

Children's Plus, Inc.

1387 Dutch American Way
Beecher, IL 60401
Toll-Free: 1-800-230-1279
Intl.: 1-708-946-4100
Fax: 1-800-896-7213
Intl.: 1-708-946-4199

Proposal: !!2024 Rebuild
Proposal #: 377047
Sales Representative: Tami Chappell
Phone: (352) 804-2235
Bill To Code: FLORAN
Ship To Code: FLHMS

Selected Titles

13-Story Treehouse (Prebound)

#2346770 (Vol. 09) 117-Story Treehouse (Prebound)
written by Andy Griffiths

The upgrades to the treehouse are still under construction and therefore super-duper top secret, but The 117-Story Treehouse is sure to be the zaniest adventure yet.
978-1-5364-8186-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 580

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

13-Story Treehouse (Trade)

#1753349 (Vol. 02) 26-Story Treehouse (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Andy and Terry live together in a 26-story treehouse where they tell stories and have crazy adventures
978-1-250-02691-0 ©2014 345 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 4.7 Lexile 770

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Andy and Terry, introduced in The 13-Story Treehouse (Feiwel & Friends, 2013), have expanded their incredible arboreal residence by adding several exciting features, including a robot-controlled ice-cream parlor, a mud-fighting arena, an ATM (Automatic Tattoo Machine), and the Maze of Doom. Their publisher, Mr. Bignose, is demanding their next book, so the friends attempt to tell stories about how they met and how they first built their treehouse. They also have to cope with a tank of sick, underwear-eating sharks and a pack of invading buccaneers. Similar in design to Jeff Kinney's "Diary Of A Wimpy Kid" series (Abrams), these 13 wacky, interconnected stories integrate print and graphic elements, with comic-book-style panels, word balloons, and text blocks, which blend together seamlessly. Different font styles help distinguish the storytelling sections from the main action. The conversational, matter-of-fact narration is a delightful contrast to the off-the-wall story line. Wildly humorous without being smart-alecky or sarcastic, this is a top choice for middle-grade readers.-Elaine E. Knight, formerly at Lincoln Elementary Schools, IL (c) Copyright 2014. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#1912480 (Vol. 03) 39-Story Treehouse (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

"Andy and Terry are once again inviting readers to come hang out with them in their astonishing 39-story treehouse (it used to be 13 stories, then 26 stories, but they keep expanding). And this year they will have even more time to jump on the world's highest trampoline, toast marshmallows in an active volcano, swim in the chocolate waterfall, pet baby dinosaurs, and go head-to-trunk with the Trunkinator, since Terry has created the greatest invention that he-or anyone else-has ever invented . . . a Once-upon-a-time machine that will write and illustrate their entire book for them!"--OCLC
978-1-250-02692-7 ©2015 346 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.4 Lexile 610

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$15.99

#1946357 (Vol. 04) 52-Story Treehouse (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Andy and Terry live in a 52-Story treehouse. (It used to be a 39-story treehouse, but they keep expanding.) It has a chainsaw-juggling level, a make-your-own-pizza parlor, a rocket-powered carrot-launcher, a life-size snakes and ladders game, a remembering booth, a Ninja Snail Training Academy and a high-tech detective agency, with all the latest high-tech detective technology, including the Disguise-o-Matic 5000! Something that is sure to come in handy as they try to solve the mystery of: What happened to Mr. Big Nose? After all, it's hard to turn in your next book when your publisher has vanished!

978-1-250-02693-4 ©2016 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.6 AR Pts 1.0 RC Lvl 3.3 Lexile 590

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

#2002656 (Vol. 05) 65-Story Treehouse (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Andy and Terry live in a 65-story treehouse. (It used to be 52 stories, but they keep expanding.) It has a pet-grooming salon, a birthday room where it's always your birthday (even when it's not), a room full of exploding eyeballs, a lollipop shop, a quicksand pit, an ant farm, and a time machine which is going to be really, really useful now, since Terry messed up (again) and the treehouse just FAILED its safety inspection.

978-1-250-10246-1 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.4 Lexile 610

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

#2051916 (Vol. 06) 78-Story Treehouse (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Andy and Terry live in a 78-story treehouse. It has a an open-air movie theatre with a super-giant screen... which is a very useful thing to have now that Terry's going to be a big-shot movie star! After Andy gets cut out of the movie, he and Terry have a big fight and decide they don't want to be best friends anymore.

978-1-250-10485-4 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.6 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.2 Lexile 560

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$13.99

#2065739 (Vol. 07) 91-Story Treehouse (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Andy and Terry live in a 91-story treehouse. Good thing there's so many fun things to do in the treehouse, because Andy and Terry get stuck babysitting Mr. Big Nose's three grandchildren for the day.

978-1-250-10488-5 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.2 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.7 Lexile 500

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$15.99

Quantity Unit Price

#2221226 (Vol. 10) 130-Story Treehouse (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

1 $14.99

Andy and Terry live in a 130-story treehouse. (It used to be a 117-story treehouse, but they added another 13 stories.) It has a soap bubble blaster, a time-wasting level, a 13-story igloo, the GRABINATOR (it can grab anything from anywhere at any time), a toilet paper factory, and an extraterrestrial observation centre for observing aliens.
 978-1-250-23608-1 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 2.0

#2275517 (Vol. 11) 143-Story Treehouse (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Quantity 1 Unit Price $16.99

Andy's been a bit stressed out lately, so Terry decides the perfect way to relax would be to head up to their new camping ground level for a much-needed vacation. But it turns out to be not quite as relaxing as planned. Terry forgets to pack the tent and the food, their attempt at fishing ends in disaster, the spooky campfire stories are a little too spooky and then, to make matters worse, all of Andy's fellow campers start mysteriously disappearing.
 978-1-250-23610-4 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 304 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.2 AR Pts 1.0

#2095996 (Vol. 08) 104-Story Treehouse (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Quantity 1 Unit Price $14.99

When Andy has a toothache that hurts so bad he can't write any jokes for their new book, Terry knows just what to do: buy a Joke Writer 2000 to write the jokes for them! All they need first is some money from their money-making machine and then it's off to the store. It's a foolproof plan--a Terry-proof one, even!
 978-1-250-30149-9 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 600

#2321548 (Vol. 01) 13-Story Treehouse (Full Color Edition) (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Quantity 1 Unit Price $16.99

Andy and Terry are trying hard to write their next book but they are constantly distracted by the many animals and special rooms in their thirteen story treehouse. (Full color edition)
 978-1-250-84697-6 ©2023 6 x 9 256 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 1.0 RC Lvl 3.2 Lexile 560

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5. In this series starter that will appeal to fans of Jeff Kinney and Dav Pilkey, a young author-illustrator pair discover that a single day of life in their gigantic tree house provides enough material for a manuscript to satisfy their publisher, Mr. Big Nose. Episodes involving a giant banana attack, a sea monster masquerading as a mermaid, burp-filled bubblegum bubbles, a threatening gorilla, and 13 ferocious flying cats are described in bites of text plentifully seasoned with Denton's scribbly, busy black-and-white cartoons, which vary from full page to spot to other rascally configurations that spill from the page. The wonderfully random slapstick humor is tailor-made for reluctant readers. Even better, each short chapter stands alone, though the whole story hangs together thanks to repeating motifs. A treat for all with a sequel promised for next year. And guess what? It makes for good tree house reading.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Longtime collaborators Griffiths and Denton (Killer Koalas from Outer Space) get metafictional in their latest book (first published in Australia), and the result is anarchic absurdity at its best. Young buddies Andy and Terry live together in the sort of tree house that kids dream about, complete with bowling alley, shark tank, vines to swing from, and underground laboratory. With so many distractions, is it any wonder that they're late with the book due to their publisher, Mr. Big Nose? "We were a little behind schedule," confides Andy. "Well, when I say 'a little behind schedule,' I mean a lot behind schedule. And when I say 'a lot behind schedule,' I mean a LOT LOT LOT behind schedule." It's due tomorrow, but before they can get to work, they have to handle an escaped catnary (a cat turned canary), "burp-gas-filled bubblegum bubbles," and a horde of destructive monkeys. Denton's manic cartooning captures every twist and turn in hilarious detail, as babies are pelted with garbage, yapping dogs squashed, and monkeys catapulted into the distance. A sequel was published last year in Australia and can't arrive soon enough. Ages 8-12. (Apr.) (c) Copyright PWxyz, LLC. All rights reserved.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5-Andy and Terry live in a treehouse. In addition to the normal rooms found in a house, it has a theater and library, a bowling alley, and a games room. The boys write and illustrate books, and are far behind on their deadline for their publisher, Mr. Big Nose. They bicker and procrastinate and experience many adventures and misadventures. Wacky stories about flying cats, a monster mermaid, a treehouse full of monkeys, and a banana-seeking giant gorilla will entertain and delight readers. Fun cartoons on every page will engage them and inspire giggles. The situations are described and illustrated so completely that readers will be instantly transported to the fantastic world of the 13-story treehouse. Fans of Jeff Kinney's "Diary of a Wimpy Kid"(Abrams) and Lincoln Peirce's "Big Nate" series (HarperCollins) will be drawn to this book, while parents will enjoy the absence of snarky humor.-Erica Thorsen Payne, Meriwether Lewis Elementary School, Charlottesville, VA (c) Copyright 2013. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. No redistribution permitted.

#2343644 (Vol. 12) 156-Story Treehouse: Holiday Havoc! (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Andy and Terry live in a 156-story treehouse. (It used to be a 143-story treehouse, but they added 13 more levels.) It's the night before Christmas but Andy and Terry aren't ready yet! They haven't written their letters to Santa or hung their stockings, and now Mr. Big Nose wants their next book done by tomorrow. When Santa's sleigh crash-lands in the treehouse, the reindeer become tangled in the branches and Santa falls into the cloning machine.

978-1-250-85018-8 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 1.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5—Griffiths and Denton are back for a new adventure in their 156-story treehouse (13 stories have been added to the treehouse since the last book). Andy introduces readers to all the cool things inside the treehouse, including a bouldering alley, which is like bowling but with boulders; an aquarium with their pet axolotl, Quazjex; and even an enigma machine. Andy and Terry's shenanigans include elements of fairy tales; their book publisher, Mr. Big Nose; 12 Santas (created when Santa falls into the cloning machine); and Jill—who, of course, saves the day. Intricate pen illustrations add to the story on every page, and readers will be able to combine words and illustrations to create a more thorough understanding of the storylines. The vocabulary is on-point, with a few words that will add to readers' vernacular, such as "Gorgonzola" and "axolotl." Readers will laugh out loud at the jokes in this humorous story. With a tagline like Holiday Havoc, even the most reluctant reader is in for a wild ride. VERDICT Readers of the "Dogman" and "Diary of a Wimpy Kid" series will embrace this story.—Katie Loomis

#2376182 (Vol. 13) 169-Story Treehouse: Doppelganger Doom! (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Griffiths

Can Andy, Terry, and Jill escape school, save the treehouse from the doppelganger mirror gang AND get their book written on time?

978-1-250-85021-8 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

A&a Detective Agency (Trade)

#2347923 (Vol. 01) Fairfleet Affair (Hardcover (Trade))
written by K. H. Saxton

When Dr. Alistair Fairfleet, the Fairfleet Institute's eccentric chairman, disappears on the first day of Alex Foster and Asha Singh's summer vacation, they receive a letter inviting them to a game involving complicated clues and puzzles. It is just the sort of case they've been waiting for. But nothing in the Fairfleet case has a simple solution. As the kids track down clues, they uncover art forgeries, archaeological crimes, and Fairfleet family secrets that will test their partnership and force them to confront the complicated legacies of the people and places they admire most.

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

978-1-4549-5012-7 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 810

Reviews by: Booklist Not every detective agency has its office in a tree house, and few are staffed by bright, inquisitive middle-schoolers like Asha and Alex. Good friends and partners in crime solving, they're trying to find clues in an email sent by Dr. Fairfleet, the director of the distinguished Fairfleet Institute. The message challenges them to help him by solving the mystery of his disappearance three weeks earlier. Since he has sent the same message to four others (all adults on the Fairfleet Institute staff, including the one responsible for his disappearance), the race is on to untangle the mystery and find Dr. Fairfleet by the date specified in his message. Determined to solve the case, Alex and Asha earn readers' respect along the way. In her first novel, Saxton reveals a knack for constructing a mystery, planting baffling clues, and creating interesting characters of varied ages. Tension rises and falls, but the pace of the narrative never falters, and readers will enjoy seeing the puzzle pieces fall into place during the satisfying conclusion. A smart, involving first novel.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A notable disappearance leaves two young sleuths with a stirring and surprise-filled summer case. Dr. Alistair Fairfleet is the aging chairman of the Fairfleet Institute, located in the fictional New England town of Northbrook, and a major investor in eighth graders Alex Foster and Asha Singh's A&A Detective Agency. After Dr. Fairfleet vanishes during a solar eclipse on the kids' first day of summer vacation, the young detectives receive a letter that includes four names of people connected to the institute: an archivist, a performing arts director, an art museum director, and a natural history museum curator. When Alex and Asha learn that these individuals also received letters with clues, it sends them into mystery-solving overdrive. In the weeks that follow, they encounter literal and metaphorical red herrings as they unearth clues and solve multilayered puzzles connected to the visual arts, Shakespeare, archaeology, history, and more. The winding plot drives the action and excitement, while an emphasis on the characters' interactions provides relatable snapshots into the tensions that can arise in authentic relationships. Themes relating to morality, bias, and honesty are illustrated through the characters as well as the history the detectives unearth, leaving readers with a satisfying ending, several mysteries solved, and deeper questions to ponder about inheritance, cultural heritage, and record-keeping. Alex is coded white; Asha is Indian American, and there is some racial diversity in the supporting cast. A complex, cinematic, and eclectic page-turner. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Indian American Asha Singh and her best friend Alex Foster, who reads as white, are the 12-year-old founders of A&A Detective Agency, which they run out of Alex's backyard tree house. Though they haven't yet had an official opportunity to exercise their investigative skills, the pair are dedicated sleuths who believe that their knowledge of their town's history; and their rapport with Dr. Alistair Fairfleet, one of Northbrook's most prominent citizens; is the key to legitimizing their agency. When Dr. Fairfleet goes missing on the day of a solar eclipse, Asha and Alex, along with numerous museum directors, receive cryptic messages containing clues about what happened to him. As the tweens decode the messages, many of which include quotes from King Lear, they become embroiled in a wild treasure hunt through the various museums, a local performing arts center, and Dr. Fairfleet's home. But what starts as a missing persons case devolves into something even more nefarious involving blackmail, forgery, and smuggling. Despite thinly characterized protagonists, the intricate plot; jam-packed with brain teasers, convoluted twists, and red herrings; keeps readers in suspense while neatly paving the way for a sequel in Saxton's series-starting debut. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Abeni's Song (Trade)

#2327827 (Vol. 01) Abeni's Song (Hardcover (Trade))

written by P. Djeli Clark

You ignored my warnings. It's too late to run. They are coming. The old woman hasn't come to save them, only to collect one child as payment for her years of service and protection. When warriors with burning blades storm the village and a man with a cursed flute plays an impossibly alluring song, everyone Abeni has ever known and loved is captured and marched toward far-off ghost ships set for even more distant lands. But not Abeni.

978-1-250-82582-7 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 15.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 All her life, Abeni has been known as the little rain bringer; it is rumored that when she was born, she brought rains that ended a perilous drought. On the day of Abeni's twelfth birthday, she is eager to convince people to drop the "little" from her nickname, wanting to be seen as more than a child. But she doesn't realize that her wish is about to come true, just not in the way she hopes. When Abeni's family and friends are stolen away, she must make an unlikely alliance with spirits to take on a villain who is older than humans themselves. This sweeping epic fantasy takes beloved West African folklore and spins it into a tale of whimsy, horror, and adventure. Nebula-winning Clark, known for his adult works, masterfully builds beautiful, authentic worlds and fills them with characters that are both endearing and flawed. This has the feel of a classic fantasy, something that will be passed down for generations to come. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 12-year-old West African girl attempts to save children who were stolen from her village. Abeni and her best friend, Fomi, plan to enjoy their annual Harvest Festival, but the festivities are interrupted when Asha, the local witch, appears. She reminds everyone that she gave three warnings that they must leave their homes, but they did not obey; she can no longer protect the village from the coming war. After watching over them for generations, Asha is here to collect her payment: a child. To her great shock, Abeni's mother gives her to Asha. And then war does in fact come to their peaceful valley where they lived quietly, surrounded by a forest. Abeni watches in horror as storm women assisted by magical black ropes capture the adults before a mysterious goat man plays a haunting melody on a flute that ensnares the other children. Abeni, trained in self-defense by Auntie Asha, sets out to find the kidnapped children. She crosses paths with porcupine spirit Nyomi and panther spirit Zaneeya who join her as they pursue quests of their own. The magical storytelling and West African spirit elements will keep readers engaged, while authentic relationships between the central characters offer a nice counterbalance for the fantastical plot points, making this work appealing to fantasy and realistic fiction readers alike. An original, enjoyable coming-of-age story with complex fantasy worldbuilding and multifaceted characters. (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this enchanting first installment of an epic fantasy series based in West African mythology, a small village's Harvest Celebration ends in disaster after a mysterious force destroys the town and kidnaps all the villagers; except 12-year-old Abeni. She's saved by Asha, an elderly witch who lives in the surrounding Jembe forest and has been warning the villagers of impending doom. Distraught and confused following the traumatic event, Abeni struggles to adjust to living with Asha and Obi, a man made of straw, in a home in the witch's secluded magical garden. Asha is secretive, only revealing that a great war involving spirits and mortals is brewing, that the villagers have likely boarded ghost ships far from the forest, and that Abeni must grow into her magical powers if she hopes to survive the ordeal. As Abeni experiences harrowing trials and tribulations, and recruits new fantastical and human friends, she's forced to reckon with her hidden abilities and her place in her village's shrouded history is this intricately detailed, riotously fun adventure by Clark (A Master of Djinn, for adults) that explores themes of loyalty, friendship, courage, and the power of belief in oneself. Ages 8: 12. (July)

Academy (Mitchell Lane Publishers)

#2354254 (Vol. 01) Lost Girls (Library Binding)
written by John Bankston
 Teens are disappearing from The Academy. One Saturday night, Sheila LaRoche doesn't come home. Everyone says the world-famous musician is overseas. Casey doesn't believe it. Her dorm mate was helping her prep for a big audition. She wouldn't have just ghosted her. Plus, Casey found her passport. How'd she travel without it? More troubling, who was the boy lingering outside their dorm, comfortable in a t-shirt despite the November chill? Casey soon digs up more secrets buried at The Academy. The first teen who disappeared is identical to the boy she saw. Except, he went missing twenty years ago. Ten years ago, an Academy student was murdered. She looked just like the girl Casey saw playing a cello inside an empty classroom. Casey discovers there's more than one way to be ghosted... The first in a series set at The Northeast Kingdom Academy, Lost Girls is filled with building tension and escalating horror. The elite music school exists in a giant dead zone, a corner of Vermont with little cell or internet service. At The Academy isolation is part of the curriculum.
 978-1-68020-846-7 ©2024 6 x 9 128 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 9 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$28.00

Adia Kelbara and the Circle of Shamans (Trade)

#2332827 (Vol. 01) Adia Kelbara and the Circle of Shamans (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Isi Hendrix

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Life is tough for twelve-year-old orphan Adia. Her aunt and uncle believe she's an ogbanje, a demon-possessed child that brings misfortune wherever they go, and Adia can't disagree—especially when she suddenly manifests mysterious powers that she can't control, causing an earthquake in her village.

978-0-06-326633-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist Adia's life hasn't been easy. Orphaned when she was only a baby, Adia is forced to live with an aunt and uncle who believe she was born cursed. When Adia gets a coveted kitchen internship at the Academy of Shamans, she knows it's her only chance to escape her suffocating life. The only problem is that Adia discovers that her "curse" is actually magical powers—dangerous powers that cause destruction in her home village. With her cat in hand, Adia escapes to the Academy hoping to be fixed, only to discover that everything that she thought was a myth is true, including gods, goddesses, and a demon that wants to watch the world burn. She must learn to control her powers and join forces with other magical beings to defeat the evil demon before he destroys everything Adia knows and loves. Hendrix's awe-inspiring debut novel is a truly masterful addition to the Afrofantasy genre. Hendrix intertwines the cultural richness of African mythology with the visceral history of colonization in a package that will entice middle-grade readers. Her universe interrogates both fantastical and realistic conflicts with equal care. This immersive fantasy, the start of a planned trilogy, deserves to be on every shelf.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Adrenaline-fueled action and inventive worldbuilding personify this captivating Afrofantasy, a series-starting debut by Hendrix. Orphan Adia Kelbara lives with her neglectful aunt and uncle, who publicly claim that she is an Ogbanje; a child possessed by a demon said to cause misfortune; which leads to her becoming locally ostracized. She starts to believe them, though, when she suddenly develops mysterious abilities, as when an intense emotional reaction results in tremors erupting across her hamlet. Witnessing the destruction wrought by her burgeoning powers, Adia determines to find help in harnessing; or removing; her perceived curse. When she is selected to spend her Year of Practicality, during which youths train in a trade, as a kitchen apprentice at the famed Academy of Shamans, she hopes that a resident can extract the Ogbanje. But nothing is as it should be upon her arrival: the school has fallen into disarray and an ancient evil has returned to wreak havoc. Fully fleshed out characters; including a snarky goddess and several effervescent allies; populate this clever adventure, which teems with smartly rendered twists and oodles of hope and heart. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Adventures of a Girl Called Bicycle (Trade)

#2296416 (Vol. 02) Few Bicycles More (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Christina Uss

Bicycle has been back from her cross-country adventure with her robot-like bike, named Fortune, for just a month when it starts malfunctioning, insisting that they pedal away from their home in Washington D.C. to Harpers Ferry in West Virginia. Once there, they discover a scrapyards where bicycles are being crushed and recycled—and it appears they are too late to save them. Bicycle and Fortune head to a convenience store so Bicycle can drown her sorrows with a chocolate bar. Much to her astonishment, she meets her long-lost family there. She sets a plan in motion to rescue the bikes, a plan that if it works will help her fit into her family and still stay true to cycling self.

978-0-8234-5087-9 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Adventures of Lettie Peppercorn (Trade)

#1946715 Adventures of Lettie Peppercorn (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sam Gayton

Confined to her lonely house after the disappearance of her mother, young Lettie opens her door to a traveling alchemist who claims he will change the world with a fantastical invention and help Lettie find her mother.

978-1-4814-4769-0 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 7.0 RC Lvl 3.5 Lexile 630

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

#2029392 His Royal Whiskers (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sam Gayton

A young alchemist and a giant cat stage a meow-tiny to take down an evil czar.
 Prequel to The Adventures of Lettie Peppercorn.
 978-1-4814-9090-0 ©2017 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 770

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal le adventure, an evil, selfish, bloodthirsty czar rules the land of Petrossia with an iron fist. His six-year-old on and only heir, Alexander, has been turned into a kitten. The czar's henchman inform him that it's all the fault of Alexander's two friends, Pieter and Teresa. Pieter is an Abadabacus, a master mathemagician employed by the czar. Teresa, described as a "Spice Monkey," is a servant who swings from ropes collecting ingredients for the kitchen staff. But Teresa isn't all that she seems. She's been dabbling in alchemy, and it will take her, Pieter, and a whole lot of magic to convince the czar to keep their heads attached to their bodies. Puns, wordplay, and footnotes keep readers on their toes. What is lacking in character development is made up with numerous plot twists and unpredictable outcomes. The cover art and black-and-white interior illustrations are a bit young for the intended audience, so this one might take some handselling. VERDICT Funny and a little bit creepy, this is a solid addition to any upper elementary or middle grade collection.-Mandy Laferriere, Fowler Middle School, Frisco, TX Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Aggie Morton, Mystery Queen (Trade)

#2151166 Body Under the Piano (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Marthe Jocelyn

Aggie Morton lives in a small town on the coast of England in 1902. Adventurous and imaginative but deeply shy, Aggie hasn't got much to do since the death of her beloved father...until the fateful day when she crosses paths with twelve-year-old Belgian immigrant Hector Perot and discovers a dead body on the floor of the Mermaid Dance Room!
 978-0-7352-6546-2 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 750

Quantity 1
Unit Price $15.99

Reviews by: Booklist The world is familiar with renowned author Agatha Christie, Queen of Crime, but how did she come to be such a knowledgeable and prolific mystery writer? In this new series, Jocelyn imagines what Agatha (or Aggie) might have been like as a twelve-year-old: marvelously bright and somewhat sheltered, with an eye for detail and a flair for dramatic descriptions. It doesn't take long for a murder to occur, and when Aggie's dear dance instructor stands accused, the budding writer takes it upon herself to investigate further. Many details are pulled from Christie's actual life, seamlessly woven into this compelling, splendidly surprising murder mystery. Readers already familiar with Christie's works will delight in familiar details and humorous inspiration (sharp-eyed readers will notice classic titles worked into the text), and for Christie novices, the story serves as a wonderful jumping-off point into her intriguing world. Mystery aficionados and Christie fans will delight in the old-fashioned whodunit and hope for more of Aggie's adventures.--Emily Graham Copyright 2020 Booklist

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Child sleuths investigate a poisoning in this winning whodunit based on Agatha Christie's childhood. In 1902 Torquay, Aggie Morton, 12, whose father recently died, has what her mother calls a "Morbid Preoccupation." Additionally, the aspiring writer, homeschooled and often shy, likes crafting descriptive variations ("eyes like lime cordial?... Glittering emeralds?"). In a chance sweet-shop encounter, she befriends Belgian refugee Hector Perot, a fastidious boy staying for a time nearby ("our own little immigrant," his hosts call him). After leaving her journal at her dance studio one evening following a charitable "Befriend the Foreigners" concert, Aggie returns to find a disagreeable local woman dead beneath the titular instrument. When an anonymous note with clues to the murderer's identity appears, the children jump on the case, much to the delight of a prolific reporter and the keen frustration of the constabulary. Though Perot's presence adds little more than Easter eggs (e.g., his namesake's phrasing habits) to the otherwise well-plotted mystery, he is set up to play a larger role in future installments. Jocelyn (One Yellow Ribbon) offers an enjoyable entree to the Queen of Crime and to the genre; the narrative's arch tone, the girl's vital grandmother, and the novel's surfeit of extravagant teas should please. Character portraits and chapter heading spot art from Follath (Joy) add whimsical appeal. Ages 10: up. (Feb.)

#2176371 (Vol. 02) Peril at Owl Park (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Marthe Jocelyn

Aspiring writer Aggie Morton is looking forward to Christmas. Having just solved a murder and survived her own brush with death in her small town of Torquay on the coast of England, Aggie can't wait to spend the holidays with her sister Marjorie, the new Lady Greyson of Owl Park, an enormous manor house in the country. With the help of a certain nosy reporter, Aggie and Hector will once again have to put their deductive skills and imaginations to work to find the murderer on the loose.

978-0-7352-6549-3 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 780

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$15.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Jocelyn turns to the "country house party" trope in this entertaining Aggie Morton sequel (The Body Under the Piano, rev. 1/20). Twelve-year-old Aggie (loosely based on Agatha Christie) and her friend Hector Perot are spending Christmas at Owl Park, where Aggie's sister, newly a baroness, is learning to be mistress of a great house. The mystery begins when the other guests arrive. One guest, Lakshay Sivam, is carrying a possibly cursed emerald, which he plans to return to his native Sri Lanka; it disappears just as one of the actors hired to entertain the house party is murdered -- and then Lakshay goes missing. Although the police take charge, Aggie, Hector, and their new friend Lucy can't stop themselves from doing some investigating of their own. With a solidly plotted whodunit, Jocelyn keeps readers guessing through a complex cast of suspects, all with something to hide, and enough red herrings to keep any detective on her toes. Despite the high stakes, the book keeps a generally light tone, making for an enjoyable read. Jocelyn touches on deeper issues, including Aggie's concerns about her widowed mother's ongoing depression, but the action always takes center stage. Sarah Rettger January/February 2021 p.105(c) Copyright 2021. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2245591 (Vol. 03) Dead Man in the Garden (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Marthe Jocelyn

Aspiring writer Aggie Morton is ready to enjoy an invigorating trip to a Yorkshire spa, where her widowed mother can take the waters and recover from a long mourning period. Having solved yet another murder and faced extreme peril with her best friend Hector over Christmas, Aggie's Morbid Preoccupation is on alert when rumors abound about the spa's recently deceased former patient...and then another body appears under mysterious circumstances.

978-0-7352-7081-7 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 780

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2300824 (Vol. 04) Seaside Corpse (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Marthe Jocelyn

After an invigorating but not exactly restful trip to a Yorkshire spa during which she survived a near brush with death and foiled a murderer, aspiring writer Aggie Morton and her friend Hector are thrilled to have the opportunity to stay at a camp by the sea and watch real paleontologists at work. Tensions are running high throughout the camp, from the cook, to the collectors, to the Blenningham-Crewes themselves, and become downright dangerous after Aggie and Hector make a discovery of their own: a body on the beach. Not a fossil, but a human body.

978-0-7352-7082-4 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 750

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Airi Sano, Prankmaster General (Trade)

#2288331 (Vol. 01) New School Skirmish (Hardcover (POB))

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.99

written by Zoe Tokushige

Meet Airi Sano. After spending her entire childhood moving from one military base to another, she's excited to be settling down for the long-term in Hawai'i. She's less excited about her new teacher, who's determined to make Airi like school. But she's got a plan: prank her teacher so hard that she gives up on even trying to get Airi to do any work—especially any reading. (Features Dyslexia-friendly font)

978-0-593-46578-3 ©2022 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 600

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review "Zeroes are my heroes," chirps army brat Airi, entering her umpteenth school resolved to convince her new teacher, as she has all the rest, that she is "unteachable," through a relentless campaign of pranks and refusals to do any work. Skilled as she is at disruptive "Teacher Tactics," Airi has never run into anyone like infuriatingly patient, cheery, clever Mrs. Ashton—and the war is on. Readers will soon figure out that the 11-year-old narrator's often ingenious pranks, amusing as they may be (to read about, anyway), are really cries for attention; her tone may be buoyant, but underneath she is a simmering, sad, and angry child—afflicted not only by the repeated disruptions of her military father's reassignments but also (as Mrs. Ashton turns out to be perceptive enough to spot) a learning disability that has turned school into a place where nothing good happens. While bringing the entertainingly back-and-forth struggle to a conclusion that believably counters that last notion, Tokushige embeds her tale and its realistically multicultural cast in a Hawaiian setting that positively bursts with vivid details of daily life, speech, and spirit. Airi chimes in with a side disquisition on "Hawaiian for Haoles," and Naalchigar adds lots of monochrome portraits and spot art of food, shirts, and other local color to match. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Airi uses every trick she knows to test her new teacher's limits. Airi Sano often gets in trouble with adults because she likes to pull pranks, but she just wants to make people laugh. As part of an Army family, Japanese American Airi's moved around a lot, and she's always felt misunderstood and left out. Now that they're settling in Hawaii, where her dad is from (her mom is from Japan), she's excited at the prospect of making real friends but less thrilled about starting sixth grade. Airi tries to get her teacher to see that she's a lost cause, but Mrs. Ashton never gets angry with her. A prank war ensues—documented through Airi's Official Personal Personnel File as well as incident reports, situation reports, maps, and footnotes—and Airi enlists the help of her new friends to get Mrs. Ashton to snap. Airi's feisty attitude and love for joking around lighten this clever story that is full of laughs, family, and friendship. Her difficulties in school and diagnosis of dyslexia touch on struggles and feelings many readers experience. Numerous sweet black-and-white illustrations add to the fun, showing lively scenes, food, and more. Confusingly, the term Hawaiian is sometimes inaccurately applied to non-Native Hawaiian culture and history. The supporting cast represents the diversity of Honolulu. A hilarious, charming story full of humor and mischief. (Fiction. 8-12)

	Quantity	Unit Price
	1	$14.99

#2332476 (Vol. 02) Public Enemy Number One (Hardcover (POB))

written by Zoe Tokushige

It's the spring semester, and Airi Sano is on top of the world! Her grades are up, she has real friends at her side, and she's joined the school play. She's even keeping out of trouble and toning down the pranks! But when the play falls victim to some truly awful pranks, everyone immediately suspects that Airi is behind them. As suspicion mounts, it's up to her to solve the mystery and clear her own name before the imposter strikes again. Sounds like a job for Airi and her crew!

978-0-593-46581-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 700

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Airi Sano is back for more adventures in this story in which she is framed when things go wrong with the school play. Sixth grader Airi loves to pull pranks, but she's made a deal with her mom and dad: If she can do better in school, she'll get a cellphone and maybe even karate lessons. Things are looking up now that she's been diagnosed with dyslexia, and her teacher is helping her with learning strategies. Airi is earning the best grades she's ever had and has real friends to talk to—and play tricks with. When the school play is announced, Airi signs up to be with her best friend, Mei. At first, she's nervous about reading her lines, but after a few drama classes, excitement takes over. But things start to go wrong when some terrible incidents occur, and Mei, some classmates, and even the principal blame Airi. Determined to prove her innocence and save the play, Airi must catch the real culprit. In the process of navigating ups and downs, she learns what real friendship is made of. Told in the first person and enhanced by interspersed case file reports, humorous footnotes, and lively black-and-white illustrations, Airi's narrative is hilarious and engaging. The spot art adds cultural context to the Hawaiian setting and Airi's Japanese American Army family life. The supporting cast represents diverse cultures. Nonstop laughs, mischief, and fun. (land acknowledgment) (Fiction. 8-12)

Alcatraz Versus the Evil Librarians (Trade)

#1945662 (Vol. 01) Alcatraz Versus the Evil Librarians (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brandon Sanderson

When he comes into the possession of a special bag of sand that has the power to transform information, Alcatraz realizes the importance of this mysterious gift when it is stolen by a group of Evil Librarians who use it to suppress truth and spread lies in order to achieve world domination.

978-0-7653-7894-1 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 730

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$23.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In Sanderson's (Elantris) children's debut, an over-the-top fantasy/adventure, librarians are evil because they control all the information in Hushland (America). They distort some facts and fabricate the rest. Alcatraz, meanwhile, is the name of the protagonist, who has been raised in a series of foster homes. As the novel opens, on his 13th birthday, he is quickly initiated into the true nature of librarians by his heretofore unmet grandfather, Leavenworth Smedry. Before long, Sanderson brings on talking dinosaurs (it's a librarian distortion that they're extinct), a parallel world, visiting villains and more. The madcap plot can seem chaotic, with action pulling Alcatraz toward new characters at a breakneck speed, but Sanderson unexpectedly draws everything together in an extravagantly silly climax. Readers whose sense of humor runs toward the subversive will be instantly captivated: not only does the author poke fun at librarians, he lampoons books (including this one) in frequent passages directly addressed to readers: "You are saying to yourself, 'The story just lost me. It degenerated into pure silliness. I'm going to go read a book about a boy whose dog gets killed by his mother. Twice.'" Like Lemony Snicket and superhero comics rolled into one (and then revved up on steroids), this nutty novel isn't for everyone, but it's also sure to win passionate fans. Ages 9-up. (Oct.)

#1945663 (Vol. 02) Alcatraz Versus the Scrivener's Bones (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brandon Sanderson

The Evil Librarians are up to their antics again and it's up to Alcatraz Smedry to put a stop to it! This second Alcatraz adventure will take Alcatraz and company on an exploration of the Library of Alexandria, which-despite Librarian rumors-was never destroyed. It is a mysterious place and everyone knows that it holds dark secrets. Can Alcatraz, with his talent for breaking things, break into this secret world? Or will the Evil Librarians once again prevail?

978-0-7653-7896-5 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 3.8 Lexile 660

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

#1946341 (Vol. 03) Alcatraz Versus the Knights of Crystallia (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brandon Sanderson

In this third Alcatraz adventure, Alcatraz Smedry has made it to the Free Kingdoms at last. Unfortunately, so have the evil Librarians-including his mother! Now Alcatraz has to find a traitor among the Knights of Crystallia, make up with his estranged father, and save one of the last bastions of the Free Kingdoms from the Evil Librarians.

978-0-7653-7898-9 ©2016 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 670

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$23.99

#1946339 (Vol. 04) Shattered Lens (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brandon Sanderson

Alcatraz Smedry is up against a whole army of Evil Librarians in this fourth adventure, with only his friend Bastille, a few pairs of glasses, and an unlimited supply of exploding teddy bears to help him. This time, even Alcatraz's extraordinary

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$23.99

talent for breaking things may not be enough to defeat the army of Evil Librarians and their giant librarian robots.

978-0-7653-7900-9 ©2016 11-5/15 x 8-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 670

#1980720 (Vol. 05) Dark Talent (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Brandon Sanderson

Alcatraz Smedry has successfully defeated the army of Evil Librarians and saved the kingdom of Mokia. Too bad he managed to break the Smedry Talents in the process. Even worse, his father is trying to enact a scheme that could ruin the world, and his friend, Bastille, is in a coma. To revive her, Alcatraz must infiltrate the Highbrary--known as The Library of Congress to Hushlanders--the seat of Evil Librarian power. Without his Talent to draw upon, can Alcatraz figure out a way to save Bastille and defeat the Evil Librarians once and for all?

978-0-7653-8140-8 ©2016 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 7.0 RC Lvl 4.4 Lexile 710

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$18.99

#2290417 (Vol. 06) Bastille vs. the Evil Librarians (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Brandon Sanderson

To rescue his friend Bastille, Alcatraz Smedry successfully infiltrated the Highbrary, seat of Evil Librarian power, and left it a smoking pit in the ground. But the cost was too high--his father Attica took his place to be sacrificed to the dark gods on an altar of outdated encyclopedias, and Alcatraz failed to save him. With Alcatraz a wreck, it's up to Bastille to complete the story and lead her friends against Attica's killer: Bilbioden, ancient founder of the Evil Librarians, who has returned to complete his quest for world domination.

978-1-250-81106-6 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$17.99

Alex Rider Adventures (Trade)

#2363114 (Vol. 14) Nightshade Revenge (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Anthony Horowitz

When Alex Rider thwarted the plans of the criminal organization Nightshade, he knew he'd made a new, blatantly evil enemy. But he hadn't expected to get sucked back into the spy game so quickly--that is, until the Nightshade masterminds kidnap his best friend, forcing Alex to do their bidding if he ever wants to see his pal alive again. With a ruthless enemy fighting dirty and not caring who gets hurt along the way, the stakes have never been higher--and this time, it's personal.

978-0-593-69139-7 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 740

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$18.99

#1670766 (Vol. 05) Scorpio (Paperback (Trade))

written by Anthony Horowitz

Alex Rider, teen spy, has always been told he is the spitting image of the father he never knew. But when Alex learns that his father may have been an assassin for the most lethal and powerful terrorist organization in the world, Scorpio, his world shatters. Now Scorpio wants Alex on their side, and Alex no longer has the strength to fight them. That is, until he learns of Scorpio's latest plot: an operation known only as Invisible Sword that will result in the death of thousands of people. Can Alex prevent the slaughter, or will Scorpio prove once and for all that the terror will not be stopped?

978-0-14-240578-9 ©2006 5-3/8 x 7-1/4 400 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 12.0 RC Lvl 5.9 Lexile 680

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$8.99

Reviews by: Children's Literature Alex Rider is no ordinary fourteen-year-old West London schoolboy. He has no parents or any other relatives to speak of, so he's pretty much on his own. And he's been recruited to be the youngest spy for MI6, Britain's secret intelligence organization. MI6 needs Alex to investigate the murders of two of the world's wealthiest individuals. The case leads him to an undercover assignment as the son of one of the world's richest supermarket magnates. Relocated to an elite boarding school in the Swiss Alps, Alex uncovers a dastardly plot by the headmaster, Dr. Grief, who has his sights, no less, on taking over the entire world. Dr. Grief's diabolical plot involves the duplication of the sons of the world's most powerful men. With the help of spy gadgets that might make 007 green with envy, Alex is able to make some harrowing escapes to foil Dr. Grief's plans and make the world safe once more. This is the second in the "Alex Rider Adventure" series. 2001, Philomel Books, — Christopher Moning

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Fasten your seat belts for the second installment in Anthony Horowitz's spy-thriller series starring 14-year-old British schoolboy and ace agent from MI6, Alex Rider. James Bond has nothing on this crafty kid, and it's lucky Alex is on the job. It seems that mad scientists still infest the planet and still want to rule the world. When readers first met Alex in Stormbreaker (2001), MI6 had sent him to spy school. This time they send him to an exclusive school for the recalcitrant sons of the super-rich. Disguised as the son of a British supermarket magnate, Alex learns that something extraordinarily odd is going on at the school. Yes indeed, the school's owner, the creepy South African apartheid supporter Dr. Grief, intends to take over the world by controlling his wealthy students. But who are his students? Is Dr. Grief using brainwashing, fear, or something more sinister on the boys? Can Alex escape from the fortress-like school before that sinister something happens to him? Horowitz devises a string of miraculous circumstances that keeps Alex alive and spying throughout. Spy thrillers appear too seldom in YA literature. With plenty of cliffhanger action, the Alex Rider adventures might help get young readers hooked. The unabashed fantasy imitates the James Bond movies more closely than the books, but it's all plenty of fun. (Fiction. 11-14)

Reviews by: KLIATT This is the next Alex Rider adventure after Stormbreaker (reviewed in KLIATT in May 2001), which has been identified as a sure bet to interest young adolescents, especially males. The story begins dramatically, but Alex doesn't appear until chapter two, so for highly impatient readers, this might be a slight problem. After that, however, it's all Alex, all action, all the time. He outmaneuvers teenage bullies and South African racists left over from the apartheid days. British Intelligence places him in the worst school situation ever, isolated in the Alps above Grenoble, where he is threatened by a fate worse than death (well, death after the students in biology class dissect him while he is still alive, without anesthetic). Like James Bond, he is given some useful gadgets that save him, and like James Bond, Alex has super-human stamina, courage, wit and intelligence. It's fun stuff for those who like thrilling reading. Category: Hardcover Fiction. KLIATT Codes: J—Recommended for junior high school students. 2001, Penguin Putnam, Philomel, 215p., Ages 13 to 15. Reviewer: Claire Rosser; KLIATT SOURCE: KLIATT, March 2002 (Vol. 36, No. 2)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly The fifth entry in the Alex Rider Adventure series by Anthony Horowitz, Scorpio follows 14-year-old Alex to Italy, after he learns that his father was an assassin for a criminal organization, and the teen gets swept up in a murderous scheme of his own. Copyright 2005 Reed Business Information.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7-10-Alex Rider, the 14-year-old spy and adventurer from Stormbreaker (2001), Point Blank (2002), Skeleton Key (2003), and Eagle Strike (2004, all Philomel), is back. While vacationing in Italy, he is recruited by the deadliest terrorist organization in the world, Scorpio, away from the world of M16, a British secret intelligence organization. Through a web of lies and deceit, Alex is persuaded to assassinate the deputy head of M16, a former friend and supervisor, while Scorpio plans a secret mission that will kill hundreds of thousands of British children in the blink of an eye. Missing his target and captured by M16, Rider is sent back into Scorpio, but this time as a spy. It is only with the teen's help that M16 can stop the organization's vicious threat. Of course, Alex Rider saves the day, but not without psychological mind gaming and fighting that will bring readers to the edge of their seats and keep them there until the final page. These titles are perfect for James Bond wannabes and reluctant readers. No prior knowledge of the previous books is necessary, as Horowitz drops clues from previous adventures.—Delia Fritz, Mercersburg Academy, PA Copyright 2005 Reed Business Information.

Reviews by: Voice of Youth Advocates (VOYA) This fast-paced book is for the young James Bond and spy-adventure fan. The book is short enough for the reluctant reader and cuts to the chase to hold attention. Other readers might quickly tire of the larger-than-life action scenes and clichés such as the stereotypical mad-scientist villain. Readers who enjoyed the first book will enjoy Point Blank. VOYA CODES: 3Q 4P M J (Readable without serious defects; Broad general YA appeal; Middle School, defined as grades 6 to 8; Junior High, defined as grades 7 to 9). 2001, Philomel, 208p, Ages 11 to 15. Reviewer: Anna Yu, aka Anna Banana, Teen Reviewer SOURCE: VOYA, February 2002 (Vol. 24, No.6)

#1670763 (Vol. 09) Scorpio Rising (Paperback (Trade))

written by Anthony Horowitz

Alex Rider must once again do battle against the terrorist organization responsible for the death of his parents--Scorpia--when their plot in the Middle East poses a threat to humanity, but this time around the risks are bigger and Alex will not walk away so easily.

978-0-14-241985-4 ©2012 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 416 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 16.0 RC Lvl 4.7 Lexile 780

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$9.99

#322696 (Vol. 01) Stormbreaker (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Anthony Horowitz

After the death of the uncle who had been his guardian, fourteen-year-old Alex Rider is coerced to continue his uncle's dangerous work for Britain's intelligence agency, MI6.

978-0-399-23620-4 ©2001 5 x 7-3/4 224 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 7.0 RC Lvl 5.4 GR Lvl Z Lexile 670

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews What if James Bond had started spying as a teenager? This thriller pits 14-year-old Alex Rider against a mad billionaire industrialist. Non-stop action keeps the intrigue boiling as Alex tries to stop the remarkably evil Herod Sayles from murdering Britain's schoolchildren through biological warfare. Alex begins as an innocent boy shocked by the death of his Uncle Ian in a traffic accident. Suspicious of the official explanation, he investigates and finds Ian's car riddled with bullet holes. He narrowly escapes being crushed in the car as it's demolished, then climbs out of a 15-story window to break into Ian's office. He learns that Ian was a spy, and reluctantly joins Britain's MI6 intelligence agency. After surviving brutal training and armed with stealthy spy tools, Alex infiltrates Sayles's operation as the teenage tester of the "Stormbreaker," a new computer Sayles is giving to British schools. Thereafter he survives murderous ATV drivers, an underwater swim in an abandoned mine, and an encounter with a Portuguese man-o-war jellyfish before hitching a ride on an already airborne plane. The plot is, of course, preposterous, but young readers won't care as they zoom through numerous cliffhangers. This is the first book in a series planned by the author, and may prove useful for reluctant readers looking for excitement. (Fiction. 12-14)

Reviews by: KLIATT To quote from the review of the hardcover in KLIATT, May 2001: Agent 007 comes to the middle school! Horowitz, a British writer of thrillers and mysteries for the BBC and a successful writer of children's books, offers here a nonstop thriller featuring Alex Rider, 14 years old, who is enlisted in the British Secret Service to investigate the reason his uncle was murdered. From the first chapter, Alex manages stunning escapes from near-death situations. Like James Bond, he has all manner of skills and intelligence to call upon, and some useful toys (like those gadgets given to 007 before each mission) that are used just in the nick of time throughout his adventure. In this first mission, Alex is called to investigate why a multimillionaire is donating advanced computers to all the schools in Great Britain. Alex impersonates a boy who won a contest to go to the secret compound in Cornwall where the computers are assembled. It turns out that the crazed tycoon is planning to use the donated computers to spread deadly germs throughout the country—but Alex single-handedly prevents the disaster. Thrills all the way. KLIATT Codes: J—Recommended for junior high school students. 2000, Penguin, Puffin, 192p., Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-9-Alex Rider's world is turned upside down when he discovers that his uncle and guardian has been murdered. The 14-year-old makes one discovery after another until he is sucked into his uncle's undercover world. The Special Operations Division of MI6, his uncle's real employer, blackmails the teen into serving England. After two short weeks of training, Alex is equipped with several special toys like a Game Boy with unique cartridges that allow it to scan, fax, and emit smoke bombs. Alex's mission is to complete his uncle's last assignment, to discover the secret that Herod Sayle is hiding behind his generous donation of one of his supercomputers to every school in the country. When Alex enters Sayle's compound in Port Tallon, he discovers a strange world of secrets and villains including Mr. Grin, an ex-circus knife catcher, and Yassen Gregorovich, professional hit man. The novel provides bang after bang as Alex experiences and survives unbelievably dangerous episodes and eventually crashes through the roof of the Science Museum to save the day. Alex is a strong, smart hero. If readers consider luck the ruling factor in his universe, they will love this James Bond-style adventure. With short cliff-hanger chapters and its breathless pace, it is an excellent choice for reluctant readers. Warning: Suspend reality.-Lynn Bryant, formerly at Navarre High School, FL Copyright 2001 Cahners Business Information.

Reviews by: Voice of Youth Advocates (VOYA) Alex Rider becomes the first fourteen-year-old MI6 agent when his uncle is assassinated. Alex is forced to take over the case involving a suspicious computer baron who has donated thousands of his newest, top-secret modules to British schools. This action-packed spy novel, the first in the projected Stormbreaker series, has all the clichés: a stony-faced hero, plenty of preposterous stunts-including using the rappelling cord to catch an airplane-terse dialogue, and the evil Egyptian, Russian, and Fräulein. There is not much else to the story, however, nor to Alex's character. Horowitz draws him out a little in the beginning as a reluctant spy who is unwilling to kill-although plenty of other people do kill each other in this story-but then loses him as the movielike plot predictably and explosively unfolds. This uncomplicated novel is fun fare enough for the Young Indiana Jones fan or reluctant reader. Although it offers little that a B movie does not, sophisticated readers will find it simplistic. Those readers looking for intrigue and suspense will be served better with John Marsden or Peter Dickinson. VOYA CODES: 3Q 4P M J (Readable without serious defects; Broad general YA appeal; Middle School, defined as grades 6 to 8; Junior High, defined as grades 7 to 9). 2001, Philomel, 208p, Ages 12 to 15. Reviewer: Nina Lindsay SOURCE: VOYA, August 2001 (Vol. 24, No. 3)

#2158287 (Vol. 13) Nightshade (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Anthony Horowitz

Following the shocking events of Never Say Die, Alex Rider's world has changed--his biggest enemy, the evil organization Scorpia, has been destroyed. But a new and dangerous criminal organization--Nightshade--is rising, and Alex will stop at nothing to take them down.

978-0-593-11531-2 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 15.0 Lexile 760

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

#2227851 (Vol. 02) Point Blank (Paperback (Trade))

written by Anthony Horowitz

Fourteen-year-old Alex continues his work as a spy for the British MI6, investigating an exclusive school for boys in the French Alps.

