandparents in the Poconos, she finds a large and lively extended family, and a treasure map, in this captivating mystery, a middle grade debut from Matson (Take Me Home Tonight). Eager to hear stories about her mom, who died when she was three, only child Ryanna Stuart nervously agrees when the Van Camps invite her to stay for the summer at their inoperative summer property, Camp Van Camp, which is in danger of being razed by a neighbor. As the mystery-loving 11-year-old settles into the summer's rhythms, she grows closer to her newfound family, teaming up with cousins her age to follow marginalia once scribbled by her mother in a mystery book and to locate a treasure map that they hope will save the camp. Matson's vibrant setting, peopled with an easygoing extended family that encourages free play, is irresistibly rendered, while Ryanna's quest to learn more about her mother, as well as her father's falling out with the family, imbues the carefully plotted central mystery with emotional resonance. Ryanna and her dad are white; intersectional diversity is present in the extended family. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Emily van Beek, Folio Jr./Folio Literary. (May)

#2332777 Farewell Cuba, Mi Isla (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alexandra Diaz

A poignant middle grade novel about two girls fleeing 1960 Cuba with their family inspired by the author's family's history.

978-1-5344-9540-1 Simon & Schuster/Paula Wiseman Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist tter to Cuba, a country that hundreds of thousands of its people never saw again following the Revolution. Drawing from the experiences of her family and other exiles, Diaz offers a story following two cousins, Victoria and Jackie, who are both forced to emigrate from Cuba and start a new life in the U.S. with their families. The hardship they face as refugees is a common story among Cubans in exile, but this timely story is told with middle-grade and tween readers in mind. Though the girls shouldn't have to worry about anything beyond enjoying their childhood, Victoria and Jackie find the strength in each other to step up and do whatever is necessary to support their family. Since the tale takes place in the 1960s, readers also get a glimpse of what race relations in the U.S. were like at the time, as well as attitudes toward Russians and other groups. Whether as a novel in itself or a framework for understanding a place and time in history, this is a moving, poignant read.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly For as long as they've been alive, 12-year-old Cuban cousins Victoria and Jackie have never been far apart; they live in the same building with their immediate families, and spend their summers at Papalfonso and Mamalara's farm. But it seems that their carefree days together are coming to an end; when Fidel Castro rises to power in 1960, people Victoria has known all her life begin fleeing the island. Protesters are being arrested en masse, and Victoria's father, who opposes Castro's regime, worries that they might be next. Victoria and her parents soon leave for Miami, believing they'll be able to return to Cuba in a few weeks. Meanwhile, amid rising tensions and violence, Jackie must decide whether she should leave, too; without her parents or younger brother. Employing the cousins' alternating perspectives, Diaz (Santiago's Road Home) weaves a compelling tale that sensitively depicts the struggles many Cuban migrants faced during this period, including financial hardship, losing loved ones, and racist bullying at school. Inspired by her own family's experiences, as discussed in an author's note, Diaz delivers a well-researched story that serves as a compassionate introduction to this underdiscussed part of American and Cuban history. A glossary concludes. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Kristin Ostby, Greenhouse Literary. (Sept.)

#2218758 Across the Pond (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joy McCullough

Callie can't wait for her new life to start. After a major friendship breakup in San Diego, moving overseas to Scotland gives her the perfect chance to reinvent herself. On top of that, she's going to live in a real-life castle! But as romantic as life in a castle sounds, the reality is a little less comfortable: it's run-down, freezing, and crawling with critters. Plus, starting off on the wrong foot with the gardener's granddaughter doesn't help her nerves about making new friends.

978-1-5344-7121-4 Atheneum ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 800

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Painfully ostracized by her former friends in San Diego, Callie is ready for a fresh start. But when her family moves to a small Scottish community and starts renovating the dilapidated castle that her parents have inherited, she just can't face the prospect of a new school. Her parents agree to homeschooling if she will participate in an activity with other kids, so she reluctantly joins a birdwatching club. Sid, a neighbor close to Callie's age, is initially hostile and later seems indifferent, but Callie perseveres and befriends her as well as Raj, an amiable local boy who enjoys birding. Meanwhile, Callie discovers the journal of a girl who recorded the birds she spotted in Scotland after her evacuation from London in 1939. McCullough's novel aptly portrays Callie as a girl rebounding from a painful experience and trying to reinvent herself in a new place, inspired and heartened by the words of a displaced girl during WWII. With appealing jacket art, a distinctive setting, and an involving narrative, this inviting book delivers a good story. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A new life in a new country does not, at first, bring the fresh start Callie hoped for. Seventh grader Callie; her 7-year-old brother, Jax; and their parents leave San Diego after inheriting a castle in the Scottish countryside. Callie's parents, who as grad students rented a cottage on the grounds and became close to the late owner, Lady Whittington-Spence, begin much-needed renovations. Callie, who departed California ostracized by her friends, imagines the cachet of being the exotic American in her new school. However, while the ebullient Jax quickly settles in, Callie embarrasses herself on her first visit to the local school. Burning with shame, she persuades her parents to let her try home schooling and (eventually) makes friends with Sid, the prickly granddaughter of her parents' gardener. Most excitingly, she uncovers a journal kept by one Pippa Spence when she was evacuated to the Highlands during World War II. Pippa was a keen bird-watcher, and, as Callie reads her journal, excerpts of which are interspersed, and explores the grounds and its bird life with Sid, she starts to put down roots and gain a new perspective on painful events back home. This character-driven story of introspection and growth will appeal to thoughtful readers. The intensely awkward self-consciousness of the middle school years is presented with realistic sensitivity and insight. Main characters are White, and there is natural, realistic diversity in the supporting cast. An emotionally perceptive story of awakening compassion for self and others. (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Seventh grader Callie, who is white, can't wait to trade her "small" San Diego existence for life in the sprawling Scottish castle her parents have inherited from Lady Whittington-Spence, a noblewoman from whom they once rented a cottage on the grounds. Callie's life in Scotland is far from perfect, however: the castle is badly in need of repair, and the kids at her new school seem no different from the classmates who turned against her at home. She begs to be homeschooled, but her parents will only agree if she chooses a social activity. Callie opts to join a local bird-watching club and, despite the disappointing club's sexist leader and obnoxious all-boy membership, develops a passion for birds. She also connects with two kindred spirits; club member Raj, who is of Indian descent, and Sid, the strawberry-blond granddaughter of her parents' landscaper; and finds the diary of Pippa Spence, which details her evacuation to the Highlands during WWII and offers insight into the social nature of starlings. McCullough (We Are the Ashes, We Are the Fire), who lived in a Scottish castle as a young child, writes with compassion and knowledge as she traces Callie's ups and downs in a new country alongside her burgeoning, awkwardly won knowledge of friendship and self. Ages 10: up. Agent: Jim McCarthy, Dystel, Goderich, and Bourret. (Mar.)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness A Scottish castle, birdwatching and finding one's flock are at the center of the charming middle-grade novel Across the Pond by Joy McCullough (Blood Water Paint; A Field Guide to Getting Lost).

#2240782 Care and Keeping of Freddy (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Susan Hill Long

Georgia Weathers's worry machine has been on full blast since her mom, Blythe, took off in Lyle Lenczycki's blue sedan. Earlier that same day, Blythe gave Georgia a bearded dragon named Freddy. Georgia is convinced that if she loves Freddy enough, Blythe will come home.

978-1-5344-7519-9 Simon & Schuster ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 640

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Georgia is given Freddy, a bearded dragon, as a pet by her mother, Blythe, who abandons her that very same day. Blythe runs away with her boyfriend, Lyle, leaving Georgia with her quiet, devoted father, Stanley. Georgia, 11, longs for Blythe to return—and makes Freddy a proxy for her mother's love, vowing to do her best for him. Georgia's life is further upended when a larger-than-life boy arrives in their small Maine town, a foster child taken in by a highly religious family. Roly's acquaintance with Georgia and her best friend, Maria, begins after he steals a cat collar from the pet store. Despite witnessing this shocking event, the girls become good friends with him, and the three find a secret refuge in the woods, a glass house that ultimately becomes a danger zone. Strong friendships, parental love (and neglect), and resilient children feature in this slice-of-contemporary-small-town life. Georgia copes with her situation through help from peers and sympathetic adult friends (Maria's paternal grandmother plays an important role, giving Georgia loving advice). This is a realistic, sometimes humorous, sometimes sad family story; while Blythe has problems with alcohol, both Stanley and Lyle turn out to be good fathers. The book follows a White default for most characters; Maria is Mexican American. A sincere story of caring and community in the face of family struggles. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly ther, Blythe, leaves their small Maine town with an old flame, Blythe buys Georgia a bearded dragon, Freddy. One year and eight months later, now 11-year-old Georgia, who is white, and her best friend Maria Elena Garcia, who is Mexican American meet Roland Park, a redheaded new arrival in Prospect Harbor. When Roland, a foster child, shoplifts from the pet shop, the girls chase after him, and a friendship is born. And Georgia will need her friends when her mother announces that she, her new husband, and Rosie, Georgia's baby half sister, are moving back to town. Georgia loves Rosie on first sight, but her plan to shove her stepfather out of the picture and reunite her parents proves difficult as her mother becomes increasingly challenging and requests more of Georgia. Over the course of the summer, Georgia and her friends must lean on one another as they each face different family struggles. Long (Josie Bloom and the Emergency of Life) offers an honest, accessibly written look at family and the challenges of loving people who may prove hurtful, one that's both raw and warm in its compassionate telling. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

#2227657 Flyers (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Beth Turley

With the arrival of a glossy, cream-colored envelope in the mail, Elena Martinez's dreams come true: she's been chosen for the Spread Your Wings Magazine's Young Flyers program—a week-long summer internship where she'll get to learn the ins and outs of working for the most popular teen magazine.

978-1-5344-7672-1 Simon & Schuster ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 720

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A quiet tween finds her voice during a weeklong magazine internship in Manhattan. Seventh grader Elena Martinez and her best friend, Summer, love Spread Your Wings magazine. They both apply to be Flyers—the four readers selected annually to spend a summer week contributing to the September back-to-school issue. When only Elena, an aspiring therapist and songwriter, is chosen, she worries the experience will fracture her lifelong friendship with Summer, who has begun spending more time with a cross-country teammate and seems to resent being Elena's only friend. Considering that socially anxious Elena can barely speak aloud in class, she's especially intimidated about meeting Cailin Carter, a Flyer who is an elite Texas cheerleader, reality television star, and social media presence. After arriving in New York City, Elena supports fashion-loving Flyer Whitney Richards as she's having a panic attack at the train station. The final Flyer, Harlow Yoshida, is a budding investigative journalist eager to sink her teeth into a good story. The author captures the awkwardness and excitement of four tween girls getting to know one another, learning about publishing, and having adventures in the city. The story also thoughtfully explores anxiety, self-esteem, and influencer culture. Elena is Puerto Rican, Whitney is cued as Black, Harlow is Japanese American, and Summer and Cailin read as White; race does not play a role in the story. A short, sweet tale of expanding horizons, nurturing friendships, and pursuing passions. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2218747 Abby, Tried and True (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Donna Gephart

When Abby Braverman's best friend, Cat, moves to Israel, she's sure it's the worst thing that could happen. But then her older brother, Paul, is diagnosed with cancer, and life upends again. Now it's up to Abby to find a way to navigate seventh grade without her best friend, help keep her brother's spirits up during difficult treatments, and figure out her surprising new feelings for the boy next door.

978-1-5344-4089-0 Simon & Schuster ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 680

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A quiet, poetry-writing, nature-loving tween learns to cope with changes and challenges during a difficult year. Twelve-year-old Abby Braverman does not feel brave. Her best friend, Cat, is moving away to Israel, and her older brother, Paul, is diagnosed with testicular cancer. Abby and Paul have their two moms, Mom Rachel and Mama Dee, for support, and Abby has her turtle, Fudge, to talk to, but with Cat gone, she doesn't have anyone else to turn to. She suffers from social anxiety at school and finds it difficult to make new friends; however, when a cute boy moves into Cat's old house next door, Abby finds herself making tentative steps toward a new friendship with him. The whole family pulls together to support Paul through surgery and chemotherapy, which is hard on all of them. With each new challenge Abby surmounts, she learns that being anxious and sensitive doesn't mean that she can't also be other things: a supportive sister, a good friend, and a brave person too. This quiet, steady story especially shines when destigmatizing Abby's social anxiety and Paul's particular form of cancer. The Bravermans are Jewish, and, as the school year goes on, they observe holidays like Rosh Hashanah, Yom Kippur, Hanukkah, and Passover. This representation of a close-knit modern Jewish family is authentic and warm. A touching story about finding inner strength during a challenging time. (author's note) (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly With heartfelt candor, Gephart (The Paris Project) explores the impact of a life-changing diagnosis on a close-knit Jewish family. When Abby Braverman's best friend and Florida neighbor moves to Israel the summer before their seventh grade year, Abby is sure it's the worst thing that could happen, until she learns that her own beloved older brother, Paul, 16, must undergo treatment for testicular cancer. Perpetually quiet with an interest in turtles and poetry, Abby wishes she could be as outgoing as her brother was before he got sick. If components of the exposition feel labored, Gephart's depictions of Abby's friendship with and attraction to new neighbor Conrad, her supportive family's Jewish faith, and her affectionate relationship with Paul; the close siblings joke about their moms and engage in fierce Monopoly games; provide a stable backdrop for this story, which is as much about a family's wearying experience with cancer as it is about a young girl learning to feel comfortable with herself. Ages 10: up. Agent: Tina Dubois, ICM Partners. (Mar.)

#2218780 Your Heart, My Sky: Love in a Time of Hunger (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Margarita Engle

The people of Cuba are living in el periodo especial en tiempos de paz-the special period in times of peace. That's what the government insists that this era must be called, but the reality behind these words is starvation. Liana is struggling to find enough to eat. Yet hunger has also made her brave: she finds the courage to skip a summer of so-called volunteer farm labor, even though she risks government retribution.

978-1-5344-6496-4 Atheneum ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.3 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 1210

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Soaring Earth, rev. 3/19) once again revisits her Cuban heritage and demonstrates an abiding appreciation of nature in this historical verse novel set during the "Periodo especial," the euphemistically named "special period in times of peace." In 1991, Cuba is hosting the Pan American Games and putting on a prosperous face for the rest of the world, but the Cuban people are starving, due to U.S. trade embargoes and the abrupt halt in aid and food imports from Communist allies after the Soviet Union's collapse. Two teenagers who have resisted joining the "voluntary" summer labor programs are brought together by a scruffy stray dog as they scavenge for seaweed, shorebird eggs, and any fruit, fish, or fowl they can find, hunt, or steal to ease their relentless hunger. At its heart, this is a tender love story, lyrically presented in alternating poetic voices (including broader observations in third-person poems from the dog's perspective), but it is also a coming-of-age narrative for the impressionable protagonists, exploring duty to country and family, the consequences of living with hunger and fear, and the costs of individual freedom and ambition. A deeply felt and engrossing look at a time when the grandparents lived "on a menu of memories" while the new generation survived "on nothing / but wishes." Luann Toth March/April 2021 p.86(c) Copyright 2021. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Three-time Pura Belpre Medalist Engle (With a Star in My Hand) offers a soulful historical novel-in-verse, following a matchmaking dog and two malnourished teenagers who fall in love in 1990s Cuba. Utilizing titled free-verse poems, Engle highlights the "plunging shock of hunger" during Cuba's "special period in times of peace" through three perspectives: Liana, 14, and Amado, 15, in their own words, and the omniscient third-person perspective of "the singing dog" Liana adopts. Full of gnawing hunger and defiant hope, both Liana and Amado have chosen to dodge "a summer of oppressive labor" in the sugar fields; and when their paths cross, sparks fly ("Embers flare/ within the heart's sky/ like fireflies that blink/ as they search/ for mates."). The first poem, "Island of Cuba: Summer 1991," sets the tone immediately with its arresting opening line ("Imagine a year when food suddenly vanishes"), and as readers dig deeper into the story of Liana, Amado, and their canine "Cupid," Engle's words evocatively depict how love can thrive even under the harshest conditions. Back matter includes an author's note. Ages 12: up. Agent: Michelle Humphrey, Martha Kaplan Agency. (Mar.)

#2199397 Etta Invincible (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Reese Eschmann

Twelve-year-old Etta Johnson has Loud Days where she can hear just fine and Quiet Days where sounds come from far away and she gets to retreat into her thoughts. Etta spends most of her time alone, working on her comic book about Invisible Girl, the superhero who takes down super villain Petra Fide and does all the things Etta thinks she can't.

978-1-5344-6837-5 Aladdin ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 286 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 680

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A rare disorder elicits fear in a young Black artist with a unique sense of the world. Seventh grader Etta's Quiet Days are becoming more frequent and, frankly, irritating since her "maybe-diagnosis" of Ménière's disease in both her ears. Her parents are monitoring her diet, vigilant about stressors, and learning ASL. In contrast to Etta's Loud Days, not being able to hear sometimes makes it easier to focus on her comic book about Invincible Girl (the novel includes some enticing panels featuring Etta's work). But, as peculiar weather patterns begin to overwhelm her Chicago neighborhood and exacerbate her allergies, the corresponding tinnitus and vertigo as well as the increased anxiety from everyone around her leave Etta feeling hopeless. Even meeting Eleazar, an artsy new Colombian friend with an adorable goldendoodle, leads to doubts about her abilities to communicate--Eleazar is also still learning English--and her future with Ménière's. When Eleazar's dog gets lost on a magical train that is linked to the weird weather, the two must traverse the train cars, solve mysteries, and overcome their fears to fix what's broken and heal what can't be fixed. Just like the magical challenges, their journey yields great emotional rewards. Even as Etta and Eleazar make new connections, losses--of family, hearing, and home--are somber reminders of life's challenges. With snappy narration that's rich in sensory detail and metaphor, readers progress through well-paced storytelling that is ethereal and artfully inclusive. This hopeful adventure leaves an indelible mark. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In a contemporary Chicago plagued by worsening storms and anise-scented clouds, Black 12-year-old Laurette "Etta" Johnson loves drawing her own superheroine, Invincible Girl. But the comics fan doesn't feel her protagonist's bravery as she confronts the increasing hearing loss and vertigo that are symptoms of her "Big Maybe" diagnosis of Meniere's disease. Etta's tentative friendship with Eleazar, a fellow seventh grader homesick for Colombia, deepens after following his beloved goldendoodle, Louisa May Alcott, onto a magical train that pulls in to their neighborhood station, and whose cars feature whimsically nightmarish obstacles that they must outwit as they search for Louisa. Their quest gains increasing urgency as evidence connects the train with the enchanted storms that are draping Chicago in despair, endangering their families. Through Etta's perceptive first-person voice, Eschmann (the Home for Meow series) grounds the train's Hayao Miyazaki: like atmosphere in both children's realities, involving Etta's interest in art-making as well as her use of sign language and Google Translate to communicate with others, including Eleazar, whose first language is Spanish. Lusky's (Primer) interstitial b&w comics panels bring vivid life to Etta's original comic book creations. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Danielle Burby, Nelson Literary. (July)

#2224393 When the World Was Ours (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Liz Kessler

Three young friends—Leo, Elsa, and Max—spend a perfect day together, unaware that around them Europe is descending into a growing darkness and that they will soon be cruelly ripped apart from one another. With their lives taking them across Europe—to Germany, England, Prague, and Poland—will they ever find their way back to one another? Will they want to?

978-1-5344-9965-2 Aladdin ©2021 6 x 8-1/2 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile HL 630

Quantity

1

Unit Price

$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-8. Best friends Leo, Elsa, and Max are celebrating Leo's ninth birthday in 1936 Vienna. Leo's papa takes their picture, and as their lives spin apart during the next five years, all three depend on their copy of that picture as a touchstone. Elsa, who is Jewish, loses her home, is forced into a ghetto, and is eventually transported to Auschwitz. Leo is Jewish, too, and after his papa is arrested, Leo and his mother try to escape Austria. Max, who was a bullied outcast before he met Elsa and Leo, is the son of a high-ranking Nazi, and he embraces the brainwashing camaraderie of the Hitler Youth movement. The heartbreaking narrative follows the characters across time and space as they age and struggle down their separate paths. And though they still remain connected to one another, a reunion now may bring only grief. Based on the real-life experiences of author Kessler's relatives, the narrative is brutally honest and totally believable. Readers share the inner thoughts of each character as they adapt to their unimaginable circumstances. Despite the characters' initial grade-school ages, this emotional novel is best suited for older middle-grade readers.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Three Austrian children experience the ravages of World War II. On Leo Grunberg's ninth birthday in 1936, he and his two best friends, Elsa and Max, celebrate by riding Vienna's Ferris wheel. Leo collides with English tourists, leading to a friendly connection that later proves lifesaving when the couple sponsor visas for Leo and his mother. Mr. Grunberg is tragically sent first to Dachau and then Auschwitz. Elsa, whose family, like Leo's, is Jewish, moves to Prague to escape growing dangers in Austria, but their new lives are shortly upended: Elsa is unable to escape via the Kindertransport, and she is sent with her family to Auschwitz. Christian Max's father joins the Nazi Party and forbids him to spend time with Jewish friends; initially resentful, Max ultimately joins the Hitler Youth. His father is assigned to work at Dachau and later Auschwitz—where Max becomes a guard—and Max crosses paths with Mr. Grunberg in both locations, each time shunning the man who treated him so kindly. He also meets Elsa in an unforgettably dramatic scene in which he must confront his own humanity. These coincidences may strain credulity, but this sometimes-horrific, sometimes-sentimental page-turner exposes readers to the entire arc of the Holocaust. A note explains how the author's father's family escaped the Nazis after meeting a British couple in a similar manner to that portrayed in the book. Readers viscerally experience the Holocaust in this gripping novel. (resources, further reading) (Historical fiction. 12-18)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Inspired by her family's history, Kessler tells a story of the Holocaust from the point of view of three children: Elsa, Leo, and Max, best friends who live in Vienna. The story opens in 1936 when the children are nine, and as they age, their thoughts and actions develop in sophistication. At the start of Hitler's rise to power, Max's father forbids him to play with his only two friends because they are Jewish. The lives of all three are torn apart when Elsa's family moves to Czechoslovakia seeking a safe haven, Leo's father is imprisoned and his family tries to get out of Austria to a safer country, and Max's father, an SS officer, moves his family to Munich while he works at Dachau. Kessler does not try to paint a pretty picture when Elsa ends up at a death camp and Max becomes a zealous member of the Hitler youth; the once-friends have become teens caught in a situation where suffering and humiliation are daily occurrences. This is a well-researched story that portrays life as it was during the horrors of World War II in Europe. VERDICT A must-have addition to any middle school collection that could easily become a classic like Lois Lowry's Number the Stars.—Elizabeth Kahn, Patrick F. Taylor Science & Technology Acad., Avondale, LA © Copyright 2021. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. No redistribution permitted.

#2332268 All the Small Wonderful Things (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kate Foster

Eleven-year-old Alex knows that starting middle school will be a big change, and for an autistic person, change can be terrifying. He is sure that having a friend by his side will help. But how can he make one? Alex devises a plan to impress the kids at school by winning a trophy at the PAWS Dog Show with his trusty sidekick, Kevin the cockapoo.

978-1-5362-2580-8 Candlewick Press ©2023 5 x 7-3/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 In this middle-grade novel about an 11-year-old autistic boy and his dog, Alex badly wants to make friends at his school. He's convinced that helping his relay team make districts will win the friendship of Jared, a popular boy in his class, but Alex never seems to run fast enough. An even better opportunity for friendship arises in the form of the PAWS dog show: Alex loves dogs and is sure that his cockapoo, Kevin, can win in either the obedience or tricks category. Winning, Alex thinks, will make him friends for sure. But nothing goes as expected, and as he becomes friends with the neighbor boy who just moved in next door and prepares for PAWS, Alex learns that friendship isn't earned by winning. A visual countdown of the number of days to PAWS divides the book into sections. This book will appeal to readers who love dogs and want a story about how friendship often arrives unexpectedly--and a true friend will like you for you. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books As an autistic person, eleven-year-old Alex has found primary school to be pretty tough, but he hopes that making a real friend before going to secondary school might improve things. He assesses his options: he can impress the kids at school by completing Map Five in online game OrbsWorld, he can help his track team qualify for districts, or he and his dog, Kevin the cockapoo, can win a trophy at the upcoming PAWS Dog Show. All this is easier said than done, as he's also navigating the tension between his mum and teenaged brother while the school bully Ryan is making Alex's track experience less than ideal. At least Kevin's excited to learn tricks, and it seems Alex's secondary school fate is all going to come down to Australia's premier dog show. Alex's perspective as an autistic person is relayed with careful authenticity, keeping the narrative grounded in both everyday struggles to connect with others and the warmth of small, loving gestures. Foster portrays the uncomplicated support pets can provide autistic kids, sensitively representing the difficulty Alex has in reading social and emotional cues while depicting the easy synchronicity of Kevin and Alex, who finds Kevin's doggy-cuddle comfort less demanding. However, the book wisely pulls back from putting forth the idea that dogs heal kids and their families, emphasizing instead the need to live alongside them as important, cherished friends. Dog-loving kids will be begging to get their paws on this one. MC COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Eleven-year-old Alex is in grade six and lives on the Gold Coast of Australia. He is autistic and feels he needs a strategy for making friends: be good enough at his favorite computer game, OrbsWorld; run faster and contribute to the track relays coming up; or win a trophy at the upcoming PAWS dog show. Foster's effective first-person narrative gives readers insight into how the protagonist's mind works, allowing them to observe the world the way he does (e.g., his difficulty with noise and crowds and with reading people's facial expressions). The tension of the story rides on the dog show, not only how Alex's dog, Kevin, will do, but also how Alex will cope with the crowds and excitement. By the novel's end, he realizes that not only has he learned how to be a friend, but he's also had a friend all along. It is a testament to Foster's craft in character development that readers will care so much about the earnest, good-hearted Alex and that the final, tear-jerking scene is such a surprise. Dean Schneider(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A dog-loving autistic Australian boy is desperate to make a friend before grade seven. Alex is a "good boy." He wants to train his cockapoo, Kevin; finish Map Five in OrbsWorld, his favorite video game; draw dogs; avoid school bullies; and do as he's told. He's positive that if he doesn't have a friend, a popular one, before starting secondary school next year, "everyone will be mean." Brown-skinned Alex, who likes rules and consistent systems, is sure he can make a real friend if he can finish Map Five, run fast enough to get his team to districts, or make sure Kevin wins a trophy at the dog show. His school, his mother, and even his annoying 14-year-old brother are supportive of his needs, and Alex has carefully practiced strategies for being a good boy. But it's exhausting being an 11-year-old in a world full of loud nonautistic people who have bizarre ideas about what's rude. Alex can recognize when one of his classmates is uninterested in his OrbsWorld stories, but his autism classes never taught him how to make them be interested--so were they really that helpful? Some classmates are nice and seem to like him, so maybe they'll help with his friend-making plan. Everything builds up to a well-earned, deeply satisfying conclusion. This charming, empathetic story centers the engaging voice of a boy who has a strong set of strategies for doing his best. Dogs and friends are terrific helpers in a confusing, neurotypical world. (Fiction. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2378638 Secret Library (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

written by Kekla Magoon

Since Grandpa died, Dally's days are dull and restricted. She's eleven and a half years old, and her exacting single mother is already preparing her to take over the family business. Starved for adventure and release, Dally rescues a mysterious envelope from her mother's clutches, an envelope Grandpa had earmarked for her. The map she finds inside leads straight to an ancient vault, a library of secrets where each book is a portal to a precise moment in time.

978-1-5362-3088-8 Candlewick Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Dally's maternal grandfather has died, and she feels quite alone since he was the one person who understood her love of adventure. Dally's mother has run the family business efficiently for some time, and she's training her only child to take her place someday, but 11-year-old biracial Dally has her doubts. When she discovers the Secret Library, an amazing, magical place in which each book holds a secret, Dally often chooses books that transport her into the past to observe and interact with her ancestors. These experiences help her understand topics that her mother won't discuss, including her father, who died when she was small. Eager for action and curious about her family's mysterious history, she takes chances and makes discoveries. The story is full of clever touches, including the librarian's responsibility to clothe Dally appropriately for each time-travel destination. Her adventures aboard a nineteenth-century treasure-hunting pirate ship are particularly exciting. While the episodic structure of Dally's adventures occasionally slows the story's pace, the Secret Library itself is a memorable, original concept within an involving novel. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews "A restless, adventure-seeking tween finds herself in a special library... Multiple award-winner Magoon has crafted an engrossing story that skillfully combines a coming-of-age story with fantasy and historical fiction. Dally is an irresistible protagonist, full of curiosity and longing for the joy she experienced with her grandfather. The lively, well-written narrative contains many surprises, pulling readers into Dally's life and the incredible choices she must make... A deeply satisfying, page-turning, genre-defying read."

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Magoon (Chester Keene Cracks the Code) champions self-determination while examining race and gender constructs in this high-spirited, South Carolina: set fantasy. Dally Peteharrington, 11, is devastated when her mother won't let her join Adventure Club because its schedule conflicts with her economics tutoring; lessons Dally needs to eventually succeed her mother as head of Peteharrington Enterprises. Never mind that Dally doesn't want to run the family business and is grieving the death of Grandpa, who encouraged exploration and fun. To rebel, Dally opens an envelope Grandpa left her that her mom had been keeping until Dally's 21st year. Inside is a map to an enchanted library. The books within contain secrets pertaining to Dally and her family, and act as portals to the moments when those secrets occurred, were revealed, or were shared. Dally finds her housekeeper's candy stash, learns how her parents actually met, and crews a pirate ship with an ancestor. Unbeknownst to Dally, however, there are secrets about herself she has yet to uncover. Whimsical worldbuilding, swashbuckling action, and buoyant third-person narration complement Magoon's vibrant character portraits and twisty, nuanced plot. Dally is biracial (Black and white); the supporting cast is intersectionally diverse. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ginger Knowlton, Curtis Brown. (May)

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

#2368245 Ferris (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kate DiCamillo

It's the summer before fifth grade, and for Ferris Wilkey, it is a summer of sheer pandemonium: Her little sister, Pinky, has vowed to become an outlaw. Uncle Ted has left Aunt Shirley and, to Ferris's mother's chagrin, is holed up in the Wilkey basement to paint a history of the world. And Charisse, Ferris's grandmother, has started seeing a ghost at the threshold of her room, which seems like an alarming omen given that she is also feeling unwell. But the ghost is not there to usher Charisse to the Great Beyond. Rather, she has other plans-wild, impractical, illuminating plans. How can Ferris satisfy a specter with Pinky terrorizing the town, Uncle Ted sending Ferris to spy on her aunt, and her father battling an invasion of raccoons?

978-1-5362-3105-2 Candlewick Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 4.0

Reviews by: Booklist "Ten-year-old Ferris (nicknamed as such after being born at the local fairgrounds) is contending with a hectic household... If it sounds terrifically zany, it certainly is, but it's also wonderfully grounded in deep familial bonds, a tight-knit community, and the beautiful idea that every relationship is a love story in its own way... it all sets the stage for some truly transcendent moments that will leave readers in a state of wonder, no matter their age. It's a spectacularly silly and perfectly sincere exploration of what it means to stay tenderhearted in a sometimes challenging world."

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Family life has always been a bit chaotic for Ferris, but the summer before fifth grade is especially so: her grandmother is seeing ghosts, her uncle has moved into her family's basement to paint the "history of the world" after leaving his wife, and her six-year-old sister's mischief has gone from cute to quite literally criminal. Ferris' main goal is to help her beloved grandmother, who seems to be spending more and more time in bed, but Ferris' steady nature and unflappability is a boon to everyone in her family, especially when her cool-in-a-crisis demeanor helps avert a terrible tragedy. Folksy charm and wholesome whimsy mark this as an easy readalike to DiCamillo's Because of Winn-Dixie (BCCB 6/00), and the endearing portrayal of a loving family in disarray has just enough tension to keep the story interesting without any real threat of estrangement or discord. The third-person narration has clear affection for each character, highlighting their strengths and noting their flaws with tenderness, as Ferris' growing independence shifts family dynamics and roles. Pinky, Ferris' sister, is a delightful menace, an agent of chaos with a lisp and an aspiration to be an outlaw, and it's her bond with Ferris that brings about the book's most climactic and emotionally charged moment. Fans of Winn-Dixie or Katherine Applegate's books will find easy contentment and gentle amusement with Ferris and her loving, messy family. KQG COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Returning to her literary roots in Florida (see: Because of Winn-Dixie, rev. 7/00; Raymie Nightingale, rev. 3/16), DiCamillo again explores bonds of family, friends, and community. Ferris Winkey finds the summer before fifth grade a puzzling one. Much turbulence surrounds her immediate family, her best friend, and some townspeople: her beloved grandmother, Clarisse, sees a ghost; her uncle leaves his wife and takes up residence in the Winkey basement; her younger sister aspires to be a famous outlaw; and her piano prodigy best friend plays "Mysterious Barricades" exclusively and repeatedly. Thanks to her fourth-grade teacher, who now cries constantly, Ferris has the words for these characters: formidable, unfathomable, unrepentant, quixotic, and bereft. Foreboding is another word Ferris contemplates as Clarisse's health gradually fails. But having the words to describe people and understanding them is not the same. In a glorious climax in which all the book's characters gather to appease the ghost, Ferris discovers that obstacles between individuals can disappear if they have the courage to believe in, rather than simply define, a word she knew all along: love. The limited third-person narration glimpses other lives but never dwells on them, thus leaving Ferris's honest, pre-adolescent perspective to drive the story line. As Clarisse tells Ferris, "Every good story is a love story." Here, DiCamillo adeptly proves this axiom. Betty Carter(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Ferris finds herself in the midst of several love stories during the summer before fifth grade. Emma Phineas Wilkey's moniker comes from the circumstances of her birth: under the Ferris wheel at the fairground. Her contained world, centered around her family and best friend, is filled with kindness, humor, and singular personalities, while the indeterminate late-20th-century small-town setting feels like a safe place from which to observe heartbreak and loss. Ferris' architect father and her pragmatic mother, on break from teaching high school math, anchor her home life, along with Pinky, her hilariously ferocious 6-year-old sister, and Charisse, her grandmother, who claims to have seen an unhappy ghost in their big old house. Ferris' best friend, Billy Jackson, whom she's loved since kindergarten, hears the music of the world: "The whole world is singing all the time." Ferris, serious and sensitive, is attuned to the ways that the vocabulary words they learned in Mrs. Mielk's fourth grade class describe moments in her life. DiCamillo's gift for conveying an entire person and world in a few brushstrokes of storytelling provides depth and quiet magic to this account of an eventful summer in which a ghost is appeased, an outlaw (Pinky) is somewhat reformed, and an uncle and aunt are reconciled. Ferris experiences two surprising moments of transcendence and becomes aware of the ways love suffuses everything. Characters are cued white. Tenderly resonant and memorable. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly The summer before fifth grade turns out to be a "serious time, in general" for 10-year-old Emma Phineas Wilkey--known as Ferris because of her dramatic birth under a Ferris wheel--as she aids in her idiosyncratic family members' antics and deals with the unfamiliar emotional terrain that accompanies these encounters. Ferris's headstrong younger sister, an aspiring felon, is scheming to appear on a "Wanted" poster; Uncle Ted, who is attempting to paint a history of the world while living in Ferris's basement, recruits Ferris to spy on his estranged wife; and Ferris's beloved, hopeless romantic grandmother's heart is failing. But her grandmother is more troubled by the appearance of a ghost that only she can see, so she enlists Ferris's help in satisfying the specter's quixotic request. Together with her soft-spoken, piano-playing best friend Billy Jackson, Ferris navigates her joyfully chaotic environment and heeds her grandmother's wisdom: "Every good story is a love story." Populated by offbeat, compelling characters with rich histories, this bustling and empathetic tale by DiCamillo (The Puppets of Spelhorst) ponders the courage it takes to love someone and the necessity of inconvenience in life through the eyes of one emotionally curious tween. Main characters read as white. Ages 8-12. Agent: Holly McGhee, Pippin Properties. (Mar.) Copyright 2023 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--"Every story is a love story." Rising fifth grader Ferris hears this wisdom from her grandmother, Charisse, and through this lens begins to notice all the ways in which the actions of her community, however bizarre they might seem at first glance, are unspoken declarations of love. There's the ghost that appears to Charisse, who wants the family to light a chandelier to reunite her with her lost love. There's Ferris's friend Billy Jackson, whose love for his mother who died in childbirth lives on through the music he plays. There's Ferris's uncle Ted and his wife Shirley, who are on the outs after he quits his job to paint a history of the world. And of course Ferris's sister Pinky, who wants to be an outlaw and doesn't seem to love anybody, though Ferris realizes later this isn't true. DiCamillo's latest work is a sweet and heartfelt effort, though it is lacking the author's typical fully fleshed-out characters. They are largely defined by their quirks, and their actions begin to feel repetitive and do not propel the story forward. For instance, it seems like Billy's sole function for much of the story is to play "Mysterious Barricades" on the piano in the background. It feels more like a three-dimensional painting than a story; each character has a role and a place, and readers are invited to look at the whole but static picture to examine the idea of love. VERDICT While dialogue shows the author's characteristic charm, the story itself is lacking a strong narrative voice and drive. Purchase where DiCamillo's other titles circulate well.--Lindsay Loup Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Quantity 1 Unit Price $19.99

#2332035 Little Match Girl Strikes Back (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Emma Carroll

On the streets of Victorian London, Bridie uses her wit selling matches to help feed her family-but no matter how hard she works, it's never enough to stave off hunger or keep her ailing mother safe from the factory's toxins. When a street-side accident leaves Bridie with only three matches, the strike of each one sends her magically tumbling into visions of a brighter, more hopeful future.

978-1-5362-3335-3 Candlewick Press ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 2.0

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books In this British import, Carroll skillfully transforms Hans Christian Andersen's "The Little Match Girl" into an entry point to labor history via the London matchgirls' strike of 1888. Andersen's angelic sufferer is a far cry from Carroll's tough protagonist, Bridie Sweeney, who uses her charisma and gift with words to sell boxes of matches from the Bryant & May factory where her mother works. Scant wages, cruel management, and unhealthy working conditions are taking their toll on the workers and Bridie's family, so when an accident in the snowy London streets leaves her with mostly crushed and soaking matches, Bridie reaches her breaking point. In desperation, she lights the last three usable matches, making a wish each time, and her wishes magically reveal ways to connect with allies and encourage the workers to stand up for their rights. Child's illustrations emphasize Bridie's snap and spark with scratchy black lines and bold, stylized pops of fire red. Bridie herself is frequently depicted as intriguingly off-kilter in a world full of elaborate patterns, tumbling across a full bleed of snowy cobblestones or disgustedly confronting a rigidly patterned brick edifice. A self-aware narrator, Bridie positions her story as a tonic for sentimentalized poverty narratives, more Dickens than Andersen in her focus on avoiding pity and instead inspiring direct action. Older readers and fans of the Enola Holmes films will quickly twig to the factory working conditions and discussions of workers' rights leading up to the strike, though this engaging tale is accessible to a wide audience. Several period photographs accompany historical notes from the author and illustrator. FHK COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In July 1888, women and girls working at a match factory in East London went on strike to protest dangerous working conditions and poor pay. Carroll takes the story of this significant event in labor history and uses it as the armature for her own version of Hans Christian Andersen's weeper "The Little Match Girl." Carroll's little match-seller has a name, Bridie, and a strong voice, luring customers with stories and outrageous patter. Her whole family is in the match trade, her mother in the factory, herself on the frigid streets selling, and her small brother at home fashioning match boxes. Like her nameless original, Bridie experiences visions, but unlike her predecessor she turns these visions into social action and survives to tell her tale. The mash-up of history and Andersen-tale works beautifully, especially on the metaphorical level with light, enlightenment, warmth, and energy battling it out against darkness, ignorance, chill, and despair. Child's illustrations, collages in black, gray, and red with a rich use of pattern, incorporate text at certain points to create an arresting, graphically dynamic page. Serve this up with Pinkney's lushly illustrated picture-book edition of the Andersen and with Maguire's Matchless for a feast of Victoriana and an invitation to discuss child poverty, capitalism, and the power of organized labor. Sarah Ellis(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews This retelling of a Hans Christian Andersen tale casts the little Matchstick Girl as a social reformer. Instead of a nameless, tragic waif, here the matchstick seller is Bridie Sweeney, a fiery redhead. While her younger brother makes matchboxes and her mother works with toxic chemicals in the match factory, Bridie walks the streets of Victorian London, hawking her wares by persuading passersby that her matches are magical. When a promising day turns terrible, Bridie is left with three damaged matches. She strikes one and makes a wish for the kind of life the wealthy factory owner has--and sees what everyone else's labor purchases for him. Subsequent wishes connect her with Annie Besant, a kind woman who campaigns for workers' rights. Inspired by the match magic's visions, Bridie pushes the factory workers to strike. Here, the narrative shifts from description to mere summary, occasionally jumping forward in time to let readers know how things eventually turn out. The result is didactic and simplistic, an agenda as worthy as it is, unfortunately, transparent. Artwork throughout includes creative typographic styling and black-and-white illustrations with pops of red for Bridie's hair and match flames. An author's note reveals the factual basis of the story (the factory, the big strike over an unjust firing, and activist Besant are real), while an illustrator's note details historical references used in the art. Backmatter includes period photographs. Characters present white. Preachy and painfully earnest. (Historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Inspired by match company workers' successful strike in 1888 London and using Hans Christian Andersen's "The Little Match Girl" as a framework, Carroll (Sky Chasers) spins a tale that incites a rallying cry for workers' rights. To make ends meet, tween Bridie Sweeney and her younger brother each contribute to her mother's London factory job making and selling matches. Bridie's brother makes matchboxes, her mother dips matchsticks in toxic white phosphorous, and Bridie sells the filled matchboxes on the street, attracting buyers with her irrepressible nature and fanciful stories of her wares' virtues. When everything unravels one day; her mother is fired due to her failing health, and Bridie loses her matches, money, and shoes in a string of unlucky events; Bridie experiences a series of visions. These apparitions, each seen in the flames of her last three matches, encourage her to fight for a better future. Information about the devastating effects of white phosphorous on workers' health and the effectiveness of collective action to implement change are woven into a brief and engaging story led by a charismatic heroine. Child (the Clarice Bean series) provides b&w illustrations accented by a fiery red that bring Bridie vividly to life. Archival photographs conclude. Characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5--Bridie (short for Brigid) sets out to set the record straight: to tell the real story of girls who sold matches on frigid 19th-century city streets. Hans Christian Andersen, whose books sold in posh shops, probably never met a real match girl nor learned that they only wanted fair wages. With a touch of magic from very special matches, Bridie gains insight into the greed of the match factory owner, actions that can achieve change, and what a better life might look like for her and her family. Eventually, Bridie inspires a protest which leads to the exposure of inhumane working conditions and the toxic effects of phosphorus on the women who use it making matches. The conclusion is not only more satisfying than the original, but more authentic. Stylized black-and-white illustrations use accents of red to punctuate the action, creating an open and accessible format for a surprisingly timely look at workers' actions. An author's note accompanied by period photographs is provided. VERDICT This sophisticated tale is likely to generate conversation in school and public libraries about 19th-century factory working conditions. Recommended.--Maria B. Salvadore Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2269943 Field Guide to the Supernatural Universe (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alyson Noel

When he first started seeing ghosts, Max mistakenly assumed everyone else could see them, too. Now, after years of being blamed for the pranks of mischievous spirits, Max is determined to do whatever it takes to make himself normal. But when he's sent to spend the summer with his eccentric grandfather, Ramhart, being normal becomes impossible. But when a supernatural attack steals Ramhart's soul, Max--with the help of a few new friends--must go on a quest to find his grandfather's renowned Field Guide, an enchanted book that contains all the knowledge Ramhart has gathered about defeating unearthly nemeses. And if they don't find the book fast, Glimmerville will crumble into chaos, and Max will lose the only person who's ever made him feel at home.

978-1-5344-9823-5 Margaret K. McElderry ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 880

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-7 Noël's latest middle-grade offering is full of quirky characters, ghosts, and zany adventures. Maxen (Woodbead) Smith is 12 years old and completely normal in every way--except for the fact that he can see ghosts. It's probably because he's the grandson of the famous ghost-hunter Ramhart Woodbead. When Max is sent to live with his oddball grandfather in Woodbead Mansion for the summer, everything seems normal at first . . . too normal. Until Max discovers the truth about Ramhart and a book called Field Guide to the Supernatural Universe. Max must face his worst fears, but there are scarier things in the normal world than demon dogs and mischievous spirits. Noël's fast-paced story combines humor and action, along with the more serious theme of losing a loved one. Ideal for kids who appreciated Katherine Arden's Small Spaces (2018), a spookier story that also focuses on the themes of loss and grief, and a natural read-alike for Lamar Giles' supernatural romp, The Last Last-Day-of-Summer (2019). COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A tween spends the summer with his eccentric grandfather, ghosts, and more. After a viral video taken on the last day of sixth grade solidifies his status as "Class Weirdo," Maxen Smith wants nothing more than to be normal. Trouble is that Max can see ghosts--the real culprits behind what adults at school call his "incidents"--but nobody believes him. Reaching his last straw, Max's dad sends him to stay with his estranged paternal grandfather, Ramhart Woodbead, in his mansion in Glimmerville. As the mansion and its inhabitants' secrets slowly reveal themselves, Max learns that his weirdness is part of a family legacy. But when a dastardly plot renders Ramhart out of commission, Max finds himself woefully unprepared to take his place in keeping order between realms. With the help of a young ghost and a squad of Supernaturalists, Max must save not only his grandfather, but the world. Noël combines a quick pace, zany characters, and plenty of comedic relief to create a quirky adventure with heart. Strong themes of family legacies, personal mythologies, and destinies--if slightly heavy-handed--enhance the cautionary tale of hiding one's true self. The over-the-top first-person narration keeps the tone infectiously light. From a Chupacabra to mutant glowworms, the creatures encountered mix the familiar with the original for delightful worldbuilding. Max and family are White by default, but side characters add some ethnic diversity. Spectral silliness with high appeal. (Paranormal fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly a-half-year-old white Maxen Smith has always been able to see ghosts, though he wishes he didn't. When his goal of an incident-free school year is ruined by a viral video of him fighting off invisible monsters, Max's father sends him to spend the summer with his grandfather, ghost hunter Ramhart Woodbead, "the Indiana Jones of the supernatural world." Max hopes to find a way out of "the wrong side of normal" by using Ramhart's book, Field Guide to the Supernatural Universe. Instead, Ramhart introduces Max to their family legacy as minders of the veil, tasked with keeping the balance between the realm's ghosts and monsters, and the rest of the world. When Ramhart is incapacitated, it's up to Max and his new friends; white Bex, Latina Jools, and Indian Krish; to save the world from a supernatural storm. Noel (The Bone Thief) weaves myth, folklore, and conspiracies with wry humor and bone-chilling moments, creating an entertaining deep dive into the paranormal. While Max's stubborn refusal to embrace his situation and insistence on being "normal" is sometimes repetitive, his narrative voice is attention-grabbing, ideal for this "anything goes" adventure. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Elizabeth Bewley, Sterling Lord Literistic. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--Twelve-year old Max has been seeing ghosts all his life, which has caused him no end of trouble. At school he's a social pariah, and his continual "incidents" with the paranormal may have influenced his parents' breakup. After a chaotic last day of sixth grade (which resulted in a viral video of him destroying a classroom), his father decides to send Max to stay with his grandfather, Ramhart Woodbead, at his mansion. Ramhart is known as "the Indiana Jones of the supernatural world" and authored the paranormal encyclopedia Field Guide to the Supernatural Universe. Max is initially angry at these summer plans, but realizes that the guide might hold the key to ridding himself of his unique abilities. Ramhart, however, has other ideas and begins training Max to take over the family duties of guarding graveyards, battling ghosts, and keeping the veil between the worlds secure. Max is immediately thrust into all sorts of wild and near-fatal adventures, discovering that his role in all of this was foretold in a prophecy. Will Max rise to the challenge set before him and take up the family mantle, or will he deny his destiny and risk the consequences? Narrated by Max in a droll, self-deprecating voice, this middle grade paranormal adventure by the award-winning Noël (the "Immortals" series) is irresistible. Sure to satisfy, the plot contains a cast of colorful characters including bogeys, school bullies, zombies, a monkey king, and a craven Chupacabra. Max is cued as white. VERDICT A captivating and diverting read with loads of action and humor, with a bonus lesson about accepting who you are. Recommended for purchase.--Amy Nolan Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2348046 Galaxy Jones and the Space Pirates (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Briana McDonald

Galaxy Jones lives on the very, very edge of a star system in an inn run by her dads. She loves her home and her little family, but ever since the train station that serviced their part of the universe went defunct, tourists have stopped coming, and Lexi's on the verge of losing it all. When the royal family stops at their inn on the way to a neighboring star system, Lexi's dads hope for some good business, but Lexi knows from past experience with spoiled Prince Weston-and his annoying dog, Comet-to expect nothing but trouble.

978-1-5344-9829-7 Simon & Schuster Books For Young Readers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4

288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A lonely prince and the daughter of innkeepers pair up to squabble and fight pirates. To save her dads, who run a failing hotel in the "astro-boonies," Lexi Jones sets out to find a "space-techno" amulet that can slow down time. She's helped by annoying "interstellar nemesis" Prince Weston, whose family are guests at the inn. Weston stole the amulet from pirates (partly to keep his aging dog alive but also to earn attention from his royal parents)--and then lost it in space. Now the pirates are in pursuit. Following various escapades, Lexi manages to escape walking the plank into a black hole just prior to the entrance of renowned pirate Great Astro Bonny, who'd been blasted into another galaxy by the twin offspring of "co-pirate" Mary Read. This crowded version of space is plied by cutlass-wielding pirates aboard interplanetary sailing ships, with the occasional planet or meteor shower just a short drive away. Ultimately, Lexi and Weston recognize that it's best to let time march on. After lecturing the captors about making their own career choices instead of just following in the piratical family tradition, the duo return to the inn for joyous parental reunions. The plot's a wild one, and the lively tone adds to the appeal, though frequent, sudden halts for wrangling or reflection interrupt the flow. Major characters read white. More comic opera than space opera, with a heavy payload of life lessons to boot. (Science fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly All her life, tween Galaxy Jones has helped her fathers run their inn, located in the outer solar system. Business has dropped off, however, since most people relocated further inward toward the central system. The arrival of the solar system's royal family is much-needed, if troublesome, as the royals have a reputation for being difficult to please, especially their tween son; and Lexi's archnemesis; Prince Weston. But when space pirates appear in pursuit of an item that Weston stole from them, and subsequently lost, it's up to Lexi to help Weston retrieve the treasure to save their families and her home. As they rocket through space, facing off against perilous intergalactic hazards, the unlikely pair confront their past conflict and uncover unexpected similarities. McDonald (The Secrets of Stone Creek) crafts an interstellar landscape that adheres more to flights of fancy than physics or logic, and juxtaposes the ever-shifting environment with Lexi's fear of change, Weston's desire to prove himself, and the pair's struggle to live up to others' expectations. The result is a wildly original escapade featuring sympathetic protagonists and lively action sequences. Main characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jennie Kendrick, Red Fox Literary. (Oct)

#2173928 Haunted Lake (Hardcover (Trade))

written by P. J. Lynch

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Jacob and his father are the only people who fish Lake Spetzia, which was formed when the river was dammed and their town was flooded. The villagers say the lake is haunted, but Jacob and his father don't want to leave, because Jacob's mother is buried in the cemetery below the water. As Jacob grows up, a village girl named Ellen falls in love with him, and he with her. But before they are married, Jacob disappears.

978-1-5362-0013-3 Candlewick Press ©2020 11 x 10 48 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts .5

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly With atmospheric spreads and suitably eerie prose, Lynch (Patrick and the President) spins a long-winded yarn about a drowned village. Only the village's church tower is visible above the water of the reservoir, and Reuben and his son, Jacob, fish there despite warnings: "There are ghosts in that lake. The bell in the tower rings whenever another poor soul is going to join them." A young neighbor, Ellen, dotes on Jacob and vows to marry him. One night, he goes out alone and is lured inside the tower, and a bewitching woman named Lilith takes him into the town, reuniting him with his dead mother. Years pass in the world above until, as the evil Lilith is about to trap Jacob into marriage, Ellen pulls off a daring rescue. Lynch toggles between suspense and calm as he underlines Ellen's faithfulness and grit ("Part of her wanted to sail away as fast as she could, but she stayed"). Though the text is lengthy and sometimes flat, it offers a potent escapist fantasy, especially Lilith's underwater world, which radiates goth allure as fish swim through the bedroom, curtains billow, and a green fire burns magically in the grate. Ages 7: 10. (Sept.)

#2213540 Amber and Clay (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Laura Amy Schlitz

Welcome to ancient Greece as only genius storyteller Laura Amy Schlitz can conjure it. In a warlike land of wind and sunlight, "ringed by a restless sea," live Rhaskos and Melisto, spiritual twins with little in common beyond the violent and mysterious forces that dictate their lives.

978-1-5362-0122-2 Candlewick Press ©2021 6 x 8-1/2 544 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 13.0 Lexile NP

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$22.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Starred Review At the start of Newbery Medalist Schlitz's latest ambitious offering, Greek god Hermes tells, in irreverent verse, a legend in which every person was once two people stuck together. The story to come, he says, is about a boy and girl who "weren't alike, but they fit together." In ancient Thessaly, watchful Rhaskos is born into slavery, to a Thracian woman taken from her home. When Rhaskos is still a child, his mother is sold to a wealthy man in Athens, whose headstrong daughter, Melisto, needs a firm hand. As Melisto's wildness catches the attention of the goddess Artemis and leads to a series of fateful choices, Rhaskos suffers a mercurial master and becomes enamored with horses and learning to replicate their form in clay. Though they aren't destined to meet--at least not while they're both alive--Rhaskos and Melisto are inextricably bound together by fate. Schlitz anchors this astonishing work of historical fiction in Greek tradition: ancient gods and philosophers narrate (Sokrates appears throughout); she makes use of epic verse and literary devices from Greek plays (described in the extensive back matter); references to Homer are threaded through the text. She offers context for modern readers, elaborating on ancient Greece as a slave society, while Iredale's black-and-white illustrations offer glimpses of artifacts. Like its two central figures, this luminous creation is far more than the sum of its parts. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Melisto, beloved by her father but spurned by her mother, who had hoped for a firstborn boy, is an intractable child. As she approaches marriageable age, she is sent to spend months in service at the temple of Artemis, where she meets her early death in a lightning strike. A freak natural tragedy? Retribution from a goddess with a grudge against Melisto's mother, who made only perfunctory offerings at her daughter's birth? Or is the girl's destiny to be fulfilled in the afterlife, as a ghost summoned to rectify the cruel separation of a mother and son? Readers realize what Melisto cannot: her fate has been entwined with that of Rhaskos, an enslaved boy she never met, whose artistic gift may be forever wasted unless the former-slave potter who purchased him-and nurtures his talent-can secure a legal guardian and protector to maintain his own freedom. This is an ambitious but tightly plotted tale, with narration spun in ancient Greek poetic and dramatic forms and familiar contemporary prose; Iredale's black and white illustrations of fictional "exhibits" that simulate archaeological finds cleverly confirm, or at least support, the details of the Olympian drama. YA readers who fondly recall bygone days curled up with Rick Riordan novels will be a prime audience for Schlitz's opus, particularly if they're up for a literary challenge and linger over the closing notes on how she crafted this immersive experience. EB

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Curation, historical fiction, performance piece -- Schlitz (Good Masters! Sweet Ladies!, rev. 11/07) brings a bundle of learning, artifice, and intentionality to this highly stylized tale of ancient Greece. With the god Hermes as sometimes-narrator ("No. Don't put down the book...If the lines look like poetry, relax. This book is shorter than it looks"), the plot revolves around Rhaskos, an enslaved boy, and Melisto, an aristocratically born Greek girl -- "a wild girl, chosen by Artemis." For structure, Schlitz curates eighteen "exhibits" -- fragments of inscriptions, pottery, and sculpture. As in a museum display or textbook, each has its explanatory note. Each also initiates a section of the story. We follow Rhaskos from his childhood collecting dung to his work as slave to upper-class Menon, when he first encounters Sokrates. We watch as Melisto survives maternal abuse to become one of Artemis's acolytes, her life ending in an ecstatic, tragic dance, when the two narrative threads -- one in verse, one in prose -- entwine. Schlitz deploys many voices; Hermes, Rhaskos, Hephaistos, Artemis, Sokrates, and more have their declamations, strophes, and antistrophes, characteristic of a Greek chorus and fitting for oral performance. Scraps of philosophy find a place, as does much information on pronunciation, etymology, the gods, and relevant cultural practice. Ambitious and original, this is stuffed with food for thought, often sparkling with wit and appropriate strangeness. (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Curation, historical fiction, performance piece -- Schlitz (Good Masters! Sweet Ladies!, rev. 11/07) brings a bundle of learning, artifice, and intentionality to this highly stylized tale of ancient Greece. With the god Hermes as sometimes-narrator ("No. Don't put down the book...If the lines look like poetry, relax. This book is shorter than it looks"), the plot revolves around Rhaskos, an enslaved boy, and Melisto, an aristocratically born Greek girl -- "a wild girl, chosen by Artemis." For structure, Schlitz curates eighteen "exhibits" -- fragments of inscriptions, pottery, and sculpture. As in a museum display or textbook, each has its explanatory note. Each also initiates a section of the story. We follow Rhaskos from his childhood collecting dung to his work as slave to upper-class Menon, when he first encounters Sokrates. We watch as Melisto survives maternal abuse to become one of Artemis's acolytes, her life ending in an ecstatic, tragic dance, when the two narrative threads -- one in verse, one in prose -- entwine. Schlitz deploys many voices; Hermes, Rhaskos, Hephaistos, Artemis, Sokrates, and more have their declamations, strophes, and antistrophes, characteristic of a Greek chorus and fitting for oral performance. Scraps of philosophy find a place, as does much information on pronunciation, etymology, the gods, and relevant cultural practice. Ambitious and original, this is stuffed with food for thought, often sparkling with wit and appropriate strangeness. Deirdre F. Baker(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An artistic enslaved boy, "common as clay," and a free-spirited girl, "precious as amber," become "linked together by the gods" in this drama of ancient Greece. After his mother, Thratta, is sold, neglected, red-haired Rhaskos, 5, works in the stables of a wealthy household in Thessaly. Eventually sold to a potter in Athens, Rhaskos learns the trade, expands his drawing skills, and becomes friends with the philosopher Sokrates, who urges him to be his "own master." Raised in a privileged Athens home, wild, brown-skinned Melisto is actively spurned by her mother and prefers her nurse, Thratta. After being sent away to serve the goddess Artemis, 10-year-old Melisto is killed by lightning and Thratta places a binding spell on her ghost, compelling her to find Rhaskos and set him free, thus pulling their stories together. Borrowing elements from classical Greek drama, the tale unfolds primarily in verse through alternating voices, including those of manipulative gods and goddesses as well as real and fictional secondary characters whose varied perspectives add vitality and momentum. Lyrically descriptive, surprisingly contemporary in feel, and laced with allusions to Greek mythology, history, and epic stories, the narrative offers a realistically diverse, colorful portrait of an ancient Greece in which slavery and warfare were prevalent. Black-and-white illustrations of archaeological artifacts add insight and depth to this meticulously researched story. A rich, complex, deftly crafted tale of friendship, creativity, and being true to oneself. (cast of characters, author's notes, bibliography) (Historical fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In a lyrical verse novel packed with ancient myths and well-defined characters, Schlitz (The Hired Girl) takes readers to ancient Greece to tell the saga of two children, virtual strangers, who form a bond extending beyond life. Wild and rebellious Melisto, "a rich man's daughter, and a proper Greek," is adored by her father but unloved by her mother. Enslaved, red-haired Rhaskos, who was separated from his mother at a young age, weathers torment until he is sold to Phaistus, a formerly enslaved potter who recognizes Rhaskos' talent for drawing but apprentices him without hope of freedom. Both children are desperate to escape their predicaments, but how and when they cross paths remains a mystery until the final chapters. Featuring insightful narratives from philosopher Sokrates and several Greek gods (Artemis, Athena, Hephaistos, Hermes) as well as illustrations of archeological items by Iredale (Myths and Legends of the World), the book is as meticulously researched as Schlitz's previous novels, as evidenced in detailed descriptions of settings and lifestyles. Her exploration of the human condition ("Nobody ever gets out of anything") delves into both characters' psyches through a pensive, contemporary-feeling narrative that easily propels readers along. Ages 10: 14. Author's agent: Stephen Barbara, InkWell Management. Illustrator's agent: Alexandra Gehringer, the Bright Agency. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Two children from vastly different backgrounds--one common as clay, artistic and bright; the other precious as amber, wild, and forceful--share stories of hardship and hope, life and death in this historical fantasy told as a Greek tragedy. Born a slave and considered a barbarian by the dominant culture, redheaded Rhaskos is taught to follow orders and never think for himself. Brown-skinned Melisto is born into an affluent Athenian household, but is abused and berated by a mother who wanted a son (or at least an obedient daughter). As the children grow so do their stories, until eventually the two become entangled through the work of the gods and Rhaskos's long-lost mother. Told from multiple perspectives, mostly in verse with some prose sections, Schlitz's latest novel is a beautifully crafted, complex masterpiece that unfortunately may be a tough sell for the intended audience. While the god Hermes acts as chorus, providing irreverent interludes as well as much-needed context, he cannot compensate for an often wide gap in the lived experiences of characters--at one point, Melisto's mother describes her pregnancy and labor--and that of the reader. VERDICT This is a thoroughly researched, epic tale, but one that may have limited appeal. Share with readers who enjoyed other works by Schlitz or Finding Wonders by Jeannine Atkins, or for whom Katherine Marsh's Jepp, Who Defied the Stars is perhaps too mature.--Kaitlin Frick, Darien Lib., CT Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Newbery Medal-winning author Laura Amy Schlitz (Good Masters! Sweet Ladies!) has created a literary feast in this intoxicatingly original tale that takes place in ancient Greece. Amber & Clay is part sweeping saga and part epic narrative, with liberal doses of ancient history, drama, mythology and philosophy included. Painstakingly researched, the 500-plus-page volume follows the odyssey of two 5th-century BCE children destined never to meet--in the living world. In parallel narratives, Rhaskos, an enslaved Thracian boy living in Greece, and Melisto, a highborn Athenian girl, follow their respective--and severely circumscribed--paths. Rhaskos's mother, also enslaved, is sold when the boy is five, leaving him to the whims of the masters of their home. "I was too small to be much use, / but I was big enough to pick up turds." Horses--and their manure--become Rhaskos's life. One day, after sneaking inside the house of his master, Rhaskos sees his first-ever painting: "A wonder before my eyes." It is a horse "large enough to ride": "You could see the wind ruffle its mane, / the sinewy legs pranced, the nostrils flared; and it had wings, / luminous/ spread like the wings of a swan." Rhaskos becomes obsessed with trying to re-create an image as lifelike as this and begins scratching out drawings in the dirt. Later, when he is sold off to a potter, his growing artistic ability becomes useful. At the same time, he develops a second and unusual (for a "thickheaded" "barbarian," that is) passion for philosophy when he befriends a funny "old man/ who had no beauty to display" named Sokrates. Melisto is the spitfire daughter of an important man; she is spoiled by her father and near despised by her mother. The person Melisto loves most, besides her father, is Thratta, the enslaved woman who takes cares of her.... COPYRIGHT(2021) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2219917 Threads of Magic (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alison Croggon

Pip lives by his wits in the city of Clarel. But when he picks the wrong pocket, Pip finds himself in possession of a strange dried heart in a silver casket--and those who lost it will stop at nothing to get it back. With assassins on his trail and the ominous heart beginning to whisper to him, Pip and his childlike older sister El are drawn deeper into the forbidden world of magic.

978-1-5362-0719-4 Candlewick Press ©2021 5-1/4 x 8 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 750

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When 12-year-old pickpocket Pipistrel, who has fair hair and pale skin, lifts an ornate silver box from a noble on the streets of Clarel, he's just hoping to support his older sister El, who is sometimes "very like a small child," and himself, orphaned as toddlers due to typhus. But inside the box is a sinister "rough black" Stone Heart, an object of great power sought by some of the most commanding people in the kingdom. The siblings' quest to understand the heart takes them to Amina, El's best friend's mother, a witch with dark skin hiding from the ruthless Office for Witchcraft Extermination. Meanwhile, 15-year-old Princess Georgette, "a slim, fair girl" with "aristocratically blue eyes," is desperate to escape an arranged marriage to the terrifying King Oswald of Awemt, and also seeks Amina, her old nurse. Their fates intertwined, these unlikely allies must keep the heart from the immortal body-stealing Specters, who crave its magical potential. Logistics issues dampen enjoyment, but Croggon (the Books of Pellinor series) subverts genre expectations and offers up multiple perspectives; both heroic and villainous; to weave a complicated tapestry of magic and sacrifice. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Jenny Darling and Assoc. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Readers will immediately settle comfortably into this deftly written high-adventure fantasy. When Pip, described as a "thieving young man with black hair, short scrawny legs and weasel eyes," pickpockets a Royal of Clarel, he finds himself with a silver box that holds a bewitched human heart. His sister El is wary of the magical object, but Pip can't seem to part with it. He becomes the target of royal assassins, witches, and specters—all of whom will stop at nothing to get the heart back. The omniscient narrator gives readers a bird's-eye view of the many-threaded plot and the multitude of players woven into it: Pip; El; the blonde Princess Georgette; Oni, a witch with curly, closely cropped hair, and her mother Amina; several kings; a few assassins, shape-shifters, and a host of others. At times, keeping the characters straight becomes cumbersome, and exactly how the magical heart will benefit those seeking it is not clear until more than three-quarters of the way through. However, the theme that power without love must be defeated drives the story. And it's a fun world to be in. The close buildings, cobblestones, and mucky streets of Clarel bring the Victorian gothic mood of Laura Amy Schlitz's Splendors and Glooms to mind, while the worldbuilding and adventure will be enjoyed by Cornelia Funke fans. VERDICT A great selection for voracious readers who aren't yet ready for YA.—Hillary Perelyubskiy, Los Angeles P.L.

#2162260 Pony on the Twelfth Floor (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Polly Faber

Kizzy has always wanted a pony of her own. So when she finds a pony snacking on donuts in the grocery store, she instantly knows that she must have him and what to name him. Enlisting the help of her best friend, Pawel, Kizzy manages to keep Donut fed, ride him around the park, and even hide him in her school's garden. But Kizzy is finding it harder and harder to keep Donut a secret. Will she be able to give him up if it means finding him a better home?

978-1-5362-0930-3 Candlewick Press ©2020 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 256 pgs.

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Faber (the Mango & Bambang series) opens this caper on a droll note, explaining that though Kizzy had always dreamed of owning a pony, "she'd never expected to pick one up from the grocery store." But after the 11-year-old and her friend Pawel spot an unattended pony gorging on doughnuts in a shop, Kizzy impulsively claims ownership. Her imagination instantly ignites as she decides that the pony, which she names Donut, "smelled of dreams come true," and envisions riding him competitively and being tapped for the Olympics. But reality sets in; more or less; when the girl realizes the hurdles she must jump to conceal Donut, which involves hiding him in her bedroom, in Pawel's backyard shed, in her school's walled garden, and on a pony-loving neighbor's apartment balcony, all comically portrayed in cartoon art by Jennings (On the First Day of First Grade). The animal's insatiable appetite wreaks amusing havoc on multiple occasions while triggering a surfeit of scatological humor. Faber neatly weaves Kizzy's sly resourcefulness, devotion to Donut, and rappings with friends and family into a sprightly, uplifting story. Ages 8: 12. (June)

#2252200 Crashing in Love (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jennifer Richard Jacobson

Since her parents divorced, twelve-year-old Peyton has known that to achieve happier outcomes in her life, she's got to focus on eliminating her flaws-and on making sure her first boyfriend is truly right for her. Guided by her collection of inspirational quotes and her growing list of ideal boyfriend traits, Peyton is convinced that this summer will be the perfect summer, complete with the perfect boyfriend!

978-1-5362-1153-5 Candlewick Press ©2021 5 x 7-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 710

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Almost 13-year-old Peyton is facing a dull summer. Her best friend, Mari, will be away all summer, putting an end to their various plans. On the way to Mari's house to say goodbye, however, Peyton sees what at first seems to be a pile of clothes lying on the road but on further inspection turns out to be an injured boy about her age. The boy, Gray, then lies in a coma in the hospital, and Peyton divides her time between sitting beside his bed and talking to him, at his parents' request, and trying to discover who hit him. Peyton is devoted to self-motivation, and her first-person narrative is appropriately crisp and peppy, and the characters around her are vivid and bright, from her struggling journalist mother to her laid-back father and manipulative paternal grandmother. She is disappointed when her daydream about Gray and who he actually turns out to be don't match, but the truth jars her into reevaluating who she is and wants to be and forces her to step out of fantasy and into the real world. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Twelve-year-old Peyton plays detective after rescuing a hit-and-run victim who she hopes could become her summer boyfriend. It doesn't take Peyton long after finding Gray unconscious to start imagining their would-be romance. It's summer in Mussel Cove, and she's working the beat in the small coastal Maine town, on the hunt for whomever hit and then abandoned Gray, all while he's in the hospital in a coma. Her search for justice teaches her a lot about first impressions and assumptions as she realizes that life lies perplexingly in between black and white. While Jacobson tries to convey some of that complexity, it unfortunately mostly falls flat. Peyton's older sisters feel generic, and her divorced parents hit the obvious tropes. There are flashes of depth, as in the sisters' conversation about what split up their parents and in the moment her father stands up to her unforgiving grandmother. But overall, the story stays on the surface. The suspense around what will happen to Gray and the mystery of who hit him keep the plot plodding along, but everything is resolved almost too quickly in the end. Jacobson succeeds, however, at writing Peyton as a believable tween girl with age-appropriate concerns, friends, and interests. The main characters are presumed White; cues such as a name or hairstyle may be intended to identify background characters of color. A middle-of-the-road coming-of-age mystery. (Mystery. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Jacobson (Small as an Elephant) creates a well-paced blend of mystery and romantic idealism set in mid-coast Maine. Inspired by her collection of self-improvement quotations, 12-year-old narrator Peyton Campbell has plans for her summer all laid out, including trying to find someone who matches her list of "The Top Ten Musts for the Perfect Guy." But the summer changes when, cycling to her best friend's house, Peyton spots an unconscious hit-and-run victim around her age and calls 911, then learns that the boy, Gray Olsen, is in a coma. Even before Gray's mother offers Peyton a job watching over him when she can't be at the hospital, Peyton becomes certain that she and Gray are destined to be together romantically, and determines to find the person who hit him, despite her divorced parents' disapproval. Subplots involving Peyton's fears that she's losing her best friend, her suspicions about a boy she meets at the hospital, and increasing pressures to end her obsession with Gray's situation add tension to the story. If the conclusion is perhaps a bit tidy, Peyton emerges as a realistically flawed heroine who learns that well-laid plans don't always work and truth isn't always the way one person sees it. Characters default to white. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Alyssa Eisner Henkin, Trident Media Group. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up—Inspirational quotes paper the walls of Peyton's bedroom in the coastal Maine house she lives in with her aspiring journalist mother and two older sisters. Always striving to be a better person, Peyton is positive that with the right attitude, anything is possible. With a little more effort, maybe her parents wouldn't have gotten divorced. Twelve-year-old Peyton is also positive that this is the summer she'll get her first boyfriend; in fact, she has created a list of all the qualities her future boyfriend should embody. Riding her bike one morning she finds a boy in the road, victim of a hit-and-run accident. So sure is Peyton that this comatose boy is the boy of her dreams, she devotes her summer to sitting with him in the ICU and trying to solve the mystery of who was driving the car responsible for the accident. Things don't go exactly as planned. Peyton's summer of romance turns out to be one of growth and understanding—understanding what led to her parent's divorce as well as why her best friend has become estranged. Although Peyton does find a potential boyfriend and solve the mystery of who was driving, these accomplishments come with the realization that life is messy and problems can't be solved with inspirational quotes. All of the primary characters are cued as white. While the focus of the story is Peyton's relationship with family members and friends, secondary issues of class differences are subtly addressed. VERDICT A heartwarming and remarkably poignant story of a girl navigating the sometimes painful process of growing up. A solid choice for middle grade readers.—Ragan O'Malley, Saint Ann's Sch., Brooklyn

#2320016 Arthur, the Always King (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kevin Crossley-Holland

Quantity 1
Unit Price $29.99

Translated, adapted, told, and retold, the stories of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table have captivated imaginations across time. Now comes a lavishly illustrated, masterful retelling sure to enthrall a new generation of readers. From the tale of Sir Gawain and the Green Knight to the quest for the Holy Grail, stories both familiar and unfamiliar are woven into a vivid tapestry of Arthurian lore that spans from the king's conception to his final battle. Merlin, Guinevere, Lancelot, and other timeless characters come to life as complex men and women in a rich and atmospheric feat of storytelling that feels at once historical and fantastical, otherworldly and fully human. A compelling collaboration between internationally acclaimed author Kevin Crossley-Holland and three-time Kate Greenaway Medal winner Chris Riddell, this beautiful volume is sure to be treasured by readers of all ages.

978-1-5362-1265-5 Candlewick Press ©2023 9 x 10-1/2 240 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Spanning King Arthur's enchanted birth to the king's disappearance at the lake where he received Excalibur, Crossley-Holland (Norse Myths) recounts myriad Arthurian legends in this evocative, episodic telling. Intricately detailed full-page artwork by Riddell (Pirate Stew), rendered in swathes of muted color highlighted by regal blues and vivid gold, accompanies succinct literary text. Chapters are aptly titled according to their content: for example, in "Arthur's Childhood," the creators depict Arthur's mother, Ygerne, Duchess of Cornwall, giving birth to the babe before the magician Merlin whisks him away, "over the jagged sea cliff. In the almost dark," to foster parents Sir Ector and Lady Margery. "The Fellowship of the Round Table" follows the founding of the society and presents the seven trials faced by Arthur and his knights to achieve greatness. Subsequent tales detail these trials, Excalibur's retrieval, and the story of the Green Knight. The creators maintain outdated interpretations of women found in the Arthurian inspiration material. This lyrically developed, if standard, story of adventure, magic, and intrigue underlines the idea, outlined in an introduction, that the Always King's legend endures because it's "about human beings, not about gods or supermen and superwomen." Ages 10: up. (Apr.)

#2328833 Confessions of a Candy Snatcher (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Phoebe Sinclair

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

For the past few years, twelve-year-old Jonas and his friends have competed to see how many bags of candy they can grab from unsuspecting trick-or-treaters. No one's supposed to get hurt, just lose their treats. So Jonas is taken by surprise when one of his smaller targets fights back against his snatching attempt. He's even more surprised when he starts to receive anonymous notes from someone who knows what happened that night. Jonas already has enough on his plate, between his parents' ill-defined separation and his own guilt-guilt his friend Concepcion challenges him to confront in a zine she's creating around the prompt "What's the worst thing you ever did?" It's a complicated question, one that touches on issues of identity, maturity, physical boundaries, and safety.

978-1-5362-1368-3 Candlewick Press ©2023 6 x 9 336 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 700

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An ill-fated Halloween candy-snatching incident leads a Black seventh grader to craft a story about what really happened. Jonas has been grabbing candy from trick-or-treaters with friends Mikey, Darius, and Aaron since he was in sixth grade. He doesn't see any harm in it and was having fun until the target became Gideon Rao, his classmate who arrived in fifth grade from Texas and is a Native American. Afterward, Jonas starts finding notes in his locker--"I KNOW IT WAS YOU" and "WATCH YOUR BACK"--and he starts listing classmates who might be responsible for writing them. He's worried about the possible consequences if his involvement is discovered even though his friends promised to keep it all a secret. Concepción, Jonas' Chilean home-schooled friend who goes by C., asks Jonas to write about the worst thing he ever did for her zine, which forces him to think more deeply about the events. His self-reflection is derailed when the notes increase in visibility, however. Soon Jonas is reluctantly involved in mediation with people he thought he knew. The book shows how Jonas' different friendships have shaped him; he is a different person with C. than he is with his boys, something that allows readers to travel down the journey of introspection alongside Jonas. The striking black-and-white illustrations in a variety of styles offer insights into the characters' emotions in compelling ways. A creative debut about harnessing the courage to view yourself and your friendships clearly. (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A tween-made zine and the fallout surrounding a disrupted Halloween tradition force a Black 12-year-old to reckon with his actions in this lively work by debut author Sinclair and Taylor (Garvey's Choice). Jonas and his friends have a holiday tradition of hustling younger kids out of their candy. But after something goes wrong on Halloween; something that Jonas inexplicably barely remembers; he begins receiving cryptic anonymous notes reading "I know it was you," "watch your back," and "tell or I will." While Jonas searches for the perpetrator, his everyday life unravels around him: his parents navigate a contentious separation, and Jonas gets into fights with a classmate. The only thing keeping him afloat is his newly acquired pink typewriter, which he uses to help make a zine with Latinx-cued friend Concepcion, who challenges Jonas to use the publication to admit "the worst thing you ever did." Taylor's polished grayscale art features throughout, depicting stories and confessions from Jonas and Concepcion's zine. Twining the mystery behind Jonas's fateful All Hallows' Eve with grounded personal conflicts, Sinclair develops a uniquely rendered interpretation of a misunderstood tween seeking stability and a place to belong. Ages 10: 14. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal "A profoundly relatable debut...The tone is heartbreakingly innocent, brilliantly so, translating the confusion of middle school and the worry of growing up into the acceptance of all manner of hard truths...this debut novel with a delightfully diverse cast provides a truthful account of peer pressure, divorce, and consent."

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Phoebe Sinclair's debut, Confessions of a Candy Snatcher, is a fast-paced, thoughtful middle-grade novel about a Black tween who does some serious self-reflection after a night of candy-stealing goes wrong.

#2252188 Birdie's Bargain (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Katherine Paterson

Birdie has questions for God. For starters, why couldn't God roll history back to September 10, 2001, and fix things--so the next day was an ordinary sunny day and not the devastating lead-in to two wars? Daddy has already been to Iraq twice. Now he's going again, and Birdie is sure he'll die.

978-1-5362-1559-5 Candlewick Press ©2021 5-1/4 x 8 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 680

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Birdie isn't happy with the way her life has been going. Her dad has been called up again to serve in Iraq, and living at her Gran's is an adjustment. Her room is small, Mom is working all the time, and Gran is occupied with baby Billy. To top it off, her only "friend" is bossy Alicia. Making a bargain to protect her father seems logical to Birdie, but what if the bargain doesn't work out like she hopes? And is revealing Alicia's troubled home life a betrayal, or is it the right thing to do? The complexities of belief play a major role in how Birdie sees the world, but as she learns through patient Gran, perhaps Birdie's rigid views, learned at Bible camp, aren't the only way to approach faith. Paterson, the beloved author of classics like Bridge to Terabithia, has once again written a book that will appeal to thoughtful readers interested in a good story as well as bigger ideas. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Paterson's latest novel opens with Birdie (a nickname for Elizabeth) crying as her mother drives her father to the airport for his third deployment to Iraq. It's significant that Birdie is wearing an "I [heart] Jesus" shirt, because the bargain referred to in the book's title is one she has made with God to keep her father safe: "I'll stop acting like a jerk, if you'll start acting like God and take care of us for a change." To cut costs, the family moves in with Gran. The first person Birdie meets is fellow fifth-grader Alice Suggs, who comes on very aggressively, grabbing her arm and bragging that her father outranks Birdie's. Birdie doesn't enjoy being with her, but she remembers the Bible verse "Be ye kind, one to another" and continues to go to Alice's house and eat lunch with her at school. When Birdie's father is seriously injured in Iraq, she feels shocked and betrayed: "She was mad, so mad, mad at God, at Mom, at Gran, even at Daddy, at everything in the whole stinking world." As the protagonist copes first with the move and then with her crisis of faith, Paterson, using skillful omniscient narration, rounds the story with specific physical details and depicts the character's emotional arc with authenticity and empathy. Susan Dove Lempke(Copyright 2021 by The Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Can a person really make a deal with God? When her father's National Guard unit gets deployed overseas for the third time, and 10-year-old Birdie, her mom, and her 6-month-old brother, Billy, have to move into her grandmother's small house, Birdie is so upset she refuses to tell her father goodbye. Overcome with guilt after he leaves, she thinks back to the lessons she learned at the Bible camp her parents used as child care the summer before and promises God that she'll behave and be a witness if he keeps her father safe. Then God seems to lead her to Alicia Marie, a troubled and troublesome girl in her new class who demands more than Birdie wants to give. Birdie does her best to live up to her promise to God--but Daddy is injured anyhow. Paterson's writing is smooth and nuanced, but this novel lacks a defined narrative arc. Birdie learns to see the truth behind Alicia's lies and exaggerations, but then Alicia, the most fully realized character, drops out of the story entirely. Birdie is reassured when she visits her father at Walter Reed hospital after he is flown back to the U.S. for treatment. She is also comforted some months later when her grandmother suggests a kinder version of God, but she doesn't exhibit much growth on her own. Characters default to White. Lovely prose and an intriguing family situation but insufficient character development. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Ten-year-old Birdie, terrified for the safety of her Vermont National Guard father when he is called to Iraq for his third deployment, strikes a bargain with God: she'll "be a witness in the world if...you will just keep my Daddy safe." Challenges abound for Birdie, beyond fearing for her dad's safety: financial difficulties have forced her mother and baby brother to move in with her grandmother, and she is claimed for friendship by unpleasant classmate Alicia Marie Suggs, who frequently exaggerates. Struggling to follow the tenets of her beliefs, timid Birdie allows Alicia to monopolize her time and passively accepts Alicia's abuse, until a family emergency causes a crisis of faith. Other than disagreeable Alicia, who vanishes midway through the book, poorly fleshed-out characters (all presumed white) populate what is more a snapshot of a family; and tween's; turmoil than a fully constructed plotline. Though frequently unfocused, Newbery Medalist Paterson's novel respects Birdie's friendship struggles and offers lyrical turns of phrase: upon Birdie's seeing a gleaming tree encased in ice, "The thought came to her that the tree was singing, singing a hymn to the sun." Ages 9: 12. (Oct.)

#2222645 Annie Lumsden, The Girl from the Sea (Hardcover (Trade))
written by David Almond

Annie Lumsden has hair that drifts like seaweed, eyes that shine like rock pools, and thoughts that dart and dance like minnows. She lives with her artist mother by the sea, where she feels utterly at home, and has long felt apart from the other girls at school.

Words and numbers on the page don't make sense to her, and strange maladies have been springing up that the doctors can't explain.

978-1-5362-1674-5 Candlewick Press ©2021 6-1/2 x 8 64 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 1.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Rather like the seashell her mother picks up that is "as ordinary as any seashell, as beautiful as any seashell," the precious mystery that is Annie Lumsden is not apparent to all. Thirteen-year-old Annie lives with her mum in a small house beside the sea in a beautiful location in the northeast of England. Classmates ridiculed her difficulties at school, and now she suffers inexplicable seizures. Annie and her single mother, who sings sea shanties in the pub and sells handcrafted art made of shells and rocks, glory in the spinning of tales and in connections between their beloved home and far-flung times and places. One day, Annie asks Mum to explain how she came to be; the ensuing tale weaves together the mysteries of the watery world that Annie, whose hair "drifts like seaweed" when she swims and whose "thoughts dart and dance inside like little minnows in the shallows," loves so dearly. It involves a mysterious man from a seaweed forest, rather like a selkie, who had "skin smooth and bright like sealskin," spoke with a "liquid voice," and is her true father. This short, captivating story is enhanced with watercolor-and-colored-pencil illustrations in natural tones; the illustrations' impressionistic style perfectly mirrors the text's blurring of the lines between the magical and the everyday. This gentle tale reminds readers of the power of stories to remake our humdrum worlds into something wondrous. Main characters present White. Enchanting. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Annie Lumsden and her sea shanty: singing mother, who "finds tales everywhere," live in a modest white house "above the jetsam line," from which parts of the village of Stupor can be glimpsed. The 13-year-old, a white only child with learning difficulties and an innate love of the ocean, describes herself poetically, with language borrowed from the sea ("I have eyes that shine like rock pools. My ears are like scallop shells") and occasionally suffers from "falls," seizure-like episodes in which she goes "far away beneath the sea." One day, Annie asks her mother to tell a new origin story for her, "something that works out the puzzle of me." The resulting tale involves the woman's meeting a mysterious man from the sea with fins and webbed feet, nine months before Annie herself is born; later that day, a traveler snaps a picture of Annie that seems to reveal the truth behind her otherworldliness. Almond's (Joe Quinn's Poltergeist) sea-swept story, enhanced by Alemagna's (Things That Go Away) eloquent, softly hued watercolor and colored-pencil illustrations, melds memorable turns of phrase with an appreciation for the unexpected: "Sometimes the best way to understand how to be human is to understand our strangeness." Ages 7: 10. (May)

#2268154 Healer and Witch (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Nancy Werlin

Sylvie and her mother and grandmother are beloved, trusted healers in their medieval French village, though some whisper that fifteen-year-old Sylvie and her grand-mere deal in more than herbs and medicines. Perhaps they're a bit...witchy?

978-1-5362-1956-2 Candlewick Press ©2022 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 630

Quantity

Unit Price

1

$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Werlin's first foray into middle grade is a thrilling and suspenseful experience; there are twisting reveals and adventure aplenty, though the story isn't afraid to stop for lovely moments of quiet contemplation and recollection along the way. A budding, respectful romance and hints of deeper powers will have readers hoping for a sequel. It's well worth joining kind and clever Sylvie on her harrowing journey of discovery.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Raised as the daughter and granddaughter of healers in her small French village, fifteen-year-old Sylvie has an untrained magical ability that enables her to see and even manipulate people's thoughts and memories. When her beloved Grand-mère dies, Sylvie is desperate to help her grieving mother, but she accidentally removes not just her mother's sadness but also her memories of Grand-mère and Sylvie herself. Determined to use her powers for good, Sylvie sets out to find a teacher, accompanied on her journey by young local misfit Martin, whose curiosity about the world complements Sylvie's firm conviction to retain her integrity and autonomy. Unfortunately, sixteenth-century gender norms make women's self-determination a complicated matter, as a potential mentor illustrates. The parameters of Sylvie's gift are fuzzy and largely undefined; this leaves a hopeful openness to her future but makes the gift a conveniently literal device for exploring trauma and the limitations of healing. The concept of finding and following one's calling, strongly espoused here, needs more scrutiny and nuance than it gets, and the message requires glossing over some background plot implausibility. Still, the strides toward deeper understanding of what it means to heal minds and bodies are well worth taking. FHK COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book "A refreshingly honest and elegantly written work of historical fantasy."

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Werlin's new novel is cause for celebration -- for its sleek, sharp prose; intelligent ideas; and precise characterization, to name but a few of its attributes. Set in 1531 France, this is the tale of Sylvie, an untaught telepathic healer, who, after the death of her grand-mere, mistakenly removes much of her mother's memory while trying to ease her grief. In the company of clever, rambunctious young neighbor Martin, Sylvie leaves her tiny hamlet in quest of a mentor to teach her how to use her powers safely; the two travel to Lyon with the caravan of an enterprising trader to find the renowned magic-user Madame du Bois. But both Madame du Bois and the trader turn out to be something of a surprise -- and will Lyon's new inquisitor prove to be a help to Sylvie, or a danger? Every sentence here pushes character and plot forward, so there's plenty of momentum and suspense; but what is more unusual is the way Werlin prods characters (and readers) to think through ideas of faith and reason in making their own choices. The story has its articulate and challenging "lessons" (for instance, even after you discover who it is you're meant to be, "you must work hard every day to become that person"). Just as much, it invites questions and rigorous reasoning, refusing to bow to romantic sentiment ("But men owned their wives," Sylvie thinks, considering the legal realities of marriage). A refreshingly honest and elegantly written work of historical fantasy. (Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Werlin's new novel is cause for celebration -- for its sleek, sharp prose; intelligent ideas; and precise characterization, to name but a few of its attributes. Set in 1531 France, this is the tale of Sylvie, an untaught telepathic healer, who, after the death of her grand-mere, mistakenly removes much of her mother's memory while trying to ease her grief. In the company of clever, rambunctious young neighbor Martin, Sylvie leaves her tiny hamlet in quest of a mentor to teach her how to use her powers safely; the two travel to Lyon with the caravan of an enterprising trader to find the renowned magic-user Madame du Bois. But both Madame du Bois and the trader turn out to be something of a surprise -- and will Lyon's new inquisitor prove to be a help to Sylvie, or a danger? Every sentence here pushes character and plot forward, so there's plenty of momentum and suspense; but what is more unusual is the way Werlin prods characters (and readers) to think through ideas of faith and reason in making their own choices. The story has its articulate and challenging "lessons" (for instance, even after you discover who it is you're meant to be, "you must work hard every day to become that person"). Just as much, it invites questions and rigorous reasoning, refusing to bow to romantic sentiment ("But men owned their wives," Sylvie thinks, considering the legal realities of marriage). A refreshingly honest and elegantly written work of historical fantasy. Deirdre F. Baker(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In 16th-century France, 15-year-old Sylvie is more than just a healer. Sylvie might be a witch. She has more than just a talent for healing people like her midwife mother, Jeanne; Sylvie possesses mysterious powers like those of her Grand-mère Sylvie. However, when her grandmother dies before she can train Sylvie to use her powers for good, Sylvie commits a grave error: Trying to relieve Jeanne of her grief, Sylvie accidentally removes all Jeanne's memories of both her mother and daughter. Now Sylvie is venturing beyond her small village of Bresnois to find a magical teacher to help her correct her mistake and heal Jeanne. When the farrier's son, Martin, insists on joining Sylvie on her quest, the two of them pose as siblings and set off, eventually reaching Lyon. Unfortunately for Sylvie, not everyone in the large towns and cities of Catholic early modern France appreciates a woman with unusual powers, and inquisitors pose a real threat. Sylvie and Martin need to work together to figure out whom they can trust and how they will eventually get home--if they return home at all. This historical fantasy is a delightful page-turner that will entice readers of historical fiction and fantasy alike. It's a refreshing stand-alone novel with a resilient protagonist who realizes the greatest magic of all is being true to oneself. Characters read as White. Thoroughly enjoyable and engaging, filled with magic, mystery, strength, and love. (Historical fantasy. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In Werlin's (Zoe Rosenthal Is Not Lawful Good) middle grade debut, an introspective historical fantasy set in 1531 France, 15-year-old Sylvie can see and manipulate thoughts and memories, but she has received no official training for the power, which, like that of her Grand-mere, is stronger than her Catholic family's usual gifts of healing. After inadvertently erasing some of her midwife mother's memories in attempting to ease her grief around the death of Grand-mere, Sylvie leaves her small town to seek out a mentor. Unexpectedly accompanied by eight-year-old farrier's son Martin, she sets forth across the richly described French countryside, keeping her power a secret from those who'd attack her for witchcraft as well as those who would exploit her. When she joins a caravan led by 24-year-old merchant Robert Chouinard, Sylvie develops a friendship with the mercurial, mysterious man, but even he may not be able to protect her from the dangers of her journey. Leisurely paced and told in an assured third-person voice, Werlin's gentle reflection on trauma and healing, the ethics of power, and seemingly dual natures explores Sylvie's place in the world and her relationship to those she cares for. Protagonists read as white. Ages 9: 12. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8--In 16th-century France, 15-year-old Sylvie, her mother, and Grand-mere are healers; Grand-mere and Sylvie's abilities are rooted in magic, however. When her grandmother dies, and Sylvie's mother no longer remembers her because of Sylvie's mistake, the teen has to leave her small, Catholic village to find anyone who can teach her how to control her great power. She is accompanied by Martin, a younger childhood friend, who was asked by Grand-mere to follow Sylvie if the girl ever left the village. She meets the wise woman Ceciline, one of Grand-mere's former friends. Ceciline may be like Sylvie's Grand-mere, but her feelings about people without magic are completely different. The young woman uses her power, which is much greater than anyone else's, to find her own path forward. Werlin's middle grade debut features adventure, magic, and a strong female protagonist. This suspenseful historical fantasy explores how society perceives and attempts to control women, especially those who are seen as strong, wise, or powerful. VERDICT Recommended for middle school collections, this is a solid standalone choice for libraries where historical, magic-based fiction is popular.--Marissa Lieberman Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness YA author Nancy Werlin's middle-grade debut is an unhurried and subtle bildungsroman that features a young woman trying to understand her magical powers in medieval France. Healer and Witch gracefully explores themes of identity, family and belonging. Fifteen-year-old Sylvie comes from a long line of strong women and healers. She, her mother and her grandmother are trusted in the village of Bresnois to treat injuries and illnesses. However, Sylvie's ability to view and manipulate the memories of others goes beyond ordinary healing. When Sylvie's grandmother dies unexpectedly, Sylvie attempts to use magic to cure her mother's grief--with disastrous results. Desperate to fix her mistake, Sylvie leaves Bresnois in search of "someone who could help her with her gift." Sylvie's quest introduces her to new friends, including a mischievous stowaway, a stern yet kind young merchant and a self-proclaimed witch. Far away from "everything she knew," Sylvie comes to realize that the true nature of her power may be something only she can determine for herself. There are no epic battles or grand prophecies in Healer and Witch, whose fantasy narrative remains grounded in the human stakes facing Sylvie and her companions. Werlin (Zoe Rosenthal Is Not Lawful Good) brings compassion and complexity to her depictions of the relationships between characters. No individual is defined by a single trait and first appearances often prove misleading. Indeed, a recurring message is that positive and negative experiences are part of a full life, and repressing feelings of unhappiness can be harmful rather than helpful. Readers looking for a gentle, understated historical fantasy will sympathize with Sylvie in her struggle to "choose her own future" in a "world that was increasingly hostile to women such as herself." --Alanna Felton, freelance reviewer COPYRIGHT(2022) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2315362 Book That No One Wanted to Read (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Richard Ayoade The life of a book isn't easy, especially when people judge you by your cover (not every book can be adorned with sparkly unicorns!). And this narrator should know--it's the book itself, and it has a lot of opinions. It gets irritated when readers bend its pages back, and it finds authors quite annoying. But it does have a story to tell. Through witty direct address and charming illustrations, readers meet a book that has never been read, with a cover the boring color of a school lunch table and pages so dry they give bookworms indigestion. But what happens when this book meets you, a curious reader? 978-1-5362-2216-6 Walker Books US ©2023 6-1/4 x 9-1/4 128 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 1.0	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist "Could well leave even confirmed nonreaders tempted to turn over a new leaf."

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Comedian and actor Ayoade explores storytelling and books themselves. Readers are quickly introduced to the premise: The narrator of this book...is the book itself. Directly addressing the audience, the narrator waxes philosophical about judging books by covers before plunging readers into a story told in second person about a child who finds "a particular Book That No One Wanted To Read" on a library shelf. Interspersed with imagined, telepathic dialogue between reader and book, this delightfully droll work casually covers everything from footnotes to story structure; information about excess unwanted books being "pulped" by publishers leads to a gag about the book not wanting to be recycled into toilet paper. The design is clean, with different fonts effectively used to maintain speaker clarity, and facts about books blend beautifully with wacky, tongue-in-cheek illustrations. The character "you" is a reader stand-in with a humorous composite depiction (and so lacks race, gender, or any other identity, though other people depicted throughout are diverse in skin tone). In many ways a spiritual successor to B.J. Novak's The Book With No Pictures (2014), the book (and Book, the character) will encourage readers to approach literature with a sense of play. Lovingly crafted metafictional silliness both experimental and engaging. (Illustrated fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly British performer Ayoade kicks off this telling with a P.G. Wodehouse epigraph, setting the tone for a jocose metafictional narrative told from a book's point of view. An audience-directed first-person framing chapter introduces the narrator ("Oh yes./ I'm a book./ Hello") before diving into several pages' worth of observations regarding texts and readers (judging books by their covers, people who dog-eat pages) as well as notes about volumes' utility (like delivery vehicles, they're "a packed truck"). When the second chapter picks up the main narrative, it traces the second-person story of a nonspecific child ("you") who finds The Book That No One Wanted to Read on a high library shelf and establishes telepathic communication with it. Slowly, the initially repressed Book begins to reveal deep, complex feelings, and together with the child who discovers it, begins to explore the idea of collaborating on a new storytelling project, making for an idiosyncratically charming read. Alongside diagrams, graphs, and lengthy chapter titles, whimsical cartooning from Freeman (Good Dogs on a Bad Day) visualizes humans of varying skin tones throughout. Ages 10: 14. (Mar.)

#2320027 Elf Dog and Owl Head (Hardcover (Trade))
written by M. T. Anderson

Clay has had his fill of home life. A global plague has brought the world to a screeching halt, and with little to look forward to but a summer of video-calling friends, vying with annoying sisters for the family computer, and tuning out his parents' financial worries, he's only too happy to retreat to the woods. From the moment the elegant little dog with the ornate collar appears like an apparition among the trees, Clay sees something uncanny in her. Each day the dog leads Clay down paths he never knew existed, deeper into the unknown. There are traps and terrors in the woods, too, and if Clay isn't careful, he might stray off the path and lose his way forever.

978-1-5362-2281-4 Candlewick Press ©2023 6 x 8 240 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Book Page A boy and his dog--it's the beginning of a story that's been told a thousand times. But when the dog is a Bulgarian elf-hound who magically appears in the woods, the story might be a little different. Elf Dog and Owl Head by National Book Award winner M.T. Anderson, with black-and-white illustrations by Junyi Wu, upends familiar tropes with imagination, poignancy and just enough realism to allow the reader to see themselves in at least one character.

Reviews by: Booklist Anderson positions his breezy new fantasy in the present primarily through the pervasive presence of "the sickness," which has citizens living in boredom-generating quarantine. Online school is a joke and a summer without friends isn't looking much better—and family time lost its luster ages ago. But when Clay stumbles upon a lost dog—sleek and white, except for the bright red interior of her ears—everything begins to change. Clay instinctively knows that she is a royal elf-hound. What he doesn't know is that she belongs to the unpleasant People Under the Mountain and is trained to hunt all manner of monsters. With Elphinore the elf-hound by his side, Clay's summer becomes one of wonder, as she is able to follow paths invisible to the human eye. This is how he becomes friends with an owl-headed boy named Amos and very nearly gets his family cursed. This playful romp pulls magic into the mundane and gives regular kids the chance to be heroes while Wu's cross-hatched pencil illustrations dust the proceedings with further enchantment.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books In an experience that will likely be familiar to many young readers, Clay and his sisters are stuck at home after a global illness shut down the world and forced the tween boy online for school, crushing any sort of developing social life. On a walk through the woods, Clay encounters a strange little white dog, who offers the lonely kid companionship and then a bit of adventure, taking Clay off the forest path and into a world inhabited by owl-headed creatures. Despite it becoming clear quite quickly that the magical land holds potentially fatal danger, Clay is still drawn to it, especially when his real-world life only continues to feel more and more suffocating. Invited by owl-headed Amos to a celebration that brings various realms together, he returns, but unfortunately, the dog's previous owners—the haughty People Under the Mountain—show up. They want their animal back, and they'll resort to drastic measures if necessary. This is a charming, fantastical spin on the familiar kid/dog story, right down to their tragic separation being quickly followed by a heartwarming reunion. The third-person narration expands the story, though, shifting focus among the boy, the dog, and the boy's family, giving secondary characters nuance and roles beyond merely supporting Clay. There's a lot for contemporary kids to relate to here: Clay's loneliness, his sister's anger at being forced to stay home, his parents' constant worry, and the general unfairness of the entire situation. Holding all that chaotic emotion together and framing it with a well-developed fantasy world is an impressive feat, and Anderson, as usual, does it with aplomb. Final illustrations not seen. KQG COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Clay and his family are suffering the accumulated tensions of a "global sickness" shutdown. Online school, isolation from friends, financial worries, too much togetherness -- Clay needs escape, and he gets it via a charming elf-hound who has wandered up from the fairy Kingdom Under the Mountain. The dog also gives Clay access to a new friend, Amos, an owl-headed boy who inhabits a different parallel world that resembles a Puritan village. Once these worlds start to leak into one another, chaos is loosed upon Clay and his family. The tone is largely cartoonish, as set pieces of hilarious slapstick involve, for example, an out-of-control wool sweater that reverse-evolves into its original sheep. It's a veritable plum pudding of energetic action and witty delights, but a foundation of traditional folklore elements -- standing stones, half-buried sleeping giants, fairy mischief, portals to the underworld, the Wild Hunt, and predatory wyrms -- creates an underlying hint of genuine menace. One of the guests at the big Midsummer's Eve supernatural shindig is Death ("When he calls, we must go. But knowing that the night may be cut short is what makes it so sweet"). Balancing this chill is the devoted relationship between Clay and his dog companion, a theme that stands sturdily in the middle of the mayhem. Black-and-white full-page pencil illustrations contribute to both coziness and eeriness. (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Clay and his family are suffering the accumulated tensions of a "global sickness" shutdown. Online school, isolation from friends, financial worries, too much togetherness -- Clay needs escape, and he gets it via a charming elf-hound who has wandered up from the fairy Kingdom Under the Mountain. The dog also gives Clay access to a new friend, Amos, an owl-headed boy who inhabits a different parallel world that resembles a Puritan village. Once these worlds start to leak into one another, chaos is loosed upon Clay and his family. The tone is largely cartoonish, as set pieces of hilarious slapstick involve, for example, an out-of-control wool sweater that reverse-evolves into its original sheep. It's a veritable plum pudding of energetic action and witty delights, but a foundation of traditional folklore elements -- standing stones, half-buried sleeping giants, fairy mischief, portals to the underworld, the Wild Hunt, and predatory wyrms -- creates an underlying hint of genuine menace. One of the guests at the big Midsummer's Eve supernatural shindig is Death ("When he calls, we must go. But knowing that the night may be cut short is what makes it so sweet"). Balancing this chill is the devoted relationship between Clay and his dog companion, a theme that stands sturdily in the middle of the mayhem. Black-and-white full-page pencil illustrations contribute to both coziness and eeriness. Sarah Ellis(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews "Writing with his characteristic precision, Anderson melds the fantastic with the everyday to often riotous effect. . . It all comes to a thrilling climax on Midsummer's Eve before a bittersweet, perfectly pitched denouement. Wu's lovely, textured pencil drawings add eldritch warmth. . . A hilarious, heartfelt triumph."

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Wandering the mystical forest behind his house on Mount Norumbega offers Clay O'Brian an escape from being stuck at home with his family due to a global virus. As Clay attempts to play Frisbee solo in the woods, he encounters an elegant white elf hound with a bejeweled collar who's been separated from a Royal Hunt. Elphinore, as she is called, is part of an "ancient and dangerous crowd" known as the People Under the Mountain; and when she leads him on a path he's never seen, Clay beholds extraordinary alternate realms "in different folds of space." Alongside genteel Amos, an owl-headed boy, he spends the summer exploring such places and anticipating the festivities of Midsummer's Eve. Meanwhile, older sister DiRossi seethes in her room at the unfairness of spending her 14-year-old summer alone, and, deciding to find out what her brother is up to, has adventures of her own, including an encounter with a similarly misanthropic giant. Revisiting the setting of his Norumbegan Quartet and layering the everyday with intriguing lands and creatures, Anderson expertly balances the anguish of pandemic-era isolation with the transporting joys of new friendships. Stylized b&w pencil art from Wu punctuate this wryly told fantasy. Human characters default to white. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: David McCormick Literary. Illustrator's agent: Anne Moore Armstrong, Bright Agency. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5--Anderson brings to life the magical world found in Mount Norumbega, in this stand-alone novel. Clay O'Brian is tired of the virus that has forced him to stay home away from friends and enjoys the time he spends in the wilderness exploring. When elf-dog Elphinore is locked out from her home beneath the mountain, she comes across Clay in the woods and their adventures together begin. Elphinore is the reason Clay befriends an owl-headed boy named Amos, while Clay's older sister DiRossi forms an unlikely friendship with a sad, blue giant named Vud. At the Midsummer Night Festival, when the magical worlds intertwine, the newfound friends will discover whether their bond can withstand strict, fantastical rules. Wu's illustrations throughout are black-and-white pencil, which adds to the otherworldly quality of the plot. While the story has magical lands and creatures, the backdrop of the COVID-19 shutdown grounds the action in something relatable. The O'Brian family's stress about becoming ill, paying bills, and finding work allows room to explore the trauma of the pandemic. At times, the world-building is underdeveloped, but the engrossing presentation of the different worlds will draw readers in. Other than Anderson's companion series, "Norumbegan Quartet," comparable titles include Tony DiTerlizzi and Holly Black's "Spiderwick Chronicles" and The Demon Sword Asperides by Sarah Jean Horwitz. VERDICT A stellar novel with read-aloud potential, this whimsically imaginative adventure will thrill those who want magic mixed with reality.--Hilary Tufo Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Xpress "Anderson brings to life the magical world found in Mount Norumbega in this stand-alone novel. Clay O'Brian is tired of the virus that has forced him to stay home away from friends, and enjoys the time he spends in the wilderness exploring. When elf-dog Elphinore is locked out from her home beneath the mountain, she comes across Clay in the woods and their adventures together begin... The O'Brian family's stress about becoming ill, paying bills, and finding work allows room to explore the trauma of the pandemic... A stellar novel with read-aloud potential, this whimsically imaginative adventure will thrill those who want magic mixed with reality."

#2069161 First Rule of Punk (Prebound)

written by Celia C. Perez

There are no shortcuts to surviving your first day at a new school--you can't fix it with duct tape like you would your Chuck Taylors. On Day One, twelve-year-old Malu inadvertently upsets Posada Middle's queen bee, violates the school's dress code with her punk rock look, and disappoints her college-professor mom in the process.

978-1-5364-4422-3 Puffin Books ©2018 5 x 7-3/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 7.0 RC Lvl 4.2 Lexile 670

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Sure, Malu is half-Mexican and half-white, but with her "sloppy" Spanish, aversion to cilantro, and love of American punk culture, she often doesn't feel very Mexican--that is, until her life in Baltimore is uprooted and quickly replanted in the rich cultural soil of Chicago's Pilsen neighborhood. Here everything is infused with a Mexican-American twist: the local coffee shop, the (still disgusting) middle-school lunchroom selections, and even her beloved punk rock. When Malu decides to enter an impromptu band of punk misfits into the school talent show and they're turned down, she takes matters into her own hands remembering the first rule of punk: be yourself. A familiar story of preteen angst and rebellion is made memorable through Malu's distinct voice and narration as she attempts to make sense of middle-school drama, unfair family decisions, and the implications of being both biracial and bicultural. Included in the text are short zine chapters that creatively pull together Malu's musings about events like being called a coconut--"brown on the outside, white on the inside"--and the realization that punk music knows no one language. Perez draws heavily on the intersections of community that are integral to Mexican-American culture, seamlessly weaving characters into multiple settings, giving depth to their personhood and emphasizing the close-knit and inclusive feel of her neighborhood. It is this element that makes Malu's obvious growth by the end of the book so rewarding, as everyone comes together to rock out. It's not an easy task, but in the words of Malu, "Find your people. Just remember that your people aren't always who you'd expect." MK

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide YBooks by Horn Book reviewers are not reviewed; we provide notice of publication and descriptive comment.] The first rule of punk is to be yourself, but it's hard for Malz, the bicultural daughter of divorced parents. Her white dad doesn't understand her internal struggles with her Mexican American identity, and her mom would rather Malz were more "segorita" than punk. Starting a band becomes a chance to explore her heritage as well as her musical interests. Eight-page "zines" featuring Malz's collages punctuate the text. (Copyright 2018 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine [Books by Horn Book reviewers are not reviewed; we provide notice of publication and descriptive comment.] The first rule of punk is to be yourself, but it's hard for Malu, the bicultural daughter of divorced parents, to know exactly what that means. Her white dad doesn't understand her internal struggles with her Mexican American identity, and her mom would rather Malu were more seniorita than punk. Starting a band becomes a chance to explore her heritage as well as her musical interests. Eight-page zines featuring Malu's collages punctuate the text.(Copyright 2017 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Malu wants to be totally punk at her new middle school, but her Mexican-American mother would prefer she learn to be a proper seniorita. Twelve-year-old Maria Luisa O'Neill-Morales, aka Malu, loves punk-rock music, hanging out at her father's indie record store, and making zines. She doesn't love moving from her home in Gainesville, Florida, to Chicago for her professor mother's two-year appointment at a university. Although she loves both of her amicably divorced parents, Malu--who favors Chuck Taylors and music T's--feels closer to her laid-back, artsy white father than her supportive but critical academic mother, whom she calls "SuperMexican." At Malu's new majority-Latino school, she quickly makes an enemy of beautiful Selena, who calls her a "coconut" (brown on the outside, white on the inside) and warns her about falling in with the class "weirdos." Malu does befriend the school misfits (one activist white girl and two fellow "coconuts") and enlists them to form a band to play a punk song at the Fall Fiesta. Middle-grade readers will appreciate the examples of Malu's zines and artwork, which delightfully convey her journey of self-discovery. The author surrounds the feisty protagonist with a trio of older women (including her mom, her best friend Joe's tattooed, punk-loving mother, and his humorous Abuela) who help her embrace being Mexican and punk. A charming debut about a thoughtful, creative preteen connecting to both halves of her identity. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2017) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After Maria Luisa O'Neill-Morales--Malu for short--and her divorced mother move from Florida to Chicago, the 12-year-old struggles with having her music-loving father so far away and with living up to a mother she has nicknamed SuperMexican. "Admit it, Mom," Malu says during one of their squabbles. "I'm just your weird, unladylike, sloppy-Spanish-speaking, half-Mexican kid." Malu takes solace in punk music and in creating handmade zines, which appear throughout; she also begins to make friends, forming a band--the Co-Co's--that blends punk and Mexican music. (It also reclaims the slur "coconut," which one of Malu's classmates calls her.) Perez's debut is as exuberant as its heroine, who discovers that there's real overlap between her Mexican heritage and the punk ethos she so admires. The relationships between children and parents are handled especially well: Malu chafes at her mother's traditionalism while idolizing her friend Joe's mother, a cafe owner who represents a merging of Mexican and punk cultures in a way that impresses Malu. A rowdy reminder that people are at their best when they aren't forced into neat, tidy boxes. Ages 9-12. Agent: Stefanie Von Borstel, Full Circle Literary. (Aug.) Copyright 2017 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-A fun romp through the awkward years of middle school that examines themes of identity and culture. When Malu has to move away from her dad and everything she knows, she takes her love of punk music with her. Following the rules of punk, she embarks on a new school journey, full of misadventures and hilarious life lessons. Malu is happy not to fit in with the crowd yet cannot bring herself to tell her mom that her passion for punk is not a rebellious phase-it's who she is. When classmates label Malu a coconut (brown on the outside and white on the inside), she is determined to prove to her school and herself that she is proud of her Mexican roots. With tenderness and humor, PTrez explores the joys and challenges of being biracial. Readers will connect with Malu, a strong protagonist who leaps off the page and whose zine-inspired artistry boldly illustrates how she deals with life. VERDICT Those who enjoy vivacious, plucky heroines, such as the protagonists of Brenda Woods's The Blossoming Universe of Violet Diamond, Olugbemisola Rhuday-Perkovich and Audrey Vernick's Two Naomis, and Rebecca Stead's Goodbye Stranger, will eagerly embrace Malu.-Jessica Bratt, Grand Rapids Public Library, MI Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2069909 Tumble and Blue (Prebound)

written by Cassie Beasley

In order for Tumble Wilson and Blue Montgomery to fix their ancestors' mistakes and banish the bad luck that has followed them around for all of their lives, they must face Munch, the mysterious golden alligator who cast the curse centuries ago.

978-1-5364-4464-3 Puffin Books ©2018 5 x 7-3/4 400 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 4.2 Lexile 680

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

#2348984 Three Tasks for a Dragon (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Eoin Colfer

Studios Prince Lir is next in line to become the Wolfhound King, but he can't ride a horse, lift a sword, or summon the fabled wolfhounds. So his stepmother decrees that her own son will inherit the crown instead, sending Lir away on a seemingly impossible-and assuredly fatal-quest: to rescue the maiden Cethlenn from the once-fearsome dragon Lasvarg. Rather than wage battle, Lir insists that Lasvarg, now decidedly past his prime, honor tradition by setting him three tasks to perform-starting with tackling the mold encrusting the dragon's cave (and his feet!).

978-1-5362-2999-8 Candlewick Press ©2023 7-1/2 x 9 112 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist "A fabulous fairy tale with a standout style that feels pleasingly traditional and yet terrifically fresh, and the well-drawn characters often subvert classic genre expectations. The elegant text is sonorous and suspenseful... every page is splendidly illustrated, with the text set on top of soft, full-bleed artwork and the word blocks contoured to the handsome pencil drawings that surround. A wonderfully classic fairy tale that still surprises and delights."

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Prince Lir is perfectly fine with his stepbrother assuming the crown instead of him, but he is less content with the idea that exile or death are his only options instead of ruling. When Lir is offered a chance at survival by completing a mission to save a maiden from a dragon, he accepts despite the odds being wildly against him (and that's even before it's clear that Lir's stepbrother is actively working to sabotage him). Neither the dragon nor the maiden is what Lir expects, and both become dear friends to Lir, even after a dark secret that the dragon holds threatens their bond. Individually, none of them are a match for the murderous stepbrother, who will use whatever means are necessary to secure the crown, but together they are a formidable trio with complementary strengths. Vibrant, glowing artwork is a highlight, with spot drawings throughout and intricate linework that invites the reader to pause and explore the details of each scene. The trim page count and stunning illustrations make this an appealing offer to reluctant readers, while fantasy and fairy tale buffs will gravitate to this book on their own, based on little more than the promising title that hints at (and ably delivers) a memorable quest. AS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A peaceful prince, an aging dragon, and a mysterious maiden forge a unique alliance. Prince Lir does not possess the power to summon the wolfhounds and is thus unworthy to govern his kingdom. So begins a story of gifts discovered in struggle and friendship forged in adversity. Lir's stepbrother, Delbayne, who has sinister motives, sends him to fight a dragon, anticipating his demise. Lir is an unlikely questing knight, a bookish young man interested in natural sciences and happy to serve his kingdom humbly in the royal library. Arriving at the dragon's secluded island, he finds a lethargic beast incapable of flying or breathing fire and drunk on cherry wine made from berries stomped by Cethlenn, a servant girl with a hazy past in the palace kitchens. Adhering to tradition, Lir proposes to perform three tasks to free Cethlenn. Instead of challenging the dragon, Lir endeavors, rather radically, to restore him to health using his scientific skill. Simultaneously, the omniscient narrator slowly unravels Delbayne's plans for violent attack, which build to an epic, cinematically dramatic battle whose outcome will depend upon the island trio's nascent trust in one another. Colfer draws out details of kingdom-building in lyrical language while interweaving his characters' relatable idiosyncrasies, motives, and griefs. Lynch's sandy orange and misty blue hued watercolor illustrations, replete with detailed dragon profiles and majestic wolfhounds, seamlessly frame the story and bring Colfer's mostly white-presenting characters fully to life. An elegant and inspired fairy tale that feels both familiar and freshly penned. (Fantasy. 8-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A quest that suggests certain death unfolds quite differently in this reason-centered fantasy novella by previous collaborators Colfer and Lynch (The Dog Who Lost His Bark). Calm, analytical Prince Lir is startled when his stepmother, Queen Nimh, denies him the throne because he's failed to summon the wolfhounds; after all, no monarch has completed the wolfhound-summoning ceremony for 500 years. Instead, the queen decrees that her biological son, Prince Delbayne, should become king. Secretly wanting Lir dead, Delbayne sends the prince into the world. But since a questor knight, like Lir's late father, is always granted the kingdom's shelter, Lir may return if he rescues a subject's daughter from the great dragon Lasvarg. "The trick to it... is to work with what is around you," Lir's father, Good King Rufus, used to tell him; and that's just what he does, bringing his scientific mind and medical intuition to the dragon's lair, where he and the creature negotiate the completion of three tasks: cure the dragon's mold-plagued ailments, mend his broken wing, and restore his fire-breathing powers. Colfer combines thrilling moments and hints of romance, while Lynch provides misty fantasy landscapes and portraits of the story's heroes and villains in expressive art. Most characters present as white. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Young Prince Lir must choose between banishment and a dangerous quest in the breathtaking middle-grade adventure Three Tasks for a Dragon by Eoin Colfer (Artemis Fowl series; Illegal), illustrated by P.J. Lynch (The Haunted Lake).

#2258670 Vacancy (Prebound)

written by K. R. Alexander

The latest chilling frightfest from horror master K. R. Alexander. Vacancy centering around a spooky hotel where guests do NOT check out the way they check in.

978-1-5364-7106-9 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 590

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Does anyone who volunteers to spend a night in a derelict haunted hotel on a dare deserve what they get? "The hotel is hungry. And we aren't leaving here until it's fed." In what reads like a determined effort to check off every trope of the genre, Alexander sends new arrival Jasmine, along with two friends and several dozen other classmates, to the long-abandoned Carlisle Hotel for the annual seventh grade Dare—touching off a night of terror presided over by the leering, autocratic Grand Dame and complete with sudden gusts and blackouts, spectral visions, evil reflections in mirrors, skeletons, a giant spider, gravity reversals, tides of oily black sludge sucking screaming middle schoolers down the drain, and so much more. (No gore, though, aside from a few perfunctory drops of blood from one small scratch.) The author saves a twist for the end, and as inducement to read alone or aloud in the dark by flashlight, both his language and the typography crank up the melodrama: "He walks toward us, past the mirror, and I see it— / a pale white face in the reflection, / a gaunt, skeletal grimace, / with sharpened teeth / and hollow black eyes, staring at him / with its mouth / wide / open / in a scream...." Jasmine presents White; her closest friends are Rohan, whose name cues him as South Asian, and Mira, who has dark skin. Light on gore and corpses; otherwise a full-bore, uncomplicated shriekfest. (Horror. 10-13)

#2240638 Amelia Six (Prebound)

written by Kristin L. Gray

Amelia Earhart's famous aviator goggles go missing and eleven-year-old Millie has to find them before the night is over.