978-0-593-40393-8 ©2021 5 x 8 320 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 4.9 GR Lvl W Lexile 670

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$8.99

Reviews by: Children's Literature Newsletter for Adults Alex Rider is no ordinary fourteen-year-old West London schoolboy. He has no parents or any other relatives to speak of, so he's pretty much on his own. And he's been recruited to be the youngest spy for MI6, Britain's secret intelligence organization. MI6 needs Alex to investigate the murders of two of the world's wealthiest individuals. The case leads him to an undercover assignment as the son of one of the world's richest supermarket magnates. Relocated to an elite boarding school in the Swiss Alps, Alex uncovers a dastardly plot by the headmaster, Dr. Grief, who has his sights, no less, on taking over the entire world. Dr. Grief's diabolical plot involves the duplication of the sons of the world's most powerful men. With the help of spy gadgets that might make 007 green with envy, Alex is able to make some harrowing escapes to foil Dr. Grief's plans and make the world safe once more. This is the second in the "Alex Rider Adventure" series. 2001, Philomel Books,

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Fasten your seat belts for the second installment in Anthony Horowitz's spy-thriller series starring 14-year-old British schoolboy and ace agent from MI6, Alex Rider. James Bond has nothing on this crafty kid, and it's lucky Alex is on the job. It seems that mad scientists still infest the planet and still want to rule the world. When readers first met Alex in Stormbreaker (2001), MI6 had sent him to spy school. This time they send him to an exclusive school for the recalcitrant sons of the super-rich. Disguised as the son of a British supermarket magnate, Alex learns that something extraordinarily odd is going on at the school. Yes indeed, the school's owner, the creepy South African apartheid supporter Dr. Grief, intends to take over the world by controlling his wealthy students. But who are his students? Is Dr. Grief using brainwashing, fear, or something more sinister on the boys? Can Alex escape from the fortress-like school before that sinister something happens to him? Horowitz devises a string of miraculous circumstances that keeps Alex alive and spying throughout. Spy thrillers appear too seldom in YA literature. With plenty of cliffhanger action, the Alex Rider adventures might help get young readers hooked. The unabashed fantasy imitates the James Bond movies more closely than the books, but it's all plenty of fun. (Fiction. 11-14)

Reviews by: KLIATT This is the next Alex Rider adventure after Stormbreaker (reviewed in KLIATT in May 2001), which has been identified as a sure bet to interest young adolescents, especially males. The story begins dramatically, but Alex doesn't appear until chapter two, so for highly impatient readers, this might be a slight problem. After that, however, it's all Alex, all action, all the time. He outmaneuvers teenage bullies and South African racists left over from the apartheid days. British Intelligence places him in the worst school situation ever, isolated in the Alps above

Grenoble, where he is threatened by a fate worse than death (well, death after the students in biology class dissect him while he is still alive, without anesthetic). Like James Bond, he is given some useful gadgets that save him, and like James Bond, Alex has super-human stamina, courage, wit and intelligence. It's fun stuff for those who like thrilling reading. Category: Hardcover Fiction. KLIATT Codes: J-Recommended for junior high school students. 2001, Penguin Putnam, Philomel, 215p., Ages 13 to 15. Reviewer: Claire Rosser; KLIATT SOURCE: KLIATT, March 2002 (Vol. 36, No. 2)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-10-After two influential businessmen die in separate freak accidents, MI6, England's spy network, once again calls upon 14-year-old Alex Rider to infiltrate Point Blanc, a private school in the French Alps for out-of-control, wealthy teens. Armed only with his wits and some 007-type devices, he stumbles upon an evil mad scientist's plot to take over the world using clones as replacements for prominent sons. Spy gadgets, chase scenes, mysteries, and a cliff-hanger ending will keep even reluctant readers interested in the second novel in this series. Familiarity with the first novel is not necessary as the plot fills in past information when needed, but many students will want to go back and read Stormbreaker (Philomel, 2001) to see how Alex first became involved with MI6.-Kim Carlson, Monticello High School, IA Copyright 2001 Cahners Business Information.

Reviews by: Voice of Youth Advocates (VOYA) This fast-paced book is for the young James Bond and spy-adventure fan. The book is short enough for the reluctant reader and cuts to the chase to hold attention. Other readers might quickly tire of the larger-than-life action scenes and clichés such as the stereotypical mad-scientist villain. Readers who enjoyed the first book will enjoy Point Blank. VOYA CODES: 3Q 4P M J (Readable without serious defects; Broad general YA appeal; Middle School, defined as grades 6 to 8; Junior High, defined as grades 7 to 9). 2001, Philomel, 208p, Ages 11 to 15. Reviewer: Anna Yu, aka Anna Banana, Teen Reviewer SOURCE: VOYA, February 2002 (Vol. 24, No.6)

#2024524 (Vol. 11) Never Say Die (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Anthony Horowitz

Alex relocates to San Francisco as he slowly recovers from the tragic death of his best friend and caregiver, Jack Starbright, at the hands of terrorists working for SCORPIA.

With Jack gone, Alex feels lost and alone, but then, out of the blue, he receives a cryptic email--just three words long, but enough to make Alex believe that Jack may be alive.

978-1-5247-3930-0 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 14.0 RC Lvl 4.6 Lexile 760

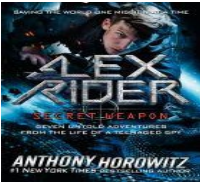

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-8 The 15-year-old superagent swings back into action in his eleventh outing, after a fragmentary e-mail message convinces him that his nanny-sidekick, Jack Starbrightkilled (supposedly) before his eyes in Scorpia Rising (2011)is still alive. As his search takes him from Cairo to Saint-Tropez and, finally, to an abandoned coke factory in deepest Wales, he becomes entangled in a pair of murderous crime bosses' fabulously baroque scheme to snatch a busload of children of the superrich. Once again amid races, chases, hails of bullets, and increasingly spectacular explosions, the teenage James Bond pulls off one awesome feat of derring-do after another, while allies from previous episodes pop up at convenient times to render aid, and adversaries come to bad, generally self-inflicted ends. Having given his hyperpopular series something of a breather, Horowitz now sets it back on track with a fresh caper that roars along to a (naturally) explosive climax and tidy resolution. If the broad teaser at the end is any indication, Alex's career is in no danger of slowing down. HIGH-DEMAND BACKSTORY: Demand hasn't lessened for everyone's favorite teen spy in his absence; this series relaunch will have plenty of takers.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2017, American Library Association.)

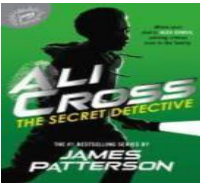

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide A message that seems to be from Jack Starbright, who Alex thought was dead, sets the ostensibly retired young spy on another high-stakes international adventure, one that ultimately involves a (disturbing) threat on the lives of a group of children. This is the sort of whirlwind, adrenaline-driven mission that fans have come to expect from the series. (Copyright 2018 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

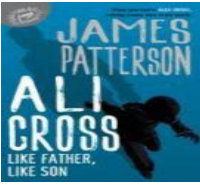

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After ending his Alex Rider series with flashback volume Russian Roulette (2013), Horowitz revives his bestselling adventure series, sending his hero on a pursuit that is very, very personal.Held captive by sadistic enemies in Scorpia Rising (2011), Alex was forced to watch the murder of his best friend and caregiver, Jack Starbright. Now safe, recovered from his wounds, and with his enemies dead, the white, English teen has moved to San Francisco with his foster family, the Pleasures, also white. He's trying to live a normal life; he's going to school, trying to fit in, not standing out even though he'd like nothing better than to trounce the local bullies. Then, out of the blue, he receives a truncated email: "ALEXX / I'M AL." Immediately, against all odds, he knows that Jack's alive and trying to reach out to him. His guardians don't believe it, having seen the footage of Jack's death. But Alex won't give up--and it doesn't take him long to slip away and start a globe-trekking search for the only person who has always been there for him. The time has come to be there for her, regardless of the consequences, with or without the help of his friends from MI6. This time, he's on his own. In his usual breakneck fashion, Horowitz whisks Alex from one improbable situation to another, all of which Alex survives by using his wits and whatever else happens to be at hand. It's as if there'd been no interruption; this installment is sure to please Alex's legions of fans. (Thriller. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2017) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Voice of Youth Advocates (VOYA) In this latest title in the popular Alex Rider series, teenage spy Alex Rider is trying to start a new life as a normal teenager in the United States with a family that knows his past and agrees to take him in. Alex has lost his uncle and watched his beloved nanny, Jackie, die at the hands of SCORPIA, a villainous group he helped defeat. When a mysterious email gives Alex hope that Jackie may actually be alive, he leaves his adopted family to embark on a worldwide hunt to uncover the truth. Along the way, he is entangled yet again with international intrigue, the remnants of SCORPIA, and a plot that involves the theft of an American Super Stallion helicopter. This is the latest entry in an extensive series; while it is best read in the context of that series, it can work as a stand-alone volume. The narrative is pure escapist spy fantasy in the style of the James Bond stories and is full of one-dimensional villains, improbable situations, and convenient coincidences. As such, it will please the target audience, while disappointing those seeking deeper literature. The narrative is reasonably engaging and moves breezily through a variety of exotic locations. One serious concern with this book is that, while the story begins with Alex suffering from the effects of post-traumatic stress disorder, it does not capitalize on this chance to delve further into the matter. There are themes of trusting one's instincts, family bonds, and the uncovering of mysteries. This discretionary purchase is most suited for middle and high school libraries, especially those with other books in the series. Jonathan Ryder. 3Q 3P M J

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2103147 (Vol. 12) Secret Weapon: Seven Untold Adventures from the Life of a Teenaged Spy (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Anthony Horowitz Expands the world of Alex Rider with more thrilling action and pulse-pounding heroics. Follow Alex as he infiltrates a terrorist hideout in Afghanistan, fights to prevent an assassination attempt at a ski resort over Christmas, and much more! 978-1-5247-3933-1 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 12.0 Lexile 750	1	$17.99

Ali Cross (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2281630 (Vol. 03) Secret Detective (Hardcover (Trade)) written by James Patterson Ali Cross has always looked up to his father, the famous detective Alex Cross. And after helping to solve two big cases, Ali knows he has what it takes to follow in his father's footsteps. Eager to keep solving crimes, Ali and his friends hack into police calls and go to crime scenes to watch the detectives at work—and try to crack the cases themselves. 978-0-316-40991-9 ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 320 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 6.0	1	$16.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2228039 (Vol. 02) Like Father, Like Son (Hardcover (Trade)) written by James Patterson Ali Cross just solved his first real case. Alex Cross knows it's only a matter of time before his son finds his way into more trouble. Neither of them expected Ali to get caught up in another case so quickly. 978-0-316-50013-5 ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 304 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 6.0	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist After disobeying his dad by attending a music festival, Ali ends up entangled in another mystery when his friend and potential crush, Zoe, ends up shot. Ali can't help wondering why Zoe appears to know the identity of her shooter but refuses to tell it. This time, Alex Cross, the famous detective of Patterson's adult series, is determined to keep Ali out of the spotlight but fails miserably as Ali enlists the help of friends to investigate all the people in Zoe's life—including her slightly famous music-star mother—to see who may have benefited from Zoe being hurt. Patterson does a good job of writing a fast-paced mystery readers can gobble up in one sitting. Unfortunately, the second installment suffers from the same weakness as the first: awkward chapters told from Alex's points of view, the sole purpose of which seems to be to provide information that no middle-grade detective could ever discover on their own. However, like all Patterson books, this one will fly off the shelves.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Ali Cross sets out to solve another case that hits close to home. Ali, son of Washington, D.C., detective Alex Cross, returns in a sequel to his 2019 outing that finds him in the thick of things when his crush, Zoe Knight, gets shot in a park. Middle schooler Ali is the closest thing there is to an eyewitness, though he didn't even see the shooter's face. Zoe knows who did it but strangely is keeping quiet. Still, Ali's knack for investigation and his connection to Zoe propel him to pursue the case with the help of friends. Themes of activism, gun violence, and police bias are explored, with various complex sides to the issues being shared by different characters. Ali's schoolmates become frustrated with the impact of gun violence on Black people and start demanding more accountability from the authorities. Meanwhile, Ali, the son of a homicide detective, finds himself in the middle of arguments about these topics while at times feeling his opinions are dismissed due to his father's profession. Overall, this is a solid follow-up that shows Ali developing as a sleuth even as he's a young boy trying to make sense of his world. Important messages regarding social justice are imparted, although the pacing sometimes feels rushed, taking away from the gravitas of certain moments. Overall, however, readers who enjoy stories of young detectives will be pleased. Ali and Zoe are Black. A fitting, socially conscious sequel. (Mystery. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Alley and Rex (Trade)

#2240582 (Vol. 01) Alley and Rex (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joel Ross

Sixth-grader Alley Katz is innocently trying to help a bunch of kindergarteners when the burrito hits the fan. Literally. A burrito. A ceiling fan. A hail of beans. Now he has to get an A on his science test or he'll be transferred to the dreaded Steggles Academy.

978-1-5344-9543-2 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 144 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 560

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Alex Katz, inevitably nicknamed Alley at school, is an infamous prankster, but as his sixth-grade year commences, his parents and the school principal have warned him that his antics have come to an end, or else he will be transferred to the dreaded Steggles Academy. Alley's one chance to demonstrate requisite character improvement is to get an A on the upcoming science assessment, and to help him accomplish this first-in-a-lifetime feat, he's been assigned a HOST (Helping Other Students Thrive) peer mentor. It's hard to see Rexinald Wrigley as a peer, however, given that he's a fourth grader who wears a bunny suit to school, carries a briefcase, and never uses a monosyllabic word when a longer term's available. Determined to fulfill his assignment, however, Rex covers for Alley when he pursues his alternate plan to ace science class by tracking down the legendary answer key rumored to be locked down in a faculty cabinet. Ross marks time en route to the satisfactory but completely predictable ending with Alley's grousing and not-so-humble bragging, while Miles delivers comic book-style vignettes that serve as welcome placeholders for kids breaking in to longer novels. This lacks the punch and structural cleverness of Barrows' The Best of Iggy (BCCB 12/19), but it will elicit plenty of chuckles, and it all but promises a Rex-focused sequel. EB COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews r shape up. Alex "Alley" Katz tends to get in trouble. It usually isn't his fault. Most times Alley is trying his hardest to be focused and honorable, but the problem is most people don't seem to focus on the things Alley focuses on. The last straw presents itself when Alley's efforts to protect a bunch of kindergarteners leads to a bean burrito hitting the fan. Now Alley must get an A on his science test or be transferred to the robot factory Steggles Academy. Alley's assigned peer mentor is Rex, a fourth grade genius who wears a bunny suit to school. There's friction at first, but the two quickly see that a mutually beneficial arrangement can be made here: Rex will help Alley stay in school, and Alley will help Rex just plain survive school. These two misfits look out for each other, and friendship blossoms. The characters are broad and brimming with energy--a bit too much to fit into this overlong series opener. Alley is a lot, and readers will see him in all his glory on every page, so much so that readers may find their appreciation waning before the book wraps up. The result is a funny start and a sputtering finish. Judging by cover art, Alley present White and Rex has brown skin. A decent start for a new series that has potential once some pacing issues are sorted out. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2290403 (Vol. 02) Bite the Bagel (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joel Ross

Rex can rock a bunny suit like no one else. But his PE teacher insists that all students must wear gym clothes--or face a punishment worse than dodgeball. Alley vows to help his pal Rex. And to save the free breakfast cart that was closed due to budget cuts. Everyone knows that kids can't learn on empty stomachs!

978-1-5344-9547-0 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 160 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 590

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Alley and Rex make some more mischief. Effervescent sixth grader Alley and bunny-suited fourth grade genius Rex return for more laughs in this sequel to last year's promising Alley & Rex (2021). This time the pals team up to help each other survive gym class and save breakfast. Rex is loath to shed his bunny suit, but the PE teacher is insistent that he change into standard gym attire. Meanwhile, Alley is desperate to save the free breakfast cart that's been closed down due to budget cuts. Hilarity, tomfoolery, and elaborate heists ensue as the inseparable pals work toward making smart choices and finding quality solutions to their problems. Fans of the series opener will find plenty to enjoy here. Those who bristled at Alley's boisterous energy levels in the earlier installment will once again be longing for a tranquilizer dart. The narrative is better paced, and the characterization remains decent. While the story never rises to anything special, there's solid workmanship on display; this is a book that will fill out a reader's summer reading log or help pass a dull afternoon. The jokes are fun, the story has just the right dash of mayhem, and the titular pals are engaging enough to keep readers willing to come back for more. Based on cover art, Alley presents as White and Rex is brown-skinned; Alley is cued as Jewish. A "yeah, sure" if there ever was one. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

American Dog (Trade)

#2158196 Brave (Hardcover (POB))

written by Jennifer Li Shotz

Brave is a dog without a home. After surviving a hurricane in San Antonio, Texas, stray dog Brave is hungry and afraid. When twelve-year-old Dylan finds Brave, he's feeling lost himself. Dylan can't help but think they were brought together for a reason. But Dylan knows it'll take hard work and training in order to convince his parents that he can keep this skittish pup. As Dylan and Brave's friendship grows, they learn to rescue each other in more ways than one. Can Dylan give Brave a forever home?

978-0-358-10867-2 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 740

Quantity 1 Unit Price $12.99

#2158198 Poppy (Hardcover (POB))

written by Jennifer Li Shotz

Poppy is a dog with a problem. She has too much energy, and her elderly owner can keep her only if she can be trained. When twelve-year-old Hannah moves to the coast of Northern California, she thinks she can help turn this rambunctious puppy into the good dog she knows Poppy is. But Hannah realizes Poppy's reputation as a pit bull means she has to work even harder to prove that Poppy and dogs like her deserve a second chance. Will Hannah train Poppy into the perfect dog before it's too late?

978-0-358-10869-6 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity 1 Unit Price $12.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A shy transplant from Michigan to California finds her footing when her neighbor's pit bull needs training. Hannah, a white girl with a facial birthmark, is miserable in California. Her parents, overwhelmed with new jobs and Hannah's younger siblings, never have time for her anymore. Hannah misses her Michigan friends, too. How can she possibly make new friends when she's so embarrassed about her birthmark and the California kids are all spending this summer before sixth grade surfing? It turns out there's something to love in California after all, though: her elderly neighbor's rescue pit bull puppy, Poppy. Hannah eagerly offers to take on Poppy's training, which is how she learns that many people prejudge pit bulls unfairly as violent; the analogies between judgments of Poppy for her pit-bull build and Hannah for her birthmark are strained but mostly unobtrusive. Through the process of training Poppy, Hannah slowly gains faith in herself, if only because her lack of confidence means the dog can't learn. She makes friends, learns to surf (with Poppy!), and loses her crushing self-loathing. All of her forward movement--and her personal setbacks--are framed in the little victories and crises of Poppy's education. The timespan of dog training is compressed down to simplified weeks, but the principles are solid. Brave, another in this dog-oriented series, publishes simultaneously, bringing together a canine hurricane survivor and a white boy whose father is deployed in the Middle East. This one's for dog lovers. (Fiction. 7-10) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2178576 Star (Hardcover (POB))

Quantity 1 Unit Price $12.99

written by Jennifer Li Shotz

After her elderly owner passes away, Star, a deaf Australian shepherd, is brought to a local shelter. Star feels scared and alone, until she meets twelve-year-old Julian. After getting in trouble at school yet again, Julian volunteers at the shelter and realizes he can communicate with Star in a way that no one else can. Their bond continues to grow, and Julian and Star become inseparable.

978-0-358-10871-9 ©2020 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 8.0

Amina's Voice (Trade)

#2218746 Amina's Song (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Hena Khan

It's the last few days of her vacation in Pakistan, and Amina has loved every minute of it. The food, the shops, the time she's spent with her family--all of it holds a special place in Amina's heart. Now that the school year is starting again, she's sad to leave, but also excited to share the wonders of Pakistan with her friends back in Greendale.

978-1-5344-5988-5 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 800

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Starred Review After Amina's monthlong trip to Pakistan with her family, she finds it difficult to leave her ancestral country behind, feeling that she is somehow losing an important part of herself and suddenly less certain about who she is. Back home, Amina tries to make sense of these feelings, and when she attempts to share them with her friends, she begins to wonder if they, too, are growing apart. As Amina comes to better understand her friends, she finds a way to share the beauty of Pakistan with her classmates and to work together with those around her to help others in the community. Along with a new friend, Amina uses her beautiful voice to share her love of both Pakistan and America with others, helping those just like her who may feel part of two beautiful worlds. Revisiting Amina's world (Amina's Voice, 2017) is, in a way, similar to Amina's own experience visiting Pakistan--readers will experience the joy of family, along with the sadness of knowing the visit will end soon. Khan excellently weaves together complex issues of feeling torn between two parts of one's identity, illness in the family, helping others, and finding out that growing up does not have to mean growing apart. Highly recommended for all collections. COPYRIGHT(2020) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Amina develops her musical talents and her identity in this follow-up to Khan's popular middle-grade novel Amina's Voice (2018). A monthlong family trip to Pakistan wraps up as summer ends. Although the trip was dotted with moments when she didn't feel Pakistani enough, as Amina returns home to Wisconsin it's as though she's leaving a piece of her heart behind. Seventh grade brings new activities and a new friend, Nico. While she settles back into routines with community service, time with friends, and FaceTime with family back in Pakistan, Amina works on writing song lyrics to capture her feelings about being attached to two places, and Nico teaches her to mix music on the computer. Is the excitement she feels around him about the music and having a new friend, or is it something more? And how can she keep her promise to her uncle to show Americans the beauty of Pakistan when her project about Malala Yousafzai only makes her classmates pity girls in Pakistan? Readers will enjoy being along for the ride as Amina sorts through mild middle school turbulence and finds satisfying ways to express and share her true self. A diverse cast of characters (Nico is French and Egyptian; Soojin is Korean; Emily is, presumably, White) situates Amina in a realistic small American town, and her story offers a hopeful example for young readers who are figuring themselves out, too. A sweet sequel. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this sequel to Amina's Voice, Khan returns to the world of Pakistani American teenager Amina Khokar, whose monthlong trip to Lahore is coming to an end as the book opens. Upon her return to Wisconsin, Amina begins seventh grade smoothly, without the friendship conflicts that plagued her the previous year. To her disappointment, however, her classmates appear uninterested in hearing more about her trip and the people and vibrant places she's come to love, even while feeling excluded from aspects of Pakistani culture. Her decision to dress up as Malala Yousafzai for a school project provokes negative commentary on Pakistan, even though "girls suffer from injustice everywhere in the world." Meanwhile, the presence of Nico, a new French Egyptian classmate, sees Amina navigating the viability of platonic male-female friendships, as he partners with Amina to complete a songwriting project. With his help, she aims to showcase her love of Pakistan and challenge her American classmates' assumptions. Though the prose style can feel somewhat simplistic at times, Amina remains engaging throughout, with her close familial relationships and self-proclaimed "identity crisis" as part of both cultures enabling frank discussions, and well-rounded supporting characters lending layers to the narrative. Ages 8-12. Agent: Matthew Elblonk, DeFiore & Co. (Mar.) Copyright 2021 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--Amina loved the month of summer she spent visiting family in Pakistan, though there were moments she didn't feel quite Pakistani enough and struggled with having to go home, not knowing when she would see her family again. She's also trying to figure out how her experiences have changed her view of herself and the world. Her Thaya Jaan (beloved uncle) has challenged her to show her friends back home the beauty of Pakistan. The protagonist is nervous about how her classmates perceive Pakistan and wants them to understand that it's not as dangerous as they believe it to be. After befriending a new student, Nico, who shares her love of music and a talent for mixing it, Amina finds the opportunity to present the many facets of her heritage through song. A lovely sequel that does not require familiarity with the first book, this is an uplifting story about relationships, especially those that strengthen us and help us grow. Readers really get to know and understand Amina's perspective, but secondary characters are also fleshed out, making the narrative relatable and engaging. VERDICT A beautiful story for middle graders discovering who they are. A wonderful addition to all collections.--Kristyn Dorfman, The Nightingale-Bamford Sch., New York City Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Amira and Hamza (Trade)

#2246426 (Vol. 01) War to Save the Worlds (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Samira Ahmed

Quantity Unit Price
1 $16.99

On the day of a rare super blue blood moon eclipse, twelve-year-old Amira and her little brother, Hamza, can't stop their bickering while attending a special exhibit on medieval Islamic astronomy. While stargazer Amira is wowed by the amazing gadgets, a bored Hamza wanders off, stumbling across the mesmerizing and forbidden Box of the Moon.
 978-0-316-54046-9 ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 368 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 Acclaimed author Ahmed draws on mythical legends of Islamic origin, the Hamzanama, for this middle-grade fantasy novel. Specific references to that ancient story collection may be lost on contemporary readers, but this is nonetheless packed with all the ingredients of a whirlwind adventure: spunky, problem--solving kids; gender-fluid shapeshifters made of smokeless fire; ancient astronomical mysteries; and a hefty dose of science to underscore the inexplicable. The plot features siblings Amira and Hamza, who unexpectedly find themselves enmeshed in an ancient prophecy that foretold their role in saving the world from a cosmic disaster. They must end a war in the land of Oaf or else the moon will split apart, and the earth will be at the mercy of evil jinn and ghuls. Amid myriad twists and turns, Amira and Hamza emerge as smart, funny, likable protagonists with emotional ranges that render them believable even while everything around them is fantastical. This is the first in the series, and readers will be impatient for the stories to come. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

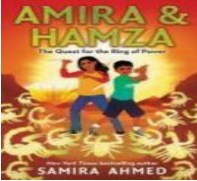

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Twelve-year-old Amira and her younger brother Hamza, Muslim Indian American siblings in Chicago, are the heroes of this suspenseful, action-packed adventure filled with jinn, ghuls, devs, and other supernatural creatures from Islamic folklore. When the children disturb an ancient artifact in a museum exhibit, two jinn appear, informing them that they are "chosen ones" needed for a serious mission. They must save Earth and Qaf (the jinn homeland) from Ifrit, a "terrible and cruel dev" intent on destroying both worlds. This is a refreshingly different take on the kids-must-save-the-world story in that Amira and Hamza are the most anxious, reluctant, and nerdy heroes ever. Constant clashes between the bickering siblings provide comic relief, in contrast with the seriousness of the task at hand. Dangerous encounters with monstrous foes challenge the two to believe in themselves and work together to fulfill their mission. Fantasy-adventure fans will have a hard time putting down this fast-paced and engaging tale. Author's note and glossary not seen. Julie Hakim Azzam(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews What will it take for two plucky kids from Chicago to save the universe from certain disaster? Courage with a heaping side of love. Twelve-year-old Amira is a scientist, rational and focused. Hamza, her younger brother, is a risk taker, thriving in his active imagination. The night of a rare astronomical event brings out more than the moon and the stars when they accidentally activate an ancient device recovered from the Caspian Sea, al-Biruni's Box of the Moon, cracking off a piece of the moon, putting everyone else on Earth to sleep, and bringing an army of genderfluid jinn to meet them, the chosen ones. Led by Abdul Rahman, the vizier to the emperor of Qaf, and accompanied by Maqbool, Abdul Rahman's aide-de-camp, the jinn escort Amira (who does not feel eager or ready to assume these duties) and Hamza (who can barely contain his delight) on their quest to protect Qaf by defeating wicked dev Ifrit and saving the universe. In her middle-grade debut, Ahmed rationalizes the irrational with a creative blend of science and magic, building a bridge from a familiar world to a new one. A blend of Indian culture, Islamic folklore, history, and pointed social commentary are all wrapped up in a fantasy world that is as compelling as it is informative. Even readers who don't believe in magic will find themselves wishing on a star. (map, author's note, glossary) (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A budding astronomer and self-proclaimed "nerd," 12-year-old Amira, this novel's Muslim, Indian American narrator, can't wait to witness an upcoming lunar extravaganza. In Chicago, the Islamic Society of Ancient Astronomy is celebrating the coincidence of a supermoon, blood moon, and blue moon (a "celestial trifecta of awesomeness") with an exhibition attended by Amira, her irksome younger brother Hamza, and their parents. When Hamza wanders off, he becomes entranced by the Box of the Moon; an ancient analogue computer made of unidentified alloys. A sibling tussle over the artifact restarts it, unleashing staggering consequences. As the adults drop into an enchanted sleep, a broken piece of the moon heads directly for Earth, and an army of jinn spirits the siblings away, Amira and Hamza discover that it falls to them to save the world from a great battle between the realms. Ahmed (Mad, Bad & Dangerous to Know) centers her fast-paced middle grade debut on a deeply engaging heroine, foil to her more reckless and charming brother. The siblings' relationship; characterized by equal amounts of affection and bickering; lends authenticity and humor to the folklore-inspired narrative. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Joanna Volpe, New Leaf Literary. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--A middle grade fantasy that includes Islamic legends, magic, science, and the power of belief in oneself. While at their mosque, waiting for the super blue blood moon, Amira and her younger brother Hamza both happen to touch a supposedly broken ancient artifact, the Box of the Moon, which sets an equally ancient prophecy in motion. Everyone on Earth suddenly falls asleep, and jinn appear, claiming that Amira and Hamza have been chosen to save the magical world of Qaf, Earth, and life as they know it. Amira loves science, so she has her doubts about fulfilling a mystical prophecy at 12, while Hamza is thrilled to become important, like one of his favorite superheroes. Like any magical journey, this one is full of heart, humor, action, doubt, and the belief that even the most unexpected individuals can save the world. Amira's questions will resonate with skeptical readers, whereas Hamza urges her to let go and believe anyway. Amira and Hamza's adventure is emotionally believable, even as the siblings ride magical creatures to their next destination. Although some of the action might be intimidating for younger readers, this would still make for a great read-aloud. VERDICT A fast-paced adventure with heart and a superb fairy-tale adaptation of Islamic legends. Sure to be a hit with fans of Yoon Ha Lee's Dragon Pearl and Sayantani DasGupta's The Serpent's Secret.--Hilary Tufo, Columbus Metropolitan Lib., Reynoldsburg, OH Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2291606 (Vol. 02) Quest for the Ring of Power (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Samira Ahmed Amira and Hamza have returned from Qaf, the magical Jinn world, as triumphant heroes-and life has been pleasantly quiet. Too quiet. Hamza is determined to have one last monumental, epic adventure before summer ends. But when sneaking off to explore an old, abandoned castle goes from life-changing adventure to potentially deadly, Amira and Hamza find themselves in the middle of another dangerous quest to save the worlds. 978-0-316-31861-7 ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 384 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 10.0	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The sibling duo return on another quest to save the world. It's been two months since sister and brother defeated Ifrit in Qaf and saved the universe. It's also the end of summer: Hamza wants to have something awesome to share when school starts, so he goes off to explore an old, abandoned, castlelike house. But a sudden tornado hits, and he wakes up in the Oriental Institute, a nearby Chicago museum, face to face with Ifrit's father, Ahriman, who has returned in search of the Ring of Power that will allow him to control the human and jinn worlds. To find it, Ahriman needs all three parts of an ancient oculus—and the help of Hamza, who is a Chosen One. Ahriman threatens to destroy everything Hamza loves if he does not help him. After solving a riddle, they claim the first piece from the Oriental Institute, then travel via Ahriman's tornado to the British Museum and the Louvre to collect the remaining pieces, with Amira and fairy princess Aasman Peri in pursuit. Alternating chapters from Amira's and Hamza's points of view capture their thoughts and emotions. Ahmed cleverly weaves in Islamic historical figures, some of whom are ghost Keepers of The Ring who pose riddles, like scholar and philosopher Ibn Sina and scientists and inventors the Banu Musa brothers. Ahmed's rich worldbuilding continues in this imaginative and absorbing sequel. A captivating magical adventure.

Animal Rescue Agency (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2196159 (Vol. 01) Case File: Little Claws (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Eliot Schrefer Dashing Esquire Fox used to organize the world's most elaborate chicken raids, until the day she encountered Mr. Pepper. Meeting the blustery old rooster changed her heart, convincing her to turn from a life of crime and instead form the Animal Rescue Agency, which masterminds rescue operations across the globe. 978-0-06-298233-9 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 4.0	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this ecologically minded series opener, Schrefer (The Popper Penguin Rescue) introduces the interspecies odd couple that heads up the Animal Rescue Agency; patrician Esquire, a tweed-wearing, tea-drinking, jazz-listening fox, and fastidious colleague Mr. Pepper, a cantankerous elderly rooster. Working from tips supplied by field operatives, the duo sets out to save Little Claws, a young polar bear set adrift on an ice floe by a villainous fur-wearing animal trafficker who plans to sell the cub to a Florida zoo. Living up to their motto; "To each animal, the right to live its natural life"; the agents thwart the trafficker's efforts, liberating a warehouse full of Arctic animals as part of the high-stakes plot. Though Schrefer plays Mr. Pepper's domestic contributions for laughs, moments of absurdity ("That's not the sound of failure; it's the sound of a walrus!"), amplified by cartoon-inflected illustrations by Duncan (South), make for a lighthearted read with environmental conservation at its core. Back matter includes a recipe, an afterword with facts about climate change, and a list of further reading. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Richard Pine, Inkwell Management. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 2–5—When Esquire Fox and her partner Mr. Pepper, a gentlemanly rooster, get the message that an animal of some kind is trapped on an ice floe, they rush to the rescue. As the founders of the Animal Rescue Agency, they have sworn to help any animal who is in trouble. On arrival in Utqiagvik, Alaska, they learn that the animal they need to save is a baby polar bear named Little Claws. It has been stranded on an ice floe by a mysterious man in a white fur hat, who soon captures them as well. It will require the help of some unlikely animal allies and a daring adventure in the Arctic Sea to rescue the stranded polar bear while escaping the villainous poacher. With its odd-couple protagonists (the daring, but slightly vain Esquire Fox and stodgy, sensible Mr. Pepper), and entertaining portrayal of the animal world, this new series by the Endangered author is full of lighthearted adventure. Cartoon-style illustrations by Duncan add to the story's charm. The field notes at the end explain the real-life perils faced by polar bears in the face of climate change, and include resources explaining the causes of polar ice loss and how kids can help. This also includes a recipe for mushroom jerky. VERDICT This lively new series will appeal to fans of Elisabetta Dami's "Geronimo Stilton" and other anthropomorphic animal adventure stories.—Ashley Larsen, Pacifica Libraries, CA

#2266121 (Vol. 02) Case File: Pangolin Pop Star (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Eliot Schrefer

After a frigid arctic rescue, Esquire and Mr. Pepper get the perfect opportunity to warm up--an invitation to Beatle the Pangolin's private island concert! The dynamic duo could use a relaxing break from running the Animal Rescue Agency. Sun and sand await!

978-0-06-298236-0 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Apothecary (Prebound)

#1993520 (Vol. 03) After-Room (Prebound)

written by Maile Meloy

Teenagers Janie and Benjamin continue to explore the secrets of the Pharmacopoeia while Benjamin risks everything to find a way to connect with his father.

978-1-5364-0317-6 ©2017 5 x 7-3/4 448 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 12.0 RC Lvl 5.1 Lexile 660

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$22.95

Arc of a Scythe (Trade)

#2300561 (Vol. 04) Gleanings (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Neal Shusterman

There are still countless tales of the Scythedom to tell. Centuries passed between the Thunderhead cradling humanity and Scythe Goddard trying to turn it upside down. For years humans lived in a world without hunger, disease, or death with Scythes as the living instruments of population control.

978-1-5344-9997-3 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.3 AR Pts 18.0 Lexile 830

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books This sharp, clever anthology, a love letter to a brilliant series, offers readers short takes throughout the timeline of Shusterman's Scythe series. Shusterman himself contributes, as do other authors who have been impacted or influenced by the original trilogy. While some stories offer backgrounds to scythes that appear fully formed in the novels, others explore emerging scythes, immortal humans, or Thunderhead, the AI tasked with helping, protecting, and coddling humanity as they entered a period of time when immortality becomes possible (for those counting, that will happen in 20 years). The world Shusterman built is expansive and creative, allowing for significant further exploration on how people would respond when death no longer happens naturally but trained scythes could come for you at any point. The collection also dives into how scythes themselves might evolve depending on their personalities—some who relish power or cruelty and fervently throw themselves into their roles while others reluctantly take on the title and perform the minimum number of killings necessary to keep their quotas. New readers will gather up enough key details sprinkled throughout the stories to appreciate this as a themed sci-fi anthology, but this collection is likely most powerful and memorable if read after the trilogy. The opportunity to explore a world created by one author but now interpreted through the perspectives of many is a rare treat, and much of the richness comes in finding the connections back to the original series. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Welcome back to the post-mortal utopia of the Arc of a Scythe series. In the original trilogy, Shusterman posited that even a true utopia is imperfect thanks to human nature. Here, he returns to the Thunderhead's world with a collection of shorter works that explore moments before, during, and after the end of the Scythedom. While some stories need only basic contextual knowledge of the world, most are directly related to Citra's and Rowan's experiences: prequel tales of teenage Scythe Marie Curie (gleaning the last corrupt politicians) and Carson Lusk (later Scythe Goddard and unpleasant from the start); stories focused on Citra's brother, Ben, and on the sister of the first gleaning Rowan attends in Scythe (2016); and even one from the perspective of the Cirrus, the multifaceted AI offspring of the Thunderhead. The always accomplished, straightforward writing is at its best when it moves away from the larger Scythe-Thunderhead politics and instead focuses on humanity, art, and love in a world without natural or accidental death. Standouts include "The Mortal Canvas," focused on the first (and maybe last) post-mortal artist, and the slyly humorous "Meet Cute and Die," about the niece of a domineering and needy Scythe in Britannia. One for the legions of fans of this world. (Science fiction. 14-adult) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Spanning from the end of the mortal era alluded to in Scythe to the period following The Toll, Shusterman's amalgam of in-world extrapolations; many written in collaboration with creators including Joelle Shusterman and David Yoon; explore previously under-illuminated corners of the Arc of a Scythe universe. While a handful of excellent stories add notable depth to two of the trilogy's most pivotal characters, and others flesh out personages mentioned only in passing, the best engage playfully with the established works' rules and tone. These include a paranoid-feeling thriller ("Never Work with Animals," coauthored with Michael H. Payne), a deadly game of cat and mouse occurring in a literal dreamscape ("Perchance to Glean," coauthored with Michelle Knowlden), a romantic comedy starring an accident-prone pair ("Meet Cute and Die"), and a surreal feud that turns Barcelona into a murderous Rube Goldberg machine ("The Persistence of Memory," coauthored with Jarrod Shusterman and Sofia Lapuente). Though the volume's not a starting place for series newcomers, existing fans will relish the varied tales, which handle themes of art, meaning, and morality in a post-death world with an efficacious mixture of humor, violence, and gentle absurdity. Ages 12: up. Agent: Andrea Brown, Andrea Brown Literary. (Nov.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7 Up—This work returns to the post-mortal world of the bestselling "Arc of a Scythe" series, telling more captivating tales of the Scythedom. In a society that has conquered hunger, disease, and death, Scythes are the sole arbiters of death, tasked with the responsibility of ending life through gleaning, each with a preferred, sometimes unique, method. This newest installment, presented as an anthology, reveals histories of familiar characters, while also introducing new figures that play a part in the rise and fall of the world that has triumphed over death. Shusterman, in collaboration with David Yoon, Jarrod Shusterman, Soffa Lapuente, Michael H. Payne, Michelle Knowlden, and Joelle Shusterman, paints an enlightening picture of this dystopian world, exposing secrets spanning centuries, and shedding light on further terrors that lay within the Scythedom. The world of the series is brilliantly crafted, with precise and intricate details. In this collection, every chapter works as a standalone story, each with something new and interesting to offer. Standouts include "A Martian Minute" and "A Dark Curtain Rises," both of which expand on stories of familiar characters with cleverly executed twists. Also memorable is the elaborate "The Persistence of Memory" and the satisfying "A Death of Many Colors." Multiracial characters make up this civilization, and multiple characters are introduced as members of the LGBTQIA+ community. VERDICT Fans of the "Arc of a Scythe" series will be pleased with this thrilling continuation.—Amanda Harding

Archibald Finch (Trade)

#2243369 (Vol. 01) Archibald Finch and the Lost Witches (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Michel Guyon

Archibald is a nervous boy with quirks that earn him plenty of eye-rolls, especially from his older sister, Hailee. Things get worse when his parents move the family from London to his grandmother's creepy manor in the English countryside. Now he has to deal with hairless dolls in the library, weird stone creatures on the roof, and a spooky forest at the edge of the backyard. But these turn out to be the least of Archibald's problems . . .

978-1-5248-6772-0 ©2021 6 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—Archibald Finch is a unique combo of quirks. He knows everything, but he doesn't know how he's acquired his knowledge and he's scared of monsters. So scared that he insists on sharing a room with his older sister Hailee, which is odd considering that their new home is a manor with 20 rooms that the family just inherited from Archibald's grandma. He is constantly bullied at school and he feels he has no friends. While exploring his large new home one day, a globe captures Archibald's attention. He's soon absorbed right into the globe, with his sister as a witness. His parents call Scotland Yard. Meanwhile, Archibald has entered a new world and sets off on a magical adventure. Hailee is soon off on her own adventure searching for Archibald. VERDICT This page-turner is sure to capture the attention of readers who enjoy magical fantasy adventures.—Helen Foster James, University of California at San Diego Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2298620 (Vol. 02) Archibald Finch and the Curse of the Phoenix (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Michel Guyon

Archibald is a changed boy. He stands up to bullies and hangs out with the gargoyles that used to scare him. But for all his new toughness, he's also a lost boy who misses his friends in Lemurea. When strange footprints are discovered on the manor grounds, he realizes a piece of that world has followed him home...

978-1-5248-7136-9 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 464 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 860

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$24.99

Archvillain (Trade Binding)

#1611055 Archvillain (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Barry Lyga

Twelve-year-old Kyle Camden develops greater mental agility and superpowers during a plasma storm that also brings Mighty Mike, an alien, to the town of Bouring, but while each does what he thinks is best, Kyle is labeled a villain and Mike a hero.

9780545196499 ©2010 192 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 5.0 RC Lvl 4.5 GR Lvl U Lexile 740

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Comic book fans in particular will appreciate this clever origin story, first in a new series. Twelve-year-old prankster Kyle is making mischief at the middle school football field the night a plasma storm falls to earth. After being "bathed in the energy of the storm," he gains amazing superpowers, like heightened intelligence and the ability to fly. He later learns that a boy was found after the storm. Everyone in town assumes this stranger is "a normal kid with superpowers and amnesia," anointing "Mighty Mike" a hero after he uses his powers to extinguish a fire and save kids' lives. But as his memories of the plasma storm return, jealous Kyle is suspicious of the do-gooder's motives, believing it his duty "to expose him for what he is and drive him away." Lyga (Goth Girl Rising) laces his story with ample humor, from the persnickety AI sidekick Kyle makes from his iPod to his failed Pants Laser prank. Readers will find plenty to ponder, from guessing Mike's true motivations to debating whether Kyle is a hero--or a villain in the making. Ages 9-12. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-7—Sixth-grader Kyle is smart, popular, and the planner of high-quality pranks. Then an encounter with a mysterious "space plasma" leaves him with cosmic intellect, super-strength, and the ability to fly. Kyle loves his new skills, but decides it's safest to keep them under wraps. However, the plasma has brought something else as well—a strange boy whom Kyle strongly suspects is an alien. Mighty Mike has superpowers too—but he isn't shy about exercising them in public. Mike quickly becomes a sensation with adults as well as kids, even though his good deeds don't always go smoothly. Kyle resents Mike taking over his top-dog status and suspects that the newcomer may have more sinister schemes in mind. He plans a super prank to expose him, but things get disastrously out of hand. There is a subtle underlying message about perception vs. reality. Kyle is not a particularly admirable character. He is self-centered and frequently uses his newfound powers to manipulate people. Much of his vaunted popularity seems to rest on his ability to humiliate others, especially in setting up grudge pranks on request. His crowd is quick to switch allegiance when a new sensation comes along. The author takes some sly digs at popular culture as well. The question of Mike's true identity is left unresolved. Is he an earnest, if somewhat naïve superhero or are Kyle's rather cynical suspicions on track? Who is the good guy and who is really the archvillain? Tune in next time....—Elaine E. Knight, Lincoln Elementary Schools, IL

Area 51 Files (Trade)

#2290636 (Vol. 01) Area 51 Files (Hardcover (POB))

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.99

written by Julie Buxbaum

When Sky Patel-Baum is sent to live with her mysterious uncle, she didn't imagine she'd end up here: Area 51. A top-secret military base with a bajillion rules and so classified not even the president knows its secrets. Also, it turns out the place is full of aliens. Lots and lots of aliens. But they prefer to be called Break Throughs, thank you very much.

978-0-593-42946-4 ©2022 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 690

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews ent in 5 years--and a new mystery. When her grandma moves into a kid-free retirement home, 12-year-old or han Priya "Sky" Patel-Baum and Spike, her pet hedgehog, relocate to Area 51 to live with Sky's eccentric Uncle Anish. At 51, humans and Break throughs (government-speak for aliens) live together off-grid in harmony. Unfortunately, several Zdstammars (one of many Break Through species) mysteriously disappear, disrupting the base's harmony and contributing to feelings of suspicion. Despite being deputy head of the Federal Bureau of Alien Investigations, Uncle Anish becomes a prime suspect. Can Sky and Elvis, her alien classmate, prove Uncle Anish's innocence and find the missing Zdstammars before it's too late? YA author Buxbaum's middle-grade debut is a rip-roaring series opener complete with over-the-top characters and jokes galore. Naidu's black-and-white cartoon illustrations extend the comedy with ongoing commentary that smartly interacts with the prose. The cast of Break Through species--like Audiotooters, Galzorian, and Sanitizoria--have hilariously creative on-the-nose names with illustrations to match. Sky is coded biracial, with a White dad and Indian mom. Aliens appear in a variety of shapes, sizes, and colors; Elvis shape-shifts but looks like a brown-skinned boy to Sky. Though the main mystery is neatly wrapped up, the cliffhanger ending promises more laughs. Contagiously goofy and fun. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When her grandmother, with whom she's lived almost all her life, moves into a retirement home, 12-year-old Sky Patel-Baum, who reads as of South Asian descent, is sent to stay with her only other living relative. Uncle Anish is second-in-command of Area 51, a secret haven for "Break Throughs," or extraterrestrials on Earth. A place of intense security, numerous regulations, and no contact with the outside world, Area 51 hasn't seen a new resident in five years, but Sky quickly makes friends with Elvis, a shape-shifting alien who appears to Sky as a brown-skinned boy. Sky's arrival coincides with the mysterious disappearance of several Zdstammars, and her uncle Anish seems the most likely suspect. Now, Sky and Elvis must clear Anish's name and find the missing aliens. Populated with human agents sporting names such as Belcher and Fartz, good-natured humor lands alongside imaginatively rendered extraterrestrials (including a living cubist representation), while quick pacing keeps things light. B&w illustrations by Naidu (Home Is in Between) both illuminate and expand upon this tongue-in-cheek mystery adventure, a middle grade debut from Buxbaum (Year on Fire). Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Jennifer Joel, ICM Partners. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—A lighthearted mystery (with delightful illustrations) about accepting everyone just as they are. Priya "Sky" Patel-Baum is an orphan, and when her grandmother has to go to an assisted living facility, the 12-year-old ends up being sent to live with an uncle she has never met. It turns out he lives in Area 51, a top secret military base that is so classified not even the president knows its true purpose. (Rule #1: What happens in Area 51 stays in Area 51). Not only does she discover that there are aliens in Area 51, but they start to disappear when she arrives. Is it a coincidence? Sky, who is Indian and white, meets unimaginably strange beings, such as the Audiotooters, who fart out of their ears and release a delightful whiff of roses. Drones that deliver pizza and secret hatches that lead to tunnels in the living room floor are just a few of the things Sky discovers as she and her friends try to solve the mystery of the disappearing aliens. The school bully turns out to be one of her partners in crime as she and Elvis the alien work to uncover the mystery and clear her uncle's reputation. Readers who like their science fiction with a touch of humor, such as Frank Cottrell Boyce's Sputnik's Guide to Life On Earth, will enjoy these sci-fic high jinks. VERDICT A solid purchase for libraries building their collection of middle grade science fiction.—Deanna McDaniel

#2327970 (Vol. 02) Big Flush (Hardcover (POB))

written by Julie Buxbaum

A hunk of space junk is headed right for the base! And it's not just any hunk of junk! It's a giant toilet! Even worse? A traitor on base is working with angry aliens to coordinate the attack. With one case already under their belts, Sky and her friends are on a mission to save Area 51. But what happens if their investigation goes down the toilet? That would stink!

978-0-593-42950-1 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 750

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.99

#2378332 (Vol. 03) Friend or UFO (Hardcover (POB))

written by Julie Buxbaum

Sky's life in Area 51 is full of surprises. Like the fact that aliens are real-and now one is her best friend! But the biggest surprise yet comes when Sky learns that her grandmother has been kidnapped and is stuck in Area 52, the only other alien portal on Earth. Even more bananas? Her grandma has been an undercover FBI agent for YEARS. Like Sky's whole entire life. How could Sky not have known her grandma had a secret identity?

978-0-593-42954-9 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 730

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$14.99

Area 51 Interns (Trade)

#2268328 (Vol. 01) Alien Summer (Hardcover (Trade))

written by James S. Murray

It's the first day of summer vacation, and Viv Harlow just wants to relax with her friends at the beach before they all go to different high schools next year. She is definitely not interested in visiting her mom's office, even if Director Harlow works at the famous Area 51. But when an alarm sounds beneath the secret base and a whole race of aliens escape, she's about to get much more than she bargained for.

978-0-593-22612-4 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young Black girl and her three friends set out to protect Area 51. Vivian Harlow is a 12-year-old on summer vacation—her last one before entering a STEM magnet school. Her mother is the director of future technology at the famed Area 51. While many people consider it a must-see tourist destination, Vivian is more interested in spending time with her closest friends, Charlotte and Ray, who are White, and (hopefully) her crush, Elijah, who is Latinx. So Area 51 is the last place Viv wants to be for Take Your Kids to Work Day. At least Charlotte, Ray, and Elijah are there too, shadowing their own parents. Initially, the facility seems perfectly ordinary, contrary to all the rumors and conspiracy theories. That is, until a group of aliens breaks out of their quarters, seemingly bent on revenge after being confined and having something important taken from them. The adults put up a fight, but they are soon bested, and it is up to the four young people to save everyone. As the other kids look to her for leadership, Viv fears she is not up to the task. Murray and Smith begin this story in the middle of a high-stakes scene that sets the stage for an action-packed adventure tale filled with humor and charm. Viv and her companions are sure to win over audiences as they try to survive and turn the tide on this alien invasion. An exciting series opener. (Fantasy. 8-12)

#2295502 (Vol. 02) Zoned Out (Hardcover (Trade))

written by James S. Murray

After saving their parents from an alien attack and becoming official interns at Area 51, Viv Harlow and her friends Charlotte, Ray, and Elijah are ready to keep taking down bad guys and helping test all the fun high-tech gadgets. When Elijah discovers a secret Forbidden Zone hidden away on the base, the group jumps at the chance to explore the new place, only to learn it's home to some of the most elusive creatures on Earth. But after the Yeti, Loch Ness Monster, and more terrifying monsters escape, they'll have to prove themselves to their parents and capture the beasts to save the base!

978-0-593-22614-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

#2348654 (Vol. 03) Time Chasers (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

written by James S. Murray

After the shocking revelation about her long-lost father, Viv, Elijah, Charlotte, and Ray are determined to save him at any cost. So it's a no-brainer for them to sneak into one of Area 51's finicky time machines to try to bring him back. What could go wrong? Well, how about not being able to track Viv's father through time, almost getting destroyed by the same meteor that killed the dinosaurs, and being chased by strange beings that preserve the proper flow of time? And with her father's life-and their own histories- at stake, Viv and her friends may be running out of time to set things right...

978-0-593-22616-2 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 650

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Teen interns chase a pair of fugitives—and each other—up and down the timestream. Following on previous encounters with aliens and cryptids, in this third series outing, Viv, Ray, Charlotte, and Elijah discover that Area 51 includes time travel too. And so, in a tale that features encounters with their past and future selves as well as several historical figures, narrow escapes galore, and regular puking, they pile into a TARDIS-like machine to hare after Viv’s errant parents. Sacrificing elegance for speed (“She floated along in a hapless path,” “They collided into each other,” and “Viv squirmed in her skin”), the authors send their bumbling quartet from a prehistoric extinction event to a far-future one for a climactic battle with bad guys while the swelling sun “plunges the Earth into an uninhabitable chunk of rock.” They then rewind it all for a happy reunion. All this wraps up just in time for a new crisis to set the stage for a lead-in to the next world-saving exploit. Meanwhile, scenes in which the kids help out Einstein, the Wright brothers, Beethoven, and Leonardo da Vinci make fun set pieces, as do Spaziante’s full-color files on the time travelers’ futuristic iPhone 42s and other high-tech gear that appear at the end. High-speed hijinks, albeit in low-rent prose. (Science fiction. 8-12)

Artemis Fowl Novels (Trade)

#2104268 Artemis Fowl's Guide to the World of Fairies (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Andrew Donkin

This beautifully illustrated novel is a compendium of Artemis Fowl's knowledge gleaned from The Book of the People and from his encounters with magical creatures and the LEP. Compiling notes from the sacred fairy tome and Artemis's eventual plans to take down the LEP forces that stand in the way of his ultimate goal.

978-1-368-04077-8 ©2020 7-3/4 x 9-3/4 192 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Ascendance (Trade)

#2252508 (Vol. 05) Shattered Castle (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jennifer A. Nielsen

King Jaron has outwitted the Prozarians and returned to his own kingdom with one secret in his pocket that not even his friends know about. He's hoping that secret will help him finally bring stability to Carthya.

978-1-338-27590-2 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 13.0 Lexile 710

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

#2179996 (Vol. 04) Captive Kingdom (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jennifer A. Nielsen

In a peaceful Carthya, Jaron leads as the Ascendant King with Imogen beside him -- but the peace he fought so long for is not destined to last. On a routine sea voyage, Jaron's ship is brutally attacked, and he is taken hostage. The mysterious captors and their leader, Jane Strick, accuse Jaron of unthinkable acts.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Ask Emma (Trade)

#2062436 (Vol. 01) Ask Emma (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sheryl Berk

Emma Woods knows just how to fix all her peers' problems--or so she thinks. She starts a blog, "Ask Emma," in the hopes that her peers will write in and ask for her help.

978-1-4998-0647-2 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 620

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-A contemporary, a middle grade retelling of Jane Austen's Emma. Thirteen-year-old Emma Wood attends Austen Middle School and has a tendency to stick her nose into everyone else's business and offer unsolicited advice. In order to share her talents with a broader audience, she starts a blog, "Ask Emma." Unfortunately, her well-meaning interventions don't always go as planned and Emma soon finds herself on the receiving end of some harsh criticism. Undeterred, Emma works to turn a hurtful episode into a positive learning experience. Accessible writing and short chapters make this a comfortable read for middle graders interested in relatively lighthearted realism. Back matter includes resources on cyberbullying. VERDICT A solid addition to larger collections, especially schools in which there is a focus on combatting cyberbullying.-Peggy Henderson Murphy, Wyandot Elementary School, Dublin, OH Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2087832 (Vol. 02) Frenemies (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sheryl Berk

When she learns her crush, Jackson Knight, is going to Washington, DC, to attend the National Student Congress, Emma is upset that she wasn't picked as a representative.

978-1-4998-0648-9 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2121888 (Vol. 03) Boy Trouble (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Carrie Berk

Back from a remarkable trip to Washington DC, 13-year-old Emma Woods thinks Jackson Knight is about to become her first boyfriend. But when Jax seems to suddenly turn icy, Emma is left in the cold. As if Emma's life couldn't get more complicated, Austen Middle School is hosting its first-ever Sadie Hawkins dance, where girls invite a partner.

978-1-4998-0649-6 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Atlantis (Trade / Amulet)

#2222362 (Vol. 01) Accidental Invasion (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gregory Mone

Kaya, raised in the undersea, high-tech world of Atlantis, has always been fascinated by the legends about life above the water. Despite the government's insistence that they're only stories, she can't help but dream about the Sun People--and when a group of officials known as Erasers move to bury those legends for good, Kaya sets out to

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

the surface to uncover the truth once and for all.
978-1-4197-3853-1 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 304 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Lewis's scientist father has long been discredited for his theory that inhabitants of the underwater city Atlantis have been sending tsunamis to destroy American coasts, an Atlantean retaliation for the pollution of the ocean. When one of the tsunamis carries father and son, along with talented engineer Hanna, far undersea in their subsphere vehicle, they learn that the theory was absolutely right. Meanwhile Kaya, an Atlantean, has always been told that there are no "People of the Sun" dwelling near ocean surfaces: to suggest otherwise is treason. When Kaya encounters the three from the surface, she knows they're doomed if she doesn't help them evade Atlantis's surveillance squad, the "Erasers." This steampunkish sci-fi/fantasy adventure is quickly paced, an inventive, if far-fetched, engagement of plastics pollution and climate change -- as well as a diverting vision of Atlantis's underwater technology. Lewis's middle-grade wackiness is quietly funny and realistic; he is blinkered by his own cultural formation but is a fount of imaginative diversions. With the book's conclusion perched on the eve of the travelers' return, Mone seems to be promising a sequel. An afterword discusses Atlantis's lore and the current crisis of plastics pollution in Earth's oceans. (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Lewis's scientist father has long been discredited for his theory that inhabitants of the underwater city Atlantis have been sending tsunamis to destroy American coasts, an Atlantean retaliation for the pollution of the ocean. When one of the tsunamis carries father and son, along with talented engineer Hanna, far undersea in their subsphere vehicle, they learn that the theory was absolutely right. Meanwhile Kaya, an Atlantean, has always been told that there are no "People of the Sun" dwelling near ocean surfaces: to suggest otherwise is treason. When Kaya encounters the three from the surface, she knows they're doomed if she doesn't help them evade Atlantis's surveillance squad, the "Erasers." This steampunkish sci-fi/fantasy adventure is quickly paced, an inventive, if far-fetched, engagement of plastics pollution and climate change -- as well as a diverting vision of Atlantis's underwater technology. Lewis's middle-grade wackiness is quietly funny and realistic; he is blinkered by his own cultural formation but is a fount of imaginative diversions. With the book's conclusion perched on the eve of the travelers' return, Mone seems to be promising a sequel. An afterword discusses Atlantis's lore and the current crisis of plastics pollution in Earth's oceans. Deirdre F. Baker July/August 2021 p.119(c) Copyright 2021. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews I'ds must stop a shadow war. Twelve-year-old Meriwether Lewis Gates' futuristic life might be recognizable in some ways, but it's also plagued by unrelenting, destructive tsunamis. His dad is an eccentric and brilliant academic whose insistence on Atlantis' existence has left him all but ostracized from the scientific community save for his genius teenage assistant, Hanna. Meanwhile, fathoms below in her Atlantean home of Ridge City, 14-year-old Kaya lives with her father and grandmother and is fascinated by illicit stories about the People of the Sun who live above on dry land. When Lewis' and Kaya's worlds collide, they (along with Hanna and Lewis' dad) form an unlikely alliance, discovering that as climate change and pollution poison the sea, Atlantis is quietly and violently retaliating. The Erasers, a secret Atlantean faction, seek to silence and quell anything to do with the People of the Sun. Can these new friends save both Atlantis and Earth? Written from both Kaya's and Lewis' third-person points of view, Mone's book features expeditious pacing, ample secrets, and imaginative science and tech creations that are zippy indeed, though some points are resolved too conveniently. In a jaunty Q&A, Mone carefully explains how he conceived his innovations and their scientific inner workings. Also provided are tips for making a difference regarding ocean pollution. Lewis is presumably White; Hanna is coded as Black. This fun adventure both engages and gently edifies. (map) (Science fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2276754 (Vol. 02) Brink of War (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gregory Mone

After their daring escape from Atlantis, Lewis, Hanna, and Kaya, their resourceful Atlantean friend, find themselves pulled between two worlds. Trapped on the surface under the watchful eyes of government officials, the three adventurers receive an urgent call to return their stolen warship to Atlantis-or risk starting an all-out war.

Aided by a billionaire with unclear intentions, the trio embarks on an all-new journey through Atlantis, from the sunken underwater world of Evenor to the tunnels below Ridge City.

978-1-4197-3855-5 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Can a 12-year-old save his world from an impending invasion? Continuing where Atlantis: The Accidental Invasion (2021) left its readers hanging, preteen daydreamer and dance aficionado Meriweather Lewis Gates (who goes by just Lewis) is back home on dry land with his friends Hanna Barkley, a fellow human, and Kaya, an Atlantean. Frustrated by aboveground cultural differences (and receiving little acknowledgment of her own culture), Kaya is ready to return home. Before long, the trio find themselves on their way back to Atlantis on a multipronged mission: to save both Lewis' and Kaya's fathers, carry out a dubious assignment for a suspicious corporate leader who wants to pilfer Atlantean tech for her own exploitation, and stave off a megalomaniac who is threatening war. For much of Mone's sophomore effort, the action veers heavily toward a cat-and-mouse premise as Lewis, Hanna, and Kaya keep evading nefarious Atlantean pursuers. Eventually, the plot pivots to a series of reveals and twists, stylistically similar to its predecessor. While the ending is tidily wrapped up, the possibility of more adventures is also floated. Differences between Lewis' and Kaya's worlds are sharply juxtaposed; both find aspects of the other's culture distasteful. Largely action-driven, this story offers enough thrilling chases, cool gadgetry, and gotcha moments to keep pages turning. Lewis reads as White; Hanna is described as having brown skin. A buzzy, fast-paced sequel. (map, scientific explanations) (Science fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—After The Accidental Invasion, humans Lewis and Hanna and their Atlantean comrade Kaya find themselves torn between competing interests on the surface and in Atlantis. Frustrated by the somewhat hostile, strange culture of the "sun people," Kaya is desperate to return home and rescue her father who risked himself for their escape. Lewis is determined to accompany her and reunite with his own father who remains held captive in the underwater nation. Atlantis issues a warning that war will be declared if the warship the kids used to escape is not returned. In the meantime, a conniving tech billionaire hijacks the ship and demands access to more Atlantean technology before letting the kids go. A humorous yet informative "Science of Atlantis" section is appended. VERDICT Fans of the first book will enjoy the mix of adventure, humor, and science fiction gadgetry in this action-packed sequel that leaves room for more stories from this world.

Atlantis (Trade)

#2258896 (Vol. 01) Escape from Atlantis (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kate O'Hearn

As Riley and Alfie unravel the mystery of Atlantis and its most terrifying part, the Forbidden Zone, they realize that the clock is ticking. If they can't learn what happened to their parents and find a way off the island soon, it may be too late to leave.

978-1-5344-5691-4 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 448 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 600

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A disastrous family sail into the Bermuda Triangle strands two cousins on an uncharted island with unusual--and sometimes dangerous--residents. Stocked with characters and creatures that will attract younger members of the Percy Jackson fandom, this opening escapade begins with an attack by a sea monster that casts 13-year-old Riley and her alienated, pestiferous 12-year-old cousin, Alfie, ashore on Atlantis, an island where time has slowed down. There, mutually hostile camps of magical creatures and stranded humans, who are gradually turning into talking beasts of various sorts through a process called "de-evolution," steer suspiciously clear of each other. Eager to escape--and driven by the possibility that his mom and her dad might also have survived the attack--the cousins put aside their antipathy to enlist local allies and, by the end, to engineer, as titularly promised, an escape. O'Hearn further cranks up the mythological vibe by chucking in a siren (friendly), feral mermaids and unicorns (not so much), lotuslike Memory Berries that rob the eater of both recall and the desire to leave, and giant gargoyles that turn to stone in sunlight. Riley is outraged to discover that the partially transformed people--including a mild-mannered koala who positively channels Mr. Tumnus--are exploited as labor but ostracized for their physical differences by the nonaltered. Main human characters follow a White default. Steers a predictable course but does deliver mild thrills along the way. (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2308571 (Vol. 02) Return to Atlantis (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kate O'Hearn

Riley thought that her adventure was over when they arrived back home in Colorado. Although she misses her dad, she's back with her mom and brother and has caught up with her classes at school. Though Maggie, Pea, and her aunt have to hide in their basement apartment during the day, they are making the most of things and settling into their new life.

978-1-5344-5694-5 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 448 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 610

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews id to return to their hidden home in the Bermuda Triangle after finding nothing but cold hearts and violence in Denver. Shortly after leading an Escape From Atlantis (2021) with her cousin, Alfie, and a small group of formerly human island residents who were transformed into talking animals, Riley is regretting her flight. This is partly because her companions are permanently stuck hiding from suspicious authorities in her mom's house; partly because her former school friends have turned mean, cruelly ostracizing and bullying secret ve new student Jill for being ragged and unwashed; and partly because a vicious punk's terrifying assault during a rare nighttime outing has escalated into vengeful stalking. More worrisomely, the longer Riley and her companions are away from Atlantis, the more mysteriously ill they are becoming. Violent events spur a hasty departure for Florida with parentally abandoned Jill and her five siblings in tow. But Atlantis, once finally reached, turns out to be far from the utopian community of Riley's rosy memories: Hardly have the arrivals settled in than she takes on the role of savior, surviving a murder attempt before insisting on critical reforms. O'Hearn assumes readers will be familiar with the opener, but though the pacing sometimes drags in this long sequel, she continues to keep both the issues and the characterizations simple--and adds a cute baby unicorn to the White-presenting human cast and large menagerie. A second volume that drags a little but will please returning fans. (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8—Cousins Riley and Alfie have survived the perilous journey back from Atlantis aboard the Moon Dancer and are safely home with their mother. They've brought with them several Atlanteans, some of which have changed to animal form already. Despite the joy of seeing her mother again, Riley and the Atlanteans notice that they're getting weak and sick. Will returning to Atlantis be the thing to save them? In a race against time and finding the transportation to get back there, they know it's their only hope. They also know returning to Atlantis has its own pitfalls and dangers, and that not everyone there will be happy to see them. In this series sequel, O'Hearn delivers big on the imagination and sentiments. VERDICT Filled with suspense and excitement, this novel is sure to delight all fantasy lovers.

#2329673 (Vol. 03) Secrets of Atlantis (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kate O'Hearn

Life on Atlantis has always been unpredictable. But lately, the Community has finally started to feel like the stable home Riley hoped it could be--until the weather becomes anything but stable. After three Red Moons within a month, the latest of which brings an earthquake, it's clear that something is wrong. But what is causing this change?

978-1-5344-5697-6 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 448 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Riley rescues her fellow islanders, human and otherwise, from fairies and their curses in this series closeout. To finish off, O'Hearn adds two new strife-ridden realms to the hidden isle of Atlantis--one an undersea cavern where dwell two camps of spell-singing merfolk and the other a quarter of the hidden island belonging to the fairy folk. She sends her peace-loving protagonist to both for two brief but savage climactic battles. What's really at war here is the author's chosen plotline juxtaposed against her strenuous efforts to downplay its implicit violence. Despite apparently seeking to distract readers by adding flower-strewing pixies and polka-dot hippos with fairy heads to the crook-horned unicorn colt, adorable talking koala, and other plushy members of the teeming cast, she trots in evil fairies who can only be deprived of their powers by having their wings ripped off, for instance. And then, when the ripping is done, why not gather for a joyous feast? Moreover, doubtless to the disappointment of readers who like to see the fighting as it happens rather than just be told about it later, she forces the finale of the second battle and the death of a vicious predator to occur entirely offstage. Still, by the end, not only have all the magical, mythical, and hybrid human-animal Atlanteans come together in harmony, but a broken contraceptive spell allows the nearly extinct gargoyles to have baby gargoyles again. Baby gargoyles! Muddles through to a properly happy ending. (map) (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Babysitter's Guide to Monster Hunting (Trade)

#2005860 (Vol. 01) Babysitter's Guide to Monster Hunting (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joe Ballarini

Middle-schooler Kelly Ferguson would rather spend Halloween night with her best friend spying on her crush at the biggest party of the year than babysitting Jacob, the super-spoiled son of her mom's ice-queen boss. But Kelly needs cash for her camp fund. And when a job has "sitting" in the title, how hard can it really be?

978-0-06-243783-9 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 680

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

Reviews by: Book Page Kelly Ferguson is a self-described "invisible"--a middle schooler several social circles removed from the popular kids--but she has a plan to change that. Since learning about the camp where popular princess Deanna spends her summers, Kelly has been saving up by doing every odd job she can find. Kelly is reluctant to try babysitting at first, but the promise of earning big bucks for watching Netflix all night is convincing. The only catch is that Jacob, the boy she's babysitting, is adamant that there's a monster under his bed. And he's right. When Jacob is kidnapped by a group of scary creatures, Kelly gets swept along in the rescue efforts of a secret society of monster-fighting babysitters, sworn to protect the children in their charge. Together, Kelly and the babysitters must find Jacob, defeat an evil bogeyman and save the world from a never-ending nightmare, all before Jacob's parents get home.

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 It's Halloween, and eighth-grader Kelly has been invited to her first party, but her mother has other plans: babysit her boss' son, Jacob. If Kelly had a hint of what was awaiting her, she'd be terrified. Like many little kids, Jacob sees monsters in his room only these turn out to be real monsters, which proceed to abduct the boy. Kelly desperately phones his regular babysitter for help and catches sight of a picture Jacob had drawn, triggering a memory: she has seen this bogeyman before! Thus ensues a night that calls all of Kelly's strength and will into play. She finds herself depending upon schoolmates, whom she had considered misfits but who turn out to be babysitters with abilities to ward off and destroy monsters. All the ghouls of Halloween and bad dreams are threaded into this story of finding friendship in middle school. This new series gives babysitting a daring edge and sets up girls outside of the popular crowd as heroines. An entertaining debut. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2017, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books All Kelly Ferguson wants is to go to summer camp-so badly that she's willing to (gulp) babysit, even though she doesn't particularly like children and she thinks it's a job for nerds. Things get complicated when Kelly's first charge, four-year-old Baby Jacob, gets carried off by Toadies (goblin-like critters who have an affinity for trash) to the Grand Guignol, who plans to use Jacob's nightmares to populate the world with monsters. The novel dwells a little too long on Kelly's cool-kid aspirations, but it delivers an entertaining mix of humor and horror once she teams up with punk-rock high-schooler Liz and the other members of the Order of Babysitters to rescue Jacob. Together, they venture into the Grand Guignol's deliciously creepy lair, furnished with walls of televisions playing horror movies and hanging cages in which to keep captive babysitters, and fight off giant centipedes, gargoyles, and carnivorous broccoli. The brisk action doesn't leave much room for characterization, and it relies on stereotypes that could do with some pushback, especially for Kelly's fellow eighth-grade Invisibles/babysitters: they're introduced as lazy caricatures, and they don't get nearly enough screen time to compensate. This is a setup for a longer series, though, and all the characters will no doubt gain further depth in future volumes as it delves into the larger universe of monsters and babysitters that Kelly has entered. Reviewed from an unillustrated galley. SS

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Middle schooler Kelly is not babysitter material, but she still has to watch her mom's boss's kid on Halloween. When four Toadies steal little Jacob, Kelly must team up with monster-fighting babysitter extraordinaire Liz LeRue to save him and stop the Bogeyman from unleashing Jacob's nightmares. Ballarini offers readers a hilarious and engaging series-opener, complete with black-and-white illustrated pages from Liz's monster-hunting notebook. (Copyright 2018 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews htmare. Needing funds for summer camp, the white 13-year-old grudgingly takes a babysitting job. When her charge is kidnapped by leather-taloned beasties, Kelly discovers that the Boogeyman is actually real. Next thing she knows, Kelly is fighting monsters alongside a secret babysitting society, members of which are a moped-driving teen who looks like she stepped out of an apocalyptic future and three of Kelly's classmates; all are white save African-American Berna, whose hair is "wild [and] puffy." The stakes are high now, as it seems the stolen white 5-year-old has the power to dream dreams into reality, and the Boogeyman wants him in order to fill the world with living nightmares. Kelly, who has never been popular, discovers she's got some really surprising attributes, which increase her chances with her longtime crush Victor from Guatemala (who's both exoticized and largely off the page). While the story never gets all that frightening, it has its moments as in the titular guide's catalog of monsters, which includes the ghost of a woman eaten by her own cats. Grand Guignol, aka the Boogeyman, has a flair for the theatrical, and his snarky complaint exemplifies much of the dialogue: "I get called names like 'creepy evil, twitchy goat legs' or 'that scary man who keeps trying to eat me.'" A series opener that melds Goosebumps and The Baby-Sitters Club with ironic glue. (Adventure. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2017) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-7-This shining gem in the campy monster drama genre is a step up from R.L. Stine's "Goosebumps." Meet Kelly Ferguson, a struggling 12-year-old who hasn't quite found her place in the middle school hierarchy. Then she accidentally discovers a team of monster-fighting babysitters. Their mission is to save kids from the utmost evil in the world, the Grand Guignol. This despicable, devil-like creature, who is also known as the boogeyman, preys on defenseless children left in the care of babysitters. When Kelly's charge, Jacob, is kidnapped right under her nose, she must work with the band of super babysitters to help rescue baby Jacob from the clutches of the vile Grand Guignol. The over-the-top humorous action, snarky dialogue, and engaging characters will keep readers hooked. The other babysitters, such as Liz, who is haunted by the disappearance of a sibling, each have interesting backstories. Liz creates A Babysitter's Guide to Monster Hunting, which the sitters refer to when faced with a new threat. Excerpts from this handy manual are sprinkled throughout the narrative, adding an interesting dimension to the storytelling and world-building. VERDICT With shades of Buffy the Vampire Slayer, this tale of a courageous heroine and her ragtag group of intrepid babysitters battling nightmare-inducing beasts makes for addictive reading. Hand this to fans of Chris Colfer, Rick Riordan, and Adam Gidwitz.-Julie Shatterly, W. A. Bess Elementary School, Gastonia, NC Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2063692 (Vol. 02) Beasts and Geeks (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Joe Ballarini Now Kelly has to face down the Spider Queen, whose venom turns an angry	1	$13.99

Sasquatch, Kelly's parents, and her former BFF into babysitter-hunting minions. And on top of that, Monday's math test is going to be a NIGHTMARE! All in a night's work.

978-0-06-243787-7 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 8.0

#2105792 (Vol. 03) Mission to Monster Island (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Joe Ballarini

It's the end of the world as she knows it! Thirteen-year-old Kelly Ferguson's secret life as a monster-hunting babysitter takes a beastly turn when she goes on a rescue mission to Monster Island--where monster royalty is turning kids into hairy mutant monsters! But to do that she'll have to face off against internet trolls, trash monsters, and her fear of screwing up--plus the biggest, baddest Boogey of all. With the fate of humanity on the line, can Kelly save the kids, the world, and her own social life before the big school dance?

978-0-06-243790-7 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

Bad Princesses (Prebound)

#2324548 (Vol. 01) Perfect Villains (Prebound)
written by Jennifer Torres

Princesses don't break the rules, but they may rewrite them...Every girl dreams of going to the Fine and Ancient Institute for the Royal to learn how to be a princess. But Dalia and Dominga could not be any less enchanted. They are different...the same kind of different. Neither of them wants to be the fairest of them all. They want to join a secret society of villains at the Bewitched Academy of the Dreadful. So, they've devised the perfect plot to ruin the first day of class. It will be the rottenest scheme of all. Something so perfectly awful, so fantastically horrible, so wonderfully wicked that they'll surely get their invitations to the BAD.

978-1-5364-7908-9 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 176 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Torres (Catalina Incognito: Skateboard Star) examines themes of good vs. evil via warm depictions of friendship in this immersive world featuring two mischievous princesses attending the Fine and Ancient Institute for the Royal (F.A.I.R.). According to her mother and older sister, Dominga must attend F.A.I.R. to learn how to be a proper lady. But Dominga believes that she's destined to enroll in the Bewitched Academy for the Dreadful (B.A.D.), a school for villains in training. She feels out of place at F.A.I.R., until she meets Dalia, another young princess who shares her ideals. The pair team up during Woodland Wildlife lessons to hatch their audition plans for B.A.D. but are foiled at almost every turn, as when an attempt to lure fire ants into class is curtailed by their teacher. Spanish dialogue and abundant descriptions of empanadas and bizcochitos, coupled with the princesses' madcap shenanigans, make for a smart and inclusive novel, which features girls of varying abilities, body types, and heritages, including artist and wheelchair user Leonor, who unexpectedly befriends the dastardly duo. The episodic novel lends itself well to the girls' schemes and provides ample fodder for the tweens' next adventure. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jennifer Laughran, Andrea Brown Literary. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Princess Dominga is less than thrilled to be starting school at the Fine and Ancient Institute for the Royal (F.A.I.R.). Not only is she expected to live up to the perfectness of Paloma, her sister and the future queen, she's just not really cut out for the golden carriages, sweet-smelling flowers, and the arrogant girls at F.A.I.R. She'd rather attend the neighboring school of The Bewitched Academy for the Dreadful (B.A.D.). It's only after she meets Dalia, another princess she suspects is very much like she is, does Dominga decide she has a true companion to launch her plan to create havoc and mayhem at this school. If only the annoying Princess Ines would stop interfering in Dominga's plans and let her execute her schemes to cause trouble! Then those in charge at B.A.D. would have to recognize her wickedness and invite her to join them. But every time she thinks her strategy is going to work, someone or something interferes with her devilish plans. Magic spells, surly princesses, and even a sorting tiara are all featured in this tale of girls who want to be bad. The author infuses the book with words and phrases (and food) from her Mexican heritage. The story involves a princess's attempt to create mayhem at school but who is thwarted continually. This constant upset of her plans does little to further the story; in fact, it sadly struggles to allow the story to gain momentum. Readers will get tired of waiting for something of substance to happen. The only art is the cover art, which has a manga sort of appeal and thorny vines that introduce each chapter. VERDICT A quick read for princess (bad and good) aficionados but an optional purchase for more discerning readers.—Carol Connor

#2350387 (Vol. 02) Meet Me at Midnight (Prebound)

written by Jennifer Torres

Princesses don't break the rules, but they may rewrite them. Every girl dreams of going to the Fine and Ancient Institute for the Royal to learn how to be a princess. But Dalia and Dominga could not be any less enchanted. They are different. The same kind of different. Neither of them wants to be the fairest of them all. They want to join a secret society of villains at the Bewitched Academy of the Dreadful, and tonight they have another chance to prove they belong there.

978-1-5364-8225-6 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 176 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.95

#2366593 (Vol. 03) Party Crashers (Prebound)

written by Jennifer Torres

Princesses don't break the rules, but they may rewrite them. Every girl dreams of going to the Fine and Ancient Institute for the Royal to learn how to be a princess. But Dalia and Dominga could not be any less enchanted. They are different. The same kind of different. Neither of them wants to be the fairest of them all. They want to join a secret society of villains at the Bewitched Academy of the Dreadful.

978-1-5364-8353-6 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 176 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 770

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.95

Bamboo Kingdom (Trade)

#2240622 (Vol. 01) Creatures of the Flood (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

One kingdom. Three worlds. This thrilling new series from bestselling author Erin Hunter follows three panda cubs, separated at birth, who must join together to complete a prophecy and save their home.

978-0-06-302192-1 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

#2280785 (Vol. 02) River of Secrets (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

Separated, the three panda siblings are left without the information they need to take the traitorous Dragon Speaker down. But if they can find each other and trust each other—they may be able to rally the pandas of the Bamboo Kingdom to their side.

978-0-06-302198-3 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

#2310866 (Vol. 03) Journey to the Dragon Mountain (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

The triplets of the Bamboo Kingdom are ready to step into their roles as Dragon Speakers. But in order to fulfill their destiny, they first need to find each other. With Ghost stuck performing as wicked Sunset's right-hand man and Rain and Leaf separated across far-flung corners of the land, a reunion feels impossible. If they're going to make it all the way across the Bamboo Kingdom to the Dragon Mountain, they're going to need to face their greatest fears. But little do they know that help can come from the unlikeliest of places--and that fate, one way or another, always finds a way.

978-0-06-302204-1 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

#2349641 (Vol. 04) Dark Sun (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

The Bamboo Kingdom is once again safely led by guidance of a real Dragon Speaker—three Dragon Speakers, in fact! But though Rain, Leaf, and Ghost have come together to protect their friends and families, there is no peace in the kingdom. With a dark past behind them, the pandas cannot seem to agree on the best path into a bright future. Do the siblings stay where they are, all together? Or split up, to better serve the entire Bamboo Kingdom?

978-0-06-302211-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity 1 Unit Price $19.99

#2386941 (Vol. 05) Lightning Path (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

After being forced out of Rain's camp for a murder he did not commit, Ghost is still determined to prove his innocence and help Rain. But though she isn't convinced he did it, if she accepts her brother is innocent, she would have to accept that the killer is still at large—and still targeting her loved ones.

978-0-06-302218-8 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1 Unit Price $19.99

Barakah Beats (Trade)

#2252504 Barakah Beats (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Maleeha Siddiqui

Twelve-year-old Nimra Sharif has spent her whole life in Islamic school, but now it's time to go to "real school." Unfortunately, middle school is hard. The teachers are mean, the schedule is confusing, and Jenna starts giving hijab-wearing Nimra the cold shoulder around the other kids. Desperate to fit in and get back in Jenna's good graces, Nimra accepts an unlikely invitation to join the school's popular 8th grade boy band, Barakah Beats.

978-1-338-70206-4 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 650

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review Nimra is nervous about trading her small Islamic academy for seventh grade in a public middle school, and though she knows it will be a transition--she'll be the only girl there in a hijab--she's thrilled to finally join her best friend in the classroom. But when a suddenly distant Jenna doesn't make an effort to include her, Nimra's one comfort slips away. In a seemingly helpful twist of fate, three older Muslim boys overhear Nimra singing as she prays at school, and they invite her to join their band. Nimra is torn about hanging out with the boys, which might regain Jenna's approval, because creating music conflicts with her family's interpretation of Islamic guidelines. She decides to briefly join up and quietly drop out once she's back in Jenna's inner circle, but the band flourishes, and life becomes more complicated. It's a delight to watch Nimra navigate school, family, and friendships while taking pride in her religion and abilities. She's a wonderful, confident kid who has no patience for stereotyping or unkindness, and the story gives her room to examine her faith, make mistakes, and get a little messy. Fraught family relationships, shifting friendships, differing religious practices--they're big topics, but debut-author Siddiqui deftly tackles them with warmth, humor, and compassion. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Twelve-year-old Nimra Sharif is attending public school for the first time. Pakistani American Nimra was home-schooled until she was 8, then attended a private Islamic school where she memorized the Quran, becoming a hafiza. Now her parents have decided that it is time for her to attend public school, where she'll be with her childhood best friend, Jenna, a White girl. But once seventh grade starts, Jenna ignores and avoids Nimra. Fortunately, Nimra meets other Muslim students: Matthew, a White convert; Bilal and Khadijah, Somali American siblings; and Pakistani American Waleed. When Bilal, Matthew, and Waleed ask her to join Barakah Beats, their Muslim band, she hesitates because of her family's interpretation of Islamic teachings, which eschews taking part in instrumental music. But she gives in, believing that hanging out with three popular, attractive eighth grade boys will impress Jenna. Her plan to join the band just long enough to regain Jenna's friendship before dropping out leads to her lying to her parents--and a sticky friendship situation when the boys sign up to perform at a mosque talent show to raise money for refugees. While secondary characters are less well fleshed out, Nimra grows, takes responsibility for her actions, and thoughtfully engages with her faith. Siddiqui has written a sympathetic character who wants to stay true to her beliefs while facing the pressures of school, changing relationships, and diverse beliefs about music within Muslim communities. An important story about staying true to yourself. (author's note) (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8—When Nimra memorizes the Qur'an ahead of schedule, her parents decide to send her to public school as a seventh grader, an entire year earlier than planned. At least Nimra will have her longtime friend Jenna to show her the ropes--right? But Nimra's new classmates have all kinds of assumptions about her faith, and Jenna isn't defending her. So when Barakah Beats, the popular Muslim boyband at school, wants her to sing with them, Nimra agrees, even though performing goes against her beliefs. But as lies build, Nimra is torn between friends, family, and faith, until she's no longer sure who she is. From the very beginning, this is an excellently constructed story. Nimra's dilemmas and challenges will be understood by every reader, regardless of faith or background. Nimra spends the book feeling deeply conflicted about music and its role in her faith and life, but the book's ultimate strength is in demonstrating how, just like there is no one right way to be a teenager, there is no one right way to practice faith. Nimra's decision at the story's end will likely surprise many, but it is one that feels absolutely true to the character. And when she does find her voice, readers will feel the chills right along with her. VERDICT Every elementary and middle school library will benefit from this touching story about a preteen struggling to reconcile faith, friends, and family against the backdrop of an American middle school.—Kristin Brynsvold, Tuckahoe Elem. Sch., Arlington, VA

#2293075 Bhai for Now (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Maleeha Siddiqui

(Companion) Ashar is busy with the ice hockey team, studying to get into the best school, and hanging out with his friends. Shaheer and his father are always moving, following his dad's jobs. The two boys have nothing in common. But when they meet on Shaheer's first day at his new school, it's like looking in a mirror. They quickly figure out that they're twins, separated as babies.

978-1-338-70209-5 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly d, Northern Virginia: set novel from Siddiqui (Barakah Beats), estranged identical twins come face-to-face at the same middle school. Outgoing Ashar, who grew up with the siblings' teacher mother, loves ice hockey and hopes to make the NHL; aloof Shaheer, an interior design fan who longs to stay put, moves regularly with the boys' restless doctor father and paternal grandfather. When the Muslim, Pakistani American eighth graders meet for the first time since their parents' divorce, which occurred during the twins' infancy, they scheme to switch places. Soon, Ashar is visiting Washington, D.C., with their father as he tries to understand what, if not proximity, makes a family, and Shaheer is helping to renovate a masjid with their mother, engaging with his interest in design. Alternating third-person chapters follow the boys' home lives, their elaborate ruse, and their growing desire to continue living near one another, in a quick-moving slice-of-life novel with warm relationships, a focus on community, and nostalgia appeal. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Lauren Spieller, Triada US. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Shaheer has gotten used to keeping to himself and watching Property Brothers on television with his grandfather. He's never had the opportunity to stay in one place for very long as he moves around the country, accommodating his physician father's frequent job changes. Imagine his shock and confusion when, on his first day of eighth grade in a brand-new school, he runs into his doppelgänger! It turns out that Shaheer and his identical twin, Ashar, were separated when their parents divorced. Ashar lives with their mother, enjoying ice hockey and studying for the entrance exam to a prestigious high school. Neither parent has ever been open about the other, so the twins (with the cooperation of their cousin Zohra) cook up some classic trading-places high jinks. In this reworked Parent Trap, the story is completely driven by the actions and feelings of the kids. The narrative perspective switches back and forth between the twins, witnessing them getting to know their new relatives and confronting the conflicting feelings that come with discovering such a long-held and damaging secret. The parents don't rekindle any romantic attachment and, in fact, demonstrate some harsh, but emotionally honest, vitriol towards each other. Ashar and Shaheer, who is starting to form connections for the first time in his life, must convince their parents that brotherhood, family, and community all matter more than old grievances. Details of both families' Pakistani heritage and Muslim faith are seamlessly integrated into the story. VERDICT An uplifting, culturally inclusive, and lively exploration of family bonds.—Alyssa Annico

Barefoot Dreams of Petra Luna (Trade)

#2292765 Other Side of the River (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alda P. Dobbs

Twelve-year old Petra Luna is in America after escaping the Mexican Revolution. Now that they are safe, Petra, her two younger siblings and her abuelita have a chance to begin again, in this country that promises so much. She leads her family from a smallpox-stricken refugee camp to the city of San Antonio, meeting with both opportunities and obstacles at every turn. Yet she also sees in America the extremes of rich and poor that she thought she'd left behind, and she begins to wonder if it's better to return to Mexico to fight for a better life there. Soon Petra finds her strength and courage tested as she discovers for herself what's truly worth fighting for.

978-1-7282-3844-9 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 After crossing the Río Bravo with her younger siblings and their Abuelita, Petra finds refuge and food in an American camp, where they must choose between returning to Mexico or staying in America. Petra obtains train tickets to a city named San Antonio, which brings her to Sister Nora, who helps her find work, broaden her knowledge of the world, and learn to read and write. Harsh words soon remind Petra of how mestizos like her are regarded, making her wish she could flee back to Mexico, but a twist of fate, support from Sister Nora, and her young sister's bravery help Petra see a bright future within reach. In this sequel to Barefoot Dreams of Petra Luna (2021), Petra continues to be a strong, brave protagonist who takes on many worries and responsibilities. Difficult topics such as racism, classism, and poverty are explored, leading Petra to the understanding that prejudice can attack anyone, regardless of skin color. A suspenseful ending brings heartfelt closure, and an author's note provides additional information on the plot and characters. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

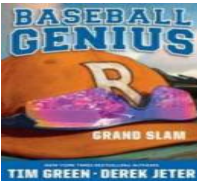

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Safely across the Río Bravo, Petra's journey continues in this follow-up to Barefoot Dreams of Petra Luna (2021). It's 1913, and while the revolution rages on in Mexico, Petra and her family find temporary safety in a refugee camp on the U.S. side of the river. But as rebel soldiers recapture some areas, the camp cannot handle the influx of people escaping the violence. The displaced are given the option of returning to Mexico or staying in the country and finding work. Holding fast to her "baby diamond," the lump of coal she keeps in her pocket that reminds her of her goals, Petra decides to get a job in the States to keep her family fed until they can find her father. They head north to los corrales, a poor, predominantly Mexican neighborhood in San Antonio. Though she believes at first that being a hard, loyal worker will yield rewards, Petra quickly discovers that the American dream may not be all it is cracked up to be. She must reorient herself to her own values in order to get ahead while maintaining her integrity. The stakes feel lower in this sequel; there are fewer threats of violence, and struggles are resolved relatively easily. The novel highlights the barriers and abuses faced by many new immigrants both historically and today through short chapters that keep the pace moving toward a happy ending. Readable historical fiction with themes that resonate. (author's note) (Historical fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

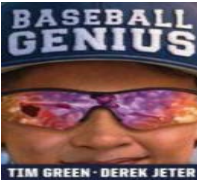

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8—The indomitable Petra continues to fight for her family's survival in this continuation of Barefoot Dreams of Petra Luna, though familiarity with the previous volume isn't necessary to enjoy this companion. They've outrun the federales, the military arm of Mexico's dictator, and have made it across the border. But their struggles have only just begun. The group is met with a smallpox-ridden refugee camp, poverty, and racism as 12-year-old Petra tries to find work and learn to read and write. Along the way to San Antonio, their dreams are hindered by obstacles. This is a vivid glimpse into the 1913 Mexican Revolution and its aftermath, much of which is still relevant to today's immigration and refugee crisis. While Petra is living in a very specific moment in history with a particular conflict, she also must navigate the usual coming-of-age issues that will resonate with current tweens, such as friendships, siblings, and living up to people's expectations. Her touching relationships with her grandmother and siblings will resonate in readers. Dobbs's engaging writing and the even pace of the narrative move the story forward. Petra and her family are Indigenous to Mexico. An author's note gives more context and shares how this story was inspired by Dobbs's grandmother. Though Petra's family's triumph is never in doubt, kids will be pulled in enough to follow the characters' journey. VERDICT A moving glimpse at an important historical event through the eyes of an unforgettable protagonist. Purchase for historical fiction shelves.—Shelley M. Diaz

Baseball Genius (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2054207 (Vol. 02) Double Play (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tim Green Jalen DeLuca loves baseball. He's playing for his summer travel team and trying to win a regular spot in the rotation. But Jalen's got more than talent on the field. He's a baseball genius who can analyze and predict almost exactly what any pitcher is going to do with his next pitch. He can't quite explain how he knows, he just does. 978-1-5344-0668-1 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 4.7 Lexile 780	1	$17.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2211903 (Vol. 03) Grand Slam (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tim Green Jalen DeLuca loves baseball. But he's more than just a fan and a talented player; Jalen is a baseball genius. He can analyze and predict almost exactly what a pitcher is going to do with his next pitch. His unique ability helped him save the career of the Yankees's star baseman, James "JY" Yager, by signaling the pitches from the stands. 978-1-5344-0671-1 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 690	1	$17.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1997719 (Vol. 01) Baseball Genius (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tim Green An average kid with an above average talent for predicting baseball pitches tries to help his favorite player out of a slump. 978-1-4814-6864-0 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 4.6 Lexile 750	1	$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8-Green teams up with Jeter in his latest piece of sports fiction. Jalen is the son of an Italian immigrant. He lives with his father, who works long days at his diner trying to make ends meet. Jalen has serious baseball talent and has just made a travel team. The only problem is that he needs some extra cash to pay for his team fees. Jalen's friends Cat and Daniel live near a Major League Baseball player's house, and Yankees star James "JY" Yager routinely signs batting practice balls and sells them to benefit a youth sports foundation. Jalen knows that if he can get his hands on a few of those balls, he can easily sell them on eBay to pay for his travel team fees. What he does not see coming is an injured ankle keeping Yager home from a Yankees road trip-and Jalen is caught red-handed. Jalen tells Yager that he has the ability to read pitchers and knows which pitch any guy in the pros will throw before he even gets into his windup. Yager is on the verge of being replaced by a younger player, and his sole shot at staying on the Yankees' roster is by going four-for-four in his next game. If Jalen can help him out from the stands, Yager will pay his travel team fees. The manager of the Yankees, however, has an entirely different agenda. Green is a prolific sports fiction writer, and having Jeter's name grace the cover will keep this book in demand. Green does a nice job incorporating diverse characters throughout the narrative. Despite a predictable story, this title is sure to circulate. VERDICT Bound to be popular among Green fans and readers of sports fiction.-Carli Sauer, Carmel Middle School, IN Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Battle Dragons (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2245577 (Vol. 01) City of Thieves (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Alex London	1	$17.99

In a modern mega-city built around dragons, one boy gets caught up in the world of underground dragon battles and a high-stakes gang war that could tear his family apart.

978-1-338-71654-2 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 10.0

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly "Reckless, easily distracted, and afraid of heights," Abel, 13, is secretly glad that he failed the Dragon Rider Academy Entrance Exam, though it means he can't follow in the footsteps of his older brother Silas. But when Abel accidentally bonds with a stolen, "rare and valuable" dragon named Karak, he becomes a pawn of one of the dragon-riding criminal kins that dominate the technologically advanced city of Drakopolis, expected to train and fly on their behalf. With his implied white family; particularly rebellious older sister Lina; thoroughly entangled in a multi-faction struggle between the various kins and Drakopolis's secret police, Abel must enlist his best friend, nonbinary veterinarian-in-training Roa, as well as Karak himself, to help save them all. London (Gold Wings Rising) establishes an absorbing semifuturistic society where technology and dragons go hand-in-wing, the latter used for everything from transportation to settling gang disputes high in the sky. Abel proves a quick-witted protagonist who copes well with the constant danger and unsettling revelations that invert his world. Fast-paced and adventurous, this series starter hints at a complicated, fascinating setting while leaving plenty to be explored in subsequent installments. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Robert Guinsler, Sterling Lord Literistic. (Sept.)

#2280980 (Vol. 02) City of Speed (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alex London

In the city of Drakopolis, dragons and humans have co-existed for centuries. Dragons burn the city's garbage, taxi its busy citizens from place to place, and even compete in vicious underground battles for ganglike kins. But the dragons also compete in legal sports, like the spectacular aerial races that draw in cheering crowds by the tens of thousands. Abel is at just such a race when he witnesses the unthinkable. A long-shot competitor pulls off an impossible win -- then flies into a destructive rage!

978-1-338-71657-3 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When cyborg dragons threaten Drakopolis, dragon racer Abel must find a way to save both it and them. As in the series opener, it's cops vs. criminal gangs both in the sprawling, corrupt city and in 13-year-old Abel's family, where his older brother, Silas, works for the Dragon's Eye secret police and his big sister, Lina, is a fugitive member of the politically subversive Sky Knights kin. He himself only wants to train and race dragons--particularly after meeting Brazza, an illegal mixed-breed flyer of touchy disposition and astonishing intelligence. While the plot does indeed feature two breathtaking, high-speed aerial races among the skyscrapers and a massive climactic melee featuring hundreds of maddened dragons with cybernetic enhancements and hacked DNA, it's more than just a pretext for set piece battles, as London also perceptively explores both the dynamics of a close family beset with conflicting loyalties and issues tied to subjugating and experimenting on wild creatures who don't talk but can, it turns out, sing and who, in Abel's view at least, are deserving of freedom. Lighter touches, such as 8-ton Brazza's fondness for being read to and occasional mentions of an anarchistic kin dubbed the Wind Breakers, leaven the proceedings. The human cast, though it presents largely White, does include one nonbinary supporting character, a boy who has a dragon queen act, and glancing mention of same-sex crushes. Breathless action, lots of dragons, and chewy themes to boot. (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2315196 (Vol. 03) City of Secrets (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alex London

Far from the lights and lizards of the megacity, Abel's new home effectively bans the great beasts. Anyone caught smuggling dragons is hauled away by the ruthless sheriff and her fearsome deputies. They have the only dragons in town, and they run the dreaded dragon rodeo, which pits those who fall afoul of the sheriff's "justice" against a wild dragon in a competition for their freedom. It's dragon versus human and only one can win.

978-1-338-71669-6 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The exile of young dragon rider Abel from Drakopolis leads to the launch of a dragon liberation movement in this third series entry. Freshly arrived in the isolated town of Glassblower's Gulch with his parents and squabbling older sibs, Abel is quick to learn that local sheriff Bina Skint and her brutal deputy, Manchi, are not only on the take, but run a regular rodeo in which troublemakers are forced to fight deadly dragons. Since Abel soon finds himself struggling to secretly harbor and train an illegal baby wyvern foisted on him by new friend Kayda and her moms, it's only a matter of time before he's in the arena himself--and on the road to startling discoveries about the supposedly feral and nonsentient monsters. London continues to weave nuanced explorations of family relationships into his action-packed plots and also to wheel in crowd-pleasing flocks of fire-, glass-, acid-, or lethal-loogie-spitting dragons of many types and temperaments as he reassembles both the draconian and White-presenting and gender diverse human cast from previous episodes for a lengthy climactic aerial battle that shows every sign of extending back to Drakopolis in the next outing. Stay tuned. More than enough mayhem, mischief, and awesome aerial exploits to send young dracophiles soaring and roaring. (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Baxter Family Children (Trade)

#2089163 (Vol. 01) Best Family Ever (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Karen Kingsbury

Brooke is the perfect older sister. For that reason, Kari and Ashley work hard to make their parents just as proud of them as they are of Brooke. Each girl has her own talents. Brooke is an excellent student. Kari is a great soccer player. Ashley, a talented artist. And they are always there for each other.

978-1-5344-1215-6 ©2019 5 x 7 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.2 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile HL 420

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly With her son, bestselling Christian author Kingsbury adapts her bestselling Baxter Family series for adults to suit a younger audience, bringing readers stories of the five Baxter siblings in childhood. Narrated by middle sisters Ashley, 10, and Kari, 11, the slice-of-life story begins in Ann Arbor, Mich., just before Valentine's Day. Exuberant Ashley is thrilled to be organizing her class's party. Kari, meanwhile, is dreading the holiday; her classmate has a crush on her, and she's concerned that his attentions will result in an embarrassing situation. The girls share their joys and concerns with their family because, as their mother always says, "Your very best friends are the ones around the dinner table each night." After Valentine's Day, Ashley feels left out on a family vacation and wonders if she should be more like older sister Brooke, who excels at math. And the whole family struggles with their father's announcement that they will move at the end of the school year for his new job. The Baxters pray and find solace in God while navigating relatable and realistic life changes in this slice-of-life tale. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Rick Christian, Alive Literary Agency. (Feb.)

#2150318 (Vol. 02) Finding Home (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Karen Kingsbury

Ashley desperately misses the home and friends she left behind. As she realizes her siblings have their struggles, too, she can't help but wonder if unlikely friends can be the best friends of all? And could time and love from her family be enough to make a house feel like home?

978-1-5344-1218-7 ©2020 5 x 7 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.2 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 420

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

#2211902 (Vol. 03) Never Grow Up (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Karen Kingsbury

When Kari Baxter is assigned an essay about what she wants to be when she grows up, her mind goes blank. She doesn't want to grow up; she wants everything to stay just like it is. But Kari comes to realize that while making time stand still isn't possible, she can enjoy every moment with her best family ever.

978-1-5344-1221-7 ©2021 5 x 7 304 pgs.

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

#2266861 (Vol. 04) Adventure Awaits (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Karen Kingsbury

School science camp is a few weeks away, but Ashley and Kari Baxter have very different feelings about going. With the help of their siblings, Kari and Ashley prepare for wild experiments and the challenges of the great outdoors, and together they learn what it means to plan for an experience they won't forget. In the process, all five Baxter Children learn how to make new friends and that adventure awaits in the everyday. They just have to look for it!

978-1-6659-0802-3 ©2022 5 x 7 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 460

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

#2311069 (Vol. 05) Being Baxters (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Karen Kingsbury

Things are changing in Bloomington for the Baxters. When Ashley's teacher, Mr. Garrett, takes a month off work for the birth of his baby, the intimidating Ms. Stritch takes his place. Ashley tries but can't seem to crack the new teacher's tough exterior. Meanwhile, Brooke struggles when a popular girl excludes her at lunch, Erin adjusts to getting glasses, and when Kari is given a dance solo for the upcoming recital, she takes her success a little too seriously.

978-1-6659-0805-4 ©2023 5 x 7 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Bear House (Trade)

#2250553 (Vol. 01) Bear House (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Meaghan McIsaac

Moody Aster and her spoiled sister Ursula are the daughters of Jasper Lourdes, Major of Bears and lord of all the realm. But when their Uncle Bram murders their father in a bid for the crown, the girls are forced onto the run, along with lowly Dev the Bearkeeper and the Lourdes's half-grown grizzly Alcor, symbol of their house.

978-0-8234-4660-5 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 14.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly McIsaac's (Movers) dark fantasy series starter ambitiously weaves intrigue and adventure against a complicated backdrop of constellation-inspired myth. The northern kingdoms, collectively known as the Bear Highen, have always been ruled by the House of the Hemoth Bear. Spoiled Aster Lourdes, 13, dreams of following in her father's footsteps as its sovereign, but everyone expects her imperious older sister Ursula, 16, to be chosen. When their uncle Bram betrays the family in an unthinkable coup, the sisters must flee the kingdom, along with bear keeper Dev, 13, and young grizzly Alcor, "the living symbol of the Bear House." To prevent the Bear Highen from falling to tyranny and blasphemy, the unlikely companions must survive in the wild, outwit their pursuers, and rally the heirs to several other kingdoms. Hot-tempered and insecure, the flawed, cued-white protagonists slowly prove themselves as they're pushed to their limits in a well-depicted journey of maturity. Dense worldbuilding bogs things down early on, but multiple perspectives enable the story to play out from different angles, contributing to an epic, complex narrative. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Alison McDonald, the Rights Factory. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—A group of young teens must deal with the aftermath of a terrible act of betrayal and make a place for themselves in their changed universe. Princesses Aster and Ursula are the daughters of the respected Major Jasper Lourdes, who is basically the high king of their world. After her father and most of the other Majors, plus their magical animal partners, are killed due to the machinations of his older brother Bram, Aster learns that she and her sister are considered spoiled brats by everyone. However, by the end of the book, the princesses prove capable of heroism. Truly wonderful world-building almost makes up for the stereotypical behavior of the young female characters, who seem selfish and lazy until forced to be otherwise, while the young male characters show resolve and agency as they deal with difficult problems before the events of the novel. The story ties up neatly, but many characters deserve future stories of their own. Most characters are cued as white. VERDICT A novel set in a compelling world marred by uneven characterization that does its female protagonists a disservice.—Mara Alpert, Los Angeles P.L.

#2296423 (Vol. 02) Scales and Stardust (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Meaghan McIsaac

The war in the Bear Highen is over. Aster, at thirteen, has defeated her uncle and become the High Queen. Peace is good, but things are still difficult: political challenges confront her, personal challenges stymie her, and the massive Hemoth Bear, symbol of the House of the Bear, is beginning to resist her control.

978-0-8234-4661-2 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 12.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Beast and the Bethany (Prebound)

#2364084 (Vol. 03) Battle of the Beast (Prebound)

written by Jack Meggitt-Phillips

After being vanquished in spectacular fashion that included an umbrella with human-pudding capabilities and a darn good show, the beast is transferred to a hidden island and placed in an impenetrable cage where it can no longer hurt anyone or carry out its dastardly plan to make Bethany its next meal. Meaning Bethany and Ebenezer's lives are finally beast free and they can pursue their do-gooding activities in peace-even if the "gooding" part is questionable.

978-1-5364-8330-7 ©2024 5 x 7-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 770

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

#2291642 (Vol. 01) Beast and the Bethany (Prebound)

written by Jack Meggitt-Phillips

Beauty comes at a price. And no one knows that better than Ebenezer Tweezer, who has stayed beautiful for 511 years. How, you may wonder? Ebenezer simply has to feed the beast in the attic of his mansion. In return for meals of performing monkeys, statues of Winston Churchill, and the occasional cactus, Ebenezer gets potions that keep him young and beautiful, as well as other presents. But the beast grows ever greedier with each meal, and one day he announces that he'd like to eat a nice, juicy child next.