978-1-5364-6970-7 Simon & Schuster ©2021 5 x 7-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 570

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This lighthearted mystery using a classic whodunit setup shines light on women in aviation. When six science-minded girls are invited to a slumber party and scavenger hunt at Amelia Earhart's Birthplace Museum, the disappearance of the icon's flight goggles transforms them into detectives as a raging winter storm shuts down all travel and the phone lines. Gray (Vilonia Beebe Takes Charge) effectively portrays the transformation of shy 11-year-old narrator Amelia ("Millie"), a Rubik's Cube whiz and collector of vintage Nancy Drew novels, who befriends the other girls and assumes a leadership role. Alongside details about Earhart, the narrative features female flight pioneers such as African-American and Native American pilot Bessie Colman, and deaf pilot Nelle Zabel Willhite, who "could sense engine trouble by a change in vibrations." Millie takes the lead in this romp; the supporting five girls can feel indistinct, leaving adult characters more roundly sketched. A thread about Millie's absent pilot mom proves poignant, and a thorough reading list and author's note offer resources for readers eager to discover more. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Caryn Wiseman, Andrea Brown Literary. (June)

#2199420 Follow Me (Prebound)

written by K. R. Alexander

It's strange enough for Tamal to be the new kid in town. But it's even stranger to be living in the house that everyone wants to avoid, a house with a very deadly history. Nobody wants to talk about what happened . . . nobody except the terrifying girl Tamal keeps encountering throughout the house. Tamal's parents can't see her, but he's sure she's there -- and wants something from him.

978-1-5364-6677-5 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2020 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 620

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.95

#2213517 Black Brother, Black Brother (Prebound)

written by Jewell Parker Rhodes

When an incident with "King" Alan leads to Donte's arrest and suspension, he knows the only way to get even is to beat the king of the school at his own game: fencing.

With the help of a former Olympic fencer, Donte embarks on a journey to carve out a spot on Middlefield Prep's fencing team and maybe learn something about himself along the way.

978-1-5364-6741-3 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2021 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Starred Review A profound treatise about institutional racism for the middle-grade set, Rhodes' (Ghost Boys, 2018) latest elevates beyond simple moralizing into a penetrating look into the soul of a young person struggling with how to become a Black man of character in a world that expects him to be less. Dropping the reader directly into a tony prep-school office where Donte anxiously awaits judgement for an offense he did not commit, Rhodes dials readers immediately into the boy's acute dread as he cycles through feelings of shame, anger, and confusion, ultimately leading to a nonconfrontation that causes him to be arrested. As we learn more about Donte and his biracial family, including his lighter-skinned brother, we come to root for him and his pursuit of redemption as he seeks to prove his self-worth to his bullies and his school community through fencing. His coach, one of the first Black Olympic fencers, helps him refine his talent and his ability to deal with the inequities he experiences on a regular basis. An entertaining story and happy ending does not take away from this powerful examination of how the educational and justice systems punitively treat children of color?and how this bias impacts their self-perception and esteem. A powerful work and a must-have for children's collections.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Donte's older brother, Trey, fits in well at elite Middlefield Prep school; he's athletically talented and as light skinned as Donte and Trey's white father. Donte, on the other hand, has never gone the athletic route, and his dark skin, inherited from their mother, has made him a target for the fencing team bullies, who think it's hilarious that the two boys could be brothers. The school is oblivious to-possibly complicit in-the bullying, and when the tacit "blame the victim" policy lands Donte in a juvenile court hearing, he decides to fight back the only way he can truly hurt his abhorrent classmate, Alan-defeat him in fencing. First he has to learn to fence, though, and for that he has to convince a former Black fencing champ, now working at the rec center, to teach him. This is a classic sports story, complete with a washed-out coach with a skeleton in his closet, a nastier-than-sin villain, a romantic interest, and a supportive mixed-race family that must daily find its way through the maze of microaggressions. As usual in classic sports stories, Donte learns some lessons he didn't count on, including how his own economic privilege appears to other kids of color, and how his own brother struggles to navigate having his back while letting him fight his own battles. Readers who mourn the completion of Jason Reynolds' Track series will be happy to find Rhodes' take on revenge and redemption. EB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Rhodes delivers another middle-grade novel that takes on complex, historical topics while emphasizing young people's agency and healing. This outing starts with Donte Ellison wishing for invisibility, as compared to being a hypervisible "nighttime dark" s tudent at upper-crust, overwhelmingly white Middlefield Prep. Maybe if he were invisible, he wouldn't constantly be in trouble for doing nothing--unlike his older and much-lighter-skinned brother, Trey, who walks the hallways with cool. A tragic, unjust incident occurs early on when the headmaster sends for police officers to handcuff, arrest, and jail Donte after an incidental brush with a teacher. Donte's mother (she is black and their father white) challenges the school on its racism, yet within the social world of the schoolyard, the injustice is further compounded by bullies' smirks. Donte responds by devising a plan to make the school see him, in all his dignity, respect, and potential. He leaves the upper-class Boston suburb where he resides and heads to the inner-city Boys and Girl Club, where he finds a former star fencer who now serves his home community. Through this mentorship and other new relationships, Donte discovers more about the gifts of his identity and the pride of cultural heritage. These lessons in self-discovery offer a deeply critical insight for young readers. Placing biracial boyhood and the struggles of colorism at its center, the novel challenges readers to pursue their own self-definition. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this novel, Rhodes brings middle graders a story of two biracial brothers, Donte and Trey, navigating racism, colorism, and bullying. Older brother Trey, the lighter-skinned sibling of the boys' black ("Mom thinks Nigerian and Congolese") mother and white (Scotch-Irish and Norwegian) father, is considered the "white brother." Donte, the "black brother," feels like he's "swimming in whiteness" at Middlefield Prep School, where he is regularly bullied because of his skin tone. When Alan, who constantly targets Donte, throws a pencil and Donte is blamed for it; then arrested when he expresses frustration; Donte's ready to fight back, on Alan's home turf: the fencing mat. Donte finds an African-American former Olympian to coach him, and trains to defeat Alan and earn his respect, all while he deals with his own legal troubles and the civil rights case his mother files. This novel offers a solid story, with relatable, three-dimensional characters considering identity, that will teach readers about colorism's effects. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Michael Bourret, Dystel & Goderich. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Donte is having a difficult time adjusting to life at Middlefield Prep. Going to public school in New York City to now being one of the only black boys at a prep school in Newton, MA, is a dramatic shift. What's worse, all the kids at school keep bullying him and singling him out as different, while his lighter-skinned brother, Trey, passes with ease. After one too many incidents with Alan, the captain of the school fencing team, Donte decides that he has to beat him at his own game. This quest sets Donte and Trey off on a mission to find Mr. Jones, a black former Olympic fencer and Boston Boys and Girls Club employee, who agrees to teach them how to fence. Along the way, Donte makes friends, becomes an excellent fencer, and finds his place in the Boston area. In the first part of the book, Donte's school calls the police after he throws his backpack to the ground, and he is forced to go to juvenile court. Rhodes points out his privilege in being well off, and how the court is willing to treat him differently after seeing his white father and white-passing brother. Donte's story is a good primer for younger readers on microaggressions. Though the first few chapters of the book focus heavily on Donte's mistreatment at school, the story quickly moves into a heavy focus on his fencing journey. The depiction of Donte's confidence growing with each lesson and as he makes friends at the Boys and Girls Club is interesting and exciting. Readers will want to learn more about the sport. VERDICT Give to readers who love Jason Reynolds's "Track" series or Jewell Parker Rhodes's other offerings for young readers.—Kelsey Socha, Ventress Memorial Library, Marshfield, MA

#2315172 Beatryce Prophecy (Prebound)

written by Kate DiCamillo

In a time of war, a mysterious child appears at the monastery of the Order of the Chronicles of Sorrowing. Gentle Brother Edik finds the girl, Beatryce, curled in a stall, wracked with fever, coated in dirt and blood, and holding fast to the ear of Answelica the goat. As the monk nurses Beatryce to health, he uncovers her dangerous secret, one that imperils them all—for the king of the land seeks just such a girl, and Brother Edik, who penned the prophecy himself, knows why.

978-1-5364-7788-7 Candlewick Press ©2023 6 x 8-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 580

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$28.95

Reviews by: Book Page "In the beautifully spare prose that has become one of her hallmarks, DiCamillo poses big questions, such as "What does it mean to be brave?" and invites readers to discover their own answers. . . . The Beatryce Prophecy is certain to be cherished."

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Father Edik's usual trepidation over approaching Answelica the goat's enclosure skyrockets upon seeing a sleeping girl there, clutching the foul-tempered creature's ear. This turns out to be Beatryce, a girl with no memory aside from her name, a girl who can read and write despite laws prohibiting such a thing, a girl about whom Father Edik believes he may have written in his order's prophetic Chronicles of Sorrowing: "There will one day come a girl child who will unseat a king and bring about a great change." It isn't long before word reaches the monastery that the king is also looking for Beatryce on account of the prophecy, so Father Edik disguises her as a monk and sends her off with Answelica, her fierce and loyal protector, and a bright boy from town named Jack Dory, who has an interesting story of his own. Somehow, DiCamillo manages to fit a medieval epic into just over 250 pages--and that includes many glorious black-and-white illustrations by Blackall that one can easily envision stitched upon a tapestry. DiCamillo fills her narrative with humor and love, never getting in the way of her characters (or Answelica's boney head) as they work through difficult choices and display many forms of bravery. It's a gently feminist tale where stories carry the same power as magic and are, perhaps, one and the same.HIGH-DEMAND BACKSTORY: Rumor has it that this might be popular. And might win all the awards. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Brother Edik spends his days illuminating The Chronicles of Sorrowing, the manuscript his Order is charged with maintaining. He's not at all prepared to deal with the ragged little girl he finds curled up in the barn with Answelica, the most ornery of goats, who is clearly protective of the child. Initially uncommunicative, Beatryce (the name she will reclaim) is clearly repressing some traumatic memories, so Brother Edik convinces his superior to let the Order shelter the girl, disguising her as a young monk. This is an act of bravery as well as kindness, since the girl can read and write (which is unheard of! dangerously unnatural!), and she seems to Brother Edik to be connected to a prophecy in the Chronicle that foretells a girl who will unseat a king. There is, in fact, a king that needs unseating, having been elevated to the throne through the machinations of an evil counselor; counselor and king inevitably become aware of Beatryce's survival, and they relentlessly hunt her. DiCamillo pitches her original tale to an audience sufficiently steeped in folklore to be appreciative of her elegant recrafting of time-honored tropes and attuned to her wryly humorous formality of prose; Blackall's monochrome drawings nudge readers to wistfully recall a time when their favorite fairy tales came with illustrations. The deeply satisfying conclusion finds villains properly vanquished, the prophecy fulfilled with a clever spin, and happily-ever-afters grounded on friendships and strong ethics all round. EB COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: ForeWord Magazine Melding the language of prophecies with that of fairy tales and whispered dreams, Newbery Medal winner Kate DiCamillo's latest novel for young readers is both feminist and sweet. The world knew Beatryce was coming before she arrived--in part, because a scribe predicted it to a tenuously positioned king; in part, because injustice cannot last forever. Still, her early years were bright and peaceful. Under careful tutelage, she learned to dream and story-weave--as well as to read and write, despite kingdom-wide edicts that girls and commoners do neither. Beatryce's calm was interrupted when the king tired of waiting for her prophesied arrival, and sent vicious soldiers searching for her instead. Her memories of the ultimate clash are hazy; all she knows is that she woke up not at home, but feverish in a monastery stable. She was without her family, but was protected by Answelica, a fearsome goat who loves her dearly. She is now forced to hide her talents, and her femininity, from those who wish her ill. Jack Dory, a gentle boy with his own grudge against the king, intrudes on Beatryce's period of hiding, forcing her on the road and toward hard revelations. Together, they encounter a runaway king who feeds on honeycomb and hosts bees in his beard; later, they reunite with an illuminator of manuscripts. Finally, this unimposing-looking crew heads to the castle, armed only with literacy, mermaid stories, and righteousness, but prepared to confront injustice together. The Beatryce Prophecy is a gentle and wondrous tale that celebrates knowledge, kindness, and the boundless power of the imagination; its villains, despite their military might, are fast dispatched because they value no such qualities. Delicate illustrations and rich fairy tales run throughout the book, which stirs hope and joy at every turn. COPYRIGHT(2021) Foreword Magazine, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book "The pairing of two-time Newbery Medalist DiCamillo and two-time Caldecott Medalist Blackall is a magical alchemy. Blackall's black-and-white pencil drawings and ornamented initials convey a medieval setting, while DiCamillo's elegant, honed prose weaves a beautiful tapestry of true friends, a feisty goat, and a road to a castle where destiny will unfold."

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine opens, Brother Edik finds a sick girl in the barn of the Order of the Chronicles of Sorrowing, curled up with the "demon goat" Answelica. The child recovers from her fever but has lost her memory, remembering only her name, Beatryce. Brother Edik and the other monks hide Beatryce and her talents as well: the ability to read and write, a "beautiful and agile mind," and a "dangerous will." Beatryce, it is revealed, is the girl named in a prophecy, destined to "unseat a king and bring about a great change." As Brother Edik tells her, "It is dangerous for you to be who you are...And so you must pretend to be someone you are not." The king and his counselor are on her trail, so she agrees to disguise herself, to have her hair shorn and wear a monk's robe. Soon, however, she must enter the world and, with Brother Edik, Answelica, and the orphan boy Jack Dory, begins a journey to take charge of her own destiny. The king's machinations are effectively delineated in bold font in brief sections to remind readers that evil is afoot. The pairing of two-time Newbery Medalist DiCamillo (The Tale of Despereaux, rev. 9/03; Flora & Ulysses, rev. 9/13) and two-time Caldecott Medalist Blackall (Finding Winnie, rev. 9/15; Hello Lighthouse, rev. 3/18) is a magical alchemy. Blackall's black-and-white pencil drawings and ornamented initials convey a medieval setting, while DiCamillo's elegant, honed prose weaves a beautiful tapestry of true friends, a feisty goat, and a road to a castle where destiny will unfold. Dean Schneider(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews DiCamillo returns to fairy-tale mode with the story of a girl destined to unseat a king. One by one the players take the stage: Answelica, a fearsome goat whose teeth mirror her soul--"large, sharp, and uncompromising"; hapless Brother Edik, who sees beauty everywhere; Beatryce, a bedraggled child who arrives at the monastery knowing only her first name and who shocks the monks by being able to write; Jack Dory, an orphan with a gift for mimicry; and finally Cannoc, an old man who has given up everything except laughter. (There are bad people also, of course, because this story takes place during a time of war, but none of them are given proper names.) Cast out from the monastery and endangered by villains, they take refuge in the dark woods where Beatryce begins to remember more than her name and attempts to answer the question, "what world is this I now inhabit, and how shall I live in it?" The story is told in language as clear and beautiful as an illuminated manuscript, with characters who spring instantly to life. The fairy-tale conventions give it a sense of timelessness and omnipresence without once becoming twee or unwieldy. Blackall's luminous black-and-white illustrations and medieval-style spot art add to this feeling and are wonderful at conveying emotion through posture, pose, and delicate linework. Characters are described and drawn as White. A book with an angelic soul: large, sharp, and uncompromising. (Fairy tale. 8-14) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Set "during a time of war" when "terrible things happen everywhere," Newbery Medalist DiCamillo's engrossing medieval fable verges on darkness while examining what changes a world. When gentle Brother Edik finds young Beatryce in the monastery barn, she is covered in blood and dirt, plagued by fever, and holding the ear of the ferocious goat Answelica; who has until now terrorized the Order of the Chronicles of Sorrowing with her bites and butts. Upon emerging from her sickness, Beatryce recalls only her name and her ability to read and write, the latter a dangerous secret in a land where only a few people, solely men, are permitted those skills. Fearful of who might be searching for such a child; and of her possible connection to the prophecy of "a girl child who will unseat a king"; the monastery's brethren rid themselves of girl and goat, sending Beatryce away with protector Answelica. In the often-harrowing world, Beatryce encounters idiosyncratic individuals she can trust, each with a painful history that's rendered humanely in DiCamillo's deliberate third-person telling (characters default to white). Tenderly illuminated by Caldecott Medalist Blackall's atmospheric, fine-lined b&w art, this compassionate tale rejoices in "the wonder of being known," the protective powers of understanding one's identity, and the strength found in the hard head of a beloved goat. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Holly McGhee, Pippin Properties. Illustrator's agent: Marietta Zacker, Gallt & Zacker.(Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—The prophecy speaks of a girl who will unseat a king and change the world. It doesn't exactly mention a goat, but true prophecy will find a way to be fulfilled...especially if the hard-headed, and hard-butting, Answelica has anything to do with it. Brother Edik, a monk who illuminates manuscripts and pronounces the occasional prophecy (including the one about Beatryce), is startled to find a very sick girl curled up in the straw next to the monastery's irascible goat. He doesn't realize that the king is looking to capture this very girl; he takes her in and nurses her back to health. The goat refuses to leave Beatryce's side as she is eventually forced to leave the monastery and earn her way by writing (in a world where girls are not allowed to read and write), and ultimately by befriending others who help demonstrate that Beatryce is, in fact, the girl foretold to change everything. Hand to fans of Adam Gidwitz's The Inquisitor's Tale (although there are no farting dragons here). VERDICT DiCamillo's fantasy has no magic, but is a gentle tale of the power of love and the determination to do the right thing, even when that thing comes at great personal cost. Recommended for tweens in all library settings, both independent and read-alouds.—Elizabeth Friend, Wester M.S., TX

#2317372 Troubled Girls of Dragomir Academy (Prebound)

written by Anne Ursu

If no one notices Marya Lupu, is likely because of her brother, Luka. And that's because of what everyone knows: that Luka is destined to become a sorcerer. The Lupus might be from a small village far from the capital city of Illyria, but that doesn't matter. Every young boy born in in the kingdom holds the potential for the rare ability to wield magic, to protect the country from the terrifying force known only as the Dread.

978-1-5364-7798-6 Walden Pond Press ©2022 5 x 7-1/2 448 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 12.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$20.95

Reviews by: Booklist In Illyria, sorcerers (always men) wield magic to keep people safe and thus hold powerful positions within the land. Therefore, it's a matter of life-changing importance when Marya's brother is pegged as having magic potential. Marya's only job during his magic assessment is to stay out of sight—a task at which she fails spectacularly. The disastrous visit results in Marya's getting sent to Dragomir Academy. With a motto of "Character above All," Dragomir houses girls from all walks of life in supposed need of discipline. Marya struggles to accept her new life there but embraces the opportunity to make friends and receive an education. A mystery of a missing girl is threaded through the school story line, which Marya investigates only to unearth a massive revelation about the school's true purpose. Ursu is heavy-handed in her feminist fantasy's critique of gender inequality, and that's not necessarily a bad thing. Readers present for the tale's magical trappings and interwoven intrigue won't be disappointed, and they'll welcome Marya's determination to assert herself as powerful in her own right.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Though the patriarchal Kingdom of Illyria is known for its tapestries, the elegant visuals center men's experiences to the exclusion of women's: "Behind every great tapestry was a woman who wove it, just as behind every great sorcerer was a wife to tend to his domestic affairs." Likewise, pale-skinned Marya Lupu, 12, is expected to tend to her family's household, while her brother, 13-year-old Luka, receives the privilege and tutelage apparently befitting a prospective sorcerer. With the mysterious Dread increasingly devouring entire towns, the Council for the Magical protection of Illyria scours the countryside for magical talent that can help keep the Dread at bay; and should Luka become sorcerer, the change would confer status on the entire family. But after an incident occurs during Luka's test, Marya is summoned to Dragomir Academy, a faraway school that prepares "troubled" young women for a model future on sorcerers' estates while requiring them to forsake their pasts. Via a wondrously curious protagonist who has a keen interest in the truth, Ursu (The Lost Girl) weaves a layered tapestry; filled with close-knit relationships and a well-explained, intriguing world; that questions authority, misogyny, and whom a story serves. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

#2300692 Possess Me (Prebound)

written by K. R. Alexander

The story of spirit that comes back to life... by taking your body. You've been warned -- if you summon a spirit, it may want to go back to being human... by living inside

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

you. Another chilling tale from K.R. Alexander.
 978-1-5364-7643-9 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 192 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 580

#2296944 Speak for Me (Prebound)
written by K. R. Alexander

Naomi is petrified of the talent show her school is putting on. She can't be out there alone in front of all those people... not without serious stage fright. How will she manage? The answer arrives in a mysterious box -- a ventriloquist's dummy that transforms Naomi from a shy girl into a natural performer. It all goes well... until Naomi starts to want the stage for herself. When the dummy strikes back it raises the question -- who's controlling who?
 978-1-5364-7615-6 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 224 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 620

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.95

#2309645 When Winter Robeson Came (Prebound)
written by Brenda Woods

When Eden's cousin Winter comes for a visit, it turns out he's not just there to sightsee. He wants to figure out what happened to his dad, who disappeared ten years earlier from the Watts area of L.A. So the cousins set out to investigate together, and what they discover brings them joy--and heartache.
 978-1-5364-7690-3 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2023 5 x 7-3/4 240 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 In August 1965, 14-year-old Winter Robeson travels from Mississippi to visit his relatives in Los Angeles. Narrated in verse through the voice of Eden Louise, his 12-year-old cousin, the novel ensures readers are privy to Winter's real reason for visiting--he's on a mission to find out what happened to his father, who disappeared from L.A. 10 years before. The two of them sleuth together through nearby locales, discovering more than they bargained for, some of it good and some disturbing. During the visit, sparks explode between police and area residents, and Watts erupts into six days of violence. Woods has framed this story lyrically, using musical movements and terminology to move the exposition along believably through Eden, who hopes to be a songstress. Readers will find themselves immersed in the time period with naturally included details, such as musicians, authors, and places. This slim yet affecting offering presents an important moment in U.S. history that sadly mirrors current events. Middle-graders will be entertained and educated, as well as inspired to action. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books It's summer of 1965 when thirteen-year-old Winter travels from Mississippi to visit his twelve-year-old cousin Eden in California, but he isn't in town for a typical sightseeing vacation--he's on a mission to find his father, who has been presumed dead for ten years. Eden wants to help how she can, but as she guides Winter through her neighborhood, she must also come to terms with the fact that California is hardly as welcoming to Black people as her family thought when they moved there years ago; as racial tensions mount and then explode into the Watts riots, the reality of continued bigotry is laid bare. Author Brenda Woods offers this heartfelt piece of historical fiction as she recalls witnessing the Watts Rebellion in 1965. Eden is an aspiring songwriter, and the book cleverly uses music terminology to convey Eden's and Winter's shifting emotions during the six days of unrest and to mark the pacing of the plot. The free verse makes some of the more complex themes accessible, and this could easily spark a thoughtful discussion on how a history of Jim Crow laws, police brutality, and housing inequality plays into current social unrest. QB COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Woods (The Unsung Hero of Birdsong, USA) explores the Watts riots of August 1965 through the experience of two Black cousins in a rhythmic historical novel in verse. In Los Angeles, 12-year-old narrator Eden Louise Coal aspires to become a songwriter. With her 13-year-old cousin Winter Robeson visiting, Eden anticipates two weeks of fun, but his arrival makes her long for the music of Mississippi, "the country roads and folks" she grew up with until the family's move to California two years prior. Winter, who has only experienced life under racial segregation, relishes "being able to sit where you please" on the bus and enjoys time with his hosts while planning to search the Watts neighborhood for his "disappeared daddy," who vanished a decade prior after promising to send for his family. But after Eden's mother receives a phone call that the residents of Watts are fed up with police brutality and harassment, everything goes up in smoke. Interwoven with plentiful music references ("Winter and I became a duo; our ballad, a duet") and utilizing historically accurate language, Woods's harmonious play-by-play narrative of growing up during the Watts Riots spotlights some long-lasting effects of racial inequality and discrimination on children. Ages 10: up. (Jan.)

#2309652 Soft Place to Land (Prebound)

written by Janae Marks

Joy's friendly new neighbor Nora lets Joy in on the complex's best-kept secret: the Hideout, a cozy refuge that only the kids know about. That's where Joy starts exchanging messages with another kid in the building who also seems to be struggling, until abruptly, they stop writing back. What if they're in trouble? Joy has to find out who this mystery writer is, fast, but between managing a new dog-walking business with Nora, keeping on a brave face for her little sister, and worrying about her parents' marriage, Joy isn't sure how to keep her own head above water.

978-1-5364-7692-7 Katherine Tegen Books ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$20.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-7 Starred Review Having one's life uprooted is always unsettling, but it can be especially difficult for a child. After her dad loses his job, 12-year-old Joy Taylor finds herself out of their single-family home and living in a cramped apartment, as well as going to a new school. To make matters worse, Joy's parents are fighting more and more, and they can no longer afford the piano lessons Joy loves. Luckily, Joy finds a friend in neighbor Nora, who introduces her to a hidden storage area in the apartment building, called "the Hideout." There kids can take a break from their families and hang out. Joy finds some writing on the wall that makes her think that another kid is also struggling. As Joy continues to try to figure out who is behind these messages, she and Nora start a dog-walking business to raise money for their hobbies. But as things start to look up, Joy and Nora have a falling out, and Joy's parents reach the brink of divorce. Readers will find themselves yearning along with Joy and rooting for her to find a way to make connections and a home once again. Blending mystery with realistic fiction, Joy's story of how complicated life is for a kid will resonate with readers in tender and poignant ways. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When Joy's father was laid off, the family sold their house and downsized to an apartment; the move of twelve-year-old Joy into a smaller bedroom with her younger sister is challenging, and parental bickering has accelerated into what both parents assure their daughters is a temporary separation. Fortunately, the community is supportive, the tweens in the building get along well, and Nora, neighbor and classmate, rapidly turns into a friend. Joy concocts a plan to make money to continue her suspended piano lessons (an absolute must for a girl aspiring to become a film score composer) through a joint dog-walking enterprise with Nora. Her steady ascent toward a new normal goes into a tailspin when she is cornered into revealing the location of the kids' secret hideout in the building basement, which results in the loss of her new friends-including Nora-and even worse, the loss of a neighbor's pooch that escapes from Joy during a thunderstorm. There's some front-loaded authorial orchestration here, but the domino cascade of interrelated mishaps is fully credible, as is the patient rebuilding of trust Joy must undertake with family, friends, and neighbors to pull back on track. Marks has a keen eye and ear for the telling particulars of the family's struggle to forge ahead in a new setting, and the book is sensitive to everyone's need for a space to be alone from time to time: kids who need a private, safe place to hang out, and parents who need a respite from perpetual discussion of their shared responsibilities and anxieties. Although the stakes may be lower than those in Marks' debut From the Desk of Zoe Washington (BCCB 12/19), fans will welcome her introduction to another determined and resilient Black tween heroine. EB COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews essional father is laid off, Joy's family's relocation across town threatens to cost her more than money can buy. Twelve-year-old Joy Taylor wants to compose music for films, but now that money is tight, her piano lessons, along with so much else, are sacrificed. They have moved from a house to apartment 3C, a small two-bedroom where she and her younger sister must share a bunk bed and the walls are so thin, her parents' fighting keeps them up at night. Then Joy meets Nora from 5B, who lost her mother to cancer. The two girls share a love of movies, complicated home lives, and an obvious need to just get away sometimes. A cornerstone of the friendships between Joy and other kids in the building is the secret, cramped Hideout accessed through a storage closet near the laundry room. According to the literal writing on the wall, it's been a sanctuary for generations of kids needing a space to retreat. Marks makes the necessity of this intimate space for not-quite-little-but-not-yet-big kids simultaneously plausible and disheartening. As the story progresses through various relationship trials, it's not the tween drama that provides the most emotional resonance; rather, seeing children work so hard to make their own place in the world, forge connections, and pursue their own interests is truly inspiring--but their needing to do so in quiet corners while adults remain oblivious is terribly sobering. Joy and her family are Black; Nora is cued as Latinx. A bittersweet story of silent perseverance and kids working for themselves. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When her Black family moves from a house to an apartment across town after her father's layoff, aspiring film score composer Joy Taylor, 12, assumes the worst is over. Unfortunately, her parents still argue, she must drop her beloved piano lessons, and none of her old friends have reached out to her as promised. But then she meets Nora Ramos, her cued-Latinx neighbor and new classmate, who knows everything about her new building. As the two become friends, Nora introduces Joy to the apartment building's other kids, and they share with Joy their biggest secret: the Hideout. Relying on each other to navigate the struggles of their lives, the group grows closer; until one rainy day changes everything. Upset and feeling betrayed, Joy makes rash decisions that not only test her friendships, but threaten to oust her from her new crew entirely. If she wants to make things right again, Joy must learn a tough lesson about accountability and boundaries. At turns poignant and affirmative, this sophomore novel by Marks (From the Desk of Zoe Washington) imparts invaluable messages on growing up, being honest, and communicating feelings to loved ones. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Alex Slater, Trident Media Group. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—When 12-year-old Joy Taylor's dad loses his job and the family has to give up their house, Joy's dreams of learning to play the piano and someday becoming a film score composer are put on hold. Their new apartment is too small, her mom and dad are fighting, and there is no money for piano lessons. A secret room in the apartment complex, known as the Hideout, provides a place where Joy and the other kids in the building can temporarily escape. Soon Joy makes new friends, starts a dog-walking business, and even begins writing to someone who is leaving heartrending messages on the wall of the Hideout. One weekend things go terribly wrong, and Joy must face uncomfortable realities about loyalty and responsibility. This relatable story touches on topics such as divorce (Joy's parents briefly separate, then reconcile), the ups and downs of having a job at a young age, and the difficulties that arise from keeping secrets from family and friends. Joy is Black, and there is a diverse cast of characters with different experiences including her new best friend Nora, who is Latinx, and a boy named Miles, who is one of only a few Black students at a private school. VERDICT An engaging coming-of-age story that will appeal to a wide range of readers.—Sue Morgan, Hillsborough City School Dist., CA

#2309705 Ablaze (Prebound)
written by Christopher Krovatin

Aly Theland doesn't understand what's happening to her. She comes from a very normal family and lives a very normal life. There's only one thing off. When Aly gets angry, things burst into flame. Aly doesn't feel she's in control of this. But as the fires get better and the stakes get higher, something has to be done. Because it's not just flames Aly's unleashing, it's . . . evil.

978-1-5364-7708-5 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 224 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 770

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A blazing superpower propels seventh grader Aly into a firestorm of trouble. Aly Theland is stuck being the helpful, unsung middle child. Whether she's helping her 9-year-old brother, Simon, with a bully or calming her older sister, Rachael, Aly is the family peacekeeper. At her private school she tries to be invisible and avoid trouble until one day when her anger erupts in science class, engulfing her lab table--and sexist, insulting lab partner--in flames. Fires dog Aly as she struggles to control her growing temper, dealing with her nasty ex-best friend and lots of unwanted attention. Rachael tries to help her figure out what's going on as fiery incidents at home and at school plague Aly. A surprise twist changes everything, and quick-witted Aly must save the day. Characters are minimally described: Main characters seem to default to White; names cue some ethnic diversity in the background cast. Krovatin presents readers with an excellent mix of age-appropriate horror and middle school life. Aly's struggles, both paranormal and ordinary, will engender sympathy. The family dynamics, particularly the sibling and mother-daughter relationships, are well crafted. The Theland siblings support and taunt each other in equal measure, and the push-pull of a child growing up is nicely depicted. An explosive and well-earned surprise entertains while the open-ended, movieworthy ending will leave readers wanting more. A scary and surprising cinematic horror story. (Paranormal thriller. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Krovatin (Darkness) crafts a Carrie variation for middle graders in this tensely written novel of superpowers run amok. The middle child between thoughtful nine-year-old Simon and popular 13-year-old Rachael, seventh grader Aly Theland keeps herself socially unaffiliated, hoping to stave off bullying. After regularly absorbing taunts with her head down, Aly feels ready "to burst, having bottled up so many of her feelings and opinions for the sake of going along, keeping the peace, staying unnoticed." When her anger flares alongside a fire in science class, silencing one of her abusers, Aly feels something like catharsis and power alongside her fear. Subsequent blazes appear when her anger sparks, igniting Aly's curiosity about pyrokinesis as well as growing confidence. But the fires strain her usually close sibling relationships and further alienate her from classmates, forcing the anguished girl to reexamine her social approach. Working in 1990s pop culture references that lend a nostalgic vibe, Krovatin tightly plots the events' fallout, including heightened interpersonal tensions, in this twisty, psychologically unsettling read. Main characters default to white. Ages 9: 12. Agent: John Cusick, Folio Literary. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Seventh grader Aly doesn't like to make waves. As a middle child, she's used to being overshadowed by her popular older sister Rachael and her sensitive younger brother Simon. This changes overnight when things around Aly mysteriously start catching fire, and she realizes she is the one causing them. When students and staff at school begin suspecting Aly is starting the fires on purpose, it is Rachael who comes to her aid by helping her control her feelings and the fire within her. Multiple plot twists reveal that almost everyone in Aly's family has special powers. This work initially presents as realistic fiction, and it is fun to experience the fantastical elements of the novel as they unfold. Adult characters take a backseat, presumably because they will not believe some of the more fantastical elements, though it seems unlikely that Aly's parents would be clueless about their own children. Only Uncle Marco is aware of the danger his family is in, and he declines to help out of fear of reactivating his own unwanted power. The riveting conclusion sets itself up for a sequel that readers will eagerly anticipate, when Aly does something wholly uncharacteristic that underscores all she's learned about Rachael, setting into motion the events to come. Krovatin's descriptive writing is stronger than his occasionally stilted dialogue. Aly's family reads as white and affluent, with the siblings attending a private day school. VERDICT This fast-paced novel will surprise and entertain young readers, who may also find school and family dynamics relatable.—Juliet Morefield

#2285790 Charming As a Verb (Prebound)
written by Ben Philippe

Henri "Halti" Haltiwanger can charm just about anyone. He is a star debater and popular student at the prestigious FATE academy, the dutiful first-generation Haitian son, and the trusted dog walker for his wealthy NYC neighbors. But his easy smiles mask his tireless work ethic and burning ambition to attend his dream college, Columbia University.

978-1-5364-7440-4 Balzer & Bray ©2022 5-1/4 x 8 336 pgs.
 Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 12.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $23.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly North American Teenager) expertly navigates the contemporary landscape of a high-achieving, overburdened high schooler of color, with all the pressures and sacrifices that can entail. Charming Haitian-American senior Henri Haltiwanger, 17, is a dog walker, debate team standout, sneaker aficionado, and scholarship student at the Fine Arts Technical Education Academy, a prestigious New York City institution. As the only child of poor immigrants, it's Henri's dream; or, rather, his father's for him; to attend Columbia University, but after a shaky interview with an alum, Henri becomes desperate to increase his odds. When he gets hired to walk the puppy of intense, socially awkward schoolmate Corinne Troy, who lives in the same building for which his father is the live-in superintendent, Henri discovers that her mother is a dean at Columbia. As he gets to know Corinne, Henri realizes his interest in her has nothing to do with her mother's job, but a desperate decision soon threatens to ruin everything he's worked for. A witty, well-developed bildungsroman that presents a Black teenager carefully attempting to navigate systems that disproportionately disadvantage him. Ages 13: up. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 9 Up—Henri Haltiwanger is a go-getter. He's created a dog-walking business disguised as a much larger corporation to lure rich New York clients into trusting him with their precious pooches. Henri hopes this hustle will help him achieve his, and his father's, dream of getting into Columbia University. When Corinne Troy, Henri's socially awkward neighbor and classmate, discovers his enterprise, she blackmails him into helping her improve her social standings so that she will look better on her application to Princeton. What happens will change the trajectory of their lives. Philippe's book touches on racial and class struggles experienced by students as they apply to college. Henri is a first-generation American born of Haitian immigrant parents. Corinne is a dark-skinned African American girl, while Henri's best friend was adopted from China by Jewish American parents. While racial struggles are part of the book, it is not the entire focus. Henri deals with moral and ethical questions as he tries to decide how far he is willing to go to get into his dream college and what matters most to him. A budding romance between Henri and Corinne is the icing on a rich and decadent cake. VERDICT A racially diverse cast of characters with authentic voices and realistic struggles makes this a must-have for all YA collections.—Ashley Leffel, Griffin M.S., Frisco, TX

#2291649 Million Dollar Race (Prebound)
written by Matthew Ross Smith

Grant Falloon isn't just good at track; he's close to breaking the world record 100-meter time for his age group. So when the mega-rich Babblemoney sneaker company announces an international competition to find the fastest kid in the world, he's desperate to sign up.

978-1-5364-7513-5 Aladdin ©2022 5 x 7-1/2 240 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 590

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.95

#2292891 Darkroom (Prebound)

written by K. R. Alexander

Do you think an app that allows you to see ghosts would be cool? Well, prepare to be haunted... even when your phone is off.

978-1-5364-7580-7 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 580

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After Beatrice downloads DARK[room], she realizes the game's ghosts aren't confined to the digital realm. The Ghastly Girls, sophomore best friends Beatrice and Rochelle, are trying to build a following by streaming video online of themselves playing games. Their specialty is horror. Eager to up their subscriber count, Beatrice downloads the indie game DARK[room] despite desperate online warnings from other players that it could be deadly. The concept seems simple enough: snap photos of the seven unleashed ghosts in as many days. What the girls didn't anticipate was that the ghosts would spill over from the app, haunting and terrorizing the people in their lives. At first, readers might think they're in for a predictable, cheesy read, but in Alexander's hands, the story is fast-paced and interesting, and the ghosts are well imagined. Take, for example, the Tooth Fairy with its dozens of fangs, pincers formed from cat's teeth, spiderlike appearance, and terrorizing need for more teeth to add to its collection. The story is mostly propelled by action with a modest amount of character development. Alexander's best move, though, is wrapping up the story for Beatrice and crew but giving the book a chilling epilogue, leaving room for more haunting. Beatrice defaults to White; Rochelle is Black. Spooky thrills for digital natives. (Horror. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2271109 Following Baxter (Prebound)

written by Barbara Kerley

Eleven-year-old Jordie Marie Wallace has been waiting forever for someone to move in next door, so she is thrilled when Professor Reese arrives. Professor Reese has a laboratory in her basement and an extraordinary dog named Baxter--who seems to understand everything Jordie says. Jordie and her younger brother, TJ, begin walking Baxter and helping Professor Reese in the lab. But being lab assistants ends up being more than Jordie and TJ bargained for.

978-1-5364-7245-5 HarperCollins Publishers ©2021 5 x 7-1/2 265 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 790

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.95

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Jordie Marie Wallace is thrilled when she sees that a new neighbor is moving next door. She's even more excited when she sees that her new neighbor, Professor Reese, has a dog named Baxter. When Jordie helps Professor Reese take care of Baxter, she starts to notice strange things happening in Professor Reese's basement. The professor reveals that she is attempting to move things from one place to another through teleportation. When Dr. Reese goes missing and Jordie figures out that she tried to teleport herself, Baxter becomes the key to finding where Professor Reese went. Kerley, known for her picture book biographies and nonfiction, writes with warmth and thoughtfulness in her first work of middle grade fiction. The characters Kerley introduces are fully realized and compelling. Jordie, whose parents are separated, lives primarily with her mom, but often visits her dad, who lives in a studio apartment connected to the family's house. There is enough mystery and science fiction to draw in lovers of those genres, but it is balanced with a realistic portrayal of family and school life that many readers may identify with. A subplot in which Jordie starts to realize she misjudged a classmate who she previously deemed a "bad" kid is particularly compelling. Fans of Rebecca Stead's When You Reach Me and Jennifer Holm's The Fourteenth Goldfish, where characters learn real-life lessons about friendship and compassion through the medium of science fiction, will find similar themes here. VERDICT Relatable and compelling. Fans of realistic and science fiction will find a lot to enjoy.-Celia Dillon, The Brearley School, New York Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2271763 Ancestor Approved: Intertribal Stories for Kids (Prebound)

written by Cynthia L. Smith

In a high school gym full of color and song, people dance, sell beadwork and books, and celebrate friendship and heritage. Young protagonists will meet relatives from faraway, shadowy spirits, and sometimes one another (plus one scrappy rez dog).

978-1-5364-7246-2 Heartdrum ©2022 5 x 7-1/2 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$20.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review Sixteen short stories, two poems, and visual art (not viewed) present Native youth attending a two-day intertribal powwow in Ann Arbor, Michigan, and reflect on kinship, community, and the interconnectedness of the experience. The narratives vary in style and tone: in Monique Gray Smith's "Fancy Dancer," a young boy gains a kind stepfather, who teaches him the Dance for Mother Earth; Tim Tingle's "Warriors of Forgiveness" features young Luksi, who accompanies a bus full of elders on a hilarious road trip from Oklahoma to Michigan; Rebecca Roanhorse's "Rez Dog Rules" reflects on the powwow from a canine perspective; and foster child Aiden receives special regalia from his biological brother in David A. Robertson's "Brothers." Most selections are realistic and ultimately upbeat, although Art Coulson's "Wendigos Don't Dance" explores the supernatural, and Eric Gansworth's "Indian Price" confronts the indignities of microaggressions lobbed by those who would pretend to be Indian as a game. Each piece is tribally specific, emphasizes Native values (cooperation, forgiveness, and the importance of family), and features characters that make cameo appearances in other stories, adding cohesiveness to the collection. With exceptionally strong writing throughout, and appended with glossary, author notes, and acknowledgements, this makes an appealing choice for those just learning about contemporary Indigenous life as well as readers well versed with the powwow circuit. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Eighteen entries by seventeen authors focus on the powwow, specifically the big intertribal powwow in Ann Arbor, and the two poems and sixteen stories each take a different approach, mostly following kids as they compete in a dance, work on regalia, staff the vendor stalls, or just rub shoulders with others who've come for the celebration. Individual stories vary in impact, but in addition to some familiar Native American authors (Tim Tingle, Eric Gansworth, editor Smith) providing strong entries there are compelling contributions from lesser-known writers as well (Andrea L. Rogers' "The Ballad of Maggie Wilson" is a particular standout). The collection's master stroke is the subtle intersection of the entries, as characters team up across stories, a protagonist of one entry wanders past characters from another, everybody returns to the best fry bread stand, and a dog (who stars in his own tale) modeling theme t-shirts, including the titular "Ancestor Approved," figuratively and sometimes literally runs through several outings. Readers will get a kick out of finding the callbacks, and the effect is an underscoring of the intersectional nature of the powwow itself, as experiences remain individual while sharing commonalities. It's a thoughtful and sometimes funny celebration of a celebration, and whether kids are veteran powwow-goers or new to the experience, they'll long for the convivial warmth of the festivities. A glossary, notes and acknowledgments for the stories, and biographies of the contributors are appended. DS

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Through this linked anthology by seventeen contributors, readers experience "What Is a Powwow?" (the title of Kim Rogers's opening poem), as characters converge in Ann Arbor, Michigan, for the Dance for Mother Earth Powwow. Rory begins to heal from his father's abusive words and embrace his Indigenous heritage ("Fancy Dancer" by Monique Gray Smith). Aiden travels with his foster parents to meet his brother and dance in his first powwow (David A. Robertson's "Brothers"). Amber, whose sister battled cancer, receives a new dress for the Jingle Dance ("Secret and Surprises" by Traci Sorell). Some of the attendees live locally, while others travel from places including Oklahoma and Missouri; some live in the city, while others live on the reservation. This anthology offers readers a variety of images of Native children while also introducing them to vocabulary from several different Indigenous languages, compiled in an appended glossary. According to Rogers's poem: "A powwow is / friends and family / ...a way to remember those / who've passed on / ...a place for belly-laughing / ...healing / and soul-soothing," and this volume reflects all of those elements and more. Notes and acknowledgments, contributor bios, and an editor's note are appended. (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Through this linked anthology by seventeen contributors, readers experience "What Is a Powwow?" (the title of Kim Rogers's opening poem), as characters converge in Ann Arbor, Michigan, for the Dance for Mother Earth Powwow. Rory begins to heal from his father's abusive words and embrace his Indigenous heritage ("Fancy Dancer" by Monique Gray Smith). Aiden travels with his foster parents to meet his brother and dance in his first powwow (David A. Robertson's "Brothers"). Amber, whose sister battled cancer, receives a new dress for the Jingle Dance ("Secret and Surprises" by Traci Sorell). Some of the attendees live locally, while others travel from places including Oklahoma and Missouri; some live in the city, while others live on the reservation. This anthology offers readers a variety of images of Native children while also introducing them to vocabulary from several different Indigenous languages, compiled in an appended glossary. According to Rogers's poem: "A powwow is / friends and family / ...a way to remember those / who've passed on / ...a place for belly-laughing / ...healing / and soul-soothing," and this volume reflects all of those elements and more. Notes and acknowledgments, contributor bios, and an editor's note are appended. Nicholl Denice Montgomery(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A groundbreaking Indigenous anthology for young people. Readers can join the fun in this collection of 18 contemporary stories and poems about loving families from various parts of the U.S. and Canada who travel to meet, dance, sing, socialize, and honor Native traditions at an intertribal powwow. The entries tell of the personal struggles, family joy, belief systems, and stunning regalia of various nations, including the Cree, Ojibwe, Choctaw, Cherokee, Navajo, Abenaki, and Haudenosaunee, through the eyes of the young protagonists. Enrollment issues, Indian wannabes, and veterans' histories are just a few of the serious themes addressed in these entertaining stories written by familiar and lesser-known writers alike. Senses of goodwill and humor pervade the book as well as the spirit of community, intersection, resilience, and a desire to remember the past. Whether engaging with the quiet spiritual strength displayed in "Fancy Dancer" by Monique Gray Smith or the profound point of view of Brian Young's "Senecavajo," the stories are full of surprises. Rebecca Roanhorse writes from a dog's vantage point, and Dawn Quigley asks about the nature of intelligence. Many other original tales complete this anthology of modern Natives celebrating their diversity together. An especially winning feature is the glossary in which various Indigenous vocabulary words in the stories are defined. A joyful invitation to celebrate the circle of ancestors together. (about the authors) (Anthology. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In a letter to reviewers, editor Smith (enrolled Muscogee Creek) describes this anthology as a "sampling of the many rising Indigenous voices who are changing children's literature for the better." Using the framework of an intertribal powwow, 17 Indigenous authors craft stories that explore themes such as ethnic identity and ancestry. The rhythmic "What Is a Powwow?" by Kim Rogers (Wichita and Affiliated Tribes) first establishes the event as one "where our hearts beat as one/ to the thump of the drum." In enrolled Onondaga author Eric Gans-worth's thought-provoking "Indian Price," two cousins in different living situations connect for the first time. Family is also central to the inspiring "Secrets and Surprises" by Traci Sorell (Cherokee), which celebrates how Native cultures can support others; an idea threaded throughout. The most engaging entries detail aspects of Native culture alongside universal themes: sisters learn to navigate a changing relationship in "What We Know About Glaciers" by Christine Day (Upper Skagit), while two stories by Brian Young (enrolled Navajo) showcase the same events from the eyes of two frenemies. It's a wonderful introduction to the included authors' work and a persuasive encouragement to seek out more Indigenous stories. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ginger Knowlton, Curtis Brown. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Editor Smith and 16 other authors and artists collaborate in this #OwnVoices short story collection from HarperCollins's HeartDrum imprint, which was created to "highlight the voices of Native creators." Each story focuses on a different character and their experience of an intertribal powwow in Michigan. The stories range from solemn to silly, but each emphasizes the power of the tribal community to support and heal its members. The well-edited volume begins with welcoming and humorous tales before moving into heavier territory. Each creator provides a short biography in the back matter, which includes their tribal affiliation and other works, in addition to their acknowledgements and notes on their contributions to the book. This anthology aims to both increase Native representation in middle grade literature and promote knowledge and understanding in non-Native readers. While not every story will be equally engaging for every reader and some points of overlap might seem a bit redundant, there is still more than enough to recommend this for school and public libraries everywhere. VERDICT All libraries should make room on their shelves for this collection of Native-voiced stories. Recommended.—Taylor Worley, Springfield P.L., OR Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Sixteen of today's most skilled Indigenous children's authors join forces in this anthology of richly varied, loosely interconnected stories all centered on an intertribal powwow, "where our hearts beat as one/ to the thump of the drum." From as far away as La Conner, Wash., and Durant, Okla., kids make the trip to Ann Arbor, Mich., for the Dance for Mother Earth Powwow. They are Cree and Choctaw, Ojibwe and Navajo, Coast Salish and Cherokee. The stories' broad assortment of family makeups, backgrounds and conflicts underscores the diversity of the Indigenous experience. Even so, overarching themes emerge around the importance of family, the solace of tradition and community, and growing personally through supporting others. This uplifting assembly affirms the vitality of Indigenous life today and offers accessible situations and characters to all young readers. COPYRIGHT(2021) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2276155 Alone in the Woods (Prebound)

written by Rebecca Behrens

When twelve-year-old best friends Jocelyn and Alex head off for a late-summer, joint-family vacation in Wisconsin's isolated north woods, it's supposed to be a perfect week of hiking, tubing, campfire s'mores, and stargazing. Except for one big problem: Alex and Jocelyn are no longer friends.

978-1-5364-7290-5 Sourcebooks, Incorporated ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 810

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.95

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–7—It's the first day of the annual family trip that Jocelyn ("Joss") and Alex's families take every summer to the Northwoods of Wisconsin, but this vacation looks nothing like the fun-filled trip that Joss anticipated. Alex has just ended their friendship, and now wants nothing to do with her, preferring to spend all her time texting her new best friend Laura Longbottom, the coolest girl at Walden Middle School. Ever since Alex befriended Laura at Spanish camp, she's been a part of the popular crowd. Her interests have changed, and it seems like Joss has been left behind. Joss doesn't want to go shopping or play with makeup. She just wants to keep the same traditions she's always had with her best friend. When Joss and Alex are forced to go inner-tubing on the river together, the last thing they expect is to get lost in the middle of the woods. The story is told chronologically through Joss and Alex's struggle to survive, and in flashbacks to key turning points in their friendship. Readers will empathize with both girls and ultimately root for their reconciliation. If Behrens's detailed and loving descriptions of the Northwoods of Wisconsin aren't enough, the "Note on the Setting" will convince readers to take a visit—while practicing safe tubing, of course. VERDICT A compelling and relatable middle school friendship tale for fans of survival stories.—Jessica Ko, Los Angeles Public Library

#2276210 My Life As a Potato (Prebound)

written by Arianne Costner

Ben Hardy believes he's cursed by potatoes. And now he's moved to Idaho, where the school's mascot is Steve the Spud! Yeah, this cannot be good. After accidentally causing the mascot to sprain an ankle, Ben is sentenced to Spud duty for the final basketball games of the year. But if the other kids know he's the Spud, his plans for popularity are likely to be a big dud! Ben doesn't want to let the team down, so he lies to his friends to keep it a secret. No one will know it's him under the potato suit...right?

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

978-1-5364-7303-2 Yearling Books ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 288 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 640

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Twelve-year-old Ben Hardy is the new kid in school. Adjusting to life in the middle of Idaho has not been easy, but Ben manages to make new friends, and the most popular girl at school has asked him to the school dance. However, an incident in the school cafeteria involving a thrown hot dog lands Ben in hot water. He is faced with suspension or performing at basketball games as the school mascot, a dumpy potato. Being the school mascot will mess up his chances with the popular kids, but he reluctantly dons the costume. What follows is a madcap series of incidents involving Ben trying to keep his role as the mascot secret. As the story progresses, Ben learns who his true friends are and that, possibly, popularity is not all it seems to be. The ending is a predictable but satisfying lesson in being true to one's friends. This book will appeal to fans of the Middle School series by James Patterson.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The new kid in school endures becoming the school mascot. Ben Hardy has never cared for potatoes, and this distaste has become a barrier to adjusting to life in his new Idaho town. His school's mascot is the Spud, and after a series of misfortunes, Ben is enlisted to don the potato costume and cheer on his school's team. Ben balances his duties as a life-sized potato against his desperate desire to hide the fact that he's the dork in the suit. After all, his cute new crush, Jayla, wouldn't be too impressed to discover Ben's secret. The ensuing novel is a fairly boilerplate middle-grade narrative: snarky tween protagonist, the crush that isn't quite what she seems, and a pair of best friends that have more going on than our hero initially believes. The author keeps the novel moving quickly, pushing forward with witty asides and narrative momentum so fast that readers won't really mind that the plot's spine is one they've encountered many times before. Once finished, readers will feel little resonance and move on to the next book in their to-read piles, but in the moment the novel is pleasant enough. Ben, Jayla, and Ben's friend Hunter are white while Ellie, Ben's other good pal, is Latina. On equal footing with a garden-variety potato. (Fiction. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Seventh grade student Ben, new to his Idaho school, is punished when he caves to peer pressure and misbehaves: he must don a potato suit and entertain the masses at school basketball games as the school mascot Steve the Spud. Humor ensues when Ben decides to lie to everyone about being in the potato suit. Comical illustrations support the amusement. Despite the frequency of food-throwing incidents, strong moral messages abound: don't lie, don't judge others, and do right by those less popular than yourself. While more astute or mature readers will question the strong subtext that heteronormative romantic pairings are de rigueur for seventh graders, as well as the plot's premise—just why does Ben feel the need to lie, again?—others will simply be swept up in the well-paced unfolding of the light-hearted plot. Almost the entire cast is white, upper middle class, heterosexual, cisgender, and supported by nuclear families comfortable in the suburban setting. VERDICT This title doesn't rock the boat; it's light, predictable, easy to read, vaguely funny, and reminiscent of Lincoln Peirce's "Big Nate" comics and Chris Grabenstein's and James Patterson's "I Funny" series.—Rhona Campbell, Georgetown Day School, Washington, DC

#2276957 Letters from Cuba (Prebound)
written by Ruth Behar

The situation is getting dire for Jews in Poland on the eve of World War II. Esther's father has fled to Cuba, and she is the first one to join him. It's heartbreaking to be separated from her beloved sister, so Esther promises to write down everything that happens until they're reunited. And she does, recording both the good--the kindness of the Cuban people and her discovery of a valuable hidden talent--and the bad: the fact that Nazism has found a foothold even in Cuba. Esther's evocative letters are full of her appreciation for life and reveal a resourceful, determined girl with a rare ability to bring people together, all the while striving to get the rest of their family out of Poland before it's too late.

978-1-5364-7318-6 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2021 5 x 7-3/4 288 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 850

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 8-12 When Esther's father, a Jewish Polish refugee working in Cuba to send money back to his family, asks one of his sons to join him, she's not quite 12?goes instead. Esther's poignant letters to her sister reveal the heartbreaking stories of the people?the displaced, the downtrodden, the dreamers?she meets along her journey, even as she exposes injustices among class and religion and within ethnic groups, all in parallel to her family's experience in 1938 Poland. Belpré-winning Behar's epistolary novel, based on a true story, addresses identity, family dynamics, culture, tradition, and acceptance as loving Esther opens her heart to her friends and neighbors in Agramonte while learning about issues both in her new home and abroad. Complemented by a vibrant supporting cast and an extensive author's note about the Holocaust and Cuban refugees, Esther's tale is one of adaptation and perseverance as she pursues dressmaking while also fighting for her rights and for peace in her new home.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books years, working to bring his family out of political and economic distress in Poland as azis consolidate power. With enough saved to send for the first family member, twelve-year-old Esther convinces her father that she, as the eldest, should be chosen over firstborn son Moshe. Papa assents, and the choice proves to be a good one, as Esther's outgoing personality and quickness to pick up a new language are genuine assets to him as he peddles small items in rural areas; even her domestic skills, long criticized by Mama, blossom when she unleashes her own creativity, designing and sewing dresses that she sells through a Jewish shopkeeper in Havana. It's her interpersonal skill that is arguably the most valuable, as she makes friends ranging from ex-slaves to the town doctor to Chinese merchants, all of whom band together when Nazi sympathizers, emboldened by Hitler's tyranny abroad, mount an anti-immigrant campaign to rid their island of foreigners. Behar finds inspiration for her novel from the experience of her grandmother Esther, a Jewish immigrant who joined her own father in Cuba in 1927. Fictional Esther seems to have stepped out of a decades-old novel as a kind of good-luck magnet who readily vanquishes trouble with wit, charm, and fortunate breaks. Villainous Nazi wannabe Senor Eduardo caves after a one-day strike on his sugar mill; wealthy ladies in a trendy Havana department store can't get enough of Esther's designs; and even Papa opens his mind and heart to neighbors outside his tight-knit circle of Jewish acquaintances. Readers may eyeroll but still find themselves engaged by a World War II refugee story in an unexpected and underexamined setting. An author's note is included. EB

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide In 1938, eleven-year-old Jewish girl Esther is the first of her siblings to emigrate from Poland to Cuba, joining her father, who went three years earlier. Her letters to her sister, kept in a notebook to be shared later, form the narrative of Esther's new life in Cuba. With the help of her skill as a clothing designer, Esther and Papa save money to bring the rest of the family over, as rumors build of the worsening situation for Jews in Europe. The story is in some ways refreshingly optimistic: both Papa and Esther adapt fairly easily to life first in rural Agramonte and then in Havana. Behar creates a welcome portrait of a warm, diverse community -- one that supports the family members when they do face local antisemitism, and as a result creates an Anti-Nazi Society. But the novel doesn't paint an overly sunny picture -- realistically, adjustment isn't as easy for other members of Esther's family when they arrive (or, in one case, choose not to come). An author's note cites connections to Behar's (Lucky Broken Girl, rev. 7/17) family history and to Karen Hesse's Letters from Rifka (1992). (Copyright 2020 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In 1938, a Jewish refugee from Poland joins her father in small-town Cuba. After three years abroad, Papa's saved only enough money to send for one of his children. Thus Esther boards the steamship alone even though she's not quite 12. Cuba is a constant surprise: Her father's an itinerant peddler and not a shopkeeper; they live as the only Jews in a tiny village; and she's allowed to wear sandals and go bare-legged in the heat. But the island is also a constant joy. Nearly everyone Esther meets is generous beyond their means. She adores her new trade as a dressmaker, selling her creations in Havana to earn money to bring over the rest of the family. In glowing letters to her sister back in Poland, Esther details how she's learning Spanish through the poems of José Martí. She introduces her sister to her beloved new friends: a white doctor's wife and her vegetarian, atheist husband; a black, Santería-following granddaughter of an ex-slave; a Chinese Cuban shopkeeper's nephew. Esther's first year in Cuba is marked by the calendar of Jewish holidays, as she wonders if she can be both Cuban and a Jew. As the coming war looms in Europe, she and her friends find solidarity, standing together against local Nazis and strike breakers. An author's note describes how the story was loosely inspired by the author's own family history. Warmhearted cross-cultural friendship for a refugee on distant shores: both necessary and kind. (bibliography) (Historical fiction. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In 1938, Esther, 11, travels alone from her small Jewish village in Poland to join her father in a small Cuban town, vowing to help earn enough money to pay for the rest of their family; her grandmother, mother, and four younger siblings; to join them. Inspired by her own grandmother's life, Behar (Lucky Broken Girl) crafts a series of loving letters from Esther to her sister, describing the perilous journey and Esther's first year in Cuba. Esther's optimism, determination, and unconventionality allow her to adapt quickly; while her father remains as true to his faith as possible, Esther explores her world and, thanks to a highly developed skill learned from her mother, succeeds far beyond expectations. Esther's new friendships with both Cubans and fellow immigrants set the stage for encounters with numerous benevolent minor characters and one who embodies the period's terrors. Global issues such as Hitler's rise, anti-Semitism, slavery, and worker protests are neatly woven into Esther's narrative. Despite a telescoped time frame and an underdeveloped supporting cast, Behar's appreciative descriptions of Cuba and Esther's close, protective bonds with her father and sister make for an engaging read. Ages 10: up. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Pura Belpré Award winner Behar's newest story is based on her own grandmother's immigration journey. Eleven-year-old Esther bravely travels to Cuba from Poland to help her father earn enough money for the rest of their family to join them, including her mother, grandmother, three brothers, and cherished sister Malka. The narrative is told in a series of letters from Esther to Malka, chronicling her journey across the sea and her experiences in this new homeland. As a means to earn money for her family's travel arrangements, Esther puts her sewing skills to good use by making custom dresses for many islanders. Throughout the story, readers learn that many Jewish people are arriving in Cuba, trying to escape the Jewish persecution in Europe, despite Nazi sympathy infiltrating the island. Readers dive into the story headfirst as they get to know Esther, her family, and her newfound friends. Esther's first-person descriptions of people and the island craft a vivid experience of Cuba's sights, sounds, and culinary delights. VERDICT Readers will not want to part with this story of resilience. A World War II refugee tale that spotlights dedicated hard work. A must-have for public, elementary, and middle school libraries.—Kristin Unruh, Siersma Elem. Sch., Warren, MI

#2276960 Glitch (Prebound)
written by Laura Martin

Regan Fitz and Elliot Mason are training to become Glitchers. They've always been enemies but everything changes when they find a letter from the future that warns of a devastating event to come. Suddenly forced to work together, Regan and Elliot must get over their animosity fast, because to save everyone they know, they'll need to break every rule they've ever been taught.