978-1-5364-7506-7 ©2021 5 x 7-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 730

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Dorian Gray had a portrait; Ebenezer Tweezer has a voracious Beast in the attic of his posh mansion that vomits up antiaging potions in exchange for whatever it demands. So it is that with his 512th birthday coming up, Ebenezer either has to bring the Beast a suitably plump child or die. Unfortunately, that child turns out to be Bethany--seemingly a perfect choice, being the most willful, obstinate, ill-tempered orphaned brat ever to bring misery to the lives of everyone at Miss Fizzlewick's Institute for Gentlemanly Boys and Ladylike Ladies. Why unfortunate? Because against their better judgements, Ebenezer and Bethany reluctantly take a liking to each other. In best Roald Dahl tradition, the Beast is a menacing, murderous monster. Better yet, dubbing the genuinely remorseful Ebenezer "the most good bad person I know," Bethany contrives by the end to give him one last, welcome chance at a better life. Sample ink-and-wash illustrations by Follath capture both the contemporary setting and the gothic flavor of this unexpectedly touching debut. COPYRIGHT(2020) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Ebenezer Tweezer is on the verge of celebrating his 512th birthday thanks to the magical, age-defying potion vomited up by the beast who lives in his attic. The beast supplies Ebenezer with riches, beautiful paintings, and eternally shiny hair, and all Ebenezer must do in return is feed it. There's just one problem: the beast's appetite—which has already extended to endangered species, priceless antiques, and Ebenezer's own pet cat—now requires Ebenezer to fetch him a child as a feast. He isn't prone to caring about others, so he's especially surprised to find himself enjoying the company of the mischievous, unpleasant orphan, Bethany, whom he adopts and proceeds to fatten up for the beast. Meggitt-Phillips's debut is pure, droll silliness, with selfish, spoiled Ebenezer a surprisingly pleasant antihero whose moral quandaries (most of which have an obvious and ignored solution) are always accompanied with plenty of quips from the author and not a few long-suffering sighs. Bethany is a naughty, angry child who would make David Shannon proud, but the reader soon learns that her destructive tendencies are a veil for her feelings of abandonment. It's only natural that Ebenezer and Bethany have a happy ending, but Meggitt-Phillips throws in plenty of tension and chaos to keep the reader guessing at just how that ending will be achieved. Follath's pencil and pen illustrations have a comedic edge that's perfectly suited to the fast-paced prose. Bethany and Ebenezer's final scene brings this rollicking tale to a satisfying, heartwarming conclusion, but a final twist suggests the potential for a sequel. KP

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A droll tween take on The Picture of Dorian Gray. For more than five centuries, the superficially polite Ebenezer Tweezer has resided in an enormous house teeming with riches provided by an attic-dwelling beast. Their arrangement is simple: Ebenezer feeds the beast whatever it requests, and the beast vomits forth anything Ebenezer desires. What began with roast beef sandwiches soon gave way to more...unconventional fare, and the beast has vowed to withhold Ebenezer's 512th birthday present—an annual anti-aging potion—until it's served a human child. Following a few false starts, Ebenezer visits the contemptible Miss Fizzlewick's orphanage and adds Bethany, a churlish girl whose parents perished in a fire, to the beast's menu. Bethany's surly, sarcastic antics immediately make Ebenezer's life less than pleasurable, but the beast refuses to sup upon a scrawny child. Straightforward, third-person narration from Ebenezer's perspective neither preaches nor condescends, and a tight focus on titular characters makes pages fly by. As Ebenezer grows decrepit and battles a will demented as his own, he finds himself growing involuntarily fond of the girl he's fattening. Can this unlikely tandem outwit a truly inhuman monster? Meggitt-Phillips' ability to make readers squeal with delight, squirm in discomfort, and squawk with laughter make classical comparisons inevitable. Though wildly imaginative, the book is also ethnically homogenous, as nearly all characters are coded White. Bound to whet appetites. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Ebenezer Tweezer, "a terrible man with a wonderful life," is a solitary, golden-haired person possessed of a Beast in his attic, who gives him his heart's desires for a price: feasts in the form of rare objects and beasts. Approaching his 512th birthday, Ebenezer has most everything he wants; refrigerators full of food, a home "fifteen stories tall and twelve elephants wide"; save for the potion that keeps him young and handsome, which the Beast plans to withhold unless Ebenezer produces a human child for consumption. Acquiring Bethany Bogoff, an orphan who has been "nothing but trouble" since her parents died in a fire, Ebenezer finds himself saddled with a girl as contrary and spiteful as he is, one whom he has three days to fatten up as the two engage in a war of manipulations; over breakfasts, comics, and strong wills; until they find common ground. Debut author Meggitt-Phillips presents an archly told story filled with devious pranks and an appreciable, skillfully played redemption arc that heightens the emotional heft. Crisp black-and-white art by Follath (Joy) adds atmosphere. Ages 9: 13. Author's agent: Rachel Mann, Jo Unwin Literary. (Dec.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—At 511 years old, Ebenezer Tweezer has a wonderful life, despite doing nothing to deserve it. Every year he receives an anti-aging potion from a beast, and all he has to do in return is feed the beast whatever it wants—from statues to house cats to a rare purple-breasted parrot. But Ebenezer gets quite a shock when the beast decides what he really wants to try is a human child. Ebenezer adopts the obnoxious orphan Bethany, thinking she'll be easy to sacrifice. But much to their mutual surprise, the two have a lot to learn from each other. This book is delightful from the first sentence, reminiscent of Roald Dahl and Neil Gaiman at their cleverest. Ebenezer and Bethany are excellent foils, each despicable in their own way while slowly drawing out the other's best qualities. The story is at turns funny, shocking, and redemptive, and flows well through each twist. Side characters, while not taking up much scene time, are well developed and add depth. Follath's black-and-white illustrations emphasize the whimsical, and sometimes dark feel of the book. The ending, however, may give readers pause: While adding a darker tone, it feels out-of-place and opposes the hard-won redemption from the previous chapter. VERDICT This book will appeal to readers because of its clever humor, despicable characters, and shocking reveals. It will fit nicely alongside zanier books like those from Roald Dahl, Neil Gaiman's Fortunately, the Milk, and Lois Lowry's "The Willoughbys" series.—Kristin Brynsvold, Tuckahoe Elem. Sch., Arlington, VA

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

#2309494 (Vol. 02) Revenge of the Beast (Prebound)
written by Jack Meggitt-Phillips

Once upon a very badly behaved time, 511-year-old Ebenezer kept a beast in his attic. He would feed the beast all manner of objects and creatures and in return the beast would vomit him up expensive presents. But then the Bethany arrived. And Ebenezer secretly misses the beast's vomity gifts. Then there's Claudette, who's not been feeling herself recently. Has she eaten something that has disagreed with her?

978-1-5364-7681-1 ©2022 5 x 7-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 850

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Uh-oh. The malign magic creature thought to be extirpated in The Beast and the Bethany (2020) is back and bent on gobbling down deliciously hateful orphan Bethany at last--as well as anyone else who gets in the way. As the sly beast is hiding inside the body of apparently benign parrot Claudette, it takes some time for the penny to drop for Bethany and her thoroughly reformed adult ally and former nemesis Ebenezer Tweezer, who just cannot understand why all their sincere efforts to "de-beast" and do good after years of pranks and evil deeds are going horribly wrong. Along with plenty of darkly suggestive cartoon illustrations, Meggitt-Phillips strews the spaciouly leaded narrative with broad hints for readers and drives the tale to a hair- (or more accurately, feather) raising denouement that sees the beast undone by an act of selflessness . . . maybe. The author adds another thoroughly dislikable child to the mix, plus crowd-pleasing gross bits (earwax sandwiches, elephant-poop stink bombs) to brighten the farcical sequel's rather dark tone. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews any (2020), Ebenezer and Bethany struggle to become do-gooders. Troublemaking Bethany's working hard to change, and she wants Ebenezer--less enthusiastic but willing--to purge his beast-gifted luxuries and join her de-beasting mission. In flashbacks, readers see that lonely young Ebenezer's first friend was the beast; current-day Ebenezer knows he shouldn't miss the monster, but he kind of does. Furthermore, a significant difficulty in do-gooding is that neither hero knows how to be good. Luckily, they have Claudette, the Wintlorian purple-breasted parrot, for guidance--except Claudette's been feeling off ever since eating the beast. Though readers will be able to spot the not-so-vanquished beast operating through Claudette before the characters do, the exact schemes include intricate plans with details that still surprise. Bethany learns just how hard it is to overcome a bad reputation when she's sabotaged and then blamed for the fallout as the beast manipulates its way into a very public bad ending for her. The humor offers a delightful blend of dry eloquence and gross-out subject matter, as in the description of a building as "an architectural equivalent of someone who freely picks their nose in public." The resolution takes some clever thinking from Ebenezer but also a touch of deus ex machina. The story ends with a teaser for the next book. Some background characters in the illustrations bring racial diversity. Wickedly funny and surprisingly relatable beneath the exaggerated silliness. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Benchwarmers (Trade)

#2106919 (Vol. 01) Benchwarmers (Hardcover (Trade))
written by John Feinstein

Robby loves soccer, but he isn't very good. Andrea is a soccer superstar, but she had to fight to make the boys' team, and is riding the bench with Robby even though she's no doubt good enough to start. The rest of the boys start picking on her and Robby takes her side--but then a mysterious threat arrives, promising that someone will get hurt if Andi plays. Andi and Robby have to band together to find out who sent the threat--and in time for the championship game.

978-0-374-31203-9 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 830

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Jeff and Andi are super excited their sixth-grade classes now get a chance to play sports at their school. Unfortunately, Andi wants to play soccer, and there is no girls' team. The coach reluctantly allows her to try out, and despite her being one of the best players, he refuses to give her a spot on the team. Jeff finds this unfair?they could stand a chance at making it to the championships with Andi on their team?so he asks his sports-reporter father to feature her story. Viral backlash causes Coach Johnston to give Andi a spot; however, she faces discrimination from the coach, some fellow teammates, and other soccer teams, which means her victory is far from over. Feinstein's series opener doesn't offer any new ground to the "girl fights to be on boys' sports team" story, but he writes engaging characters and offers readers in-depth play-by-play sports action that results in a fun, fast-paced story that will appeal to readers who can't get enough sports fiction.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An all-boys soccer team is put to the test when a talented girl wants to join their ranks. Jeff Michaels is excited to learn that his middle school will now be offering sports teams for sixth graders in the fall: field hockey for girls and soccer for boys. When his female classmate Andrea "Andi" Carillo shows up for soccer tryouts, he's impressed by her skill on the field. Others, however, are upset and even angry that she's attempting to join the team. When Andi is unjustly excluded by a disgruntled coach, Jeff and Andi reach out to the media to pressure him into letting her on the team. Andi grapples for playing time and soon proves her strength on and off the field, but the team is still fractured by huge disagreements over Andi and even bigger egos. The team will have to learn to work together to reach their goal of winning the conference title. Feinstein includes detailed play-by-play of the middle school soccer matches that will be thrilling for soccer buffs but less exciting for the casual reader. Andi's grit and refusal to back down in the face of sexism are inspirational and reflect the real challenges facing student athletes today. It is mentioned briefly that one soccer teammate is Jewish and two are black; other characters are assumed white. Soccer fans will get a kick out of the game-day action in this straightforward series opener. (Fiction. 8-14) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4&6-A soccer story that shoots toward female empowerment but misses the goal. Jeff knows that Andi Carillo, the only girl trying out for Merion's 6th-grade soccer team, is one of the best players he's ever seen. So, when the list goes up and Andi is cut, Jeff brings in his TV sports reporter Dad to cover the story. All the attention gets Andi on the team, but their coach's resentment puts both of them on the bench. The question is how to get off of it. Jeff and Andi are poorly developed characters who only show growth on the field. Although writing about strong female soccer players is important, Andi shows no depth beyond her ability to make great passes and score goals. The story is rooted in the male gaze; no one would know of her greatness if not for the help and acceptance of her male counterparts and coaches. VERDICT A mediocre sports book for avid soccer fans. Not recommended.-Rebecca Fitzgerald, Harrison Public Library, NY Copyright 2019 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2167652 (Vol. 02) Game Changers (Hardcover (Trade))
written by John Feinstein

From a new coach's flagrant racism to a teammate's endless sabotage, best friends Andi Carillo and Jeff Michaels start basketball season mired in controversy. To make matters worse, the local media smells more than one juicy story. Will Andi and Jeff be able to help each other power through and find a way to put both their teams back on track?

978-0-374-31205-3 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 12.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

#2270364 (Vol. 03) Mixed Doubles (Hardcover (Trade))
written by John Feinstein

Andi Carillo may have been a soccer prodigy and a basketball standout, but tennis is where she really shines--she's eleven years old and nationally ranked. For her, the sport is just for fun, but suddenly agents are crawling out of the woodwork to offer her deals. Her best friend, Jeff Michaels, is a talented player himself, but he's been dropped into the number-two slot in spite of a perfect record--and he's getting a little jealous of Andi's star potential.

978-0-374-31207-7 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Game, set, match for two young athletes, on the court and beyond. Having gone from Benchwarmers (2019) to Game Changers (2020), sixth grade jock buddies Jeff and Andrea finish off Feinstein's trilogy by leading their school's tennis squad through a series of hard-fought competitions. Tight and quick as the sports action is, though--and readers will need to be well up on tennis scoring and terminology to keep pace--it's what goes on between matches that drives the plot. Though Andi has excelled at soccer and basketball, tennis is her best sport--and she's so good that agents are sidling up to her with business cards and even contracts in hand. His dad being a sports journalist, Jeff sniffs a story...and so it is that the two enlist their parents and other allies to gather documents and testimonials with the aim of exposing the slimy, unethical practice of inveigling talented child athletes into turning pro. Adding in a toxic sports parent and even a teacher/coach who turns out to be working for an agency, the author lays out an alluring but sordid picture of big bucks, glittering promises, and slick legal tricks. Andi remains untempted as she and Jeff battle their way to a tense season finale capped by clear signs that their friendship is (at last) moving to a new phase. Most of the cast is presumed White. Tests and triumphs for two middle schoolers, folded into a harsh indictment of those who would exploit them. (Sports fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal f Feinstein's "Benchwarmers" series features middle grade athletes Andi Carillo and Jeff Michaels in an action-packed tennis season. Jeff is ranked as the number two tennis player, while Andi faces the razor-sharp attention that comes with being a tennis prodigy. In place of heartbreaks, popularity contests, and embarrassing moments, Feinstein portrays a firsthand account of the elite tennis world. With its fresh angle, the narrative becomes an investigation of sports agencies and the startling reality of what adults will do for fame and fortune. Placing Andi and Jeff in the action-oriented, investigative sports journalist's role, Feinstein presents a deep account of elite athletes' young lives. Although the book ends abruptly and some of the gender roles feel antiquated, Feinstein emphasizes the value of sportsmanship, friendship, and, most importantly, a real longing to play the game. VERDICT The perfect pick for sports enthusiasts, budding sports journalists, or those who might wonder about the tennis world.—Jennifer Strattman

Best Babysitters Ever (Trade)

Quantity
Unit Price

#2107260 (Vol. 02) Good, the Bad, and the Bossy (Hardcover (POB))
written by Caroline Cala

1 $13.99

Just when Malia, Dot, and Bree (aka the Best Babysitters Ever) corner the Playa Del Mar babysitting market, their lives get even busier. Malia's evil older sister ropes her into a thankless internship. Dot must win the science fair. And Bree's brand new cat turns out to be a holy terror.

978-1-328-85090-4 ©2019 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 4.4 Lexile 720

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In this follow-up to Best Babysitters Ever (2019), Malia, Bree, and Dot need money to go see their favorite pop star in concert. Problem is, these middle schoolers don't have time to increase their babysitting service hours to earn it. Malia is forced into an internship with her evil older sister and an even more demanding boss. Bree has just adopted a ferocious cat that she has to watch at all times to prevent it from destroying the entire house. Dot has to get ready for the big science fair. To solve their concert fundraising problem, Malia comes up with the idea to subcontract to "satellite" sitters who can babysit in their place while paying them a percentage. After training their new recruits, the girls soon realize it's more complicated than they imagined. With third-person perspective shifting chapter by chapter, the girls struggle with their responsibilities while slowly regretting their decision as they discover that the satellite sitters threaten to replace their bosses in the hearts of their charges. With lessons smoothly woven into the storytelling--Bree's cat's psychotherapist has advice that applies amazingly well to humans, for instance--the narrative neatly balances humor and wisdom. The book's cover shows Malia to be black, Dot to be white, and Bree to have light brown skin and long, dark hair. This smart, humorous tale should inspire girls to dream big, experiment, and problem-solve through challenges. (Fiction. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-7—In the second book in the series, Malia, Dot, and Bree, also known as the Best Babysitters Ever, feel as if they have cornered the babysitting market. They have plenty of clients and are on their way to earning money. However, their lives start to get busy: Malia's older, seemingly more successful sister convinces their mother to force Malia into a thankless internship with a terrible boss. Dot will stop at nothing to win the science fair, and Bree's new cat turns out to be a raging terror. Malia is frustrated by the group's lack of commitment, which leads her to an idea: they can hire new babysitters and keep a cut of the new sitters' wages. They think this is a foolproof plan, but it soon falls flat. This light, amusing installment features relatable characters who are imperfect yet well meaning, with present, supportive parents. However, it is difficult to believe that anyone would pay "stacks of twenties" for tween babysitters, or hire all three of them at the same time to watch just a few children. VERDICT A solid purchase for readers looking for alternatives to Rachel RenTe Russell's "Dork Diaries" or Jennifer and Matthew Holms's "Baby Mouse" series.—Amy Caldera, Dripping Springs Middle School, TX

#2148997 (Vol. 03) Miss Impossible (Hardcover (POB))
written by Caroline Cala

Quantity 1 Unit Price $13.99

All of the babysitting in the world couldn't prepare the girls for their unusual new charge, and even though Zelda should be the one who's embarrassed that three girls her age are getting paid to babysit her, she relishes the chance to tease them on her home turf. Is she really evil or just misunderstood?

978-1-328-85091-1 ©2020 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 7.0

Best of Iggy (Trade)

#2280763 (Vol. 04) Iggy the Legend (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Annie Barrows

Quantity 1 Unit Price $13.99

Grownups are always changing the rules! When grown-ups make money, it's good. But when Iggy makes money, all of a sudden it's bad. When grown-ups find something interesting on the sidewalk, it's finders keepers. But when Iggy finds something (very) interesting, finders keepers turns into You're In Trouble. Why is Iggy being blamed for something they never said he couldn't do?

978-0-593-32533-9 ©2022 5 x 8 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 1.0 Lexile 640

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 2-4—Iggy's adventures continue in this series installment. Iggy tries to convince readers that he is not responsible for a get-rich-quick scheme involving the tooth fairy. In the beginning, Iggy is thrilled when his best friend Diego builds a tree house. He is less thrilled when Diego decides to form a members-only club that requires members pay $11.60 to play in the tree house. Iggy tries several methods to raise the money but with no success. When he finds a bag of teeth on the sidewalk, he comes up with a brilliant plan to gather funds. The short chapters and engaging text will make this a fun and accessible work for those who are newer to chapter books. Readers will enjoy Iggy's silliness and his attempts to prove that he is not 100 percent to blame for his actions. Readers of previous entries will enjoy continuing Iggy's adventures. The illustrations are suitably silly and add to the fun of the text. VERDICT Buy this amusing title if the other books in the series are popular.—V. Lynn Christiansen

#2333089 (Vol. 05) Iggy Rules the Animal Kingdom (Library Binding (Trade))
written by Annie Barrows

They're nuts about babies, but they tell their 9-year-olds to be more mature. They complain constantly about how old they are, and then they tell their kids to grow up. So when Iggy's mom and dad say he can't have a puppy because he's not mature and responsible, Iggy develops an excellent plan to prove them wrong. Like any great plan, it involves secrecy, strategy, and a chinchilla. There's also some screaming, but that's not Iggy's fault.

978-0-593-32537-7 ©2023 5-1/4 x 8 128 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 1.0 Lexile 660

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

#2144649 (Vol. 01) Best of Iggy (Hardcover (POB))
written by Annie Barrows

Meet Iggy Frangi. He's not a bad kid, he's really not. Okay, so he's done a few (a few is anything up to 100) bad things. And okay, he's not very sorry about most of them. People make a big deal about nothing. What's a little pancake here and there? Is that something to get mad about? Iggy doesn't think so. No one got hurt, so there's no problem. No one got hurt except for that one time, that one time when the Best Idea Ever turned into the Worst Idea of All Time.

978-1-9848-1330-5 ©2020 5 x 7-3/4 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 1.0 Lexile 550

Quantity 1
Unit Price $13.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly "All of us do things we wish we hadn't done" begins this lively illustrated series opener about Iggy Frangi, a mischievous, good-hearted nine-year-old who frequently lands himself in trouble and only sometimes regrets it. The omniscient narrator describes Iggy's world with a dry tone ("He has to stay in his room until dinnertime. It's two thirty in the afternoon"), detailing the events; described as "extenuating circumstances"; that have contributed to Iggy's ill-advised actions. Short chapters tell the story of three occurrences: Iggy inadvertently goading Jeremy Greerson into jumping off the roof onto a trampoline, raiding the family medicine cabinet for an overzealous prank, and racing classroom desks toward an unsuspecting fourth-grade teacher. Of the three, the last inspires regret and thoughtful introspection. With Iggy, Barrows (the Ivy and Bean series) has created a realistic kid; passionate, funny, and sometimes misguided; whom readers will surely root for as he gains awareness of the relationship between choices and consequences. Black-and-white illustrations by Ricks highlight Iggy's antic nature. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Liza Dawson, Liza Dawson Assoc. Illustrator's agent: Minju Chang, BookStop Literary. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Iggy isn't a bad kid—he just lives by the motto "It Seemed Like a Good Idea at the Time." He blames his friends, his parents, his teacher, but will he ever take responsibility for his actions? Scene transitions feel choppy, but the plot is amusing and Iggy is relatable—though mischievous, he's a good kid deep down. While character development is thin, the cast is engaging and grows on the reader. Funny, detailed illustrations complement the text well, though the font may be difficult to read for some. VERDICT Fans of Barrows's "Ivy + Bean" series and books about kids who often find themselves landing in trouble will appreciate this laugh-out-loud tale. For libraries where humorous realistic fiction is popular.—Kira Moody, Salt Lake County Library Services

#2179693 (Vol. 02) Iggy Is Better Than Ever (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Annie Barrows

No one gets hurt, but the last car involved happens to be driven by their never-smiling,

Quantity 1
Unit Price $13.99

Iggy-detesting principal. In order to not get caught, Iggy decides he'll be so good at school that he'll be invisible. But the tension of all that goodness builds and builds in Iggy, and, no surprise, it bursts out in a gasp-inducing, very bad way.

978-1-9848-1333-6 ©2020 5 x 8 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 1.0 Lexile 640

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 2-5 In a sequel to The Best of Iggy (2020), this fourth-grader boy devises an ingenious prank to play on passing vehicles, including the school principal's car. After several tense days of waiting for retribution or at least a lecture, Iggy accidentally knocks down an elderly teacher with a basketball at recess. Finally, a hastily made bike ramp leads to a fall, lots of stitches, and an unexpected benefit. Inventive in his mischief-making but short-sighted about its probable results, Iggy has talent for trouble. And, Barrow assures her audience, he won't learn anything from his mistakes, though she'll ensure that readers do. She spells out each lesson along the way, printed in large type to ensure that no one misses her edifying advice (and also because, when forewarned, readers can tell which sections to skip). Ricks, who illustrated Adler's Geisel Award-winner Don't Throw It to Mo (2015), excels at expressing the comedy in Iggy's misadventures. And while humor is notoriously hard to write, Barrows makes it look easy in this episodic, amusing, and occasionally hilarious chapter book. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Iggy finds that trying to be good is a possible recipe for disaster. Iggy Frangi, a 9-year-old fourth grader first introduced in The Best of Iggy (2020), is not particularly adept at anticipating adverse outcomes, and his analysis after things go wrong is not especially accurate. He's more of a doer than a dreamer. "Mostly Iggy gets in trouble. He does Thing 1, and then Thing 2 happens, and then, unfortunately, Thing 3 happens too." In a wry direct address, the narrator/apologist affirms that Iggy will not be transformed, that this is not about a kid who is "better at the end than he was in the beginning"--not "about a kid who plants flowers by the side of the road." Thing 1: Iggy, who appears White, and two of his best friends, Diego, who has brown skin, and Arch, who appears Black, discover a creative use for gardening tape. As a result of Thing 1, Thing 2 happens: Iggy accidentally clobbers (but doesn't permanently damage) an elderly White teacher with a basketball. Thing 2 leads to Thing 3: a spectacular and, as it turns out, literal face-plant, "one of the best things that ever happened" in Iggy's life. Iggy wouldn't hesitate to do it all over again, and his fans will be the richer for it. Ricks' sketch illustrations feature lighthearted diagrams and cartoon interpretations of Iggy's thoughts and misadventures. Very, very funny. (Fiction. 7-10) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

	Quantity	Unit Price
	1	$13.99

#2226563 (Vol. 03) Iggy Is the Hero of Everything (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Annie Barrows

From Iggy's point of view, his plan was genius, pure genius. From Iggy's point of view, he's saved (a) his candy, (b) his family, and (c) the toaster. From Iggy's point of view, he should get a trophy. And respect. And more candy. So what if Rudy Heckie disagrees? Rudy Heckie has been wrong before and he'll be wrong again. Rudy has a scar now, and scars are cool!

978-1-9848-1336-7 ©2021 5 x 8 128 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 1.0 Lexile 670

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Iggy's intrepid and clever selflessness is open to misinterpretation. This installment in the chronicles of 9-year-old Iggy Frangi's (Iggy Is Better Than Ever, 2020, etc.) encounters with unintended consequences examines intent as an element crucial to gallantry. After learning of a break-in at the Heckies' house nearby, Iggy has a plan for thwarting the potential theft of his best Halloween candy, along with his family's other valuables. It's pretty simple: Set a decoy and dig a trap. It's hardly Iggy's fault when annoying 7-year-old Rudy Heckie is injured during the trap construction. (No, Rudy's finger is not severed.) Nor is it Iggy's fault that Mr. Heckie hurts his tailbone when he trips over Rudy and falls into the trap dug with the shovel that didn't sever Rudy's finger. The pace and energy of Barrows' narrative matches Iggy's focused enthusiasm for his (somewhat ill-conceived) plan. The apologist narrator, very much on Team Iggy, provides evidence that points to Iggy's heroism. Ricks' cartoon illustrations are a lively and hilarious complement to Iggy's thoughts and experiences. In them, Iggy, his family, and the Heckies appear White. Iggy's charm is substantial, so blithely optimistic are his intentions and so singular (yet familiar to any well-meaning human) his way of seeing the world. Iggy's ideas are clear to him--it's everyone else who ends up asking, "What were you thinking?" This genuine and energetic, if hapless, antiheroic hero grows on you. (Fiction. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 2-4--Nine-year-old Iggy is this book's main character. Which means, in his mind, he's the most important one and the hero of everything in the story. He has a vivid imagination, the best of intentions, and a knack for getting into trouble. When the Heckies, his neighbors, are robbed and Rudy Heckie's Halloween candy is taken, Iggy gets nervous. When he overhears his parents offering Rudy the rest of his Halloween candy, Iggy decides to take matter into his own hands. First, he uses the strongbox his grandfather gave him to protect the rest of his candy. Then he starts digging a hole to capture the thieves when they come again. Will his plan work, or will everything go wrong? The illustrations are fun and engaging and complement the text well. The plot is simple but entertaining. Iggy is a humorous, realistic character that young readers will identify with. The other characters are a little two-dimensional, but understandable considering the story is told through Iggy's perspective. Iggy is cued as white. VERDICT Readers who like Megan McDonald's "Stink" series will enjoy this book. A great addition to libraries where humorous realistic fiction is popular.--Kira Moody, Salt Lake County Lib. Svcs. Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Best Wishes (Trade)

#2290614 (Vol. 01) Best Wishes (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sarah Mlynowski

When Becca's best friend, Hailey, says she doesn't want to be friends anymore, Becca is devastated. But then Becca receives a mysterious package in the mail with a beautiful bracelet and a note that tells her to make a wish. So Becca puts on the bracelet--why not, right?--and wishes to have friends. Lots of friends. So many friends.
 978-1-338-62825-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.2 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $15.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Be careful what you wish for. Becca, who lives on New York City's Upper West Side, is planning a sleepover for her 10th birthday. But her best, and only, friend, Harper, seems uninterested, admitting that she has a new best friend. After the two have a falling out, Becca is truly friendless. Everything changes when she receives a mysterious box containing a magic bracelet with a poem saying that the bracelet will ease her sadness and will provide a single wish. She is instructed to mail the bracelet forward when it is no longer needed. Becca wishes everyone wanted to be her pal, and almost immediately, kids are talking to her, complimenting her, and inviting her to sit with them at lunch. It all seems wonderful but soon gets out of hand. She now wants the bracelet off. But it's not so easy. Becca narrates her story via a letter to an unknown Addie Asante, describing in meticulous detail her adventures in the realm of magic, holding nothing back as she questions events, eventually finding new understanding and new friends. Becca is Jewish and depicted as light-skinned in Vee's black-and-white illustrations; she seamlessly includes descriptions of family traditions. Harper is cued South Asian. Readers will love Becca for her humor, honesty, kindness, and insecurities. Many mysteries remain unsolved, but Addie is to be the next recipient of the box and probably the hero of the next book in this new series. A coming-of-age tale told with humor, compassion, and more than a touch of magic. (Fantasy. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Mlynowski (the Whatever After series) kicks off this first installment of a multi-author series positioned as The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants for middle graders, written as a letter from the book's narrator to another girl. The magic begins on New York City's Upper West Side, when Jewish fifth grader Becca receives a mysterious package with no return address; it holds a magical gold and turquoise bracelet with the power to grant one wish. Becca, who has been dumped by her best friend in the lead-up to her 10th birthday, makes the mistake of wishing for "lots and lots of friends." Things get out of hand after Becca's popularity takes a gigantic leap, resulting in changing relationships with classmates and even her strict mother. But Becca finds the attention insubstantial, making even her well-attended birthday feel like a bust. Then there's the matter of the blond stranger who is pursuing Becca, interested in gaining the bracelet's power for herself. The whimsical premise and attendant lessons may be nothing new, but an empathetic heroine and winningly absurd situations offer over-the-top hilarity. Vee's b&w cartoon illustrations portray Becca with light skin. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Laura Dail, Laura Dail Literary. (Sept.)

#2323262 (Vol. 02) Sister Switch (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sarah Mlynowski

Being Sophie is amazing: Addie can hang out at the cafe after school, have her own room, and sing in the talent show. But as her new long-distance friend, Becca (who had the bracelet last time), warns her, having a wish come true can get really messy. Plus, in a twist of magical chaos, Addie's big sister has become the baby sister, and the baby sister has become ADDIE!
 978-1-338-62828-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $15.99

Reviews by: Booklist Addie Asante, a fifth-grader, is the middle child between Sophie, a high-achieving seventh-grader, and Camille, an energetic member of the pre-K class at her sisters' school. One morning, Addie opens a package containing a bracelet that she slips onto her wrist without reading the warning not to make a wish while wearing it. Fed up with her siblings, she arrives at school and wishes she wasn't in the middle between her sisters. Immediately, she transforms into Sophie, whose teacher waves her into a seventh-grade classroom. Meanwhile, Camille finds herself looking like Addie and enjoying fifth grade, while Sophie-as-Camille looks miserable in pre-K. Attractive grayscale illustrations portray the main characters within their family and at their school. Using a body switch to enlighten characters about others' viewpoints isn't new, but the writing here provides welcome humor as well as insights. And while the bracelet adds a spark of magic, Addie's first-person narrative is primarily realistic, particularly when portraying the three sisters. Book two in the Best Wishes series is engaging and fun.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews It is Addie's turn with the magic bracelet in this installment of the Best Wishes series. Ten-year-old Addie Asante, a fifth grader in Columbus, Ohio, tells her tale in a letter to an unknown Lucy. Sandwiched in the middle between bossy, studious older sister Sophie, 12, and indulged little sister Camille, 5, "go-with-the-flow" Addie is used to suppressing her own desires to keep the peace with friends and family. When a mysterious package arrives with the bracelet and instructions, she puts it on at once, ignoring an enclosed warning from Becca, the previous holder of the bracelet, until it is too late. When, in an argument with Sophie, Addie wishes she weren't the middle sister, the bracelet tightens, then glows and warms, and suddenly, the sisters have switched bodies--Addie is Sophie, Sophie is Camille, and Camille is Addie. Mayhem, confusion, twists and turns, and even laugh-out-loud hilarity ensue as each sister tries to cope with the changes. Addie can text with Becca for more information and warnings (including about the strange blond woman who wants the bracelet) but must find the solution herself. Of course, there's a happy, heartwarming ending as Addie and her sisters share their feelings and come to understand each other. Now it's Lucy's turn. Addie and her family present Black in Vee's drawings; Becca is Jewish and light-skinned. Delightful, with just the right touch of magic. (Fantasy. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2352207 (Vol. 03) Time After Time (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sarah Mlynowski

Lucy Usathorn of Fort Worth, Texas is super excited for her class trip to the Natural History Museum, where her dad works. Sure, Ms. Brock, the strict school librarian who happens to be dating Lucy's dad (awkward) is chaperoning, but it'll still be the best day ever, right? Wrong! Lucy has to watch in shock and humiliation as her dad proposes to Ms. Brock. Lucy is distraught.

978-1-338-62831-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$15.99

Reviews by: Booklist A bright but bossy fifth-grader, Lucy receives a bracelet by mail, along with warnings to consult the previous owners before making a wish while wearing it. This magical bracelet grants one wish to each wearer, but the results are sometimes unexpected. Lucy has been looking forward to the fifth-graders' museum field trip, where her divorced Thai American father will give a presentation, but when he uses the occasion to propose to the school librarian, Lucy is shocked and distressed. She wishes for a do-over of the day. Her wish is granted, day after day, with a series of unfortunate outcomes until she learns to consider others' needs and desires as well as her own. Each book in the Best Wishes series has a new main character who receives the magical bracelet from the protagonist of the previous book. Illustrated with occasional grayscale pictures, the third volume picks up the interwoven narrative where Sister Switch (2023) left off and becomes a cautionary tale for the next bracelet recipient. A fun chapter book with a touch of magic.

Beyond Baylor (Trade)

#1967711 (Vol. 01) Guide to the Other Side (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Robert Imfeld

A boy and his ghostly twin sister work together to pass messages from the beyond in this funny paranormal debut. There are a few things you should know about Baylor Bosco: He's thirteen-years-old, he has a twin sister, and he really does NOT like ghosts...which is problematic because he's a medium and sees ghostseverywhere. Oh, and his twin sister, Kristina? She's a ghost too. They've been working as a pair for years, expertly relaying messages from ghosts to their still-living loved ones. Baylor's even managed to come up with an introductory phrase--one that he has to use far too often. But when a strange ghost shows up close to Halloween, a grown man, covered in a sheet, with only his black leather shoes showing from the bottom, Baylor starts to wonder if something else has taken notice of him. And when his sister goes missing, somehow ghost-napped, he's forced to figure out the truth about the Sheet Man and his sister's disappearance, all without his usual ghostly ambassador.

978-1-4814-6636-3 ©2016 288 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8-Thirteen-year-old Baylor Bosco has a strange connection to dead people. Though Baylor truly dislikes the ghosts he constantly encounters, his twin sister, Kristina, faithfully helps him handle this special gift. Kristina's powers are even more extraordinary than her brother's because she herself is a ghost. When a ghoulish spirit shows up close to Halloween--covered by a single sheet and wearing brown buckled shoes--Kristina is mysteriously ghostnapped and evil forces run amok. Armed with odd talismans and accompanied by supportive spiritual guides, Baylor courageously faces a dark and threatening unknown to save his twin. This first installment in a new series features goofy ghost humor and spooky, spine-tingling suspense. Baylor's quirky dialogue with pesky ghosts is a highlight, as many bombard him with hilarious requests to relay to the living. The narrative lags a bit after Baylor connects the sheet man with an ex-wife and girlfriend. There is also a romantic side story between Baylor's two friends, which is somewhat out of sync with the main plot. Despite this, fans of anything otherworldly should be instantly entranced. VERDICT A unique ghost story loaded with just the right blend of laugh-out-loud humor and suspense. Anticipate high demand for this series starter.--Etta Anton, Yeshiva of Central Queens, NY Copyright 2016. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2026815 (Vol. 02) Baylor's Guide to Dreadful Dreams (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Robert Imfeld

With assistance from a powerful amulet, Baylor Bosco finds himself with a dazzling new ability: he can walk through dreams. Not only his own, but those of other people! Using a starry, otherworldly portal called Loved Ones' Lane, Baylor tumbles through the dreams of his friends, family--even his cranky aunt.

978-1-4814-6639-4 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 770

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Thirteen-year-old Baylor Bosco has a gift: he's a medium tasked with passing on dead people's messages to the living. It has earned him a fan base of Bayliebers as well as his fair share of skeptics. When his dead but ever-present twin sister, Kristina (a ghost), helps him make a talisman, Baylor acquires an entirely new skill: he can enter other people's dreams. In the vast ocean of his dreamland, he discovers two children floating on a boat, lost and close to dying. He assumes they are a dream until he sees their faces on the news the next day, their parents begging for clues to their children's location. Again it seems Baylor's special powers make him uniquely qualified to help. This second book in the Beyond Baylor series carries on with the same spunky, sarcastic, world-weary humor, and the light tone provides a nice balance to the darker topics. The plot is thin, and the danger is so couched in humor that there's not much at stake, but Imfeld's wonderful imagination has spun a story that is still quite fun.--Worthington, Becca Copyright 2018 Booklist

Billy Smith and the Goblins (Trade)

#1985828 (Vol. 01) Goblin Crown (Paperback (Trade))
written by Robert Hewitt Wolfe

Billy Smith is having a rough first day of high school. The new kid at exclusive Francis Drake Prep, Billy embarrasses himself in front of fiery, beautiful Lexi Aquino. He makes an instant enemy in Kurt Novac, the school's surly star quarterback. Then suddenly Billy, Lexi, and Kurt are mysteriously transported to an underworld teeming with goblins, strange animal hybrids, and powerful magic--the fact that they're stuck there is probably Billy's fault, too.

978-1-68162-612-3 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 336 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 770

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7 Up-Readers who fervently wish for the ability to jump into a mythical world like Middle-earth will enjoy this tale. Nerdy new kid Billy's first day of school is going terribly, but it gets worse when he accidentally and completely mysteriously transports himself, Lexi, and jerky quarterback Kurt to the Ironspine Mountains. The intrepid teens are soon confronted by a group of strange creatures that turn out to be goblins. The leader of the small band, Hop, explains the dire situation: hostile forces are coming to kill all goblins, a false goblin king has taken the throne, and only the true human king can save goblinkind. In a world where light and dark magic rage against each other, the three young adults must battle their way through hardships to uncover the secret of who is the true heir to the goblin throne. The writing moves swiftly, but alternation among multiple perspectives (some goblin, some human) is not always smoothly navigated--at some points the narratives seem to be running on different time lines, which could cause some head-scratching. While the world-building is sound and intriguing, the many characters feel stereotypical, bordering on stock. Voracious fantasy readers will tear through and probably enjoy this novel, but don't expect it to be in high demand. VERDICT An additional purchase for larger collections.-Abby Bussen, Muskego Public Library, WI Copyright 2016. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2064126 (Vol. 02) Fallen Star (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Robert Hewitt Wolfe

With help from his friends, Billy Smith--the unlikeliest of heroes--overthrew the corrupt General Sawtooth and claimed the Goblin Crown. But his perilous journey to save the goblin race has just begun. The powerful Hanorian Army is gathered at the gates of Kiranok, threatening to invade the goblin city and wipe out everyone within.
978-1-68162-616-1 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 336 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 780

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$31.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7 Up-Billy's life would be easier if he, Lexi, and Kurt hadn't magically slipped into Kiranok, a goblin city carved into a mountain in a parallel world. At home in San Francisco, he'd be stressing about school. In Kiranok, Billy Smith, the newly crowned king, worries about saving his people from extinction in the war against their human Hanorian enemies, and skirting assassination attempts by three rogue goblin wizards. His previous tormenter, star quarterback Kurt, has become a loyal ally, fighting alongside goblin soldier Hop. And Lexi is learning how to wield her fire magic, giving Billy another weapon in his arsenal. Unfortunately, the Hanorians have more wizards, a larger army, and a ruthless agenda. The newest installment in the trilogy picks up where The Goblin Crown left off, alternating among six viewpoints with a tenacity that was not quite as fluid in book one. Cliff-hangers and bad luck abound, compelling readers ever onward to a chilling ending that will leave them impatient for the final installment. Characters are fleshed out in greater detail this volume, giving their conflicting feelings and actions more heft. Wolfe's world-building and connection with his characters feel almost effortless, and the book includes appendices reminiscent of The Silmarillion. VERDICT A must-buy for where The Goblin Crown is popular.-Abby Bussen, Muskego Public Library, WI Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2165555 (Vol. 03) Final Drop (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Robert Hewitt Wolfe

After being magically transported to another world with two other high school students, perennial outsider Billy Smith has become the unlikely king of a goblin civilization. With the help of his first day of high school crush, Lexi Aquino, now a powerful wizard, quarterback turned warrior Kurt Novac, and a cowardly but wily goblin named Hop, Billy has successfully repelled a human invasion of the goblins' underground city, Kiranok.
978-1-68162-619-2 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 336 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$31.99

Bite Risk (Trade)

#2329959 (Vol. 01) Bite Risk (Hardcover (Trade))
written by S. J. Wills

Thirteen-year-old Sel lives in the remote, isolated town of Tremorglade, where nothing interesting ever seems to happen. Well, unless you count the one night a month when the full moon rises and kids like him must lock up their parents while they transform into werewolves (though Tremorgladers prefer to call them Rippers). But that's the whole world's new normal since the Disruption changed everything well before Sel was born.
978-1-6659-3800-6 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Blackberry Farm (Trade)

#2100877 (Vol. 01) Becket List (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adele Griffin

Everything is changing for Becket Branch. From subways to sidewalks to safety rules, Becket is a city kid born and raised. Now the Branch family is trading urban bustle for big green fields and moving to Gran's farm, where Becket has to make sense of new routines from feeding animals to baling hay.

978-1-61620-790-8 ©2019 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 710

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly ecide to move from the city to live on Gran's Blackberry Farm, Becket Branch, 9, doesn't think she'll miss much; except, maybe, her best friend Caleb, the apartment she's grown up in, and the egg and cheese on a roll from Sugarman's Deli. Still, she is determined to put on a brave, happy face so that her twin brother, Nicholas, won't be even more upset about the move than he already is. Armed with her growing list, "How to Be a Country Kid," Becket is ready to have new adventures (standing up to a mean chicken, attending Young Explorers Camp), make new friends, and (she hopes) get a dog. Things don't end up going the way she plans, though, and she soon discovers that country living isn't as easy as she'd thought. Heartwarming prose by Griffin (the Oodlethunksseries) is as energetic as Becket herself, while expressive spot art by Pham (Stop That Yawn!) reinforces the story's action and breaks up the text for younger readers. In the end, Becket learns to take Gran's message to heart: "That's life.... Most reliable thing about it are the twists and turns." Final art not seen by PW. Ages 7: 11. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 2-4-Becket Branch and her family are moving from the city to her grandmother's farm in the country, and Becket is very excited about all the changes that are coming her way. She keeps a watchful eye for what she calls "Beautiful alerts" or any wonderful thing she wants to make a note of. She also keeps a list of all the new experiences she will be having as a country kid, including doing barnyard chores and making a new best friend. Naturally, she hits a few rough patches along the way. The animals don't always cooperate, her new potential best friend seems more interested in befriending her twin brother, and her senior citizen city dog isn't quite the country dog she was wishing for. But it is all part of the many new experiences that country life has to offer. Becket is an outgoing, refreshingly self-confident protagonist, and although she may sometimes come across as a bit pushy to her fellow characters, her enthusiasm is infectious. Readers will appreciate her ability to bounce back from whatever life hands her. Pham's sketch drawings scattered throughout enhance the energy and humor of the story. -VERDICT Give this to kids who enjoy stories with plucky female protagonists. Recommended for most collections.--Jessica -Marie, Salem Public Library, OR Copyright 2019. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2239354 (Vol. 02) All Pets Allowed (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adele Griffin

Becket Branch wants a dog for her tenth birthday. But her twin brother, Nicholas, has secretly been wishing for a cat. Lucky for Becket and Nicholas, their animal-loving parents have an animal-loving surprise for them: they're going to the local shelter and adopting both a cat and a dog.

978-1-64375-073-6 ©2021 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

Reviews by: Booklist Carried away with the awesome thought that she and her twin, Nicholas, will be celebrating their tenth birthday on the tenth day of the tenth month, Becket makes big plans for their party and invites all their classmates. Quiet and somewhat introverted, Nicholas would much prefer a small family gathering, but as usual, he lets his enthusiastic, effervescent sister prevail. Their parents, both vets, let each twin choose a pet as their birthday gift. Soon Becket is attempting to train Dibs, her easily spooked dog, while Nicholas is getting to know Gift, his confident, charismatic cat. When Dibs gets lost at the school fair, an unexpected hero comes to the rescue. Becket's first-person narrative draws readers into her point of view but clearly shows how other characters react to her opinions. The sequel to The Becket List (2020), this attractive early chapter book includes one or two grayscale drawings on almost every double-page spread, depicting the characters in action while clearly conveying the emotional content of the scenes. A welcome addition to the engaging Blackberry Farm series.

Blight Harbor (Prebound)

#2328410 (Vol. 01) Clackity (Prebound)

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

written by Lora Senf

Evie Von Rathe lives in Blight Harbor—the seventh-most haunted town in America—with her Aunt Desdemona, the local paranormal expert. Des doesn't have many rules except one: Stay out of the abandoned slaughterhouse at the edge of town. But when her aunt disappears into the building, Evie goes searching for her. There she meets The Clackity, a creature who lives in the shadows and seams of the slaughterhouse. Evie must embark on a journey into a strange otherworld filled with hungry witches, penny-eyed ghosts, and a memory-thief, all while being pursued by a dead man whose only goal is to add Evie to his collection of lost souls.

978-1-5364-8021-4 ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 750

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Senf's atmospheric tale will make the hairs on the back of your neck stand up. Evie is 12 and came to live in Blight Harbor with her aunt Desdemona after her parents died. Blight Harbor has a lot of supernatural problems as the seventh-most haunted town in America. When Aunt Des disappears, Evie meets a scary presence called the Clackity hiding out in a slaughterhouse. He sends Evie on a quest to save her aunt, during which she must cross over into an eerie realm and search seven houses to find the only family she has left, all while being chased by an evil ghost. The setting of Blight Harbor is already strange and intriguing, with its witches and lost souls, but Senf's adventure story is hard to put down because of its grounding emotional impact, especially the importance of facing some of life's darkest truths in order to move on. Fans of David Almond's Skellig, Holly Black's Doll Bones (2013), or Katherine Arden's Small Spaces quartet won't be disappointed by this. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Evie already lost her parents, and she sure as heck isn't going to lose her beloved aunt Desdemona, the town's local expert on all things paranormal. Desdemona has disappeared into the abandoned, likely haunted, slaughterhouse at the edge of town, and when Evie follows her, she meets the Clackity, a terrifying creature who is every bit as scary as his name implies. Thus begins a horrifying adventure that sends Evie through a nightmarish series of houses, having made a deal that if she brings him the ghost of a serial killer who lurks around this otherworld then she can have her aunt back from him. Of course, best not to trust monsters who make grand promises, and Evie soon realizes it is up to her grit, cleverness, and kindness to pull her through. Each house is distinct in its misery and creepiness, from an abandoned abattoir that would be plenty haunted even if it wasn't a gateway to an even worse place to a twisted replica of the house Evie shared with her parents. The serial killer's jaunty whistle signals him inexorably closing in; John Jeffrey Pope has not lost any of his malice from when he menaced Evie's small town a century earlier, and the likelihood that Evie will indeed save herself and her aunt does little to tone down the terror. Evie is vulnerable and scrappy, and readers will likely empathize with her and wonder if they, too, could have boldly prioritized fearless action over a fearful state of mind. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Evelyn Von Rathe is on a twisted, spooky hunt for her aunt, who has been taken into a supernatural maze by an evil creature called The Clackity. Blight Harbor is one of the most haunted towns in America, and 12-year-old Evie's Aunt Desdemona, who has cared for her since her parents died, is well versed on the otherworldly. However, when Aunt Des goes to investigate the town's abandoned abattoir, she disappears. Despite its being off-limits, Evie goes in after her and makes a bargain with The Clackity, a demented, sharp-toothed creature: She will find her aunt and in return, fetch him the ghost of serial killer John Jeffrey Pope, who famously used the slaughterhouse for killing humans in the early 20th century. What awaits Evie as she crosses into the other world are seven dangerous, cursed, booby-trapped houses that she must navigate in order to save Aunt Des. Senf's worldbuilding is fantastical and compelling, the scares hair-raising. Evie is a capable, vulnerable, brave, and anxious hero; she's real. She hangs tough, with a magic sparrow companion serving as a sidekick, savior, and coach. While Senf opens the book with a lot of exposition, the story really settles in as Evie begins her quest, and the skilled storytelling will keep readers spellbound and spooked. Cáceres' eerie black-and-white illustrations enhance the mood and atmosphere. Main characters are cued as White. Full of thrills and scares. (Horror. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Evie Von Rathe is a copper-haired 12-year-old who experiences anxiety and panic attacks, has lived with her aunt Desdemona in Blight Harbor, "the seventh most haunted town in America (per capita)." No stranger to the unexplained, Evie occasionally helps her aunt, an advice columnist on matters supernatural, when she takes on cases of "otherworldly concerns" around town. But when Desdemona is captured by frightening creature The Clackity, it offers Evie a bargain: she must venture into a nightmare realm to find her aunt, surviving a series of seven eldritch houses, and lure in the ghost of Jeffrey John Pope, a notorious serial killer who used an abattoir for his crimes. With only the magical tattoo of a sparrow for companionship and protection, Evie undergoes a terrifying journey, testing mind, body, and spirit. Adeptly invoking folkloric elements while creating something darkly original, Senf intimately renders Evie's trials as both internal and external in an atmospheric adventure that will appeal to readers of Neil Gaiman and middle grade horror. Occasional b&w art by Cáceres adds to the book's eerie feel; human characters cue as white. Ages 10: 12. Author's agent: Ali Herring, Spencerhill Assoc. (June)

Blight Harbor (Trade)

Quantity

Unit Price

#2348033 (Vol. 02) Nighthouse Keeper (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Lora Senf

1 $17.99

Evie Von Rathe has been home for only a few weeks from her adventure in the strange world of seven houses when Blight Harbor's beloved ghosts begin to disappear. Did they leave without saying goodbye, or has something gone horribly wrong? Soon Evie is invited to a mysterious council meeting, where she learns about the Dark Sun Side and a terrible secret.

978-1-6659-3463-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books It hasn't even been a month since Evie returned from saving her aunt in The Clackity (BCCB 6/22), but once again the twelve-year-old girl must be bolder and cleverer than she thinks possible, mustering up the courage to go through a portal door and back into a terrifying world of monsters and innocent spirits that need saving. This time it isn't her aunt who is missing but rather all the ghosts that peacefully coexist with the people of Blight Harbor; Evie is certain they wouldn't all go away without saying goodbye, so she knows something's not right with their vanishings. The villain behind their disappearance calls herself Portia, and although she used to be human, she has long since twisted into a monster who has let her quest for power consume her. Evie meets the spirit of Lark (an eleven-year-old who died a hundred years ago) and her loyal ghost spider, and they become allies against the formidable Portia and the dangers that naturally exist in this other realm. Senf offers just enough history and a thin trace of vulnerability for Portia that make her a slightly sympathetic villain, and this nuanced character development is a strength across both first two books of the trilogy. Readers will undoubtedly eagerly await the final volume, even if it will mean saying goodbye to a fascinating and memorable world, and a brilliant protagonist in the heroic Evie, who is so much more than she initially dreams she can be. AS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Evie enters the otherworldly place called the Dark Sun Side, searching for Blight Harbor's missing ghosts in this sequel to 2022's The Clackity. Twelve-year-old Evie Von Rathe returns, this time following the trail of missing ghost Florence and finding herself lured to the Dark Sun Side by ghoulish, evil Portia. Once there, Evie learns about the Radix, a swirling, black, oceanlike expanse of unforgiving magical power. In exchange for Evie's return to the land of the living, Portia tasks her with retrieving the soul light from the center lantern of the Nighthouse. With the help of Bird, her tattooed sidekick who moves about her body at will, and a girl she meets on her journey named Lark, who is neither ghost nor human, Evie is pushed to her limits as she navigates this terrifying world on her important, soul-saving mission. Senf's nightmarish, well-imagined supernatural landscape is original and compelling. Evie and Lark's friendship is believably close and trusting, their shared pain and fear binding them together. Bird continues to be a scene-stealing companion, a necessary voice of reason and encouragement for Evie and readers alike. More than just a battle between good and supernatural evil, this story shows the ultimate power of empathy and tenacity. Readers will be left both satisfied by the ending and wanting more. Evie is cued white. Deliciously dark and gripping. (Horror. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Bliss Trilogy (Prebound)

#1763037 (Vol. 02) Dash of Magic (Prebound)
written by Kathryn Littlewood

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.95

Twelve-year-old Rose Bliss and her siblings track down magical ingredients in Paris so Rose can compete in a baking challenge against her evil aunt and win back the family's magical cookbook.

978-1-4844-1841-3 ©2014 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 256 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 810

#1967638 (Vol. 01) Bliss (Prebound)
written by Kathryn Littlewood

Quantity 1 Unit Price $19.95

Twelve-year-old Rose Bliss wants to work magic in her family's bakery as her parent do, but when they are called away and Rose and her siblings are left in charge, the magis goes awry and a beautiful stranger tries to talk Rose into giving her the Bliss Cookery Booke.

978-1-4844-8530-9 ©2013 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 384 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 5.6 Lexile 870

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6. There is something magical about the pastries from the Bliss family bakery. The residents of Calamity Falls will admit to as much, though they have no idea just how magical. The Bliss children themselves have an inkling, although Rose, the responsible one, would love to know more. When their parents go away, the children promise not to touch the magic Cookery Book (which has been handed down from generation to generation), but it's oh-so-difficult to resist. Throw in the arrival of a long-lost relative and watch the mayhem ensue. Littlewood has written an entertaining family caper; the dynamics between the siblings are amusing, as they unite in the face of the chaos caused by the enchanted recipes, everything from Love Muffins to Cookies of Truth. Although the fiasco is fairly predictable, readers will likely enjoy the fun to be had in sorting out all the trouble. With the ending left wide-open for a sequel, there could very well be more bliss to come.

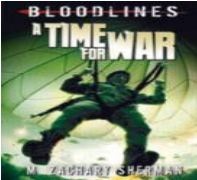

Reviews by: Horn Book Rosemary Bliss promises not to unlock the family's magical cookbook ("Bliss Cookery Booke") while her parents are away, but the opportunity arises. Rose; her siblings Thyme, Sage, and Parsley; and a beautiful stranger named "Aunt" Lily experiment with magical recipes that wreak havoc on the town. This whimsical adventure melds baking, sibling camaraderie, magic, and fantasy to diverting effect.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Twelve-year-old Rose and her siblings stir up trouble in Calamity Falls when they experiment with some old family recipes after their parents leave the Bliss bakery in their hands. Ever since she saw "her mother fold a lightning bolt into a bowl of batter," Rose has known "her parents made magic in the Bliss bakery." Their secret recipes, guarded in the Bliss Cookery Booke, have discreetly averted many catastrophes in Calamity Falls. Next to her gorgeous brother Ty, her funny brother Sage and her adorable sister Leigh, dependable Rose feels invisible, but she longs to be a "good baker wizard." When her parents go away, Rose is left in charge of the Cookery Booke and warned to let no one open or move it. Immediately, a mysterious stranger named Lily arrives, announcing she's a distant cousin who's come to help with the bakery. Rose suspects Lily really wants the Booke, but she falls under Lily's insidious influence and finds herself baking and dispensing Love Muffins and Cookies of Truth with hilarious results. As Rose bakes her way out of trouble, she must choose between Lily and her own family. A heroine with baking in her blood and a zany plot liberally sprinkled with humor blend into fun family adventure. Black-and-white spot art highlights story elements. Lighthearted bliss. (Fantasy. 8-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly The Follow Your Bliss Bakery has a remedy for everything. Stone Sleep Snickerdoodles can cure sleepwalking, and Fluffy White Macaroons once lifted a neighbor right out of a well. When the Bliss parents go on a business trip, they leave the key to their magical Bliss Cookery Booke with 12-year-old Rosemary, and things go haywire. "Aunt" Lily (a distant cousin) shows up, charming Rosemary's siblings, but Rosemary senses Lily's true aim: to steal the book. The only way to test Lily's trustworthiness is to whip up some of the magical recipes and observe her reactions. After Rosemary's brother distributes their experiments to the whole town, creating crowds of love-struck teenagers, nuns who can't hold their tongues, and general mayhem, Rosemary wonders if she's fit to be a "kitchen magician" after all. Littlewood's first novel mixes the sincere and the silly with entertaining results. This lighthearted family adventure offers a well-meaning and believably insecure heroine, as well as boisterous sibling interactions, and the open-ended finale suggests that readers can expect to see the Bliss family again soon. Ages 8-12. Agent: Michael Stearns and Ted Malawer, the Inkhouse. (Feb.) (c) Copyright PWxyz, LLC. All rights reserved.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Twelve-year-old Rose's mother is an excellent baker, and the lightning bolt or weasel's yawn that she adds to normal ingredients gives her cookies and muffins an extra little something that helps keep trouble at bay in their town. Combating a summer flu epidemic, the mayor of neighboring Humbleton begs the Bliss parents to come to his town to make their almond croissants, known for abating flu symptoms. They demur: How will they keep their home-based bakery operational while they are gone, and who will take care of their four children? They finally agree that Rose and teenage Ty can keep things running with the help of their neighbor and the bakery assistant. Before leaving, the parents lock away the Bliss Cookery Booke and entrust the key to Rose, with instructions that there will be no magic and that the Booke is not to be disturbed. Soon, beautiful, enigmatic Aunt Lily arrives and seems to cast a spell on the children. When she tells them of her plans to host a TV show featuring the most wonderful recipes in the world, Ty and Sage immediately want to let their aunt see the cookbook. As a compromise, Rose agrees that she and Ty can try out a few of the recipes, showing Lily the finished products. Chaos quickly ensues throughout the town when one recipe after another goes slightly wrong. Humor abounds in this sweet story that stresses the importance of family, and readers will enjoy getting to know the eccentric Bliss family. The cliff-hanger ending hints at a sequel.-Kim Dare, Fairfax County Public Schools, VA (c) Copyright 2012. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. No redistribution permitted.

Bloodlines (Stone Arch Books)

		Quantity	Unit Price
	#1628777 Time For War (Library Binding) written by M. Zachary Sherman When his plane is shot down on June 6, 1944, D-Day, paratrooper Private Michael Donovan must find a way to survive and locate his platoon. 978-1-4342-2558-0 ©2011 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 88 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 1.0 GR Lvl M Lexile 800	1	$20.49

Reviews by: Children's Literature One of titles in the "Bloodlines" series, this book presents the information in an engaging format that is part comic book, part novel, and part textbook. This series introduces readers to the life of a specific soldier in wartime—all members of the Donovan family tree—as they face the realistic conditions of war, including the deaths of fellow soldiers. This particular book launches readers into Private

First Class Michael Donovan's world as he jumps into France from his C-47 Skytrain on D-Day during World War II. Readers will immediately be thrown into the action of Donovan's story as he waits in the plane with his unit as flak explodes all around them, then jumps from the plane right before it explodes. The subsequent chapters are likewise tense, as Donovan hides in a house after landing far from his unit until German soldiers arrive. Readers will share Donovan's anxiety as he feels cowardly for hiding, and will feel vindicated as he gathers courage from Sergeant Anness—a soldier he deeply respects—as they begin to advance through France. The book ends with Donovan about to head off to another battle, his future uncertain but his courage clear. Although the motivation presented for D-Day is a bit more Hollywood-esque (fighting the Nazis and stopping the Holocaust) than the reality (fighting the Wehrmacht and stopping the war and destruction), the action and personal story successfully bring the history behind it to life, providing a great springboard for young readers wanting to learn about World War II. Reviewer: Kip Wilson Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-These titles follow members of the Donovan family and their wartime experiences. In the first novel, PFC Michael Donovan is a paratrooper in World War II. He narrowly escapes being killed by German soldiers on D-Day. Control follows Michael's grandnephew, Lester, a Navy SEAL in Afghanistan. He has just been promoted to commanding officer of his team. They are returning from a successful mission capturing a top-ranking Taliban officer when their Blackhawk helicopters are shot down. Most of the men die, two are captured, and Lester and another man are left for dead. They escape the wreckage and go on to save their captured team members. Each story begins with a brief overview of the war and illustrations of the gear the servicemen wore. Chapters are separated by "Debriefing" spreads that are illustrated with archival photos, describe equipment, and continue the history of the conflict. Color comic-book-style illustrations appear throughout. These books are easy to read, take a serious look at war, and do not glamorize killing or death. Set in small type, the factual sections, however, may be a little too dense for the intended audience.-Erik Carlson, White Plains Public Library, NY (c) Copyright 2011. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1628780 Fighting phantoms (Library Binding) written by Zachary M. Sherman Shot down over Viet Nam in 1968, Marine Lieutenant Donovan must leave his injured best friend behind in enemy territory while he tries to reach their rendezvous point. 978-1-4342-2560-3 ©2011 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 88 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 1.0 GR Lvl M Lexile 790	1	$20.49

Reviews by: Children's Literature One of titles in the "Bloodlines" series, this book presents the information in an engaging format that is part comic book, part novel, and part textbook. This series introduces readers to the life of a specific soldier in wartime—all members of the Donovan family tree—as they face the realistic conditions of war, including the deaths of fellow soldiers. This particular book launches readers into Lieutenant Verner Donovan's world during the Vietnam War as he and his radio intercept officer Blam wait in their F-4 for orders to take off from their aircraft carrier. They head for land and help out a group of Marines under fire, but then run into their own trouble and have to avoid air-to-air missiles and two MiG fighter jets. The subsequent chapters are thick with tension as they cannot dodge a missile and have to eject behind enemy lines. Blam is severely injured, and Donovan has to leave his friend behind and evade Vietcong soldiers to get some help. He is helped by two children, a subplot which ends tragically as a Vietcong soldier kills one of them. The book ends with Donovan in the hospital as he learns that Blam did not survive. He is ready to go back to fight and knows he will never forget his friend. Sherman successfully uses the emotion from this soldier's personal story to bring the history behind it to life, providing a great springboard for young readers wanting to learn about the Vietnam War. Reviewer: Kip Wilson

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1628779 Control under fire (Library Binding) written by Zachary M. Sherman Lieutenant Commander Donovan's helicopter is shot down and some of his men are captured by terrorists in Afghanistan. 978-1-4342-2561-0 ©2011 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 88 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 1.0 GR Lvl M Lexile 840	1	$20.49

Reviews by: Children's Literature One of titles in the "Bloodlines" series, this book presents the information in an engaging format that is part comic book, part novel, and part textbook. This series introduces readers to the life of a specific soldier in wartime—all members of the Donovan family tree—as they face the realistic conditions of war, including the deaths of fellow soldiers. This particular book launches readers into newly-promoted Lieutenant Commander Lester Donovan's world during the War in Afghanistan as he leads his team of Navy SEALs to capture a Taliban leader. Tension runs high as the helicopter is shot down, the Taliban leader is freed and the living American soldiers are captured. Donovan and Master Chief Miller—who had been left for dead—manage to escape from the burning helicopter just in time. As commander, Donovan decides they should hurry back to get information about the Taliban to base, but his plans change when they locate a cave guarded by the Taliban—which turns out to be a huge maze of tunnels and a prison for the American soldiers. Donovan makes radio contact with the base and arranges for an air strike, so tension mounts as he and Miller must gather their fellow soldiers and get out within thirty minutes. Donovan leads the way to safety, but is shot in the process. With Miller's help, he joins the others and the book ends with Donovan believing that he did the right thing to follow the generations of his family into the military. With this very current and realistic story, Sherman brings the history behind it to life, providing a great springboard for young readers wanting to learn about the War still going on in Afghanistan. Reviewer: Kip Wilson

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr4–6—These titles follow members of the Donovan family and their wartime experiences. In the first novel, PFC Michael Donovan is a paratrooper in World War II. He narrowly escapes being killed by German soldiers on D-Day. Control follows Michael's grandnephew, Lester, a Navy SEAL in Afghanistan. He has just been promoted to commanding officer of his team. They are returning from a successful mission capturing a top-ranking Taliban officer when their Blackhawk helicopters are shot down. Most of the men die, two are captured, and Lester and another man are left for dead. They escape the wreckage and go on to save their captured team members. Each story begins with a brief overview of the war and illustrations of the gear the servicemen wore. Chapters are separated by "Debriefing" spreads that are illustrated with archival photos, describe equipment, and continue the history of the conflict. Color comic-book-style illustrations appear throughout. These books are easy to read, take a serious look at war, and do not glamorize killing or death. Set in small type, the factual sections, however, may be a little too dense for the intended audience.—Erik Carlson, White Plains Public Library, NY

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1663724 Damage control (Library Binding) written by M. Zachary Sherman When a C-119 cargo plane crashes behind enemy lines in mountainous terrain, the American survivors are stranded with no chance of rescue. Facing a brutal environment, dwindling resources, and an attack by enemy forces, Corporal Tony Donovan realizes their only hope is doing the impossible: repairing one of the several destroyed Jeeps that was their cargo, utilizing a hodgepodge of remnants from the wreckage, to escape alive. 978-1-4342-3765-1 ©2012 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 88 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 1.0 GR Lvl N Lexile 800	1	$20.49

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1663725 Emergency ops (Library Binding) written by M. Zachary Sherman During the Vietnam War, Captain Anne Donovan's aid station is pinned down by a sniper near the front lines, and the doctor performing a life-threatening surgery is critically wounded. Donovan must take control of not only the operating room, but her emotions as well. 978-1-4342-3766-8 ©2012 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 88 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 1.0 GR Lvl N Lexile 830	1	$20.49

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1663726 Heart of the enemy (Library Binding) written by M. Zachary Sherman During the War in Iraq, Lieutenant Commander Lester Donovan of the U.S. Navy SEALs must capture a known terrorist near the border of Syria. It's a dangerous mission. Land mines and hostile combatants blanket the area, yet Donovan is undeterred. But when the mission goes awry, this gung-ho commander must learn to keep his cool, if he's going to keep his men safe. 978-1-4342-3767-5 ©2012 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 88 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 1.0 GR Lvl N Lexile 800	1	$20.49

Books of Elsewhere (Trade)

#1676564 Shadows (Large Print) (Large Print Library Binding (Trade))
written by Jacqueline West

978-1-4104-3139-4 ©2010 267 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 770

Quantity 1
Unit Price $26.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books A delightful concoction of quirky humor blended with a rumbling ominous undertones, this will be a hit with young fantasists.

Reviews by: Children's Literature Eleven-year-old Olive Dunwoody is often left to her own devices as her math professor parents spend time on their equations. She spends her time exploring their new home which this time is an old house full of antiques instead of the usual bland apartment. Olive realizes something strange is going on when she sees movement in the paintings that cover the walls. After finding a pair of old spectacles, she discovers that she can actually enter the paintings, explore the worlds she finds, and speak with the inhabitants. One of these dwellers, a young boy named Morton, swears that he really belongs on the outside in Olive's world. A beautiful lady in a portrait invites Olive to tea and befriends her. Horatio, Leopold, and Harvey, the magical speaking cats, seem to be protecting old secrets and she does not trust them. After she helps the beautiful lady escape her portrait, Olive realizes her mistake and during one terrifying night learns the secrets of the old house and its former inhabitant, Aldous McMartin. Black and white illustrations enhance the story. Fans of the seriously creepy will love this first volume in "The Books of Elsewhere." Reviewer: Shirley Nelson

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Preoccupied parents, a solitary young girl, talking cats-sound familiar? Unfortunately for debut author West, not only has this been done before, it's been done better. Still, the premise is intriguing. Magical spectacles enable the wearer to enter the worlds captured in paintings created by an evil, long-dead wizard. "Captured" isn't just a figure of speech: At least one young boy has been turned into a painted replica of himself. Another painting, that of the wizard's (also dead) granddaughter, comes creepily to life. In general, though, the action is sluggish and the ominous atmosphere contrived. Characterization is skimpy at best. Olive's parents adore math. Olive doesn't. The cats are pompous, imaginative and martial, respectively. Ironically enough, it's not just the supernatural effects that fail to convince. Would parents, even those utterly obsessed with their own intelligence and interests, really leave their 11-year-old home alone overnight? The fact that they do precipitates Olive's final confrontation with the wicked wizard. Unfortunately readers probably won't care much about who wins nor about the possibility of volume two. (Fantasy. 10-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Poet West's debut novel is a quirky and clever beginning to the Books of Elsewhere series. The Dunwoodys, "a pair of more than slightly dippy mathematicians," and their 11-year-old daughter, Olive, have just moved into an old Victorian house. Olive has learned to be independent, given her parents' aloofness ("Her persistently lackluster grades in math had led her parents to believe that she was some kind of genetic aberration"). She explores the house's eccentricities and discovers that, by donning a pair of spectacles, she can enter the house's many unsettling paintings. Inside one, she encounters nine-year-old Morton, who brings to her attention the secrets that the house and its late owner are keeping. With the help of three talking house cats, Olive works to patch together clues to save the painting-dwellers from their dark fate. The house is as much a character as are Olive, Morton, and her family, and a wicked sense of humor tempers the book's creepiness. A suspenseful plot and insight into childhood loneliness--handily amplified by Bernatene's moody and dramatically lit b & w illustrations--will have readers anxiously awaiting the next book. Ages 9-11. (June)STARRED REVIEW

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—Jacqueline West's debut novel (Dial, 2010) follows a young girl's intriguing and thrilling adventures as she enters the fantasy world of Elsewhere. Olive, 11, spends much of her summer exploring her family's new home. The previous owner of this crumbling Victorian mansion died and left everything in the house to the new owners. Olive discovers a pair of spectacles that allow her to dive in and out of the mysterious paintings that fill the old home. Three talking cats seem to be helping and protecting Olive, but as she begins to put more puzzle pieces together, she realizes that she may be in some danger and the eccentric cats are not to be trusted. Narrator Lexy Fridell maintains a quick pace as the suspense builds. She gives all the characters distinct and interesting voices, especially those peculiar cats. Fans of Neal Gaiman's Coraline will find many appealing similarities with the story, and listeners who like a fast-paced adventure will enjoy this audio version.—April Mazza, Wayland Public Library, MA

#1675974 Spellbound (Large Print) (Large Print Library Binding (Trade))
written by Jacqueline West

In this hotly anticipated sequel, Olive thinks she's controlling the old McMartin house - but is the house controlling her? With no way into the house's magical paintings, and its three guardian cats reluctant to help, Olive's friend Morton is still trapped inside Elsewhere. So when Rutherford, the new oddball kid next door, mentions a grimoire - a spellbook - Olive feels a breathless tug of excitement. If she can find the McMartins' spellbook, maybe she can help Morton escape Elsewhere for good. Unless, that is, the book finds Olive first.

Quantity 1
Unit Price $26.99

978-1-4104-3843-0 ©2011 327 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 870

Reviews by: Children's Literature Olive Dunwoody lives in a very strange house and with rather absent-minded parents and with some talking cats. Olive has an old pair of spectacles that take her inside paintings that reside in this house. Her cats, Harvey, Leopold and Horatio, talk to her and she understands them. As the summer ends, Olive finds Leopold guarding a trapdoor in the basement; Harvey begins his own mission as a secret agent and Horatio is missing which is not a good sign. Harvey is actually spying on a strange neighborhood boy named Rutherford Dewey. Olive does not like that Rutherford seems to know about her enchanted cats or the strange house. Rutherford asks if a book of spells exists; Olive takes on the mission to find the book. She gets Horatio to take her to Morton who lives inside one of the paintings; perhaps Morton knows where the book is. Morton cannot help her with the book but he does seem to know the Dewey family. This connection becomes more important as Olive and Rutherford work together to help retrieve the spellbook and the magic spectacles. Rutherford's grandmother is actually a good witch and the neighbor, Mrs. Nivens is really Morton's sister Lucinda. Perhaps knowledge of the first "Elsewhere" book would enhance Olive's second adventure; it is hard to tell. This fantasy has many good things for middle school readers that want a spunky heroine who lives in an enchanted house. Unfortunately Harvey's humor and Olive's irritation with Rutherford goes on too long; this second installment reads slowly without having read the first adventure. Fans of the first book and those that can be patient with Olive would enjoy this and look forward to a third one as Annabel McMartin remains at large. "Books of Elsewhere," Volume 2. Reviewer: Elizabeth Fronk Reviews by: Examiner.com "As Harry Potter fever takes over . . . The Books of Elsewhere is a great series for young readers who are interested in the world of spells, witches, potions and magic—plenty of fun, action and thrills."

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The second installment of The Books of Elsewhere (The Shadows, 2010) is a by-the-book fantasy follow-up. Olive has yet to find a solution to the last plot thread left over from the first volume—Morton is trapped, unable to rejoin the world outside of the McMartins' enchanted paintings. Meanwhile, the Linden Street setting is enriched through greater focus on Olive's neighbors, especially new kid Rutherford Dewey. When Olive inexplicitly blurts out the McMartin family's magical secret to Rutherford, he educates her on witches' grimoires. Olive is sure that Aldous McMartin's spellbook holds the key to helping Morton, despite her suspicions about Rutherford—he seems to know too much—and the fact that she'd be playing with an evil wizard's spellbook. The ancient McMartin grimoire is as old as the plot device of the untrustworthy magical object. Furthermore, Olive often acts as a slave to plot contrivances rather than as a character. The characters do not trust each other enough to communicate basic information, leading to arbitrary misunderstandings cleared up just in time for a climax that resolves little. Fortunately, zany cat Harvey's multiple characters and Rutherford's set of quirks help pull the story out of Olive's pace-slowng introspection. Definitely the middle of the story, designed to set up further conflicts and sequels for readers already invested in the series. (Fantasy. 9-12)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—This sequel to The Shadows (Dial, 2010) picks up with Olive Dunwoody still trying to discover the many secrets hidden in the old Victorian house she and her parents have moved into. She has her dependable sidekicks, three lively talking cats that manage to keep her from hurting herself when she is possessed by the spirit of the mysterious book that she discovers. She realizes that she could use it to release Morton, a boy who has been imprisoned in a painting for many years by the house's former owners. Olive comes to the shocking realization that the spellbook has forced her to do various deeds while she has been sleeping. This realization is brought to a head when one of her cat protectors manages to wake up her up just before she jumps to her death. Has she not only put her life in jeopardy but also any chance of saving Morton? Who has directed the spellbook to possess Olive and why? These questions and many more will keep young readers engaged as the mystery unfolds. Olive matures in the story; her emotions, including remorse, are genuinely portrayed, and relationships with the cats and with her quirky neighbor, Rutherford, ring true. Some chapters drag a little but overall this is a suspenseful read that leaves plenty of room for the next title in the series. While it stands on its own, it will be enjoyed most by readers familiar with the first book. Occasional full-page, black-and-white drawings are appropriately dark and mysterious.—Julie Shatterly, W.A. Bess Elementary School, Gastonia, NC

Boy Who Grew Dragons (Trade)

#2151203 (Vol. 01) Boy Who Grew Dragons (Hardcover (POB))
written by Andy Shepherd

When Tomas discovers a strange old tree at the bottom of his grandfather's garden, he doesn't think much of it. But he takes the funny fruit from the tree back into the house and gets the shock of his life when a tiny dragon hatches!

978-1-4998-1011-0 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 2–5—Tomas "Chipstick" Liffy has agreed to help Grandad plant a garden in his backyard, but what he finds in the process is most surprising. When Tomas unearths an unidentified spiky, red fruit, the last thing he expects is for a dragon to hatch from inside. Tomas and his new friend, Flicker, get into all sorts of tricky situations—but they learn about friendship and how to take care of those they love along the way. Shepherd delivers an outrageously funny and heartwarming story that will draw readers in and have them chuckling from beginning to end. Black-and-white illustrations by Ogilvie add to the overall Dahl-ness of this book. Young readers will laugh with Tomas and Flicker, and enjoy the heartfelt moments between Tomas and the rest of his family and friends. VERDICT This gently funny title is a must-purchase for public libraries, and a great recommendation for readers of all ages.—Maryjean Riou, Hunterdon County Library, Flemington, NJ

#2218655 (Vol. 02) Boy Who Lived with Dragons (Hardcover (POB))

written by Andy Shepherd

Having your own dragon is magical, but Tomas is also about to find out what living with a dragon is REALLY like. When the fire-breathing kicks in and you get singed every five seconds, it's like having an unpredictable volcano in your pocket. Learning to train the dragons and keep them out of trouble at school and home will take all Tomas's creativity and patience.

978-1-4998-1178-0 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$13.99

Bravelands (Trade)

#2080109 (Vol. 03) Blood and Bone (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

An elephant entrusted with a powerful gift. A lion treading a dangerous path. A baboon trapped by the truth. A great evil has risen--and it will only be defeated if predator, prey, and scavenger can unite as one.

978-0-06-264210-3 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 700

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2123086 (Vol. 04) Shifting Shadows (Library Binding (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

Stinger's death should have brought peace to the land; but no Great Parent has stepped forward, and now the fate of Bravelands hangs in the balance. With a mysterious threat lurking in their midst, all members of the Great Herd must find the strength to walk the right path or risk the end of Bravelands forever.

978-0-06-264215-8 ©2019 6 x 8-3/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 12.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.89

#2149099 (Vol. 05) Spirit-Eaters (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

The Great Spirit has returned, and the baboon Thorn hopes to guide Bravelands to peace as its Great Father. But when a pack of rogue wolves begins to target the Great Herd, every animal must unite to defend the code of the wild against those who would watch it burn.

978-0-06-264218-9 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 710

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2168641 (Vol. 06) Oathkeeper (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

At long last, the Great Herd stands united against Titan--now so powerful that even Fearless, who vowed to avenge his father's death, cannot defeat the rogue lion alone. Thorn may have a plan to bring about Titan's downfall, but the animals of Bravelands must decide how much they are willing to risk--and who they are willing to lose.

978-0-06-264222-6 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.9 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 770

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Bravelands: Curse of the Sandtongue (Prebound)

#2324528 (Vol. 03) Blood on the Plains (Prebound)

written by Erin Hunter

The serpent is ready to strike. Bravelands is in turmoil. With Thorn dead, the animals of the plains desperately search for the next Great Parent, a role Prance is afraid to fill. Chase hides in plain sight among Grandmother's most loyal creatures, praying that the terrible antidote she's discovered will continue to hold the snake's power over her at bay. And Bramble finds himself up against a foe he couldn't have imagined: his own poisoned troop. Can these three unlikely allies stop the great serpent before her venom corrupts them all?

978-1-5364-7889-1 ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$20.95

#2296912 (Vol. 02) Venom Spreads (Prebound)

written by Erin Hunter

A terrible evil is spreading through Bravelands. Friends and family are split as longtime allies turn on each other, and born foes form unlikely bonds. The very threat that led Bramble to leave the place he called home has ensnared the creatures who live on the mountain. As the mysterious poison begins to affect more and more animals, Chase struggles to determine where her loyalties should lie. And down on the plains, Prance prays that the Great Spirit will send Thorn a solution to the shadowy menace. But even the Great Father may not be able to save them this time.

978-1-5364-7605-7 ©2022 5 x 7-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.95

#2267603 (Vol. 01) Shadows on the Mountain (Prebound)

written by Erin Hunter

A gorilla with a deadly secret. A leopard struck by tragedy. A gazelle cast out of her herd. For generations, the Silverback troop has lived in peaceful seclusion high above the Great Herd, adhering to one rule: "blood pools on the plains." But when a new and terrifying evil descends on their home, every animal must venture into the unknown to prevent darkness from overtaking all they hold dear.

978-1-5364-7213-4 ©2022 5 x 7-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.95

Bravelands: Thunder on the Plains (Prebound)

#2366548 (Vol. 01) Shattered Horn (Prebound)

written by Erin Hunter

Echo, a water buffalo, is chosen by the Great Spirit to lead after a horrific accident-- but can't command the respect of any of his herd. Stride the cheetah is keeping secrets from his coalition that could get him killed for disloyalty. And Tailgrabber, a young hyena, is desperate to find peace between her clan and the lions of Noblepride--even though it marks a betrayal of the hyenas' longstanding allegiance to the Great Devourer. As the structures that once guided their lives begin to crumble, can each of these three unlikely allies hold their own against the coming storm?

978-1-5364-8337-6 ©2024 5 x 7-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$22.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A new story arc in the Bravelands series introduces three young animals cast from their clans: a cheetah, a buffalo, and a hyena. Three plotlines only begin weaving together by the opener's end: Cheetah Stride finds himself on his own after a star-crossed relationship with a beautiful prospective mate ends in tragedy; as the buffalo begin their annual migration under a new leader who gains his position through treachery, young Whisper loyally stays behind with the dying former leader; expelled from her hyena family for weakness in the midst of a turf war with a pride of lions, Tailgrabber heroically kills a lion and then meets a mysterious white vulture. Meanwhile other creatures, notably an enigmatic honey badger named Stonehide, trot into view, and ominous visions portend impending disaster for the Bravelands that even the wise elephant Great Mother Starlight may be powerless to prevent. For all that the cast is composed of named, talking animals, there's nothing cute or fuzzy about life on the grassy plains, where predators ruthlessly stalk prey and death comes suddenly or with agonizing slowness to cubs and adults alike. Still, along with feral values and behaviors, displays of sibling attachment, courage and cowardice, and deeper thoughts and feelings run through events in ways that young human audiences will easily recognize and understand. Only a start, but a strong one. (map) (Animal fantasy. 11-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Bravelands: Thunder on the Plains (Trade)

#2365525 (Vol. 02) Breakers of the Code (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erin Hunter

The time for rain is approaching fast, but before the Great Spirit will let it fall, the animals of Bravelands must grapple with a dangerous new threat. Cast out of his coalition, Stride the cheetah embarks on a perilous mission for the Great Parent, accompanied by a honey badger burdened with a dark and mysterious past.

978-0-06-296700-8 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.99

Brightstorm (Trade)

#2157068 (Vol. 01) Brightstorm (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Vashti Hardy

Arthur and Maudie Brightstorm receive devastating news: their famous explorer father has died in a failed attempt to reach South Polaris. To make matters worse, the Lontown Geographical Society finds Ernest Brightstorm guilty of sabotaging the expedition of his competitor, Eudora Vane. But a mysterious clue leads the twins to question the story they've been told--and to uncover the truth, they must undertake the journey of a lifetime.

978-1-324-00564-3 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 790

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Maudie and Arthur dream of joining their beloved father, famed explorer Ernest Brightstorm, on his magnificent sky-ship. However, after Ernest fails to return from his latest far-flung expedition, his assets are seized, and the twins are left indentured to a pair of truly loathsome guardians. When evidence comes to light that their father may have survived, Maudie and Arthur plot a daring escape and join the warm and eccentric crew of another sky-ship headed to the same distant lands as their father's ill-fated expedition. Hardy's enthralling story effortlessly builds a stunning steampunk world around the compelling twin siblings. Maudie is a pragmatic and brilliant engineer, while Arthur, who has a prosthetic arm, is more imaginative and bookish. Although the twins are fleshed out, the terrific action and constant travel comes at the expense of depth, and readers will be hungry for more details about the kooky characters and this astonishing world as they set sail with the brilliant Brightstorm kids. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Twelve-year-old Arthur and Maudie are the twin children of great explorer Ernest Brightstorm, and when they receive news that he has perished on an expedition to South Polaris and also sabotaged a fellow explorer, they decide to clear their father's name and complete his mission. Maudie is a future engineer, who made her brother an iron arm to replace his missing one, and Arthur is an avid reader; together, they have the skills to discover what's causing disaster at South Polaris and earn back the respect of the community. This UK import joyfully dives right into its steampunk aesthetic with sky ships, clever inventions, and Victorian-inspired clothing. Arthur and Maudie are fully developed characters who survive bandit attacks, thought-wolves, and life-threatening sabotage; the plot has a delicate balance of action versus exposition. The illustrations sometimes contain some frustrating contradictions with the text, but they're cute and appropriately steampunky. Overall, it's a novel of grandeur and action likely to grab junior steampunks. NB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Orphaned twins, an adventurer dad lost to an ice monster, and an airship race around the world. In Lontown, 12-year-old twins Arthur and Maudie learn that their explorer father has gone missing on his quest to reach South Polaris, the crew of his sky-ship apparently eaten by monsters. As he's accused of sabotage, their father's property is forfeit. The disgraced twins are sent off to live in a garret in a scene straight out of an Edwardian novel à la A Little Princess. Maudie has the consolation of her engineering skills, but all Arthur wants is to be an adventurer like his father. A chance to join Harriet Culpepper's journey to South Polaris might offer excitement and let him clear his father's name--if only he can avoid getting eaten by intelligent ice monsters. Though some steampunk set dressing is appropriately over-the-top (such as a flying house, thinly depicted but charming), adaptive tools for Arthur's disability are wonderfully realistic. His iron arm is a standard, sometimes painful passive prosthesis. The crew adapts the airship galley for Arthur's needs, even creating a spiked chopping board. Off the ship, Arthur and Maudie meet people and animals in vignettes that are appealingly rendered but slight. Harriet teaches the white twins respect for the cultures they encounter on these travels, though they are never more than observers of non-Lontowners' different ways. A kid adventurer with a disability makes this steampunk offering stand out. (Steampunk. 9-11) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This enjoyable steampunk adventure by debut author Hardy sees twins Arthur and Maudie Brightstorm join a sky ship race to discover South Polaris. Scholarly, headstrong Arty, born with one arm, wears an iron prosthesis crafted and maintained by mechanically inclined Maud. After their father is declared dead; eaten by polar beasts; and judged guilty of violating the frequently classist Geographical Society's Explorer's Code in a previous race, the 12-year-olds are summarily kicked out of their Lontown family home. They're sold to a cruel couple, who send Maud to work in the shipyard and force Arty to clean and cook. When their father's sapient hawk, Parthena, returns from the ice continent with evidence of his survival, the children jump at the chance to crew with young explorer Harriet Culpepper in a voyage to reach South Polaris; they hope to cleanse the besmirched family name and find their father alive. Arty's determination and Maudie's engineering skills both prove vital in the journey across the varied terrain of Hardy's marvelously imagined world and its surprising allies, from desert kings to thought wolves. Ages 9: 12. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6—A Victorian steampunk quest with an unusual company of travelers. Twelve-year-old twins Maud and Arthur Brightstorm lost their father in a terrible accident as he searched for the South Pole of their alternate-Earth world. A heartless insurance company flack has taken their home and all their possessions, and they're living with a couple of ne'er-do-wells who force them to cook, clean, and work to support their household. Eager to find their father, they enlist with explorer Harriet Culpepper as she pilots her balloon sky-ship Aurora to the Ice Continent. Deceitful enemies, narrow escapes, and giant wolves propel the plot along as the young voyagers gain independence and make lifelong friends. Maud is an engineering prodigy who has already designed a prosthetic for her twin. Arthur is a writer and thinker whose missing right arm informs but never defines his character. Strong, athletic Harriet and towering ship's cook Felicity Wiggety are powerful adventurers in a narrative with overtones of both Charles Dickens and Philip Pullman. Character descriptions and occasional illustrations portray the travelers as light-skinned people from an alternate-England country. The company reprovisions along the way in a land with two kings whose affectionate relationship sets the tone for their welcoming, environmentally friendly city. The Brightstorm twins learn of the misdeeds of a rival explorer family which parallel those of actual Victorian explorers: thoughtless depredations of the plants and animals they find and terrible abuse of Indigenous people. A satisfying conclusion to the quest leaves room for more exploits from the intrepid crew of the Aurora. VERDICT A ripsnorting yarn with broad appeal for tweens.—Beth Wright Redford, Park Elementary School Library, Cross Plains, WI

#2219811 (Vol. 02) Darkwhispers (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Vashti Hardy

The ragtag crew of Captain Harriet Culpepper is off on another adventure! Ermitage Wigglesworth, the notable explorer and author, has been reported missing in Stella Oceanus to the east. Twins Arthur and Maudie are eager to answer the call of adventure to find him, but their old nemesis and newly discovered aunt, Eudora Vane, is also on the hunt.

978-1-324-01595-6 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.95

#2285654 (Vol. 03) Firesong (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Vashti Hardy

Arthur and Maudie Brightstorm are back home in Lontown and finally settling in after their exhilarating--and secret--adventures in Erythea. Maudie's sky-ak invention is a hit, and Harriet has just announced that she will share her sky-ship's hydroelectric technology. But tensions are brewing.

978-1-324-03045-4 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 110 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 850

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.95

Brixton Brothers (Trade)

#905012 (Vol. 01) Case of the Case of Mistaken Identity (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mac Barnett

When twelve-year-old Steve Brixton, a fan of Bailey Brothers detective novels, is mistaken for a real detective, he must elude librarians, police, and the mysterious Mr. E as he seeks a missing quilt containing coded information.

978-1-4169-7815-2 ©2009 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 4.0 GR Lvl Q Lexile 590

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$15.99

Reviews by: From the Publisher Steve Brixton is America's next great kid detective (whether he knows it or not)....Steve solve his first case? Since when can librarians rappel from helicopters? Does Steve have any brothers or sisters? If not, then why is this series called The Brixton Brothers? You will solve all these mysteries and many more by the time you finish The Case of the Case of Mistaken Identity. We think you'll agree: Steve Brixton's first adventure is his best adventure yet.

#1619958 (Vol. 02) Ghostwriter Secret (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mac Barnett

Twelve-year-old Steve is investigating a diamond heist but the case suddenly changes when the author of the Bailey Brothers detective novels writes him a letter to say that he fears for his life.

978-1-4169-7817-6 ©2011 5-1/8 x 7-5/8 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 5.0 RC Lvl 4.3 Lexile 690

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Children's Literature Twelve-year-old Steve Brixton of the Brixton Brothers Detective Agency is hired to recover the Nichols Diamond which was taken from Mr. Fairview's estate, despite the expensive security system. Steve quickly locates the diamond; however, the thief is still on the loose. Mr. Fairview engages Steve to protect the diamond until the thief is caught. Another client, MacArthur Bart, engages Steve's services. Bart is the author of the "Bailey Brothers Mysteries" series that Steve thoroughly enjoys and studies as a model for his detective agency. When Steve goes to meet Bart, the author is missing and Steve is nearly kidnapped. Steve uses his sleuthing skills to locate Bart. Steve's friend, Dana, joins him on the search. Steve is an only child although the name of his agency suggests differently. There are some daring moments that Steve and Dana encounter as they run around the San Francisco Bay area. Readers who enjoy a fast-paced adventure like the "Hardy Boys" mystery series will enjoy following Steve as he uncovers the secret about the ghostwriter. This sleuthing adventure is the second one in the "Brixton Brothers" series. Reviewer: Carrie Hane Hung Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Partially thanks to his solving The Case of the Case of Mistaken Identity (2009), 12-year-old Steve Brixton has been able to start his own detective agency. Now he's a real sleuth like his heroes, the fictional Bailey Brothers, no matter what his mother's lame, cop boyfriend Rick might say to the contrary. Steve gets a call from Victor Fairview, the richest man in Ocean Park, Calif., when Fairview's red diamond goes missing. Steve solves that case in less than an hour despite Rick's interference. While charged with guarding the diamond, Steve gets a letter from his idol, MacArthur Bart, author of the Bailey Brothers books. Bart needs Steve's help! With best friend Dana in tow, Steve sets out to find Bart. Can a detective weaned on a couple of 1950s Hardy Boys clones solve a case with more twists than a...a really twisty thing? Barnett's second Brixton Brothers mystery continues the whimsically sardonic adventures of everyone's soon-to-be-favorite clueless-yet-earnest boy detective-wannabe. Shot through with moments of goofiness and dotted with Rex's black-and-white illustrations, this is sure to please existing fans and win new ones. (Mystery. 8-12)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Middle schooler Steve Brixton has read all 58 of the "Bailey Brothers Mysteries," which were written decades earlier, plus The Bailey Brothers' Detective Handbook, which has become his guidebook for his own detective agency. He frequently refers back to these books, portions of which are reprinted (old typeface and all) in The Ghostwriter Secret. Steve's first case, a missing diamond, is solved easily and seamlessly. He then becomes involved with his hero, the author of the books, MacArthur Bart, who has been kidnapped. An investigation ensues and Steve brings his friend Dana in to help. Before they know what happened, the boys have been kidnapped, too. Barnett has written a fun, adventure-filled book. This is a great choice for slow or reluctant readers.—Patty Saidenberg, George Jackson Academy, New York City

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1760957 (Vol. 03) It Happened on a Train (Paperback (Trade)) written by Mac Barnett Retired private detective and current seventh-grader Steve Brixton has a new career: taking out the garbage on Wednesdays for five bucks a week. But it's hard to leave the old game behind, and on a train trip down the California coast, Steve finds himself pulled back into sleuthing. 978-1-4169-7820-6 ©2012 304 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 620	1	$8.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1694478 (Vol. 04) Danger Goes Berserk (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Mac Barnett As soon as 12-year-old Steve Brixton opens a detective office in his backyard, he and his best friend Dana are caught up in a tangle of cases, from breaking up a ring of piratical smugglers, to recovering a stolen surfboard, to tracking down a fifth-grader's missing gym shorts. 978-1-4424-3977-1 ©2012 256 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 5.0 RC Lvl 3.5 Lexile 620	1	$17.99

Buster (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2216268 (Vol. 01) Buster (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Caleb Huett Buster's in big trouble. He's been dragged to Dog Court for breaking one of the most sacred of all dog rules: Never, ever talk to a human, or let a human know how smart you really are. But he swears he had a good reason! The boy he's been taking care of, Tonio, needed his help in a big way. 978-1-338-54188-5 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 690	1	$18.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—When we first meet Buster, he is being tried in Dog Court for the crime of revealing his true intelligence to humans. As a service dog for Tonino, a young boy with an anxiety disorder, Buster couldn't help but use his full skills to support his person. Huett's clever premise, smooth worldbuilding, and quick pacing will engage young readers. Most notable, though, is his thoughtful depiction of anxiety, which will help kids understand themselves or their peers who may struggle with intrusive thoughts, panic attacks, or other mental health challenges. Tonino grows over the course of the book as he begins to understand that he can implement strategies to feel better but will likely never be "cured." VERDICT A fun caper for dog lovers with a more serious depiction of anxiety disorder woven in. Strongly recommended as a first purchase.—Gesse Stark-Smith, Multnomah County Lib., Portland, OR

#2271942 (Vol. 02) Buster Undercover (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Caleb Huett

Tonio is not allowed to let anyone know that he can communicate fluently with his therapy dog, Buster. But when dogkind requires that Tonio make friends with a bully, are Tonio and Buster going to go through a ruff patch... or learn some new tricks to keep the dogs in their town safe?

978-1-338-54190-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 700

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Cameron Battle (Prebound)

#2366638 (Vol. 02) Cameron Battle and the Escape Trials (Prebound)
written by Jamar J. Perry

After his first adventure as the Descendant, Cameron can't sit through seventh grade classes. Especially when his parents are still trapped in Chidani. But he encounters a particularly nasty bully in his new school, and it doesn't take long for Cameron and his trusty friends Zion and Aliyah to realize that the troubles of Chidani won't stay away for long.

978-1-5364-8368-0 ©2024 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $20.95

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–7—Cameron Battle, now the chosen Descendant of Chidani, is back home with his grandma and at the beginning of his seventh-grade year. Best friends Zion and Aliyah are Cameron's support system when he is ruthlessly bullied by a boy named Vince. Determined to save his mother and find his father, Cameron knows he must make his way back to Chidani with the help of the Book, which has become a part of him. Upon opening the Book, however, Chidani requires the trio to return much sooner than grandma was prepared to let them go. Adventures ensue right from the get-go with a kidnapping, open portals, a lost ring, and two trials that must be tackled in order for Cameron to have any hope of seeing his mother and father again. Can Cameron summon the power within him to see through these trials? Will he be able to save those closest to him and even figure out a way to forgive those who are unkind? VERDICT This installment in the thrilling series is a surefire delight that complements all fantasy shelves.

#2309260 (Vol. 01) Cameron Battle and the Hidden Kingdoms (Prebound)
written by Jamar J. Perry

Cameron Battle grew up reading about Chidani, a fabled West African country that cut itself off from the world centuries ago to protect the Igbo people from the dangerous slave trade. After Cameron's parents disappear, The Book of Chidani is his only connection to them.

978-1-5364-7668-2 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 From a young age, Cameron Battle was fascinated with the stories told to him from the Book of Chidani, a book passed down by his ancestors. It tells tales of the mythical country of Chidani and the Igbo people, who have hidden themselves from the world as a way of protection. When sneaking around one night to take a glance at the book, Cameron and his friends are transported to the Kingdom of Chidani. They learn that Chidani is in turmoil because Queen Ramala's sister, Amina, is seeking to take over the kingdom and break the barrier hiding Chidani from the rest of the world. The secrets of Cameron's family history and his role in Chidani are revealed to him when he is told that the only person who can stop Amina is the Descendant. Perry has written an action-packed fantasy with Igbo and other African mythology, and his world building creates an immersive experience. This title is a must-read for fans of Kwame Mbalia's Tristan Strong Punches a Hole in the Sky (2019). COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young Black boy and his two best friends discover a new world in his family's ancestral book. Cameron Battle is a 12-year-old boy of Igbo descent living in Atlanta who starts noticing strange happenings around his house but second-guesses himself, instead blaming his active imagination. At the start of summer vacation, Cameron has a sleepover with his two best friends, Zion and Aliyah. Despite being strictly prohibited from entering the attic and reading The Book of Chidani, a record of ancestral history passed down through the generations of Cameron's family, all three kids disobey and find themselves literally pulled into the book--and with it, the country of Chidani. There, Cameron finds out that the odd things he's noticed were indeed real and that, as the only living Descendant of the people of Chidani, he has been tasked with saving the country from a power grab by the queen's sister. Perry presents a fantasy full of adventure, loss, bravery, and perseverance. Themes of love, intergenerational hardship, and sacrifice are woven throughout the story. Its potential, however, is largely unfulfilled thanks to the cast members' constant vacillation in thought and action. Some characters feel one-dimensional, making it difficult for readers to become fully invested in the novel. The cast of characters is made up of Black people of various ethnicities. A promising West African-inspired tale about courage and legacy let down by inconsistent characterization. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Ever since he lost his parents two years ago, Igbo-descended 12-year-old Cameron Battle has been forbidden from entering the attic of the Atlanta home he shares with his grandmother and reading the Book of Chidani. The book is a family heirloom filled with stories about a hidden realm in Nigeria that was created centuries back to protect the Igbo people in the height of chattel slavery. But during a sleepover, Cameron and his best friends, tech-savvy Aliyah and smart, protective Zion, sneak into the attic to read the Book, accidentally opening a portal to Chidani itself. There, they discover that Cameron's parents died defending the land, leaving him as the realm's only Descendant. To save Chidani from the queen's sister, who seeks to shatter the barrier that keeps enslavers outside it, Cameron must bond with the Book and, with his friends, retrieve a trio of stolen magical artifacts while facing monsters, gods, and their own fears. Rooted in Igbo mythology and starring Black protagonists of various ethnic backgrounds, Perry's tale offers up a fast-paced, intense story of legacy and loss as Cameron worries about whether he's fit for the task at hand, even as he draws on the support of his companions and memories of his family legacy. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Caitie Flum, Liza Dawson Assoc.(Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Percy Jackson fans, rejoice! Imagine a magical book whose pages come to life to show memories of events from the land of one's ancestors. Cameron grew up reading The Book of Chidani, and now finds himself transported through its pages to the fabled kingdom of Nigeria, home of the Igbo people. It's full of wondrous creatures, such as humanlike fish, the mondao, who wear gold chains and sunbathe, and deeply loyal gryphons. But it is also home to the mmo, spirits of the dead who are trapped in limbo due to the traumatic nature of their deaths. The ancestral homeland holds powerful lessons about survival as well as plenty of questions about the harm that was inflicted on its people. Cameron is a true Descendant, trained in the art of Dambe, tasked with recovering Queen Ramala's ring, crown, and scepter, lost to a bargain with the gods to protect the Igbo people from enslavers. But Cameron soon realizes that the fated role of Descendant may come at great cost. Teachers might want to use a character map to help students develop a clear understanding of who's who in this epic mythological adventure. Perry has a gift for creating dialogue and writing fast-paced, suspenseful scenes that will both enchant readers and leave them wincing in empathy. Cliff-hanger endings abound that will have students begging for more. Devoted readers of this genre will want to dive into this adventure and savor it alone, but it is also perfect for a class read-aloud. VERDICT An action-packed page-turner rooted in West African mythology that middle graders will love.--Darby Wallace Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Camp Sylvania (Trade)

#2378860 (Vol. 02) Moon Madness (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Julie Murphy

When creepy things start happening, Maggie insists on investigating. But Nora has found an interest of her own--the strange effects of Luna's homemade "moon water." It removes zits, adds lustrous shine to hair, and even seems to straighten teeth! No braces? No problem! It isn't long before the girls are caught up in another supernatural adventure. But when their friends find themselves in danger, can Maggie and Nora put their differences aside to save them?

978-0-06-334726-7 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

#2326154 (Vol. 01) Camp Sylvania (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Julie Murphy

On the last day of school, her parents break the news: Maggie isn't going to Camp Rising Star. She's being shipped off to fat camp--and not just any fat camp. There are the humiliating weigh-ins and grueling workouts, as expected. But the campers are also encouraged to donate blood--at their age! The cafeteria serves only red foods and the oddly specific rules change every day. There are even rumors of a camp ghost.