978-1-5364-7321-6 HarperCollins Publishers ©2021 5 x 7-1/2 400 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.3 AR Pts 13.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$20.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 In a future where time traveling is very real, the privilege is reserved for individuals born with a Glitch gene, who must also pass extensive training and testing at the exclusive Academy. When Regan, the Commander's daughter, and Elliot, an Academy urchin with no opportunity outside of his servitude, encounter a Cocoon, a contraband time-travel letter sent from the future to warn them, they must overcome their feud in order to salvage everything—and everyone—they treasure. Martin expertly weaves the story through both Regan's and Elliot's perspectives, capturing their innermost emotions, especially their motivations and fears, as together they overcome frightening simulators and actual time travel. From the Boston Tea Party to Pearl Harbor, their history-based missions and inevitable friendship—or, at least, cooperation? will appeal to fans of action-packed dystopian stories like the Hunger Games trilogy or Ransom Riggs' Miss Peregrine's Peculiar Children series. This is the grown-up version of the beloved Magic Tree House chapter books, and it doesn't disappoint in honoring that legacy. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Time-traveling archenemies must work together to save their school. In a world where some people are born with a gene that allows them to slide in and out of time—to Glitch—children with that DNA are educated at a special school run by the government. Interfering with the past is against the law, and anyone who travels back in time to manipulate history is labeled a Butterfly and arrested. Glitchers are trained to stop Butterflies, and Regan Fitz, whose mom is commander in chief of the U.S. branch of Glitch Academy, has great intuition when it comes to spotting people intent on altering the timeline. She is, however, at the bottom of her class because school is a struggle. Her nemesis is Elliot Mason, who is at the top of the class, but he lacks the gut instincts needed to be an excellent Glitcher. Character development takes a back seat to premise and plot here. Regan and Elliot fight constantly and are in the middle of an epic blowup when a Cocoon—an object planted by a Butterfly to effect a change—in Regan's handwriting appears. The pair must work together to figure out its clues and succeed in their mission, all while avoiding detection and being arrested as Butterflies. The final time-travel sequences are many and dizzying, but the excellent pacing of the race to save the day overshadows this mechanics issue. Elliot appears black and Regan is white. A solid choice for readers who like history with their mystery. (Science fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this buddy time travel tale by Martin (Hoax for Hire), Cadets Regan Fitz and Elliot Mason are rivals at Glitch Academy; they're training to use their rare genetic ability to travel through time and prevent "Butterflies" (so named for the butterfly effect) from altering U.S. history. Regan, 12, daughter of the Academy commander, is a mediocre student with solid intuition. Her classmate and social nemesis, Elliot, is at the top of their class but lacking in Regan's instincts. After they discover a letter sent from a future Regan to their current selves, they are forced to collaborate in a secret new program that trains Glitchers to work in pairs. A threat by Butterfly organization Mayhem against the Academy means that Regan and Elliot may have to do the forbidden: travel to the past to change the future. By using historical moments, such as the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory fire, for the missions, Martin imparts a bit of learning in an enjoyable fashion, while the protagonists' sparring morphs gradually and believably into a firm friendship. There is much here to please middle grade readers, whether they enjoy historical fiction, time travel, or tales of camaraderie. Ages 8: 12. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal n trained since birth to be Glitchers—time travelers who protect the past from Butterflies, the criminals who meddle in history. Regan and Elliot can't stand each other, but when they find a note from a future Regan that instructs them to travel back in time to prevent a disaster, they become not only teammates, but Butterflies themselves. It's refreshing to see a book that so effortlessly combines history and science fiction, maintaining the energy of a sci-fi adventure and the complexity of historical fiction. The fast-paced plot features plucky, well-developed characters, and first-person narration switches between Regan and Elliot, which works due to each character's strong voice. Martin's rules of time travel are simple enough for younger readers to follow, and the historical settings are comprehensive and thorough. Characters' discussions about the events they travel through provide context for readers. VERDICT With its dynamic plot, engaging characters, and sci-fi/historical fiction blend, this title will pull in a huge variety of readers, all of whom will be racing to see how the story ends.—Kristin Brynsvold, Tuckahoe Elem. Sch., Arlington, VA

#2322269 Dead Wednesday (Prebound)

written by Jerry Spinelli

Worm Tarnauer has spent most of eighth grade living down to his nickname. He prefers to be out of sight, underground. He walked the world unseen. He's happy to let his best friend, Eddie, lead the way and rule the day.

978-1-5364-7881-5 Yearling Books ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 240 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile HL 550

Quantity

Unit Price

1

$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-9 Starred Review It's finally here, the day when the eighth-graders get to be deaders. Yes, they'll each be given the name and photo of a teenager who died that year in a stupidly preventable way--speeding, driving while texting, taking drugs. But the truly excellent parts of this "scare them straight" campaign are the half day of school and behavioral free pass that go with it, because anyone wearing the black shirt signifying their status as dead for the day is soundly ignored by the living. For shy, acne-prone Worm, nothing could be better than sanctioned invisibility. It comes as a surprise, therefore, when Worm's assigned dead teen, Becca Finch, shows up to spend Dead Wednesday with him. No one else can see or hear her or seems to be experiencing this peculiar phenomenon, but Becca is so chatty and in the moment and, well, a girl, that Worm doesn't mind. As the two wander through town getting to know each other and figuring out just what is going on, personal revelations spark without romanticizing the process or losing sight of the circumstance that brought them together. Spinelli writes with wry humor that still makes room for sweetness and a belief in the impossible. A stellar pick for tween collections. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Today is the school custom of Dead Wednesday, where eighth graders supposedly get scared straight by assuming the identity of a recent youth fatality and getting temporarily blanked by teachers, community, and sometimes even parents. For most kids, it's the chance to go wild without repercussion, but shy Worm has a very different experience when his Dead Wednesday identity, Rebecca Ann Finch, turns up as a ghost. Affectionate, ebullient Becca spends the day with Worm as she searches for the reason she's come back, and along the way she nudges Worm into sticking his neck out a little more and worrying less about the opinion of his ostensibly cool friend. There's a big Our Town vibe to this story, and Becca is plausibly crafted as the personality-rich seventeen-year-old girl who may not have been the girl most likely but still had a romance with the most popular boy in school, an identity with resonance for acne-endowed Worm. Spinelli's graceful yet accessible present-tense prose captures eighth-grade social dynamics, Worm's self-erasure, and Becca's confidence with vivid authenticity, and the Dead Wednesday tradition is a booktalking hook par excellence. The book gratifyingly takes Worm's growing self-assurance in a slightly unexpected direction, but it's probably all the more Becca-pleasing for that. This is a speedy but high concept read that has great potential for discussion, and for making kids yearn for their own Dead Wednesday and accompanying ghost. DS COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine "Worm" Tarnauer is the sort of middle-school kid who likes to be invisible, "to be out of sight, underground, watching, listening. A spectator" -- until a ghost girl changes all of that. Worm can't wait for Dead Wednesday, when eighth graders are supposed to remember Pennsylvania teenagers who died from preventable accidents, such as wrapping their cars around trees. ("Wrappers," the kids callously call them.) Their faces are on posters in the school, and eighth graders receive their name cards and wear black shirts. The students become "Deaders," and teachers act like they don't see them. But to "freedom-drunk" eighth graders, lack of supervision means raucous behavior, a.k.a. pure bliss. Then the dead girl on Worm's card -- Rebecca Ann Finch, age seventeen -- appears and tells him she is there "to fix him," to show him the life he is missing by being a worm, a middle-school fun junkie, more interested in video games than the real life all around him. Spinelli makes the relationship between a boy and a ghost heartwarming; the life lessons of a dead girl profound; and social commentary astute but not didactic. Dialogue is snappy, and every scene is tight and memorable. Susan Caraway from Spinelli's Stargirl (2000) might see in Becca Finch a kindred spirit. Dean Schneider(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews For two teenagers, a small town's annual cautionary ritual becomes both a life- and a death-changing experience. On the second Wednesday in June, every eighth grader in Amber Springs, Pennsylvania, gets a black shirt, the name and picture of a teen killed the previous year through reckless behavior--and the silent treatment from everyone in town. Like many of his classmates, shy, self-conscious Robbie "Worm" Tarnauer has been looking forward to Dead Wed as a day for cutting loose rather than sober reflection...until he finds himself talking to a strange girl or, as she would have it, "spectral maiden," only he can see or touch. Becca Finch is as surprised and confused as Worm, only remembering losing control of her car on an icy slope that past Christmas Eve. But being (or having been, anyway) a more outgoing sort, she sees their encounter as a sign that she's got a mission. What follows, in a long conversational ramble through town and beyond, is a day at once ordinary yet rich in discovery and self-discovery--not just for Worm, but for Becca too, with a climactic twist that leaves both ready, or readier, for whatever may come next. Spinelli shines at setting a tongue-in-cheek tone for a tale with serious underpinnings, and as in Stargirl (2000), readers will be swept into the relationship that develops between this adolescent odd couple. Characters follow a White default. Characters to love, quips to snort at, insights to ponder: typical Spinelli. (Fiction. 12-15) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Robbie "Worm" Tarnauer is excited to participate in Dead Wednesday, when all eighth graders in Amber Springs, Pa., are given a black shirt, assigned the name of a local teenager who died a preventable death, and then ignored for the day; treated as "dead" by the faculty. Though it's intended to be a grim warning, most students see the day as license to goof off. Worm, however, aptly named since he prefers to be "out of sight, underground, watching, listening," is happy for a day of invisibility. But when Worm receives the name "Rebecca Ann Finch" and dons the black shirt, he also gets a surprise: the sudden presence of Becca's ghost. A quirky, charismatic 17-year-old wearing raspberry-colored pajamas, she's guilt-ridden about the pain her death caused and convinced that she's arrived to help Worm take charge of his existence. The more she reveals about her life and death, however, the more Worm wonders if it's Becca who actually needs his assistance. Though Becca's characterization can feel more conceptual than fully fleshed, and the male characters frequently view girls as homogeneous, self-conscious Worm's slow-building affection for lively Becca leads to a bittersweet conclusion that prepares both for the future. Centering meaningful themes of ephemerality, forgiveness, and self-acceptance, Spinelli's (Stargirl) characters; cued white; will undoubtedly dig their way into the hearts of readers who need them most. Ages 10: up. Agent: William Reiss, John Hawkins & Assoc. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Worm Tarnauer prefers to go unnoticed. He doesn't want to stand out, and he's happy to let his best friend Eddie take the spotlight. In a somewhat morbid exercise designed to encourage students to consider their own mortality, the teachers at Worm's school assign each eighth grader the name of a teenager who died in the past year. The students don black shirts and are ignored all day by teachers and fellow students. Typically, this leads the eighth graders to do any number of things they wouldn't normally be able to get away with—but when Worm is assigned Becca Finch (17, car crash), he isn't prepared for what happens next. Worm lets Becca into his head and begins seeing her everywhere. He finds himself talking to her and questioning his identity and how he exists in the world. This is a well-written book by a well-known author. The concept of Dead Wednesday is somewhat disturbing and consumes a large portion of the beginning action. The plot really takes off once Worm begins interacting with Becca; she's smart and quick and challenges his preconceived notions about belonging, causing him to think and step outside his comfort zone. VERDICT With a macabre premise, this is a solid read about finding one's voice, standing up for oneself, and inner confidence. Recommended for larger collections or where Spinelli is already popular.—Jessica Trafton, Skidompha Lib., Damariscotta, ME

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Newbery Medal-winner Jerry Spinelli (Maniac Magee; The Warden's Daughter) delivers an affecting story about a shy, insecure boy and the dead girl who's supposed to be guiding him.

#2324417 Cursed Carnival and Other Calamities: New Stories about Mythic Heroes (Prebound)
written by Rick Riordan

A cave monster . . . an abandoned demon . . . a ghost who wants to erase history . . . a killer commandant . . . These are just some of the challenges confronting the young heroes in this highly entertaining anthology.

978-1-5364-7886-0 Rick Riordan ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 464 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 17.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-7 From Rick Riordan Presents comes this anthology of 10 short stories with heroes from the imprint traipsing through the multiverse. Edited by Riordan, who also contributed one of his own stories, this book offers a little bit of everything. There are doorways that open up to silly and funny adventure tales in unicorn and chicken universes. There are ghosts and monsters and a cave of doom. There are sword wielders, a hero with mad fire skills, and a Mayan shapeshifter who can also breathe underwater. There is even a young fighter who once stunned a duck. The stories are diverse and pull from a spectrum of culture's mythologies, including Indian, African American, and Celtic, to name only a few. Contributors include Pura Belpré Award winner Carlos Hernandez and Coretta Scott King Author Honor Book award winner Kwame Mbalia. If the multiverse is a favorite theme, Me vs. the Multiverse: Pleased to Meet Me (2020), by S. G. Wilson, or Strangeworlds Travel Agency (2021), by L. D. Lapinski, are other middle-grade books worth checking out. HIGH-DEMAND BACKSTORY: Yes, Riordan's name is on the cover, which will draw in plenty of readers, but don't miss the cache of the contributors, who have plenty of fans themselves. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In this anthology penned by authors from the Rick Riordan Presents imprint--and Riordan himself--mythological adventures lie in wait. In the Mississippi Civil Rights Museum, Gum Baby must save her friends from a ghostie dressed in rags in Kwame Mbalia's "The Gum Baby Files." In Carlos Hernandez' "Calamity Juice," Cuban American Sal and Gabi must figure out which alternate version of the universe has swallowed up their friend. In "Beware the Grove of True Love" by Roshani Chokshi, Aru Shah and her Pandava sisters enter a Night Bazaar in the Otherworld; they must return gunghroos, or anklet bells, to a magical being they upset. And at the All-Nations Assembly powwow, Diné girl Nizhoni; her best friend, Davery; and other Native youth try--and fail--to take a break from slaying monsters in "The Demon Drum" by Rebecca Roanhorse. The 10 short stories in this anthology pulse with imagination and humor, and each entry is a true page-turner set in a fully realized, satisfyingly complete fantasy world that is accessible even to readers who are not familiar with the authors' novels. At times, the dialogue can feel forced, as though the writers are trying to shape their styles to match Riordan's; the strongest stories are the ones that avoid this pitfall and which have the most distinctive voices. A captivating collection of stories based on world mythologies. (guide to Irish names, contributor bios) (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This middle grade anthology from Rick Riordan Presents serves up 10 new stories from the imprint's contributing authors, including a Celtic mythology: inspired piece by Riordan, who edited the volume. Carlos Hernandez kicks things off with an exuberant romp as characters Sal and Gabi chase a wayward, unicorn-riding classmate through alternate worlds, in the process linking to other tales. Elsewhere, Kwame Mbali's Gum Baby takes center stage, battling a ghost capable of erasing Black history; Tehlor Kay Mejia's Paola Santiago risks everything to help her ailing pet chupacabra; and Yoon Ha Lee's space-faring fox spirit Min embarks upon a new adventure when she and her ghost brother are sent to spy school. As companion pieces to existing series that nevertheless remain accessible for newcomers, these stories both expand each world and offer readers a full sampling of the imprint's versatility. With an inclusive range of contributors drawing upon their respective heritages and experiences to craft culturally specific, gratifyingly adventurous tales, there's a little something for everyone here, like a world tour of wonder and excitement. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Nancy Gallt, Gallt & Zacker Literary. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Connection Rick Riordan and nine other award-winning multicultural authors contribute to this short story collection, the latest book in the Rick Riordan Presents imprint of Disney Publishing. In this particular collection, all but one of the myth-based heroes has appeared in previous books published under the imprint. Each story is a fast-paced adventure set in a mythical universe that focuses on characters and storylines gleaned from folk stories and literature. Whether it's a cave monster on an unknown island or a ghost trying to change history, this collection will appeal to any middle grade reader who loves fantasy. Each simply-told story has a similar tone with contemporary, believable dialogue and features action as the focal point. Fans of the authors' works will be delighted to read a new adventure about their favorite heroes and hopefully will be inspired to read books by the other authors included in the collection. The short chapters are perfect for classroom read-alouds. Barbara S. Zinkovich, Library Media Specialist, Greenville County Schools, Greenville, South Carolina Highly Recommended Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8--Ten Rick Riordan Presents authors, including Riordan himself, share myths from Korean, Mexican, Native American, Cuban, Indian, and Mesopotamian cultures, among others. The collection is cohesive, with common threads of adventure and kid-friendly humor. Most of the stories are set in the present; only two myths have historic/otherworldly settings: Riordan's Irish yarn of mythical warrior Fionn mac Cumhaill and Ha Lee's space-based tale "The Initiation." Some authors use their myths as vehicles for themes such as cultural pride (Rebecca Roanhorse's "The Demon Drum"), Black history (Kwame Mbali's "The Gum Baby Files"), and immigration (Sarwat Chadda's "The Loneliest Demon"). Readers can reunite with Sal and Gabi in Carlos Hernandez's "Calamity Juice" and adventure with Aru's sisters in Roshani Chokshi's "Beware the Grove of True Love." Most offerings are told in first person, and readers may find it difficult to quickly identify the hero, setting, and premise without careful reading. Many myths also assume prior knowledge of the authors' other stories and, to avoid confusion, should be read by series fans. While some can be enjoyed as stand-alone tales, other entries are aimed at readers who have read Rick Riordan Presents stories and want more from the "Multiverse Mansion" of beloved characters and authors. VERDICT An entertaining collection recommended for libraries that own other Rick Riordan Presents titles.--Caitlin Augusta, Stratford Lib. Assoc., CT Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2325374 Across the Desert (Prebound)
written by Dusti Bowling

Twelve-year-old Jolene spends every day she can at the library watching her favorite livestream: The Desert Aviator, where twelve-year-old "Addie Earhart" shares her adventures flying an ultralight plane over the desert. While watching this daring girl fly through the sky, Jolene can dream of what it would be like to fly with her, far away from her own troubled home life where her mother struggles with a narcotic addiction. 978-1-5364-7940-9 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 336 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In downtown Phoenix, Jolene, 12 and cued white, is watching her favorite livestream. Hosted by her virtual friend Addie Earhart, also white, who lives more than 100 miles away and with whom Jolene exchanges direct messages, the young explorer's show helps Jolene escape from her own reality. A couple of years ago, Jolene and her mother were in a car accident that has left the latter with an Oxycodone addiction; the resulting home situation leaves Jolene isolated and hungry ("My life is so filled with If I had that it sometimes feels like I'm drowning in them"). But then Jolene is the sole witness to Addie's ultralight-trike crash. Capturing friendship history and mutual loss through the girls' messages, Bowling (The Canyon's Edge) immerses readers into Jolene's small world, and how it slowly opens as she follows her own path, fighting against her own PTSD "car-crash feeling" and the discouragement of others, to rescue Addie and perhaps herself. Bowling's passion for the desert and its inhabitants; as well as a personal understanding of children of adults with addictions; is clear and powerful in this tense, poignant story about the essential nature of friendship and life's unexpected possibilities. Back matter features an author's note. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Twelve-year-old Jolene is used to taking care of herself. Ever since a car accident severely injured her mother and caused her slide into opioid addiction, Jolene is alternately upset with and fiercely protective of her, despite their descent into poverty and occasional homelessness. She takes refuge from the Phoenix heat in the library each day, where she reserves travel books, draws maps, researches remarkable female pioneers, and follows livestreamer Addie Earhart's aerial adventures. Addie is grieving the loss of her father and flying their ultralight plane alone in the desert without her mother's knowledge, and the lonely pair strike up a connection. When Addie crash lands and the impact cuts off the feed, Jolene can't get anyone to go search for her. She has a pretty good idea of where Addie might be, and, realizing she's the only one who knows about the accident, scrounges meager supplies and sets out by bus to find her. Luckily for Jolene, she meets 17-year-old Marty on her journey, and the two end up searching for Addie together. Jolene's voice is instantly compelling, making suspending disbelief at the unique and dangerous scenario quite easy. The tension ratchets up insidiously as the desert heat rises and time seems to keep running out. Alongside the budding friendships, the depiction of parental addiction is utterly realistic and heartbreaking. VERDICT The book's dedication, "For you, the child of an addict, I see you," says it all. A first purchase.—Brenda Kahn, Tenakill M.S., Closter, NJ

#2325378 I Must Betray You (Prebound)

written by Ruta Sepetys

Romania, 1989. Communist regimes are crumbling across Europe. Seventeen-year-old Cristian Florescu dreams of becoming a writer, but Romanians aren't free to dream; they are bound by rules and force. Amidst the tyrannical dictatorship of Nicolae Ceausescu in a country governed by isolation and fear, Cristian is blackmailed by the secret police to become an informer. He's left with only two choices: betray everyone and everything he loves—or use his position to creatively undermine the most notoriously evil dictator in Eastern Europe.

978-1-5364-7944-7 Penguin Young Readers Group ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.
Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile HL 500

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$24.95

Reviews by: Book Page Romania 1989: Nicolae Ceau?escu, Romania's longtime leader, has told the world that Romania is a land of bounty, and the world believes him. But Cristian Florescu, who lives with his parents, sister and grandfather in Romania's capital city, Bucharest, knows the truth. Gray, lifeless buildings line the streets, and food scarcity, unreliable electricity and constant paranoia are part of daily life under Ceau?escu's regime. Cristian is a high school student who dreams of becoming a writer, but the Securitate, Ceau?escu's secret police, have other plans for him. Called to the principal's office one day, Cristian is greeted by an imposing member of the Secu. Under threat of blackmail, Cristian agrees to become an informant and to report on the American diplomat whose apartment his mother cleans. As Cristian begins his double life, he starts to doubt everyone around him, even his closest friends and family. Glimpses of the world outside Romania stir feelings of confusion and curiosity and leave Cristian reeling as he tries to make sense of the contradictory truths he is uncovering about his country. All the while, Romania rushes toward revolution. Part espionage thriller and part bildungsroman, Ruta Sepetys' fifth novel, Reviews by: Booklist Grades 8-11 Starred Review Sepetys (The Fountains of Silence, 2019) once again masterfully portrays a dark, forgotten corner of history: Bucharest, Romania, winter 1989. For nearly 25 years, Romania's communist dictator Nicolae Ceau?escu and his wife, Heroine Mother Elena, perpetrated unspeakable human-rights abuses on their people. By focusing on one voice, 17-year-old Cristian Florescu, Sepetys amplifies the isolation, fear, and uncertainty experienced during the final months of Ceau?escu's regime. Cristian shares a tiny apartment with his parents, older sister, Cici, and beloved, rebellious grandfather, Bunu. They speak in whispers and spend hours in line for cooking oil or a single onion. Cristian writes in a journal he hides under the floorboards and dreams of kissing his beautiful classmate, Liliana. When a dollar bill appears in his stamp collection, the secret police use it as leverage to force him to inform on a U.S. diplomat. Cristian's short, almost breathless first-person chapters are interspersed with chilling interview reports by his assigned Securitate agent. Cristian, Liliana, and their friend Luca join the final uprising, from University Square to notorious Jilava prison. The worst tortures take place offstage, but beatings, mental torment, and near starvation do not. Suspenseful twists continue to the very end, when Cristian's betrayer is revealed. The back matter, too, is fascinating; it encompasses archival photographs, an author's note, an extensive source list, and a description of the research process and several in-person interviews. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Grieving for her mother's death, twelve-year-old Kela has pushed away her father, her artistic aspirations, and her connections to vibrant life on the fictional Caribbean island of St. Rita. When she finds a box containing an old, beautiful comb, its owner, an ancient mermaid named Ophidia, is desperate to get it back: it's the soul cage in which she treasures the stolen soul that keeps her young. Ophidia offers Kela a wish in exchange for the comb, but Kela's wish that her mother be restored to life has unforeseen consequences, and human interference keeps preventing her from returning the comb as promised, leading to potential disaster for the whole island. Kela's primary narration allows for a harmonious blend of contemporary island life and Afro-Caribbean lore, while chapters focusing on Ophidia draw on elements of Andersen's "The Little Mermaid." The third-person narration of the interspersed sections echoes a rhythmic traditional call-and-response that links the teller and the listener ("I say Crick, you say Crack. Crick. Crack. This is a story. COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Cristian has grown up under the dictatorship of Ceausescu in Communist Romania. Now it's October 1989, and he's conditioned to life in his family's cramped apartment; to queuing for meagre, awful food; and to whispering indoors to avoid the surveillance of the brutal secret police, the Securitate. Then a Securitate agent blackmails him into becoming an informant. The agent has the power to destroy his future and family, so what can Cristian do? At the cost of trust, friendship, and romance, he must play along -- at least until he joins the thousands of Romanians who rise up to overthrow Ceausescu and the Securitate. Sepetys (Between Shades of Gray, rev. 5/11; The Fountains of Silence, rev. 9/19) paints a nuanced picture of the effects of the deprivation, anxiety, and fear created and upheld by Ceausescu's tyrannical rule. In quick, economical language, she provides historical detail and shows readers a context in which one contraband can of Coke can result in a police report, but also one in which the courage and solidarity of youth can change a country's oppressive regime. Back matter includes photos, an author's note with historical background, and a note on research and sources. (Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Cristian has grown up under the dictatorship of Ceausescu in Communist Romania. Now it's October 1989, and he's conditioned to life in his family's cramped apartment; to queuing for meagre, awful food; and to whispering indoors to avoid the surveillance of the brutal secret police, the Securitate. Then a Securitate agent blackmails him into becoming an informant. The agent has the power to destroy his future and family, so what can Cristian do? At the cost of trust, friendship, and romance, he must play along -- at least until he joins the thousands of Romanians who rise up to overthrow Ceausescu and the Securitate. Sepetys (Between Shades of Gray, rev. 5/11; The Fountains of Silence, rev. 9/19) paints a nuanced picture of the effects of the deprivation, anxiety, and fear created and upheld by Ceausescu's tyrannical rule. In quick, economical language, she provides historical detail and shows readers a context in which one contraband can of Coke can result in a police report, but also one in which the courage and solidarity of youth can change a country's oppressive regime. Back matter includes photos, an author's note with historical background, and a note on research and sources. Deirdre F. Baker (Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A rare look at the youth-led rebellion that toppled Romania's Ceau?escu. Seventeen-year-old Cristian Florescu, with his spiky hair, love of poetry and English, and crush on Liliana Pavel, is as much of a rebel as it's possible to be in Bucharest, Romania, in 1989. Communist dictator Nicolae Ceau?escu has been in power for 24 years, and most Romanians live in poverty, exporting what they produce to unknowingly fund Ceau?escu's obscenely extravagant lifestyle. Wild dogs attack children in the streets, and secret agents are everywhere. When an agent confronts Cristian with evidence of treason--a single dollar bill tucked inside his notebook--and also offers medicine for Bunu, his sick grandfather, Cristian agrees to spy on the American diplomat family whose son he's become friendly with. But as young Romanians gradually become aware that other countries have gained freedom from communism, they rise up in an unconquerable wave. Sepetys brilliantly blends a staggering amount of research with heart, craft, and insight in a way very few writers can. Told from Cristian's point of view, intercut by secret police memos and Cristian's own poetry, the novel crackles with energy; Cristian and his friends join the groundswell of young Romanians, combining pragmatism, subterfuge, hope, and daring. While the story ends with joy on Christmas Day, the epilogue recounts the betrayals and losses that follow. The last line will leave readers gasping. Compulsively readable and brilliant. (maps, photos, author's note, research notes, sources) (Historical fiction. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Sepetys (The Fountains of Silence) unveils the culture of constant surveillance in communist Romania through an ominously suspenseful historical novel set at the brink of revolution. Under the corrupt authoritarian Ceaus'escu's tenure in 1989 Bucharest, canny aspiring writer Cristian Florescu, 17, keeps his true observations secret as he studies English and jots down illegal thoughts, such as jokes and notes from a contraband travel guide, in a notebook. When an agent of the secret police blackmails him for accepting a dollar of foreign currency from the son of his mother's U.S. diplomat client, and promises life-saving medication for his grandfather, Cristian is forced to inform on his loved ones. Tensions intensify as the teen suspects everyone close to him for the betrayal that led to his blackmail, including best friend Luca, crush Liliana, and even his own family (all characters cue as white), and wrestles with how to use his new position to resist authority. As the betrayals' nuances become clear via interspersed intelligence reports, Cristian's tense first-person narrative foregrounds stark historical realities (families keep an inventory of American cigarettes as black market currency, police ruthlessly beat protesters), unflinchingly confronting deprivations and cruelty while balancing them with perseverance and hope as Romania hurtles toward political change. Back matter includes an author's note. Ages 12: up. Agent: Steven Malk, Writers House. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal "Sepetys's latest book maintains the caliber readers have come to expect from an author whose focus on hidden histories has made her a YA powerhouse of historical -fiction...Romania blossoms under Sepetys's attention to detail...Mysterious as it is thrilling, the book's short chapters create an atmosphere of impending danger leading to a historical event in Eastern Europe that may be unknown to many yet is necessary to be told...Sepetys is a formidable writer, and her stories declare the need to write about global issues of social injustice. For that reason and her attention to detail, this is a must-read."

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness escu realizes that "a lie is like a snowball. It rolls, becomes bigger, heavier, and eventually, it's difficult to lift." Cristian is attempting to carry a lie that has the power to destroy lives and, as he'll soon discover, he isn't the only one. Ruta Sepetys (The Fountains of Silence) delves into the dark world of 1989 Communist Romania, passionately telling the harrowing story of Cristian and a nation near its reaking point. Cristian is a typical teenager with aspirations (he dreams of being a writer) and a secret crush--if only he could happen upon Liliana Pavel, then he could walk her home. But the rest of life isn't typical for him or for other Romanians. They have very little to eat, have access to electricity and water only sporadically, must stand in long lines for everything, and spies lurk everywhere. The informers are just waiting for an opportunity to catch fellow citizens unfaithful to despot Nicolae Ceausescu. But when Cristian is blackmailed into spying, he decides it's time for the world to know what's happening in his country. Sepetys keeps readers riveted to this vivid, heartbreaking and compelling novel, locked into every meticulously researched detail. I Must Betray You demands a full investment from its audience--through poetic writing, sympathetic characters, revolutionary plot and pacing, it grips the heart and soul and leaves one breathless. COPYRIGHT(2022) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Quantity Unit Price

#2327162 Erik vs. Everything (Prebound)

1

$20.95

written by Christina Uss

Meet Erik Sheepflattener. Each member of his modern-day Viking-heritage family has a motto to live by. His parents have Family and Pride. His sisters have Conquer and Win. His grandfather has Turnip. But Erik is developing a motto he can truly believe in: Avoid Stuff. Mostly, Erik's fierce family ignores or discounts him, especially when he tries to say no.

978-1-5364-7971-3 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 8.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5 Starred Review Nine-year-old Erik Sheepflattener isn't exactly panphobic, but he is terrified of a lot of things from sports to squirrels--not, you would think, a good fit in a clan that has so proudly carried its Viking ethos into the present day that the adults tattoo inspirational runes like TROUNCE on their arms. While his one teenage sister, Allyson, leads a champion cheerleading squad ("Two, four, six, eight! Who do we eviscerate?"), her axe-wielding twin Brunhilde has firmly devoted herself to "helping" Erik face his fears as her newest "Let's Conquer This" project. Brunhilde turns out to be a canny strategist (it doesn't hurt that she's using Sun Tzu's The Art of War as a guide) and, in this funny and perceptive tale, proves that she knows just when to push and when to let her timorous little brother take his own hesitant steps. Despite being so on edge that he screams every time the telephone rings, Erik's not a total wimp, as he shows by pitching in to, for instance, help tend to a trio of newborn cousins. His hero's journey climaxes in a mountain biking event aptly dubbed (he discovers after signing up) "Race Down Bonebreaker Hill," and readers will enjoy cheering him on as much as they will delight in the antics of his loving, Wagnerian extended family. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Nine-year-old Erik Sheepflattener is a descendant of Vikings. Family members sport rune tattoos and keep a weapons closet full of daggers, clubs, and armor. His older sister Brunhilde wields a mean battle-axe and says things like "by Valhalla's rafters, I am hungry"; her twin, Allyson, though more into pompoms and cheerleading, is equally strong and fierce. Many a meal in the Sheepflattener household consists of "fish hunks, fish chunks, fish lumps, and mutton." Erik, however, doesn't fit in. He's scared of everything: "School buses. Running squirrels. Crouching squirrels. Squirrels in trees. Squirrels under beds...Every kind of ball. Having things thrown at you. Having things yelled at you." He hides under furniture and sleeps under the bed. So when the Sheepflattener siblings are shipped off from Connecticut to Minnesota to assist Uncle Bjorn and Aunt Hilda with their new triplets, Erik dreads the trip. But Brunhilde channels her Viking spirit into helping Erik conquer his fears, especially his sciurophobia (fear of squirrels). Real progress comes when Erik joins a mountain biking team and succeeds in finishing a monster race, even if he does cross the finish line toting his bike. The long cycling scene will appeal to all who love well-told sports action. Once again, Uss (The Adventures of a Girl Called Bicycle, rev. 7/18; The Colossus of Roads, rev. 7/20) delivers a story carried by well-developed characters, plenty of dialogue, and humor. (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The Sheepflattener clan fearlessly follow ancestral Viking traditions set down in the Lore, except for Erik, 9, whose default response to challenges and invitations is to invoke his life philosophy, "AVOID STUFF." Sent to help babysit his triplet cousins in Minnesota, Erik's relieved to escape piano lessons with Mrs. Loathcraft but nervous when the fiercer of his two older sisters, ax-wielding Brunhilde, decides to accompany him. Like his parents, the hearty, outdoors-fancying Minnesota Vikings prove deaf to Erik's fears. Forced to fish with his bare hands, he's mauled by a large pike; then Mr. Nubbins, the family pet, activates Erik's squirrel phobia. Erik's meltdowns inspire Brunhilde to help him tackle his fears head-on. Determining their scope, she studies strategies to conquer them, like exposure therapy, and implements breathing exercises, supplementing the Lore's wisdom with the library's The Big Book of Fear and Sun Tzu's The Art of War. Seeking a comprehensive picture of Erik's dizzying array of phobias, Brunhilde constructs an ingenious diorama, using her mapmaking skills and Lego bricks. As the project progresses, Erik finds himself drawn into a multiage biking club soon to race Bonebreaker Hill. Unable to empathize with Erik's anxieties, Brunhilde recognizes they must be vanquished; conquering is a concept the Scandinavian-ancestry-worshipping, rune-tattooed Sheepflatteners embrace. Fond of aggressive sports and a turnip-heavy diet, short on nuance, long on family loyalty, they're portrayed with sly, affectionate humor. Erik's anxieties are presented lightly but sensitively. A quirky delight. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Much to the consternation of his boisterous white Connecticut family, which adheres to a collection of Viking family advice known as "the Lore," nine-year-old Erik Sheepflattener's motto is "AVOID STUFF. Or maybe just the word NO." Though the rest of the Sheepflatteners don't seem to experience fear, Erik worries about everything from piano lessons to team sports to the possibility of squirrels under his bed. While spending the summer with rambunctious cousins in Minnesota, Erik's strong-willed older sister Brunhilde; who loves to quote Churchill's wartime speeches and channels "her ancestral Viking spirit" ; helps Erik conquer his fears by naming and testing each one. Anxious Erik is naturally unenthusiastic about this plan, especially the possibility of utilizing exposure therapy, but has trouble standing up for himself. As the tests proceed, however (including a mountain bike race down Bonebreaker Hill), he finds value in understanding his specific fears and even learns coping skills, such as deep breathing. This riotous second novel by Uss (The Adventures of a Girl Called Bicycle), interlaced with quotes from the Lore and a toddler's edition of The Art of War, overflows with rollicking scenes of Viking-inspired mayhem and droll dialogue without forgoing respect for the difficulties wrought by Erik's anxiety. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ammi-Joan Paquette, Erin Murphy Literary. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Fourth grader Erik Sheepflattener comes from a big, tough, and very brave family rooted in Viking traditions. Erik does not fit in physically or characteristically with his family; as a matter of fact, he is afraid of almost everything. Erik fears school, piano lessons, baseball practice, and squirrels—he is even afraid to talk about his fears. Erik would rather stay home and read his comic books rather than try anything that could cause him embarrassment or harm. This all changes when Erik and his sisters visit extended family in Minnesota to help with toddler triplets. Erik reluctantly joins the Lake Park All-Stars Mountain Bike Team and begins training for a race down Bonebreaker Hill. With the help of his sister Brunhilde and her library copy of The Art of War, Erik learns that facing fears can help make the scary things a bit less scary. Readers follow Erik as he learns the skills he needs to fall down and not get hurt. This story has a fun cast of characters, all with their own strengths and personality quirks. The book chapters all begin with familiar proverbs that stem from Norse and Danish traditions, and are explained at the end of the story in the "Sources for Quotations" section. This story takes family lore and traditions and blends them with modern tips and tricks to tackle life. It is a fun, uplifting, and often laugh-out-loud story. Erik's family is cued as white. VERDICT A great addition to any elementary and even middle school library with a lesson on determination, taking risks, and family values.—Christina Pesiri, Island Trees H.S., Levittown, NY

#2331796 Pony (Prebound)
written by R. J. Palacio

A new American classic about a boy on a quest to find his father, guided by a ghost and a mysterious pony. An enthralling, poignant story of love, friendship, perseverance, and the invisible bonds that connect us, set against the American frontier. This is not Wonder but an entirely new story/new genre from beloved author. 978-1-5364-8077-1 Knopf Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 740

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$20.95

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine with his father, a bootmaker and photographer, outside Boneville, Ohio, in 1860. His mother died when he was born, but he does have another companion, a ghost named Mittenwool. When three armed riders show up and haul Pa away, claiming he is the infamous counterfeiter Mac Boat, Silas is lonely and lost, but when one of the men's horses returns -- a black horse with a bone-white face -- Silas determines to go after his father. Though Silas (well-versed in the classics) tries out names for the horse -- Bucephalus, Gringolet, Perceval -- the horse remains "Pony." Their journey after Pa is not to be taken lightly, as Mittenwool warns, and it involves traversing the ancient Woods, where they are engulfed by tangled branches and whispers and moans and air thick with words and ghosts (which Silas has the ability to see). Daguerreotypes begin each chapter, lending period appeal as well as extending the thematic thread of photography and counterfeiting. It becomes a hero's journey, on which Silas feels like Telemachus, a boy in search of his lost father. Classical allusions lend depth to Palacio's elegantly written tale. Telling the story from a perspective of years later allows for philosophical considerations, as Silas realizes "the invisible threads" that have bound him to his mother from the beginning. This is Palacio's first novel that doesn't involve characters from Wonder (2012), but it involves plenty of wonder, in rich and haunting ways. An informative and personal author's note is appended. Dean Schneider November/December 2021 p.111(c) Copyright 2021. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When he's struck by lightning in front of an oak tree; an event that doesn't connect much with the rest of the story; Silas Bird, the introspective 12-year-old at the center of this meandering 1860 Ohio-set adventure, has the tree's image permanently imprinted on his back. Silas lives with his inventive but reclusive father, a Scottish bootmaker and photographic scientist, as well as a protective teenage ghost named Mittenwool, until three men on horseback arrive at the family's remote cabin to seize Silas's father. When the kidnappers' white-faced Arabian pony appears a few hours later, Silas is sure his father sent it, and rides off to find him, with Mittenwool reluctantly in tow. In the time-warped Woods, he meets a U.S. marshal tracking three outlaws; Silas, certain that they are the same people who took his father, joins him, en route narrating stories of his family's history and encountering ghosts whom only he can see. Though Silas's "I have made my peace with everything" perspective belies his age, Palacio's cued-white characters are simultaneously crusty and charming in their altruistic bravado, and the blend of rambling western, scientific, and paranormal elements mixed with lingering questions about Silas's father's past will appeal to many as the trio underscores how even unlikely friendships can make for strong bonds. Images made from daguerreotypes serve as chapter heads. Ages 10: up. (Sept.)

#2331862 Better with Butter (Prebound)
written by Victoria Pontek

Twelve-year-old Marvel is afraid of absolutely everything -- amusement park rides, food poisoning, earthquakes, and that big island of plastic floating through the ocean. She also obsesses about smaller worries like making friends, getting called on by the teacher, and walking home alone. 978-1-5364-8079-5 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 320 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 700

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this heartwarming novel set in Northern California, Piontek (The Spirit of Cattail County) conveys the calming and strengthening power of connecting with an animal. Diagnosed with a generalized anxiety disorder, self-proclaimed coward Marvel McKenna views her worries as armor that helps her prepare; "It takes a lot of work to be afraid of everything." When she's not dwelling on global problems, the implied-white sixth grader's mind is filled with worries about making friends, taking tests, and public speaking; including an upcoming presentation in front of the whole school. But after rehearsal for the event makes her freeze on stage, Marvel pushes her fear aside to rescue a baby fainting goat from a group of eighth graders intent on startling it. Marvel's parents agree that she can keep the goat, dubbed Butter, until the owner is found. When she is with the animal, Marvel's anxiety subsides and, for the first time, she feels confident. As a result, Marvel would like Butter to serve as an emotional service animal at school; before that can happen, though, her intimidating principal requires that Butter pass a difficult obedience test. Marvel's honest first-person voice sheds light on an experience of living with chronic anxiety, conveying conflicts and progress with clear internal detail. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Laura Rennert, Andrea Brown Literary. (July)

#2331875 Honestly Elliott (Prebound)
written by Gillian McDunn

Elliott has never had many friends, and he's sure where he fits into his own family, especially since his newly remarried dad and stepmom are expecting a baby. When he's paired with the super-popular Maribel for a school-wide business project, Elliott is a little nervous that they won't see eye to eye. But Maribel is also looking for a new way to show others her true self, and sometimes the least likely friends have the most in common...

978-1-5364-8082-5 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review Elliott, who has ADHD, loves cooking, and he's really good at it. When he's creating special dishes, Elliott has no trouble focusing on the tasks at hand, but when it comes to schoolwork and chores, he's easily distracted. In fact, he nearly failed the first semester of sixth grade. His one good friend left town a year ago. His parents are divorced, and his father has remarried. Now that his stepmother is pregnant, Elliott fears that Dad may be shifting away from him and toward his new family. Paired with smart, popular Maribel for a group project, Elliott befriends her. He's surprised to discover that even she has trouble dealing with a condition (celiac disease) that even her friends don't really try to understand. McDunn has a talent for creating sympathetic characters who don't always communicate well with each other. Noting that his father is "trying to squeeze in all the father-son stuff he can before the new baby comes," Elliott's perceptive first-person narrative is frank up to a point, though for dramatic effect, McDunn holds back one revelation for quite a while. This well-paced, heartfelt chapter book offers a lovable main character, a lively supporting cast, and a satisfying conclusion. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine With his ADHD, Elliott feels most at home in the kitchen -- the one place where he isn't "extra-disorganized" and forgetful; the place he feels focused, confident, and decisive. But which kitchen? After his parents' divorce, Elliott and his mother move into "a cozy jumble" of a house with plants everywhere. At his dad and stepmom Kate's house, there are a lot of rules and everything matches. How do you find your true self when your life seems so divided? When super-smart and popular Maribel Martinez agrees to be Elliott's partner for a middle-school group project in Ms. Choi's Advisory period (involving baking gluten-free pies), Elliott knows "this is either the best thing that's ever happened to me or the worst thing that's ever happened to me." But, as it turns out, Maribel is looking for her true self, too, which she has realized is not part of the popular group. They make an odd duo; but through the pie project Elliott comes to realize how lucky he is to have a whole big pie of a community that includes Mom, Dad, Kate, new baby Jonah, Maribel, and other friends, too. This is a slice-of-pie, er, life novel with all the right ingredients for a satisfying read. Dean Schneider(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A sixth grader's ADHD exacerbates the loss of his best friend, stress of entering a new school, fear of disappointing his father, and anxiety over a new sibling. "Always-late, homework-forgetting, not-many-friends, extra-disorganized" Elliott lives with his positive, supportive mother in their comfortable, welcoming home but spends weekends with his focused, organized father and stepmother in their perfectly redecorated house. Since the recent departure of his best friend, Elliott's ADHD has caused him to nearly fail the first semester of middle school, overreact to his stepmother's pregnancy, upset his father with "The Incident," and start seeing a therapist. Elliott, however, loves cooking, an activity during which he's focused, confident, decisive, and calm. Rejected by the kids he eats lunch with when it's time to work together on a group project to develop and implement a business plan, Elliott unexpectedly ends up paired with Maribel, the smartest girl in class. When Maribel reveals she has celiac disease and Elliott explains his ADHD, they develop a delicious, gluten-free pie recipe--and their friendship blooms. Over time, Elliott applies his culinary skills, opens up about his fears, bonds with his stepmother, and connects with his father. In a droll, engaging, self-effacing, and disarmingly open voice, Elliott narrates his story, providing realistic, firsthand insights into living with ADHD. Elliott and his family read as White; Maribel is cued as Latinx, and names signal ethnic diversity in the supporting cast. A refreshingly honest exploration of family and friendship. (recipes) (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly nds for interrupting and becoming distracted, aspiring chef Elliott, who is white and has ADHD, partners with pe ectionistic schoolmate Maribel, cued as Latinx, who has celiac disease, to establish a gluten-free pie business for a final school project. Upping he stakes is Elliott's hope of earning enough money selling pies during the year-end festival to reimburse his father for a window broken during The incident; something Elliott refuses to discuss even with his therapist; which he'd otherwise have to fund from the savings he's painstakingly set aside to attend summer cooking camp. The sixth graders' initially rocky partnership gives way to camaraderie and trust as they develop their recipe for a delicious, gluten-friendly product that proves their critics wrong. Interjecting footnotes that mimic the way Elliott's brain processes information, McDunn (These Unlucky Stars) offers an affirming and nuanced depiction of empathetic and creative Elliott's experience of ADHD, including the way his executive dysfunction can result in disorganization, impulsivity, resistance to change, and low self-worth. Elliott's relationship with his father, from whom he craves acceptance despite his dad's failure to acknowledge Elliott's specific challenges, is particularly inspiring as the two work toward openness and understanding. Ages 8: 11. Agent: Marietta Zacker, Gallt & Zacker Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–7—A novel full of heart, humor, and honesty. Elliott is your typical kid dealing with his parents' divorce, his best friend moving away, a baby brother being born, not fitting in at his new school, nearly failing sixth grade—and on top of it all, Attention Deficient Hyperactivity Disorder. His passion for cooking drives him to want to do better so he can go to an awesome cooking camp in the summer. When his big school project comes up, he sees it as an opportunity to pay for camp and prove to his dad that cooking is a worthwhile endeavor. But when Elliott's so-called friends refuse to work with him, he ends up making an unexpected ally and convincing her that his cooking skills can get her an A. Elliot is an instantly lovable character, and readers will be hooked from the very first chapter. McDunn provides an honest look into ADHD and normalizes male characters exploring their feelings through therapy, which is a refreshing take on navigating a complicated dad-son relationship. Middle graders will be able to see themselves as Elliot through his various interests and relationships. Those with ADHD may appreciate this reflective text as a glimpse inside the brain of a middle schooler with ADHD. VERDICT This is a must-have for any library servicing middle grade readers; Elliot's struggles are commonplace, and his story is told from a place of warmth and humor, which makes those realities a little less painful and the lessons included easier to digest.—Erin Decker

#2332178 Eden's Everdark (Prebound)

written by Karen Strong

Still grieving the loss of her mother, Eden visits Safina Island, her ancestral home, as a healing balm. But when she discovers an old sketchbook that belonged to her mother, she's haunted by the images she sees drawn there. Days later, exploring the island alone, Eden follows a black cat through a rift in the bright day. She stumbles into Everdark, a parallel world where the sun never rises, where spirits linger between death and the afterlife, and where everything from her mother's drawings is all too real—especially the Witch of Everdark, who wants to make Eden her eternal daughter.

978-1-5364-8109-9 Simon & Schuster Books For Young Readers ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 750

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Twelve-year-old Eden knows that visiting Safina Island and finally meeting all her mother's family will be painful, but she is also hoping it will help her heal from her mother's recent death. Languid heat, southern coastal island wildness, and perfect drop biscuits are truly balms for her grief but being immediately surrounded by relatives she has never met is a bit overwhelming. She would give anything to get back to them, however, when the distressing images in a journal she found from her mother turn out to be describing a real, cursed parallel world, into which Eden accidentally steps and finds herself trapped. Drawing on her family's ancestral powers will help, as well as a couple of key alliances, but ultimately success comes down to Eden's grit and fierce hold on life. The other spirits in Everdark are all brilliantly developed, each a poignant mix of grief, loneliness, and numbness formed over decades of being in this dark place under the twisted watch of the Witch of Everdark. Even the witch, who calls herself Mother Mary and proclaims herself the loving parent of her ghost daughters, was damaged in life and is seeking impossible remedies for it in death. The island itself reflects the complex metaphorical intersection of Everdark and Safina—built out of the tortured roots of ancestors who were enslaved and then slowly reclaimed and brought into light. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A grieving girl accidentally slips into an alternate magical world inhabited by eerie, mystical creatures from her dead mother's sketchbook. Twelve-year-old Eden is mourning the loss of her mother when she and her father make their first visit to Safina Island, off the coast of Georgia, to meet her maternal relatives. Eden's connection to them is tenuous, mostly consisting of the birthday cards containing pressed flowers sent by her great-aunt; Eden's mother left the island when she was 12 following a bad accident, and she never wanted to return. Eden and her dad are going to participate in the annual celebration honoring the family's purchase of half the island after they received their freedom from slavery. While staying in her mother's childhood room, Eden looks through old boxes in the closet and finds, among the many sketchbooks containing nature drawings, one filled with creepy and terrifying images of a land called Everdark. Eden starts traveling there in her dreams until one day, while following a black cat around the island, she enters a portal, becomes trapped in this world, and must use her own hidden magic to find a way out. The complex narrative portrays multifaceted characters as it weaves together history, magic, and grief. Readers will enjoy the strong pacing along with learning about the island's well-described mythology and root magic. Most characters are Black. A textured, suspenseful story that traverses an island's timeline and a family's heritage. (Paranormal. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Following her botanist mother's death, 12-year-old Eden Gardener travels with her father to her mother's birthplace, which her mom mysteriously left following a grave injury at age 12. On Safina Island, off the coast of Georgia, Eden meets her extended maternal relations; descendants of the formerly enslaved inhabitants who've owned the north side of the island since the Civil War's end; as they prepare to celebrate the anniversary of purchasing the land. She encounters, too, a bevy of frightening creatures in her mother's childhood sketchbook, including a hauntingly beautiful witch in a spirit world known as Everdark. After passing into Everdark through a dark portal, Eden learns that the Witch of Everdark wants to take Eden as her own daughter; it will require all of Eden's wits, and the magic she inherited from her mother, to escape. Strong (Just South of Home) sets an impeccable scene, imbuing Safina Island with a turbulent history and fully fleshed culture that stands in stark relief to Everdark's opulence. Though interactions can have an RPG feel, undercutting character connection, Strong portrays the island's mythos, and Everdark's extraordinary dangers, to bone-chilling perfection. Ages: 8: 12. Agent: Patrice Caldwell, New Leaf Literary & Media. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--After Eden's mother dies, she travels with her father to Safina Island, GA, to meet her mother's family. Eden's ancestors were enslaved people from the Civil War era who cultivated cotton and sugar cane. After the war, the Gardner family stayed for generations, but Eden and her family have never visited. Eden's mother left the island when she was Eden's age, 12, never to return, though she carried forth the gardening gene, becoming a botanist and professor. When Eden finds her mother's childhood sketchbooks containing island flowers, marshland plants, and animals, she is intrigued. One sketchbook looks to be a dark mirror of Safina Island, with a monster-like dog, a black cat lurking, and stormy oceans and dark skies. Children drawn have deep indigo skin with tiny silver stars, and mouths frozen into eternal screams. A woman drawn is the "Witch of Everdark," and when Aunt Susanna tells Eden her mother created this spirit world from her dreams, Eden feels pulled to discover the truth behind her own nightmares. Eden finds a path into Everdark and, upon entering, realizes there is no way out, and that the witch wishes to claim her spirit. With stunningly descriptive prose, Strong has created two worlds, both Safina Island and the spirit world that entraps Eden. Eden must face her grief bravely, while holding tight to her family and their roots. VERDICT Darkly suspenseful; both readers of fantasy and those looking for a creepy, ghostly tale will find much to keep them rooted in this electric novel.--Michele Shaw Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2332227 Polter-Ghost Problem (Prebound)

written by Betsy Uhrig

Best friends Aldo, Pen, and Jasper are braced for a boring summer. And equally dull summer journal writing assignments. That is, until they see a slightly transparent boy with a bad haircut appear by the soccer field and then disappear into the woods beyond. The boys follow him and discover the long-abandoned Grauche Orphanage for Orphans, a house in the woods that is most definitely haunted.

978-1-5364-8123-5 Margaret K. McElderry ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 740

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews eerie encounters at a long-abandoned orphanage, making for a peculiar "what we did this summer" school project . Aldo Pfefferkuchen, Pen Q. Blaisewell, and Jasper Yi struggle to find interesting things to include in their collective summer journal until a suspiciously pale boy leads them to a moldering building that once housed an orphanage. The trio should be terrified, but the ghost children--yes, there's a group--need help. It's weird that they appear young since most are the spirits of orphans who had moved away and died at ripe old ages. However, they were recently drawn back and trapped there by a poltergeist. Even stranger, the boys discover that the poltergeist is the toddler ghost of a bitter woman who died at over 100 years of age. A diarist and sufferer of verbal diarrhea, Aldo is the designated typist for their group project. His wit shines through as he faithfully describes his friends' personalities and their wildly funny disagreements and dilemmas. It all makes for a laugh-out-loud, high-action read, complete with shrieking and notes in crayon from a frustrated entity trying to communicate about a mystery involving an inheritance and warped family history. Pen's "Useful Index" appears at the end--a humorous nod to a running joke about his fondness for indexes. Oddities abound, as do astute observations about family dynamics and friendships, especially between the boys. Jasper's surname cues him as Korean American; the other boys are minimally described. A-plus entertainment. (Paranormal. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2327236 All Four Quarters of the Moon (Prebound)

written by Shirley Marr

The night of the Mid-Autumn Festival, making mooncakes with Ah-Ma, was the last time Peijing Guo remembers her life being the same. She is haunted by the magical

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.95

image of a whole egg yolk suspended in the middle like the full moon. Now adapting to their new life in Australia, Peijing thinks everything is going to turn out okay as long as they all have each other, but cracks are starting to appear in the family.

978-1-5364-7992-8 Simon & Schuster Books For Young Readers ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 860

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Starred Review Fans of sisterhood stories are in for a heartfelt treat with this gentle novel centered around family, resilience, and immigration. Two Chinese sisters, 11-year-old Peijing and 5-year-old Biju, find themselves trying to find a new normal after their family relocates from Singapore to Australia for Ba Ba's job. Peijing longs for the familiar, including moon cakes like the ones Ah-Ma would make during the Mid-Autumn Festival back home. But as time goes on, Ah-Ma's memory gets worse and worse, and the family faces a difficult decision. Furthermore, Ma Ma and Ba Ba grapple with adapting to their changing roles. Peijing and Biju also struggle to fit in at their new school and have difficulty with schoolwork due to language challenges. Biju increasingly leans on Peijing for support, who does her best to stay strong for her little sister. Together, they find comfort in Little World, a land made of hand-drawn animals, who are under constant threat of being wiped out by mass extinction. Between each chapter, Chinese mythology presented as a dialogue between the two sisters is beautifully and entertainingly interwoven. Taken from the author's own experiences, the touching characters and relationships in this story will linger with readers for a long time. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books At eleven years old, Peijing Guo is shouldering a lot of responsibility in her traditional Chinese family, serving as a good role model to her younger sister, Biju, while knowing that she'll be caring for Ma Ma and Ba Ba in their old age. With a planned move from Singapore to Australia, however, Peijing is completely out of her element, facing an entirely new set of hardships: acting as an English interpreter for Ma Ma, facing differences in culture and expectations at school, and making sense of Ah Ma's "invisible illness" when she starts to forget her granddaughter's name. Peijing's struggles highlight the nuances of immigration, as she finds her home life and diet to be a frequent source of tension in her new circumstances even as she yearns for the comfort of Chinese traditions and heritage. Interspersed between chapters are Biju's own retellings of myths and fables, offering the sisters a chance to consider elements of Chinese culture as Peijing seeks congruence between the values of what she's been taught and what she learns in Australia. The book closes on a harmonious note, making this an honest, hopeful choice for anyone experiencing extreme cultural differences and needing some reassurance in their new world. NB COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Through tales both familiar and new, two sisters navigate growing up and an international relocation. It is Mid-Autumn Festival time in Singapore, and the Guo family's gathering feels poignant because grandmother Ah Ma, Ma Ma, Ba Ba, and sisters Peijing and Biju are moving to Australia the following day for Ba Ba's new job. As 11-year-old Peijing helps Ah Ma prepare moon cakes, the salted duck egg yolk center symbolizes the moon as the narrative theme interwoven throughout their family's journey during their first year in their new home, through reinterpreted lore and superstitions. When the contents of the sisters' secret Little World--paper-book crafted flora, fauna, landscapes, and a red barn, all housed in a cardboard box--vanish on the morning of their departure, only the paper jade rabbit (a legendary occupant of the moon) is salvaged and with it, the hope of rebuilding their private universe. Contrasting Peijing's anxiety as the eldest child bearing expectations of responsibility, 5-year-old Biju's exuberant, improvisational storytelling centers the sisters' interactions as their lives transform in a new and very different environment. While Peijing finds her voice and makes new friends and Biju shines in the school play, Ah Ma's declining health prompts them to capture memories in the moment. Biju's retold legends are a highlight, showcasing her irreverent humor and demonstrating a self-assured agency that reminds readers of the power of stories' evolution. Subtle contextual clues situate the story in the 1980s. Inventive, ironic retellings frame this folktale-centered family story. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An 11-year-old moving from Singapore to Australia finds normalcy in sisterhood within Marr's (A Glasshouse of Stars) lyrical, Chinese-folktale-twined novel. Finding "the people and the atmosphere and the trees and the space" wildly different in her new home, and trying to fit in at school, Peijing Guo longs for the assurance of established friendships and celebrating the Mid-Autumn Festival with homemade mooncakes, an enduring family custom. Her traditional family is having no easier time adjusting: Ma Ma seldom leaves the house, Ba Ba must take on solo parenting, Ah Ma's failing memory causes concern, and five-year-old Biju depends on her sister now more than ever. Amid these adjustments and others, Peijing and Biju's Little World; a miniature crafted universe of paper animals, natural elements, and a red barn in an instant-noodle box; provides comfort and a physical opportunity for them to rebuild. Gentle, observational prose carries the novel's intentionally paced events, folk tale references, organic character growth, and a heartening message of embracing change and impermanence. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Gemma Cooper, Bent Agency. (July)

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2350280 Life and Crimes of Hoodie Rosen (Prebound)	1	$23.95

written by Isaac Blum

Hoodie Rosen's life isn't that bad. Sure, his entire Orthodox Jewish community has just picked up and moved to the quiet, mostly non-Jewish town of Tregaron, but Hoodie's world hasn't changed that much. The people of Tregaron aren't happy that so many Orthodox Jews are moving in at once, but that's not Hoodie's problem. That is, until he meets and falls for Anna-Marie Diaz-O'Leary—who happens to be the daughter of the obstinate mayor trying to keep Hoodie's community out of the town. And things only get more complicated when Tregaron is struck by a series of antisemitic crimes that quickly escalate to deadly violence.