978-0-06-311402-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Maggie's finally ready to leave for her longed-for performing-arts camp, but her parents have made other plans: she's going to Camp Sylvania, a "wellness" (i.e., fat) camp. Maggie is furious, of course, but thankfully, her bunkmates are fantastic and she gets the lead in the camp production of The Music Man opposite her crush. But the counselors have some strange rules (they can't enter cabins unless they're invited in), campers start going missing, and there's an unusually alluring blood bank near the cafeteria. Yes, it's vampires, and Maggie and her friends must save the day! While the vampire plot drives the story, Maggie's personal growth absolutely steals the show: instead of any weight-based bullying, Murphy focuses on the cheerworthy solidarity Maggie feels with her fellow campers, especially when they work together to push back against some of the camp's more fatphobic practices, like public weigh-ins and banning the word fat. Readers of gentle horror will enjoy the eerier elements, and fans of contemporary middle-grade fiction will be delighted by Maggie's realization that she's perfect just the way she is.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine fth grade will be amazing because she's finally going to the performing arts camp of her dreams...until her parents send her to weight loss camp instead. While enduring inedible food and exhausting workouts, Maggie befriends her bunk mates -- Kit, an excitable Girl Scout; and Evelyn, a posh British girl -- and tries out for the camp production of The Music Man, for which she scores the title role. But the camp's owner, the glamorous influencer Sylvia, seems determined to suck as much fun from camp as possible, and some of her ideas are downright creepy, like forcing the underage campers to donate blood. When campers start disappearing, Maggie realizes it's up to her to uncover Sylvia's secrets. For starters, what is she doing with all the blood? The characters' quirkiness makes them engaging and memorable, especially Kit with her great enthusiasm for all things outdoors. Humor is woven throughout, from Maggie's frequent sass to a scene of vampires on a Zoom call. The central focus is on Maggie's journey to overcome her personal fears, but the diet culture-obsessed vampires also allow for some moments of biting satire. Bodie Shanis(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A girl must survive not only fat camp, but the vampire who runs it. Despite Maggie's plan to spend the summer with her best friend at Camp Rising Star, where she'll hopefully get over her persistent stage fright, her parents instead ship her off to Camp Sylvania so she'll finally lose her "baby fat." Though feeling betrayed, Maggie, who is White, starts to think spending afternoons on the lake might not be so bad, especially as she gets to know her bunkmates and decides to try out for the camp musical. But between the odd diet of mostly red foods, lack of technology, and mean and creepy counselors, the only place the campers truly feel comfortable is in the air-conditioned blood bank (regular donations are mandatory). When her co-star's brother goes missing along with several other campers, Maggie and her bunkmates begin an investigation into the gruesome truth at the heart of the camp. Murphy renders her camp of fat characters with nuance, giving them unique personalities beyond their size and often pointing out how others' judgments ignore their full humanity and undermine their confidence. Jokes and sweet interactions round out the story, while hints at the camp's monstrous nature create a spooky atmosphere. A continuing focus on the musical in the latter half stunts the story's growing stakes but gives Maggie the chance to fully seize her moment in the spotlight. A fun and spooky celebration of fat kids and friendship. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After years of waiting, best friends and aspiring actors Maggie Hagen and Nora Taylor Whaley are jazzed to finally be headed to Camp Rising Star for three summer weeks. But on the last day of school, Maggie's horror writer father and nurse mother suddenly announce that they're instead sending her to Camp Sylvania, "a place for big dreams, big fun, and big weight loss," run by fitness guru Sylvia Sylvania. Maggie's mom, who is obsessed with her daughter's weight, was once Sylvia's peer at the same camp, and she wants Maggie to attend now that Sylvia's bought it. Most of the counselors prove taken with influencer Sylvia and her Scarlet Diet. But a rebrand isn't the only change the camp has undergone: the property is now haunted, advertised activities are off-limits, underage attendees are asked to donate blood, and soon, campers start disappearing. Through Maggie's witty first-person narration, Murphy (Dear Sweet Pea) reveals the fat camp's horrors, both benign and supernatural, as Maggie, who experiences performance anxiety, realizes that she and her body are just right the way they are. It's a character-driven summer camp romp that takes on anti-fat bias while underscoring how parents don't always get things right. Maggie is white, Nora has brown skin; racial diversity exists among the campers. Ages 8: 12. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--Fifth grade is over, and this is the summer Maggie and her best friend, Nora, have been waiting for. Finally, it's time to go to Camp Rising Star, where Maggie hopes to get over her stage fright and perform in the camp musical. Maggie's parents spring different plans on her and insist she go to Camp Sylvania, a fat camp founded by the famous Sylvia Sylvania, with whom Maggie's mom attended fat camp as a girl. At Camp Sylvania, Maggie and her bunkmates become fast friends, and there's even a theater production to look forward to. However, things quickly become weird with a diet of strictly red foods, daily required blood donations, and creepy, mean counselors. When campers begin disappearing, and ghostly and vampiric appearances start happening, Maggie and her friends must stop the sinister plan. As the story unfolds, difficult topics of family acceptance and friendship issues are explored fully and satisfactorily. Murphy (Puddin', Dumplin') has created characters who experience all the usual tween feelings, from first crushes to confidence issues, with tenacity and determination. VERDICT Readers looking for a slightly spooky, fast-paced adventure with fully developed characters will delve into this one.--Michele Shaw Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Can You See Me? (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2216266 (Vol. 02) Do You Know Me? (Hardcover (Trade))	1	$17.99

written by Libby Scott

Everyone else in Tally's grade seems excited for the class trip... And she knows she is supposed to be too. Ever since her classmates found out she is autistic, Tally has felt more comfortable being herself. But the end-of-year trip will be an entire week -- her longest overnight trip ever. How will she sleep? What about all the bugs? What will her dog, Rupert, do without her at home?

978-1-338-65615-2 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 10.0

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Challenges continue for an autistic sixth grader as she joins her class in a weeklong end-of-year campout. Following Can You See Me? (2020) teenage author Scott and adult co-author Westcott draw upon Scott's personal experiences to portray middle schooler Tally's responses to stressful situations—both at home, where she's faced with a 12th birthday celebration, and at camp, where everything is new, including a particularly vicious mean girl. As before, the tale is told in the third person with entries from Tally's journal, in which she explains her responses to events and offers guidelines for neurotypical readers. In those entries she comes into focus as not just a mouthpiece, but a character with a distinct, individual voice. Tally is mobbed by understanding allies, including not only her parents and older sister, but a sensitive camp counselor who is in charge of a shelter for rescued pets, two fellow campers who are also neurodivergent, and a formerly trusted classmate who is sincerely remorseful about her role in a devastating incident. With their support and her own growing understanding of how to head off incipient meltdowns and to communicate her own needs clearly, Tally transforms what promises at first to be a disastrous failed experiment into a successful, memorable experience. Aside from some name cues the cast presents White. Heavy on instruction and behavior modeling, but there's a sturdy enough storyline to bear the weight. (Fiction. 9-12)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Xpress Gr 4-6-The follow-up novel to Can You See Me? continues the story of Tally Adams, sixth grader extraordinaire. Tally has many parts of being an almost-12-year-old autistic kid figured out. Chapters written in the third person explain Tally's life and her days at home and school. Between chapters, readers get insight into Tally's personal thoughts through journal entries. Tally and her class are wrapping up the school year (one that was evidently fraught with the oh-so-normal change of best friends) by attending GoCamp for a week. This is no small task for a girl who is managing her anxiety on a day-to-day, and sometimes minute-by-minute, basis. Tally's parents and teachers assure her she will be fine at camp and can handle this, despite all of her fears. At camp, things get off to a rocky start, complete with mean girls and bullying. Fortunately, Tally perseveres and finds she has more friends than she realized and has gained a few more along the way. Tally, who is white, is very self aware and conscious of her autism; the lists she includes in her journal entries of how she would like teachers and friends to treat her are fantastic recommendations for anyone. VERDICT A great fit for any middle grade collection, particularly those wanting to showcase how differences can help people connect with one another. Hand to readers who enjoyed Cynthia Lord's Rules or Holly Goldberg Sloan's Counting by 7s.-Kim Gardner, Fort Worth Country Day Sch., TX © Copyright 2021. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. No redistribution permitted.

Candymakers (Trade)

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

#1621987 (Vol. 01) Candymakers (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Wendy Mass

Four gifted twelve-year-olds, including Logan, the candymaker's son, are set to be contestants in the Confectionery Association's national competition to determine the nation's tastiest sweet, but nobody anticipates that a friendship will form between them.

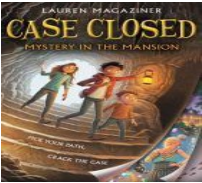

978-0-316-00258-5 ©2010 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 464 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 15.0 RC Lvl 4.5 Lexile 740

Reviews by: School Library Journal a candy factory, immortalized by Roald Dahl, is one story line that bears repeating. At the Life Is Sweet factory, four 12-year-olds gather to create new goodies for the annual Confectionery Association Conference. Logan, the Candymaker's son, dreams of winning his family's respect. Miles's parents hope the experience will help him forget a tragic accident he couldn't prevent. Daisy is fascinated by the factory, but for what reason? And Philip scribbles in his secret notebook, determined to win at all costs. When the factory's secret ingredient is stolen, the children find a common purpose: to foil the plot by creating the best candy ever. The tidy conclusion has a few contrivances, but none that will bother children. Mass has crafted a solid mystery dipped in sweet candy-making details. Character development moves a lengthy story forward in smooth increments. As each child's story emerges, the mystery becomes one bit clearer, making this a real page-turner. The characters are intricate, flawed heroes with whom readers will identify. The book's subtle message of teamwork over greed and growth through friendship will resonate with readers and educators alike. A magical setting filled with conveyor belts, chocolate jungles, and beehives makes it clear what the youngsters are attempting to save. Give this mouthwatering confection to children who like Trenton Stewart's The

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1960333 (Vol. 02) Candy Makers and the Great Chocolate Chase (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Wendy Mass It has been a few months since the Harmonicandy was chosen as the winner of the nationwide candymaking contest. Forever changed by the experience, Logan, Miles, Philip, and Daisy have returned to their regular lives. But when presented with the chance to go on tour to promote the new candy, they each have very different reasons for hitting the road. 978-0-316-08919-7 ©2016 336 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 23.0 RC Lvl 5.2 Lexile 790	1	$18.99

Case Closed (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2067172 (Vol. 01) Mystery in the Mansion (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lauren Magaziner Carlos Serrano has never solved a mystery in his life. But when Carlos's mom gets sick with a nasty flu on the morning of an investigation that could save her failing detective agency, Carlos takes on the case. In this hilarious, interactive, and puzzle-filled adventure, YOU pick which suspects to interview, which questions to ask, and which clues to follow. 978-0-06-267627-6 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Carlos doesn't know how to solve mysteries, but he'll do anything to help save his mom's detective agency. When a flu prevents her from taking up a big case, Carlos turns to his best friend, Eliza, and her little brother, Frank, to solve the mystery. From here, the mystery becomes an interactive choose-your-own-adventure: readers can help them interview suspects, find clues, close the case, and save Carlos' mom's career. The characters are real kids dealing with real worries. Carlos is so concerned about money that he takes on the near-impossible task of solving a case for his mother, but it's this concern that makes him endearing. The various options mean the story takes on a new flavor with every reading. The puzzles are based in learning, so readers work to solve each clue before moving on to the next. Frank's personality is spot-on for a six-year-old; he lights up every scene with his sincere innocence. Magaziner (Wizardmatch, 2018) blends the fun of interactive stories with a suspenseful mystery and delightful characters.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2018, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The "choose your own adventure" genre gets another reboot in Magaziner's (Wizardmatch, 2018) newest. Protagonist Carlos lives in a run-down house with his single mom, who owns a down-and-out private detective agency. When his mom wakes up ill on the morning she is to meet with a wealthy new client, Carlos takes matters into his own hands. Accompanied by his best friend, Eliza, and with her distractible younger brother, Frank, in tow, the amateur sleuth sets off to discover who has been sending death threats to well-heeled widow Guinevere LeCavalier. The adventure is told through first-person narrative rather than the second-person common to the genre, so readers see the story through Carlos' eyes as they assist in solving puzzles, mazes, and other brain teasers to get to the bottom of the mystery. Pitfalls are everywhere, with over two dozen possible endings, and only a few of them are happy. Most of the endings are silly and clearly intended to be humorous hyperbole, but the endings that result in financial ruin for Carlos and his mom border on ridicule. Readers who themselves know the anxiety of an unemployed or underemployed parent and the reality of living paycheck to paycheck are unlikely to find much humor in these catastrophes. Carlos is Latinx, while Eliza and Frank are white. Mildly amusing, though a sudoku book might be a better investment. (Adventure. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2018) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Carlos knows his mom's detective agency is in trouble; the agency has lost clients and money after several failed cases. But a major case has just been handed to his mom and her partner, and their money problems may soon be over. When his mom comes down with a terrible case of the flu, Carlos decides to step up and take on the case himself. Along with his best friend Eliza and her little brother Frank (short for Frankenstein's Monster), Carlos meets the client, Guinevere LaCavalier. Guinevere has been receiving death threats that are getting scarier and more specific. The three children must follow a winding set of clues to figure out culprit. Plenty of toilet humor and silly puns will keep younger middle grade readers engaged and giggling, though the death threat notes may prove too scary for some. The "choose your own adventure" format adds a fun twist, offering readers different options, alike whom to interview, what to examine, and which clues to follow. The strength of the book is in the riddles that readers must solve in order to move forward in the mystery. -VERDICT An entertaining romp that

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2107525 (Vol. 02) Stolen from the Studio (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lauren Magaziner Pick-your-own-path and puzzle-packed mystery. With his best friend, Eliza, and her wild little brother, Frank, at his side, Carlos must race to find the missing star of the hit series Teen Witch. But with tricky puzzles, hidden secrets, an elusive kidnapper, and dozens of impossible choices, they need your help! 978-0-06-267630-6 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 480 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$16.99

Cece Rios (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2289241 (Vol. 02) Cece Rios and the King of Fears (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Kaela Rivera Cece Rios thought saving her sister would be the end of her adventures in the world of criaturas. But part of Juana's soul is still trapped in Devil's Alley. As Cece tries to find a way to get it back using her new curandera abilities, Juana takes her fate in her own hands and sets off alone, intent on restoring her soul and getting revenge on El Sombreron. 978-0-06-321389-0 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 10.0	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 13-year-old girl embarks on a supernatural quest to restore her sister's heartbeat. In Cece Rios and the Desert of Souls (2021), Cece saved her sister, Juana, from Devil's Alley, the magical dimension inhabited by monsters like El Sombrerón and criaturas, humanlike beings who can transform into animals. But Juana has been acting strangely since her return, and it turns out that a piece of her soul is still back in El Sombrerón's lair. Accompanied by kindhearted criatura friends, Cece embarks on a dangerous trip in search of the Ocean Sanctuary to try to heal her sister's heart. Tired of waiting to be saved, Juana also secretly sets off to recover the missing piece of her soul. Written in alternating first-person chapters narrated by each of the sisters, the gripping, suspenseful story follows the girls' parallel journeys through a lush fantasy world that incorporates Mexican, Mayan, and Aztec influences. Danger lurks at every turn, but warm, loving Cece possesses an uncanny knack for finding the humanity inside monsters--supernatural and human alike. Meanwhile, brave, no-nonsense Juana is more than willing to confront any evildoer who dares get in her way with the family's heirloom fire opal knives. Their journeys see the main characters develop in touching ways, with Cece discovering powerful strengths and Juana befriending and going to great lengths to protect a loyal criatura she'd initially misjudged and mistrusted. Heartfelt, fast-paced, and entertaining. (glossary) (Fantasy. 8-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2366970 (Vol. 03) Cece Rios and the Queen of Brujas (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Kaela Rivera Cece Rios and her friends have escaped Devil's Alley, but the fight to save their world is just beginning. Despite her growing comfort with her curandera abilities, Cece is worried that she won't be strong enough to stop her most dangerous enemy yet: her tia, Catrina. Desperate for power and revenge, Catrina has seized the throne of Devil's Alley and set her sights on the living world. 978-0-06-321396-8 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 13-year-old girl leads her family, friends, and townspeople into the ultimate supernatural showdown to save the world from her cruel, powerful aunt. In a fast-paced closer to this trilogy, which incorporates Mexican and Aztec influences, Cece Rios is ambushed by evil forces. She's physically threatened by the bruja army, which descends upon Tierra del Sol to steal the Sun god's soul stone for the queen of Devil's Alley, Cece's Tía Catrina. But extraordinarily kind Cece must also fight back emotionally: "How could I trust my heart, when, for the first time, it so badly wanted to hate evil more than it wanted to love what was good?" All she wants is to help everyone be happy, but she's frustrated by community members who shun her for wielding her ocean curandera powers to try to save them. And she's deeply resentful of Tía Catrina, who created this mess by hurting anyone who got in the way of her selfish, vicious quest for power. Cece's frustration grows as her aunt sends brujas and criaturas as her deadly proxies to wound and kill those Cece loves while relentlessly pursuing the three remaining gods' souls. But, as Cece learns, only light can drive out darkness. Aside from her ability to control water, Cece's greatest power is her empathetic, probing heart, which enables her to spread her light in even the worst situations. An epilogue rounds out the narrative, offering a charming peek into the characters' grown-up lives. A sweet, beautifully written adventure. (glossary) (Fantasy. 8-14) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2220262 (Vol. 01) Cece Rios and the Desert of Souls (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kaela Rivera

Living in the remote town of Tierra del Sol is dangerous—especially in the criatura months, when powerful spirits break free from their home in Devil's Alley to threaten humankind. But Cecelia Rios has always believed there was more to the criaturas who roamed the desert, much to her family's disapproval. After all, it's common knowledge that only brujas—humans who capture and control criaturas—consort with the spirits, and brujeria is a terrible crime.

978-0-06-294755-0 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Pretending to be an apprentice bruja, an unassuming preteen enters a dangerous competition to rescue her 15-year-old sister from monstrous forces in this mesmerizing middle grade fantasy. In Tierra del Sol, an isolated town plagued by magical criaturas that roam the surrounding desert, 12-year-old Cece Rios lives as "a shadow cast from the light of other people's fires." While her older sister Juana wields fire opal in rituals to protect the town and burns "bright like the Sun," everyone believes a childhood encounter with a criatura cursed Cece with a soul like water; and left her "the weakest person in the village." But when a "powerful dark criatura" known as "El Sombreron, the Bride Stealer" snatches Juana right before her eyes, Cece must tap into her inner strength and enter a world of battles and brujas to get her sister back. With excellent pacing and rich world-building, debut author Rivera flawlessly immerses readers in the landscape of Tierra del Sol and Cece's journey ("The town lights grew brighter, each building like a lantern warming the edges of the desert"). An enthralling, finely crafted read. Includes a glossary of Spanish words with limited pronunciations. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Serene Hakim, Ayesha Pande Literary. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Cecelia Rios does the unthinkable by freeing a dark criatura from the grips of her village. Criaturas have long plagued the residents of the Tierra del Sol desert. Forewarned by her Mama, Cece knows that criaturas were creatures born from the dust and the words of the Great Namer, which aim to harm humans. Shadowed by betrayal and shame, Cece deems herself weak, believing the town whispers that water smothered her inner fire. But when her sister Juana is kidnapped by the criatura, El Sombreron, Cece grapples with a decision that rivals her Mama's beliefs. Her powerful choice unearths secrets of her family's past and leads Cece down a forbidden path. Confronted with her fears, Cece forms unexpected alliances while battling a foe unlike any criatura: herself. Set against the Tierra del Sol backdrop, intertwined with rich Mexican folklore and culturally infused language, this is a brilliantly unveiled coming-of-age story not for the faint of heart. Rivera cultivates a valiant heroine unafraid to follow her heart and stand against the norm. With a captivating story line and adversaries lurking between the pages, readers will remain engrossed as fantasy mingles with the real world. The engaging plot unravels with twists and turns, keeping readers on edge even after Cece's revelation. VERDICT Courage, determination, and unwavering love are the foundation of this debut; a much-needed addition to public and school libraries.—Suraya Jairam, Queens P.L., Hollis, NY

Celestial Mechanism Cycle (Trade)

#2257007 (Vol. 01) Nightsilver Promise (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Annaliese Avery

When thirteen-year-old Paisley discovers from her track that she is destined to die, the race is on to protect her dragon-touched brother and find her missing mother. But an ancient power stalks the sewers of London, and the Dark Dragon is rising, intent on restoring the Great Dragons and destroying Paisley's family and her world forever.

978-1-338-75446-9 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.1 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 840

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 In the Albion empire, dragons are ruthlessly outlawed, and every citizen has a set path, fated by the stars and interpreted by the Celestial Physicists. Thirteen-year-old Paisley has been eagerly awaiting details of her destiny, so she's stunned to learn that she is doomed to die before her fourteenth birthday. She keeps this news from her beloved younger brother, who has his own secret: he is among the cruelly hunted Dragon Touched, sporting a scaly leg and twisting talons. To further complicate matters, their physicist mother disappears after her latest experiment suggests that fates can be altered. It's up to the siblings to change their own fates as well as that of the world, saving all they love in the process. Avery's fast-paced and inventive novel features an alternate London that runs on clockwork and dragon fire, an Amerika where dragons still roam, and independent boroughs floating above the cities below. The history and philosophy of the empire are astonishingly detailed, and a cliff-hanger ending will send readers scrambling for a sequel. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A girl with not enough destiny and her brother, who has too much, must rescue their mother. In an alternate London, Mechanist priests preach from the Blueprints about how the Chief Designer "forged the looping golden tracks of the Celestial Mechanism" that tell people's fates. Thirteen-year-old Paisley Fitzwilliam finally learns her stars' track--and discovers that she'll die before she's 14. Meanwhile, Dax, her younger brother, who is publicly perceived as disabled, actually wears his uncomfortable leg brace to hide the fact that he is Dragon Touched. The Dragon Touched (the others are girls) all have dragon scales somewhere on their bodies. They are feared and hunted thanks to the prophecy about a male Dragon Lord who will bring back the Great Dragons. After the kids' scientist mother performs a seemingly impossible experiment that shakes society's foundations, she meets with an accident--but Paisley and Dax learn she's not dead and that it was no accident. Teaming up with their mother's apprentice, they set out to save her. In an alternate viewpoint, thief Roach serves the villainous Dark Dragon, showing readers what the heroes are up against and why. The characterization runs shallow, with didacticism from heroes and villains alike delivered in expository monologues, and the climax relies upon an underbaked deus ex machina. Most characters default to White; uncomfortably, the sole explicitly brown-skinned character calls Dax her master and pledges to give up her life for him. A promising concept that fails to deliver. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In an alternate London where the rule of Great Dragons has been displaced by Celestial Physicists; scientists who bend space and matter to their will; white 13-year-old Paisley Fitzwilliam awaits to discover which "track" destiny has in store for her. Though most children are told their fates in childhood, gaining a pattern of constellations on their wrist that maps out their future, Paisley has so far gone unmarked. But finally, she learns a horrifying truth: the stars foretell that she will die before her 14th birthday. As her time ticks down, Paisley must find a way to keep her younger brother Dax, who is Dragon Touched, safe from being hunted as a "half-breed." Meanwhile the Dark Dragon, an ancient evil, works to bring back the reign of dragons; seeking to destroy all that Paisley holds dear in the process. Avery's debut paints an imaginative portrait of steampunk London, complete with floating boroughs and aerocopter transport. Though flat worldbuilding sometimes undercuts the fast-paced narrative, and a lone brown-skinned character is presented as more icon than nuanced being, Paisley's warmth and intelligence shine through this exploration of fate's inevitability and the conflict between science and magic. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Helen Boyle, Pickled Ink. (Feb.)

#2310759 (Vol. 02) Doomfire Secret (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Annaliese Avery

Paisley Fitzwilliam is not supposed to be alive. Her stars told her she was going to die, and she did--stabbed by the Dark Dragon. Against all logic, she has come back through the Veil and now has to deal with the wreck that was left behind. Her mother is dead and her brother, Dax, has been taken by the fierce and mysterious dragon riders, the Krigare.

978-1-338-75449-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.8 AR Pts 14.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Paisley has just been betrayed by her uncle, witnessed her mother's death, and watched as her dragon-touched brother is kidnapped, and she still has to find a way to save the world. The Doomfire Secret picks up immediately after The Nightsilver Promise (2021) ends, dropping readers back into a land of dragons and destiny. Paisley is determined to rescue her brother from the Northern Realms and keep the terrifying Dark Dragon from enacting a ghastly agenda, though she quickly realizes she'll require help from an unexpected group of allies—and one possible enemy—if she's to have any chance. The enthralling adventure sees the characters travel further afield, deepening their relationships, sharpening their abilities, and expanding their horizons in all directions. The astonishingly detailed mythology of the world firmly grounds the proceedings, and this sequel more fully contrasts the lives of those who follow their prescribed (literal) life tracks and those who seek to explore the unknown. A worthy follow-up and a thrilling exploration of the joy to be found in forging your own path.

Celia Cleary (Trade)

#2278395 (Vol. 01) Problem with Prophecies (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

written by Scott Reintgen

Most people inherit eye colors or heirlooms, but for Celia Cleary, the gift of prophecy has been passed down in her family for generations. And on the 4,444th day of her life, Celia will have her first vision. But nothing could have prepared her for what she sees--the quiet boy down the street, Jeffrey Johnson, is about to die. Will Celia's gifts be enough to thwart fate? Or are some things in life inevitable?

978-1-6659-0357-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile HL 600

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A middle schooler discovers both up and down sides to being able to foretell the future. Members of the Cleary clan in alternating generations have always been granted predictive powers on their 4,444th day of life, and Celia has been eagerly looking forward to her first vision--until, that is, it comes and reveals that cute, quiet classmate Jeffrey is slated to die in a hit-and-run. Weighing her horror against her wise Grammy's warnings that fate is inexorable, she contrives a way to head off the accident...only to foresee another fatal mishap in his future. And another. By the time she's saved his life five times in a row, she's not only exhausted, but crushing on the hapless lad. (As, unsurprisingly, he is on her.) Reintgen generally keeps the tone of his series opener light, so even after Celia discovers that there's ultimately a tragic price for her intervention, the ensuing funeral service is marked by as much laughter as sorrow. The author surrounds his frantic but good-hearted protagonist with a particularly sturdy supporting cast that includes gratifyingly cooperative friends as well as her Grammy and loving, if nonmagical, mom. There don't seem to be many Cleary men around; perhaps that and certain other curious elements, like a chart listing particular Cleary specialties with names such as Dreamwalker and Grimdark, will be addressed in future entries. Main characters read as White. A very promising kickoff with arbitrary but intriguingly challenging magic. (Fantasy. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Quantity Unit Price
1 $17.99

#2323229 (Vol. 02) Drama with Doomsdays (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Scott Reintgen

Ever since the fateful visions about Jeffrey Johnson, Celia Cleary's prophecies have focused on smaller things like minor mishaps and everyday inconveniences. It's finally starting to feel like she has a handle on her powers...until things take a turn for the weird.

978-1-6659-0360-8 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 9.0

Charlie and Frog (Prebound)

Quantity Unit Price
1 $17.95

#2240642 (Vol. 01) Charlie and Frog (Prebound)

written by Karen Kane

Charlie's parents have left him (again). This time they are off to South Africa to help giant golden moles. And Charlie? He's been dumped with his TV-obsessed grandparents. Lonely and curious, Charlie heads into the village of Castle-on-the-Hudson, where a frightened old woman gives him a desperate message-in sign language. When she suddenly disappears, Charlie is determined to find answers.

978-1-5364-6971-4 ©2019 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 6.0 RC Lvl 3.2

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8-Charlie Tickler is once again abandoned by his globe-trotting parents. This time they're off to South Africa in search of giant golden moles. They usually leave him with a nanny, but this time he is sent away to his grandparent's in Castle-on-the-Hudson, a Victorian resort town with a real castle. While exploring the town, Charlie visits the library, where an agitated old woman mysteriously disappears after trying to confess something dire to Charlie in sign language. Charlie smells a mystery and is told to enlist the aid of Francine "Frog" Castle, an expert detective-in-training who is Deaf and uses American Sign Language (ASL). Charlie and Frog work together to find out who the mysterious old lady is and why two men are trying to find her as well. Enduring a whole host of adventures, including shaky gondola rides across a river, meeting an odd fortune-teller, and exploring a creepy graveyard, the two must put together a set of clues, including a mysterious gravestone cipher. This fast-paced tale features a host of offbeat characters. Kane,awho has worked as an ASL interpreter for the Deaf community, warmly depicts Frog's fluent signing and Charlie's efforts to learn the language. VERDICT In addition to a fun-filled adventure, Kane's novel

Charlie and Frog (Trade)

#2104233 (Vol. 02) Boney Hand (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Karen Kane

Charlie, the new kid at the Castle School for the Deaf continues to find unexpected mysteries in the sleepy town of Castle-on-the-Hudson with Frog, his new friend and crime-solving partner. Just when Charlie thinks everything has settled down, a piece of the school's famous history goes missing, and it's up to the Charlie and Frog to solve the case, before it's too late.

978-1-368-00628-6 ©2019 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Charlie Hernandez (Prebound)

#2154020 (Vol. 01) Charlie Hernandez and the League of Shadows (Prebound)

written by Ryan Calejo

Charlie Hernandez has always been proud of his Latin American heritage. Thanks to his abuela's stories, Charlie possesses an almost encyclopedic knowledge of monsters. But when Charlie begins to experience freaky bodily manifestation he is suddenly swept up in a world where mythical beings seem to be walking straight out of the pages of Hispanic folklore.

978-1-5364-6168-8 ©2019 5 x 7-1/2 352 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 10.0 RC Lvl 4.7 Lexile 780

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Charlie Hernandez loves his abuela's stories, drawn from Latino and Hispanic folklore, in particular legends about supernatural creatures; some good, many evil. When Charlie's parents go missing, his house burns down, and he starts growing horns and sprouting feathers, Charlie, aided by intelligent classmate Violet Rey, begins to discover that the tales his grandmother passed down to him may not have been fiction after all, and may be more entwined with his destiny than he could have ever imagined. As Violet and Charlie get closer to the secret his family was shielding, they come across brujas, La Llorona, El Sombreron, Justo Juez, and more, all while Charlie must try to hide his physical transformations from his best friends. Soon Charlie discovers that his life is deeply linked with the balance of peace between the Land of the Living and the Land of the Dead. Filled with action with fast-paced chapters, Calejo's novel is sure to draw in readers and introduce them to the magic, beauty, and history of Hispanic myths and legends (many of which are elaborated on further in a glossary for those unfamiliar with the stories). This is a perfect pick for kids who love Rick Riordan's many series, particularly for those eager for mythologies beyond Greek and Roman stories. A cliff-hanger ending only adds to the appeal.

Charlie Hernandez (Trade)

#2283026 (Vol. 03) Charlie Hernandez and the Golden Dooms (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ryan Calejo

After hitchhiking across Central and South America to rescue the Witch Queen and face off against La Mano Peluda, Charlie Hernandez is pretty much grounded for life. But after all he's been through, some quiet time at home with his parents might be nice. Though it would be better if he didn't have to share his room with his obnoxiously perfect cousin Raul, who's staying with them.

978-1-5344-8421-4 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 810

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

#2368587 (Vol. 04) Charlie Hernandez and the Phantom of Time (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ryan Calejo

Charlie has received a letter from the Land of the Dead—a dire warning from his grandmother concerning his (and the rest of La Liga's) impending demise. He doesn't have much to go on, but according to the letter, a mysterious incident in the past, known only as "The Five Donkeys," set in motion an unstoppable chain of events that will culminate in the total destruction of the Land of the Living.

978-1-6659-4291-1 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Charlie Numbers Adventures (Trade)

#2123780 (Vol. 03) Charlie Numbers and the Woolly Mammoth (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ben Mezrich

Charlie and the Whiz Kids go on a school trip to the Boston Public Gardens, where they discover the tusk of a prehistoric woolly mammoth buried in the dirt. The kids soon discover that an eccentric billionaire is using the rest of the skeleton and an elephant he stole from the zoo to create his own prehistoric garden.

978-1-5344-4100-2 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 1030

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Two gangs of middle school brainiacs use carbon dating to take down a smuggling ring. The book begins with a flash-forward: Charlie's on a cargo ship in Boston Harbor, menaced by a pair of off-the-shelf bad guys, leaping into freezing water to escape. The action cuts back two weeks to when Charlie and his sixth grade Whiz Kids discover a bone on a field trip. They identify it with the help of an excitable white-bearded science professor at Harvard: It's a woolly mammoth tusk! How did it get to Boston? To find out, they'll need the help of a new group of budding scientists, led by Janice, a black girl who uses a wheelchair and talks in disability platitudes ("I know I'm different, but we're all different, right?"). Somehow, every clue in their mystery goes back to "Africa," though neither specific African countries nor any human residents of the continent are ever referenced. The Whiz Kids are all white except Kentaro, the "little Japanese kid," and all are male except Crystal; the others are Charlie and two redheaded boys, one gangly and disorganized and the other fat with apparently comical allergies. Their new friends, who attend school in the city--unlike the Whiz Kids, who live in a wealthy suburb--offer racial diversity. What with all these characters, along with (somewhat-accurate, rarely relevant) Boston trivia and science factoids and a mystery involving a wealthy white businessman, there's no room for character development. Formulaic and busy. (Adventure. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--In this mystery for math and science lovers, the Whiz Kids discover a woolly mammoth tusk and some strange red rock in the Boston Public Gardens. Who buried these artifacts, and why? The Whiz Kids, along with some new friends and a mad scientist, are on the case. Though readers unfamiliar with the series will understand this title, they'll enjoy the books more if they read them in sequence. Elements of math and science enhance the twisty plot, and the characters are knowledgeable in various areas: rocks, fossils, and more. The Whiz Kids, along with readers, learn about carbon dating and differentiating between elephant and woolly mammoth tusks. Even Newton's third law of motion plays a role. There are also a few history lessons on Boston thrown in. The novel is packed with information and advanced vocabulary, which could hinder appeal to reluctant readers. VERDICT Recommended for series fans and advanced readers with mathematical and scientific interests. For larger collections.--Rebecca Fitzgerald, Harrison Public Library, NY Copyright 2019 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2329661 (Vol. 04) Charlie Numbers and the UFO Bash (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ben Mezrich

As his school's resident numbers guy, Charlie Lewis has always thought that if something can't be proven with a math equation, it might as well be myth—which is exactly how he feels about UFOs.

978-1-5344-4106-4 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Quantity	Unit Price
----------	------------

#2029507 (Vol. 02) Charlie Numbers and the Man in the Moon (Hardcover (Trade))

1

$16.99

written by Ben Mezrich

Charlie Lewis is really good at math. So good, that he's approached by a mysterious woman who needs his help. The woman is carrying an incredible item: an actual moon rock, one of the most valuable objects on Earth, and she's investigating the theft of a box of moon rocks from NASA's vault at the Johnson Space Center.

978-1-4814-4847-5 ©2017 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.5 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 960

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Charlie Lewis, aka Numbers, loves math, so he is super pumped when a former student of his father's, Anastasia Federov, asks him and his fellow Whiz Kid friends to help find evidence proving a former astronaut stole invaluable moon rocks from the government. Their mission: infiltrate a national paper-airplane building competition and get close to the astronaut's son, Richard, the reigning champion. Unfortunately for Charlie, the further he digs, the more he realizes Federov might not be telling the whole truth and Charlie might be participating in some major corporate espionage. The Mezrichs' second foray (no knowledge of the first book needed) into Charlie's adventures will require readers to suspend some disbelief, but those who can will be treated to behind-the-scenes STEM concepts, which will likely send many readers out to build their own paper airplanes. This quick, enjoyable STEM-related espionage adventure will certainly appeal to readers of Charlie's first adventure (Bringing Down the Mouse, 2014), but any kid who likes a smart mystery will get a kick out of it, too.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2017, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Presumed NASA functionary Anastasia Federov offers child prodigy Charlie "Numbers" Lewis and his band of sixth-grade geniuses a once in a lifetime opportunity for a recommendation to work at NASA. That offer is dependent on a mission: infiltrate a paper airplane-building contest to get close to Richard Caldwell, son of astronaut Buzz Caldwell, and prove that Buzz stole moon rocks that mysteriously disappeared a few months ago. Reluctant to pass up an opportunity to work for NASA in the future (even if Anastasia's intentions are shrouded in secrecy) or to jeopardize the Caldwells' reputation, Charlie justifies accepting the mission in hopes of clearing their name. Their understanding of the interactions between matter and energy has gotten the team out of jams before, but could physics even avert criminal charges? The Mezrichs take a K.I.S.S. approach to aerodynamics as it applies to constructing paper planes capable of going the distance, and they make learning about resistance, gravity, lift, and thrust fun and unintimidating. Though laced with technical terminology that should appeal to the math- and science-minded, the story is lively enough to engage all kinds of readers. QB

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Mezrich's wife coauthors this [Bringing Down the Mouse] sequel, in which likable numbers whiz Charlie and his fellow sixth-grade pals land a coveted spot at a paper-airplane competition in Washington, DC. The team believes it is working undercover to help NASA recover stolen moon rocks, but something more devious is afoot. Historical and scientific explanations sometimes awkwardly pause the otherwise swiftly moving plot. (Copyright 2018 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Charlie "Numbers" Lewis and his Whiz Kids explore aviation history (and dabble in corporate espionage).Sixth-grader Charlie, a white boy, and his four somewhat diverse friends are very smart in their fields of expertise. They had quite the adventure at Incredio Land (Bringing down the Mouse, 2014); now they've been asked by Anastasia Federov, a former student of Charlie's MIT-professor dad's, to enter a paper-airplane competition. They are to befriend Richard Caldwell, the reigning champ and son of former astronaut (and corporate sponsor of the contest) Buzz Caldwell, and to find out if said former astronaut stole moon rocks from the U.S. government. Of course, nothing turns out the way they expect. Richard's a smart, gracious kid. Anastasia might have faked credentials to get the Whiz Kids into the contest...and faked a lot more than that. Can they figure out what's going on and not come out looking like the bad guys? The Mezrichs follow Charlie's debut with an entertaining-enough thriller dotted with history and science lessons. Though readers will likely give a pass to improbabilities in the story (underground, secret labs and daring escapes riding museum-piece aircraft), improbabilities in the lives of the characters (their parents let their 12-year-olds travel from Boston to D.C. unaccompanied, and another kid sets off fire alarms for fun in a crowded hotel ballroom without repercussions) will leave them scratching their heads and closing the book. More facile than fun. (Adventure. 8-11) COPYRIGHT(2017) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7-It seemed a legitimate proposal to Charlie: help NASA recover stolen moon rocks. What geek wouldn't want to help NASA? Even the adults were convinced by Anastasia Federov, a former student of Charlie's absent-minded professor father, to allow Charlie and his team of friends, known as the Whiz Kids, to travel for a supposed paper airplane aerodynamics competition in Washington, DC. The rocket company sponsoring the competition is suspected of stealing the moon rocks, and Anastasia wants Charlie and his team to scope them out. But as Charlie and the Whiz Kids get up to speed on paper airplanes, Anastasia and her scary associate, Mr. Porter, start leaning on Charlie to break into the owner's private office and the company lab to look for the stolen items. Now Charlie really is flying by the seat of his pants, using his affinity for numbers to rapidly calculate speed, trajectory, and lift to figure out a way to save himself, his team, their reputation, and the moon rocks from Anastasia and her nefarious plans. There may be just a touch too much science exposition in this follow-up to Bringing Down the Mouse, but it is always interesting and the action never stops for long. VERDICT Another rollicking adventure with Charlie and his friends that will delight followers and fans of heist novels like James Ponti's Framed and Varian -Johnson's The Great Greene Heist.-Gretchen Crowley, formerly at Alexandria City Public Libraries, VA Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#1777839 (Vol. 01) Bringing Down the Mouse (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ben Mezrich

Recruited for his exceptional math prowess by a group of kids who want to use their collective skills to rig the game system at the world's biggest theme park, Charlie is caught up in the thrill of the effort before he is overcome by doubts about the risks they are taking.

978-1-4424-9626-2 ©2014 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.1 AR Pts 12.0 RC Lvl 8.4 Lexile 1100

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Book Page What happens when a group of middle school geniuses trains for months to win a special contest at a Disney World-style Florida theme park called Incredoland? That's the premise of Bringing Down the Mouse, a page-turning caper whose hero is sixth-grader Charlie Lewis, known as "Numbers," the nerdy son of an MIT professor dad and a mom with two Ph.D.s.

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Charlie is a genius at math and a whiz at probability. So he has a good idea what to expect from sixth grade at Nagassack Middle School: verbal humiliation and physical intimidation to go along with his good grades. He already has a semi-derogatory nickname, Numbers, and he and his friends at the genius table in the cafeteria get called the Dork Brigade or Nerd Herd. He was not expecting a couple of cool older kids to recruit him into a supersmart gang that meets in secret to practice beating carnival games. Who would? Mezrich is the Harvard-educated author of the adult book Bringing Down the House (2002), about six MIT students who took their card-counting skills to Las Vegas and cleaned up. This age-adjusted version takes Charlie and his coconspirators to a Disneyland-esque theme park, where they are manipulated by their mentor into beating a game with a substantial payout. Mezrich addresses themes of loyalty and honesty while keeping the action tight and the dialogue snappy. Unexpectedly engrossing. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2014, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Math, chemistry and a little physics look to defeat midway games at a Florida theme park. Pleased to be asked to join a group of smart, interesting kids to work on a secret project, sixth-grader Charlie "Numbers" Lewis goes along with a plan to win a contest at Incredoland. Thriller-writer Mezrich brings themes he's used in popular adult titles including Bringing Down the House (2002) to his first middle-grade foray. Charlie has a perfectly good group of long-time friends, known as the Geek Squad (or Dork Brigade, or Nerd Herd...), whom he nearly abandons in favor of the Carnival Killers, led by two supercool seventh graders and a beautiful teacher's aide. He spends all his free time practicing midway gaming skills and thinking about defeating the Wheel of Wonder so that when he and best friend Jeremy go on the class trip, he can win the park's annual contest. Oddly, his friends don't mind; when Charlie needs them, they step up to make his final triumph possible. The author's breathless writing leans heavily on telling rather than showing. The middle school bullies are overdrawn, and the quirkiness of Charlie's friends is exaggerated. There's more sensation than substance in this page-turner. Fast-paced and full of behind-the-scenes detail, this will be an easy sell to readers not too picky about their prose. (Thriller. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2014) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8-Charlie sees everything in terms of mathematical equations, which has earned him the nickname Numbers. He hangs out with the Whiz Kids until the day he is invited to join a secret gang, the Carnival Killers, a group of clever middle schoolers led by a mysterious college kid. They plan on using math and physics to perpetrate a scheme to scam the scammers, those infamous carnival games that no one can ever win. But as Charlie gets pulled into the plan and begins to apply his logical and mathematical intellect to the games, something just doesn't quite add up. The pacing is well developed, building tension to almost a fever pitch as the Carnival Killers perfect their skills and arrive at Incredoland to take on the biggest scam of all. The mystery of who is truly behind the schemes adds another dimension to the adventure. The plot has several unexpected and well-placed twists, and keeps readers guessing until the very end. A good fit for fans of Gordon Korman's "Swindle" series (Scholastic, 2008).-Gretchen Crowley, Alexandria City Public Libraries, VA (c) Copyright 2014. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Charlie Thorne (Prebound)

#2374602 (Vol. 04) Charlie Thorne and the Royal Society (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stuart Gibbs

Charlie Thorne is used to being on the run. Ever since she was recruited by the CIA to track down Einstein's most dangerous equation, Charlie-and former CIA agents Dante

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Garcia and Milana Moon-have traveled around the world to prevent history's greatest discoveries from falling into the wrong hands. But after beating others to the secrets hidden by Einstein, Darwin, and Cleopatra, they find they are not the only ones searching for an immensely powerful discovery of Isaac Newton's.

978-1-6659-3489-3 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Charlie Thorne (Trade)

#2281059 (Vol. 03) Charlie Thorne and the Curse of Cleopatra (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stuart Gibbs

After tracking down incredible discoveries by Einstein and Darwin, Charlie is back. This time, the great ruler Cleopatra has left behind an extremely valuable and powerful treasure, its location encoded on an ancient stone tablet. In a breathless adventure that takes her across the globe, Charlie must fight for her life against ruthless enemies, match wits with Cleopatra, and solve the two-thousand-year-old mystery to prevent the most powerful treasure of the ancient world from falling into the wrong hands.

978-1-5344-9934-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.4 AR Pts 12.0 Lexile 880

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews How better to celebrate a 13th birthday than by following clues to a priceless treasure hidden for more than 2,000 years while being hotly pursued by armed thugs and Black Ops units? Still by far the smartest person in every room she enters, Charlie continues her quest to track down the world's greatest treasures while keeping herself and the fantastically dangerous formula only she knows out of the hands of an increasing number of intelligence agencies and other bad actors. A bit of ancient steganography sends her, with her half brother, Dante, and his partner, Milana, both CIA agents, from Giza to the Acropolis, the Roman Forum and then the Metropolitan Museum of Art--for, at each stop, a new clue or artifact paired to heavy infodumps about the locale's historical and archaeological highlights. Not to mention one or more ambushes with, occasionally, gunfire, one or more high-speed chases (including one in a chariot, which is at least different), and chances for Charlie's overachieving sidekicks each to take out entire squads of gunmen sent by the Israeli Mossad, the Egyptian Mukhabarat, an Egyptian billionaire, and even the CIA. The prize turns out to be worth the kerfuffle, but even though this is only the third episode, the plot is all manufactured action strung together with mechanical predictability. The characterizations are equally facile. Multiracial Charlie is described as having globally diverse racial origins. Rattles along to thrill-a-minute tracks, but the series shows signs of losing steam. (Action adventure. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Charming Life of Izzy Malone (Trade)

#1985270 (Vol. 01) Charming Life of Izzy Malone (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jenny Lundquist

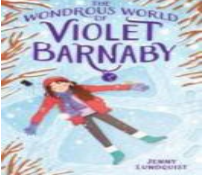

Izzy Malone, a spunky girl who wants to be part of an elite rowing club, must first attend a very unique charm school.

978-1-4814-6032-3 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 750

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Izzy feels like a sore thumb in a room full of pinkies. She's a spirited girl who wants to be a part of the competitive after-school rowing team, the Dandelion Paddlers, but is best known as "Toad Girl" by her classmates. She describes herself as the "kid in class that everyone secretly (and not-so-secretly) thinks is weird." She lives with her older sister (a musical prodigy who gets more than her fair share of attention), her mom (who is running for mayor), her father (who is the town's police chief), her grandma, and her great-aunt. Her parents enroll her in Mrs. Whippie's Earn Your Charm School, where she learns about manners while being prompted to do her best and is rewarded with charms for a bracelet. This contemporary realistic novel is told in the first person, and readers will root for Izzy. VERDICT A well-executed and fun school romp. Hand this to middle grade readers looking for light and entertaining fare.—Helen Foster James, University of California at San Diego Copyright 2016. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2017757 (Vol. 02) Wondrous World of Violet Barnaby (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Jenny Lundquist Violet is dealing with the loss of her mom and trying to handle her new blended family, with the added awkwardness of having one of her teachers as her stepmom. 978-1-4814-6035-4 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 740	1	$17.99

Children of the Black Glass (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2315289 (Vol. 01) Children of the Black Glass (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Anthony Peckham In an unkind alternate past, somewhere between the Stone Age and a Metal Age, Tell and his sister Wren live in a small mountain village that makes its living off black glass mines and runs on brutal laws. When their father is blinded in a mining accident, the law dictates he has thirty days to regain his sight and be capable of working at the same level as before or be put to death. 978-1-6659-1313-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 720	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist As dark and flinty as shards of the titular obsidian used here both for weapons and for magic, this debut fantasy takes two children raised in an isolated, impoverished mountain community of glass miners down the slopes to Halfway—a sprawling town of ruthless traders and dangerous, enigmatic sorcerers—to be attacked, robbed, and swept up in a violent civil conflict. Though Peckham gives 14-year-old Tell and his younger sister, Wren, new city friends and a cantankerous donkey as appealing allies, it's their shared toughness of mind and well-honed abilities to think and work together that get them through challenges ranging from finding a way to free the captured and enslaved men of their village to coping with the shattering discovery that their own absent and presumed dead mother had readily abandoned them to chip out a new life for herself. The harsh tone and brutal twists will leave readers in a sober frame, but the tale, which ends with a promise of further episodes, features embedded glints of loyalty, courage, and friendship to lighten the load.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Greed, magic, and prejudice fuel political machinations in screenwriter Peckham's thinly built fantasy debut. Furious 14-year-old Tell and cheerful 12-year-old Wren belong to the People of the Black Glass, so named for the vein that burrows through the mountain on which their remote village is perched. Things grow dire when the siblings' father is blinded in his remaining eye while carving out a slab of the valuable material, which is mined as the community's sole income source. Their father is given 30 days to heal, after which he'll be sent up the glacier to die and the children will live with other families. Given the thin sheet of "sorcerer's glass" by his father, Tell undertakes the perilous trek to the city of Halfway, accompanied by Wren and faithful mule Rumble; there, they plan to sell the glass to the most powerful and wealthy sorcerer they can find. But the duo soon encounters a secret, bloody coup that threatens to rend Halfway and endanger their people, and must form a shaky alliance to help them navigate a hostile city. Surface-level characterization mires observations on class, intergenerational trauma, and wealth disparity in this brutal, plot-heavy adventure. Characters default to white. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Jodi Reamer, Writers House. (Mar.)

Children of the Flying City (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2268319 (Vol. 01) Children of the Flying City (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Jason Sheehan Taken in the night and delivered to the flying city of Highgate when he was a small child, Milo Quick has never known another home. War is coming to Highgate. As a massive armada surrounds the city, a small ship, the Halcyon, slips through the blockade. Led by a charismatic captain, the unconventional crew of the Halcyon has come to collect Milo for a bounty. But they too are being watched.	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 In this action-packed steampunk fantasy, Milo Quick, 13 and an orphan, lives in the flying city of Highgate. He gets by with the help of his close friends, Jules and Dagda, and by engaging in some less-than-lawful pursuits. Complicating his already dangerous life is the fact that Highgate is full of locked doors and dark secrets, one of which could start a war if discovered. When a massive armada emerges and surrounds the city, the small spaceship Halcyon manages to get past it with a more personal mission--capture Milo. Milo and his friends endeavor to stay safe, while coming to realize that their city is not the place they once thought. Sheehan crafts a richly detailed world and uses multiple points of view to relate the narrative, keeping the characters central to the high-stakes plot. Following in the tradition of Kenneth Oppel's Airborn (2004) and Philip Reeve's Fever Crumb (2010), this fantasy, full of lessons about close friendships and the power of fighting for what's right, will hook readers seeking adventure. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews As fleets of hostile warships gather over a floating city, a young thief finds himself the object of an urgent manhunt. Readers can be excused for coming away bewildered by Sheehan's competing storylines, disconnected events, genre-bending revelations, and refusal to fit any of the major players in the all-White-presenting cast consistently into the roles of villain, ally, or even protagonist. Continually shifting through points of view and annoyingly punctuated with an omniscient narrator's portentous commentary, the tale centers on the exploits of 12-year-old street urchin Milo Quick and his squad of juvenile ragamuffins (seemingly juvenile at any rate; one is eventually revealed to be something else entirely) in an aerial city of Dickensian squalor threatened by a multinational flying armada. Though a lot of people are after Milo, ranging from the swashbuckling crew of a flying privateer hired (ostensibly) to kidnap him and a vengeful punk bent on bloody murder to a sinister truant officer paid lavishly by mysterious parties to watch over him, he ultimately winds up--or so it seems--being no more than a red herring all along. The actual target is revealed piecemeal in conversations and flashbacks before the commencement of a climactic bombardment and an abrupt cutoff in which three side characters, miraculously shrugging off multiple knife and bullet wounds, themselves suddenly take center stage to set up a sequel. A few promising, even brilliant bits are lost in an ill-constructed jumble of warring plotlines and ambiguous agendas. (Science fiction. 11-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In his children's debut, Sheehan (Cooking Dirty, for adults) offers up an absorbing, action-packed series opener centering deeply resourceful child protagonists. When he was five, Milo Quick was taken from his father, and then handed to "a different man and a different man after that," until "escaping became his vocation." Now almost 13, the presumed-white boy survives on the treacherous streets of congested Flying City Highgate. Part of a gang of child thieves; along with protective, red-haired Jules and pale-skinned, quiet Dagda, who has facial scars; Milo enjoys "all the great and sweeping joys that came from being a child left alone." When a blockade of airships and waterships creates a growing stranglehold on the city, multiple factions home in on Milo as a person of interest: the cruel Total King of Highgate's thieves demands increased tithes from Milo's gang, and the pirates of the airship Halcyon seek to steal him away. As Milo and his friends struggle to stay alive in the increasingly dangerous city, events quickly spiral out of control, revealing Milo's true purpose. An arch, omniscient narrative; by turns brutal and sweet; unspools into an ambitious, wide-ranging story of survival and loyalty set in a vividly described locale reminiscent of Victorian London. Ages 10: up. Agent: David Dunton, Harvey Klinger. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—There is a boy and he is quick, so quick he can escape the police as he thieves, so quick that he has named himself Milo Quick though that is not his name. There is a girl, if she can be called that. She is called Mouse, but her name is Dagda. She, like Milo, is pale skinned and dark haired, but a killing machine, 12 years old for hundreds of years. She is wanted by the Armada that is moving airships to surround the Flying City where they live. He is wanted by a suspicious group of people led by The Captain who are risking their lives for the money to extract him. Milo is also being watched by the dreaded Sandman, while Dagda is being repaired by a toymaker who does not have the skills or tools as the city is crumbling, and losing its knowledge of technology. Can they escape before they are killed? Will the only home they have known be destroyed? This steampunk world feels both fantastical and based in a reality of time past, focusing on children who live on the streets and create communities without adult supervision. It feels shabby and harsh with rotten teeth and greasy hair galore (although not much diversity in appearances), yet readers will want to visit because there is something magical about the place. The narrative style is unique but feels inconsistent, at times breaking the fourth wall to talk directly to readers and trying to create a tone not unlike that in "A Series of Unfortunate Events." The point of view bounces around to a different character with each short chapter, some of them playing bit parts in the story. This narration style creates a barrier and prevents deeper emotional connection to the story. This book ends on a true cliffhanger, with everyone hanging in a balance. VERDICT A great example of dystopian steampunk for middle graders, but some might find the narrative voice and style an obstacle. —Clare A. Dombrowski

Chloe by Design (Stone Arch Books)

	Quantity	Unit Price
#1776645 (Vol. 02) First Cut (Library Binding) written by Margaret Gurevich There are still two rounds of auditions to go if Chloe wants to earn a spot on her favorite reality fashion show, and each one is more challenging than the next. 978-1-4342-9178-3 ©2015 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 96 pgs.	1	$19.49

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# FIC AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 2.0 GR Lvl V Lexile 780

#177664 (Vol. 03) Unraveling (Library Binding)

written by Margaret Gurevich

Chloe arrives in New York and the competition the competition gets under way.