978-1-5364-8217-1 Philomel Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile 760

Reviews by: Book Page Fifteen-year-old Yehuda "Hoodie" Rosen and his Orthodox Jewish family, along with many members of their community, have recently moved to Tregaron, Pennsylvania, because the cost of living in their previous town became too expensive. When Hoodie meets Anna-Marie Diaz-O'Leary, the daughter of Tregaron's mayor, he's instantly smitten. Yet after he and Anna-Marie are spotted cleaning some up antisemitic graffiti together, both Hoodie's father and rabbi forbid him from seeing her again because she isn't Jewish.

Reviews by: Booklist When 15-year-old Hoodie's Orthodox Jewish family moves to a new town along with other families from their tight-knit community. Sadly, they are not made welcome, for the new town, led by the mayor, Monica Diaz-O'Leary, is rife with antisemitism. So isn't it ironic that Anne-Marie, the beautiful girl Hoodie encounters, should turn out to be the mayor's daughter? No matter that he has transgressed against his religion by (a) looking at her and (b) speaking with her, Hoodie is infatuated. Unfortunately, the rebbe and his father are both furious. Things come to a head when three of his friends are attacked while Hoodie is with Anne-Marie. When this is discovered, he is made a pariah. Blum's novel is well plotted, instructive in its portrayal of Orthodox life, and dramatic in its depiction of two communities' tragic misunderstandings. Though the story skews serious, comic relief is found in Hoodie's first-person narration, which invests the book with some much-needed humor. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Along with a small segment of their ultra-Orthodox community, fifteen-year-old Yehuda "Hoodie" Rosen's family has recently moved from their predominantly Jewish town to another place that is less hospitable. Though the mostly non-Jewish locals, including elected officials, eye them with suspicion, Hoodie develops a friendship with Anna-Marie, daughter of the mayor. Accustomed to an isolated way of life, Hoodie (mis)interprets their relationship as romantic. The novel doesn't shy away from questioning attitudes prevalent in this ultra-Orthodox community, including the view by some people of Hoodie's relationship with Anna-Marie as a betrayal. Meanwhile, the antisemitism in town escalates, ultimately building to a violent extreme. But as serious as the subject matter is, there's humor to be found in Hoodie's narration ("You may have pictured me in your mind. If you're going by grossly exaggerated Jewish stereotypes, then you're spot-on. Mazel tov") and in his misunderstandings of the wider world (see: his first time using a smartphone). A sharply written coming-of-age story whose protagonist, like any teen, is figuring out where he fits in, under circumstances that are thought-provoking and at times heart-wrenching. SHOSHANA FLAX

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Along with a small segment of their ultra-Orthodox community, fifteen-year-old Yehuda "Hoodie" Rosen's family has recently moved from their predominantly Jewish town to another place that is less hospitable. Though the mostly non-Jewish locals, including elected officials, eye them with suspicion, Hoodie develops a friendship with Anna-Marie, daughter of the mayor. Accustomed to an isolated way of life, Hoodie (mis)interprets their relationship as romantic. The novel doesn't shy away from questioning attitudes prevalent in this ultra-Orthodox community, including some members' view of Hoodie's relationship with Anna-Marie as a betrayal. Meanwhile, the antisemitism in town escalates, ultimately building to a violent extreme. But as serious as the subject matter is, there's humor to be found in Hoodie's narration ("You may have pictured me in your mind. If you're going by grossly exaggerated Jewish stereotypes, then you're spot-on. Mazel tov") and in his misunderstandings of the wider world (see: his first time using a smartphone). A sharply written coming-of-age story whose protagonist, like any teen, is figuring out where he fits in, under circumstances that are thought-provoking and at times heart-wrenching. (Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Along with a small segment of their ultra-Orthodox community, fifteen-year-old Yehuda "Hoodie" Rosen's family has recently moved from their predominantly Jewish town to another place that is less hospitable. Though the mostly non-Jewish locals, including elected officials, eye them with suspicion, Hoodie develops a friendship with Anna-Marie, daughter of the mayor. Accustomed to an isolated way of life, Hoodie (mis)interprets their relationship as romantic. The novel doesn't shy away from questioning attitudes prevalent in this ultra-Orthodox community, including some members' view of Hoodie's relationship with Anna-Marie as a betrayal. Meanwhile, the antisemitism in town escalates, ultimately building to a violent extreme. But as serious as the subject matter is, there's humor to be found in Hoodie's narration ("You may have pictured me in your mind. If you're going by grossly exaggerated Jewish stereotypes, then you're spot-on. Mazel tov") and in his misunderstandings of the wider world (see: his first time using a smartphone). A sharply written coming-of-age story whose protagonist, like any teen, is figuring out where he fits in, under circumstances that are thought-provoking and at times heart-wrenching. Shoshana Flax(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In a town seething over an influx of Orthodox Jews, a yeshiva boy falls in love with the mayor's daughter. Yehuda

"Hoodie" Rosen tells us on Page 1 that his horrible crime ruined his life, humiliated his family, and put him in the ICU--but in some ways, he also thought it was pretty funny. Once you get to know this jokester, you'll believe it; his sharp awareness of the ironies of life and language illuminate every page of this first-person narrative. Hoodie, his parents, and his "numerous and various" sisters have just moved to Tregaron, a fictional town (cued as being near Philadelphia) where his father is involved with building a high-rise intended to house many more Orthodox families. The community's outraged opposition to this is spearheaded by the mayor, Monica Diaz-O'Leary, so it's particularly inconvenient that the first love of Hoodie's 15-year-old life is her daughter, Anna-Marie--who seems to like him back. But after the two attempt to remove the swastikas that have been spray-painted on Jewish gravestones, Hoodie is ostracized by his community and harshly punished for consorting with a non-Jew. Then antisemitism explodes in a violent, ripped-from-the-headlines incident. Blum's engrossing debut explains myriad details of Orthodox Jewish faith and includes Hoodie's questioning of them. Through the brilliant character of Zippy, his wise older sister, Hoodie can see the path to a less constricted but still devout way of living. Anna-Marie's surname cues her ethnic background. Funny, smart, moving, courageous, and so timely it almost hurts. (Fiction. 12-adult) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Blum's immersive debut follows Orthodox Jewish 15-year-old Yehuda "Hoodie" Rosen as he wrestles with forbidden first love in his increasingly hostile, mostly non-Jewish town. Hoodie and his large family have recently moved to a fictional Philadelphia suburb, Tregaron, where his father is overseeing construction of an apartment complex dedicated to housing Orthodox families. Mayor Diaz-O'Leary and the town council, however, oppose the plans, intending to "protect Tregaron's character." Despite stern warnings from Hoodie's father and Yeshiva teacher not to spend time with goyim, Hoodie meets and falls for Anna-Marie Diaz-O'Leary, the mayor's daughter, who helps him remove swastikas from Jewish gravestones in a local cemetery. When some of Hoodie's friends are attacked while he's hanging out with Anna-Marie, and he is shunned by Jewish peers as a result, Hoodie, hoping to resolve the conflict, plans a dangerous scheme whose consequences reshape their community. Hoodie's sarcasm and complex relationships capably balance renderings of his solemn inner turmoil and society's external pressures and expectations. Blum tackles themes of acceptance and community via an intricately detailed Orthodox Jewish cast and a steadily building anticipatory atmosphere, which enlivens this impressively drawn story. Hoodie and his family read as white; Anne-Marie is Latinx-cued. Ages 12: up. Agent: Rena Rossner, Deborah Harris Agency. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 8 Up--For Orthodox Jew Hoodie Rosen, the move to a new city has not been all that bad even though the town resents the Jewish people moving into their community and worries about how it changes the status quo. Hoodie's days, though, have stayed pretty much the same--he goes to religious instruction every morning and "regular" school in the afternoon, a school only for members of the Orthodox community. His comfortable existence, only slightly bothered by the conflict in the town, becomes much more difficult when he meets Anna-Marie Diaz-O'Leary, the daughter of the town's mayor who wants the Jewish people gone. He has an instant attraction to Anna-Maria despite a relationship with her being forbidden by his religion. Hoodie's life takes a difficult turn with the defacing of Jewish graves and a vicious anti-Semitic attack in the community. His relationship with Anna-Maria and his actions that offend the Jewish community result in him being ostracized. This unique coming-of-age story addresses issues of faith and action in a manner that has both light-hearted and very serious moments. Hoodie's gentle rebellion against the constraints of his religion and his family will resound with readers of this relatively short novel who find themselves at odds with those closest to them. Adding to the uniqueness of the book are the easily understandable discussions of Jewish Orthodox beliefs. Hoodie, a nicely developed character, has special appeal because of his thoughtful analysis of what he believes and what he wants from his life. VERDICT A great addition to a diverse book collection for any YA library.--Janet Hilbun Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2346763 Ogress and the Orphans (Prebound)

written by Kelly Barnhill

Stone-in-the-Glen, once a lovely town, has fallen on hard times. Fires, floods, and other calamities have caused the people to lose their library, their school, their park, and even their neighborliness. The people put their faith in the Mayor, a dazzling fellow who promises he alone can help. After all, he is a famous dragon slayer. (At least, no one has seen a dragon in his presence.) Only the clever children of the Orphan House and the kindly Ogress at the edge of town can see how dire the town's problems are.

978-1-5364-8190-7 Algonquin ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 15.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$22.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-8 Starred Review Barnhill, who won the Newbery Medal for The Girl Who Drank the Moon (2016), makes no secret about her latest novel being a response to the current loss of kindness and neighborly values in American society. She applies the same fate to the once-idyllic village of Stone-in-the-Glen, which has been in steep decline since the burning of its library. The tragic loss of this seat of learning has caused the townsfolk to withdraw from public life and regard one another with suspicion. Then the withering of their fruit trees and crops likewise shrivels their impulses to share with their neighbors. This is the place to which readers are transported and meet the happy exceptions to Stone-in-the-Glen's misery: the children of the orphan house, the elderly couple who cares for them, and the Ogress, a shy and generous newcomer on the outskirts of the village. When a misunderstanding surrounding a runaway orphan results in an angry mob unjustly targeting the Ogress, the orphans know it's up to them to save the day. Barnhill's gift for storytelling immediately draws readers into this character-driven tale where dragons lurk, crows prove great friends, and an unusual narrator relays events with a unique perspective. These fairy-tale trappings cloak modern lessons and timeless ideals that readers will do well to take to heart, no matter their age. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books reat place to live, as a small town where the orphans were well cared for, neighbors elped and shared, and the library was the central place to gather, learn, and grow. Trouble is afoot, though: while the Mayor seems to have driven way the dragons (come to think of it, it is possible there were no dragons before he came) and can enchant (hoodwink) them with his charm, he certainly does not have the good interests of his constituents at heart. Indeed, under his reign the town has become darker, far less kind, and left in disrepair even as more taxes are paid. Only the orphans, a mysterious narrator, and the ogress, who has built a home on the outskirts of town, realize there could be a far better way to live. The reader is immediately tossed into this fantasy, relying on the narrator to explain how life used to be in the town to counter the grim description of how it is now. The Mayor is a fantastic (though loathsome) villain, oozing charisma and evil in equal measures, and in direct contrast is the ogress, who asks permission of the bees to take their honey and secretly shares her baking gifts with the town. While she and the orphans are perhaps just a bit too perfect, they are needed foils against the Mayor, and the good versus evil purity of the story is effective in highlighting key points about the value of generosity and the perils of division. In a thoughtful and vulnerable author's note, Barnhill mentions she was so disheartened by the past handful of years she was uncertain if she would ever publish a book again. It is fortunate that her tinkering with fairy tales and fables helped open a path to this novel that champions kindness in a very dark world. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Stone-in-the-Glen used to be a joyful, cooperative place, but a disastrous library fire ushers in an era of divisiveness and suspicion. In parallel story lines, we learn about the dire situation of an orphanage that has lost its community support and the plight of a gentle ogress who lives on the fringes of town, an outcast. At the center of the plot is an evil mayor -- charismatic, manipulative, and powerful -- who considers the line between truth and lies to be "fuzzy." Offstage are dragons who are, in this world, not only benign but uniquely enlightened. A folksy, discursive first-person narrator (whose identity is the story's final reveal) keeps the tone lighthearted, but there are some genuinely frightening scenes, such as a standoff between an angry mob and the brave orphan who tries to defuse the situation using logic and facts. She fails. Unbowed, she marshals her resources. Can a bitter, irrational, brainwashed populace be brought to the light of reason by individual kindness, libraries, a flock of supportive crows, the gift of delicious pastries, and a "serious girl with long dark braids"? In this story, Barnhill (Newbery winner for The Girl Who Drank the Moon, rev. 9/16) answers with an energetic affirmative, making it one of the more buoyant of the fictional responses to "the Dark Days of a Certain Administration" and other ills of our time. Sarah Ellis(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A once-idyllic town blames an outsider for its woes. Long ago, a fire claimed Stone-in-the-Glen's beloved Library, which started a sequence of events that eroded all of the nicest things about the town, changing the identity of the place and the townspeople alike as citizens grew suspicious and closed off from one another. When the town fails to support the Orphan House, one orphan runs away so as to not take more resources. Cass is rescued and brought back by the sweet-natured Ogress who lives on a farm at the edge of Stone-in-the-Glen. But her return is spied by a man who misunderstands and thinks the Ogress is abducting children, and the townspeople become riled up against the Ogress by the self-serving, strife-loving Mayor. When the adults won't listen to the children, they must find another way to help their generous neighbor and repair their broken community. The story's told from a broadly omniscient perspective through slow, thoughtful pacing. Readers will make connections before the characters do--especially regarding the true nature of the villain--and they are given narrative assurance of a happy ending. This offers young audiences security as they grapple with nuanced, realistic portrayals of people who are neither all good nor all bad. It also gives them space to form their own opinions on the book's philosophical and thematic questions, including the refrain: "The more you give, the more you have." Main human characters read as White. Combines realistic empathy with fantastical elements; as exquisite as it is moving. (Fantasy. 9-adult) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Before fires claimed its spaces of books and learning, Stone-in-the-Glen was a "lovely town... famous for its trees," its abundance, its close-knit community, and its ample library (where even the librarians' "shushes were lovely"). Following the fires, however, searing light, damaging floods, and anger and rumor become commonplace, and the cued-white human residents retreat behind locked doors and fences, goaded on by a self-interested, isolationist mayor who sows a campaign of suspicion and fear. At the impoverished but love-filled Orphan House, 15 children reside alongside two elderly sweethearts and a fantastical reading room, doing their best to stretch their meager resources. When a "careful and considerate" ogress takes up residence at the town's far edge, cultivating a garden and observing the town's need, she begins delivering nourishing baked goods and boxes of vegetables to the residents overnight. Employing a benevolent, omniscient narrator ("Listen," the voice urges) and a slowly unfurling, deliberately paced telling, Newbery Medalist Barnhill incorporates ancient stories, crow linguistics, and a history of dragonkind into an ambitious, fantastical sociopolitical allegory that asks keen questions about the nature of time, the import of community care, and what makes a neighbor. Ages 10: up. Agent: Steven Malk, Writers House. (Mar.)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness A ragtag band of orphans and a kindhearted ogress fight xenophobia and cynicism with empathy and love in this bewitching fairytale-style fantasy from Newbery Award-winner Kelly Barnhill (The Girl Who Drank the Moon).

Quantity	Unit Price
----------	------------

#2346755 Last Beekeeper (Prebound)

1

$20.95

written by Pablo Cartaya

In a future shaken by climate disasters, Yolanda Ciceron knows that nature is something to be feared. From the crops that don't grow to the terrifying creatures that roam the countryside, Yoly's life in the Valley is brutal and harsh. She dreams of leaving her farm to live in Silo—the most advanced town for miles around. But first, Yoly will need to prove she belongs in a place where only the smartest and most useful are welcomed.

978-1-5364-8194-5 HarperCollins Publishers ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-8 Award-winning author Cartaya has written a thrilling sf story set in a world almost destroyed by the effects of climate change. Yolanda Cicerón always planned on leaving behind the family finca and working at Silos, the most technologically advanced city. When the farm cannot produce ripe strawberries to sell and her sister can no longer afford to pay for Yolanda's tuition, Mayor Blackburn offers to help—but with the mayor, everything comes at a price. Soon after, Yolanda reads through her grandmother's journal and discovers what is now the last-known beehive. These pollinating insects may be the key to freeing her from the grasp of Mayor Blackburn and uncovering the dark truth about Silos and the disappearance of her family. The Last Beekeeper raises powerful questions about a possible future if efforts of environmental preservation fail. A middle-grade dystopian story with well-written female characters and interesting world building, this appealing title teaches readers that one person can make all the difference in creating positive change. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Twelve-year-old Yolanda Ciceron dreams of escaping her rustic life for the technology-enhanced metropolis of Silo, but earning a spot in the city requires an intense education and a lot of money. Yoly is close to reaching her goal: after she completes one final course, she can apprentice under a top surgeon, become a doctor, and make sure that she and her older sister, Cami, never struggle financially again. When she learns that Cami does not have the money to pay for the course, Yoly is devastated. However, a well-known benefactor alerts her to a scholarship that would cover her tuition. Yoly jumps at the chance, but she neglects to read the fine print. In accepting the scholarship, she unknowingly agrees to pay off her debt through two years of hard labor in the blighted wasteland beyond Silo's walls. Desperately seeking freedom from the contract, Yoly and Cami begin a life-altering adventure. They uncover schemes of capitalistic greed, expose Silo's evils, and learn that connectivity is interpersonal, not just technological. Cartaya (Marcus Vega Doesn't Speak Spanish, rev. 9/18; Each Tiny Spark) has created a portrait of familial and communal love set against a backdrop of a world destroyed by climate change. Perfect for readers interested in dystopian literature and climate fiction, this is a stirring exploration of the connections between technology, nature, and humanity. S. R. Toliver(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In a dystopian future ravaged by climate change, a 12-year-old tech genius must save her community from an evil government. Raised on her family's strawberry farm in the Valley, Yolanda Cicerón, who has Cuban roots, aspires to become a neurolink surgeon, install computer chips in human skulls, and live in Silo, the most developed city around. But Camila, Yoly's older sister and her guardian since their parents' exile, can't afford the tuition. After Yoly secretly accepts a scholarship from Silo's Mayor Blackburn to fund her studies—against Cami's explicit wishes—she realizes the scholarship's terms require her to go on Retreat, a life-threatening mission in territory plagued by extreme weather disasters. Terrified, Cami finally shares secret family history that explains her mistrust of the mayor. Yoly belatedly understands that the System that purportedly keeps everyone safe from nature is actually oppressive and is spying on them. Looking for a way to pay off the scholarship and avoid the Retreat, Yoly and Cami discover a honeybee colony on their farm and recognize that the bees can pollinate fields and thereby reduce people's dependence on Silo. But questioning and innovation are dangerous under an authoritarian regime, and when people dear to Yoly are taken away, she must fight to save them and bring down the whole corrupt System. Readers will root for Yoly, who is as kind and brave as she is smart, in this page-turning story that deals with all-too-relevant themes. An insightful, action-packed, and thought-provoking adventure. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Yoly" Ciceron has never known life without the System that connects everyone and everything around her. After climate disasters plunged the world into darkness, Silo; "the most connected and technologically advanced town in the Valley"; rise up as a beacon of hope, keeping people safe from nature's brutal forces. Yoly dreams of living there, among the brightest and most privileged minds, instead of on her family's struggling strawberry farm with her overbearing older sister. But her ambitions are jeopardized when money becomes too tight for Yoly to continue her Technologically Intuitive Education. Determined to enroll by any means possible, she accepts a scholarship from the mayor that hinges on attending a deadly scavenging program, then stumbles into a bee colony; and a dangerous conspiracy. Cartaya's quick-moving plot pairs well with Yoly's lively voice, highlighting themes of resistance, communal and ecological interdependence, and a shared responsibility to nature that's sure to leave readers buzzing. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jess Regel, Foundry Literary + Media. (July)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—Cartaya's newest novel gives readers a dynamic, plot-driven story with heart. Set in the future after climate disasters and constant virtual connectivity have altered the way of life, the plot centers Yoly Cicerón, who wants to go to school to become a surgeon—not a farmer in the Valley like her exiled parents. After accepting a scholarship from the powerful Silo without reading the fine print, Yoly soon realizes that all of the connectivity is just another way for a few affluent people to control impoverished families like hers and keep them in debt. After discovering their abuela's writings about the fabled bees and their importance in pollination, Yoly and her older sister Cami go on a mission to revitalize their family farm, clear their debts, and save the Valley from the Silo. Readers will find Yoly authentic and endearing even when she makes rash decisions. The depiction of Latinx culture intertwined with the culture of the Valley and the Silo bring necessary texture to the plot. The relationships Yoly builds and her realizations about the beauty of connecting with people in-person happens naturally. While some of the motivation of the villains falls a little flat at the end, the purpose of the hero remains, and ultimately sparks conversation about our own climate crisis. An action-packed adventure that reflects our own mistakes and predicts our fears for the future. Similar titles include Jeanne DuPrau's The City of Ember and Rodman Philbrick's The Last Book in the Universe. VERDICT Highly recommended for middle school readers who enjoy dystopian adventures and science.—Hilary Tufo

#2346530 Welcome Back, Maple Mehta-Cohen (Prebound)

written by Kate McGovern

Maple Mehta-Cohen has been keeping a secret: she can't read all that well. She has an impressive vocabulary and loves dictating stories into her recorder—especially the adventures of a daring sleuth who's half Indian and half Jewish like Maple herself—but words on the page just don't seem to make sense to her.

978-1-5364-8162-4 Candlewick Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 650

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Eleven-year-old Maple Mehta-Cohen loves words. She loves hearing her father read books aloud to her before bedtime, and she loves dictating her own stories into the digital voice recorder that she keeps in her pocket at all times—she dreams up mysteries about a sleuth called Mira Epstein-Patel. Maybe that's why it took until fifth grade for a teacher to finally notice that Maple has serious struggles with reading. After screening tests reveal that she exhibits characteristics of dyslexia, Maple learns that, unlike her best friends, she is going to have to repeat the fifth grade. Although her friends assure her that nothing has to change between them, on the first day of school, they ignore her. In her new fifth grade classroom, Maple tries to connect with people, but her attempts are tripped up by her embarrassment, and she lies about why she's been held back. Struggling with her friendships and her self-esteem, Maple wonders who she's become—and how she can get back to being her old self, a person that she once truly loved. Maple's narratorial voice is frank and quirky, and her journey with coming to terms with her learning disability is layered, believable, and well researched. Maple has a White Jewish mother and an Indian father who coined the term Hin-Jew to describe her. The book repeatedly references her Indian identity, but her Jewish side is less developed. A layered, utterly readable novel about a biracial protagonist grappling with dyslexia. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Connection “Adventure abounds and develops into a solid story for students who struggle with reading. Ultimately this is a story to share with all as Maple’s reading struggles are revealed to be a result of dyslexia, allowing this title to serve as a talking point regarding the need to show acceptance and understanding for students who struggle with reading and learning. This story deserves a place in many school libraries!”

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–7—Maple Mehta-Cohen has a secret, and she has worked hard to make sure no one finds out. Maple loves to tell, and spends much of her time dictating, her stories about her half-Indian, half-Jewish sleuth into her recorder. But despite her storytelling ability and expansive vocabulary, Maple doesn't know how to read. Her teacher thought it best for Maple to repeat fifth grade so that she can get help with reading. But Maple is not sure about this plan. It means leaving her two best friends, Aislinn and Marigold, and having everyone wonder why she is still in fifth grade. When the school year starts, things aren't better. Maple's teacher asks her to help new kid Jack learn his way around the school, plus she must go to Ms. Fine's group—the one that is for students who can't read. When Jack asks why Maple is still in fifth grade, the lies start, and Maple isn't sure she can stop. She is caught telling stories to her new friends in her reading group, trying to keep her old friends who don't seem to want to spend time with a fifth-grader, and staying true to herself. Though poignant, with so many different things happening, the novel doesn't really get to the depth of Maple's reading struggles, or her issues with friends, leaving the ending feeling unresolved. VERDICT For young people who struggle with reading or feeling different because of other academic issues, Maple is a welcome protagonist.—Rebekah Buchanan, Western Illinois Univ., Macomb

#2346767 Meet Me Halfway (Prebound)

written by Anika Fajardo

Mattie Gomez feels directionless after being uprooted from her beloved Minnesota and forced to move in with her new stepfamily in California. So when she meets a girl at her new middle school who looks exactly like her, she's not sure what to make of it. But her doppelganger, the popular Mercedes Miller, doesn't like it one bit. Mercedes is used to getting what she wants, when she wants; Mattie would rather be invisible and blend into the background.

978-1-5364-8183-9 Simon & Schuster Books For Young Readers ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 288

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist When classmates Mattie and Mercedes discover they are actually half sisters, it isn't exactly celebratory news. The girls, while they look similar, are polar opposites, and the road to friendship is rocky. But when their curiosity and determination to find their mutual Colombian dad wins out, the girls must work through their differences and join together to finally learn more about their mysterious, absent dad—and meet him. Along the way, as Mattie adjusts to her new home in California and complex stepfamily dynamics, Mercedes realizes her luxurious life is devoid of meaning if she doesn't have genuine friends to share it with, and the girls' rivalry develops into a sort of camaraderie. Fajardo's narrative captures middle-school nostalgia, relatably reflecting the swirl of emotions students typically feel when trying to form friendships, be popular, or find a group to be accepted into. With its grit, humor, voice, and heart, this novel will reach readers who struggle to find peace in their families—biological or chosen.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Half sisters concoct a Parent Trap: tinged plan in this heartwarming novel from Fajardo (What If a Fish). When seventh grader Matilde "Mattie" Gomez is uprooted from Minnesota to live with her new stepfamily in California, she doesn't expect to meet her doppelganger on the first day of class. Mercedes Miller is one of the school's most popular girls, and she knows more than she's telling about why she and Mattie are nearly identical: they're half sisters. Despite sharing a father; and a face; they couldn't be more socially different: anxious Mattie disappears into the background both at school and in her bustling new family; prickly Mercedes, meanwhile, thrives in the spotlight, each night returning to an empty house populated only by a nanny and younger half brother. Neither has met their Colombian father, an anthropologist, and when they learn he's a visiting professor at a nearby college, they collaborate in order to meet him, sneaking out of a school field trip, dodging security guards, and getting caught in a student protest. Mattie's and Mercedes's alternating narration follows their individual internality, skillfully exploring variations on family complexity to culminate in a satisfying novel of sisterhood. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Thao Le, Sandra Dijkstra Literary. (Sept.)

#2350445 Elatsoe (Prebound)
written by Darcie Little Badger

Elatsoe lives in this slightly stranger America. She can raise the ghosts of dead animals, a skill passed down through generations of her Lipan Apache family. Her beloved cousin has just been murdered, in a town that wants no prying eyes. But she is going to do more than pry. The picture-perfect facade of Willowbee masks gruesome secrets, and she will rely on her wits, skills, and friends to tear off the mask and protect her family.

978-1-5364-8240-9 Levine Querido ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$24.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Indigenous myths, modern-day technology, and the supernatural successfully blend to build a fast-paced murder mystery in Little Badger's intriguing solo debut. After 17-year-old, asexual Ellie's older cousin Trevor is fatally injured in an apparent car accident, he comes to her in a dream, identifying his killer and begging her to protect his family. Lipan Apache Ellie, named for her "heroic ancestor"; her maternal sixth-great-grandmother, Elatsoe, now known as "Six-Great"; has inherited from her the gift of waking and training ghosts, and sets out to reveal the accident as a crime and unmask the killer. Accompanied by her faithful sidekick, the ghost of her dead dog Kirby, her loyal friend, "white Celtic-and-Nordic-American" cheerleader Jay, and actively supported by her understanding parents, Ellie battles with ghosts, vampires, and exorcists in a series of suspenseful confrontations; including a descent into an underworld of trilobite fossils; that increase in intensity and eventually solidify her place in her strong maternal lineage of Native protectors. Cai's grayscale spot illustrations imbue the book with shadowy breath and movement, bringing a lyrical undertone to the energetic plot and multifaceted, refreshing voice. Ages 12: up. Author's agent: Michael Curry, Donald Maass Literary. (Aug.)

#2350462 Black Bird, Blue Road (Prebound)
written by Sofiya Pasternack

Pesah has lived with leprosy for years, and the twins have spent most of that time working on a cure. Then Pesah has a vision: the Angel of Death will come for him on Rosh Hashanah, just one month away. So Ziva takes her brother and runs away to find doctors who can cure him. But when they meet and accidentally free a half-demon boy, he suggests paying his debt by leading them to the fabled city of Luz, where no one ever dies—the one place Pesah will be safe.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$20.95

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve-year-old Ziva bet Leah and her twin, Pesah, are growing up in eleventh-century Khazar (an ancient Jewish empire located in present day Ukraine) where their father is a judge. Because Pesah suffers from Hansen's disease (leprosy), his parents have decided to send him away, prompting Ziva and Pesah to run away in search of a cure. Their journey is perilous; they are kidnapped and encounter magical sheydim, the Angel of Death, and a Milcham (phoenixlike bird), but throughout, Ziva remains determined to save her brother's life. Pasternak's historical fantasy weaves Jewish mythology and traditions into this heroine's journey that asks readers to contemplate issues of life and death. Readers will be intrigued by the ravens that follow Pesah everywhere, the details of the city of Luz (where no one dies), and Pesah's vision that the Angel of Death will visit him on Rosh Hashanah. This works as an adventure, but it should also prompt discussions about the ethics of preserving life at all costs.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In the Jewish empire of Khazaria, twelve-year-old Ziva is the only one willing to go near her twin brother, Pesah, who has leprosy (with symptoms described in vivid detail, as are the amputations Ziva performs). A vision Pesah shares with Ziva prompts her to take him on a quest to Byzantium to find a cure, or fight the Angel of Death, or both. The twins encounter figures from Jewish folklore, notably a sheyd (demon) and the aforementioned angel, presented as rounded characters who discuss and debate the nature of mortality with Ziva as she struggles to accept her impending loss with much more fury than Pesah himself has. Pasternack (Anya and the Dragon) writes with a storyteller's cadence without sacrificing liveliness, keeping emotions front and center ("She'd jab the Angel of Death in every single one of its eyeballs if that meant keeping Pesah safe"). Back matter includes a glossary and an afterword that discusses Khazaria, "for the most part...faded from memory," and how even elements of this story beyond the obvious fantasy ones are "just my imagining. And who knows? Maybe, twelve hundred years ago, a girl and her brother really did meet a demon and resist the Angel of Death on the steppe." Ziva and her community (anachronistically) consider her a responsible bat mitzvah now that she's twelve, and her stubborn insistence on taking on far too much is believable and affecting. Shoshana Flax September/October 2022 p.94(c) Copyright 2022. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews For years Ziva bat Leah's quest to cure her twin brother Pesah's leprosy has consumed their lives. When his health worsens, their parents arrange for him to be taken to a colony. But after Pesah has a celestial vision at their birthday party indicating that he will die on Rosh Hashanah, Ziva decides they must run away. Along with Almas, a sheydim, or demon, she rescues, they travel to the city of Luz, the only place the Angel of Death can't go. Pasternack's story is rich in the rhythms, values, and deep magic of Jewish culture and life in the Turkic Jewish empire of Khazaria. It revels in an often overlooked mythology, deploying exciting fantasy elements with ease. Ziva struggles with her fiery nature—stubbornness that is also an intense desire for justice. Her single-minded focus on saving Pesah blinkers her to the inevitability of death and the complexities of both their own fears and needs as she comes to understand them. Pesah is brilliant and gentle, kindhearted Almas faces prejudice for his demon nature, and the three form a charming traveling trio even amid fear and pain. More than simply an adventure, this is a story about grief and illness and arguing with the rules of the world, enduring and enjoying the living that happens between now and the end, threaded through with the profound, unshakeable love of two brave siblings. Propulsive, wise, and heartbreaking. (afterword, glossary) (Historical fantasy. 9-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this dazzling historical fantasy, Pasternack (the Anya and the Dragon duology) tells of a tender sibling bond set in the little-known medieval Jewish empire of Khazaria. In the city of Atil, newly 12-year-old Ziva bat Leah is desperate to keep her brilliant, beloved twin brother, Pesah, from dying of leprosy. Inventive Pesah is kept in a house of his own on the Jewish family's property, but when the siblings' doctor uncle recommends that Pesah be sent to a far-flung colony, Ziva packs the siblings up and hits the road, hoping to find a cure. They soon meet up with a half-sheydim boy with whom they travel, but they're racing against time, and the long journey is shadowed quite literally by Malach hamavet; the Angel of Death himself. Pasternack shows how Ziva's love of justice drives her, while depicting a world in which spirits are manifest, healers come in many forms, and a bold girl can literally bargain with the Angel of Death. Tenderly rendering Ziva's feelings of responsibility; including around Pesah's physical care and amputating his infected fingers and toes; Pasternack imagines a rich, omen-filled journey that powerfully shows love and its limits. A contextualizing afterword and glossary conclude. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Rena Rossner, Deborah Harris Agency. (Sept.)

#2366639 Alliana, Girl of Dragons (Prebound)
written by Julie Abe

Once upon a time, Alliana believed in dreams and fairy tales as sweet as spun-sugar clouds. Alliana wished on shooting stars, sure that someday she and her grandmother would be able to travel to the capital city to see the queen. Then her grandmother passed away—and those dreams disappeared in a disenchanted puff.

978-1-5364-8369-7 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Quantity	Unit Price
----------	------------

#2370321 Always, Clementine (Prebound)

written by Carlie Sorosiak

Clementine is different from other mice: she can calculate the speed of light and she dreams in Latin. The scientists say she's a genius and put her through test after test. Clementine is proud of being a good lab mouse, but she's lonely. Her only snatches of friendship occur during her late-night visits with a chimpanzee named Rosie. When a compassionate lab technician frees Clementine, the mouse discovers an outside world full of wonders: Brussels sprouts, games of speed chess, television fame, and a chance for a real home. But for Clementine, it's not enough to be free when she knows that Rosie and the other mice are not.

978-1-5364-8399-4 Walker Books US ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 500

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5 The escape-from-the-lab premise is a favorite within the animal-fantasy genre, but Sorosiak keeps it fresh in her latest endeavor. Mousenapped rather than escaped, Clementine has found herself and another lab mouse snatched from their cage and left in a stranger's mailbox with a note entreating whomever finds them to "please protect these mice." That's how a boy named Gus and his grandfather become their unwitting guardians. Experiments with mouse DNA have resulted in genius-level intelligence in Clementine, making her a bright yet naive narrator for this tale. Relayed through a series of imagined letters to her chimp friend, Rosie, Clementine describes the bonkers scheme devised by Gus and Pop to elicit support for keeping her from being returned to the lab--a televised chess game with Clementine facing a series of human opponents. It's a big-hearted endeavor that pulls in an eccentric cast of side characters who are immensely entertaining. Landing somewhere between Katherine Applegate's The One and Only Ivan (2012) and James Patterson and Chris Grabenstein's Word of Mouse (2016), this sweet-spirited adventure will easily find fans. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews "Serious themes lightened by comedic touches; the strong emotional attachments will linger with readers."

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Genius rodent Clementine finds her purpose with the help of friends and the game of chess in Sorosiak's (I, Cosmo) heartfelt, adventure-filled tale. Due to altered DNA, Clementine shines in the lab, where researchers posit that she "could be the smartest mouse in history." She dreams in Latin, solves mathematical equations, and understands humans' speech. She also makes her first friend, fellow caged lab denizen Rosie, a gentle, curious chimpanzee. Clementine's life is upended when a compassionate junior researcher stealthily liberates her and another mouse, Hamlet, to the nearby mailbox of Pop, the kindly host of local TV program Pop's Hobbies. That's where she's discovered by 11-year-old Gus, Pop's lively and thoughtful grandson, who earnestly promises his protection. Via a series of sensorially written, stirring, and by turns funny and suspenseful imaginary letters to Rosie, Clementine relates her experiences out in the wide world, where Gus, Pop, and a televised game of chess stand to save her from a grim fate back at the lab, which has offered a reward for her return. Maintaining a strong emotional core through Clementine's voice, Sorosiak explores themes; including animal cruelty, duty, empathy, and intelligence; with a deft, light touch. Human characters largely read as white. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Connection "Sorosiak successfully allows the reader to get to know the characters through these letters while still telling a story full of adventures and bravery." *This is the third starred review for Always, Clementine (PW, Kirkus)*

Quantity	Unit Price
----------	------------

#2370322 Cress Watercress (Prebound)

written by Gregory Maguire

When Papa doesn't return from a nocturnal honey-gathering expedition, Cress holds out hope, but her mother assumes the worst. It's a dangerous world for rabbits, after all. Can a dead tree full of annoying neighbors, and no Papa, ever be home?

978-1-5364-8400-7 Candlewick Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 5.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5 After her father fails to return home from a foraging trip, Cress (a young rabbit) sadly moves out of the family burrow with her mom and baby brother, Kip. Their new home? The Broken Arms, a forest creatures' version of a rundown apartment building, housed in a hulking dead tree and presided over by a haughty owl landlord. Other residents include a lively family of squirrels, an old mouse couple, and a pair of songbirds. Maguire gives them all strongly defined characters, but however charming, they don't live charmed lives. Cress' mother is stressed over making rent (10 dead moths per day) and Kip's fragile health, while Cress refuses to accept that her father is gone for good, hates their tiny basement apartment, and longs to be seen more as a grown-up. A hungry fox, a sneaky snake, a blundering bear, and "human beanpoles" add drama and suspense to Cress' mini adventures, which are luminously depicted in Litchfield's color illustrations. Despite dark undertones, this novel of family and friendship will please fans of animal fantasies. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book "Dark and shimmering full-color digital illustrations build on the text's singular atmosphere... With its brisk plot, witty details, and thought-provoking concepts, this gloriously illustrated chapter book makes an ideal family read-aloud."

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In this richly imagined woodland adventure, a grieving rabbit family -- Mama, Cress, and baby Kip (with stuffed carrot "Rotty" always in tow) -- must leave their comfortable warren to start over without their lost Papa. Their new life gets off to an inauspicious start. Mama loses the map to Mr. Owl's tree, the "Broken Arms," home of their tiny new basement flat; and they must avoid hungry foxes and a snake disturbingly (and hilariously) known as the "Final Drainpipe." Everyone the rabbits encounter -- from the outlandishly selfish skunk, Lady Agatha Cabbage, who wears a surly chinchilla around her neck, to the mix of residents in and around the Broken Arms -- is well drawn, making for a memorable cast of creatures who sometimes quarrel but always look out for any neighbor in need. Dark and shimmering full-color digital illustrations build on the text's singular atmosphere. While the moon waxes and wanes, Cress launches herself into precarious predicaments in every chapter as she cycles through waves of grief, irritability, kindness, loneliness, and bravery. As Mama observes: "But, my darling Cress, the moon will grow back. It comes and goes. Just like sorrow." The rabbits settle into the rhythm of their imperfect but warm new community as the narrative deftly coaxes readers to a place of empathy for each character, including those who initially seemed forbidding or unlikable. With its brisk plot, witty details, and thought-provoking concepts, this gloriously illustrated chapter book makes an ideal read-alone or family read-aloud. Julie Roach(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Maguire's narrative offers wry puns, rich vocabulary, and entertaining dialogue, and Litchfield's glowing, slightly stylized, full-color illustrations present an enchanting, magical peek into this woodland world... Warmhearted and utterly charming.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Maguire (Egg and Spoon) interweaves familiar elements of the animal story; a cozy family, a treacherous woodland, mourning, and growing pains; into a surreal episodic narrative. Grieving the loss of Papa Watercress, who "went out and didn't come back," rabbit child Cress, her little brother Kip, and their mother abandon their warren for new digs in "an apartment tree" known as the Broken Arms, where landlord Mr. Owl demands rent paid in moths. Upstairs are superintendent mice, boisterous squirrels, and songbirds alert for predators such as legendary snake "the Final Drainpipe" and fox Monsieur Reynard. Maguire channels multiple children's literary golden ages, with allusions to Beatrix Potter and Kenneth Grahame alongside nonsense notes of Norton Juster and Russell Hoban. Theatrical situations abound, as from conniving skunk Lady Agatha Cabbage; who wants to gain Cress as a "housemaid"; and her scene-stealing live-chinchilla stole. Super-saturated panels by Litchfield (The Bear and the Piano), which resemble backlit stained glass, picture the forest and its denizens in glowing hues and shadowy black. Suitable for sharing and reading aloud, this exuberant tale revels in the performative and the flavor of language. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Moses Cardona, John Hawkins and Assoc. Illustrator's agent: Anne Moore Armstrong, Bright Agency. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--When Maguire (Wicked) and illustrator Litchfield merge their creative geniuses, a spectacular woodland adventure full of quirky animal characters emerges. Cress, the "teenage" bunny of the family, along with Mama, and baby brother Kip (with his ever in tow, stuffed carrot Rotty), are sad to leave their warren without their beloved missing Papa. They arrive at Mr. Owl's rotten tree, "The Broken Arms," and attempt to start over in a tiny basement flat. The woodland setting is visually stunning, with Litchfield's enchanting full-color illustrations, bringing the motley crew of animal characters to life. There's Lady Agatha Cabbage, the snooty chinchilla-wearing skunk and Tunk the Honeybear, and they must always watch out for "Final Drainpipe," the snake. Maguire is a master of telling a fast-moving adventure full of wry humor, with memorable multidimensional characters to cheer both for and against. Young Cress encounters heart-stopping dangers and adventures, while the creative duo of Maguire and Litchfield weave symbolism and beautiful imagery throughout the text. Cress will appeal to most readers, who will be able to identify with that awkward in-between time during one's youth when they are wishing for independence from their family, while still very much needing them for comfort. VERDICT Reminiscent of Winnie the Pooh and The Wind in the Willows, this makes a scrumptious read-aloud or standalone story that will be beloved for years to come.--Michele Shaw Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.95

#2366581 Awake (Prebound)
written by Christopher Krovatin

In this family, pyrokinesis was just the beginning. Now other powers are emerging, including telekinesis -- and it will put the siblings at odds like never before.
978-1-5364-8349-9 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 240 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 720

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Eleven-year-old Simon Theland is exhausted; his family's been on the run for a year and a half while fleeing his pyrokinetic oldest sister, Rachael, who set fire to their house and school. Simon's rest is regularly disturbed by dreams of his house burning down. But one night, the nightmare unfolds differently--hands pull him through the open refrigerator door into a whole new world. There, Rachael isn't the only one with special powers, and Simon meets and becomes friends with Lena Oneiro, a quiet girl from his history class who's the target of bullies. Soon Simon, Lena, and Aly, the middle Theland sibling, connect in real life and begin talking about their powers. But when Rachael appears with a dangerous crew of teens in tow, Simon, Aly, and Lena must work to keep the flames at bay. This sequel to Ablaze (2023) is an entertaining and emotional ride told from Simon's third-person perspective. Readers will sympathize with his plight as the youngest child. Simon struggles to comprehend and use his superpowers responsibly, reflecting middle school kids' burgeoning emotions and identities, and those navigating social difficulties will relate to his desire to be understood. The sibling dynamics also shine, and Simon's parents grapple with seeing who their children really are: a relatable feeling, no matter what your superhero status is. Main characters read white. A satisfying portrayal of budding superheroes who are grappling to do what's right. (Paranormal thriller. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--Simon, 11, is hiding out with his family from his dangerous older sister Rachael, a pyrokinetic who can start fires with her mind in this suspenseful psychological thriller, the sequel to Ablaze. A year and a half ago, Rachael tried to kill her family by burning down their house. This was retaliation for Simon injuring her as he tried to stop her from setting the fires that Rachael blamed on their sister Aly, also a pyrokinetic. Simon can mentally enter people's minds and push them to do things. When he sees two siblings bullying classmate Lena, called Zombie by everyone because of her expressionless face and slow gait, Simon uses his powers to get them to leave her alone. When he reaches into Lena's mind he realizes she's different, like him. She's a somnopath, able to infiltrate and shape people's dreams. She helps Simon enter Rachael's dreams to try to locate her. When they do find her, she's with others like her--Joyce, an energy parasite, and Colin, a cyberpath--and they want to "own the world." Will Simon and Lena be able to stop them? Simon's struggle to understand and use his powers is relatable and his friendship with the shrewd Lena is authentic. Despite a lack of character depth, the family dynamics are well realized, particularly Simon's complicated relationship with Aly. Characters default to white. VERDICT The twisty plot, explosive action, sympathetic characters, and scary cover will hook readers, while the open-ended conclusion will ensure they return for the next installment.--Sharon Rawlins Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2366584 Lines of Courage (Prebound)

written by Jennifer A. Nielsen

World War I stretches its cruel fingers across Europe, where five young people, each from different backgrounds and nations, face the terror of battle, the deprivations of hunger, and all the awful challenges of war. None of them will find exactly what they want. But the winds of fate may cross their paths to give each of them just what they need. And in this remarkable exploration of World War I by critically acclaimed author Jennifer A. Nielsen, they will discover that friendship and courage can light the way through the most frightening of nights.

978-1-5364-8350-5 Scholastic Press ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 12.0 Lexile 740

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 What does it mean to have courage? Nielsen (Words on Fire, 2019) examines this question through the stories of five tweens in the midst of WWI, offering varied perspectives and showing children caught on each side of the war. There is Felix, a Jewish boy in Austria-Hungary whose family must find a way to survive; Kara in Great Britain, volunteering with the Red Cross; Juliette in France, who is trying to save her imprisoned father; Dimitri, a Russian soldier; and Elsa, a girl from Germany. Over the course of five years, their lives will become interconnected in ways they never thought possible. Nielsen doesn't shy away from the terrors of war and writes about survival in an accessible way for young readers. While the main characters may suffer loss, ultimately their stories are of hope and having the courage to stand up for what you believe is right, even in the face of the most dire circumstances. A riveting historical tale. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Five teenagers from across Europe lead coincidentally intersecting lives during World War I. The day that 12-year-old Felix witnesses the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, everything changes. His father goes to war, and Felix loses the relative safety afforded to Jews in the Austro-Hungarian Empire. His city is invaded by imperial Russia, and the Jews and Roma of Lemberg might be shipped to internment camps. With the help of Elsa, a German girl, Felix and his mother escape. Though they go their separate ways, Felix and Elsa will meet again, along with British Kara, French Juliette, and Russian Dimitri. Kara wants to be a doctor and works as an orderly on a Red Cross train, Juliette seeks her lost family, and Dimitri is a miserable soldier in the trenches. The chain of coincidences that repeatedly bring these teens into each other's lives is increasingly improbable until they resolve five years later, on the last day of the war to end all wars. While the events are packed with historical facts, the overall framing feels ahistorical: the British are kind, competent rescuers; to be a good German requires being opposed to one's countrymen; and a Russian sees "freedom" from both the tsar and Lenin in the land-mined French countryside. Adventures across a massive war and pandemic make for a tidy tribute to common understanding. (author's note) (Historical fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Nielsen (Words on Fire) presents a history of WWI from the perspectives of five young people; each representing an empire of that era; whose stories slowly converge. Opening with Austro-Hungarian Felix Baum, a Jewish 12-year-old who witnesses the June 1914 assassination of Archduke Ferdinand, the novel quickly introduces 11-year-old Elsa Dressler, daughter of a German major, and continues with the experiences of Kara Webb, a British nurse's daughter working with her mother on a Red Cross ambulance train. Kara eventually crosses paths with Juliette Caron, a French girl separated from her family, who hopes to get her father released from prison. When Juliette finds wounded Russian Dimitri Petrenko, 14, she tends to his injuries until he can return to his company. The engrossing plot abounds with necessary, if just-credible, coincidences that build connections between the five as they live through battles, bombings, and occupations; each one growing in courage and compassion while maturing over four years of wartime. All characters cue as white. An author's note contextualizes WWI's beginnings. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ammi-Joan Paquette, Erin Murphy Literary. (May)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness The brutality and complexity of World War I is expressed in

#2366592 No Filter (Prebound)

written by Kelley Skovron

Janessa "Jinx" McCormick loves photography because it's like real life, except she can make it perfect. Using her late father's camera, Jinx takes photos for nearly everyone in her small town of Greenbelt, making her something of a local celebrity. But one day as she's touching up a new photo, Jinx sees something in the background of the image.

A shadow that she's certain wasn't in the frame when she captured the shot.

978-1-5364-8352-9 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Amateur photographer Janessa "Jinx" McCormick makes an eerie discovery through her camera lens. It's summer in Greenbelt, Maryland, located just outside Washington, D.C., and 12-year-old Jinx is busy taking photographs for local businesses, various cosplayers, and a friend who wants to break into acting. What starts off as an inexplicable smudge on all the photos she's taken eventually turns into something much more sinister. Along with the light horror elements, a parallel thread explores Jinx's mental health while she struggles with OCD in the wake of her father's death. This struggle is the most powerful part of the novel, more suspenseful and compelling than the spooky elements. Readers will be more curious about what happened to both Jinx's father and mother and what she's keeping bottled up in therapy than what's causing the smudges on her photographs. Jinx is a richly drawn, well-imagined character, mature in many ways and yet somehow still very young. The racially diverse supporting characters who surround Jinx, who reads white, are also well developed; each forms an important piece of the storyline. Though the two plotlines seem to be more parallel than braided together, the insights the book offers into Jinx's inner thoughts and feelings make this a valuable, interesting read. An absorbing, well-characterized story for readers seeking something mildly scary. (Horror. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2225924 Best Worst Summer (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Elizabeth Eulberg

This is going to be Peyton's worst summer ever. Her family just moved. She's lonely. She's bored. Until . . . she comes across a box buried in her backyard. It has a message: I'm so sorry. Please forgive me. Looks like things are about to get interesting.

978-1-5476-0150-9 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Peyton is convinced that the summer her family moves from Minneapolis to Lake Springs, a small town four hours away, will be the worst summer of her life. But when her mom gets a job offer that's too good to pass up, Peyton and her family leave everything behind—including Lily, Peyton's closest friend. The two girls did everything together, and Peyton is nervous about starting sixth grade without her. When Peyton finds an old shoebox buried in her new backyard, things begin to change. Expecting it to contain a long-buried family pet, the box is actually a time capsule from 1989 that was put together by two other close friends, Jessica and Melissa. Along with pop culture souvenirs, Peyton finds some notes, one reading, "I'm so sorry. Please forgive me" and another in secret code. The notes inspire Peyton to learn what happened between the girls. Chapters alternate between Peyton's search and her developing friendship with a boy in a wheelchair named Lucas, and the saga of Jessica and Melissa, who were best friends until a situation in Melissa's family results in their abrupt separation. One weakness is that the chapters focusing on Jessica, who was adopted from South Korea, and Melissa, whose father is angry and abusive, are underdeveloped. The puzzle pieces fit neatly—if somewhat improbably—together by the novel's end. Aside from Jessica, all other main characters are cued as white. VERDICT A story about the power of friendship with fun references to New Kids on the Block, pay phones, and beepers. This

#2218862 These Unlucky Stars (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gillian McDunn

Annie has always been the odd one out in her family. Her practical dad and brother just don't understand the way she thinks. Ever since her mother left a few years ago, Annie has been reluctant to get close to anyone. When a poor decision lands Annie in hot water, she must make amends by watching her elderly neighbor's weird dog all summer.

978-1-5476-0538-5 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An accident-prone middle schooler blames her lot on an unlucky star in McDunn's (The Queen Bee and Me) endearing contemporary novel. When an attempted doorbell ditching ends with a broken arm for elderly neighbor Gloria Crumb, rising seventh grader Annie P. Logan spends the summer assisting the stubbornly independent woman with her clutter. She also helps the residents of her North Carolina town prepare for their first festival, which they hope will put the struggling town on the map. Caring for Gloria's beloved hound helps Annie overcome her longtime fear of the creatures, sparked by a dog attack, and as she unearths old pictures; of Gloria's siblings, travels, and surprising talents; Annie begins to wonder about these changing versions of the now frail woman she visits daily, and the choices and experiences that define who a person becomes. Annie's journey to break free of the guilt she carries, about Gloria's accident and her own mother's leaving, and to embrace her true self; including the wild imagination and creativity she shared with her mom; offer quiet triumph through a tenderly drawn intergenerational relationship and Annie's expressive voice. Ages 8: 11. Agent: Marietta Zacker, Gallt & Zacker Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–7—Annie feels like she has no control over her life because she was born under an unlucky star, or so her mother said before she left. So it makes sense that when she dares to play ding dong ditch on an elderly lady's door, Annie causes the woman to fall and break her arm. It figures that she'll have to help take care of her throughout the summer, when all she really wants is to help design the float for the family store in the town festival. And, of course, her dad and brother don't want her help. What starts out as an unlucky break turns into a summer of healing, as Annie and Gloria gain new insights into what makes good life. McDunn includes illustrations drawn by Annie to transition throughout the book, which provide a glimpse into Annie's thoughts. Annie eventually realizes that luck cannot dictate her life, but it grows tiresome watching her blame her poor decisions on bad luck, though the chapters are short enough for reluctant readers. Annie does show spunk, and readers will appreciate her insights: "Ugh. This is so typical. When girls do something nice, it's an expectation. When boys do something nice, it's a celebration." Annie and her family are white, her friend Faith is described as having brown skin, and there is an LGBTQ+ couple. VERDICT A fair realistic fiction read, but there are others that do the job better. A secondary purchase.—Kerri Williams, Center Moriches Free P.L., NY

#2386358 Rewind (Prebound)

written by Lisa Graff

As far as twelve-year-old McKinley O'Dair is concerned, the best thing about living in Gap Bend, Pennsylvania, is the Time Hop—the giant party the town throws every June to celebrate a single year in history. And when McKinley learns that this year's theme is 1993, she can't wait to enter the Time Hop fashion show with a killer '90s outfit she's designed and sewn all on her own. Before she knows what's hit her, McKinley somehow finds herself in the real 1993—and it's not all kitschy parachute pants and Jurassic Park.

978-1-5364-8543-1 Philomel Books ©2024 5 x 7-3/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 730

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 Playing on the theme that the hardest person to see is the one in the mirror, Graff sends bossy 12-year-old McKinley O'Dair 25 years back in time to meet younger versions of the grownups in her life and, she logically concludes, to do something to steer future events. But what? Though her science teacher is as hostile in 1993 as 2018 and, heartbreakingly, her warm and loving grandmother hasn't had her massive stroke yet, several shocks await—notably, discoveries that her future single dad is an angry punk with an undiagnosed learning disability and that her best friend's wise and bighearted future mom is a nasty bully. While folding in funny touches, quaint detail, and wrenching family drama, the author expertly opens up her characters, allowing readers to understand how we are all works in progress. Even McKinley, by the time she finally snaps back to her era, has a clearer vision of her own manipulative tendencies and a sincere resolution to accept others for who they are. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Is going back in time about changing outcomes or changing perspective? McKinley's going to find out. Sixth grader McKinley is excited about Time Hop, her town's annual history celebration, which this time is celebrating the year 1993. In 1993, her father was also a sixth grader--and at the same school where the event is held. Taught to sew by her Grandma Bev, a talented seamstress even after suffering a stroke in 1993 that affected her speech and left half her body paralyzed, McKinley creates a fabulously retro outfit for the fashion show. But on the big day, her single father needs to work, and he asks McKinley to stay home to give Grandma Bev her medications. Instead, she decides to bring her grandma to the Time Hop, but it's a disaster. McKinley has a fight with her best friend, then her father shows up and orders her off the runway. McKinley runs away--and right back in time to 1993. The third-person voice is bright and energetic, while vivid descriptions capture the cast of predominantly White characters as their present and past selves. McKinley is especially endearing, ringing true as a confused, creative, well-meaning tween who realizes she may have been sent back in time to solve a problem--but which one? Or is this journey all about gaining insight so she can better handle her life? The philosophical questions are delivered with a light touch. Quirky and smart. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When the father of sixth grader McKinley O'Dair requests that she stay home with Grandma Bev; whose speech and mobility are impacted by a stroke she had 20 years ago; McKinley is devastated. While she normally wouldn't mind hanging out with her grandmother, today it means that McKinley will miss celebrating 1993 at her town's annual Time Hop, a party thrown every June to commemorate a single year in history. The fashion-obsessed 12-year-old has spent weeks preparing her outfit for the Time Hop fashion show with help from Grandma Bev, so McKinley takes Grandma Bev along, but after a fight with her best friend and her father's unexpected arrival, McKinley is bounced back to the real 1993. There, she meets her hyper-organized father as a sixth grader, as well as younger versions of other adults from her contemporary life. With classic Back to the Future flair, Graff (Far Away) employs snarky prose and abundant early 1990s callbacks to explore issues surrounding fate, destiny, and connection in this immersive, laugh-out-loud time-travel novel that highlights friendship, acceptance, and intergenerational bonds via one 12-year-old's wish to find a place; or time; in which she truly belongs. Main characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Stephen Barbara, InkWell Management. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5--In beloved author Graff's latest effort, McKinley O'Dair has created the perfect 1990s outfit for the annual Time Hop, and she cannot wait to walk in the fashion show with her best friend, Meg. When her rigid father humiliates her at the event, and she has a terrible fight with Meg, McKinley suddenly finds herself transported back in time to 1993. With help from Meg's mom--then, a middle schooler herself--McKinley searches for a way back, all while learning what supportive friendship can look like. This is well-worn ground for Graff, who favors protagonists on the path to bettering themselves. The story is at its most effective when exploring the nuances of relationship dynamics, particularly between McKinley and the kid version of her dad, an endlessly frustrating prankster who has little interest in her efforts to be kind, forcing her to confront truths about herself and the father she knows now. Graff makes sure to nod to time travel predecessors such as Madeleine L'Engle and H.G. Wells, and immerses readers in everything 1990s, from the cultural references to the chapter titles, each of which is a hit song from the era. VERDICT Fans of Graff will surely gravitate towards this approachable middle grade story with a splash of sci-fi to spice things up.--Alexandra Quay Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2366634 Taste of Magic (Prebound)
written by J. Elle

Twelve-year-old Kyana has just discovered she's a witch! This means classes every Saturday at Park Row Magic Academy, a learning center hidden in the back of the local beauty shop, and Kyana can't wait to learn spells to help out at home. The only downside is having to keep her magic a secret from her BFF, Nae. But when the magic school loses funding, the students must pay huge fees at the fancy school across town or lose their magic! Determined to help, Kyana enters a baking contest with a big cash prize. Will she be able to keep up her grades while preparing for the competition and without revealing her magic? What about when a taste of magic works its way into her cupcakes?