978-1-4342-9179-0 ©2015 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 96 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# FIC AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 2.0 GR Lvl W Lexile 770

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.49

#177646 (Vol. 04) Design Destiny (Library Binding)

written by Margaret Gurevich

Does Chloe have what it takes to make it to the top and win the internship of her dreams in the final challenge?

978-1-4342-9180-6 ©2015 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 96 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# FIC AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 2.0 GR Lvl V Lexile 770

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.49

#1933474 (Vol. 07) Runway Rundown (Library Binding)

written by Margaret Gurevich

The pressure and responsibilities mount for Chloe as the countdown to New York Fashion week begins and she returns to Teen Design Diva as a guest judge.

978-1-4965-0506-4 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 96 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 2.0 GR Lvl W Lexile 690

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.49

#1933472 Fashion Week Finale (Library Binding)

written by Margaret Gurevich

Will Chloe's fashion dreams continue or does New York Fashion Week mark the last of Chloe Montgomery, fashion designer?

978-1-4965-0507-1 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 96 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 2.0 GR Lvl W Lexile 720

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.49

#1971830 Back to Basics (Library Binding)

written by Margaret Gurevich

When Chloe returns home from her internship in New York City, she starts to realize that settling back into her old life might be harder than she thought. While she was learning the ins and outs of the fashion industry, her friends were getting ready for senior year and all that goes along with it including college applications. As much as she tries to fall into her old routine, Chloe can't help feeling left out and left behind.

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.49

She knows she wants to be a designer, but deciding on a fashion school is another story. Ane when she agrees to design dresses for Winter Formal, the pressure grows even more intense. Can Chloe handle the stress of senior year?

978-1-4965-3261-9 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 96 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 760

#1971829 All or Nothing (Library Binding)
written by Margaret Gurevich

Senior year is full of surprises as Chloe finds herself becoming friends with Nina LeFleur her formal rival as they work together to design dresses for Winter Formal and complete their fashion portfolios before the application deadlines. But as Chloe grows closer to Nina, her relationship with her best friend Alex start to suffer. And when Chloe heads back to New York to visit colleges, Alex grows even more distant. With school and personal pressure mounting, Chloe can't help but wonder if it's possible to balance her relationships and her responsibilities.

978-1-4965-3263-3 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 96 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 690

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.49

#1971825 Final Cut (Library Binding)
written by Margaret Gurevich

It's getting down to the wire on more than one of Chloe's senior year responsibilities. Portfolio and application deadlines are around the corner, as is Winter Formal, and Chloe has a big decision ahead of her New York or LA? With pros and cons for both locations, it's up to Chloe to make the final choice and decide where her future lies.

978-1-4965-3264-0 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 96 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 640

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.49

Chloe by Design (Trade)

#1934178 Chloe by Design: Balancing Act (Hardcover (POB))
written by Margaret Gurevich

16-year-old Chloe Montgomery beat out the competition to win Teen Design Diva, but she already has another challenge to face - tackling her internship. After winning the first season of the fashion reality show, Chloe is ready to start her job with a famous designer, Stefan Meyers, in New York City. But with an old crush and new challenges to contend with, Chloe discovers that fast-paced fashion industry isn't for the faint of heart. Will she be able to make it work, or will the balancing act prove to be too much for this budding designer?

978-1-62370-258-8 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 96 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 720

Quantity 1
Unit Price $14.95

Reviews by: Booklist This entry into the Chloe by Design series follows the 16-year-old as she preps for Fashion Week while also facing decisions about her personal life: male friendship versus romance, and how to deal with the competing personalities found in dorm living. All of these challenges help her gain insight into her strengths and weaknesses, as well as her ultimate career direction. Gurevich and illustrator Hagel have found a sure-fire formula: describe the world of teen fashion while illustrating Chloe's own outfits and design sketches in colored pencil. Another strong choice for young teens fascinated with Project Runway and all of its associated drama.--Bradburn, Frances Copyright 2015 Booklist

#2023324 Chloe by Design: Measuring Up (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Margaret Gurevich

Senior year is full of surprises when Chloe returns home from her internship in New York City. While she was learning the ins and outs of the fashion industry, her friends were getting ready for senior year. Settling back into her old life proves to be harder than Chloe thought. As much as she tries to fall into her old routine, she can't help feeling left out and left behind. Chloe is ready to realize her dream of being a designer, but deciding on a fashion school is another story -- especially when that means deciding between California or New York. And when she agrees to design dresses for Winter Formal, the pressure grows even more intense. Can Chloe handle the stress of senior year and figure out what her future holds?

978-1-62370-915-0 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 730

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$9.95

Choose Your Own Adventure (Prebound / Random House)

#2325281 Stranger Things: Heroes and Monsters (Prebound)

written by Rana Tahir

In Netflix's Stranger Things, a group of young friends explore supernatural forces and secret government exploits in Hawkins, Indiana, in the 1980s. As they search for answers, the children embark on incredible adventures and unravel extraordinary mysteries.

978-1-5364-7914-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$24.95

Chronicles of G.A.I.A. (Trade)

#2349385 (Vol. 01) Future Hack (Hardcover (POB))

written by Dana Klisanin

Twelve-year-old Lexa Andromeda loves all things futuristic. But she's about to discover that sci-fi isn't just the stuff of stories. When she loses her beloved dog and turns to pranking, she's sent to Thistleton Academy, a boarding school for Highly Creatives. That's when things get strange. She's contacted by Norbu, a boy from the future who works for G.A.I.A. a global think tank determined to change the course of history. They need Lexa's help to prevent a mass extinction event and Thistleton Academy is at the center of it all. With the help of her friends, a high-tech wearable, and a holographic cat, Lexa sets off on a journey that will test everything she thought she knew and leave you inspired, captivated, and pondering life's biggest mysteries.

978-1-938447-61-7 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 416 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A grieving tween is tasked with stopping a fatal cataclysm in Klisanin's earnest debut. To cope with the loss of her dog Zara, whom she felt was her soulmate, white-presenting seventh grader Alexandra Andromeda throws herself into pranking. When a stunt goes too far, she's sent to Thistleton Academy for Highly Creatives, an environmentally focused boarding school where her own parents met years ago. As she contends with frequent discipline for her continued antics, Lexa is stalked by a ghostly boy of a blue hue who reveals that he's from the future; and warns her that Thistleton is the source of an imminent mass extinction event that she must prevent. With the aid of an intersectionally diverse group of friends, Lexa must work to find a way to not only escape Thistleton but also save the world. Cartoonish villainy and a standard boarding school setting weigh down a conveniently plotted storyline. Still, Lexa's grief over Zara's death is palpable, and messaging around the importance of environmental education and individual activism are heartening. Eerie and atmospheric grayscale art by illustrators Klisanin and Xu features throughout. Ages 9: 12. (Oct.)

Chronicles of Never After (Trade)

#2357180 (Vol. 04) Missing Sword (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Melissa De la Cruz

To save her mother from Olga's clutches, Filomena and her friends set off for new adventures in the legendary land of Camelot. There they must find the sword of Excalibur—the only thing that can save Fil's mother from a mysterious illness. But there's mischief afoot in Camelot. Fil and the crew soon realize there is another familiar story wreaking havoc in the land . . . that of the Wizard of Oz! With the help (and hindrance) of the Wicked Witches of the East and West, lions and tigers and bears will be the least of Fil and the crew's troubles . . .

978-1-250-86629-5 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

#2307366 (Vol. 03) Broken Mirror (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Melissa De la Cruz

The Never After crew is back for another twisted adventure. This time, they're off to Snow Country—that is, after they rescue the beleaguered Lord Sharif of Nottingham from the evil Robin Hood, who has been plaguing the land with his thievery and mischief. But Robin's antics aren't the only dangers afoot in the Kingdom of Never After.

978-1-250-82725-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Filomena, Jack, Alistair, Beatrice, Byron Bessley, and Gretel have a whole new set of trials before them. Heading for Snow Country to save Never After from the fate of the ogres and King Richard, the group of six knows it's a race against time before the kingdom is lost to evil. Not only is Never After threatened, but so is Filomena's adoptive mother's health in Pasadena. After being sidetracked by the wily Robin Hood, the team arrives at Princess Jeanne's castle where they learn her crown has been stolen and she can't be crowned. To add to that, the evil Queen Olga is at it again, turning Prince Charming into a frog and even crossing into the mortal world. On the search for the League of Seven, who can save the kingdom, Filomena and her friends make an unlikely discovery. VERDICT An engaging third book to the "Never After" series; de la Cruz is sure to delight fans of this fractured fairy tale.

ChupaCarter (Trade)

#2286835 (Vol. 01) ChupaCarter (Hardcover (Trade))

written by George Lopez

In this illustrated contemporary fantasy, twelve-year-old Jorge is lonely and resentful after being sent to live with his grandparents. His first day at his new school doesn't go well after catching the attention of his belligerent principal and the school bullies, so Jorge might be a little desperate for a friend. But the only kid who shares his interest in junk food and games turns out to be a young chupacabra—a legendary monster whose kind is known for being bloodthirsty livestock killers.

978-0-593-46597-4 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 730

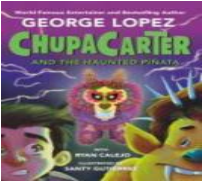

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews ng secret friend understandably complicates 12-year-old Jorge's life. To kick off their middle-grade series, celebrity comedian Lopez and his co-author Calejo send young Chicano Angeleno Jorge Lopez to his abuelos in remotest New Mexico—where, as if being threatened by his new school's deranged White principal in an office festooned with animal trophies isn't scary enough, he stumbles on a toothy and terrifying monster in the local woods. Carter, as the cryptid introduces himself, turns out to be just a lonely young chupacabra separated from his family and hiding out from both human hunters and also a questing pack of vicious vampire dogs called dips. In a narrative punctuated with wisecracks and flavored with Spanish phrases and slang, Jorge's struggles with his own tendency to respond smartly to taunts and bullying parallel strenuous efforts to keep his new friend's existence secret. His failure at both (though by the end he does seem a little better at impulse control) drives a plot laden with both comical situations and hair-raising brushes with death...including no less than two near misses for Jorge from the aforementioned school official. By the end, though, Carter has been bundled off to safety in Mexico, and Jorge has two staunch allies at school in vegan activist Liza, who reads as Black, and Ernie, identified as Native American. Dialogue and punchlines spill over into Gutiérrez's droll illustrations. Frights and fun in equal measure. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After getting into trouble one too many times, sarcastic ("Your smart mouth just bought you a one-way ticket to detention," his previous principal used to say) Chicano Jorge Lopez, 12, is sent to live with his abuelos in a "dusty, deserted, desert-y armpit of a town in the middle of Nowheresville, New Mexico." He doesn't love anything about his new life, especially not his "snooty-falooty private school" or his white, bombastic, hunting-enthusiast principal, until he befriends woods-dwelling chupacabra Carter, a blood-drinking humanoid creature. Carter has been hiding from mortal hunters and folkloric vampire dogs after being separated from his family, and Jorge promises to keep him safe. But as the hunters close in on the duo, Jorge enlists two of his classmates; Star Trek fan Ernie, who is Native American, and Black, vegan, "uber smart" Liza; to get Carter to safety. Gutiérrez's (The Garden Plot) lively b&w illustrations expertly render Jorge and Carter's occasionally over-the-top, adrenaline-filled adventures. Actor/comedian Lopez and Calejo (the Charlie Hernandez series) offer a rollicking tale brimming with Latinx folklore and culture about finding one's home in the unlikeliest of places that never takes itself too seriously. Ages 8: 12. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Readers meet Jorge while he is sitting on his roof, stewing over how his mom sent him to live with his grandparents in New Mexico. Jorge is not looking forward to starting a new school, and his first day does not go well after he tries to help another student but finds himself on the wrong side of the principal. Later that day, Jorge ends up saving a chupacabra, Carter, from the principal after Carter saves him from almost being hit by the principal's car. The two become fast friends. Jorge gets Carter blood (chupacabras are mythical creatures known for killing livestock) and they talk about their lives. Jorge also befriends two kids at school, Liza and Ernie, and introduces them to Carter. Carter eventually has to leave because there are real monsters and principal hunting for him. This novel has humorous moments. Jorge is a kid who tends to act before he thinks, which is how he ends up living with his grandparents. He has trouble taking responsibility for his actions but is shown to have a good heart when he speaks up for Ernie and helps Carter. Jorge and his friends do not sound like typical kids, using dated vocabulary (chillax, dweeb). Jorge is fleshed out a little by the end, but most of the characters are superficial. While there is some good and gross humor, the language is a little more advanced than one would expect, which may make some scenes not land as well as they should. There are also some dated references such as Speedy Gonzales and Caspar the Friendly Ghost that intended readers might not get. VERDICT While there are funny moments in this fantasy-infused tale, this is an additional purchase.--Michelle Lettus Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2324316 (Vol. 02) ChupaCarter and the Haunted Pinata (Hardcover (Trade)) written by George Lopez In this hilarious follow-up to ChupaCarter, world-famous entertainer George Lopez delivers a spooky tale of mystery and revenge starring Carter, the fearsome but friendly chupacabra! 978-0-593-46600-1 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 770	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Comedian Lopez teams up with award-winning Calejo (the Charlie Hernandez series) in their second installment in the ChupaCarter series. Native Californian Jorge Lopez is finally feeling grounded in his new home of Boca Falls, New Mexico, and the company of best friends Ernie, Liza, and Carter (the chupacabra). Those happy feelings are quickly upended when mysterious fires and sightings of a haunted piñata materialize. Believing these events to be the works of the Blackbriar curse, which occurs every six years, the townspeople are on edge. Things only get worse when Liza's father's butcher shop goes up in flames. Convinced that an arsonist is afoot, Jorge and the gang decide to investigate this unnerving urban legend before their friendship falls victim to it. Lopez and Calejo have created another exciting adventure for young readers that is sprinkled with Spanish words and phrases. The humor in the story is elevated by Gutiérrez's artwork. A great reminder that you can count on your friends to help save the day.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A rash of mysterious fires sets Jorge and his amigos on the trail of an evil arsonist...or maybe a vengeful ghost. Being as his best friend, Carter, is the 7-foot tall, wolflike cryptid met in the series opener--and now just back in town--Jorge Lopez has trouble dismissing a scary old local legend about an evil incendiary piñata possessed by the ghost of a despised rich kid. Still, since the grown-ups in Boca Falls seem oddly uninterested in finding out who, human or otherwise, is burning down local businesses, Jorge nervously enlists his fanged but friendly buddy to join science-minded classmate Liza in an investigation that quickly turns up a positively bountiful array of clues and suspects. Seasoning the eponymous narrator's account with Spanish words, including flavorful Chicano slang, Lopez and Calejo alternate chuckles and chills as the young detectives struggle with their fears, fend off prankster "bully-jerk" Zane, puzzle over the significance of seemingly contradictory findings, and, in the wake of a string of (as Jorge puts it) "übercreepy" incidents and narrow squeaks, wind up stuck in a ruinous old mansion with an entire gang of crazed villains eager to explain their motives before setting one final, deadly blaze. Gutiérrez's frequent monochrome illustrations feature both a racially diverse cast and action and dialogue that segue smoothly into the narrative, offering the feeling of a graphic novel-prose hybrid format. A fresh, lively escapade with lots of übercreepy bits. ¡Órale! (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2368478 (Vol. 03) ChupaCarter and the Screaming Sombrero (Hardcover (Trade)) written by George Lopez A cursed Aztec dagger. A five-hundred-year-old witch's riddle. And a... screaming sombrero? These are the ancient artifacts that mysteriously hold the answer to the location of the priceless El Dorado treasure hidden in New Mexico-not far from where Jorge and Carter live. When their friend Ernie's dad is accused of stealing the artifacts, it's a race against time to clear his name. 978-0-593-46603-2 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 750	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A museum heist and a mouthy talking hat put Jorge and sus amigos, including the cryptid one, on the trail to a fabled treasure in this third series entry. Legend has it that a witch left three cursed artifacts behind as clues to the location of her stolen riches. When mysterious thieves take two, and the third (a sombrero) winds up on Jorge's head, it's time for him and his fanged, nacho-loving chupacabra buddy, Carter, to enlist the help of human friends. Ernie and Liza once again join up for a round of serious sleuthing. As it turns out, the sombrero—which has a startling habit of bursting into screams, when it's not making rude comments about the size of Jorge's cabeza—knows more about the treasure than it's telling. For one, the most valuable thing isn't the glittering trove they seek but the young investigators' friendships, which are tested but ultimately prove true. As in earlier episodes, the mood turns occasionally serious (such as when the tweens see Ernie's dad arrested as a suspect in the robbery). But the tale plays mostly as a Chicano-flavored comedy related in jaunty prose interspersed with pictures that add punchlines (and even major incidents) in a mix of single and sequential panels. Notwithstanding a cave-in, a corrosive subterranean lake, and other thrillingly dangerous hazards, none of the characters, not even the burglars, wind up seriously harmed. Final art not seen. Message-driven but well stocked with chills and chuckles. (Fantasy. 8-12)

Circus Mirandus (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2181616 (Vol. 02) Bootlace Magician (Large Print) (Large Print Library Binding (Trade)) written by Cassie Beasley Everything seems relatively peaceful and calm until Micah's grandmother, Victoria, The Bird Woman, begins to seriously threaten the future of Micah's new home. Worst of all, it's looking like she might be successful in her evil mission to destroy the circus, especially since she has nothing to lose. 978-1-4328-7837-5 ©2020 1 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 14.0 Lexile 770	1	$24.99

City of Ghosts (Prebound)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2292865 (Vol. 03) Bridge of Souls (Prebound) written by V. E. Schwab Where there are ghosts, Cassidy Blake follows . . . Unless it's the other way around? Cass thinks she might have this ghost-hunting thing down. After all, she and her ghost best friend, Jacob, have survived two haunted cities while traveling for her parents' TV show. 978-1-5364-7576-0 ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 336 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 740	1	$19.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Cassidy Blake has encountered spirits before. She's met ghosts in Edinburgh and poltergeists in Paris, and now she's in New Orleans, city of beignets, jazz funerals, and 42 cemeteries, where her parents are filming the third episode of their paranormal investigation program. It's not long before Cassidy, an in-between who has escaped death and as a result can interact with the dead, catches the unwanted attention of an Emissary. This terrifying creature is unlike any spook Cassidy has ever dealt with; its job is to bring those who have defied death to the other side--those like 12-year-old Cassidy. In order to defeat the Emissary, Cassidy will lose something--or someone--no matter the path she chooses. Not knowing which road to follow is frightening, but the scariest thing of all is not knowing how this ends. Armed with her spirit-guiding pendant and accompanied by ghost Jacob Hale (whose foothold in the living world seems to be strengthening) and Scottish friend and fellow in-betweener Lara Chowdhury, Cassidy charges ahead. Intensely curious and furiously independent Cassidy must learn to proceed with caution and know when to ask for help. Her first-person narration is often interrupted by sarcastic Jacob, who can hear her thoughts, a narrative device that adds levity to the scares. The conclusion leaves the door open for another adventure. Cassidy is assumed White; there is diversity in the supporting cast. Another strong entry in a series offering thrills and chills. (Paranormal adventure. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8--In the third installment of Schwab's "City of Ghosts" series, 12-year-old Cassidy Blake finds herself in arguably the most haunted city in the world, New Orleans. In the previous book, Cassie and her parents visited Paris to film their ghost-hunting show, The Inspectors, where she attracted the attention of a poltergeist and ran into a mysterious and terrifying skull-faced being. When Cassie enters the Veil during a tour of New Orleans cemeteries with her parents, she discovers that the skull-creature in black was not a figment of her imagination and it has followed her across the Atlantic. Cassie and Jacob must team up again with Lara, Cassie's in-betweener friend from Scotland, to locate a secret society that might know how to banish the monster stalking her. This is a solid entry in the series and builds upon the already established world rules. It explores the meaning of friendship while it introduces readers to new locations and their history, allowing them to tag along for a spookily exciting adventure. VERDICT Purchase where magical realism adventures and previous books in the series are popular. --Sara Brunkhorst, Glenview P.L., IL Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2118207 (Vol. 01) City of Ghosts (Prebound)

written by Victoria Schwab

Ever since Cass almost drowned (okay, she did drown, but she doesn't like to think about it), she can pull back the Veil that separates the living from the dead... and enter the world of spirits. Her best friend is even a ghost.

978-1-5364-5848-0 ©2019 5 x 8 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 7.0 RC Lvl 4.4 Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Unbeknownst to her parents, who write books about ghosts but have never seen one, 12-year-old Cassidy Blake has paranormal abilities: ever since she almost drowned, she's been able to visit the spirit realm. She is best friends with Jacob, the apparition who saved her life, and whenever she encounters a phantom, she feels compelled to "cross the veil." Constant specter activity exhausts Cassidy, so she is dismayed to learn that her family is headed for Edinburgh to film a haunted cities television show. There, Cassidy meets Lara Jayne Chowdhury, a girl with similar skills. Jacob doesn't trust Lara, but Cassidy thinks the self-proclaimed ghost hunter could shed light on her own abilities and prove useful; particularly after they attract the attention of a malevolent specter. This atmospheric ghost story from Schwab (the Monsters of Verity duology) chills and charms while challenging readers to face their fears. Courageous, quick-witted Cassidy inspires, her relationship with Jacob is tender, and the thrilling conclusion is sure to gratify. Ages 8--12. Agent: Holly Root, Root Literary. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8-Cassidy is looking forward to a mostly ghost-free summer vacation when her parents, paranormal history authors, break the news that, instead of a summer at the shore, their family will be traveling to Edinburgh to investigate the most haunted places in Scotland. This trip of a lifetime is exciting but also scary for Cassidy, who has the power to cross "the Veil" and see ghosts ever since her brush with death. Thankfully, her best friend, a ghost named Jacob, comes along for the trip and helps her navigate the haunted streets of Edinburgh. Cass encounters some scary haunts and is forced to reckon with the strongest ghost she has ever met, all while learning the true purpose of her powers. Schwab paints an eerie portrait of haunted locales and her descriptions of the various ghosts and their terrible ends will send shivers down even the bravest readers' spines. She also portrays modern Edinburgh with accuracy, and readers will be eager to look up pictures of the medieval castle looming over modern streets. The story moves quickly, and children will be intrigued enough to keep reading even in light of the terrifying events. VERDICT This fast-paced, spooky ghost story filled with international adventure is sure to please horror enthusiasts and armchair travelers.-Ellen Conlin, Naperville Public Library, IL Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2178168 (Vol. 02) Tunnel of Bones (Prebound)

written by Victoria Schwab

When Cass accidentally awakens a frighteningly strong spirit, she must rely on her still-growing skills as a ghosthunter -- and turn to friends both old and new to help her unravel a mystery. But time is running out, and the spirit is only growing stronger.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

978-1-5364-6522-8 ©2020 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 710

City Spies (Trade)

#2365427 (Vol. 05) Mission Manhattan (Hardcover (Trade))
written by James Ponti
 The City Spies head to the Big Apple when a credible threat is made to a young climate activist who is scheduled to speak in front of the upcoming United Nations General Assembly.
 978-1-6659-3247-9 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 448 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Clara Poole (Trade)

#2327181 (Vol. 01) Clara Poole and the Long Way Round (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Taylor Tyng
 When an unintended flight over Michigan in her class science project--a lawn chair held aloft by balloons--brings her instant celebrity, Clara Poole is invited to be the spokesperson for a round-the-world adventure race. But when her overprotective father refuses, Clara forges his signature in a moment of defiance and runs away to Paris to take her place in the skies. But there are more dangers ahead. Someone is trying to sabotage the competition. And surviving this race means Clara must come to terms with the tragedy that set her fleeing to the skies in the first place, and accepting that forgiving herself isn't a process she has to undertake alone.
 978-1-64595-159-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Though Clara Poole's impulsive love of high places leads to tragedy when her mother is killed by lightning during a rescue attempt, it serves her well after she's unwillingly swept into an around-the-world balloon race that puts her aboard the Amelia with rude, long-retired pilot Greta Gildersleeve and a crew of three unusually intelligent monkeys. In the course of stressful challenges--ranging from storms and media events to sabotage--that turn her from a frightened and reluctant newbie to a seasoned, resilient adventurer, she navigates through the heavy clouds of her own grief and by race's end has helped her devastated dad begin to heal from his. Tyng surrounds his plucky preteen protagonist with a sturdy and colorful supporting cast, lays out a series of thrilling exploits and dramatic turns as the 10-stage race sails over six continents, and provides both a clever climactic twist and a clear lead-in to sequels at the close. Echoes of Jules Verne and Roald Dahl add even more lift to this soaring debut. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Twelve-year-old Clara Abigail Poole causes quite a scene when she hurtles across the skies of western Michigan in a plastic lawn chair attached to hundreds of balloons. After she crash-lands and is grounded by her father, Clara's stunt captures the attention of one Harold Habberdish, who arrives from Paris with a proposal: join "the most ambitious and breathtaking adventure race ever conceived," a hot-air balloon race around the world. Against her father's wishes, Clara runs away from home -- and from the guilt she feels for the accident that killed her mother -- and flies to Paris to join the race. Because she is so young and inexperienced, she is partnered with seasoned aeronaut Greta Gildersleeve and her monkey copilots. What ensues is a madcap tale with oddball characters, intrigue, and new friendships made. Tyng's prose is appropriately light and action verb-driven, complete with sound effects ("Thwack! Pop! Poppity-pop!"). Beyond all the excitement, though, this is, at its heart, a father-daughter story and one about the long road -- or flight -- toward acceptance and forgiveness. Told with a light touch -- lighter than air, you might say. Dean Schneider(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When her science experiment goes awry, Clara receives international attention--and an invitation to join a race that circles the globe. After her mother's death, 12-year-old Clara Poole tried to become the "safe version" of herself to please her cautious father. Then, while floating above the ground at the end-of-school-year fair in a plastic lawn chair lifted by hundreds of balloons, Clara has a thought: She could descend to earth--or she could go higher. Cutting her tether, Clara soars away over Michigan. When she lands, Clara is greeted by reporters, grounded by her father, and invited to join the World Organization of Balloon Aeronauts on their 100th air race. Consisting of 10 stages, including an endurance trial over the Sahara and a hunt for flags among the rocky cliffs of Mount Kailash in Tibet, the race is notoriously dangerous and completely thrilling. Partnered with a seasoned aeronaut and three monkey co-pilots, Clara learns the temperamental art of ballooning while navigating new friendships and scheming competitors. Invented elements, like the use of a flusterboard to travel between balloons, exist alongside references to genuine landmarks, creating a fantastical world that feels wholly possible. Most main characters, including Clara, are assumed White. Aeronaut teams represent their countries; Clara forms notable friendships with the Hoshis from Japan and the Jollys from India. An engrossing and inventive flight through the skies. (Adventure. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Twelve-year-old Michigan daredevil Clara Poole loves heights and climbing, but her overly protective father has kept a tight rein on her ever since Clara's mother was killed by lightning a year ago. But after tying balloons to a lawn chair results in accidental flight and brings Clara unexpected fame, the World Organization of Balloon Aeronauts' invites her to participate in their 100th-anniversary hot air balloon race as their celebrity Face of the Race. Though her father forbids it, Clara forges his signature and runs away. Upon joining the race, she's partnered with veteran champion Greta Gildersleeve and her trio of monkey pilots. Clara makes similarly adrenaline-seeking friends and enemies among fellow juvenile competitors, including aristocratic Ophelia Chins-Ratton, effervescent Hatsu Hoshi, and good-natured Harbinder Jolly, who each encourage her adventurous pursuits. Throughout the race's increasingly risky stages, Clara embraces her newfound calling as a balloon pilot, while navigating natural hazards and ruthless sabotage from a rival. Occasionally outlandish but with plenty of heart and charm, Tyng's fast-paced debut conjures excitement via a high-octane premise that's tempered by laugh-out-loud humor and populated by idiosyncratic characters. Aeronaut teams represent their home countries; Hatsu cues as Japanese, Harbinder reads as Indian, and Clara and others read as white. Ages 8: 12. (July)

Claudia and Monica: Freshman Girls (Stone Arch Books)

#1663684 New firsts (Library Binding)

written by Diana G Gallagher

The first week of high school is not what Claudia and Monica expect.

978-1-4342-3275-5 ©2012 5 x 7 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 2.0 GR Lvl N Lexile 570

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$20.49

Reviews by: Voice of Youth Advocates (VOYA) These four hi-lo stories of freshman-year romances, parties, shopping, and dating from the Claudia & Monica: Freshman Girls series will feed middle school girls' fantasies about how much fun high school will be: how charming the boys, how best buds will develop into cute boyfriends, and how said boyfriends will have cars, play in bands, and be stars of the football team, even though they are only freshmen or sophomores. Narrating alternating chapters, main characters, Claudia and Monica, may be familiar to some from the author's earlier books about the two friends in middle school. Now in their first year of high school ...

#1663687 Tested (Library Binding)

written by Diana G Gallagher

Did Claudia spill her best friend's secret?

978-1-4342-3278-6 ©2012 5 x 7 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.2 AR Pts 2.0 GR Lvl N Lexile 470

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$20.49

Reviews by: Voice of Youth Advocates (VOYA) These four hi-lo stories of freshman-year romances, parties, shopping, and dating from the Claudia & Monica: Freshman Girls series will feed middle school girls' fantasies about how much fun high school will be: how charming the boys, how best buds will develop into cute boyfriends, and how said boyfriends will have cars, play in bands, and be stars of the football team, even though they are only freshmen or sophomores. Narrating alternating chapters, main characters, Claudia and Monica, may be familiar to some from the author's earlier books about the two friends in middle school. Now in their first year of high school ...

Claw: Back of the Net (Magic Wagon)

#2311872 (Vol. 01) Making the Grade (Library Binding)

written by Gary Fabbri

Aiden is one of the smartest players on the field. His active brain helps him to respond quickly to the action and anticipate the ball. But that same overactivity doesn't translate to his schoolwork. To him, algebra is a foreign language and his English grade is slipping. His scores are so low that if he doesn't improve, he'll be dropped from the team. Will Aiden make the grade, or will he watch from the sidelines?

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$26.95

Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Claw is an imprint of Magic Wagon, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-3334-1 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 560

#2311873 (Vol. 02) Perfect (Library Binding)

written by Gary Fabbri

Enzo's drive to be perfect is often seen by others as pushy, arrogant, and self-centered. Between his intense practice routine and his pappa drilling him, Enzo feels the constant pressure to overperform. When he misses a penalty kick in an important game, the team loses. Enzo decides to run away. He ends up face to face with the dangers of street life. Will he find his way back home and to his team now that he's facing a less than perfect life? Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Claw is an imprint of Magic Wagon, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-3335-8 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 650

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$26.95

#2311875 (Vol. 03) Stand Your Ground (Library Binding)

written by Gary Fabbri

Jackson always stands his ground on the field. When a rival player purposefully spikes Aiden, Jackson strikes back. A scuffle breaks out, and Jackson is kicked out of the game. He takes his anger out on the ref's car, and the fight continues after the match at a pizza store's parking lot. Jackson finds himself in trouble with the police. Will he end up with bigger problems or will he be able to stop the downward spiral and find his way back to defend his team? Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Claw is an imprint of Magic Wagon, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-3336-5 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 640

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$26.95

#2311870 (Vol. 04) Get On Up (Library Binding)

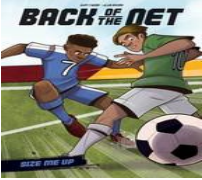

written by Gary Fabbri

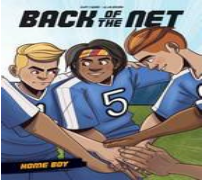

Manny's body feels like it has a mind of its own, and it hurts everywhere whenever he trains hard. But when the goalie passes out during a game, he finds out that his mistake was not his. After a medical exam, he discovers that he has lupus and his own body has been attacking itself. He's been working hard all season to stand in goal at the state finals, but now that seems impossible. Will he be able to get the treatment he needs to continue to play or will he support his team from the sidelines? Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Claw is an imprint of Magic Wagon, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-3337-2 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8 112 pgs.

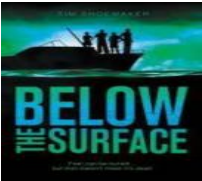

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 600

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$26.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2311874 (Vol. 05) Size Me Up (Library Binding) written by Gary Fabbri Ben has dedicated his whole life to soccer. But his big knowledge and even bigger heart can't overcome the fact that he is small. He is a star on the soccer field but a target for bullies. After a dangerous encounter with some bullies, he dedicates himself to applying for college programs in an attempt to get away from the violence. Will Ben be able to feel safe at home again and overcome his bullies? Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Claw is an imprint of Magic Wagon, a division of ABDO. 978-1-0982-3338-9 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8 112 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 640	1	$26.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2311871 (Vol. 06) Home Boy (Library Binding) written by Gary Fabbri As team captain, Kai is always in control on the field. He's like the glue that keeps the team together, and the team relies on him to be a solid, talented player. But at home, as hard as he tries, Kai can't keep his parents together. Their fighting intensifies so much that Kai's frustrations spill over into school and soccer. Will he be able to provide what the team needs without the home support that he used to take for granted? Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Claw is an imprint of Magic Wagon, a division of ABDO. 978-1-0982-3339-6 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8 112 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 620	1	$26.95

Code of Silence (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2028787 Below the Surface (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tim Shoemaker Something is wrong with Cooper. He's plagued by a fear he doesn't understand and can't control. Cooper just wants to escape, and a summer vacation aboard the restored cabin cruiser, The Getaway, with best friends Gordy, Hiro, and Lunk seems like the perfect way to do it. 978-0-310-73501-4 ©2014 416 pgs. Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 13.0	1	$16.99

Codename Conspiracy (Prebound)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1913740 (Vol. 01) Codename Zero (Prebound) written by Chris Rylander There are places in the world where heroes are born. There are places where brave men and women fight a never-ending battle against evil in order to keep our country and all other countries safe. There are places where the fate of our planet is being decided, even at this very moment, the consequences of which will echo through history. None of these places is in North Dakota. 978-1-4844-4531-0 ©2015 5 x 7-1/2 384 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 10.0 RC Lvl 4.7 Lexile 780	1	$20.95

#1957427 (Vol. 02) Countdown Zero (Prebound)

written by Chris Rylander

Ever since Carson Fender was let go by the secret agency that had enlisted his services to help foil a nefarious plot perpetrated by one of their former agents, he's been back to hanging with his friends, pulling pranks, and not having to lie to everyone about how he's spending his days. And that's for the best, isn't it?

978-1-4844-7049-7 ©2016 5 x 7-1/2 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.95

Codename Conspiracy (Trade)

#1947052 (Vol. 03) Crisis Zero (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Chris Rylander

There is a computer program so unspeakably powerful that its mere existence is unknown to all but the most senior government agents. This computer program is capable of controlling every aspect of communication, transportation, and defense on the planet. This computer program must never fall into the wrong hands or civilization as we know it will be utterly destroyed.

978-0-06-232747-5 ©2016 400 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 790

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist After performing a daring rescue at Mount Rushmore in Countdown Zero (2015), Carson Fender's services as a secret agent are needed once more. This time the Agency has tasked Carson and his friend Danielle with uncovering an enemy in their very school one who is likely in league with Agency nemesis Mule Medlock. Innumerable close calls and a herd of fainting goats later, the pair catches up with the perpetrator, and they can't believe who it is. Rylander's third installment in the Codename Conspiracy series is comparatively light on action, but the comedic writing keeps this mystery-adventure plenty entertaining.--Smith, Julia Copyright 2016 Booklist

Coin Slot Chronicles (Trade)

#2103357 (Vol. 01) Arcade and the Triple T Token (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rashad Jennings

Arcade is a 12-year-old boy who has a unique gift that allows him to travel into another dimension with his special token from a mysterious woman. However, he doesn't have an answer when his teachers ask his class the same simple question every year: What do you want to be when you grow up? Arcade begins to pick up books on everything from entrepreneurship to football to piano to card tricks. As Arcade dives into books, he discovers that the possibilities for his future are endless. And the more Arcade learns about different professions and hobbies, the more Arcade notices that people from his school have characteristics that make them the perfect fit for each of them. Together with his sister, Zoe, the pair get into scrapes, scuffles, and the occasional extreme adventure as they lend their unique support to anyone who needs them.

978-0-310-76741-1 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

#2159475 (Vol. 02) Arcade and the Golden Travel Guide (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rashad Jennings

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

In Virginia for the summer, Arcade and his friends restore a local mini golf course and continue to follow the token on fantastic adventures, in spite of recent troubling incidents.

978-0-310-76743-5 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 6.0

#2159474 (Vol. 03) Arcade and the Fiery Metal Tester (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rashad Jennings

In Arcade and the Fiery Metal Tester, New York City is experiencing the hottest summer on record. Eleven-year-old Arcade Livingston can't keep his cool after receiving this suspicious warning atop the Empire State Building: "Things will heat up in all areas to test your mettle."

978-0-310-76745-9 ©2020 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 7.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In Volume 3 of the Coin Slot Chronicles, 11-year-old Arcade Livingston and older sister Zoe must harness their patience and compassion. Retired NFL running back Jennings, writing with veteran children's writer Osborne, developed the Arcade Livingston series after finding success with his book for adults, The If in Life (written with Michael Strahan, 2018). As the book opens, the Livingston parents set goals with their children: to step into the positive character traits of patience and compassion, in accordance with their Christian faith (references to which are lightly sprinkled throughout the text). These goals inform the adventures that follow. The novels can stand alone but are deepened when read together, so maybe that's the best way for readers to understand the full story behind this mysterious Triple T Token and its time-traveling powers. Readers learn that it can take Arcade and Zoe to times and places they've never been with strange people surrounding them, yet this story isn't always about what's happening way out there. There's the serious inside things too. There's Arcade's best friend, Doug, who is being moved to Florida when he wants nothing more than to be close to his ailing grandmother. Is there something that this mysterious Triple T Token can do about that? Does trying to control the power of the token only create further chaos? Dotted with significant life lessons for young readers, who might prefer to start with Volume 1. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal are back in this third entry in the "Coin Slot Chronicles." This time, Arcade receives a mysterious message telling him, "Things will heat up in all areas to test your mettle." No kidding! It's a record hot New York City summer, and his parents want the siblings to set some character-building goals during their school vacation. Once Arcade's backpack gets stolen in the subway, the adventures come fast and furious. Zipping all over the world once his token is slipped into the slot in glowing elevator doors, Arcade struggles to make sense of his role in many situations. Life is further complicated by the impending move of his best friend Doug (a baby flamingo with a serious shrmp habit), a test score scandal at school, and his dog getting lost in the internet in the future--or is it the past? The parent-child relationships are warm and supportive and (save a few minor squabbles) so is the sibling one. Arcade tries hard to do what is best in every situation while remembering his goal-setting promise. The family's faith is a consistent thread throughout. VERDICT An intriguing premise that gets overcomplicated with too many plot threads makes this a well-meaning, but confusing read. Recommended only where the previous books have enjoyed a healthy circulation.--Sara-Jo Lupo Sites, George F. Johnson Memorial Library, Endicott, NY Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Cold the Night, Fast the Wolves (Trade)

#2265638 Cold the Night, Fast the Wolves (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Meg Long

Desperate to escape, Sena flees with his prized fighting wolf, Iska, and takes an offer from a team of scientists. They'll pay her way off-world, on one condition--that she uses the survival skills her mothers taught her to get them to the end of the race. But the tundra is a treacherous place. When the race threatens their lives at every turn, Sena must discover whether her abilities are enough to help them survive the wild

978-1-250-78506-0 ©2022 6 x 9-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books The annual race across the icy planet of Tundar attracts greedy corporate outsiders to dig for a resource called exocarbon, and seventeen-year-old Sena has a particular hatred for the contest that led to her mothers' deaths. When Sena finds herself indebted to a syndicate boss, she has to help him heal one of his genetically-modified fighting vonenwolves; the girl and animal form a bond and the two soon run away. Sena joins a group of researchers with purer motives than most racers and ends up participating in the competition, but it won't be without a body count--or without digging up her past trauma. Readers used to intricate world-building in their sci-fi will be confused by the vagueness of many of this novel's premises--exocarbon's uses are ill-defined and the characters discover new properties for it as the novel progresses, so it's unclear why it is so in demand in the first place. The conflict between the Corporate Assembly planets and the anti-capitalist "scavvers" barely goes beyond a very basic, decontextualized criticism of capitalism. Still, the winter survival aspects of the race are intense and heart-pounding, and animal lovers will appreciate Sena's bond with vonenwolf Iska. NB COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Proud, stubborn, and lonely 17-year-old Sena Korhosen survives by picking pockets. The only thing Sena wants is to save enough money to get off-world, far away from Tundar, an unforgiving planet of electrical storms and bitter cold. When she crosses a cruel crime boss, he offers her clemency--if she can rehabilitate his vicious, prizefighting she-wolf. It's not a task she feels up to, but she has no other choice if she wants to escape to a better life. After a near-fatal turn of events, Sena finds herself in charge of the stolen she-wolf and agreeing to do the one thing she swore she'd never do: take part in a deadly 1,000-mile race to reach valuable exocarbon deposits, the same race that claimed her mothers' lives five years before. Sena may not have a lot, but with the wolf Iska by her side, she has a lot to lose and even more to gain. The action scenes are so fast-paced as to cause whiplash, while quieter interludes slow down enough to allow readers to catch their breath. There is no romantic subplot--instead, the growing trust between Sena and Iska is the focus. The worldbuilding is intricate, and the icy setting is so detailed that readers will feel the need to bundle up as they speed through to the exciting and satisfying conclusion. Main characters are assumed White; some secondary characters have brown skin. Fast and furious. (Science fiction. 14-18) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Ever since her mothers died on the racing trail five years ago, 17-year-old narrator Sena Korhosen has lived by one simple rule; "No wolves. No sleds. No racing"; even though the frozen Edge World of Tundar relies upon the annual race of genetically engineered vonenwolves across the frozen waste to mine precious, seasonally accessible exocarbon. Determined to eventually start over on a less brutal planet, presumed-white Sena makes ends meet as a pickpocket, but when she runs afoul of a brutal syndicate leader, she's forced to use the skills taught by her late mothers; one a racer, the other an ice-dwelling scavver; to heal his injured, unengineered prize fighter wolf, Iska. Sena's desperate bid to get off-world sees her stealing Iska and joining the 1,000 mile race, where danger waits around every turn. In this atmospherically told debut with a leisurely beginning, Long skillfully navigates her resourceful heroine through a treacherous, chillingly described tundra setting. Sena's growing bond with Iska, and her relationship to the natural world and struggle for survival, aptly explore themes of corporate greed, environmental care, and personal resilience. Ages 12: up. Agent: Alexandra Machinist, ICM Partners. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 9 Up—Long takes readers underground and cross-country in her deadly, frozen sci-fi adventure. Sena was orphaned by the deaths of her mothers in a corporate-sponsored wolf sled race on Tundar, a planet with "electrically charged weather and never-ending ice." She is part "scavver," a mysterious ethnicity hated by the greedy "corpos" who have no regard for human or animal life. Sena is discontent, living her life stealing from tourists and skulking on the edges of the city's underworld, wanting nothing to do with the upcoming race. By chance she is pulled onto a team of researchers who know she could be an asset because of her background and scavver know-how. With her wolf companion, she reluctantly agrees to go along, knowing it could cost her life. The author creates a tale of darkness and intrigue with a tough narrator. The complex world of the novel's setting is a bit of a challenge to envision, and the planet's specific vocabulary can be an early stumbling block. However, once Sena's voice breaks through the pain of her circumstances, readers can't stop rooting for her. Human/animal interaction, heart-stopping race action, and lurking predators are evenly paced, while plot lines crescendo and converge. The blizzard scenes, ice collapses, and temperature drops may entice those who skipped Gary Paulsen or Jean Craighead George to go back and fill in reading gaps. Contains some strong language and violence. VERDICT A forceful debut for teen fans of danger, the outdoors, and the underworld.—Jane Miller

#2309458 Swift the Storm, Fierce the Flame (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Meg Long

(Companion novel) After nearly catching him on Tundar before the infamous sled race, Remy follows Kiran back to the same jungle planet where everything started. But nothing on Maraas is how it was two years ago. A megalomaniac corpo director now has an iron grip on the world that other groups are trying to overthrow. It's a time bomb that Remy wants nothing to do with.

978-1-250-78512-1 ©2023 6 x 9-1/4 416 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Teenage genopath Remy Castell, who has been genetically engineered to become the perfect spy, seeks revenge against her ex-partner in this thrilling adventure by Long, set in the same universe as Cold the Night, Fast the Wolves. Accompanied by her new friend Sena and Sena's wolf companion Iska, Remy follows her ex-partner Kiran's trail across multiple planets before tracking him back to the storm-wracked jungle world where he once left her for dead. Remy is finally able to exact her punishment, but vengeance becomes the least of her worries when she's drawn into an ongoing power struggle between a ruthless corporation and myriad criminal syndicates. Hoping to turn the tides in his favor, Kiran promises to divulge the location of her captive best friend in exchange for Remy's help in securing power. Told via Remy's ardent first-person narration and brimming with action, shifting alliances, and intrigue, this bustling continuation to Long's broader literary canon follows charismatic protagonists navigating internal turmoil and emotionally turbulent relationships while rapidly bounding from one adventure to another. Characters are described as having varying skin tones. Ages 12: up. Agent: Alexandra Machinist, ICM Partners. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 9 Up—In this companion novel to Long's debut Cold the Night, Fast the Wolves, Remy Castell has dragged her new friend Sena and Iska the wolf to the world of Maraas to find Remy's ex-partner, Kiran. Remy hopes to reunite with her old friend, Alora, whom she abandoned years ago because of a choice that Kiran made for her. Kiran agrees to help his former partner, but she must take part in the fight to overthrow the ruling corpos of Maraas before he will give her any information. The action heats up as Remy makes her choice to join the coup to help the many over continuing a selfish search for the friend that she lost. Remy and Kiran are genopaths who were engineered by Nova to have superhuman strength. The Assembly worlds consist of various combatting groups including Nova, corpos like TerraCo, syndicates, and scavvers. Readers will have to navigate a vocabulary that is singular to the world that Long creates. It is not necessary to read Long's first novel before this one, though following the politics of this world is not always an easy task because so many factions and their leaders are introduced. The main characters are one note, and their individual idiosyncrasies are repeated endlessly. VERDICT Purchase only where the first novel has fans; readers will be more enthralled with the characters in dystopian titles like The 5th Wave by Rick Yancey or Legend by Marie Lu.—Elizabeth Kahn

Collectors (Trade)

#2080145 (Vol. 01) Collectors (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jacqueline West

Van has always been an outsider. He's hard of hearing, collects trinkets, and lives with his single mother—an opera singer with a huge personality. Then one day, Van notices a girl stealing pennies from a fountain, and everything changes. He follows the girl, Pebble, and uncovers an underground world full of wishes and the people who collect them.

978-0-06-269169-9 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist From the author of The Books of Elsewhere series comes a story about the power of wishes. While waiting for his mom, Van finds a discarded toy and witnesses a girl talk to a squirrel and take coins from a fountain. When he spots the girl again, he follows her into the hidden world of the Collectors, who gather people's wishes. Then he meets Mr. Falborg, who reveals that an entire species is at risk and that the Collectors may be responsible. West captures Van's curiosity and wonder for life, giving his personality an air of innocence. While Van struggles with his hearing, his ability to truly listen takes on magical qualities as he's able to hear the wish-collecting creatures. He finds himself torn between two sides, so he has to learn how to trust himself, discover his bravery, and follow his heart. Aside from magical problems, he also deals with frequent moves, thanks to his opera-singing mom. A brilliant fantasy adventure exploring the consequences of getting what you wish for.-- Elizabeth Konkel Copyright 2018 Booklist

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly With an opera singer mother who performs around the world, 11-year-old Van Markson is used to being a new kid, and his taste in books and movies, along with "a tiny blue hearing aid behind each ear," sometimes set him apart at school. Van is also good at noticing things that other people overlook, and when he spots a girl, accompanied by an "almost silver, very bushy-tailed" squirrel, plunging face-first into a fountain, a series of events draw Van into a magical underground world where he is caught in the middle of a secret war. West (the Books of Elsewhere series) has created a captivating mythology around wishes, including cuddly-turned-dangerous Wish Eaters (not unlike gremlins) as well as thoughtful explorations of power and the unexpected, sometimes negative, consequences of good intentions. Van's realization that his skill of noticing is a valuable strength, especially when hearing challenges feel to him like a shortcoming, is a gentle, triumphant reminder that being different doesn't correspond to weakness. First in a planned duology, West's magical adventure offers humor and warmhearted adventure. Ages 8-12. Agent: Danielle Chiotti, Upstart Crow Literary. (Oct.)

#2121156 (Vol. 02) Storm of Wishes (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jacqueline West

When Van's mother is offered a position at the renowned Fox Den Opera, located in the quiet, beautiful forest a few hours north of the city, she whisks Van away with her,

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

hoping this will be a safer home for their family of two. But Fox Den is home to an ancient Wish Eater--a powerful creature with the ability to grant wishes that have catastrophic consequences...

978-0-06-269172-9 ©2019 6 x 8 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 670

Reviews by: Booklist The second adventure in the Collectors series sees Van—following the fight with Mr. Falborg that resulted in Wish Eaters being set loose upon the world—finding a new job out in the country. While exploring this new location, he finds his missing friend, Pebble, and discovers an ancient Wish Eater buried down a well. As Mr. Falborg’s horrible plan comes into play, Van and Pebble must contact the Collectors and stop him before it’s too late. Here, West delivers a satisfying and thrilling sequel that expands on the wish mythology through the inclusion of an ancient Eater, dead wishes, and the magic of a meteor shower. Everything brilliant about book one is built upon, with the characters readers love being pushed to grow as the story delves into the various relationships of Van’s life. West also weaves in a theme of character complexity, showing how everyone has more than one side to them. She generally hits all the right notes with her well-written characters, expanding mythology, action-packed moments, breathtaking magic, and heartwarming friendships.

Confessions of a Dork Lord (Trade)

#2144659 (Vol. 01) Confessions of a Dork Lord (Hardcover (POB))

written by Mike Johnston

Meet Wick. He's the son of the Dark Lord, heir to the throne of black and broken glass, and next in line to be the leader of the Grim World. Too bad he's stuck in Remedial Spell Casting (he can barely even cast the fart-revealer spell), he's allergic to fire and brimstone, and the bullies at school insist on calling him Dork Lord.