978-1-5364-8367-3 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5 A determined tween harnesses newfound powers to help save magic in her tight-knit community, navigating complicated friendship dynamics and family demands along the way. After her twelfth birthday, Kyana learns that she descends from a line of magicians who emigrated from Winzhobble to the Park Row neighborhood of Rockford, where "Magicks . . . live in harmony with everyone else." After the Magick Board slates Ms. Mo's Park Row Magick Academy for closure, Kyana enters a citywide baking contest, hoping the prize money will save her school. Potion making and baking have a lot in common, but one misstep proves a recipe for disaster for this big-hearted and brave girl. Elle tackles weighty topics--including educational equity and dementia--with tenderness and thought, and fans of her YA novel Wings of Ebony (2021) should recognize familiar themes of birthright and fortitude. Positive female relationships and fantastical humor (particularly around animals) round out this warm food- and family-centered story. A charming middle-grade series starter, with several of Memaw's legendary recipes included. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A sixth grader discovers her magical abilities and must navigate her new world while holding on to what means the most. Kyana Turner didn't believe her mom when she said that she'll get to learn the family secret now that she's turned 12--not until her fingers sparked. Once Kyana learns that she's a witch, life drastically changes, which means lying to her best friend, Nae. She begins attending Park Row Magick Academy, a secret school located at her hair salon, but normal life doesn't stop, and Kyana juggles learning new spells and improving her math scores with keeping an eye on her Memaw, who has Alzheimer's, to help ease Momma's burdens. When financial pressures threaten to close her magic school, Kyana jumps into action by entering a baking contest that offers a $50,000 prize. However, her magic gets out of control as she's baking, things go terribly wrong, and Kyana must work with unlikely allies and push past her fears if she wants to save her magical community. This fast-paced, heartfelt story deliciously blends realism with the whimsy of the mystical. Themes of inequity and self-worth are explored through Kyana's narration as she rises to the additional responsibilities she receives, but they are balanced with sweet moments like time spent in the kitchen making Creole food with Memaw, who is from Louisiana. Kyana and the majority of the cast are Black. A charming story of magic, love, and community. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly on her plate goes up against professional cooks in this whimsical culinary fantasy. Finally old enough to be in on the family secret, Kyana Turner learns around her 12th birthday that she's a witch. She's excited to train her blossoming magic; white sparks that "fizz from my fingertips"; during her mandatory training at Park Row Magick Academy, a free Saturday school run out of the back of a Black-owned beauty salon. But magic must be kept a secret, and the necessary lies Kyana tells to keep hers under wraps begin to take a toll, as do her dropping math grades and looking after her increasingly forgetful grandmother, Memaw, while Momma works. When the magic school faces threat of shutdown, the students' families must either find a way to swing tuition at another academy or be sanitized of their magic. Desperate to save her school, Kyana enters a baking competition with a $50,000 grand prize; where using her powers backfires, threatening the powers of Park Row's magical residents. Successfully illustrating themes of class separation and economic opportunity across a mostly Black cast, Elle (Wings of Ebony) builds a story of familial love and friendship and tops it with pure culinary enthusiasm. Ages 8: 11. Agent: Jodi Reamer, Writers House. (Aug.)

#2377095 New Dragon City (Prebound)

written by Mari Mancusi

No one predicted the dragon apocalypse. The dragons came suddenly and decimated the world as we knew it, including New York City. Now, three years later, Noah, his hardcore survivalist father, and a ragtag group of survivors are barely scraping by in this new reality. Noah has seen the damage these creatures can do firsthand. When it comes to dragons: It's kill or be killed. But a chance encounter between Noah and a young dragon forces him to question everything he thought he knew.

978-1-5364-8452-6 Little, Brown Books for Young Readers ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 352

pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Five years have passed since the dragon apocalypse, when dragons arrived and burned everything in their path. Noah and his parents were among the survivors, taking shelter in the New York City subway and emerging only in the months when dragons hibernate. After his mother disappears, Noah ventures out to search for supplies and spots a dragon, setting off a chain of events that leaves him and his dad alone in pursuit of dragons and his mom. When Noah finds a baby dragon named Asha, he and his father are forced to reconsider their negative preconceptions about these creatures, and since his father won't open his eyes to the truth, Noah must do all he can to save Asha and the dragons. This fast-paced adventure provides an inventive take on the postapocalyptic novel, mixing the magic of dragons into a survival story set in New York City. Filled with vibrant characters and told from the perspectives of Noah and Asha, New Dragon City shows that things are not always what they seem.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When a young dragon saves Noah's life, he realizes that dragons may not be as monstrous as he was taught. It's April in New York City, and a lot has changed in the years since dragons appeared and society collapsed. The time has come for people to go underground for the summer to avoid the dangerous beasts emerging from hibernation, but Noah's mom has been missing for two months, and his dad isn't going without her. Not wanting to be separated from both his parents, Noah devises a plan to get himself left behind. A chance encounter with a baby dragon named Asha sets a series of events in motion that cascade beyond Noah's control, threatening the safety of everyone—human and dragon. Caught between parents who are as unable to see eye to eye as the humans and dragons, 12-year-old Noah is a sympathetic character with a gentle demeanor and a kind heart. His struggle to balance a desire not to disappoint either of his parents with his own developing ideas about what is right and true will resonate deeply. A nuanced exploration of the ways external influences can change us for better or worse is threaded through this story with a vividly rendered setting and a tense, high-stakes adventure at its center. Noah and his family default to White; there is some racial diversity in the supporting cast. A heartwarming, hopeful dragon-filled journey through family life and the importance of finding common ground. (Fantasy. 8-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Five years after the dragon apocalypse wiped out most of humankind, and two years after his survivalist father's bunker ran out of food, 12-year-old Noah is eking out a tenuous existence as part of a band of survivors in New York City. When the dragons awake from their winter hibernation a month early, while Noah's out scavenging for nonperishables, the group relocates from their part-time hotel residence to their subway-tunnel shelter. Noah, however, secretly remains aboveground to search with his dad for Noah's mother, who has purportedly joined a cult of dragon sympathizers. When a chance Times Square encounter with a young dragon named Asha leaves Noah inexplicably connected to her via a mental bond, the revelation suggests it may be possible for humans and dragons to coexist peacefully, but Noah's father refuses to back down from his anti-dragon crusade. In a contemporary-feeling metropolitan adventure replete with dragon deniers and fake news, Mancusi (the Dragon Ops series) lightly sketches the society's day-to-day realities; if the resulting world is unevenly built, it also imbues Noah's experiences with a sense of awe, making for an entertaining, flashy novel centering family and interspecies friendship. Noah reads as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Mandy Hubbard, Emerald City Literary Agency. (Oct.)

#2377097 Ghost of Spruce Point (Prebound)

written by Nancy Tandon

Twelve-year-old Parker has grown up in his family's Home Away Inn, nestled on a wooded peninsula in Maine called Spruce Point. His best friend, Frankie, has been staying at the inn every summer for years with her family. But lately, business at the inn hasn't been great, and Parker is pretty sure he knows why. It's long been rumored that Mrs. Gruvlig, one of the few year-rounders on Spruce Point, has unique abilities of the supernatural kind. As more and more spooky happenings occur around the Point, Parker and Frankie are convinced Spruce Point has been officially cursed.

978-1-5364-8454-0 Aladdin ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 730

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews During a summer in coastal Maine, the kids of Spruce Point work to break a ghostly curse and save a family inn. The Home Away Inn has been in 12-year-old Parker Emerton's family for generations, and he wants to keep it that way, but unlucky occurrences mean money is tight, and Parker's parents are contemplating selling. He worries about having to leave this place he loves. Along with his younger sister, Bailey; two cousins; and summer friend Frankie, Parker is convinced that a ghost has placed a curse on the place. The kids also suspect grouchy neighbor Mrs. Gruvlig of being a witch. In seeking to contact the ghost and investigate suspected supernatural phenomena, the kids end up solving some of the inn's problems--just not the way they expected. Most of the phenomena turn out to have rational causes, but a bright green flashing light remains unexplained. The strange happenings draw television ghost hunters to Spruce Point, guaranteeing full rooms at the inn. This is a well-paced mystery with a strong sense of place and solidly developed, realistic relationships. Siblings, cousins, and friends work together closely--they have a high degree of independence but do not lack parental oversight. Parker is adopted, and his school counselor believes he has obsessive tendencies; these facts come up in passing. Main characters default to White. Kids tackle problems both supernatural and real in this atmospheric story. (Mystery. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An eerie ghost story morphs into an anthem for cooperation amid climate change in Tandon's (The Way I Say It) camaraderie-filled Maine mystery. "Particular and thorough" Parker Emerton, 12, loves his adoptive family's secluded inn home, but with rising sea levels eroding coastal tourism, his parents fear having to give it up for jobs in Boston. Calling a secret tree house meeting with his cousins and best friend, Parker plots to save the beloved Home Away Inn, suggesting advertising and cooking classes, winning a fair prize for pumpkins... and breaking the curse of an ancient local shipwreck. After storms surge and unexplained green lights flash, the kids contact the ghostly young wanderer that haunts a crotchety neighbor's yard, but when the figure reveals more questions than answers, the kids pit their ingenuity against the inn's nebulous curse. Urgent present-tense narration and abundant sensory details initially establish a skin-crawling atmosphere, but a realistic, friendship-centric feel soon dominates the tightly paced narrative, and the young investigators' idealistic tenacity results in a supernaturally tinged mystery with a summer camp vibe. All main characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Emma Sector, Prospect Agency. (Aug)

#2364078 Curse on Spectacle Key (Prebound)

written by Chantel Acevedo

Frank Fernandez's family never stays in one place for long. So when his parents announce they're moving to Spectacle Key, Florida, to live in a lighthouse--this time for good!--Frank is thrilled. Then one day while exploring, Frank meets a girl in old-fashioned clothes, with no memory of who she is. What she does know, though, is that the island is under a curse--and she needs Frank's help to figure out how to lift it. But what if learning the truth about Spectacle Key means losing the first real friend he's ever had?

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$20.95

978-1-5364-8324-6 Balzer & Bray ©2024 5 x 7-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Acevedo's charming ghost mystery is a thrilling ride that follows "Friendless" Frank Fernandez, a boy who bonds with a pair of ghosts as they help him try to break a curse on the island he calls home, unearthing a multitude of unexpected secrets in the process. Frank is excited about a lot of things, like being accepted to his hometown's Junior Librarian program, but he longs for more friends and for acceptance from his peers. When Frank's family abruptly moves--yet again!--to an eerie lighthouse in Spectacle Key, Florida, he mourns the loss of another chance to fit in, only to discover that his new home is happily haunted. Despite the lush, atmospheric writing and sweet premise, the stakes grow higher and higher, and Frank's solving of Spectacle Key's curse may result in him losing the one ghostly friend he's been able to make and keep. Young horror and mystery fans, and kids who grew up with the sole company of their imaginations, will delight in uncovering the clues and following Frank on his journey to acceptance and belonging. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Frank is tired of following his renovator parents from house to house, so when they purchase a lighthouse in Florida, he dares to hope that their promise of this being their last move is solid. The lighthouse, on the other hand, is far from solid, and the endless repair list that grows with each day taxes his parents' patience and sets them fighting about the smallest thing. Frank also wonders, however, if the unsettling vibe surrounding the area could be contributing to the tension. He is glad to be distracted by Connie, a mysterious girl who is invisible to everyone but Frank and who can't remember anything about her past. Their growing bond helps Frank see what true friendship is, and he resolves to help Connie recover her memories while also helping an angry ghost find peace. Frank's loneliness is palpable, and this makes him particularly sympathetic to a ghost who only wants to be remembered and named--Frank knows down to his bones the feeling of being invisible in new schools each year. Acevedo achieves a remarkable amount of character development alongside a fast-paced and spooky mystery, all within a trim page count. The sticky heat, Cuban comfort food, and quirky small-town happenings are vividly described, and readers will be relieved when it seems that Frank has indeed found his permanent home. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Eleven-year-old Frank must solve a supernatural mystery to save his new home. As fifth grade comes to an end, Frank Fernández is looking forward to finally staying put in Alabama for a second year, as promised, after a childhood spent following his parents' home renovation work all across the country. Frequent relocation has made Frank wary of forming friendships or making plans, but his hopes for more stability are temporarily dashed when his parents announce plans to renovate a lighthouse in the Florida Keys, near where his mother grew up and his father's home country of Cuba. Papi promises this will be their last move, though: The lighthouse will be theirs. But from their first day on Spectacle Key, things seem to go wrong: Tensions rise between his parents, and Frank's hopes of a forever home are under threat from seemingly supernatural forces. In order to put down roots, Frank and new ghostly friend Connie, a White girl with freckles, must discover what secrets the island is hiding, uncovering Frank's own family roots along the way. Frank is a fan of horror--he names his new Great Dane puppy Mary Shelley. But though there is some mild peril to be found, rather than a ghostly thriller, this is an appealing, lightly spooky family drama with valuable lessons for those who would hide from a difficult past instead of confronting and healing generational trauma. Supernatural mystery meets generational drama with hopeful endings for all. (Supernatural. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Cuban American 11-year-old Frank Fernandez, an ardent book-lover, has never resided anywhere for more than a year, making it difficult for him to establish friendships. Though his parents had agreed to stay in Alabama for two years, their work renovating unique buildings leads them instead to a lighthouse in the Florida Keys, which is meant to finally become their forever home. But after arriving, inexplicable things begin to happen at the Spectacle Key property; thorny vines grow on the lighthouse's exterior walls, hundreds of blue crabs infest the building, and Frank begins to hear a sighing, sniffing sound accompanied by a sweet smell. After conducting an exothermic science experiment in a nearby abandoned building, Frank meets Connie, a white girl his age who can't recall anything about herself. As his parents start fighting and incidents around the lighthouse increase in severity, Frank, Connie, and Frank's Great Dane puppy, Mary Shelley, investigate a local curse, hoping to protect Frank's home. Acevedo (the Muse Squad series) concocts a tidy small-town mystery, filled with ghosts and suspicious townsfolk, that's led by an earnest tween's compassion and hope for friendship, justice, and stability. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Frank, an avid reader who loves horror stories, is extremely frustrated with the frequent transfers his family makes to accommodate his parents' work as building renovators. When they tell the 11-year-old they acquired a new project, they promise that this move, to Spectacle Key, FL, will be the final one. No sooner does the family begin unpacking boxes in their new lighthouse home than things begin to go awry, from electrical malfunctions to crab infestations to a historical preservation group pressuring the family to leave. As tensions escalate at home, Frank escapes by exploring the island, only to encounter mounting evidence of a supernatural presence on the key. Aided by Connie, a young girl who may be a ghost, Frank realizes he must learn the history of his new home, and his family, to lift the curse before his parents give up and move away. This middle grade—friendly horror story features a Cuban American protagonist who has an extremely positive relationship with his family but is less competent at making friends, even with the not-quite-living. While the history Frank unearths is less than pleasant, he reminds the adults that people should not cover up the past just because it is ugly, and there is importance in remembering. Quirky secondary characters, including a mystic and a circus-acrobat librarian, enhance the narrative, as do Acevedo's spin with horror tropes and sly wordplay. VERDICT A solid purchase to enhance popular middle grade horror collections. The balance of humor and horror should attract readers, and the lessons Frank learns are relevant to all.—Nancy Nadig

#2348459 Race for the Ruby Turtle (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Stephen Bramucci

Jake Rizzi is about to spend the summer at his great-aunt's cabin in the mossy, sodden Oregon backwoods. His parents seem to need a break from him and his ADHD. He tries not to take it personally, but isn't sure about his aunt's off-the-grid lifestyle and strange stories about a turtle with a ruby-colored shell.

978-1-5476-0702-0 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist In a mix of personal and ecological issues, Bramucci places 11-year-old Jake, weighed down by his ADHD diagnosis, and his formidable great-aunt between a rare turtle and several avid specimen collectors. A mention of a red-shelled turtle in an old, locally published miscellany of reminiscences and folktales has gone viral, and so hardly has Jake been dropped off at his distant great-aunt Hettle's than the small Oregon town of Nehalem sees a rush of eager-to-believe cryptid hunters—plus one scary professional poacher. The efforts of Jake and Hettle, joined by a local mycologist's strong-minded daughter, Mae, to discourage the searchers lead to some reckless acts and suspenseful encounters, but Jake's inner struggles both to see past his disability and to manage dreams of finding the elusive creature (if it even exists) create equally compelling conflicts. At least one of those conflicts is resolved by the end, and in a comment by Hettle, the author also leaves readers with the priceless insight that "the only way to protect the natural world is to love it."

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A boy with ADHD explores nature and himself. Eleven-year-old Jake Rizzi just wants to be seen as "normal"; he blames his brain for leading him into trouble and making him do things that annoy his peers and even his own parents. Case in point: He's stuck spending a week in rural Oregon with an aunt he barely knows while his parents go on vacation. Jake's reluctance changes as he learns about the town's annual festival, during which locals search for a fabled turtle. But news of this possibly undiscovered species has spread. Although Aunt Hettle insists to Jake that it's only folklore, the fame-hungry convene, sure that the Ruby-Backed Turtle is indeed real—just as Jake discovers is the case. Keeping its existence secret is critical to protecting the rare creature from a poacher and others with ill intentions. Readers will keep turning pages to find out how Jake and new friend Mia will foil the caricatured villains. Along the way, Bramucci packs in teachable moments around digital literacy, mindfulness, and ecological interdependence, along with the message that "the only way to protect the natural world is to love it." Jake's inner monologue elucidates the challenges and benefits of ADHD as well as practical coping strategies. Whether or not readers share Jake's diagnosis, they'll empathize with his insecurities. Jake and his family present white; Mia is Black, and names of secondary characters indicate some ethnic diversity. A wild romp that champions making space for vulnerable creatures and each other. (Adventure. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2257278 Birdie's Billions (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Edith Cohn

For as long as twelve-year-old Birdie can remember, it's always been just her and her mom, which means there's not lots of extra money around. Then Birdie makes one silly mistake that has a big consequence: Mom loses her job. When Birdie discovers a huge stash of cash in an abandoned house, she doesn't think twice about where that cash came from; she just knows it must be the answer to their problems.

978-1-5476-0711-2 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 274 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Skateboarder Birdie, 11 and white, lives with her single mother in fancy Valley Lake, where they moved so her mom could make more money. But soon after Birdie inadvertently causes her mom to get fired from her housecleaning job, jeopardizing their ability to pay rent, an incident at a local lake sees the wealthy mother of Birdie's best friend forbidding the relationship, citing Birdie as a "bad influence" from "the wrong side of town." It doesn't help that Birdie feels she has to keep secrets about her situation, including her mom's need for work and her father's incarceration. All Birdie wants is to not have to worry about finances, so when she follows a cat into an abandoned house and finds $500,000 in a wall, she devises a way to post some to her mom. But the transformation has complicating effects: Birdie tells lies to keep her cover, frets about the origin of the money, and suddenly isn't so sure who she is anymore. Cohn's (Spirit's Key) entertaining tale is infused with timely reflections on class, money, and privilege. Birdie's frustration and pain is profound, and her feelings about wealth are increasingly complex. A deftly plotted story that thoughtfully renders a close parent-child bond while engaging readers through the mystery of the money. Ages 10: 12. (Dec.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Birdie moves to Valley Lake so her mother can get high-paying work and Birdie can go to a good school, yet she is not rolling in cash like many of her posh sixth-grade schoolmates. Then Birdie discovers a treasure trove of money in an abandoned house, and their whole lives change. Birdie is excited they've struck it rich, and her mother will never have to work again—now all she has to do is convince her mother to take the cash. Matters go from bad to worse when her friend Hailey's mother starts spreading rumors that Birdie is a thief. Birdie's lies grow as she tries to cover up where she found the money. The main character is well developed, and readers will relate to Birdie's angst at being poor and the challenge of always telling the truth. They will relate to how fragile friendships can be, how being a good friend can mean making tough choices, and how people can judge you before they get to know you. Hailey's mother is well written, cruel and insistent on only her views and judging people harshly. Mom and Birdie's relationship is open and at times feels a bit idyllic. The recurrent themes of not judging a person and always telling the truth can be a little heavy-handed at times, and the story wraps up too conveniently, with everything coming together for the good of all in the end. Fans of Christopher Paul Curtis's Mr. Chickee's Funny Money or Eleanor Estes's The Hundred Dresses may enjoy this title. VERDICT A hopeful story about friendship, prejudice, and overcoming adversity that will keep readers engaged.—Elena Schuck, Mattacheese M.S., Marstons Mills, MA

#2364784 Shark Teeth (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sherri Winston

Sharkita "Kita" Hayes is always waiting. Waiting for her mama to mess up. Waiting for social services to be called again. Waiting for her and her siblings to be separated. Waiting for her worst fear to come true. But Mama promises things are different now. She's got a good job, she's stopped drinking, stopped going out every night—it's almost enough to make Kita believe her this time. But she still can't shake the feeling that everything could go up in flames at any moment. And when her dance coach starts asking questions, Kita is more determined than ever to make sure her family stays together—even if it means falling apart herself. But could it be that Kita's worst fear is actually the best thing that could happen to her family?

978-1-5476-0850-8 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2024 304 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Nothing is more important to seventh-grader Sharkita (Kita) than keeping herself and her younger siblings, Lilli and Lamar, out of foster care, but Mama doesn't make that easy. Beautiful and magnetic, Mama is a loving parent when she wants to be, but too often she chooses drinking and partying over her children, leaving Kita to care for the littles alone—sometimes for days on end. Lately, though, Mama has been behaving responsibly enough for Kita to feel a glimmer of hope that things might be different this time. She allows herself to join her school's new majorette squad as a twirler, something that would've been impossible if she had to look after Lilli and Lamar. Devastatingly, Kita's hopes go up in smoke when Mama leaves the littles home alone while Kita's out with friends, resulting in the siblings being sent to separate foster families. Winston dives deep into the stark realities some children face in unstable homes, and the immense pressure that that unfairly puts on young people. As unfortunate as Kita's home life is, she is surrounded by caring adults who see the signs that Kita's family is in crisis and do everything in their power to support her, even when she isn't yet ready to accept their help. A powerful, ultimately uplifting portrait of breaking a toxic cycle and embracing a better future.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Winston (Lotus Bloom and the Afro Revolution) delivers a nuanced telling about a Black family in crisis via this harrowing, compassionate read. After having been placed in separate foster homes, "all because Mama went out one night and decided not to come back for nine days," 12-year-old Sharkita has just been reunited with her five-year-old sister, Lillieana, and her eight-year-old brother, Lamara, who was born with fetal alcohol poisoning. Though her mother promises things will be different this time, Sharkita; whose classmates bully her for her "shark teeth," or hyperdontia; is prepared to single-handedly care for her siblings like she always does. Surprisingly, however, Mama allows her to join her school's newly founded majorette squad, instead of requiring Sharkita to return home immediately after school to tend to her siblings like she used to. Joining the majorettes sparks a flicker of normalcy, but Sharkita still contends with anxiety stemming from her mother's neglect that feels like a shark swallowing her whole ("I didn't know which was worse; a life with her or one without"). Driven by an emotionally intelligent and complex protagonist, this courageous story about strength in the face of neglect, and the bravery to demand what is best for one's family and oneself, is potent and powerful. Ages 9: 11. (Jan.)

#2314029 When Sea Becomes Sky (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gillian McDunn

Bex and Davey's summer in the saltmarsh is different this year, thanks to the record-breaking drought. Even the fish seem listless—and each day the water level lowers farther. When they discover a mysterious underwater statue, they're thrilled at the chance to solve the puzzle of its origin.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist It's June in coastal North Carolina, and 11-year-old Bex wants nothing more than to spend her summer exploring the salt marshes in her rowboat with her younger brother, Davey, who's "a bit of a genius." He has become uncommonly quiet over the past year. Meanwhile Bex, who aims to be a writer, feels that she needs his encouragement to keep trying. Currently, she's in a creative dry spell. Her family lives on an island in a region where a drought is gradually lowering the water level in the marsh. Spotting a metallic hand reaching upwards from the water's surface, Bex discovers a larger-than-life statue mostly submerged. Bex decides to find the sculptor and discover why this artwork was hidden in the marsh. McDunn, whose middle-grade novels include The Queen Bee and Me (2020) and Honestly Elliott (2022), creates memorable characters within a distinctive setting. Written with immediacy and grace, Bex's first-person narrative increasingly focuses on the mystery and her determination to solve it with Davey's help, until a meeting with the sculptor forces this unreliable narrator to reveal the central truth that she's been hiding all along. It's a pivotal moment for Bex and a wrenching one for readers of this quiet, yet fully engaging novel.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An uneasy vibe permeates this expansive mystery starring two closely bonded siblings. Contentious 11-year-old aspiring writer Bex and her quiet, easygoing nine-year-old brother Davey, who cue as white, live on Pelican Island off the Carolina coast, and spend freewheeling days in their favorite marsh spot. When a pervasive drought lowers the water level, and Bex notices a human-size metal statue embedded in the mud, she believes that the find could detour the building of a planned bridge to the island, which is currently only accessible by ferry. The bridge promises to bring more tourists to the remote island, improving the local economy, but it's also likely to alter the ecosystem and threaten the kids' father's job as ferry captain. Davey tends not to speak around others, but he chats regularly with Bex as they work to solve the art mystery. Bex, meanwhile, studiously avoids "used-to-be friend" Millie Ochoa-Chen, who's Taiwanese and Mexican American. Positing that "writers must tell the truth thoroughly, constantly, and recklessly," McDunn (Honestly Elliott) uses the island's drought to imbue the story with an anxious feeling as Bex strives to prolong the waning summer. An author's note details the book's personal origins. Ages 8: 11. Agent: Marietta Zacker, Gallt & Zacker Literary. (Feb.)

#2376217 Trouble at the Tangerine (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gillian McDunn

Simon's family is always on the move. Every few months, they load up their van, "Vincent Van Go," and set off for a new adventure. According to his dad, you can't live an extraordinary life by staying in one place. But all Simon wants is to settle down, so he's hatched a plan: to make their latest apartment in the Tangerine Pines building his forever home.

978-1-5476-1100-3 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2024 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Once again, 11-year-old Simon and his parents are moving to an apartment in a new town, one where, he fervently hopes, they will stay forever. But before they have had time to settle in, a fire alarm sends all the residents streaming from their building, Tangerine Pines (aka the Tangerine). When they return to their homes, one resident reports the theft of her heirloom necklace, valued at one million dollars. Soon a neighbor named Amaya, a lively girl who befriended Simon soon after his arrival in town, proposes that they investigate the crime together and identify the thief. To that end, they interview the building's residents, consider possible suspects, and consult with Mrs. Kobayashi (a retired detective) about the case. McDunn, whose novels include Honestly Elliott (2022) and When Sea Becomes Sky (2023), constructs a story that even readers new to mystery novels can understand, and she fills it with quirky, interesting characters of all ages. Writing a whodunit without an obvious villain until the end, she creates a narrative with broad appeal for middle-grade readers.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A boy in search of roots solves his first mystery. Simon Hyde, 11 1/2, worries that the burglary at the Tangerine Pines apartments will result in his parents' quickly moving from the new home that he'd hoped might be permanent. Including the most recent one, where he broke his leg in a fall from a tree, Simon lived in 27 different places before arriving in Rigsby. His parents, both digital nomads, make a living from remote work and their popular The Hydes Go Seek social media account, which details their itinerant lifestyle. Simon feels they've been "adrift like a clump of dandelion seeds." He's kept a rock collection--"one small piece of every place we've ever lived"--but he longs for more lasting connections. When a priceless necklace goes missing, Simon, who reads white, tries to identify the thief with the help of ebullient new friend Amaya Sharma, who's also 11. Another neighbor, retired detective Mrs. Kobayashi, offers him tips, notably, "Be patient and allow yourself to observe." This advice turns out to be a great strategy for getting to know new friends and neighbors, including Calvin Morris, a Black boy around his age. McDunn's characters are nicely realized, and the mystery is satisfyingly resolved. A likable hero and a neatly plotted mystery. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old Simon Hyde's parents' nomadic lifestyle, and yet another move across the country in their "Vincent Van Go," has made him risk averse. Having lived in 27 places, Simon has made up a fool-proof plan: Code Name Chameleon. Part one is to blend in with his new surroundings, and part two; perhaps the most imperative of the pair; is to not be weird. Though Simon loves collecting rocks and reading fantasy novels, he can't chance revealing his true self, especially since there's been so little stability in his life to begin with. But maybe this time will be different: implementing steps one and two of Operation Rigsby, his new, top-secret scheme, Simon has been researching the best home for his family and has successfully led them to Tangerine Pines. He immediately meets cheery, idiosyncratic neighbors and, upon feeling a spark of "a forever home," enacts step three: "Stay there forever. This was the most important part; and also the most complicated." When his neighbor's necklace is stolen, Simon and his new acquaintance is on the case; and he'll do anything to prolong their stay. In this quiet story of hope, belonging, and adventure, McDunn (When Sea Becomes Sky) presents Simon's sincere worries and charming schemes with a humorous, lighthearted approach. Simon reads as white. Ages 8: 11. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--Meet Simon Hyde--he's on a mission to put down permanent roots in Rigby. Simon's usual rules for new towns? "Blend In and Don't Be Weird." But after moving 27 times, as a part of his parents' Hyde Go Seek travel blog, he's tired of always being the new kid. This time, he wants a real home and genuine friends. Trouble is, some jewel thefts at his new apartment complex, Tangerine Pines, are getting in the way of Simon's "Operation Rigby." He has already made friends with local petsitter Amaya and her "arch-nemesis" Calvin Morris, making Rigby feel like the home he has always wanted. But can Simon and his new friends solve the missing jewelry mystery before his parents get spooked, and he finds himself on the move again? Blending elements of mystery and realistic fiction, this title mixes a tight whodunit plot with common middle grade themes, such as growing up, fitting in, and developing friendships. The narrative centers around Simon's quest for a permanent home, but a secondary conflict, the jewel heist, injects intrigue into the plot with each proceeding chapter. With chapters averaging between six-to-nine pages in length and maintaining a balanced level of suspense throughout, this would be an excellent choice for either a beginning of the year read-aloud or as an independent read for young mystery buffs seeking a longer text. VERDICT An excellent purchase for middle grade mystery collections that will be an easy sell for kids and teachers alike.--Louie Lauer Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2364110 Emma and the Love Spell (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Meredith Ireland

Twelve-year-old, Korean-American adoptee Emma Davidson has a problem. Two problems. Okay, three: 1. She has a crush on her best friend, Evangeline, that she hasn't been able to share 2. Evangeline has to move away because her parents are getting a divorce 3. Oh, and Emma is a secret witch who can't really control her powers. It's a complicated summer between sixth and seventh grade. Emma's parents made her promise that she'd keep her powers a secret and never, ever use them. But if Evangeline's parents fall back in love, then she won't have to move. And how hard could one little love spell be?

978-1-5476-1260-4 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist powers since she was a child, and she's been taught by her adoptive parents to keep her emotions neutral and conceal them, lest they spiral out of her control. When she learns her best and only friend (and crush), Evangeline, might be moving away because her parents want to divorce, she concocts a magical plan to try to get Evangeline's parents to fall back in love. Love is complicated, though, as she finds out the hard way. Ireland's sweet story about a young witch coming into her own and learning to handle her new abilities emphasizes the importance of not only self-acceptance but also trusting one's intuition, especially when, without getting into any scary territory, Emma must contend with a suspicious adult who might not have her best magical interests at heart. With plenty of relatable depth and wide appeal, this is a stellar pick for fans of the Love Sugar Magic books or other blends of realistic fiction and witchy fantasy.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Fresh out of sixth grade, Korean American adoptee Emma Davidson has the perfect summer planned out; and it definitely doesn't involve using her magical powers, which seem to go haywire whenever she loses control of her emotions. But then she finds out that the parents of her best friend and crush Avangeline are getting divorced, and that Avangeline is moving away. Though she's initially keen on following her own parents' advice to avoid using her powers and "act normal," Emma believes that if she can use her magic to reconcile Avangeline's parents, her bestie won't have to move. With help from her talking parrot and mind-reading cat, Emma practices her magic, but when things go awry, Emma promises Avangeline that she won't interfere anymore; and covertly breaks that promise as she continues to refine her powers with the help of an unexpected mentor. Magic abounds in this cheery tale by Ireland (Everyone Hates Kelsie Miller), who employs fast pacing, good humor, and tons of heart to adeptly convey one queer tween's struggle to navigate her feelings and desires, as well as her burgeoning realization that it will take more than good intentions (and fledging enchantments) to repair damaged relationships. Major supporting characters read as white. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Lauren Spieller, Folio Literary.(Jan.)

Quantity	Unit Price
----------	------------

#2366075 Hummingbird Season (Hardcover (Trade))

1

$17.99

written by Stephanie V. Lucianovic

Archie's life-and the whole world-is turned upside down by Covid-19. Suddenly there are no Friday night dinners out, no going to school, no hanging out with friends . . . no leaving the house at all.

978-1-5476-1274-1 Bloomsbury Publishing ©2024 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 300 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 3.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Thanks to COVID-19, thinks Archie, nearly 10, nothing is normal now. His parents are working at home while he and his older brother, Hank, have been relegated to distance learning, which makes Archie feel invisible. And while he loves to laugh, he feels lonely. His life changes one day, however, when he sees a hummingbird and, fascinated, starts a hummingbird journal, determined to learn everything he can about the tiny birds. With his mother's help, he puts up feeders, which attract a hummingbird he calls Ruby. Ruby disappears when a thunderstorm causes fires that fill the air around Archie's California home with smoke. Happily, Ruby returns, and Archie's teacher invites him to tell the class all about Ruby and other hummingbirds. Lucianovic's first-person novel in verse is extremely well written and filled with colorful phrases: Archie is fascinated by eyebrows, which he calls the stand-up comedians of the face. Ruby's wings whirl like his friend Liam's cat's purr. Young readers who have experienced COVID-19 (and who like birds) are sure to enjoy this quiet novel. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books COVID-19 upends all that is familiar to nine-year-old Archie, who is suddenly stuck at home, having swapped school for a tablet, and distance between family seems to grow despite their constant physical presence. Although everyone is trapped at home, asthma elevates his risk of contracting the virus, heightening his feelings of isolation, and the California wildfires further threaten his airways-it all feels pretty rotten and desperate. Overwhelmed by uncertainty, Archie discovers a glimmer of hope in the form of the hummingbirds that visit his windows. His developing connection to Ruby the hummingbird renews his spirit and restores the happiness he had abruptly lost. Archie imagines himself as a hummingbird able to "fly . . . to a place where COVID couldn't get any of us" and admires their ability to adapt to changing environments. Lucianovic beautifully crafts this novel in verse, giving voice to a boy who is boisterous at times but often feels left on mute, lost in the shuffle of a changing world. The poetic form is a wise authorial choice, with short sentences and smaller sections giving readers who have lived through COVID some space to process their own feelings without overwrought prose. Archie, his family, and Ruby remind readers there's comfort to be found in being together, even when everything else feels like it's falling apart. QB COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Lucianovic documents the life of her protagonist during COVID-19 when "every day / everything / is the same boring same." Archie's father works from his bedroom, his mother from the kitchen, and his older brother is still allowed to play outside with friends (some unmasked). Archie wonders, "I don't know / how you can be lonely / when you're stuck / in your house / with a family / who has no / choice but to be / with you / but I know / that's the way it is." COVID has created a near-dystopian world, and the boring ordinariness of Archie's life belies the dangers of a time-warped existence where "a week feels much longer / than it did before. / A day takes / forever to end. / And time feels like it's made of worksheets." Archie simply wants connection -- with parents, brother, classmates. The hummingbirds outside his window represent that, with their happy, friendly, "cozy" whirring-wing sounds reminding him of family moments he misses. Lucianovic portrays Archie's interior world in straightforward first-person verse that effectively captures the voice of an elementary school boy living through extraordinary times. Dean Schneider(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A California boy chronicles the long, difficult Covid-19 lockdown in verses that explore his confused emotions. On the day "that started everything" and that "was also a day that ended everything," Archie's life is turned upside down. School is abruptly closed, his parents must work from home, and big brother Hank is ever more difficult. Archie's asthma puts him at risk, causing his parents to take ever-greater precautions. All this, plus attending "(not real) school at home," makes him feel more and more isolated, unseen, and muted. He has outbursts of anger and despair: "...even though we're together / stuck inside the house / we're not really together-together." Archie's imagination is captured when he hears a brief buzzing sound, senses something whipping past, and witnesses "the smallest bird ever," and he soon finds a new purpose. With help from his family, he carefully provides nectar for his "hummingbird restaurant" and becomes especially attached to Ruby, a hummingbird with red patches, as he watches for and worries about her, especially when a wildfire rages. Some poems are lists or consist of a few lines; others flow breathlessly, offering detailed accounts of events, beautiful descriptions, or information about hummingbirds. Archie often repeats important words, phrases, or concepts in a rhythmic way that emphasizes his escalating emotions. He's intensely loving, deeply compassionate, insightful, inventive, and expressive. Readers will gasp in wonder and empathy, cry and sometimes laugh, cheer at the upbeat conclusion, and feel every emotion that's so powerfully expressed. Brilliant. (author's note) (Verse fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Set in 2020, this melancholy verse novel by Lucianovic (The League of Picky Eaters) stars young asthmatic Archie, who's experiencing a particularly strong disconnect from family and friends while living through the pandemic in California: "Loneliness/ is a word I knew/ before/ but it wasn't a word I felt/ before." He especially mourns the loss of closeness with his older brother Hank, who seems to be thriving in their new situation, pushing Archie away when he needs Hank most. Feeling increasingly unseen and "muted," Archie grows acutely oppressed by the rote sameness of lockdown, which is disrupted by wildfires. Though Archie's overarching trajectory in dealing with negative emotions, as well as his understanding of his estrangement with Hank, feel overly mature, many readers will identify with his struggles with long-distance learning and feelings of isolation. His discovery of and growing fascination with a hummingbird propels him toward positivity and eventually helps him make the empathetic connections he longs for, shifting the story focus to Archie's empowerment and interpersonal growth and resulting in a satisfyingly realistic resolution. All characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 2–4—When the world shuts down in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic, Archie struggles to adapt to school moving online. His older brother, Hank, seems to be thriving, and even gets to spend time with friends outside, but Archie feels increasingly alone and isolated, and doesn't think that his teacher and his classmates care if he is in class or not. On top of that, the California wildfires make even the outside air dangerous for him to breathe because of his asthma. When he sees a hummingbird in his yard, he becomes fascinated with her and sets up feeders all around the house. Over time, the hummingbird becomes something that helps Archie find and build connections, both with his brother and with his class. Told in a series of free verse poems, this novel captures the confusion and isolation of the first year of the pandemic, especially for kids. The author uses the metaphor of being on mute in an online class to describe struggles that often go unheard, from the fears Archie's classmates have about situations at home to the natural disasters caused by climate change. This book would make for a great lead-in to classroom discussions or writing prompts, giving kids the opportunity to share their own memories of lockdown. VERDICT This beautifully written novel in verse offers a sensitive reflection on the pandemic and its emotional toll, even for those families who were able to stay healthy and financially stable during lockdown.—Ashley Larsen

#2387260 Gods Don't Cry: Unsung Stories of Ireland's Forgotten Immortals
(Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ellen Ryan

The ancient gods of Ireland were once worshipped throughout the land. Powerful and brave, they were unafraid to show their vulnerability, reject violence, or lean on others for support. Sadly, their stories—passed down by our ancestors—are all but forgotten.
 978-1-62371-674-5 Interlink Publishing ©2024 7-1/2 x 9-3/4 272 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $26.00

#2155911 Don't Check Out This Book! (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kate Klise

When Appleton Elementary's new school board president starts using her position to line her own pockets, it's up to student sleuths, supported by a passionate librarian, to uncover the truth in this zany epistolary novel.
 978-1-61620-976-6 Algonquin ©2020 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 160 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5 The start of the school year in Appleton, Illinois, brings new school librarian, Rita B. Danjerous, and newly elected school-board president Ivana I don't need to read a book to know I don't like it Beprawpa into position for a face-off. Not only does the school's broom-closet library now feature a green dot collection of titles on controversial or embarrassing topics that students can borrow anonymously, but the librarian is recommending books that keep students—and even some grown-ups!—awake past their bedtimes. Worse yet, Ms. Danjerous refuses to patronize Beprawpa Attire (the only clothing store in town) to outfit her nine-year-old daughter, May B, according to the newly imposed dress code. Beprawpa is set up as a straw villain, so openly corrupt that the climactic school-board meeting is less a forum for airing conflicting views, and more the event where she gets hers. Not their best, but another pun-tastic outing from the Sisters Klise, told entirely in memos, email messages, chats, letters, invoices, and newspaper reports, and dedicated to all rabble-rousing librarians and scandal-stomping young readers. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5--Things are changing at Appleton Elementary School with the arrival of the new school librarian, Rita B. Danjerous. Appleton hasn't had a school library in 14 years and, with only 19 students, had been in danger of closing. Ms. Danjerous opens the library in a broom closet, and launches a controversial new book collection addressing topics that students might be embarrassed or scared to ask for, which can be checked out without needing a library card. This newfound excitement for books among students and staff alike comes much to the chagrin of Iwana Beprawpa, the new school board president, who argues this hinders the manners and morals she is encouraging at the school. In addition, Ms. Beprawpa institutes questionable changes, such as creating a new uniform policy requiring students to purchase the uniform from her store Beprawpa Attire. When Ms. Danjerous's daughter, Maya, and her friend Sarah begin working for the local paper, they are able to report on some of these mysteries and scandals in their small town with the help of editor Etta Toryal. Written entirely in letters, e-mails, phone messages, and newspaper articles, this funny (and punny) story introduces censorship issues, political corruption, and investigative journalism. VERDICT A fun and quirky story that shows the impact of books on a small community.--Sarah Polace, Cuyahoga Public Library

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #222463 How Do You Live? (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Genzaburo Yoshino First published in 1937, Genzaburo Yoshino's How Do You Live? has long been acknowledged in Japan as a crossover classic for young readers. Academy Award-winning animator Hayao Miyazaki (Spirited Away, My Neighbor Totoro, Howl's Moving Castle) has called it his favorite childhood book and announced plans to emerge from retirement to make it the basis of a final film. 978-1-61620-977-3 Algonquin ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.8 AR Pts 10.0	1	$17.95

Reviews by: Booklist This Japanese classic, originally published in 1937 and a story beguiling enough to catch the eye of filmmaker Hayao Miyazaki, sees its first English translation here, complete with an introduction by Neil Gaiman. It's the strange and ruminative coming-of-age tale of 15-year-old Honda Jun'ichi, whose nickname, Copper, is short for Copernicus. The boy's close relationships with his unnamed uncle (who is something of a pedant) and his three best friends are front and center in the book's slow-paced development. Its spare plot comprises a clutch of episodic stories interspersed with lectures by the uncle and extended essays in Copper's notebook about the meaning of whatever event has just transpired. These reflections cover the waterfront of thought: philosophy, economics, sociology, physics, and on and on. As a result, the book is rather didactic and sometimes moralistic. However, it is enough of a sui generis curiosity to excite interest and—happily—inspire thought, and the Miyazaki and Studio Ghibli connection will drum up more than a little interest among anime fans.

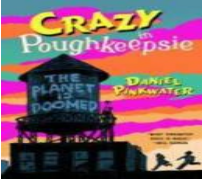

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly First published in 1937, this deeply thoughtful Japanese classic; filmmaker Hayao Miyazaki's favorite childhood book; is offered in its first English translation via Navasky's quiet, carefully measured prose. Born and raised in Tokyo, 15-year-old Honda Jun'ichi, known as Copper and small for his age, "can be a bit too mischievous." When his bank director father passed away around two years ago, Copper and his mother downsized and moved to a modest suburban home, now frequently visited by Copper's maternal uncle, with whom he is "terribly close." Interspersed with prosaic recollections of a year of Copper's school days, interpersonal dramas, and developing friendships, entries from Uncle's Notebook relay affirmative messages to Copper, covering topics such as science, philosophy, history, and poverty. What results is a gentle tale of self-discovery and reflection, and a compassionate guidebook on integrity punctuated by rich sensory details. If the book unfurls a bit slowly, Yoshino's timeless lessons ("You must live your life like a true human being and feel just what you feel"), will resonate with sensitive readers young and old. Front matter includes a foreword by Neil Gaiman; back matter includes a note from the translator. Ages 10: 14. (Oct.)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #217792 Adventures of a Dwerghish Girl (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Daniel M. Pinkwater Molly O'Malley is a clever, adventurous girl. She is also a Dwergh. Dwerghs are strange folks who live very quietly in the Catskill mountains, have lots of gold, and are kind of like dwarves (but also not!). 978-1-61696-336-1 Tachyon Publications ©2020 5-1/2 x 9 192 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 920	1	$16.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Teen Molly O'Malley is a Dwergh who lives in New York's Catskill Mountains. Like all Dwergh families, Molly's has extraordinary wealth from mining gold. As a female Dwergh, Molly is expected to tend goats and vegetables and marry a "slob male Dwergh," but she is also permitted to attend school in nearby Kingston. After a year and a half of high school, Molly knows two things: that Dwerghs, though exceedingly boring, possess magic, and that she needs to live on her own. After getting a job at a pizza place, Molly meets the usual, delightful assortment of oddball characters who show up in stories by Pinkwater (the Hoboken Chicken series); here, the cast includes an 18th-century teenage ghost and the Catskill Witch. With their help, Molly must stop androids disguised as British Redcoats from burning New York City, as well as gangsters from stealing the Dwerghs' gold. Molly is curious, practical, and resourceful, and despite her desire for independence, she remains connected to her Dwergh family and heritage. The comically absurd ending is an enjoyable wrap-up to this fast-paced, unexpected adventure that combines history, folklore, and nonsensical fun. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jennifer Laughran, Andrea Brown Literary. (Sept.)

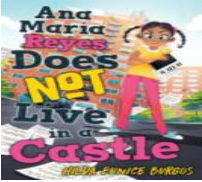

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Written in Pinkwater's unique offbeat style, this novel is part legend, part modern(ish) personal narrative. A Dwerghish girl (of Dutch descent) who calls herself Molly O'Mally recounts days at home and her community life before telling of her adventures outside of that isolated, peaceful place in the Catskills where Dwergh life has remained the same for generations. Molly leaves her Dwergh village to go to the city of Kingston, NY, where she sells a couple Dwergh gold coins, gets a job in a local pizza shop belonging to a man from

Sierra Leone, and sets up a tent of string and garbage bags in the woods behind the shop. On one late night walk in the old town stockade, Molly meets a ghost who becomes a friend and helps Molly understand an apparent plot to use androids to reenact the burning of Kingston from 1777. Molly and her (living) friend, Leni, take a bus trip to New York City to have hotdogs and papaya juice, which Molly later revisits to see the Yorkville witch who can help her solve the mystery. Witty, unorthodox, and highly entertaining twists and turns abound as Molly uses the wisdom of the Dwargs, the help of the local genius DJ, magic parsnips, and her Uncle Norbert's guidance to save Kingston. Small ink drawings open each chapter with a bit of entertainment and some information about the story. VERDICT Those who enjoy a good mystery with an unusual plot, strong characters, and smart language will find connections between this unbelievable story and the incredible adventures of real life.—Lindsay Persohn, Univ. of South Florida, Tampa

		Quantity	Unit Price
	#2277083 Crazy in Poughkeepsie (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Daniel M. Pinkwater Mick is a good kid, but maybe he can use just a little guidance. But it's unclear who will be guiding whom, because Mick's brother came home from Tibet with the self-proclaimed Guru Lumpu Smythe-Finkel and his dog Lhasa-and then promptly settled both of them in Mick's bedroom. The thing about this kind of guru is that he doesn't seem to know exactly what he's trying to do. 978-1-61696-374-3 Tachyon Publications ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 192 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic	1	$16.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 In the seemingly inexhaustible Pinkwater's latest short novel, Molly, a character from Pinkwater's Adventures of a Dwerfish Girl (2020) who belongs to a secretive people (which "rhymes," the author hints, "with schmepron"), joins reluctant young narrator Mick and a motley group of fellow travelers in a tricked-out 1958 Buick convertible, complete with built-in toaster, to deliver a ghostly cetacean to the "whale pearly gates," also known as Whalhalla, Mount Whalympus, or Flukes of Glory. Naturally, there are many surreal encounters along the way, but bombinating (look it up) as they "stooge along," guided by a surprisingly knowledgeable dog, the intrepid road trippers complete their mission, only to be rewarded by being all-too-briefly drawn in to the mystical, whirling dance of the massed whale spirits. Renier's intermittent spot art provides an added visual element, and the climactic experience is likely to affect readers as deeply as it does Mick and his compatriots, making an unexpectedly lovely caper for this typically, and distinctively, daffy journey. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Mick returns home from summer camp to find "a little old man" named Guru Lumpu Smythe-Finkel occupying his bedroom in Pinkwater's (Adventures of a Dwerfish Girl) jovial novel. Though Mick's older brother Maurice brought Lumpu and his dog Lhasa home from his trip to the Himalayas, the guru takes Mick on as his apprentice. During their daily hikes, Lumpu; who insists that destiny led him to Poughkeepsie, N.Y.; teaches Mick to appreciate the innate oddness of his hometown. The pair are joined by Vern, Mick's environmental activist friend from summer camp, and Molly, a new arrival from the Catskill Mountains who describes herself as "crazy... I'm not myself." After encountering a ghost whale named Luna, the group embarks on a quest to guide the cetacean to her final resting place at the "whale pearly gates." Though outmoded language regarding mental health goes unexamined, this caper offers comical adventure, and Renier's b&w illustrations exude classic comic strip aesthetics, admirably complementing Pinkwater's straightforwardly told absurdist humor. Most characters cue as white; Mick's family reads as Jewish. Ages 10: 13. Agent: Jennifer Laughran, Andrea Brown Literary. (May)

		Quantity	Unit Price
	#2082169 Ana Maria Reyes Does Not Live in a Castle (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Hilda Eunice Burgos Ana Maria Reyes REALLY does not live in a castle. Rather, she's stuck in a tiny apartment with two parents, three sisters, everyone's friends, and a piano. If Ana Maria can win a scholarship, she'll be able to get out of her neighborhood school and achieve the education she's longed for. To stand out, she'll need to nail her piano piece at the upcoming city showcase. 978-1-62014-362-9 Tu Books ©2018 304 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 3.7 Lexile 640	1	$18.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When Ana Maria first saw her family's New York City apartment at age three, "it seemed as big as a castle." Now, the 11-year-old shares a tiny bedroom with two of her three sisters, and a new baby is on the way. A gifted student and pianist, the girl worries that a fifth sibling will financially jeopardize her chances of getting a good education and further distract her mother, whom she believes doesn't love her as much as she loves her sisters. Writing in Ana Maria's often angst-riddled voice, debut author Burgos builds the drama as her determined protagonist applies for a scholarship to a private school, performs in a piano recital at Lincoln Center, and discovers during a trip to her parents' native Dominican Republic that the aunt she idolizes is a snob who abuses her adolescent maid. Despite encroachment on melodramatic turf, the novel offers a poignant portrait of a warm extended family, and its heroine's transition from self-centered to empathetic is credible and gratifying. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8-Ana Marfa Reyes doesn't live in a castle, she lives in a two-bedroom apartment with her three sisters and both parents in Washington Heights, New York City. Ana Marfa is caring, outspoken, and impulsive, driven by her emotions but also very goal-oriented. She yearns to attend a private academy, the Eleanor School, but her family doesn't have the money for tuition. To earn a scholarship, she must pass a test and impress the judges playing the piano in a showcase recital at Lincoln Center. She is determined to study and practice every day, but finds it hard to do as part of a large and growing family. Her mother is expecting a new baby and her aunt is getting married. The family travels to the Dominican Republic for the wedding, where the protagonist gets to know her family better and makes a new friend. While there, Ana Marfa struggles to grasp the socioeconomic disparities she sees within her own family and community. Somehow, she finds time to practice, helps her family and friends through tough situations, and learns to deal with and accept the consequences of her actions. This middle grade novel is an engaging, character-driven story about an 11-year-old Dominican American girl who is learning about herself and to appreciate her family and friends. It is an authentic representation of a successful immigrant, middle class Latinx family who values education, community, and family and stays true to their roots. VERDICT An -excellent book for tweens in upper elementary grades and for middle school library collections.-Cynthia Molinar, Medio Creek Elementary SWISD, San Antonio Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2246196 Worst-Case Collin (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rebecca Caprara

Collin is always prepared for something to go wrong. Ever since he lost his mom in a car accident, he's been journaling about how to overcome things like avalanches, riptides, or even a bad case of halitosis. Meanwhile, Collin's father grows more distant by the day, and has started hoarding things throughout their house.

978-1-62354-145-3 Charlesbridge Publishing ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 680

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 In the two years since his mom's sudden death, Arizona middle-schooler Collin has tried to deal with his grief by compiling a notebook of calamities--from #212, Indigestion, to #741, Typhoon--and ways to face them. He has no strategy for coping with the relentless bullying from classmate Tyson, though, or the way his distracted father has become such a manic hoarder that the house has turned into a filthy mess. Caprara chronicles Collin's internal struggles, as well as his efforts to hide what's happening from his friends and others, entirely in short-lined free verse interspersed with bulleted entries from his notebook. Readers will likely be appalled by his vivid, wrenching descriptions, but there are moments of poignancy ("she was / supposed to be / with us / forever") and even humor to lighten the load, as well as a reassuringly large circle of supportive peers and grown-ups. Adult characters in fiction who fall prey to compulsive hoarding disorder often tend to be mothers, so this lyrical story offers an unusual perspective on living with a troubled parent. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Ever since Collin's mother died in a car accident, he has worked hard on instructions for what to do in a variety of disastrous situations. His orange notebook is filled with tips, such as these for surviving being buried in an avalanche: "Note where gravity carries your saliva. Dig in the opposite direction." He misses his mother's "morning smooch attacks" as well as the way she kept his brilliant mathematician father's hoarding tendencies under control: "Without someone to keep / Dad's collections in check, / layers accumulate / like...sedimentary rock formations." As the condition of the house deteriorates, it becomes harder for Collin to keep himself clean and to find food. Fortunately, he has two close friends in Liam and Georgia, who don't know about his father's mental illness but are unfailingly supportive and help him feel normal. The verse novel pinpoints Collin's grief over his mother's death, his resulting anxiety, and how he copes with a father he loves but cannot rely on, using short, authentic phrases that home in on his feelings: "I can't decide / if I should laugh / or barf." The inclusion of several concrete poems adds impact, one of the most impressive being a poem in the shape of a house crammed to the brim with words. It's a touching and believable story of getting through to the other side of a terrible time, with Collin's practical survival advice sprinkled throughout. Susan Dove Lempke(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young boy wrestles with his mother's untimely death and his father's consequent hoarding. Sixth grader Collin Brey is anxious. Ever since his mom died in a car accident two years earlier, he has carried an orange notebook full of worst-case scenarios running the gamut from a jammed door to a zombie attack. His father is a brilliant but disorganized math professor who is obsessed with proving the Riemann hypothesis. Collin battles bullies Tyson and Keith at school but is buffered by his two BFFs, Liam and Georgia. At home, Collin's anxiety mounts, as his dad begins to acquire more and more stuff, first starting with thrift-store finds and then working his way up to things like bags of trash and toenail clippings. Ashamed, Collin tries to hide his increasingly distressing home life from his friends, all while battling unresolved grief and his tormentors. While Collin's problems are heavy, Caprara gives him an accessible voice, even managing to imbue humor into the story alongside the many serious moments. Many of the poems are lyrical, flowing free verse, while others play with form. Interspersed beside the poems are Collin's lists from his notebook. Together these elements provide an intimate look into his life and struggles. A note on hoarding and mental health is included. Most characters are presumed White. Poignant, timely, and altogether affecting. (Verse novel. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Written in verse, Caprara's latest centers heartbreaking main character Collin, plus trusty and loving sidekicks Liam and Georgia. Collin has more challenges than most middle schoolers. After the tragic death of his mother in a car accident, Collin is terrified of things going wrong, and his father begins to collect more and more junk that fills up the house. Collin must come up with all kinds of excuses not to have his friends over because of the state of his home. Readers learn about The Hoard--what Collin calls these piles of junk that make for extremely unsafe living conditions. As part of his anxiety about bad things happening, Collin creates a self-guide to emergency situations. These how-to guides are sprinkled throughout the book, which some children might find very helpful. When a prank involving a bully turns into an emergency situation, Collin's preparedness makes him the hero. He has to rescue his father from a house fire that rages out of control because of The Hoard. Collin's unique situation is realistically depicted alongside common middle school moments including pranks, bullying, endearing friendships, and self-examination. VERDICT This lyrical title captures the vulnerability of a tween dealing with many challenges, both at school and home. A work of realistic fiction that has much to offer young readers experiencing anxiety and navigating similar middle school situations.--Erin Olsen, Hunter Coll. Elem. Sch., NY Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2234603 D-39: A Robodog's Journey (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Irene Latham

In a future United States, civil war is devastating a country on its last legs. On one side: the Patriots. On the other: President Vex's corrupt government. In the middle: everybody else, just trying to survive. The war is going from bad to worse, but out in the sparsely populated Worselands, twelve-year-old Klynt Tovis doesn't see much of it.

978-1-62354-181-1 Charlesbridge Publishing ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 448 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 630

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Latham (This Poem Is a Nest) melds a dog rescue story with a post-apocalyptic journey in this white-default speculative narrative. Klynt Tovis, 12, lives with her father, Link, on a looganut farm in the Worselands, close to the border of the Wilds. War between the corrupt government of President Vex and the rebel Patriots rages across the country. Dogs have been eradicated as carriers of the deadly BrkX virus and replaced with robos; though those are rare, so Klynt is determined to keep a D-39 robo when it appears at the farm. Soon, D-39 has endeared itself to both Klynt and her neighbor, six-year-old Jopa Tannin. After a lengthy bombardment followed by the disappearance of Klynt's father and Jopa's mother and older sister, Klynt must lead Jopa and D-39 through the war-torn countryside and wilderness to Everlake, a dog refuge in the Wilds where her veterinarian mother lives. Latham invents numerous words ("sparkshine," "quirkface," "hotseason"), imbuing the tale with a whimsical flavor. The palpable isolation Klynt feels will resonate with many readers in the present moment, but any dog lover will appreciate this heartwarming tale of love and perseverance. Back matter includes a glossary of Latham's invented lexicon. Ages 10: up. (May)

#2321369 Captain Skidmark Dances with Destiny (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jennifer A. Irwin

Will is a Canadian eighth grader who hates hockey--and he stinks at it, too. Will is bullied at school, doesn't have any friends, and is generally miserable. When Will's seventeen-year-old hockey-star cousin, Alex, arrives to stay with Will's family, Will and Alex quickly realize they can't stand each other. Then Will stumbles into a local dance school. He fights the urge to cha-cha, but he's good! When Will's dad finds out about the dancing, he basically forbids it. And Alex's dad refuses to listen to what Alex wants to do with his life. Will takes readers on a journey through noogies, awkward conversations, and epic farts. He worries, dances, and makes messes.

978-1-62354-254-2 Charlesbridge Publishing ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 320 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 750

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-8 Will Stone may well be the worst hockey player ever to take the ice, but from the moment he's roped into taking a ballroom-dancing lesson, he knows he's got a gift. But what will his former NHL-star dad say when he finds out? Not to mention his caustic, scornful grandpa and the vicious tormentors who have made life at school a living hell? Except for the relentless bullying, Irwin delivers her debut's events in a light tone, endowing her resilient but conflicted 13-year-old with comically painful adolescent issues. She also provides unexpected allies in dance partner Tessa ("majestically hot") and a newly arrived live-in cousin with parental issues of his own, both high-schoolers. The author sets up climactic tests of will that will leave readers with two inspiring examples of sons strong enough to chase their own dreams rather than those of their parents, at least one dad who is willing to learn from his mistakes, and a protagonist with a new outlook on a sport he used to hate. That's some fancy footwork. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Navigating adolescence is hard; family dynamics can make it even harder. Thirteen-year-old Will Stone feels like a loser. He's a skittish new student at Boundary Street Middle School in Evanston, Ontario. His dad, the new principal, has cachet as a former professional hockey player, while Will has earned a special level of disgrace after scoring a goal for the opposing team. Things might be looking up with the news that his cousin Alex, 17, will be coming from cosmopolitan Montreal to live with them. Will sees a potential cool protector. Instead, Alex turns out to be a surly slob. Worse, he becomes the hockey team's new assistant coach. Deliverance comes unexpectedly: Will's kinetic ricocheting as he flees bullies attracts the eye of Jesús Rodriguez, who invites Will into his dance studio. Will is leery, but the flattery of attractive Tessa Harper seals the deal. Will's hockey skills fail to improve, but he doesn't care as he tears it up on the dance floor, and his self-esteem blossoms. Now, how to break this news to his hockey-fanatic family? If the first half of Irwin's bubbly debut is about finding one's bliss, the second half tackles deeper, related questions about identity and masculinity. The first-person narrative sometimes feels too sophisticated for the hyper hero, but there's consistent humor, compassion in abundance, and relatable characters. Will and his family read White; some ethnic diversity is cued in the supporting cast. Adolescent angst and its issues unpacked with a caring, comic eye. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2290483 Hope of Elephants (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Amanda Rawson Hill

Cass and her parents haven't let her dad's cancer stop them from having a good life—full of love and poems and one annual World Series game. Now that Dad's cancer is back, Cass overhears the doctor say that she has a 50% chance of inheriting her dad's genetic mutation, Li-Fraumeni syndrome. There's a genetic test Cass can take that will tell her for sure. There's still so much she wants to do—play baseball, study at the zoo, travel the world with her best friend, Jayla. Would it be better not to know?

978-1-62354-259-7 Charlesbridge Publishing ©2022 480 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 530

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly On her 12th birthday, Cassandra Hollens's father is diagnosed with Li-Fraumeni syndrome, a mutated p53 gene that makes him susceptible to cancer (which "visits my dad/ in all the odd years/ of my life"). Cass is used to the routine that attends his cancer treatment; trips to the hospital, sanitizing, and homeschooling to avoid germs; but when she realizes she may have the same mutation, she grapples with whether to find out for sure. As her dad's condition worsens, Cass looks into a local study of elephants, which have 20 sets of the cancer-fighting p53 gene, and seeks a way to get her dad to another World Series, which the family has attended eight times following an early bout of his illness. This compassionate verse novel by Hill (You'll Find Me) holds space for Cass's wide-ranging feelings, tracing through the tween's blunt, realistic voice the way that baseball, close friendships, and the family's connection to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, offer succor. An ongoing pro/con list reveals Cass's relatable struggles and closely held dreams; to play baseball, travel the world; but also a stark truth: life can't be boiled down to a list. Protagonists read as white; Cass's best friend cues as Black. Ages 10: up. Agent: Elizabeth Harding, Curtis Brown. (Sept.)

#2332687 Mascot (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Charles Waters

(Novel in Verse) In Rye, Virginia, just outside Washington, DC, people work hard, kids go to school, and football is big on Friday nights. An eighth-grade English teacher creates an assignment for her class to debate whether Rye's mascot should stay or change. Now six middle-schoolers—all with different backgrounds and beliefs—get involved in the contentious issue that already has the suburb turned upside down with everyone choosing sides and arguments getting ugly.

978-1-62354-380-8 Charlesbridge Publishing ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Mrs. Williams tasks her eighth-grade honors English students with a persuasive writing and oral presentation assignment arguing the pros and cons of using Indigenous peoples as mascots. Throughout the course of a school year the story unfolds in a series of poems that detail the perspectives of six students: Callie (Cherokee African American), Franklin (African American), Priya (Indian American), Luis (Salvadoran American), Tessa (white and previously homeschooled), and Sean (white and living in generational poverty). Predictably, Callie, Priya, and Tessa (who sees herself as a committed antiracist) oppose Indigenous mascots, while the boys, who enjoy war paint and tomahawk chops at Rye Braves games, claim the mascot depicts pride in the team and their school. While the discord around the mascot is a long-standing one in the Virginia community, the assignment empowers the students to take the issue to the school board. After further research, one student switches sides, losing a friend in the process. While the plot requires a fair amount of exposition detailing history and arguments on both sides, the characters are well developed and believable, and the story flows smoothly. A valuable classroom pick that demonstrates the importance of debate. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Waters and Sorell (Cherokee Nation) join forces to write about the power of being true to oneself. In a middle school in Rye, a fictional town near Washington, D.C., a racist mural and offensive pep rally chants shock new student Callie Crossland, who is a citizen of the Cherokee Nation and African American. Callie shares a heartfelt poem with her seventh grade honors English class, reminding everyone that the "stupid tomahawk-chop chant" and the "cheap chicken-feather headdress" are nothing less than symbols of "white supremacy." Afterward, Ms. Williams, her teacher, assigns a persuasive writing and oration project entitled "Pros and Cons of Indigenous Peoples as Mascots." The small, broadly diverse group of students is assigned to work in pairs; Callie is matched with Franklin, who is Black and a proud fan of the Rye Braves football team. Franklin insists, "I wish we could Lysol racism away. / It's a bad odor," but he feels conflicted: "I still don't think our mascot is racist though. It brings so much joy. / ...what's the big deal?" This clever novel unfolds in poems told in multiple voices showing the wide range of students', families', and community responses to the controversy; for some, initial feelings of opposition, hesitation, or indifference change and friendships are tested. The compelling, highly relevant subject matter and accessible text invite readers to understand different perspectives and witness individual growth. A brilliant story not to be missed; deeply engaging from the first page. (glossary, additional information and resources) (Verse fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly tives, this ripped-from-the-headlines collaboration in verse by Waters (African Town) and Cherokee Nation men Sorrel (One Land, Many Nations) follows a fictional town's division over a racist sports mascot. Callie Crossland, who is Cherokee and Black, has just transferred to a middle school in Rye, Va. She immediately expresses disgust at her school's mascot, a "copper-toned, muscle , loincloth-clad, tomahawk-wielding" caricature of an Indigenous person. Callie's English teacher Ms. Williams soon assigns a group writing project regarding the "Pros and Cons of Indigenous Peoples as Mascots," and Callie is annoyed at being paired with Black classmate Franklin, who believes the mascot "brings so much joy." Waters and Sorrel paint a complex portrait of the differing reactions toward the controversy by layering the racially diverse tweens' perspectives and showcasing the effects the event has on their individual relationships and the community beyond their school. The creators eschew judgment to present a well-rounded discussion about classism and racism, as well as effective allyship, with compassion and understanding. A glossary and resources conclude. Ages 10: up. Agents: (for Waters) Rosemary Stimola, Stimola Literary; (for Sorrel) Emily Mitchell, Wernick & Pratt. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Waters and Sorell's novel in verse, told in alternating perspectives, tackles the relevant topic of racist imagery in mascots. In the football town of Rye, VA, Callie, who is Black and a member of the Cherokee Nation, shares her earnest poem in eighth-grade honors English class about using Indigenous peoples as mascots. Their teacher then sets up a formal debate to address the pros and cons of the school's Indigenous mascot. The diverse group of students have varied backgrounds and strong feelings about the issue. As they work through their debate, questions about what is right emerge, friendships are tested, and what it means to be an ally is brought forth. Each character grows throughout the book. However, as in life, the issue remains sensitive and unresolved. VERDICT Highly recommended as a pick for classrooms to use in debate and conversations; a timely and important novel.--Amy Zembroski Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2350411 Invisible Elephant (Hardcover (POB))

written by Anna Anisimova

For the young, blind heroine of The Invisible Elephant, the world is a thrilling place full of sounds, smells, and sensations. Although she doesn't see the world outside with her eyes, nothing stops her from encountering her surroundings with joy and an impressively creative imagination. In four charming stories, we go with her to the zoo, the museum, and art class, and get a peek into her wonderfully magical mind where her grandfather's walking stick can transform into a horse and a sled can become a whale. When the time comes for her to learn braille, we watch how her family and friends cheer her on as she discovers how to navigate the world in her own way.

978-1-63206-324-3 Yonder ©2023 7-1/2 x 9-1/2 112 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 490

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$22.00

Reviews by: Booklist This beginning chapter book contains four loosely linked short stories (the titular one appeared first as a picture book) and centers on the everyday life of a young child and her family. In "The Invisible Elephant," she discovers the world around her using her senses; "Speedy" details Grandpa's noisy third leg (a cane) and how it helps her after he suffers a fall; "The Music of My Woodpecker" introduces tactile books and Braille; and "Whale Seeks a Friend" describes a snowy excursion with her inner-tube sled. What goes unmentioned, but will be clear to most readers, is the child's blindness, which neither deters her participation in day-to-day activities nor serves as a source of distress or pity.

Sidneva's playful illustrations (digitally enhanced black and white, accented in blue and yellow) employ a cartoon style and signal the girl's imagination using outlined elements that allow the background to show through. Smoothly translated from the Russian and including a surprising amount of wordplay, this is a joyous story of "unique abilities and possibilities."

#2348503 House of the Lost on the Cape (Hardcover (POB))

written by Sachiko Kashiwaba

In the wake of a devastating earthquake and tsunami, Yui, fleeing her violent husband, and Hiyori, a young orphan, are taken in by a strange but kind old lady named Kiwa in the small town of Kitsunezaki. The newly formed family finds refuge in a mayoiga, a lost house, perched atop a beautiful cape overlooking the sea. While helping to rebuild Kitsunezaki, the three adapt to their new lives and supernatural new home, slowly healing from their troubled pasts.

978-1-63206-337-3 Yonder ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 1 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.00

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Kashiwaba (Temple Alley Summer) reimagines sometimes frighteningly depicted creatures from Japanese folklore as friendly allies to a magical grandmother in this fanciful tale. Three strangers arrive separately to Kitsunezaki, a small coastal village, hours before the 2011 Tohoku earthquake and tsunami hit Japan. At a shelter following the events, Kiwa Yamana, an endearing 87-year-old whom everyone calls Obachan, seemingly mistakes a young woman and an orphaned child as her daughter-in-law and granddaughter. The woman, having escaped from her physically abusive husband in Tokyo, and the silent youth are gratefully swept up by Obachan's care. The trio move into an old thatch-roofed house that has been fixed up by Obachan's mystical friends. When unexplained incidents result in injured animals throughout Kitsunezaki, Obachan's companions; which include kappa river spirits and Jizo guardian statues; help the little family find the source: a Shinto shrine was destroyed by the tsunami, and the evil sea snake it had sealed away now threatens the village. Kashiwaba's moody work teems with ambient wonder and grim portent, offering glimpses of darkness without overwhelming the narrative's uplifting tone. All characters are Japanese. Ages 8: 13. (Sept.)

#2239347 Walls (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Laura Elliott

This powerful documentary-style novel with a photo essay introducing every chapter tells the story of two cousins, one a German in East Berlin and the other an American Army brat in West Berlin, from August 1960 - August 1961, as they navigate the political and social turmoil that threatens their friendship and ends in the abrupt rise of the Berlin Wall, which may separate them forever.

978-1-64375-024-8 Algonquin ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Drew and his family move to West Berlin, Germany, as his dad, a U.S. Army sergeant stationed in East Berlin, fights to protect democracy against Communist Russia. Drew's cousin, Matthias, grew up in the war-torn city and experienced the harsh conditions of communism in East Berlin. After the two boys begin spending time together, they learn how different they are in both freedom and ideology. Though Drew is encouraged to befriend Matthias and introduce him to democracy, the two are wary of each other and their respective beliefs. As the political situation grows more tense, Drew's and Matthias' loyalties are tested, and each must choose how to navigate his politics-infused world. Elliott's latest is set a year prior to the unexpected rise of the Berlin Wall, incorporating all kinds of historical context, including science, world events, politics, and entertainment, through pictures at the beginning of each chapter, allowing readers to immerse themselves in the period. The portrayal of events is first-rate, creating a poignant yet lighthearted read.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly iction novel takes place in Berlin over the course of 12 crucial months of the Cold War: August 1960: 1961, as tensions between the U.S. and the Soviet Union intensify, culminating in the sudden erection of the Berlin Wall. When self-described "army brat" Drew MacMahon, 15, a star baseball pitcher, arrives with his family at his father's latest posting behind the Iron Curtain, he's prepared to make a new home and new friends for the fifth time. But he quickly finds that living in the heart of divided Europe means unexpected restrictions and growing dangers, which grow personal when his mother welcomes her German first cousin Aunt Marta and her son Matthias, who live in Communist-controlled East Berlin, into their family. As Drew and his sisters maneuver their school and social life among American friends, the political situation around them increasingly intrudes, raising questions of trust and risk-taking. Behm's journalistic photo essay chapter opens smoothly and efficiently render the unfolding of political and cultural events, thrusting readers into the world that Drew and his likable white family and

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2349646 Montgomery and the Case of the Golden Key (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tracy Ocomy Crowder In 2008 Chicago, in the Southside community of Washington Park, Montgomery "Monty" Carver has planned the best summer ever! Unfortunately, things aren't going as planned. Monty is struggling to prove to his parents that he's old enough to be without adult supervision--especially after a very embarrassing incident with a metal detector. Man! So when Monty finds a golden key in Old Lady Jenkins's sunflowers, he decides he's going to unravel the key's mystery all by himself, thank you very much. 978-1-64379-517-1 Tu Books ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 300 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic	1	$21.95

Reviews by: Booklist Crowder's New Visions Award-winning novel follows newly 10-year-old Montgomery Carver in 2008 as he seeks the secrets of a mysterious golden key found in his neighborhood in South Side Chicago. Monty, intent on proving his independence in a city that is bustling with historical what-ifs, decides to embark on this mission on his own. The big events never stop for his community, either: between possibly hosting the Olympics and possibly being the home of the next history-making president of the United States, Barack Obama, Chicago continues to thrum with excitement. Add to this a possible ghost case that Monty needs to solve and he really has his hands full. Including heartfelt journal entries and vibrant illustrations from Sorra, this voice-y novel is an unforgettable adventure through a nostalgic decade, showcasing the times right before they were about to change.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An almost-10-year-old boy races to solve the mystery of a golden key while forming deeper connections with people in his Chicago community. Born and raised in the South Side of Chicago, Montgomery Carver lives in a world filled with small but plentiful delights. It's the summer of 2008, and Monty's Washington Park neighborhood is buzzing with excitement: A man named Barack Obama could become the first Black president of the United States, and Chicago could host the 2016 Olympics. Monty's summer plans include perfecting his Afro and mastering his tennis serve. But when he prematurely unwraps his birthday present (a metal detector), uses it to find a skeleton key buried in Old Lady Jenkins' flower bed, and then breaks his gift, he gets in trouble with his parents. Forced to work to pay them back, Monty does odd jobs for the neighbors, getting to know them--including community activist Ms. Jenkins--better in the process. Monty feverishly makes observations, does research, asks questions, and forms hypotheses, uncovering the story of the key, which reveals surprising connections to Washington Park and spotlights a lesser-known chapter in Black history. Tu Books' New Visions Award winner Crowder's debut depicts a vibrant community, showcasing the importance of civic responsibility and the power of grassroots organization. The narrative's first-person perspective captures Monty's infinite curiosity and endearing sense of wonder. An engaging novel drawing strength from its rich narrative voice and celebrating Black historical luminaries. (author's note) (Mystery. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This endearing middle grade debut by Crowder, set in 2008 on the South Side of Chicago, is an ode to community engagement. Montgomery Carver, a tennis enthusiast and bearer of an "all-that" Afro, aspires to make this summer the best ever. But when he sneaks out carrying the metal detector his parents plan to give him for his upcoming 10th birthday; and accidentally breaks it; he is tasked with finding a way to pay them back. Unbeknownst to his parents, Monty uncovered a golden key buried in neighbor Ms. Jenkins's yard. The discovery sends Monty on an investigation into the key's origins, which is punctuated by his doing odd jobs for community members and navigating his neighbors' apprehension and excitement surrounding Chicago's bid to host the Olympics. Throughout his inquiry, he learns of Black horse jockeys, train porters, and more, as well as their connections to the found key, Black history, and his beloved town. Crowder employs Monty's inquisitive and irrepressible first-person narration to rousing effect, making for a spirited novel that encourages curiosity while highlighting a protagonist alongside the neighborhood and history fueling his personal growth. Ages 9: 13. (Oct.)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2279809 Once Upon a Family (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Amanda Rawson Hill One night, when Winnie makes a hasty wish, she nearly gets sideswiped by an odd bird, leading her to a strangely glowing oak tree. Investigating, Winnie discovers a nest of golden eggs with wishes inscribed on the shells. After Winnie accidentally breaks two of the eggs, the wishes come true. Winnie sneaks back to the tree to try to grant her own wishes. But soon the wishes are coming true in unexpected and terrible ways, and Winnie must find a way to fix everything. 978-1-63592-317-9 Astra House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 1 pgs.	1	$19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Winnie and her mom's "two girls against the world" life changes when Mom decides to marry Jeff, giving Winnie a stepdad and a younger brother she doesn't want. Eleven-year-old Winnie sees the world through a fairy-tale lens thanks to her mom's job as a literature professor. Writing in her notebook, Winnie casts herself as a princess and her mother as a queen; she does not want an evil stepfather. But Winnie's anxiety--which she's named Eustace Clarence Scrubb--causes her to see monsters where there are none, and her fear often turns to anger and causes her to lash out at Jeff's son and even new friends like her neighbor and schoolmate Abigail. But when Winnie discovers magic in their neighborhood, she shares the secret with Abigail, who tries to help her craft the perfect wish to fix her situation. Hill enables readers to see deeply into Winnie, including her past, fears, anger, wishes, and the way she perceives her own story. Though the book is told in the first person, other characters' true natures are clear through their words and actions, and secondary characters, such as grouchy older neighbor Tom Bailey, have their own stories. Hill's writing is full of poetic references readers will recognize, as when Winnie feels "like the oldest sibling in a fairy tale where only third children ever win." The few physical descriptions present point to a White cast. A modern blended family story with a sprinkling of magic. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2348448 Mist (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Marta Palazzesi

London, 1880, 13-year-old Clay is a mud lark, scavenging on the banks of the Thames for anything he might sell for money to buy food. One day Clay goes to the camp of the circus that has newly arrived in town and meets Ollie, a girl about his age, who lives with the circus. Ollie brings him to the cage of "the last wolf in England". Mist, as he calls it, is fierce, angry, and indomitable, perhaps due to the cruel treatment of its tamers, which Clay secretly witnesses.

978-1-63655-069-5 Red Comet Press LLC ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile GN 690

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A boy living in the slums of Victorian England recognizes a kindred spirit in a caged wild wolf and seeks to liberate it. Thirteen-year-old Clay and his friends and fellow gang members make their living scavenging the banks of the Thames for objects they can sell. When Clay comes upon an exquisite set of hand-painted tarot cards he knows will fetch a handsome price, they lead him to Smith & Sparrow's Amazing Circus and its headlining attraction, "the last living wolf in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland." Curious, Clay approaches the animal's cage, led there by a young circus performer named Ollie, who's described as a "didicoy" (defined in a footnote as "a traveler of part Romani descent"). Clay sees the anger and unyielding spirit of the silver wolf, whom he names Mist, as well as Mist's cruel treatment at the hands of the traveling circus's animal trainers. Haunted by the memory of Mist in his cage and repulsed by the knowledge of what happens to circus animals that cannot be tamed, Clay resolves to free the wolf at any cost. Readers of this page-turner translated from Italian will be unable to resist rooting for Clay and Mist. Clay is a compelling protagonist with a strong voice, and kids will eagerly follow along as he works to gain Mist's trust. Clay and most characters present white. A heartfelt, attention-grabbing animal adventure. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In 1880 London, 13-year-old orphan Clay and his friends Nucky and Tod; collectively known as the Terrors of Blackfriar Bridge; get by as mud larks, searching the grimy banks of the Thames for anything worth reselling. The trio also defend their territory from other mud larks and avoid being caught by men from local factories, who kidnap orphaned youths to work at their facilities. When Smith & Sparrow's Amazing Circus comes to town, advertising "the last living wolf in the United Kingdom," Clay is intrigued, and a chance encounter with Olivia, the circus fortune teller's granddaughter, enables him to see the fearsome creature up close. Learning that the wolf, which Clay has named Mist, will be killed if it can't be tamed, Clay decides to free it; but first, he must gain Mist's trust. Though a loosely plotted third act diminishes gratification, this gritty adventure from Palazzesi (The Adventures of Young Lupin), populated by numerous uniquely rendered characters, captures the high-adrenaline spirit and danger of living by one's wits, especially as Clay works to redefine his priorities and baseline for happiness while combatting financial precarity. Most characters cue as white; Olivia reads as having Romani heritage. Ages 9: 12. (Sept.)

#2330400 Smoke at the Pentagon: Poems To Remember (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jacqueline Jules

(Novel in verse) On September 11, 2001, American Airlines Flight 77 crashed into the Pentagon in Arlington, Virginia. One hundred and eighty-four innocent people were killed. The event occurred at 9:37 a.m. and was part of a coordinated terrorist attack against the United States involving four hijacked flights. These poems tell the stories

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

of young people from all aspects of the Arlington and Pentagon communities and are composites drawn from personal experiences with students and friends residing in Northern Virginia at the time of the attack.

978-1-63819-152-0 Bushel & Peck Books ©2023 8-1/2 x 11 32 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

#2322708 Paper Daughters of Chinatown (Young Reader's Edition)
(Hardcover (Trade))

written by Heather B. Moore

When Tai Choi leaves her home in the Zhejiang province of China, she believes she'll be visiting her grandmother. But in truth, despite her mother's opposition, her father has sold her to pay his gambling debts. When she arrives, she is forced to go by the new name listed on her paper documents: Tien Fu Wu. When Dolly Cameron arrives in San Francisco to teach sewing at a mission home for orphaned Asian girls, she meets Tien Fu, who is willful, defiant, and unwilling to trust anyone. Dolly quickly learns that all the girls at the home were freed from lives of servitude and maltreatment. Dolly immediately joins the group of women dedicated to saving more of these "paper daughters" because some in authority have turned a blind eye to the situation.

978-1-63993-094-4 Shadow Mountain ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Young Tien Fu is put on a boat from China to "Gold Mountain" (San Francisco) at six years of age to settle her father's gambling debt. She thinks she is visiting her grandmother, but instead, everything is taken from her, including her name. Tien Fu must fight to survive. Sold into slavery, then bartered and sold again, she is tortured and trusts no one. Once she is rescued and brought to the San Francisco mission, she meets Dolly Cameron, who has arrived to teach sewing to the girls at the mission. Based on the true story of the adult bestselling novel by the same name, the adapted version includes topics, such as gambling, brothels, and opium usage, but doesn't explain in detail what they are. Dolly attempts to rescue girls and young women from deplorable situations, while coming up against the slave owners who resort to violence and bombings to get the girls back. Tien Fu and the other girls are given new names in the United States, making them paper daughters without a home. "Tien Fu" means "heavenly blessing," and the girl wonders if she can change who she is and grow up to be strong, brave, and independent. As the years go by, Tien Fu and Dolly grow closer, and Tien Fu becomes an interpreter and rescuer. Also included is information for teachers, reader questions and answers, and history about Chinese immigration in the 1800s. Heartbreakingly real, the story of Tien Fu can spark conversation about human trafficking, the many people who have been affected, and its existence today. VERDICT A great choice for book clubs and fans of historical fiction.--Michele Shaw Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2330658 Wild Journey of Juniper Berry (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Chad Morris

Eleven-year-old Juniper Berry lives in a cabin with her family deep in the wild woods. Living off the grid is usually exciting, like the time she chased off three growling raccoons with a tree branch and some acorns, or when she thought she glimpsed the legendary Bigfoot. But her happy life in the wild ends abruptly when her younger brother gets sick, and the family moves to the city to be closer to the hospital.

978-1-63993-099-9 Shadow Mountain ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly s lived her entire life happily off the grid with her parents, older sister Sky, and younger brother Hawk, far away from the pressures of society. But when five-year-old Hawk's appendix bursts, his harried hospital visit thrusts Juniper into contemporary civilization, a world she's only imagined and never longed for that's brimming with seemingly magical machines and new foods. Sent with Sky to Redburn, Calif., to live with relatives she didn't know existed while Hawk recovers, Juniper aches to return to their family's remote lifestyle. Enrolled in school for the first time, she must contend with mean girls, an exasperated cousin, and more rules than she could ever hope to understand. or a girl well versed in climbing trees and living off the land, navigating life among the masses may prove to be more challenging than any dange r she ever faced in the woods. Juniper's first-person voice and the many memorably developed characters she meets cultivate a feel-good story that reminds readers of both the pitfalls and the benefits of coexisting with others. Juniper is described as looking like her white mother; her father has "dark curly hair and light brown skin." Ages 8: 10. (Aug.)

#2330652 Swimming in a Sea of Stars (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Julie Wright

Addison is no stranger to feeling stressed, insecure, and sad. Her therapist recommended she keep a journal to help her understand those feelings better, which she really needs today. It's her first day back to school, several weeks after she survived her suicide attempt. She knows there are rumors about why she did it but she still holds secrets she's not ready to share.

978-1-63993-101-9 Deseret Book Company ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Five students from the same Massachusetts high school struggle with difficult life experiences as one of them prepares to return to school following a suicide attempt. In a diary her therapist suggested she keep, 17-year-old Addison begins the rotation of the narrative in first-person epistolary format, striking a weary tone laced with sarcastic humor. Also lending their voices in the third person are Booker, Damion, Avery, and Celia, students who all know--or at least know of--Addison. Booker is close to Addison, a friend or maybe more, but she's been avoiding him. This, plus his cousin's serious illness, weighs heavily on him. Meanwhile, Damion's image as a minor social media star obscures a tragic family secret, and while everyone knows that Avery's brother was recently arrested for drug dealing, most don't suspect that quiet, reserved Celia is dealing with abuse at home. Many realistic issues are explored, and while readers will feel empathy for each of these characters, the overarching themes of interconnectedness and how people can affect others in ways of which they are not always aware are a bit heavy-handed in their portrayals. Addison, Damion, Avery, and Celia are White; Booker is Black, and there is racial diversity among secondary characters. A story at times poignant but at others too conscious of its own hopeful messaging. (Fiction. 13-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2160621 Call Me Floy (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joanna Cooke

Florence "Floy" Hutchings is the daughter of a famous father, and while the extra attention that brings is not unwelcome, all she really wants is to be herself. Floy longs to return to the majestic place where she was born and where she has always felt free: Yosemite! Upon returning to her beloved Valley, Floy finds that it is changing. Yet, against this backdrop of change, Floy pursues her dream of climbing the indomitable Half Dome.

978-1-930238-99-2 Yosemite Association ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 760

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—In 1864, Florence "Floy" Hutchings was the first European American child born in what would become Yosemite National Park. Daughter of publisher and Yosemite advocate James Hutchings, Floy's real-life story is fictionalized in this appealing first-person narrative. Author Cooke (The Sequoia Lives On, 2018) introduces Floy just before her 12th birthday, as her family returns to the valley where she has spent unsupervised childhood summers blissfully exploring the wonders of nature. This summer, however, Floy finds much has changed for herself as well as local friends Johnny and Sally Ann. Floy is expected to forego her dream of climbing Half Dome in favor of more ladylike, adult pursuits. Johnny yearns to go to sea and Sally Ann worries that soon her Indigenous family will no longer be able to call Yosemite their home. Readers will be inspired by Floy's determined spirit as she flouts convention to realize her dream, and in 1876, she becomes the youngest person to climb Half Dome. The novel is both a history of Yosemite and a travel guide. In Floy's wanderings through the valley, Cooke describes the girl's feelings of being in the presence of nature more than the specifics of local flora and fauna. Names of park trails and bodies of water, along with historical figures like John Muir, will encourage independent research. Back matter offers simple suggestions for outdoor adventuring. VERDICT An ideal choice for summer reading lists and to support the "No Child Left Inside" initiative.—Marybeth Kozikowski, Sachem Public Library, Holbrook, NY

Quantity
Unit Price

#2284750 East of the Sun, West of the Moon (Hardcover (POB))

1

$24.95

written by Jackie Morris

From the moment she saw him, the girl knew the bear had come for her. How many times had she dreamed of him? Now, here he was, as if spelled from her dreams. This encounter marks the beginning of a long and extraordinary journey. At the bear's secret palace in faraway mountains, she is treated courteously but troubled by the bear's unfathomable sadness. As the bear's secret unravels, another adventure unfolds, which takes her to the homes of the four winds and beyond, to the castle east of the sun, west of the moon.

978-1-78352-886-8 Unbound ©2022 5-1/2 x 7 336 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

#2284749 Wild Swans (Hardcover (POB))

Quantity

Unit Price

1

$24.95

written by Jackie Morris

A girl loses her beloved brothers when they are turned into swans by her wicked stepmother. She embarks on a vital quest with one purpose: to find them and turn them back into boys again. But the task is complicated. She must pick nettles with her bare hands and turn them to yarn, to spin and knit into shirts for each of the eleven brothers. And all the while she cannot speak, for if she does, even so much as a whisper, it will be like a knife in the heart of each swan-boy. And so she knits in silence. And where there is silence, people will put words.

978-1-78352-888-2 Unbound ©2022 5-1/2 x 7 384 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: ForeWord Magazine Jackie Morris's The Wild Swans is a dreamy retold fairy tale that's full of hope, beauty, and love.

#2292829 Girl in White (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity

Unit Price

1

$16.99

written by Lindsay Currie

Mallory hasn't quite adapted to life in her new town of Eastport yet. Maybe it's because everyone is obsessed with upholding Eastport's reputation as the most cursed town in the U.S. Combined with the unsettling sensation of being watched, she's quickly becoming convinced there's more to her town. Something sinister. When Mallory has a terrifying encounter with the same old woman from her dreams, she's not sure what to do. With the town gearing up to celebrate the anniversary of their first recorded legend, Mallory is forced to investigate the one Eastport legend she's always secretly been afraid of: Sweet Molly.

978-1-7282-3654-4 Sourcebooks, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Living in Eastport, Mass., the country's "most cursed city," is like celebrating Halloween every day, but 12-year-old narrator Mallory Denton, an aspiring travel photographer, doesn't enjoy the unending festivities. Transplanted from Chicago, she struggles to adjust to the "quaint, yet foreboding" town, which revels in its supernatural reputation, hosting monthly parades, boasting shops filled with ghoulish garb, and celebrating the beloved 200-year-old legend of Molly Flanders McMulligan Marshall. Known as Sweet Molly, the resident cursed Eastport after her brother, a fishing boat captain, died at sea during a dangerous storm. While Mallory's parents embrace the town's macabre history, serving gravestone-shaped pancakes at their purportedly haunted, cemetery-adjacent restaurant, the tween endures nightmares of a frightening hag intent on harming her. As the October anniversary of Sweet Molly's curse nears, Mallory's constant nightmares take a turn when a wild-eyed woman appears, determined to unleash her wrath upon the town at whose insistence Sweet Molly's brother set sail. Told through Mallory's resolute first-person voice, Currie's (What Lives in the Woods) middle grade debut brims with tension, spine-tingling terror, and convincing characters bravely facing a supernatural dilemma. Characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Shannon Hassan, Marsal Lyon Literary. (Sept.)

#2365822 Emily Posts (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tanya Lloyd Kyi

Emily is the ringleader for her school podcast, Cedarview Speaks - Sponsored by CoastFresh! But her plans for middle-school fame and social media influence are derailed when Amelie joins her eighth-grade class. The new arrival has a seemingly endless supply of confidence and a gift for leading people. Or leading them astray, as far as Emily's concerned.

978-1-77488-204-7 Tundra Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 264 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An aspiring social media influencer navigates friendship woes while advocating for climate change. Inspired by her idol, Emily Post, 13-year-old Emily Laurence has a precise plan for her rise to social media influencer fame--guided by proper etiquette, of course. Unfortunately, things aren't going according to plan. For starters, she's acquired an infuriating new stepfamily. Emily's mom also confiscated her phone when she violated her social media restrictions, and she needs it back in time for the local climate march. The school principal is punishing her for posting an unauthorized episode of the podcast she hosts with best friend Simone Ahn, which means likely losing out on meeting Asha Jamil, her social media influencer idol, when she comes to their middle school. And now the annoyingly alluring (and vegan!) new girl, Amelie Cattaneo, is co-hosting the podcast with Simone. Written from Emily's first-person perspective, this story neatly lines up plot points, and the friendship dynamics are handled deftly, but quick resolutions and interrupted conversations prevent authentic, age-appropriate explorations of relevant topics. There's a clear message that climate change is a problem, but ways to have a meaningful impact are explored on a surface level. At times, Emily's narration seems oblivious to her own affluent privilege. Emily reads white; contextual clues point to some ethnic diversity in the supporting cast. Useful as a starting point for more nuanced conversations about internet safety and climate change. (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Light humor and erudite insight meld in this socially conscious novel by Kyi (Me and Banksy) that centers middle school activism. White-cued eighth grader Emily Laurence hopes that leading her school's podcast club "through the lens of environmental change" will secure her future as an eco-minded tastemaker and influencer journalist. Jealousy over a magnetic new classmate and frustrations with her newly blended family and her mother's rigid social media rules prompt Emily to distract herself by scripting a podcast story about an upcoming climate march. But when school administration forces the podcast club to cut the story to protect corporate sponsorships, Emily counters with bold action that jeopardizes her friendships and aspirations. As Emily makes amends, bonds with an autistic-cued classmate, and cares for her stepbrother and his wheelchair-using friend, she finds inspiration to develop her online blog Emily Posts, in which she distills her experiences into punchy, clickbait-y articles ("How my life was ruined by my rabid pseudo-sibling"). Kyi scratches the surface of wide-ranging topics such as capitalistic overreliance and greed, cultural appropriation, environmentalism, Indigenous peoples' rights, social media influence, and veganism via convenient plotting that culminates in a rosy resolution. Relevant themes, comedic family antics, and Emily's witty, intimate first-person narration make this a smart and timely read. Ages 10: up. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8—Kyi tells the story of Emily, who is an average eighth grader with dreams of becoming an influencer. She runs a school podcast called Cedarview Speaks with three other students. Usually it's a quiet podcast, but the news of influencer Asha Jamil's visit to Cedarview Middle School has everyone excited. Emily does all she can to stay up to date with what is happening around her, including a climate march one of the high schoolers is planning. The excitement of the climate march and Asha Jamil's appearance is quickly extinguished when Emily realizes they are on the same day; the principal, Mr. Lau, purposely scheduled them for the same day so students wouldn't go to the march and mess up the school's corporate sponsorship. Emily is navigating all this plus new family members and her new friends interrupting old friendships. Kyi's writing brings all these elements together for a very crafty and exciting ending. This realistic fiction title is truly a middle grade read. Nothing in the content suggests anything too mature, with the exception of one reference to sexting. The story's complicated nature is pieced together by the end and the relationships between the characters are very well done. The ending is somewhat rushed and glances over plot holes, but things ultimately reach an intriguing and satisfying conclusion. Subtle plot elements like the bullying of a friend are handled quietly but efficiently. VERDICT Recommended for any ambitious middle schoolers who feel as if they are struggling to find their way.—Natalie Wallace

#2356360 Billy and the Giant Adventure (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jamie Oliver

Billy and his friends know that Waterfall Woods is out of bounds; strange things are rumored to have happened there and no one in their village has ventured past its walls for decades... But when they discover a secret way in, Billy and his best friends, Anna, Jimmy and Andy, can't resist the temptation to explore! Only to quickly discover that the woods are brimming with magic and inhabited by all sorts of unusual creatures,

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

including a whole community of sprites who need the children's help!
978-1-77488-414-0 Tundra Books ©2023 6 x 8-1/2 352 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Celebrity chef Oliver combines goofy humor and wilderness whimsy with serious real-world issues to craft a layered story-within-a-story, framed as a bedtime tale that a father recounts to his two children. Despite warnings from the local adults that no good will come to those who wander into the surrounding wilds, tween Billy and his compatriots Andy, Anna, and Jimmy venture into enchanted Waterfall Woods. After befriending members of a Sprite civilization, the quartet learn that the Rhythm; or the natural balance of the forest; is off-kilter. At the Sprites' urging, the youths investigate a faceless industrial poultry farm that's spewing waste into the waterways. As Billy and company navigate the perils of the verdant woods, they use the lessons learned in the wilderness to counter challenges back home, such as bullying and managing learning disabilities, grounding the fantastical adventure and pleasantly decelerating the quicksilver plot. Descriptive writing renders plenty of delicious food scenes throughout, portrayed via textured pencil illustrations by Armino (A Wolf Called Wander). Recipes conclude. Most human characters appear white; Jimmy reads as Black. Ages 8: 12. (Nov.)

#2223072 Little Mermaid (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ashly Lovett

After saving a human man during a sea storm, she soon desires his love and an eternal soul. Naive and desperate, the little mermaid turns to the banished sea witch among the world pools. The exchange to be human was high. Scared, but determined, she begins her journey to find love and a soul.

978-1-7770817-4-4 Eye of Newt ©2021 8 x 11 45 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$24.95

#2275427 Callers (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kiah Thomas

In the world of Elipsom, the ability to Call, or summon objects, is a coveted, crucial skill, revered among its people as both a powerful tool and an essential way to sustain life. But despite an elite family history, a phenom for an older sister, a best friend who is set to join the Council of Callers, and his mother's steely insistence that he learn to Call, Quin doesn't have the gift-an embarrassment made worse when his mother gets his sister to cheat for him on his Calling exam. But everything changes in a moment of frustration when Quin, instead of summoning an object, makes something disappear. And what's more, he quickly discovers that the objects Callers bring into their world aren't conjured at all but are whisked away from another world and a people who for years have had their lives slowly stolen from them. Now Quin must team up with Allie, a girl who's determined to stop this unfair practice, and decide whether he should remain loyal to his family or betray them-and save the world.

978-1-7972-1078-0 Chronicle Books LLC ©2022 228 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 On the barren continent of Elipsom, Callers hold the power, sustaining society with the apparent ability to conjure objects from nothing. Quin's intimidating mother heads the Council of Callers, and although their family has led for generations, Quin is unable to Call. When he is suddenly and mysteriously transported across the planet to another continent called Evantra, he learns that Calling, in fact, steals objects from this land. Callers have been oppressing Evantra in secret, exploiting forced labor in order to maintain Elipsom's prosperity, and Quin must decide between loyalty to his family or to the self he is coming to discover. Thomas' debut middle-grade novel is poignant in its simplicity, with tight, effective prose, a slim page count, and a minimal style of world building that allows readers to concentrate on the thought-provoking questions being raised about oppression, consumerism, and our relationship to our planet, as well as Quin's search for identity outside of his family's legacy. A refreshing, affecting work that shows what thoughtful fantasy can do. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Elipsom is a barren, infertile world, and its people depend on the Callers, who can conjure up food and other material needs from nothing, simply by naming them. Quin, of the dynastic Octavius family, is the first Octavius in history who apparently cannot Call, and he's an utter disappointment to his mother, Elipsom's Chief Councilor. Quin longs to understand his place in the world, and he's determined to figure out what his visions of a green, glowing landscape mean. He is shocked to one day wake up in the dream world, a place called Evantra--the people of Elipsom have always been told Evantra is as dead and barren as their own home. Quin learns that Evantra is the source of all the materials Called to Elipsom, and he soon discovers his destiny is greater than he ever imagined. Despite clever and imaginative world-building (particularly charming are the winged rhinoceroses called ÒrhinodritesÓ), the story lacks much emotional impact. Quin is a likable and accessible protagonist, but his easy acceptance upon learning everything he's ever known is a lie strains credulity. Still, the fast pace keeps the pages turning and the intensity ramps up toward the end, ensuring a sequel. AT COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine The Octavius family is notable for producing Callers -- people with the ability to summon objects seemingly out of thin air. Quintus Octavius, however, has never been successful at Calling anything. This does not sit well with his mother, Elipsom's Chief Councilor, and she makes sure he passes his Calling exam by enlisting his sister to Call for him. Cheating doesn't help Quin's already low confidence, but it's at this point that he accidentally transports himself across their world to Evantra, where he will grow to understand the truth about Callers, Elipsom's history, and his mother's complicity in depleting Evantra's resources for Elipsom's gain. Set in an evocatively realized fantasy world with, in Elipsom's case, a futuristic feel, this is a moving and complex story about the discomfort and reward of doing what is right. Thomas's debut middle-grade novel is a clever critique of the consumerism that we might take for granted. She tackles serious topics with wit, charm, and a few flying rhinodrites along the way. Sarah Berman(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A boy uncovers deceptions--and truths--about his life. Quintus Octavius, son of the powerful Chief Councilor of the continent of Elipsom, is set to take his Caller test, one that will prove that he can conjure objects out of nothing. Being a Caller is an honored role, since the inhabitants of Elipsom need the Callers' skills to manifest everyday necessities. But, unlike everyone else in his family, Quin has never been able to Call anything, and he dreads the upcoming test. Meanwhile, his sleep is disturbed nightly by vivid dreams of curling vines and green growth, images that he sketches in a notebook. A few days before the test, Quin blacks out and wakes to find himself in a strange place with Allie, an unfamiliar girl. As Allie shows Quin around the lush, green landscape--so different from the sterile, metallic environment he is familiar with--she explains that he is on the continent of Evantra, on the opposite side of the world from his home. But even as Quin revels in the natural landscape, he notices black lines running through the green, and when he discovers what is causing them, he is horrified. This fantasy keeps the tone nonpreachy, but its themes of environmental crisis, greed, and exploitation are spot-on. The action will keep readers avidly turning pages, though Quin's character and the themes could have been more developed. Characters seem to default to White. Overall, a fresh, original, and timely story. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2327358 Don't Trust the Cat (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kristen Tracy

Fifth-grader Poppy McBean likes rules and order. She's a follower, and she's totally okay with that. And if you judge her for that, she's okay with that too! But after falling prey to her friends' bullying one too many times, Poppy makes a wish to be happy--and it comes true in a very unexpected way: She wakes up in the body of her cat, Mitten Man.

978-1-7972-1506-8 Chronicle Books LLC ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Poppy McBean just wants to keep her head down and get through fifth grade with her close friends, and she happily lets the other girls take the lead until an incident at school leaves her questioning their devotion to one another. Poppy takes solace in her magnificently cocky cat, Muffin Man, and both the girl and cat feel they'd operate better living as the other. With a magical whoosh, the two souls trade places, and after the initial bewilderment wears off, they set out to fix each other's problems and find a way to swap their spirits back, with predictably entertaining results. Muffin Man's feline behavior in a human body (sniffing at backpacks, shrieking at loud noises, grabbing handfuls of cat food out of the cupboard) and matter-of-fact confidence are priceless, and Poppy's mishaps in her decidedly furrer body are equally silly. The friendships and families are realistically complicated and rewarding, and the writing is playful and nimble, sure to draw in reluctant readers. A wonderfully funny and empathetic exploration of evolving friendships and growing confidence.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Fifth-grader Poppy knows that she is a pushover, but she finds it easier than trying to fight the status quo. When some of her friends don't even help her after an embarrassing moment, however, she finds solace in her beloved cat, Mitten Man. Somehow a fervent wish made by Poppy (and a less despairing but still heartfelt feline wish) and a newly arrived collar that just happens to be magic come together at the right instant for a cat/girl swap. Mitten Man is elated to be Poppy: he is certain he can make her the confident, shining star that he believes she actually is--plus human food is amazing. Poppy is less happy, especially after Mitten Man completely ignores (with gleeful wild abandon) her exhortations to just blend in until they can switch back. Poppy finds herself outside after being unceremoniously tossed out by her aunt (who did not know her niece is occupying Mitten Man's body), and now she needs to learn how to navigate this cat form and his apparently complex and often troubling relationships with other neighborhood animals. Mitten Man isn't finding his human form any easier: it's hard enough to be a fifth grader but exponentially worse when you literally don't know anything being taught in school. The humor is light and gentle, the empathy each character learns is warmly conveyed and believable, and the deep love between these two protagonists are all strong selling points for fans of animal books, as well as readers who don't mind a dose of magic mixed in with their realistic middle-grades fiction. AS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A fifth grader and her cat magically swap bodies. After a particularly embarrassing day at middle school when she was laughed at and her friends didn't stand up for her, Poppy McBean is sharing all her problems with the best listener she knows: her cat, Mitten Man. When she wishes she had his awesome, easy life, she suddenly magically transforms into Mitten Man's feline self! Even more surprising, Mitten Man now inhabits Poppy's body (and is from then on referred to as "Big Poppy"), and the two can communicate telepathically but only when looking at each other. Through alternating first-person narratives, readers follow girl and cat as they embark on strange new adventures and learn about each other, themselves, and what it means to be a good friend. There's a slow start, but once the characters are a bit more settled in their new bodies, the pace picks up. Big Poppy is not great at thinking about others and makes many cringeworthy decisions. As "Old Poppy" (human girl Poppy in cat form) helplessly watches her friendships ruined, she winds up on a dangerous rescue mission involving a stray cat and a turtle that amps up the drama. There is plenty of humor throughout, but it's the realistically imperfect friendships that give the book depth and heart. Poppy is assumed White; names imply some ethnic diversity among her friends. Funny fare realistically exploring feelings. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A girl and her cat switch bodies in this Freaky Friday: flavored romp. Eleven-year-old Poppy McBean, who cues as white, is venting to her cat, Mitten Man, about her frustrations: feeling neglected by her overworked parents and put out by her bossy best friend, she wishes that she had Mitten Man's easy life. Following this admittance, the "world goes crazy" and, as if by magic, tween and cat swap minds. The two are suddenly capable of communicating telepathically, and they arrange for Mitten Man, now known as Big Poppy, to attend school while Old Poppy fumbles through life as a house cat until they can reverse the spell. Big Poppy, who has no interest in maintaining the status quo at school, quickly alienates Poppy's friends. Old Poppy, meanwhile, must brave the dangers of the outside world in a quest to locate a missing turtle. Tracy (I Am Picky) centers themes of empathy and understanding, as well as learning to push one's boundaries, through Big Poppy's stumbling efforts to conform to human life and Old Poppy's hesitancy to embrace change. It's a lighthearted adventure that will appeal to anyone who's ever wished to walk in their pet's paws. Ages 10: up. Agent: Sara Crowe, Pippin Properties. (July)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Kristen Tracy, author of books for teens and tweens, plus poetry for adults (Half-Hazard: Poems), dishes up plenty of frisky fun in Don't Trust the Cat, in which a "scaredy-cat" fifth-grader and her pet feline trade places. Mischief and drama ensue!

#2350105 Free Throws, Friendship, and Other Things We Fouled Up (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jenn Bishop

Cincinnati, Ohio, lives and dies by college basketball, with two elite Division I rivals separated by a mere three miles. Rory's dad just secured a new coaching gig at the University of Cincinnati, so it means yet another school and move for her, only this time to her dad's hometown. Rory's life revolves around basketball; she's never had a close friend outside of it. Could this be a chance for a fresh start?
978-1-7972-1561-7 Chronicle Books LLC ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 304 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Basketball runs in Rory March's and Abby Allenbach's blood. When Rory follows her dad to his new coaching position at the University of Cincinnati, she bonds with fellow eighth-grader Abby, the crosstown rival coach's daughter. That college ball beef? It extends off the court: the coaches were childhood besties but haven't spoken in decades. Opposites Abby and Rory secretly solidify a friendship forged over Skyline Chili, stats, and a love of the game as they investigate their fathers' fouled friendship. Bishop (Things You Can't Say, 2020) returns to athletic themes here, alternating two fully developed perspectives while modeling healthy, communicative relationships. Flashbacks contextualize the rift, and a (total baller) retired nun spanning story lines deserves her own spin-off. Game action is pervasive though notably engaging to nonplayers, and design elements, including numbered jerseys for chapter headers, honor the sport. With side themes of divorce, a first crush, and flawed parenting, this brisk and gracious upper-middle-grade selection is a top seed for collections and slam dunk for sports fans. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews History threatens to repeat itself as two new eighth grade friends try to find out why their dads seem to hate one another. Practically from the moment Cincinnati middle schooler Abby volunteers to chaperone new student Rory on her first day, the girls form a tight bond. In fact, they discover to their shock, their connection is just like the one their own dads had as kids before something caused a decisive break. Even now, meeting years later as coaches of nationally ranked basketball teams at rival colleges, Abby's dad won't shake hands with Rory's dad after a game. What happened? Neither of the fathers will talk about it. But as Rory and Abby gather clues and eventually suffer a traumatic break of their own, Bishop uses flashbacks to weave together two rich friendship stories that differ in detail but both turn on deep rifts caused by betrayals of trust--and, ultimately, are healed by talking things out. The struggles of the two daughters (both talented hoopsters themselves) with family and personal quandaries play out against a backdrop of March Madness, where their dads go head-to-head. Even though basketball's more a diversion than the main event here, there's some competitive action. The leads appear white; names and other cues identify significant characters of color in the supporting cast. Rich in tight bonds as well as savvy coaching on both game play and forgiveness. (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal m to Cincinnati to coach college basketball, Rory meets Avery, and they hit it off right away. Avery's father also coaches a college basketball team, which just happens to be the biggest rival of Rory's dad's team. While college basketball rivalries can run hot, the girls discover their fathers knew each other back when they were the girls' ages and have an even deeper grudge. How can they maintain their new friendship when the divide between their families runs so deep? Very loosely based on Romeo and Juliet, this story of friendship, forgiveness, and most of all, basketball, is a quick read that will connect with readers whether they are sports fans or not. The book is told in the alternating points of view of Abby and Rory but with some interspersed chapters from their fathers' perspectives from the early 1990s. As the girls grow closer in friendship and navigate middle school, they discover more about what tore their fathers apart way back when. There are a ton of teasers and basketball superstars referenced in the book; some will not know every player, but a seasoned fan will enjoy the nods to the greats, both recent and past. The pacing is quick, and readers will not be bored with the family/friend drama and the basketball action. Abby and Rory are well-rounded characters with their flaws who come into their own as they realize how much one decision can change their whole lives. The theme of forgiveness explored with their fathers is an especially touching aspect of the novel. VERDICT A worthy purchase for sports fans and any reader interested in friendship stories.--Molly Dettmann Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2291279 Front Country (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sara St. Antoine

Ginny Shepard is glad to be in Montana for a month of backcountry camping before she starts high school. But once Ginny gets to camp, things get complicated fast. She meets her tripmates: five challenging, rebellious, tech-addicted boys. And she finds out TrackFinders is designed for kids who need extra "support." Instead of feeling free as a bird, Ginny feels trapped . . . and betrayed.

978-1-7972-1563-1 Chronicle Books LLC ©2022 332 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 650

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Beset by climate anxiety, an eighth grader abandons her honor-roll and tennis goals and heeds the mountains' call during a transformative expedition. Ginny Shepard, a privileged Massachusetts girl obsessed with subalpine pikas, struggles with anticipatory anxiety after her aggrieved science teacher tells her class that extinctions and extreme weather are "previews of the horror show that is your future." Her peers laugh it off, but Ginny skips class to attend an environmental rally, quits tennis, and rejects a prestigious summer program at Columbia. Worried by her seemingly rash decisions, her parents enroll her in a Montana hiking camp, TrackFinders; at first excited, Ginny feels betrayed after learning it's actually a program designed to help troubled teens "get back on track" in their day-to-day lives. Though she initially finds it difficult to connect with fellow campers and overzealous counselors, Ginny uncovers a newfound inner peace and prospers under rough conditions while hiking, communing with her beloved pikas, and helping to manage a health emergency. Without diminishing the existential threat of climate change, this uplifting novel from St. Antoine (Three Bird Summer) attentively exhibits ways that communities can support one another in troubling times. Characters present as white. Ages 10: up. Agent: Lucy Cleland, Kneerim & Williams. (Sept.)

#2350073 Shira and Esther's Double Dream Debut (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Anna E. Jordan

When Shira and Esther first meet, they can hardly believe their eyes. It's like looking in a mirror! But even though they may look identical, the two girls couldn't be more different. Shira dreams of singing and dancing onstage, but her father, a stern and pious rabbi, thinks Shira should be reading prayers, not plays. Esther dreams of studying Torah, but her mother, a glamorous stage performer, wishes Esther would spend more time rehearsing and less time sneaking off to read books. Oy vey! If only the two could switch places . . .

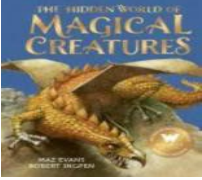

978-1-7972-1565-5 Chronicle Books LLC ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 332 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

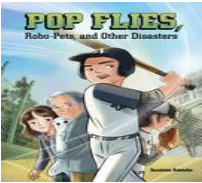

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two Jewish girls trade places for a shot at pursuing their ambitions in this sprightly three-act tale of found family and effort rewarded. Esther Rosenbaum longs to learn Hebrew and "raise my voice to God.... On the bima," but her single mother, Yiddish theater sensation Red Hot Fanny, pressures her to join the biz and audition for a televised talent showcase. Shira Epstein was born for the stage, but her rabbi father, a widower, insists that she focus on her Torah studies in preparation for her bat mitzvah. After a chance encounter, the girls; realizing their uncanny resemblance; swap roles to chase their crisscrossed dreams. Mishegas ensues, relayed in the whimsical style of a Yiddish folktale by an omniscient narrator who addresses the reader, in italicized Yiddish, as "mayne kinder." The well-choreographed action unfolds in the fictional town of Idylldale, an amalgam of Manhattan's Lower East Side and a Catskills-like resort of yore. Making her middle grade debut, Jordan (This Pup Steps Up!) juxtaposes Shira's and Esther's yearnings for performance and prayer, showing that there are infinite ways to be Jewish; all valid. Whether they know a bisl or bupkes about the religious tradition and culture, readers will love this sparkling intergenerational ode to chutzpah and Jewish joy. A Yiddish glossary concludes. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Janine Le, Janine Le Literary. (Oct.)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2330615 Hidden World of Magical Creatures (Hardcover (POB)) written by Maz Evans In woodland, over sea, on the highest peaks of the world, and in the darkest caves, these mythological beasts, fierce monsters and helpful spirits have inspired countless stories, poems, and films. This book will tell you where these creatures dwell, how to spot one, and how to keep yourself safe. 978-1-80338-174-9 Welbeck Publishing Group Ltd. ©2023 7 x 8-3/4 64 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 1250	1	$19.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2342635 Spooky Stories of the World (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Wendy Shearer This spine-tingling collection of spooky stories features over 20 eerie tales from across the globe. Discover bewitching retellings of ghost- and monster-filled myths regaled with ghoulish relish, and journey continent-by-continent through this haunting book. With shocks and twists like you wouldn't believe - are you brave enough to read them all? 978-1-83758-003-3 Lonely Planet ©2023 9-1/2 x 11 144 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic	1	$19.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2156886 Pop Flies, Robo-Pets, and Other Disasters (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Suzanne Kamata Thirteen-year-old Satoshi Matsumoto spent the last three years living in Atlanta where he was the star of his middle-school baseball team: a slugger with pro potential, according to his coach. Now that his father's work in the US has come to an end, he's moved back to his hometown in rural Japan. Living abroad has changed him, and now his old friends in Japan are suspicious of his new foreign ways. Even worse, his childhood foe Shintaro, whose dad has ties to gangsters, is in his homeroom. After he joins his new school's baseball team, Satoshi has a chance to be a hero until he makes a major-league error. "A heart-warming story about a baseball player who learns that teamwork is much more important than being the star of the team. I loved the family dynamics and depiction of life, and especially baseball, in Japan.": Shauna Holyoak, author of Kazu Jones and the Denver Dognappers (Hyperion, 2019) "A story set in Japan rich in details only Kamata, an insider, could share. With ease and respect, she weaves the pressures, agonies, and loyalties of Satoshi's life at home, at school and on a junior high baseball team with the practices and traditions of the game played in Japan. I am a big fan of this middle-grade homerun!": Annie Donwerth Chikamatsu, award-winning author of Somewhere Among (Atheneum/Caitlyn Dlouhy Books, 2017) " Pop Flies really pops! A lively, fun, easy read that draws you in and keeps you guessing.": Dori Jones Yang, award-winning author of The Forbidden Temptation of Baseball (SparkPress, 2017)	1	$12.74

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 13-year-old boy struggles to save his baseball team, help care for his grandfather, and avoid bullies in Tokushima, Japan, in this middle-grade novel.

#2222854 Be Your Own Best Friend FOREVER! (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Gary Robinson

Be Your Own Best Friend FOREVER! is packed with inspiring tips for any girl who doubts herself or is the subject of exclusion or body shaming. Jayla, the confident young person sharing her advice, takes pride in being Black, Native American, Asian American and Latina. She steers readers away from negative self-talk with proven strategies: If kids are mean to you, make new friends. If a TV program tells you to change how you look, change the channel!

978-1-939053-34-3 7th Generation ©2021 11 x 8-1/2 40 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 580

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.95

Reviews by: School Library Journal K-Gr 4—A bold self-love journey inspired by friend of the author and real-life kid Jayla Rose. In this hyper-positive picture book, Jayla is a no-nonsense girl who is proud of her Black, Native American, Asian American, and Latina identity. Jayla has something to say to all young girls out there, so you'd better listen up. Addressing negative self-talk, peer pressure, positive affirmations, and harmful messages girls get from the media, Jayla encourages girls to be their own best friend, offering tips and tricks for loving themselves first and unconditionally. The spare text provides confidence-boosting mantras, as well as simple but concrete ideas for girls on how to reject negative words and ideas: "If your inner voice says those negative things, TURN IT OFF! If your friends tell you those negative things, GET NEW FRIENDS!" Moments of awkward rhyming feel disjointed compared with the bulk of the text, which does not rhyme. Digitally texturized photos of Jayla are superimposed on technicolor, patterned backgrounds for a Pop Art-inspired feel that packs a graphic punch and will appeal to readers of a wide age range. VERDICT Readers of all backgrounds will cherish and celebrate the relatable, affirming messages that burst from these pages.—Allison Staley, Lake Oswego P.L., OR

#2312456 Lasagna Means I Love You (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kate O'Shaughnessy

Nan was all the family Mo ever needed. But suddenly she's gone, and Mo finds herself in foster care after her uncle decides she's not worth sticking around for. Then Mo finds a handmade cookbook filled with someone else's family recipes. Even though Nan never cooked, Mo can't tear her eyes away. Soon Mo finds herself asking everyone she meets for their family recipes. Teaching herself to make them. Collecting the stories behind them. Building a website to share them. And, okay, secretly hoping that a long-lost relative will find her and give her a family recipe all her own.

978-1-9848-9387-1 Knopf Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 650

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine After the death of Nan, the grandmother who had been her guardian, eleven-year-old Mo begins a series of letters to Nan in a notebook. She relates the difficulties of her next steps: an uncle is unwilling to care for her; a foster parent gives her up, overwhelmed in part by challenges including her stress-induced bed-wetting; another placement that looks like it might work out has its own obstacles. A family cookbook (stolen but later returned) makes Mo wish she had meaningful recipes of her own, and the cooking project the book inspires grows into a food website. She uses that platform to solicit other people's recipes -- and to put the word out that she's in search of blood relatives. Mo, imperfections and all, is a winning heroine surrounded by flawed though mostly well-meaning adults, and her hopes, even those that are long shots, come from an understandable desperation for family and stability, which makes it easy to root for her. Secondary characters are fully realized, with personalities coming through in the interspersed recipes' directions and commentary. To be read with snacks at hand, and perhaps also some tissues. Shoshana Flax(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Mo Gallagher's life is upended when her beloved grandmother dies and she is thrust into foster care. Nan had been her loving guardian, raising her in a New York City apartment that she must now leave. Her uncle is unwilling to assume her care, but he gives her a notebook with a letter to her from Nan on the first page. Hoping to remain connected in some mystical way, 11-year-old White girl Mo fills the notebook with frank letters to her grandmother, hoping for signs that she is being heard. But in the rest of her life, she withholds critical feelings and information, even avoiding telling Crystal Wang, her Chinese American best friend, the truth. The chance discovery of a homemade cookbook leads to a brilliant recipe project with her own website (recipes are also shared throughout the book). Her caring caseworker and her therapist help Mo deal with changes, especially as her uneasy relationship with her foster parents leads to a devastating surprise. Fortunately, Crystal remains a stalwart, loving ally, and Mo develops special relationships with a variety of supportive new friends. Mo is confused, feisty, frightened, sometimes self-destructive, intensely needy, and loving--and she has a bigger heart and is stronger than she thinks. Readers will laugh, cry, and embrace Mo completely as they rejoice at the wonderful twist that leads to a happy new beginning for her. The New York City setting is well integrated into the story. Deeply moving and tender. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly navigates foster care and seeks connection by collecting families' recipes and stories in this tenderly rendered, character-driven novel by O'Shaughnessy (The Lonely Heart of Maybelle Lane). When the grandmother who raised her dies, and her sole uncle says he can't take care of her, Mo Gallagher finds herself waiting for a foster placement in New York City. Journal entries framed as letters to her grandmother seek to reforge a connection amid rapid change ("If anyone can find a way to communicate from the afterlife, it's you"). The letters also relay Mo's worry about sharing recent events with best friend Crystal Wang, who is Chinese American; her promising interest in cooking after she finds a book of family recipes; and her growing friendship with the doorman at the building where she now lives. She begins to find her feet after starting a food website but falters when the placement she's been getting used to hits a snag. Mo's pitch-perfect voice vividly portrays her metropolitan past life with her quirky, vibrant grandmother; her own messy and layered feelings; and her established and growing relationships with others. Watching Mo develop new bonds and begin to feel like she has a place in the world is extremely satisfying. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Peter Knapp, Park & Fine Literary and Media. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-7—O'Shaughnessy's second middle grade novel will pull at the heart strings of all readers. Mo's grandmother has died and her only known living relative, Uncle Bill, does not want to leave his life in the army to raise his 11-year-old niece. Mo goes into the foster care system where she finds nothing but disappointment. After a little while, a young couple decides they would like to adopt a child, and Mo fits the bill. To develop a new hobby, a suggestion her grandmother made before she died, Mo starts to explore cooking and seeking out family recipes—anyone's family recipes in hopes she might discover someone from her own family. She gets help from the adults around her and develops a website where anyone can share their beloved family recipes along with pictures and stories. The story is told through Mo's journal where she is writing to her deceased grandmother about the highs and lows of her new life. Recipes are included as the story progresses. The ending is predictable and comforting. Readers who enjoyed Lynda Mullaly Hunt's One for the Murphys and Frances O'Roark Dowell's Where I'd Like to Be will enjoy this middle grade epistolary novel. VERDICT A fine addition to most middle school collections.—Kim Gardner

#2196615 Brave in the Woods (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tracy Holczer

Twelve-year-old Juni is convinced her family is cursed. Juni fears any good luck allotted to her family she used up just by being born, so when she wakes up in the middle of the night with the horrible feeling like antlers are growing from her head, she knows something is wrong. The next day she learns her older brother Connor has gone missing during his tour in Afghanistan.

978-1-9848-1399-2 Putnam Pub Group ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 840

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Juniper awakens one morning with the disconcerting feeling that she may be sprouting antlers. To anyone else, this would seem like the remnant of a dream, but family legend has it that she is descended from the Brothers Grimm, who were long ago cursed by a disgruntled witch to experience the highs and lows of their own fairy tales—and Juniper's family certainly seems prone to both miracles and terribly bad luck. After her older brother is declared missing in action while on a military tour in Afghanistan, Juniper becomes determined to break the curse and set things right in her world. By turns heartbreaking and humorous, this is a story that hints at the possibility of magic while remaining rooted in real-world problems and relationships. There is love and hope amid the grief and confusion, just as the Grimm tales contain both wonders and horrors in their own right. A heartfelt lesson on the power of love and the tales we tell ourselves.

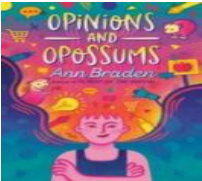

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Extreme luck -- good and bad -- runs in twelve-year-old Juniper Creedy's family thanks to a witch's curse placed on their ancestors, the Brothers Grimm. For example, three miracles saved Juni when she was born, but she suffers from debilitating asthma. And now her older brother, Connor, a soldier, has been declared missing in Afghanistan. While her parents and grandmother mourn, Juni holds out hope he'll return. She convinces Connor's best friend (and two of her own) to join her on an end-of-summer road trip to retrieve Connor's retired service dog. Juni believes that doing so, along with casting a magic spell and sacrificing something cherished, will help break the curse and, she hopes, miraculously bring Connor home. Holczer (The Secret Hum of a Daisy, rev. 7/14; Everything Else in the Universe, rev. 7/18) has crafted another heartrending story of familial loss, grief, and healing. Though the family's connection to the Grimms serves mainly as a convenient plot device, Juni does love fairy tales and storytelling, the latter woven into the narrative through memories of her brother and her grandmother's life story, which help tie the more magical aspects of this otherwise realistic novel together. The imagery-rich text ("Lately Juni felt like she was a horse with blinders and on the other side of those blinders were the right words to describe what was happening inside her") also places symbolic importance on deer, bees, and trees, enhancing the natural-world connection. Well-developed secondary characters help readers better understand Juni and the relationships she cherishes, while supporting her journey toward accepting the truth and finally letting go. (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Extreme luck -- good and bad -- runs in twelve-year-old Juniper Creedy's family thanks to a witch's curse placed on their ancestors, the Brothers Grimm. For example, three miracles saved Juni when she was born, but she suffers from debilitating asthma. And now her older brother, Connor, a soldier, has been declared missing in Afghanistan. While her parents and grandmother mourn, Juni holds out hope he'll return. She convinces Connor's best friend (and two of her own) to join her on an end-of-summer road trip to retrieve Connor's retired service dog. Juni believes that doing so, along with casting a magic spell and sacrificing something cherished, will help break the curse and, she hopes, miraculously bring Connor home. Holczer (The Secret Hum of a Daisy, rev. 7/14; Everything Else in the Universe, rev. 7/18) has crafted another heartrending story of familial loss, grief, and healing. Though the family's connection to the Grimms serves mainly as a convenient plot device, Juni does love fairy tales and storytelling, the latter woven into the narrative through memories of her brother and her grandmother's life story, which help tie the more magical aspects of this otherwise realistic novel together. The imagery-rich text ("Lately Juni felt like she was a horse with blinders and on the other side of those blinders were the right words to describe what was happening inside her") also places symbolic importance on deer, bees, and trees, enhancing the natural-world connection. Well-developed secondary characters help readers better understand Juni and the relationships she cherishes, while supporting her journey toward accepting the truth and finally letting go. Cynthia K. Ritter (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Juniper Creedy and her friends embark on a desperate quest after her older brother goes missing in action in Afghanistan. Juni has always known that her family, descended from the Brothers Grimm, is cursed: According to her grandmother Anya, the family's extreme luck--both good and bad--comes from an encounter their famous ancestors had with a Greek witch. But despite her own brushes with fate, including lifelong asthma attacks, the curse doesn't feel real to Juni until the Army delivers the news that Connor is missing. Now, her parents are distant and unreceptive to Juni's conviction that Connor is still alive, but Anya shares new information with Juni, partly through first-person journal entries, about her own childhood and the curse. So when it's time for the annual end-of-summer camping trip with her friends Mason and Gabby (chaperoned by Luca, Gabby's older brother and Connor's best friend), Juni requests a few additional stops in hopes of finding a witch and breaking the curse. Holczer's clear, gentle prose allows the emotional and descriptive elements of the text to shine in this multilayered road-trip story, complete with flashbacks at key landmarks. While Juni's Grimm ancestry isn't critical to the plot, it underscores her faith in the fairy-tale elements that ultimately enable catharsis around Connor's fate. Most characters are coded White; Gabby and Luca's family is coded as Latinx. A thoughtful exploration of grief, family lore, and human connection. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8--All her life, Juniper has been told by her grandmother that her family is descended from the Brothers Grimm. Unfortunately for her family, they were also supposedly cursed by a witch to constantly relive the tales that they stole. When her brother Connor goes missing during his military tour of Afghanistan, Juni thinks it must be the curse rearing its head again. She begins receiving signs that must mean Connor is still alive, though her parents have given up hope. Believing that she is running out of time, Juni decides that she must embark on a quest to somehow break the spell put on her family centuries ago. If she succeeds, Connor will be found and finally come home. Juniper convinces her friends Malcolm and Gabby, as well as Connor's best friend, Luca, to help her to retrieve Elsie, Connor's golden retriever service partner from the home where she was sent after Connor's disappearance. This is a beautiful tale of love and grief, friendship and family, and of hope. The tale of Juni's life and the quest she undertakes for her brother unfolds like a fairy tale. With each new layer of the story and character introduced, readers understand a little more about what drives Juniper, why she feels like she owes her life to her brother, and why she refuses to give up on him. Give this to readers who loved Ali Benjamin's The Thing About Jellyfish and Kate Allen's The Line Tender. VERDICT Holczer's use of humor, thoughtful imagery, and magical realism elements makes this a wholly unique blend of modern fairy tale, hero's quest, and coming-of-age story. A suggested purchase for all middle grade collections.--Sara Brunkhorst, Glenview P.L., IL Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2323803 Opinions and Opossums (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Ann Braden Agnes has been raised to keep her opinions to herself, but how do you keep silent when you're full of burning questions? 978-1-9848-1609-2 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 660	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Agnes doesn't know if she believes in God, especially the God that's an old white man, which is especially problematic because her life at school and her mom's job is increasingly dependent on her being a good girl in confirmation class. A chance encounter with an opossum, the words of Maya Angelou, and an anthropologist neighbor help Agnes learn that maybe she doesn't have to just lie down and play dead—maybe she can use her voice and help those around her learn to use theirs too. Though the plot concerns conservative Christianity, Braden's book is perfect for middle-graders of any faith, especially those learning to make their faith their own. The relatable core plot, which folds in themes of income inequality, sexism, and asserting one's rights, moves quickly, and while the story can sometimes feel pedantic, the strong women in Agnes' life steal the show. Agnes' growth throughout the novel and the familiar middle--grade plot points reimagined through Agnes' unique situation in her community will resonate with fans of Barbara Dee and Paul Acampora.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 12-year-old girl learns that questioning faith can make it stronger. Agnes, named after a saint who at age 12 was dragged through the streets when she chose to devote herself to God rather than marry, is having a hard time believing in the God she's been told about--an old man with a white beard. She can't help but question the sexism of original sin and the cruelty of the Old Testament God. After helping to rescue a mother opossum, Agnes learns that playing dead is a survival skill for these marsupials. She comes to identify with the opossum--by going along with confirmation classes despite her doubts, is she merely "playing dead"? Through eye-opening talks with her anthropologist neighbor, creative writing exercises from the perspective of an opossum, and the powerful poetry of Maya Angelou, Agnes finds a version of God that makes sense to her and realizes she has the power to challenge authority. Braden crafts a nuanced story supported by clear metaphors and honest, deep emotions. Readers faced with similar situations will find support here even if it's only the confirmation to keep questioning. As Agnes learns and grows, she comes to realize that there are many conceptions of religion and God--that God could be a Black woman, for instance. Agnes, her single mother, and most other characters are presumed White. Mind-expanding. (Fiction. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When older neighbor Gracy nearly hits an opossum with a pouch full of young at the start of this slim, feminist-leaning novel by Braden (Flight of the Puffin), 12-year-old Agnes learns that a play-dead instinct "isn't great if your predator is a line of traffic ready to run you over." Expected by her widowed mother to attend confirmation classes and sign a pledge that she believes in God, Agnes identifies with the opossum's inability to stand up for herself. Is her worry about "opinions," or "Other People's Opinions," undermining her faith in herself? Questions about finding and speaking her own truth begin consuming Agnes, who understands that her mother usually yields to those in traditional positions of power. Inspiration and guidance come via a Beyonce documentary featuring Maya Angelou ("Tell the truth. To yourself first"), and from Gracy's teachings about archeology, anthropology, history, and poetry, as Agnes works to understand women's underreported, vital roles throughout history, and the importance of perspective in accounts of the past. Underdeveloped characters and message-heavy prose undercut this empowering novel's solidly constructed arc, which is told via a first-person voice and quirky "The Opinion of an Opossum" interstitials. Protagonists present as white. Ages 10: up. Agent: Tricia Lawrence, Erin Murphy Literary. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Adolescence is typically a time of questioning authority and traditional beliefs. Twelve-year-old Agnes never had the opportunity to question what she believes until a Confirmation class makes her rethink all her prior ideology. In Confirmation class, she is faced with the dilemma to pledge to believe in God, spurring much introspection. Agnes, with friends Mo and neighbor Gracy, share deep discussions and partner on writing important topics. Along the way, Agnes writes an opinion piece from the voice of an opossum that was almost gravely injured. Braden has woven the story of an overlooked and misinterpreted animal with thought-provoking realistic fiction. Braden shares a multigenerational story of how poetry and speaking your truth can be refreshing and connecting. This novel could be useful in social emotional learning lessons about being patient when change happens slowly or allowing oneself permission to feel anger. Readers might relate this quirky tale to Naked Mole-Rat Letters by Mary Amato about strange misunderstood animals and unexpected relationship dynamics. The world needs tweens to reflect on who is telling every story, whether fiction or nonfiction, and the motivations for those perspectives. VERDICT A healthy reminder that the status quo continually needs to be challenged by thoughtful youths. There are a multitude of metaphors found in the natural world that can provide lessons if we are open to receiving them. A good choice for tween shelves.--Laura Dooley-Taylor Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2268290 In Honor of Broken Things (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Paul Acampora

At West Beacon Middle School, eighth graders Oscar Villanueva, Ellie Baptiste, and Noah Wright become unlikely friends during Introduction to Clay class. Through art, football, failure, faith, and trust, the friends help one another to piece things back together again. In true friendship, they also discover that some injuries may never heal, some things can never be unbroken--and that's okay too.

978-1-9848-1664-1 Dial Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Oscar, Noah, and Riley meet in art class at the junior-senior high school in a once-flourishing town in Pennsylvania. A few weeks after the start of school and 10 days after his younger sister's death, Oscar Villanueva returns to the classroom as the six-foot freshman who is expected to lead the football team to glory. That same day, Noah Wright, whose father has left the family, decides to stop homeschooling and escapes his mother's tears by enrolling as an eighth-grader. Riley Baptiste and her mother recently moved from Philadelphia to Mom's hometown. Different in their personalities and experiences, the three students form a fast, strong friendship that helps them deal with whatever comes their way. Their lives become increasingly intertwined as the novel unfolds. Writing with insight and wit, Acampora portrays teens and adults as complicated, sometimes surprising people. The first-person narration rotates, chapter by chapter, among Oscar, Noah, and Riley. While the ending ties up loose ends nicely, it will come too soon for readers intrigued by the main characters and their stories. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Navigating the chaos and social groups of adolescent life can be difficult; in this novel, three friends help one another despite feeling "broken" themselves. Four-teen-year-old Oscar, football star at West Beacon Junior/Senior High School (go Mighty Mules!), has recently lost his younger sister to cancer. Riley, who contends with issues of anxiety and anger, has moved with her single mother back to Mom's hometown. Noah -- spelling bee champ, artist extraordinaire, mathlete -- is dealing with his parents' separation. Both Noah and Riley are new to West Beacon; Oscar, returning to school two weeks after his sister's funeral, doesn't want to hang with the cool kids anymore (he feels more like he's the only member of the "your-little-sister-just-died-and-now-you-sort-of-hate-everybody club"). In Mr. Martin's ceramics class, the three find themselves forming the group they all need. Clay becomes the central metaphor of the story -- that which can be created; broken objects that can be fixed; and the things that can't, such as sisters dying, robberies, and families changing. With brokenness as a theme, crushing sadness could have sunk the narrative, but Acampora (Confusion Is Nothing New, rev. 7/18) leavens the story with Noah's humor, Riley's tell-it-like-it-is feistiness, and Oscar's openness to receiving help. (Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Navigating the chaos and social groups of adolescent life can be difficult; in this novel, three friends help one another despite feeling "broken" themselves. Fourteen-year-old Oscar, football star at West Beacon Junior/Senior High School (go Mighty Mules!), has recently lost his younger sister to cancer. Riley, who contends with issues of anxiety and anger, has moved with her single mother back to Mom's hometown. Noah -- spelling bee champ, artist extraordinaire, mathlete -- is dealing with his parents' separation. Both Noah and Riley are new to West Beacon; Oscar, returning to school two weeks after his sister's funeral, doesn't want to hang with the cool kids anymore (he feels more like he's the only member of the "your-little-sister-just-died-and-now-you-sort-of-hate-everybody club"). In Mr. Martin's ceramics class, the three find themselves forming the group they all need. Clay becomes the central metaphor of the story -- that which can be created; broken objects that can be fixed; and the things that can't, such as sisters dying, robberies, and families changing. With brokenness as a theme, crushing sadness could have sunk the narrative, but Acampora (Confusion Is Nothing New, rev. 7/18) leavens the story with Noah's humor, Riley's tell-it-like-it-is feistiness, and Oscar's openness to receiving help. Dean Schneider(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly espective family troubles form a supportive friendship circle in Acampora's (Danny Constantino's First (and maybe last?) Date) earnest narrative, which encourages vulnerability and acceptance. Ninth grader Oscar Villanueva, who is Mexican American, has just lost his younger sister to cancer; previously homeschooled eighth grader Noah Wright, who is white, decides to enroll in public school, spurred by his parents' divorce; and fellow eighth grader Riley Baptiste, also white, has just moved to their small town of West Beacon, Pa., after her mother was held up at gunpoint. Though the students are outwardly very different; Oscar is a popular starting linebacker on the football team, Noah is extremely academically advanced, and Riley is quick to anger and thinks her fists can solve all her problems; they bond after meeting in a mixed-grade introductory clay class. Told in distinct and alternating POVs, the group grows closer over misshapen pottery as they admit weakness, navigate new experiences, and learn to accept help from others. Acampora approaches the characters' struggles with levity and intentional thoughtfulness, making for a tender tale. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Susan Hawk, Upstart Crow. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Oscar's, Riley's, and Noah's lives intersect when they meet in their Introduction to Clay class at West Beacon Junior/Senior High School. Each teen is learning to navigate junior high while also coping with personal struggles. Oscar faces the trauma of losing his sister to cancer. Noah's parents are divorcing, and he is just starting public school after years of homeschooling. Riley has recently moved to West Beacon, her mom's small hometown, after a robbery at her mother's workplace in Philadelphia. This book is a solid story of friendship that grows between the three teens, all of whom need a strong foundation in a world of upheaval. Riley, Noah, and Oscar learn that friendship means showing up and being reliable. The characters are multidimensional and compelling, and the plot includes some unexpected turns as the friends find that some wounds may not heal. Despite these twists, the book has a hopeful ending, leaving readers eager to learn more about the characters. VERDICT A multifaceted, realistic fiction tale that connects the pottery the students are creating to what's going on in their lives using metaphors of art and life.—April Crowder

		Quantity	Unit Price
	#228177 By the Light of Fireflies: A Novel of War Hero Sybil Ludington (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Jenni L. Walsh Sybil Ludington believes in the legend of fireflies - they appear when you need them most. But it's not until her family is thrust into the dangers of the Revolutionary War, and into George Washington's spy ring, that Sybil experiences firefly magic for herself - guiding her through the darkness, empowering her to figure out who she's supposed to be and how strong she really is - as she delivers her imperative message. BY THE LIGHT OF FIREFLIES is the captivating tale of a young girl's journey - as a daughter, a sister, a friend, a spy, and eventually a war hero - completing a midnight	1	$22.00 ride that cements her place in history as the "female Paul Revere." 978-1-954332-12-6 Wyatt-MacKenzie Publishing ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 188 pgs.

 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8--Sybil Ludington, a young girl growing up in colonial America, wishes she were a boy. Her father, a leader in New York State's early efforts for independence, inspires her with stories about Paul Revere's ride and the night when a cloud of fireflies guided him out of the woods and into safety. As the oldest child in a large growing family, Sybil's future appears limited to marriage and family, doing much the same work she currently does now. But circumstances change. First, one night when she can't sleep, a swarm of fireflies guides Sybil to a young abandoned foal. Fortunately, her parents allow her to keep the horse and she names him Star. Then, the fight for American independence becomes more organized and dangerous. Sybil's father has a bounty offered by the British on his head, so he must elicit the help of Sybil and her younger sister Rebecca to become spies in the colonial network. The girls ride patrols with Star, decode secret messages, and send messages via laundry and lamp light. One night, Sybil rides 40 miles with Star, summoning troops to report for duty before a major battle. She completes the journey, proving that not only men and boys can serve their fledgling democracy. Loosely based on historical writings and a 1907 memoir, Walsh creates a riveting story that reminds young readers that the quest for independence often meant life-threatening dangers for both the colonial militia and their families. The description of secret communication codes, such as invisible ink, and historical facts about the American Revolution, make this a book that young readers will enjoy. VERDICT With short chapters, a suspenseful plot, and a variety of real-life historical characters, this book is perfect for younger readers. Libraries looking to update their historical fiction collections related to the American Revolution will want to consider this title.--Anne Jung-Mathews, Plymouth State Univ., NH Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2344689 Bone Tree: What Lies Beneath May Be More Than Friendship
(Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jenna Lehne

Elsie's best friend, Roman, is dying. But Roman has a plan to escape death. He wants to be resurrected through the powers of the Bone Tree and the curse of the Woman in White, Mary Simon, whose body lies beneath the tree. When the Bone Tree's magic works and Roman resurrects, Elsie vows to do anything to keep him around, even if that means battling an angry, screeching banshee, with talons for fingers. When the Woman in White kidnaps Roman's brother, Jake, and threatens to take his life as revenge, Elsie must choose between saving the lives of many from the deadly grasp of Mary Simon, the Woman in White, or keeping her best friend.

978-1-956378-16-0 Little Press ©2023 6 x 9 192 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

#2373314 Memory Vampires (Library Binding)
written by Ryan Wolf

(Novel in Verse) Twins Adam and Adriana Carver couldn't be more different these days, but they are forced to spend time together on a family vacation in a remote New England village. Though the neighborhood looks charming, the locals are spacey and distant. They seem barely able to speak. Soon the twins' parents begin forgetting everyday things--the locations of keys and parked cars. This quickly escalates into something far more troubling. As the adults start losing their core memories, the twins must hunt down the nightmarish cause of this tragedy. But the monsters in this peaceful seaside community prove far darker and more threatening than anything they might have imagined.

978-1-9785-9720-4 West 44 Books ©2024 160 pgs.
 Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl N

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.40

#2373325 Tell Me Why the Jack Pine Grows (Library Binding)

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.40

written by D. J. Brandon

(Novel in Verse) Meadow is enjoying a carefree country summer, tending her beloved 4-H chickens and freely exploring the outdoors. Content at home with her father, brother, and Nanna, Meadow wishes she could stay a kid forever. Everything changes the day the man in the green car stops her on the road, alarming her with an uncomfortable request. The brief encounter fills her with a strange new anxiety that she can't share with anyone. As fear fills her every move, she makes her world smaller and smaller to feel safe. But when a friend is also approached by the driver of the green car, Meadow realizes she must talk about what happened to protect others. Like the jack pine growing from the rocky cliff, Meadow can't fight growing up any longer, but maybe she can change her corner of the world for the better.

978-1-9785-9723-5 West 44 Books ©2024 160 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl N

#2161366 Hello from Renn Lake (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Michele Weber Hurwitz

When she was three years old, Annalise discovered that she could sense what Renn Lake was thinking and feeling. Now, at twelve, she still turns to Renn for comfort. But when a small patch of algae quickly becomes a harmful bloom, Annalise can no longer hear Renn, and the lake is closed. She and her friends must find a way to save the lake.

978-1-9848-9632-2 Wendy Lamb Books ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 540

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Left near the shore of Wisconsin's Renn Lake as an infant, Annalise was subsequently adopted by a local family who owns vacation cottages there. Though the 12-year-old knows she can communicate with the lake ("I don't actually hear Renn's words. I sense them"), what Annalise does not know is that Renn Lake, whose first-person narration alternates with Annalise's (and a few chapters by local river Tru), "propelled a surge" so that Annalise would be discovered and saved. When Zach, who is staying at one of the cabins on the lake, discovers a harmful, growing algae bloom that is making Renn very ill, Annalise realizes that she, with the help of her community and Tru, must work to save both the lake and the businesses that depend on Renn for tourism. Along the way, Annalise comes to terms with her origin story and gains a deeper understanding of her friends, her family, and herself. Intertwined with Renn's unique narration and a meaningful human-nature connection, Hurwitz's (Ethan Marcus Makes His Mark) book intersperses scientific facts about algae blooms and pollution with a story of activism and nature appreciation. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Alyssa Eisner Henkin, Trident Media Group. (May)

#2350214 Great Book of Forest Legends (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tea Orsi

The Great Book of Forest Legends offers a selection of short stories about charming and magical creatures of the forest. Each of the folkloric tales is preceded by a description of the forest creature represented in that tale, like leprechauns, elves, and water nymphs. The book features 11 beautifully illustrated stories that children can easily dip into and out of.

978-88-544-1919-3 White Star ©2023 9-1/4 x 11-1/2 64 pgs.

Grades 1 - 4 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

#2332786 Breaking In (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tyler Schwanke

Outraged, she reunites her former film crew to steal the movie and hold it for ransom days before its high-profile premiere. Putting their training and film-nerd backgrounds

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

to use, they pull off the heist in extravagant fashion. But when an unexpected femme fatale uncovers their plan, it's not long before a trio of hardened criminals want in on the take.

979-8-200-96079-8 Blackstone Publishing ©2023 6-1/2 x 9-1/2 299 pgs.
Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Teens try to reclaim what's theirs in the cutthroat world of Hollywood. Since before her father died in a botched bank robbery, 17-year-old aspiring filmmaker Millie Blomquist has dreamed of becoming a famous director of heist films. She finally gets the chance to pursue her dreams at the Manhattan Movie Academy, where she is working with friends Paz, Devin, and Jordan, when her idol, famed director and academy founder Ricky O'Naire, is arrested for embezzlement. The school collapses before her summer program is even over. Seven months later, Millie is back home in Fargo, North Dakota, trying to make movies on her own when she sees the trailer for recently exonerated O'Naire's new project--only to realize it's the film about her father she presented to him at the academy. Desperate to hold him responsible, Millie organizes Paz, Devin, and Jordan to carry out a real-life heist and take O'Naire's materials ransom. But with the stakes ramping up, they don't realize how dangerous things are about to become. Given her personal history with heists gone wrong, Millie's naïveté is occasionally unbelievable, and readers not deeply familiar with heist films may have trouble with the endless movie references, but overall, this is a compelling read that doesn't shy away from slightly darker content. Main characters are cued White; contextual clues may indicate that Paz is Latine and Jordan is Black. A fast-paced homage to the classic heist film. (Thriller. 14-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 10 Up--Millie Blomquist aspires to be a filmmaker and selects the Manhattan Movie Academy's summer program because of the possible prestigious award that is offered to high school students, like her, for their final project. She gathers three others to help make up a crew and begins filming her script based on the sad passing of her father. Millie learns after his tragic death during a bank heist that he was a crook. During a late-night editing session, she meets Ricky O'Naire, a famous director who runs the school's program. His most famous movie was a heist film, which just so happens to be Millie's favorite film genre. Ricky likes the premise of Millie's film, and when a scandal breaks that abruptly ends the summer session, Ricky gets the funding to make a new movie using Millie's script. She is shattered by this and decides to gather her crew together to pull a heist on the director who stole her idea to get the final cut of the film. Millie's diverse crew are high school students. Readers will have to suspend their disbelief that teenagers could travel across the U.S., trick adults, and pull off an intricate heist all on their own. Strong language is used throughout, and the adult crooks who are encountered commit violent acts. VERDICT Recommended only for larger collections where readers seek out crime fiction.--Elizabeth Kahn Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

#2326246 Half Moon Summer (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elaine Vickers

Drew was never much of a runner. Until his dad's unexpected diagnosis. Mia has nothing better to do. Until she realizes entering Half Moon Bay's half-marathon could solve her family's housing problems. And just like that they decide to spend their entire summer training to run 13.1 miles. Drew and Mia have very different reasons for running, but these two twelve year olds have one crucial thing in common (besides sharing a birthday): Hope. For the future. For their families. And for each other.

978-1-68263-539-1 Peachtree Publishers ©2023 5-1/4 x 8 288 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 740

Reviews by: Booklist When Drew, a newborn baby, wouldn't stop crying, a hospital nurse tucked him in beside Mia, another newborn, and he calmed right down. Twelve years later, Drew begins his summer with low expectations, since his best friend has moved away from Half Moon Bay. When Dad takes up running, he persuades Drew to join him on daily outings, training for an upcoming half-marathon. Before that event, a girl named Mia comes to stay with her grandmother and joins their running crew. Just when the summer seems brighter, Drew learns that his father is seriously ill, and Mia discovers that her family will be losing their home. Each is devastated initially, but they continue to run while supporting each other and making discoveries about themselves and their relationships with family members and friends. The book has a small cast of well-developed, mostly likable characters, whose interactions and reflections are at the heart of the novel. The author of Like Magic (2016) and Paper Chains (2017), Vickers tells the main characters' intertwined stories through alternating first-person narratives, with Drew writing in journal-entry style and Mia expressing herself in free verse. Each adds an interesting perspective, while both move the story forward. An involving, heartening novel of change and growing awareness.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books As summer vacation rounds the corner in Half Moon Bay, CA, Drew is dreading the expanse of time without his best friend Isaac, who recently moved away. Things begin to turn around when Drew's dad gifts him a new pair of Nike running shoes and they start to run together, even though Drew has a sinking feeling about his dad's new clumsiness and his parents' secret conversations. Meanwhile, Mia is not at all happy to be in Half Moon Bay for the summer--instead of working on building their house in Sacramento, Mia's dad heads to Alaska to care for his sick mother, while Mia and the rest of the family spend the summer with her maternal grandmother. When Mia's and Drew's paths converge, they begin to run together daily with the goal of participating in a half marathon at the end of the summer. At the event, Mia intends to confront the wealthy real estate developer who has put her family's dream of living in their own home in jeopardy. An inviting preface foreshadows the main characters' friendship with the story of Drew and Mia's Birth Day, as the two shared a bassinet after they were born on the same day at the same hospital. Vickers deftly distinguishes between the alternating perspectives by composing Drew's point of view in prose and Mia's chapters in verse. Both main characters seem uncommonly self-reflective for almost-thirteen-year-olds, yet their perceptiveness and the parallels between their concerns about family finances and relationships greatly enhance the emotional appeal of this story. News of a serious diagnosis for Drew's dad highlights a tender theme of courage in face of the precariousness of life, evoking a deep gratitude for every precious moment spent with loved ones. KF COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Drew and Mia met as infants -- born on the same day in the same hospital, they stopped crying only when nurses put them in the same bassinet -- but grew up in different areas of California, meeting again only when Mia comes to stay with her Gram in Drew's hometown of Half Moon Bay for the summer before they turn thirteen. Mia's family is there while her father is in Alaska caring for his ailing mother. Drew's summer plans mainly involve avoiding work in his father's carpentry shop until the gift of a pair of Nikes gives him new purpose. Mia joins Drew and his dad on their morning runs, and they decide to enter a local half marathon. When Drew learns that his dad has been diagnosed with ALS, the race takes on a deeper meaning. Vickers does an excellent job of blending her two narrators' voices, with Drew's chapters written in prose and Mia's in verse. The book deals authentically with tween feelings, especially their complex reactions to death and loss, while also maintaining a solid pace through the dynamic plot, making it a great choice for upper-middle-grade readers looking for an emotionally intense story without a hint of romance. (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Drew and Mia met as infants -- born on the same day in the same hospital, they stopped crying only when nurses put them in the same bassinet -- but grew up in different areas of California, meeting again only when Mia comes to stay with her Gram in Drew's hometown of Half Moon Bay for the summer before they turn thirteen. Mia's family is there while her father is in Alaska caring for his ailing mother. Drew's summer plans mainly involve avoiding work in his father's carpentry shop until the gift of a pair of Nikes gives him new purpose. Mia joins Drew and his dad on their morning runs, and they decide to enter a local half marathon. When Drew learns that his dad has been diagnosed with ALS, the race takes on a deeper meaning. Vickers does an excellent job of blending her two narrators' voices, with Drew's chapters written in prose and Mia's in verse. The book deals authentically with tween feelings, especially their complex reactions to death and loss, while also maintaining a solid pace through the dynamic plot, making it a great choice for upper-middle-grade readers looking for an emotionally intense story without a hint of romance. Sarah Rettger(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A bond formed in infancy is reestablished during a pivotal summer when two tweens each need a staunch friend by their side. Drew and Mia have an unusual origin story: They were born on the same day and in the same hospital in Half Moon Bay, California. One baby's presence comforted the other inconsolable one in their shared bassinet. While this story is familiar to each, they don't see each other again until life brings them together 12 years later when Mia returns to Half Moon Bay from Sacramento to visit her grandmother. The two young people feel a connection that blossoms into friendship, one that sustains each of them through some of the worst of life's difficulties. For Drew, it's his father's diagnosis with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. For Mia, it's financial stress and the impending loss of her family's home. They take turns telling their individual stories: Drew's prose is direct and descriptive; Mia uses free verse to capture concise moments and feelings. They begin to go running together, and the way they start to open up is sensitively portrayed and rings true. Just as Drew and Mia fall into step during their runs as they train to enter a half-marathon, their stories begin to align as well, and they encourage and support each other through their challenges. It doesn't alter the road ahead, but it does influence how they handle what comes next. The cast is cued White. Uplifting. (Fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Though they became instant pals as infants born on the same day in Half Moon Bay, Calif., 12-year-olds Drew and Mia haven't seen each other since Mia moved to Sacramento. But now, 12 years later, she's spending the summer with her Gram in Half Moon Bay while her father tends to a sick relative in Alaska. Since Drew's best friend recently moved away, and Mia doesn't know any other kids in town, the pair quickly fall into a routine of running each morning with Drew's father. As the summer unfurls, the duo bond over familial conflicts: Drew has been struggling to accept his father's amyotrophic lateral sclerosis diagnosis, while Mia worries about her family's financial and housing-related troubles. Together, they begin preparing for the town's half-marathon, and while it initially feels as if they're "running away from what scares us," they find that their training helps them make the most of every day in the face of uncertain futures. Via distinct dual perspectives that alternate between Drew's POV, told in compassionate prose, and Mia's, conveyed in rhythmic verse, Vickers (Like Magic) vividly captures one emotionally turbulent summer filled with a friendship's mutual trust and support. Characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ammi-Joan Paquette, Erin Murphy Literary. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8--Mia and Drew were born on the same day in the same California hospital, but don't meet up again until the summer before eighth grade when they discover that they have even more in common. Drew is feeling in-between--old enough to babysit his toddler sister, but not old enough to work in his father's woodshop. His best friend Isaac has moved away and he's worried about some upsetting news his parents are keeping from him. Mia is also in-between. She and her family moved out of their apartment and are staying with her grandmother for the summer while her dad is in Alaska, taking care of his ailing mother. Mia wants her grandma to get better so that her dad can come home and finish work on the house that he is building for them. The pair initially bonds over music and messy younger siblings, but, over the course of the summer, they encourage and challenge each other to take the next step--literally, in training for a half-marathon and also in how to be a good friend, how to say the right thing, and how to keep going even when it's hard or lonely. Drew's first-person narration is direct with a self-aware and humorous tone. Mia tells her story in compact lines of free verse, filling the pages of a notebook that her father gave her to record everything that happens while he's away. Vickers presents issues of loss, financial instability, and serious illness with a realistic but gentle touch. VERDICT A sensitive, heartfelt story of friendship and growing up. Highly recommended.--Jennifer Costa Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2323834 Girl Who Lost a Leopard (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Nizrana Farook

Selvi is a free spirit who loves climbing in the beautiful mountains behind her home. There, she befriended Lokka, a leopard with a beautiful coat and huge golden eyes. Together, they roam the wilderness as they please.

978-1-68263-581-0 Peachtree Publishers ©2023 6 x 8 224 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Keeping both the South Asian setting (“Serendib,” an island kingdom that closely resembles the author’s native Sri Lanka) and villain from The Girl Who Stole an Elephant (2021), Farook pits young Selvi against a ring of smugglers out to kill or capture Lokka, a magnificent leopard living in her rural area. Ultimately, Lokka and Selvi end up rescuing each other as the suspenseful story carries the two from one hazardous situation to the next, with both help and hindrance coming from Selvi’s undependable schoolmates and, climactically, matters being complicated by a horrifying revelation that her own family has connections to the illegal trade in rare animals. Though the trade in big cats is depicted in a bad light here, the author also provides glimpses of its potential rewards in terms of money and public safety, giving readers something to ponder. In the end, it's a dramatic, feel-good story—no one dies, the wild and noble leopard runs free to the cheers of the onlooking children, and the poachers get their just deserts.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Adventure, friendship, and activism intertwine in this middle-grade novel. Set in the island country of Serendib, which reads like an alternate Sri Lanka, this story brings readers into the world of leopards, toque macaques, and nelu flowers, which bloom every 12 years. Eleven-year-old Selvi is a loner and outsider in her school class. To fill the loneliness, she often romps with Lokka, a wild leopard she has befriended. One morning she is horrified to discover hunters illegally pursuing her beloved Lokka. She screams and the poachers come after her instead. Fleeing, Selvi stumbles upon the home of Amir, a boy in her class who hangs out with the mean kids. Amir becomes curious about Selvi and follows her, discovering her friendship with the leopard. Meanwhile, Selvi is desperate to protect the leopard from the poachers and at first shuns Amir's offer of help, not trusting him. But eventually the two bond and work together to expose a poaching ring. While the story is not a nuanced one--characters are good or bad--and Amir's transition from untrustworthy to trustworthy is delivered swiftly, it is full of well-written adventure and presents the time-honored theme of the value of friendship. Its evocation of setting is a strong point, as it includes descriptions of many flowers, birds, and animals, creating a strong sense of place. A straightforward, well-written storyline with a strong setting and atmosphere. (map) (Adventure. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2321459 Spoonful of Time (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Flora Ahn

Maya's grandmother, Halmunee, may be losing her memory, but there's something almost magical about the way she cooks. Whether Halmunee serves salty miyeokguk or sweet songpyeon, her stories about Korea come to life for Maya. Then one day, something extraordinary happens: a single delicious bite of patbingsu transports Maya and Halmunee back into one of Halmunee's memories. Suddenly they're in Seoul, and Halmunee is young. As Maya eats her way through the past, her questions multiply--until a shocking discovery transforms everything she thought she knew about family, friendship, loss, and time itself.

978-1-68369-318-5 Quirk Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 272 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 750

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Korean American Maya is surprised to learn that her grandmother, who’s in the early stages of dementia, has the remarkable ability to travel back in time to her own memories by eating or making foods that formed part of that memory. Once Maya gets used to the idea, she begins to wonder if she can use this special ability to relive memories with her deceased father while also learning more about her Korean culture and heritage through foods and her grandmother's memories. Ahn's accounts of the memories themselves create a nostalgic atmosphere as they unfold before Maya's eyes. In exploring her grandmother's past, Maya is able to learn about herself, reflect on her relationship with her mother, and gain a more solid sense of where she comes from. This beautifully written book includes some recipes for the foods that Maya and her grandmother prepare in the story, and the descriptions of the dishes are tantalizing enough that readers might appreciate the ability to recreate them at home. A warm and satisfying intergenerational story.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Maya and her maternal grandmother use food to travel to the past. For most of seventh grader Maya's life, it's been just her and her exhausted mom living in their quiet house in Southern California. But then, several months ago, Halmunee, who has dementia, came to live with them. Halmunee is an incredible cook, and she encourages Maya to help her make Korean dishes. One day, while they are eating patbingsu, Halmunee transports them to the Seoul of Maya's mother's childhood, where Maya sees younger versions of her mom and grandparents enjoying the sweet Korean shaved ice treat. Halmunee explains that she has the power to return to moments in the past through food memories. Together they cook and eat their ways through moments in Halmunee's past. Maya longs for a stronger connection to Korea and her family's history, and she uncovers more secrets--until an unexpected realization makes her question everything. Full of twists, this middle-grade story is a heartwarming mix of food and family. Maya struggles with fixating on the past, ignoring her friends and schoolwork in the present, something those grappling with letting go of mistakes or regrets will understand. Exactly how time travel works is unclear even for the characters, however, making it difficult and confusing for readers as well. Halmunee's memories are an homage to Korean food and culture, and there are recipes interspersed for readers to try. A charming time-travel story with delectable descriptions of food. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Food forms a bridge across time in this affectionately wrought contemporary novel from Ahn (the Pug Pals series). In Southern California, Korean American seventh grader Maya lives in a "still and silent" house with her single mother, who works long hours at a law firm. Quiet gives way to a tense family dynamic, however, when Maya's maternal grandmother, Halmunee, comes to stay, upsetting Maya's mom. Halmunee, who has dementia, loves to cook, and she reintroduces Maya to an array of Korean foods. As the two bond over making patbingsu one day, they are seemingly transported to the past, where they see Maya's younger grandparents and mother enjoying the treat. Through this event, Halmunee reveals that she can travel through time, using food as a connection between moments. Though Maya tries to glean more information about her father, who died when she was three, and about her mother's complicated relationship with Halmunee, her mother remains taciturn and secretive about the past, until Maya's attempts to balance her own life and new abilities come to a boiling point. Maya's changing understanding of her mother, and evocative descriptions of food and its link to memory carry this light speculative read, which offers up a sweet intergenerational relationship that connects past and present. Recipes, along with illustrations from Park, are interspersed throughout. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Melissa Edwards, Stonesong. (Apr.)

#2179732 Hungry Place (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jessie Haas

Princess lives a charmed life of brown sugar cubes, crunchy apples, sweet grass, and adoration. But it is a lonely life; her elderly owner keeps Princess separate from other ponies so his show-ring champion will remain pristine. When Princess's owner has a stroke, she is thrust into the care of an unscrupulous trainer and his wife, who steal from the farm and leave.

978-1-68437-794-7 Boyd's Mills Press ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 190 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide ara pony at Highover Farm, has all the best care from her doting, elderly owner Roland. In a separate but linked narrative, Rae, a scrappy eight-year-old with the love of horses "printed on her heart," sees Princess at a horse show and is immediately smitten -- but any kind of horse or pony is out of her family's reach, let alone a champion like Princess. Some years pass, and Princess racks up ribbons while Rae's grandmother, Gammer, teaches Rae how to work for her dreams: saving, seizing opportunities to learn, never giving up. Dark clouds loom for Princess, though, when Roland has a stroke and his unscrupulous employees steal everything of value and put Princess out to pasture with a herd of rough-and-tumble ponies. With no one feeding them and winter approaching, the ponies eat the grass in their enclosure down to the dirt. Tender-hearted readers (that is, all horse-loving readers) will weep at Princess's peril and, even more, her loneliness, told from a pony's-eye view. In Rae's part of the story, they'll cheer Gammer's wisdom, compassion, and good advice; friends Sam and Tully's emotional and practical support; and Rae's persistence and faith in her dream. Readers' sympathetic agony is eventually replaced with tears of happiness as Haas brings the story around to a rousing happily-ever-after ending. (Copyright 2020 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A pampered, then abused, pony finds her horse-crazy girl. The novel starts from the tightly focused third-person point of view of a filly being born. Soon named Princess, she's the last foal out of breeder Roland's favorite Connemara mare. The perspective then shifts to Rae, a horse-obsessed almost-8-year-old who lives nearby. Rae's mom is dead; though they live on a small farm, her father can't afford a pony. Her grandmother, however, encourages her to keep working toward her goal, so, as a few years pass, Rae goes to horse shows, watches frenemy Eden's riding lessons, and practices on a horse statue her dad makes from scrap metal. Meanwhile, chapters from Princess' point of view detail how her pampered life amounts to neglect. When Roland suffers a stroke, his cartoon-villain employees abscond with his riches, leaving a field of ponies, including Princess, to starve. Eventually Princess is rescued by Tish, a character familiar from some of Haas' other horse books (Jigsaw Pony, illustrated by Ying-Hwa Hu, 2005, etc.), and ridden by Rae, who's saved up for Tish's riding camp. Love ensues, as does a patented happy ending. Clumsy characterization and a predictable plot make for dull reading despite a fair amount of melodrama. Roland is strangely unlikable, and Rae feels one-dimensional. All the human characters are White. Haas has done much better--a disappointment. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5—Roland, the proprietor of Highover Farm, has bred some fine Connemara ponies over his long career, but Princess may be the finest yet. Pampered and expertly trained, Princess is a champion pony. That is not the type of pony that Rae, who has dreamed of owning a pony her whole life, wants. In part because she cannot afford a champion pony, but also because Rae wants one who is spunky like Radish—the pony she hopes to ride at the horsemanship camp she has been saving for. Princess and Rae seem worlds apart until circumstances bring them together. When Roland is taken from Highover in an ambulance, Princess is left out in a field with other ponies to fend for herself. Rescued, injured, and starving, Princess finds herself a camp pony paired up with Rae. Despite initial trepidation on both sides, Rae and Princess bond deeply. Could Princess be the pony Rae was meant to have all along? Roland, now recovering from his stroke, trusts that Rae and Princess are right for each other. Deep inside, people are hungry for a place of refuge that will help to make them feel complete; for Rae and Princess that place is filled by their love for each other. VERDICT A sweet story of longing, determination, and healing that will appeal to readers who enjoy tales of friendship and horses.—Jessica Caron, Bancroft Sch., MA

#2324148 Ada and Zangemann: A Tale of Software, Skateboards, and Raspberry Ice Cream (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Matthias Kirschner

The famous inventor Zangemann lives in a huge villa high above the city. Adults and children alike love his inventions and are desperate to have them. But then something happens: when Zangemann wants to take another close-up look at his inventions during a walk through the city, a child hits him in the shin with the skateboard. That hurts! Enraged, the inventor makes a momentous decision... The clever girl Ada sees through what is going on. Together with her friends, she forges a plan.

978-1-7185-0320-5 No Starch Press, Incorporated ©2023 8-1/2 x 8-1/2 57 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

#2246963 What Lives in the Woods (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Lindsay Currie

When they arrive, Ginny is immediately spooked by the creepy house and the rumors of what lives in the surrounding woods. Legend says the forest is inhabited by prowling creatures that prey on campers, who are never seen again.

978-1-7282-0975-3 Sourcebooks, Incorporated ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile HL 590

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-9 When it comes to Saugatuck, Michigan, the question isn't so much what lives in the woods, but rather, what lives in Woodmoor Manor? As bad luck would have it, 12-year-old Ginny has a whole month to figure that out, as her family will be staying in the clearly haunted old mansion while her father works on restoring some of its rooms. Although Ginny's upset about having to miss a mystery-writing workshop for this trip, it doesn't take the Agatha Christie-obsessed tween long to realize that Woodmoor has its own mystery that needs solving. Currie (Scratch Scratch, 2020) throws all the frightfully fun trappings of haunted-house tales at readers, who will soak up the stormy nights, town rumors, exploding light bulbs, creeping shadows, unsettling whispers--and let's not forget the mannequin in the bedroom. Ginny teams up with her older brother and a kid from town to do some ghost hunting and good old-fashioned sleuthing, ultimately discovering that empathy can go a long way toward healing the past's injuries. Light horror for larger collections. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Twelve-year-old Ginny and her family move to Saugatuck, Michigan so her dad can restore rundown Woodmoor Manor. Already spooked by the legend of the Hitchhikers, mutant creatures roaming the woods surrounding the manor, Ginny's additionally unnerved by hearing the distant, ominous tick-tocking of a clock from everywhere in the house, getting trapped in the dark with a faceless mannequin that seems to move, and seeing the ghostly face of a woman in the mirror--not to mention the appearance of a typewriter with a note that says GET OUT. New friend Will, who has a connection to the manor, warns Ginny of an even more sinister threat than the Hitchhikers: the Shadow People. Currie (Scratch Scratch, BCCB 9/20) returns with another chilling outing informed by real history. Agatha Christie superfan and future mystery writer Ginny revels in the spotlight, and the eerie atmosphere without overly gruesome imagery makes this a perfect middle-grade horror selection. Though there are hints of a possible followup, they may just be clever misdirection that will tickle Christie fans, and the novel holds its own as a shivery standalone. QB COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A tween who is obsessed with Agatha Christie moves into a haunted house. Twelve-year-old Ginny Anderson and her older brother, Leo, are less than thrilled to be spending a month of summer vacation away from their Chicago home. They are relocating to Saugatuck, Michigan, for their historical restoration expert father's research. Ginny will be missing the mystery writing workshop she's been looking forward to, and Leo doubts there'll be many basketball courts in the sleepy town. Oh, and there's one more thing: The fancy historic house they'll be staying in might be haunted. Saugatuck residents whisper of mutant creatures concocted by a long-ago mad scientist roaming the surrounding woods, and everyone avoids the place. It doesn't take long for Ginny to encounter some spooky situations, but with the help of a new local friend, Will, she is on the case. The setup is familiar and the tone consistent with other middle-grade spook books, but the novel really shines when it spends time with Ginny as she works out the manor's mysterious past; she is a swell character, shaded enough to feel genuine. The mystery is exciting but a bit uneven: There's a lot of buildup, with occasional thrills and chills before the investigation begins, but the reveal comes so quickly readers may be forgiven for assuming there'll be a last-minute twist. Regardless, the scares are real, the resolution satisfying, and a sequel would be welcome. Main characters are presumed White. A thrilling read with an engaging protagonist. (Mystery. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal yet another horror offering from Currie, whose protagonists are equally in love with books and mysteries. Ginny Anderson hears from her parents that their family is packing up and moving out for a monthlong retreat in Michigan, which means missing a highly anticipated mystery writer's workshop and leaving her friend Erica and their summertime plans behind. Her father is entrusted with the renovation of a legendary spooky mansion in Saugatuck on Lake Michigan, and her parents, Ginny, and her brother Leo find themselves in the heart of haunted happenings. Almost immediately, Agatha Christie-obsessed Ginny begins to witness moving objects, faces in the mirror, and shadow in the house's ballroom. Thankfully, Ginny enlists her brother and new friend Will in solving the curse of Woodmoor Manor, giving readers a succinct detective story and bantering dialogue for the paranormal-enthused. Currie serves up an appropriately tween horror story in staccato chapters with plenty of goosebumps. VERDICT A suggested purchase for upper elementary and middle school libraries with students interested in scary stories, and a natural step-up for those reading "Five Nights at Freddy's." Currie provides a genuinely creepy tale that begins with literary jump-scares and evolves into a decades-old historical mystery.—Rachel Joiner, Advent Episcopal Sch., Bessemer, AL

#2176443 Candy Mafia (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lavie Tidhar

In a city where candy is a crime and sugar is scandalous, Nelle Faulker is a 12-year-old private detective looking for her next client.

978-1-68263-197-3 Peachtree Publishers ©2020 300 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 590

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5 Starred Review It's been three years since new mayor Thornton, promising to make this city great again, signed on to Prohibition?not of alcohol but of chocolate and all other sweets?and so shut down the Farnsworth Chocolate Factory, the town's largest employer. Unsurprisingly, several gangs of preteen bootleggers have since arisen to satisfy the heavy demand for illegal candy. So far, so good (or at least historically predictable), but when one gang leader, Eddie de Menthe, suddenly disappears just as new one Mary Sweetcakes Ratchet arrives to muscle in, 12-year-old private detective Nelle Faulkner finds herself caught up in a scary whirl of arson, burglary, extortion, smuggling, sugary treats, and official corruption. It all centers around the whereabouts of the factory's reclusive owner, and getting to the bottom of that mystery takes Nelle from seedy playgrounds and midnight rendezvous to sewers on the way to a sweet denouement. Tidhar folds in plenty of noir tropes and contretemps (not to mention a stolen teddy bear for a McGuffin), while in his sparse but atmospheric line and fill drawings, Duncan depicts the young gumshoe properly clad in fedora and trenchcoat. It won't take a detective to spot Willie Wonka, as well as Sam Spade, hidden in the tongue-in-cheek caper's literary DNA.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Preteen detective Nelle battles organized crime during her city's prohibition on candy. From the start, snappy dialogue and mannered narration spoofs the traditions of film noir when 12-year-old candy smuggler Eddie de Menthe hires private detective Nelle Faulkner, also 12, to find a missing teddy bear while a candy prohibition hangs over their neighborhood. As Nelle pursues leads in a playground hideout, store backroom, and lonely mansion, she encounters more kid bootleggers as well as crooked adults also on the hunt for the missing teddy bear. Similarities to the real Prohibition reveal government corruption and the difficulties inherent in denying a population what it wants. When Eddie also goes missing, Nelle's case turns to recovering a candy fortune, locating a hidden chocolatier, and restoring peace--and all kinds of sweets--to her sugar-starved city. Food fights, an abandoned candy factory break-in, and more sweets-themed antics add to the fun and intrigue. Breaking up a mostly white cast is Nelle's South Asian friend, Bobbie Singh, who's also integrally connected to the illegal candy trade. In film-noir fashion, grayscale cartoons highlight Nelle's escapades and exaggerate the criminals. While poking fun at the genre, in his debut for children, thriller writer Tidhar also recognizes young people's need for respect. Combining chewing gum and gumshoes, this comical mystery begs to be read aloud. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Brought in by the new mayor and relentlessly enforced for the last three years, candy prohibition has spawned a black market in 12-year-old detective Nelle Faulkner's town. Nelle misses candy, but the true loss haunting her is her father's death. After candy bootlegger Eddie de Menthe approaches the private eye to find a stolen teddy bear, Nelle is thrust into the war brewing between three kid-led gangs controlling the illegal candy trade. As Nelle starts asking questions, a rival gang stink-bombs an illicit candy shop, mysterious adults rifle through the girl's office, and the bear arrives at Nelle's home; events that unfurl into a larger mystery. Nelle is convinced the answers lie in the shuttered chocolate factory, whose owner has disappeared. Noir tropes loom large in Tidhar's fast-paced story, with a gutsy gumshoe, a hardboiled narrative voice ("I needed a job even worse than I needed a caramel fudge"), and enough action to keep young readers on their toes. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Twelve-year-old Nelle Faulkner is a private detective. It annoys her that adults think she's playing. She dresses the part, sporting a fedora and a trench coat; set up an official office in the garden shed; and has actual clients. She works on the right side of the law; but since Mayor Thornton prohibited candy of any kind in town, she's been known to turn a blind eye to the candy bootlegging operations that have sprung up. Nelle is nonplussed when prominent bootlegger Eddie de Menthe hires her to find a missing Teddy—then he goes missing. As Nelle interviews the various candy bootleggers, she stumbles onto an even greater mystery as she learns just how vast the operation is. She's also being tailed by a pair of sinister detectives from the Mayor's police force. Nelle is a sturdy, intrepid, practical character surrounded by a colorful cast of candy-obsessed children and adults in this fast-paced mystery. Grey-toned illustrations and spot art enliven the story. Young readers might not get all the film noir references, but there's plenty here to satisfy tween mystery lovers. VERDICT This is Charlie and the Chocolate Factory meets film noir; there's mystery, humor, plenty of action, and a red herring or two with an explosive climax.—Brenda Kahn, Tenakill M.S., Closter, NJ

#2222444 Homer on the Case (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Henry Cole

Homing pigeon Homer and his parrot friend Lulu learn something is afoot when they witness four-legged criminals stealing valuables from both the animal and human communities. Using the sleuthing techniques he's gathered from his favorite mystery comics, Homer and Lulu track down the bandits, but need human help to stop them for good. Can they find a way to communicate with their human keepers and lead them to the culprits' hideout to stop the thieves?

978-1-68263-254-3 Peachtree Publishers ©2021 144 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 600

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Something is amiss in Keeler Park, one of Homer the homing pigeon's favorite places to hang out after a stimulating morning race. A string of petty thefts there is upsetting the humans, but it gets personal when the crime spree targets one of Homer's humans (Grandpa!). Taking cues from his favorite comic-strip detective, Dick Tracy—Homer taught himself to read Human by studying the newspapers that line his rooftop cage—Homer resolves to crack the case. Cole's gentle animal fantasies can always be depended upon, and this light mystery is just right for young readers. Delicate pencil illustrations, arranged in panels, begin each chapter, offering a glimpse of events to come. Cole mixes humor with intrigue to keep the narrative bouncing along, and readers will get a kick out of the unusual detective team that forms of Homer and his boy, Otto, and new friends Lulu (an Amazon parrot) and her girl, Charlotte. Hand this to fans of Chris Riddell's Ottoline and the Yellow Cat (2008) and A. B. Greenfield's Ra the Mighty: Cat Detective (2018).

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this chirpy illustrated mystery, an intrepid homing pigeon teams up with a pampered parrot to solve a series of crimes. Curious racing homing pigeon Homer, the novel's narrator, lives on a rooftop looked after by his boy Otto and Otto's grandfather. Homer taught himself to read "Human" from the newspapers on his cage floor, and particularly enjoys following the comic Dick Tracy. Cole (Brambleheart) richly imbues the narrative with sensory details; Homer's perspective and his appetite for "surveillance," which cause him to notice a bejeweled rat that sparks his interest in a series of thefts, prove engaging. The friendship between Homer and a cosseted talking parrot named Lulu enables this unlikely duo to communicate with their humans and enlist their help in detective work. Unfortunately, female characters prove heteronormatively gendered and subordinate, and the many references to Dick Tracy may go unappreciated by readers unfamiliar with the comic. The expressive b&w pencil illustrations, rendered in panels evoking newspaper comics, heighten drama, tension, and humor. While the mystery itself might falter, the industrious hero charms. Ages 8: 12. (Apr.)

#2282522 Flipping Forward Twisting Backward (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Alma Fullerton

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Claire is by far the best gymnast on her team, and she's well on her way to qualifying for the state championships. The gym is where Claire shines. But at school, she's known as a troublemaker. She seems to spend more time in the office than in class—which is fine with her since it enables her to hide the fact that she can't read. She has never been able to make sense of the wobbling jumble of letters on a page. No one except her BFF knows. (Features Dyslexia-friendly font)

978-1-68263-366-3 Peachtree Publishers ©2022 6 x 8 144 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 1.0