978-1-5247-4081-8 ©2020 6 x 8-1/2 352 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 810

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 The coauthor (with Melissa de la Cruz) of the Heart of Dread series aims at a younger (or, at least, less sophisticated) audience with this tale of a dread sorcerer's 12-year-old orphaned son who can't even cast the ultra-simple Fart Revealer spell. More than half convinced that he's regarded as a laughingstock for his lack of magic and leadership ability, Azrael Bal Gorath the Wicked?aka Wick? latches onto the theft of his 10-years-vanished dad's obsidian scepter as a chance to prove himself to the orcs, goblins, and other folk of Grimhold. As he tracks down the culprit, Wick not only has adventures (that range from wading through the Gurgling Lake of Sulfur to being sent to a school for ice giants where even pop quizzes last entire days) but also learns how to organize a wayward crew of allies. Johnston leaves his young warlock looking forward to future challenges?and better equipped to handle them?while wreathing his tale in crowd-pleasing clouds of alimentary humor. Spot art frequent, but some finished versions not seen.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books orath the Wicked, aka Wick, aka Dork Lord, sixth grade at Nightshadows school un olds in a series of embarrassments, from failing to cast the simplest of shoe-tying spells to coming in last on the Index of Muscle, Mayhem, and Ma ic. Wick also lives in the shadow of his legendary father, the Dark Lord Who Vanished, and who left strict instructions that his heir was o have no help while earning his throne. This supposedly leadership-building dictum soon leads to near disaster, when the realm's most powerful eapon, the Scepter of Ultimate Darkness, disappears and Wick sets off on an ill-advised quest to retrieve it. When his travels lead to revelations and a final showdown with bullies, though, Wick might just discover he has talents enough to win the day. Wick isn't the only one to suffer from ine itable comparisons here, as this cross between Diary of a Wimpy Kid and Harry Potter struggles to emerge from the shadow of its predecessors. Joh ston offers up plenty of wordplay, bathroom humor, spells, and silliness, but ultimately the story gets bogged down by an overabundance of world bu lding, while simultaneously shortchanging what could be a quirky series of misadventures. Undeveloped sidekicks, meanwhile, leave rea ers with a main character who's pitiable but not likable. Still, friendly print and sturdily cheerful illustrations add accessibility, and this novel m ight just find a home in hands of those who want a familiar zero-to-hero story with the flavor of their favorite tabletop role-playing game. AM

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The son of a fallen Dark Lord looks for his own place in the world. Azrael Bal Gorath the Wicked--"Wick" to his friends--is the heir to the throne of the grim folk. Wick's father, the Dark Lord, ruled over ogres, orcs, goblins, witches, and warlocks alike until he vanished after fighting the faire folk's champion, Galorian (a "good" wizard). The absent lord left nothing behind for his son, hoping the lack of titles and status would help build Wick's character. Wick (a white preteen with a shock of red hair) spends his days evading bullies and dreaming of having the power to move on past his struggles in Remedial Spell Casting. The novel is a promising if curious blend of Dungeons and Dragons fantasy world and the typical "diary of an underdog middle schooler" fare, but the enterprise never quite gets off the ground. There's a lot of worldbuilding up front, and the day-to-day banality doesn't jibe well with the big-picture conflicts between the faire folk and the grim world. The novel also overstays its welcome, coming in at well over 300 pages of disjointed and poorly structured story. Wick is unpleasant, the world he inhabits is boilerplate fantasy, and his story feels sluggish when it should be brisk and rushed when it should take its time. A miscalculated satiric fantasy that treads too-familiar ground. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this entertaining yet underwhelming fantasy, a hapless orphan struggles to live up to the legacy set by his impressive but long-vanished father, once Dark Lord of the grim folk, while dealing with bullies and his own magical incompetence. Twelve-year-old Azrael Bal Gorath the Wicked, better known as Wick, is expected to assume his father's throne and lead the "ogres, orcs, dragons, goblins, witches and warlocks," but he can't even succeed in Remedial Spell Casting, let alone garner respect and fear. When his father's legendary scepter goes missing, Wick sets out to uncover the thief and find it in order to prove himself. Naturally, things go quickly awry, requiring Wick to master his powers once and for all. Presented in a faux-diary style complete with stylized illustrations by Altes that enhance the story's whimsy, Wick narrates his mishaps in a put-upon, matter-of-fact manner. Johnston exaggerates fantasy tropes for comedic purposes; orcs are disgusting, goblins creatively malicious; and the narrative strikes a balance between dry humor and clumsy earnestness ("It's hard to be into the whole 'fire and brimstone' thing when you've got allergies") that lends the story an uneven feel. Ages 8: 12. (Jan.)

Conjurers (Trade)

#2163852 (Vol. 01) Rise of the Shadow (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brian Anderson

After their parents vanished, Alex and Emma are sent to live with strict Uncle Mordo. Only Emma's pet rabbit, Pimawa, keeps them company. But when flying skeletons called Rag-o-Rocs storm their once-quiet home, the kids escape just in time with Pimawa leading the way. The rabbit takes the siblings to the Conjurian, a land where magic exists and Pimawa can talk. But the Conjurian is in trouble.

978-0-553-49865-3 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Since their parents' disappearance eight years ago, Alex and Emma Muskelyne have lived with their strict uncle Mordo, who forbids anything electronic or dangerous from entering the house. One night, their house is attacked by the Shadow Conjuror, who is looking for a powerful magical artifact purportedly discovered and hidden by Alex and Emma's parents, who it's now clear were anything but ordinary antique dealers. With their normal life suddenly upended, the siblings must venture into the magical world of Conjurian to uncover the truth about their parents and learn the location of the artifact before the Shadow Conjuror finds it and destroys both worlds. Anderson's series starter poses the question, what if magic is real, the way that alternate dimensions might be real? As he explores this idea, he litters his narrative with black-and-white ink drawings, dark and sinister villains, a family secret to discover, personal limitations to overcome, and, of course, magic. Part A Series of Unfortunate Events, part Tony Abbott's The Copernicus Legacy, this adventure has impressive tricks up its sleeve. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Siblings are thrown into a dangerous magical world. Alex, 10, and Emma, 13, live with their cruel antiques-dealer uncle in a house with 252 rooms, 17 Victrolas (Alex calls them "hundred-year-old record players"), and no connection with the modern outside world. Their parents died on an archaeological dig (Alex believes this, but Emma does not), searching for an artifact that would restore magic to a world called the Conjurian. Their quest was pressing because nowadays, "Magic is dying" there. One night, horrifying creatures burst into the mansion and chase the siblings into a secret passage and out into that other realm. Monsters and smugglers loom; the head of this land's ruling circle might be defending the realm from evil--or might be creating illusions of evil to gain more power. Within this adventurous setup, prose is clunky and pacing drags. Even the cliffhanger ending, with one sibling under a collapsed building and the other underwater unable to swim, lights no spark--readers know by then that this story's flashy dangers resolve quickly without substance. An ongoing sibling debate on whether magic exists--even as magic unfolds before their eyes--is preposterous. In a threadbare, distasteful trope, Anderson repeatedly uses facial disfigurement--including eyelessness--to symbolize evil. Moreover, for no apparent reason besides traditional gender roles, both Alex's parents and the text itself explicitly place younger brother Alex as superior to older sister Emma. Alex, Emma, and most characters seem white by default. Flimsy, forced, and stale. (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6—After years of living in Uncle Mordo's mansion, siblings Emma and Alex find themselves in the middle of a mission to keep themselves safe while trying to save magic. Magic is fading from the world (both the Flatworld and the world of the Conjuring) and no one knows why. Emma and Alex's parents may have held a key to solving the mystery, but these "anthropologists" were killed in an accident when the siblings were young. With their Jimjarian named Pimawa (a pet rabbit turned magical guide), the siblings face old friends who may in fact be foes, flying skeletons called Rag-O-Racs, and the Shadow Conjuror himself. The suspenseful conclusion paves the way for an action-packed continuation of their journey. Anderson weaves plentiful grayscale illustrations throughout the narrative that will help readers picture the otherworldly setting and characters. VERDICT Middle grade fans of magical mysteries will enjoy this exciting and well-paced series debut.—Lindsay Persohn, Univ. of South Florida, Tampa

Conjureverse (Trade)#2347324 (Vol. 02) Memory Thieves (Hardcover (Trade))written by Dhonielle Clayton*

The second installment in Dhonielle Clayton's New York Times- and #1 Indie-bestselling The Marvellerverse series, a middle-grade fantasy adventure set in a magic school that celebrates cultural traditions from around the world, for fans of Rick Riordan and Soman Chainani. In this fantasy adventure set in a global magic school in the sky, Ella, Jason, and Brigit return for their second year at the Arcanum Training institute.

978-1-250-17497-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 14.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 12-year-old uses history to prove that her people have always belonged in their magical world. Ella Durand, a Black girl from New Orleans, and her friends Brigit and Jason return to the Arcanum Training Institute for Marvelous and Uncanny Endeavors with some experience under their belts but even more questions than when they started last year. Ella's fame among Marvellers has skyrocketed ever since she helped stop the diabolical scheme of the Ace of Anarchy, Gia Trivelino. But Gia is not as down for the count as Ella and most Marvellians would hope--and she has decided that Ella owes her a debt that must be paid. On top of this threat, Masterji Thakur, Ella's mentor, gave her blueprints showing that Conjurers have long been involved with the school. Ella insists on acquiring solid proof and revealing this truth that the media seems intent on suppressing. But with increased schoolwork, a mystery illness affecting the student body, and secrets she uncovers, Ella faces extra obstacles. Clayton continues building a world that is intricate, captivating, and sure to satisfy. This novel brings additional cultural diversity to the story as Ella explores her school and becomes involved with more members of the multidimensional cast of characters. References to events from the first book make this accessible to new fans, but readers are best served by having read The Marvellers (2022). A wonderfully well-developed sequel. (list of Paragons) (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Cookie Chronicles (Prebound)#2291643 (Vol. 01) Ben Yokoyama and the Cookie of Doom (Prebound)written by Matthew Swanson*

When Ben reads his fortune-cookie fortune, he's alarmed and inspired. Immediately, he begins drafting a bucket list of unfinished tasks and lifelong dreams (finish his 1000-piece model of the Taj Mahal, eat an entire cake, etc....).

978-1-5364-7507-4 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 630

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Noodle lover Ben Yokoyama is at a Chinese restaurant for the first time when he gets a fortune cookie that says, "Live each day as if it were your last." In Ben's eight-year-old mind this means, "Today might be the last day of your life. Seize the day!" He creates a bucket list that begins with eating a frozen piece of cake that his dad has been saving for a special occasion. Ben is impulsive but thoughtful, and he frequently gets sidetracked and edits his list to accommodate other people, with hilarious results. His other tasks end up including his best friend, sticky notes, a scooter, apples, and blue paint on a cat. As he crosses items off his list, Ben learns about himself and the people around him. The husband-wife team of Swanson and Behr have created a fun, quirky character who shows empathy, love, and an exuberance for life that is fun to read. At nearly 300 pages, the book may intimidate some chapter book readers at first, but the illustrations fill as much of the page as the text does. This book is the first in a series that is sure to entertain. VERDICT A good addition to any elementary school library. Highly recommended.—Julie Overpeck, Gardner Park Elem. Sch., Gastonia, NC

Cookie Chronicles (Trade)#2216075 (Vol. 02) Ben Yokoyama and the Cookie of Endless Waiting (Hardcover (Trade))written by Matthew Swanson*

Ben does his best to heed his fortune cookie's advice, and as a result he is paired with Walter--the kid who's always picked last--for a school scavenger hunt. Working with

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

Walter must be a good thing if the cookie said so, but so far all he does is talk too loud and recite obscure facts about feet. Meanwhile, Ben has an argument with his best friend Janet, and waiting for her to apologize first isn't going so well....

978-0-593-30276-7 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 540

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Ben Yokoyama is back for another fortune-cookie-inspired week. When Ben gets his hands on another fortune cookie, he can't wait to discover what it says. This time, the fortune says, "Good things come to those who wait." Mulling this over, Ben decides to start waiting patiently for all the good things he wants. At school, his third-grade teacher announces a partnered scavenger hunt for words. Ben waits rather than picking a partner right away, ending up with his ex-friend, Walter, the kid no one ever chooses. With five school days to answer seven word-related questions, he is excited to get started but remembers to wait. As the days pass, Ben wonders why he and Walter aren't friends anymore--while becoming frustrated when Walter gives silly answers and talks too loudly. Ben struggles with being patient, being a good friend and partner, and just wanting to win. Filled with hilarious situations and shenanigans, this second book in the Cookie Chronicles series is as entertaining as the first. Readers will relate to themes of changing friendships and standing up for others. The black-and-white illustrations are woven into the text, creating an exciting visual experience. The book concludes with a funny about-the-author-and-illustrator section and amusing trivia about things you really do have to wait for. Illustrations and the family surname cue Ben as biracial, White and Japanese. Endless amusement and laughter. (Humor. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Quantity
Unit Price

#2259762 (Vol. 03) Ben Yokoyama and the Cookie of Perfection (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Matthew Swanson

When Ben's fortune cookie tells him that practice makes perfect, he refuses to settle for anything less. He demands better parents, superior hobbies, and a brand-new best friend, who might technically be a superhero.

978-0-593-30277-4 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 610

1 $13.99

Quantity
Unit Price

#2290566 (Vol. 04) Ben Yokoyama and the Cookie Thief (Hardcover (POB))

written by Matthew Swanson

When Ben's fortune cookie tells him that the best things in life are free, he believes he can get anything he wants without paying for it--as long as it's the best. But Ben's dreams of free cookies and fancy scooters are quickly dashed when schoolyard bully Flegg McEggars steals his fortune.

978-0-593-43296-9 ©2022 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 610

1 $12.99

Quantity
Unit Price

#2317417 (Vol. 05) Ben Yokoyama and the Cookies of Chaos (Hardcover (POB))

written by Matthew Swanson

When Ben finds a lost wallet, he's determined to do the right thing instead of spending the money on sweets. But what is the right thing? Ben seeks the guidance of one fortune cookie after another--yet none of the fortunes make sense! In his chaotic quest to track down the wallet's owner, Ben puzzles his way through five baffling fortunes in rapid succession while feuding with a vengeful librarian, battling a terrifying toilet, and gaining a new appreciation for ducks, cardamom, and his best friend, Janet.

1 $13.99

978-0-593-43300-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 570

Cookies and Milk (Trade)

#2278500 (Vol. 01) Cookies and Milk (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Shawn Amos

Eleven-year-old Ellis Johnson has the summertime blues. Instead, he'll be sleeping on a lumpy pullout in Dad's sad little post-divorce bungalow and helping bring Dad's latest far-fetched, sure-to-fail idea to life: opening the world's first chocolate chip cookie store. But of course, nothing is as easy as Dad makes it sound, even with Grandma along for the ride. Like she says, they have to GIT-get it together-and make things work.

978-0-7595-5677-5 ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 In 1976, Ellis struggles with his parents' divorce, but salvation comes in the form of summer vacation. Alas, relaxation is put on hold after his dad announces he needs Ellis' help to bring his latest business enterprise to life: a shop devoted to selling his chocolate-chip confections. The proposed bakery space is dismal and remote, his dad hasn't finalized a recipe, and there are only six weeks to get things up and running. Can the family pull together and pull it off? The author, Amos, is the real-life son of Wally "Famous" Amos, cookie entrepreneur, and this ode to his upbringing is offbeat and enchanting. The humorous narration is breezy and conversational, though it's often punctuated by serious topics: divorce, racism, deep family wounds, and the experience of being a Black household in a predominantly white neighborhood. But there are also exquisite descriptions of musical transcendence, an uplifting community, and a gorgeous father-son relationship that evolves and deepens throughout. A sweet treat with a warm center. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Summer of 1976 has officially begun, and for Ellis Johnson, whose parents have just split up, this means working with his father on yet another new business venture—a chocolate chip cookie store on a less-than-glamorous stretch of Sunset Boulevard. The community could use some Black-owned businesses, and everyone could appreciate an excellent cookie, but it's really Dad who needs the entrepreneurial win here. Turning a dilapidated A-frame into an inviting draw and scaling up cookie production in six weeks will be a challenge, especially when available (unpaid) staff is limited to Ellis, Dad, a cane-wielding, family-nagging grandmother, and a pair of father/son family friends. Ellis himself is of variable use, vacillating between complaining about his lost summer and creating costly, time-eating mishaps. For readers who make a speedy connection between the author's last name and "Famous Amos" chocolate chip cookies, this semi-autobiographical account of the author and his famous father is obviously on a path to a happy-for-now ending, and the fun is getting to the grand opening. As author Amos suggests in his opening and closing remarks, however, the themes of divorce and family strains are as germane to the tale as hijinks, pecans, and community support. With Paul's black and white drawings as visual rest stops, snappy chapters balance sweet with a touch of bitter, and a dash of salt is added by a local radio DJ who supplies a playlist of funk and a family mystery. This is a solid recommendation for family or classroom chapter reading, and a recipe for you know what is included. EB COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A boy improves his relationship with his father as they prepare to open a cookie store over summer break. Dad has had a lot of ridiculous ideas, but to 11-year-old Ellis, opening a store that only sells chocolate chip cookies—even if they are delicious—seems to be the worst. With his parents recently divorced and his mother visiting her best friend out of town, Ellis dreads spending the summer of 1976 with his father. It only gets worse when they arrive at a run-down storefront. The next six weeks are all about perfecting their recipe, fixing up the shop, and attracting customers—when all he really wants is to play his harmonica and hang out with his best friend. Through Ellis' first-person account, readers encounter several interesting characters on Sunset Boulevard as he explores his new neighborhood. One surprise is the existence of a mysterious paternal uncle that neither of his parents ever told him about, a discovery that sets Ellis on a course to reunite his family. Ellis learns not only the value of clear communication, but the importance of community as well. Readers will immediately love Ellis and his family as they learn to reconnect in this novel that is full of heart and humor. The easygoing pace and descriptive narration make it a suitable choice for reading aloud. Ellis and his family are Black. A wholesome story that bridges generations. (author's note, recipe, playlist)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Based on Amos's life with his father, Wally "Famous" Amos, this semi-autobiographical tale centers an endearing father-and-son relationship in 1976 Hollywood, Calif. Having graduated elementary school, 11-year-old Ellis Johnson hopes he's not the only Black kid in middle school next year. Though he longs to spend his summer playing his harmonica and hanging out with white best friend and vinyl record lover Alex, Ellis is instead begrudgingly helping his newly separated father open "the world's first chocolate chip cookie store" in a tattered building off Sunset Boulevard. Of all his father's "old dumb ideas"; such as peddling jewels made of stone fruits and designing footwear for dogs; this is, to Ellis, his worst. But as the summer unfolds and family secrets come to light, Ellis endeavors to repair fractured relationships while building new friendships within his bustling neighborhood. Accompanied by Paul's cozy illustrations, Amos's energetic prose encourages pride in one's culture. Championing interpersonal bonds, be they found family or blood relatives, the narrative also emphasizes unconditional love and one community's impact on a boy shaping his identity. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Penny Moore, Aevitas Creative Management. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--Can you feel the funk, my friends? Ellis and his family invite you to Sunset Strip Cookies where you are served the most amazing cookies by a family who is strong, Black, and proud of it. Ellis's life has been a little upside down lately: his parents just divorced, his mom left him with his dad for the summer to "put herself first for a change," and his dad has this zany idea of opening a chocolate chip cookie shop on the Sunset Strip in Hollywood. While getting the shop ready, Ellis will go through trials (it's not his fault he's the shortest kid in his grade), tribulations (his grandma says, "listening is tougher than talking," but it feels like his dad never listens), and triumphs (discovering kindness and good neighbors go a long way). Author Amos--and yes, the last name Amos should give readers an idea of how famous these cookies really are--sets a fantastic scene in the summer of 1976 on the Sunset Strip. Music, family dynamics, friends, and cookies are all delivered with imagery so strong that readers will taste those cookies while listening to Muddy Waters. Amos adds a nice touch by including a cookie recipe and a playlist at the end of the book. There are a few instances of period-typical racism and abuse (a "switch" is mentioned). VERDICT Best to read this with a glass of milk and all the ingredients to make Amos's recipe. Recommended as a solid historical fiction purchase.--Kerri L. Williams Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2350067 Ellis Johnson Might Be Famous (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Shawn Amos

After the overnight mega success of his dad's cookie store, twelve-year-old Ellis Johnson is on top of the world. He's met celebrities, strangers stop "the Cookie Kid" on the street, and he's even headed to NYC to be in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade with his dad. Ellis is ready for his star turn, playing harmonica on national television--until his big break turns into the most embarrassing moment of his life.
 978-0-7595-5683-6 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.6 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Booklist After the events of 2022's Cookies & Milk, Ellis feels like his life in 1970s California is in a great place. The family cookie shop is a roaring success, he has fantastic friends and a burgeoning crush, and he's growing in confidence as a blues harmonica player. He's even booked to be part of the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade with his famous father! But after the parade turns into an embarrassing nightmare, Ellis bids adieu to his musical aspirations and returns home to a host of other changes: his divorced dad is dating again, and his DJ uncle has taken over his clubhouse. As Ellis schemes to undo these developments, complications arise that have him rethinking his resistance to change. It's a pleasure to return to Ellis' cozy, cookie-scented world and watch him navigate new, relatable challenges. The familial bonds are deep and affectionate, and the confiding, casual narrative style will easily draw in young readers. An eminently entertaining reminder that change should be embraced instead of feared—and that cookies always make life sweeter.

Cooper & Packrat (Trade)

#2005509 (Vol. 01) Mystery on Pine Lake (Paperback (Trade))
written by Tamra Wight

Cooper thought living at a campground would be cool. But ever since his parents bought the lakeside campground, he's had more chores and less time to explore. And as if babysitting his little sister and cleaning bathrooms weren't bad enough, his ex-friends Roy has chosen him as this summer's bullying target. Cooper's only bright spot this summer is his new friend, Packrat, a guy who carries the world in his coat pockets and leaves his troubles behind. But trouble has come to the Wilder Family Campground and Pine Lake, where a family of loons is building a nest. First, someone dams up the lake and floods the nest. Then, when Cooper and Packrat build a raft where the new loons can make a new nest, it gets destroyed by someone with big footprints. It's up to the boys to figure out who, why, and how to stop the culprit before it's too late.
 978-1-939017-02-4 ©2013 5-1/2 x 8-3/4 152 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 700

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.95

#1889172 (Vol. 02) Mystery of the Eagle's Nest (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tamra Wight

Trouble has returned to Wilder Family Campground. When Cooper and Packrat find their geo-cache box full of illegal eagle parts, their lazy summer is over. Someone wants those valuable parts back. And if they can't get the parts back, they'll settle for holding one of the rare Pine Lake eaglets hostage instead. Cooper, Packrat, and Roy must elude two goons, tolerate an annoying teenager, keep tabs on a shady new camper, and stake out the eagle's nest -- all without getting grounded. Tamra Wight has written an exciting follow-up to "Mystery on Pine Lake," ripe with adventure and natural history, but above all, a tale of compassion and friendship.

978-1-939017-35-2 ©2014 180 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 7.0 RC Lvl 3.7 Lexile 650

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

#1967502 (Vol. 03) Mystery of the Missing Fox (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tamra Wight

Who would want to catch fox kits? And why? Cooper, Packrat, and Roy must protect a fox den, find the kits, and rule out Summer, the new girl who lives across the lake, as a suspect.

978-1-939017-89-5 ©2016 6 x 9 206 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 3.7 Lexile 640

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

#2271369 (Vol. 04) Mystery of the Bear Cub (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tamra Wight

Someone is dumping trash on the Wilder Family Campground's property. When Cooper, Packrat, and Roy start to investigate, they stumble headlong into the path of a garbage truck and a hungry black bear.

978-1-944762-25-4 ©2017 6 x 9 176 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 660

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

Copernicus Archives (Prebound)

#1941349 (Vol. 02) Becca and the Prisoner's Cross (Prebound)

written by Tony Abbott

A follow-up to Wade and the Scorpion's Claw finds studious language expert Becca suffering from mysterious blackouts that allow her to see the time of Copernicus, where she receives coded messages about a next relic.

978-1-4844-5666-8 ©2015 5 x 7 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$12.95

#1893659 (Vol. 01) Wade and the Scorpion's Claw (Prebound)

written by Tony Abbott

Wade and the Scorpion's Claw picks up right where The Copernicus Legacy: The Forbidden Stone left off, with the Kaplan family seeking the next Copernicus relic.

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$12.95

Now Wade, the curious, analytical, yet starry-eyed member of the group, leads the chase for another relic through the busy streets of San Francisco while on the run from one of Galina Krause's most treacherous henchmen.

978-1-4844-3896-1 ©2014 5 x 7-13/16 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 690

Coyote Sunrise (Trade)

#2168174 Remarkable Journey of Coyote Sunrise (Prebound)

written by Dan Gemeinhart

Five years. That's how long twelve-year-old Coyote and her dad, River, have lived on the road in an old school bus, criss-crossing the nation. It's also how long ago Coyote lost her mom and sisters. Coyote hasn't been home in all that time.

978-1-5364-6473-3 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 12.0 RC Lvl 4.5 Lexile 730

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this poignant, action-packed adventure, 12-year-old Coyote must hoodwink her father, Rodeo, into returning home to Washington State after years of itinerant life on a school bus. A tragic car accident killed Coyote's mother and sisters five years before, compelling Rodeo and Coyote to adopt new names and traverse the country telling escapist stories, until Coyote learns from her grandmother that the neighborhood park where she and her mother and sisters buried a precious memory box faces imminent demolition. Gemeinhart (Good Dog) layers grief and upended caretaking into the father-daughter relationship, which heightens as Coyote schemes to get back home from Florida in just a few days to dig up the box; to help, she recruits and befriends a memorable and motley crew of travelers. The narrative leaves unanswered questions about the duo's time on the road (Coyote's schooling, for example), but sincere friendships, inventive obstacles, and emotional depth propel the cross-country trip as the winning protagonist stakes a claim for her future by reclaiming the past. Ages 9: 12. Agents: Pam Victorio and Bob Diforio, D4EO Literary Agency. (Jan.)

#2366121 Coyote Lost and Found (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Dan Gemeinhart

It's been almost a year since Coyote and her dad left the road behind and settled down in a small Oregon town . . . time spent grieving the loss of her mom and sisters and trying to fit in at school. But just as life is becoming a new version of normal, Coyote discovers a box containing her mom's ashes. And she thinks she might finally be ready to say goodbye.

978-1-250-29277-3 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Coyote and Rodeo are no longer on the road and live in a little house with Yager the bus parked alongside. Coyote still spends time in Yager, and one day, she finds a hidden wooden box, filled with what can only be her mother's ashes. Rodeo confirms that she is correct. The place where she wanted her ashes scattered is written in a book of poetry, but when Coyote goes into Yager to get it, she can't find it. Then she realizes that she unintentionally gave it to a thrift store during their last trip. She doesn't tell Rodeo, instead planning an elaborate road trip to search in the most likely places for the book. They bring along best friend Salvador and, to Coyote's dismay, neighbor Candace. Coyote is less happy-go-lucky than in the first novel, and her salty behavior puzzles Salvador and clearly hurts Candace. Still, Gemeinhart allows Coyote to grow up, and readers on their own journeys of emotional growth will be able to identify with her reactions. A memorable blend of sorrow and joy.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Coyote hits the highway again in this follow-up to 2019's The Remarkable Journey of Coyote Sunrise. Set one year later, at the beginning of the Covid-19 pandemic, this sequel finds Coyote Sunrise and her father, Rodeo, both cued white, having settled into a house in Oregon, with Rodeo receiving counseling and Coyote attending school for the first time in five years. But with school canceled for three weeks, it's the perfect time for father and daughter to traverse the country in their bus. They're off in search of a lost volume of poetry by Mary Oliver in which Coyote's mother wrote down the location where they should scatter her ashes. As before, the pair accumulate a motley assemblage of fellow travelers who fall under the spell of the quirky duo. Coyote's narrative flair propels the novel, but the emotional underpinnings have shifted. Thirteen-year-old Coyote's parentified role has lessened, and, aggravated by challenges with classmates, she displays a believably volatile early-adolescent tone in her narration and behavior. Her friend Salvador, who's Latine, is an empathetic, well-developed character. Thanks to Gemeinhart's trademark compassion, each character participates in moments of poignant humanity, but many supporting characters feel more lightly sketched in, including Thai American former corporate lawyer Wally, who experiences anti-Asian racism related to the unfolding pandemic; purple-haired coder Candace, Rodeo's new girlfriend; and a grieving older Englishwoman named Doreen. Fans of the first book will find much to appreciate in this heartfelt story of growth and change. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Cragbridge Hall (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1757771 (Vol. 02) Avatar Battle (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Chad Morris The adventure continues when Abby and Derick begin their second semester at Cragbridge Hall. But when Grandpa Cragbridge admits them to the Council of Keys - a secret group of people who have keys to travel back in time - strange things begin to happen. One by one, members are found unconscious and unable to wake, their keys stolen. 978-1-60907-809-6 ©2014 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 1 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 12.0 Lexile 670	1	$17.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1768531 (Vol. 01) Inventor's Secret (Paperback (Trade)) written by Chad Morris Abby and Derick are accepted to prestigious Cragbridge Hall. Due to the inventions of their grandfather, they will be able to experience history in 3D, use their minds to literally project visual interpretations of classic literature, and become animal avatars for zoology. But when their grandfather and parents go missing, Abby and Derick must follow clues that will reveal a secret. 978-1-60907-875-1 ©2014 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 344 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$7.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2101275 (Vol. 03) Impossible Race (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Chad Morris Derick and Abby Cragbridge continue their seventh-grade year at Cragbridge Hall, where they run into competitions, new friends, virtual zombies, and real danger. 978-1-60907-979-6 ©2015 5-3/4 x 8 432 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 15.0 Lexile 660	1	$18.99

Creatures and Teachers (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2365833 (Vol. 01) Dread Detention (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Jennifer Killick When classmates Hallie, Angelo, Gustav and Naira are forced to come to school on a Saturday, they think things can't get much worse. But they're wrong. Things are about to get seriously scary. 978-0-593-65225-1 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 780	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Four kids sentenced to Saturday detention learn that their school grounds are hiding some sinister secrets. For Angelo and fellow students Hallie, Naira, and Gus, their punishment seems like the worst thing ever. At first it appears the kids couldn't be more different, and there's no love lost between any of them, but as they spend time together, they start to discover commonalities and begin developing mutual respect, which comes in handy when their teacher suddenly disappears into a crack in the ground. As it turns out, the forest surrounding Dread Wood Academy is home to some terrifying giant creatures. Are the elderly couple employed by the school who constantly sing or whistle "Itsy Bitsy Spider" harmless eccentrics...or are they up to something nefarious? As the foursome shift from being mostly strangers to a tightknit, supportive team, their banter becomes realistic and at times quite humorous. Though the novel is narrated by Angelo, all the kids deal with personal problems and open up about bad decisions they've made to protect themselves at the expense of others; their realizations about themselves provide considerable depth and character development alongside the shudder-inducing horrors and moments of action and suspense. No mention is made of the characters' races or ethnicities. A creepy tale that boasts both thrills and authentically complex characters. (Horror. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Arriving at their gothic Dread Wood Academy for Saturday morning detention, four seventh graders find themselves embroiled in an even ghastlier predicament in this creepy crawly, morbidly comedic horror mystery by British author Killick. Angelo, a loner experiencing food insecurity; overachieving Naira; impassioned activist Hallie; and wisecracking Gus trudge to their assigned "Back on Track" session after a string of moral trespasses at school land them in trouble. Initially glum because of their confiscated phones, the group kicks into survival mode when their supervising teacher Mr. Canton is dragged beneath the athletic field by a spider "the size of a dog," leaving the youths to fend for themselves against the monstrous arachnids and the married groundskeepers who appear to be controlling them. As the tweens trauma-bond over the eerie coincidences that forced them into detention, they puzzle over why they are being targeted and attempt to survive the ordeal. Between nail-biting chase scenes and elegantly wrought character development, hardly a moment is wasted in this arachnophobia-inducing thriller, making for an icky-fun adventure full of scares and gallows humor. Main characters default to white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Kirsty McLachlan, Morgan Green Creatives. (Feb.)

Crossing the Stream (Trade)

#2226656 Crossing the Stream (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elizabeth-Irene Baitie

Ato has always seen his father as a real-life Superman, maybe even with a bit of Iron Man and the Hulk mixed in. When he dies, Ato and his mother are devastated, and struggle to put the pieces of their lives back together. So when Ato's mother decides he should spend the summer with his grandmother, he isn't sure what to expect. It certainly isn't arriving to find her preparing to bury the family sofa.

978-1-324-01709-7 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 690

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly All Ghanaian 12-year-old Ato Turkson wants is to visit Nnoma, "the biggest bird sanctuary in all of Africa," which his father helped build before his death, when Ato was an infant. Now, five years after it last opened, an opportunity to visit the exclusive island arises through an environmental project competition. With his oldest friends, fearless Dzifa and obedient Leslie, Ato decides to grow vegetables with natural pesticides. Concurrently, his mother suddenly tells him he'll visit his paternal grandmother every weekend; following five years' estrangement. Though Ato has fond memories of Nana, his mother and the Prophet of Fire, a local spiritual leader, urge him to be wary of Nana's witchery and porch sofa. While Ato grows closer to Nana, comforted by her stories of his father, his community grows cagey when animals and crops start to die. As Ato becomes more suspicious of the Prophet and determined to save his community, he strives to turn his concerns into courage. Baitie (The Lion's Whisper) offers a fully fleshed, sensorially detailed narrative exploring regret and the manipulation of fears through the lens of children's curiosity in her absorbing latest. Ages 9: 12. Agents: Sarah Odedina and Deborah Ahenkorah, Accord Literary. (June)

#2349694 Flying up the Mountain (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elizabeth-Irene Baitie

Ato and his friends Dzifa and Leslie have been selected to visit Nnoma, the bird sanctuary that Ato's father helped build before he died. Ato is convinced that his father hid something valuable on the island, meant only for him. When the trio arrives at Nnoma with other children from across West Africa, they are split into teams and given missions to help broaden their knowledge of nature.

978-1-324-05267-8 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 670

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.95

Curious League of Detectives and Thieves (Trade)#2278711 (Vol. 01) Egypt's Fire (Hardcover (Trade))written by Tom Phillips*

After twelve-year-old John Boarhog's mom dies, the last thing he wants is to be schlepped off to the Jersey Home for Boys, where kids are forced to make skinny jeans for hipsters and are fed nothing but kale. But when a rare Egyptian ruby—the highlight of the museum's new exhibit—goes missing, John is accused of the crime.

978-1-64595-105-6 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 After losing his mother, John takes refuge in New York's Museum of Natural History, where he hides in a crawl space and befriends the kind staff. As a new Egyptian exhibit is being readied, John finds himself only feet away from the priceless ruby known as Egypt's Fire—but he's not alone. Everything goes dark, and the next moment, John is being accused of stealing the ruby. Only the charismatic Inspector Toadius McGee seems to believe John's innocence, and together they work to find the ruby. As Toadius and John get closer to the real culprit, they grow closer to each other as well, with John learning about being a detective, and Toadius sharing his views on life. They visit Broadway, eat blueberry pancakes, meet with a guild of thieves, and more, all while chasing one of the world's most elusive criminals. This fast-paced mystery, sprinkled with humor and life lessons, has enough twists, turns, red herrings, and secrets to keep readers guessing. A strong series starter for fans of clever mysteries. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Framed for the theft of a billion-dollar ruby, an 11 1/2-year-old orphan hooks up with the World's Greatest Detective to collar the perp. In a tale for which the word madcap might have been invented, hardly has John Boarhog awakened in a gallery of the fictional New York Museum of Natural History with what seems to be a very large gem in his pocket, than he's cast into a whirl of unlikely encounters and mishaps in pursuit of the world's greatest thief, the Mauve Moth—who might or might not, he is shocked to learn, be his beloved, long-missing mom! In the course of a plot that careens from the city jail to the observation deck of the Chrysler Building, climaxing with a chase through Manhattan involving a banana truck, a rickshaw, a horse-drawn carriage, a dog, a motorcycle, a police horse, and a fire truck, the plucky preteen meets a gaggle of (mostly) allies led by genial if maddeningly oblique Society of Sleuths investigator Toadius McGee...an oddly large number of whom confess to being ex-members of a certain defunct circus with a tragic past that will no doubt be articulated in future episodes. Along with proving to be a resilient sort, John turns out to be no mean detective himself and, by the end, proudly sports a probationary S.O.S. badge of his own. John, Toadius, and other significant characters have brown skin. A brisk romp chock-full of tricky twists and daffy doings. (Detective fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Phillips's rollicking debut features 11-year-old John Boarhog, a clever orphan who lives in the ceiling of the fictional New York Museum of Natural History. After nearsighted museum director Victor van Eyck mistakes John for a museum custodian, he gives him an access code to the new Egyptology exhibit. Though John usually spends his nights reading books and avoiding detection, he begins browsing the artifacts, and when the exhibit's crown jewel, a ruby of extraordinary beauty called Egypt's Fire, is swapped for a fake, John is blamed and detained. He's eventually released into the reluctant custody of the world's best detective, Toadius McGee, and John; playing Watson to McGee's Holmes; joins him in hair-raising escapades as they hunt for the real gem. Their investigation takes them from center stage at a Broadway musical to a speakeasy filled with purple-clad patrons, and their adventures are populated by a large, flamboyantly rendered cast (many of whom are described as having brown skin), which includes intrepid reporter Jaelyn Star and Pickles, an actor with a secret. Though abundant jokes sometimes overwhelm at the expense of plot, this laugh-out-loud caper, reminiscent of Lemony Snicket's work, sits well among its madcap mystery cohort. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ann Rose, Prospect Agency. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—Eleven-year-old orphaned John Boarhog, secretly living in the New York Museum of Natural History, is accused of stealing a valuable ruby from an Egyptian exhibit in this fun and often absurd middle grade mystery debut. John is discovered when he's found unconscious next to the Egyptian display case with the ruby in his pocket. An anonymous narrator recounts John's desperate efforts to prove his innocence. He's aided in his quest for justice by the incomparable Inspector Toadius McGee; actress Polly "Pickles" Cronopolis, McGee's unrequited love; and the Great Goatinee, a cat burglar and bad magician. The real thief is the Mauve Moth, a criminal mastermind who, to John's disbelief, might be his mother who is thought to have died two years before. The plot is fun in a chaotic way, with double-crossings, plot twists, and outrageous characters and situations. John and company get mixed up in a Broadway show, a speakeasy brawl, and are kidnapped by the nasty head of the Jersey Home for Boys and its bullying orphans. It ends with a fantastical chase scene involving bananas, horses, hansom carriages, rickshaws, dogs, smooching teenagers, a fire truck, and dumpsters. It's not all nonstop comedy though. More sober moments reveal John's struggle to cope with the loneliness of losing his mother. John and Inspector McGee are brown-skinned, most other characters are white. VERDICT Readers who don't take the plot too seriously will enjoy this fast-moving cinematic madcap detective mystery, the first in a series.—Sharon Rawlins

#2328943 (Vol. 02) S.O.S. (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tom Phillips

Fresh off recovering a billion-dollar ruby and losing the criminal who stole it, John Boarhog and Inspector Toadius McGee are soaring high on a new adventure. Hoping to intercept the Mauve Moth before they execute their next great heist, Toadius and John book passage on Her Majesty's Royal Air Armada-a luxury cruise liner airship. But when both the Mauve Moth and Shim-Sham resurface, each with their own nefarious aims, will the detective duo be able to see past their disagreements to, once again, save the day?

978-1-64595-108-7 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A giant flying passenger liner bound for Brazil provides plenty of opportunities for apprentice sleuth John Boarhog, ward of legendary detective Toadius McGee, to show his talents. In a second romp characterized by the frame narrator as true ("I have once again changed only the facts I didn't like") if deliciously over-the-top, the 12-year-old gumshoe-in-training finds himself struggling not only to counter the latest scheme of renowned thief Polly "Pickles" Cronopolis, but to prove himself both to a delegation from the Society of Sleuths and to his infuriatingly secretive guardian, Toadius. Both tasks are complicated by the presence aboard the palatial and, as swashbuckling Capt. Amelia Cloudhopper ominously puts it, "uncrashable," H.M.R.A.S. Boutielle of renowned criminal mastermind Shim-Sham, a monkey recently escaped from imprisonment in New York's maximum security Central Park Zoo. Not to mention, following a string of riotous melees and misadventures, an attack by sky pirates capped by a collision with an iceberg. Along with adding a racially diverse assortment of new adult characters to the array of magicians and circus performers introduced in the opener, Phillips gives his brown-skinned protagonist several new young friends and allies, including fabulously wealthy White-presenting Aussie fanboy Wembley Quokkas (and his loving mums) and Kana Rai, a circus performer of Japanese descent. Stay tuned for further feats of deduction and encounters with more fiendishly clever crooks. Soaring, silly, and stocked with detectives and criminal masterminds...some of whom turn out to be both. (Detective fiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Danny Dingle's Fantastic Finds (Trade)

#2121349 Metal-Mobile (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Angie Lake

Follow the outrageously entertaining adventures in the Danny Dingle series, as the schoolboy inventor and his best friend Percy collect cool stuff for their box of fantastic finds.

978-1-78226-570-2 ©2019 6 x 7-1/2 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$7.99

#2124151 Super-Sonic Submarine (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Angie Lake

Danny Dingle, our favourite AMAZING super-inventor, is back and this time he's joining the SCOUTS! (Everyone knows that stands for Spy Club Only for Ultra-Terrific Spies, don't they?) Faced with the perilous prospect of a camping trip to 'Sunny' Scotland, can Danny and Percy save the day?

978-1-78226-571-9 ©2019 6 x 7-1/2 296 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$7.99

#2147531 Jet of Justice (Hardcover (POB))

written by Angie Lake

With a sci-fi convention and a flying machine competition on the horizon, Danny and

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$7.99

Percy are desperate to finally get noticed by Metal Face. But Mum is plotting against them at every turn. (Trust her to want a summer of peace and quiet!) Suddenly only one question is important: is summer camp as HORRIBLE as it sounds?

978-1-78226-572-6 ©2020 6 x 7-1/2 256 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 840

#2157351 Mighty Iron Foot (Hardcover (POB))

written by Angie Lake

When a routine freeze ray demo leads to the death of Mr Nesbit's prize-winning chameleon, Danny and Percy are sent to jiu-jitsu lessons to 'learn some discipline' - YAWN! Instead their friendship is tested as never before.

978-1-78226-573-3 ©2020 6 x 7-1/2 248 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$7.99

#2160548 Farts of Gratitude (Hardcover (POB))

written by Angie Lake

G.A.G is Metal Face's super-cool new band, and Danny and Percy are determined to copy their idol and make some noise. They're not alone: the whole school is obsessed! With Battle of the Bands on its way, the disaster duo faces their greatest challenge yet. Can they put on the show of a lifetime? Or will it all go up in smoke?

978-1-78226-574-0 ©2020 6 x 7-3/4 248 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$7.99

#2249173 Magnificent Mind Melter (Hardcover (POB))

written by Angie Lake

After an awful parents' evening, Danny and Percy's friendship is on the rocks. Thanks to Mr. Hammond spilling the beans about their couscous-projecting particle accelerator, they've been grounded until they're twenty-one! And what's more, they've got to compete against each other in the school's first ever parent-child sports day.

978-1-78226-777-5 ©2021 6 x 7-1/2 240 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$7.99

Dark Is Rising (Trade)

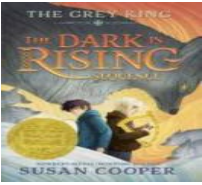

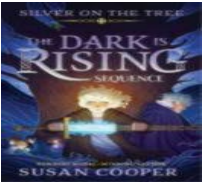

#2352035 (Vol. 02) Dark Is Rising (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Susan Cooper

The day before Will Stanton's eleventh birthday, he notices strange omens on his family farm: a cryptic gift, a terrifying flock of birds, and a deep, cold fear that emerges from the darkness. When he wakes on his birthday-also Midwinter Day-Will has the life-changing revelation that he is the last of the Old Ones, immortals who fight to keep the powers of evil, the Dark, from taking over the world.

978-1-6659-3288-2 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 920

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

		Quantity	Unit Price
	#2352033 (Vol. 01) Over Sea, under Stone (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Susan Cooper All through time, the two great forces of Light and Dark have battled for control of the world. Now, after centuries of balance, the Dark is summoning its terrifying forces to rise once more and three children find themselves caught in the conflict. 978-1-6659-3290-5 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 830	1	$19.99
	#2352037 (Vol. 03) Greenwich (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Susan Cooper The priceless golden grail that Simon, Jane, and Barney Drew worked so hard to recover has been stolen by forces of evil. Great-Uncle Merry takes the siblings back to Trewissick in Cornwall, where he expects the Dark has hidden the grail. There, they are joined by Will Stanton, a mysterious boy with astounding powers. 978-1-6659-3292-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 800	1	$19.99
	#2352039 (Vol. 04) Grey King (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Susan Cooper There is a Welsh legend about a harp of gold, hidden away within a certain hill, that will be found by a boy and a white dog with silver eyes—a dog that can see the wind. Will Stanton knows nothing of this when he comes to Wales to recover from a severe illness. But when he meets the strange boy Bran and his white dog, memory wakes in Will. 978-1-6659-3294-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 930	1	$19.99
	#2352041 (Vol. 05) Silver on the Tree (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Susan Cooper The last great battle between the Light and the Dark has arrived, engulfing Will Stanton; his ageless master, Merriman; the three heroic Drew children; and Bran, the Welsh boy whose destiny is tied to the Light. On a quest through time and space that touches the most ancient myths of the islands of Britain, the six heroes fight fear and death in the darkly brooding mountains of Wales. 978-1-6659-3296-7 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 890	1	$19.99

Daughters of the Lamp (Trade)

		Quantity	Unit Price
	#2366668 (Vol. 01) Daughters of the Lamp, Vol. 01 (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Nedda Lewers	1	$18.99

Sahara Rashad lives by logic. Loves science. And always has a plan. Except her dad just whisked her away to her uncle's wedding in Egypt, upending every single plan she had for the summer. In Cairo, Sahara's days are filled with family-and mystery. First, Sahara's cousins claim the pretentious bride-to-be is actually a witch. Then her late mother's necklace starts glowing-and disappears. Sahara's attempts to recover the necklace lead her to the greatest mystery yet.

978-0-593-61930-8 ©2024 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 750

Reviews by: Book Page Despite her love for logic and science, 12-year-old Sahara Rashad longs for a trip from her home in Queens, New York, to Merlin's Crossing, a wizard-themed amusement park. Alas, as Nedda Lewers' magical coming-of-age adventure Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 When Sahara's father surprises her with a trip to his Egyptian hometown for a family wedding, she's apprehensive. Though she's never set foot in the country or met her relatives, she's swept up in warm embraces and new friendships, but things take a turn for the bizarre with the appearance of her uncle's malevolent fiancé and a mysterious glowing necklace. Scientifically minded Sahara must now contend with the fact that magic could be real--and that she may have to use it to save both her family and the world. This terrific two-pronged adventure toggles between 1980s Cairo and 985 CE Baghdad, bringing together modern life and classic tales of Ali Baba, with some gratifying twists. There's also a profound exploration of tension between seemingly conflicting ideas--science and magic, American upbringing and Egyptian heritage, the beauty and messiness of life itself--and the relief in accepting that both things may be possible at the same time. A memorable adventure that's as exciting as it is insightful. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Egyptian American Sahara comes to value her dual cultural heritage when her first trip to her parents' homeland reveals a magical family history. Going to Cairo to attend her maternal uncle's wedding was never on 12-year-old Sahara Rashad's summer agenda. Since the death of her mother when Sahara was a newborn, she's had no contact with that side of the family and is unsure how she will be received. Despite her worries, she becomes fast friends with her cousin Naima and feels genuine love from all her relatives, except for her uncle's fiancée, Magda. Sahara and Naima suspect Magda has sinister intentions that the adults don't take seriously. Meanwhile, the story of 13-year-old Morgana, a servant of Ali Baba in 10th-century Baghdad, unfolds in an alternate storyline. As the novel progresses, the connection between the two girls takes shape, revealing a centuries-old family secret in danger from malicious outside forces. Sahara's contemplation of her identity and her search for self-acceptance provide an entertaining and relatable backdrop to her encounters with magical elements. Details of Islamic practices and life in Egypt are peppered throughout the novel, flowing naturally as Sahara asks questions about things she doesn't understand. Lewers cleverly builds on the folktale of Ali Baba and Morgana to construct a magical origin story with a rich sense of place and an original twist that can be expanded upon in future volumes. An engaging fantasy inspired by a classic tale that's guaranteed to leave readers eager for more. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In 985 CE Baghdad, Ali Baba's tween servant Morgana is forced to flee after a sorcerer attacks, killing both Ali Baba and the visiting Prince Ala el-Din. As per Ali Baba's dying wish, Morgana takes several enchanted artifacts with her, including a lamp containing a jinni, to keep them out of the wrong hands. A thousand years later, 12-year-old Sahara Rashad, who prizes logic and science over luck and magic, reluctantly accompanies her father to Egypt to attend her uncle's wedding. While she quickly bonds with her cousin Naima, she takes an instant disliking to her uncle's fiancée, whom Naima has nicknamed El Ghoula for her abrasive personality. Mysteries surrounding break-ins at the family shop, the necklace Sahara inherited from her late mother, and a hidden family legacy lead to a desperate attempt to prevent an ancient evil from manifesting in the present. Though the two intertwining narratives never directly connect in this joyful debut, a series launch, they nevertheless provide two halves to a fulfilling, atmospheric story in which Lewers draws on Arabian myth and Egyptian culture to weave a fast-paced magical tale of family, destiny, and belonging. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Kelly Dyksterhouse, Tobias Literary. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Past and present combine in this story about magic and adventure in modern Egypt. Sahara dreams of a summer spent with friends at an amusement park, but instead she is going to her uncle's wedding in Egypt. Sahara is disappointed, but also curious about her parents' homeland and especially about her late mother. Sahara becomes enchanted with Egypt; her family shares stories, food, and love. One night Sahara's mother's necklace starts glowing, and the next day it disappears. There is evil lurking; the beautiful bride-to-be may be a witch! Also told in alternating chapters is the story of Morgana, a servant to Ali Baba, who lived long ago and has been entrusted with caring and protecting magical items from those with dark intentions. Can Morgana protect the treasures from dark sorcerers? Will Sahara find her necklace and reveal the true intentions of the nightmare bride? Lewers blends culture, fairy tales, and mystery into a memorable story that will resonate with fans of "Percy Jackson." VERDICT Highly recommended, this book encapsulates unique characters, mystery, and fairy tales in a novel that readers will devour.--Katie Llera Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2386921 (Vol. 02) Children of the Wind (Hardcover (Trade))	1	$18.99

written by Nedda Lewers

It's been a year since Sahara Rashad came face to face with El Ghoula. And now that she's is back in Egypt for the summer, Sahara can't shake the feeling the evil witch is plotting her next move. Thankfully, Sahara's BFF, Vicky, is tagging along this year and can keep her mind off the sorceress. But Vicky seems distant, and for the first time ever, Sahara is noticing cracks in their friendship.

978-0-593-61933-9 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Dead City (Trade)

#1747275 (Vol. 02) Blue Moon (Hardcover (Trade))

written by James Ponti

While helping the Omega team track down the identity of the original thirteen zombies in New York City, Molly tries to keep her mother's secret and uncovers a sinister plan of the undead.

978-1-4424-4131-6 ©2013 336 pgs.

Grades 5 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 10.0 RC Lvl 5.3 Lexile 800

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Finding, fighting, and even protecting zombies is serious extracurricular work for Molly Bigelow and her three Omega team pals from Dead City (2012). In this butt-kicking sequel, they join the Baker's Dozen project. Their assignment? Monitor the Unlucky 13, the Blackwell family men killed in an 1896 subway tunnel digging explosion. The Blackwells roam freely as undead with constantly changing names. Forced to rely on old-school deductive reasoning and methods, Molly and her friends unearth plans for the biggest undead event ever, scheduled for New Year's Eve in Times Square. Manhattan landmarks (the Flatiron Building, Grand Central Station, museums) roll history, science, and geography into the story. While this doesn't fully recap the first book, readers will catch up easily. Molly is an engaging narrator, and Ponti's writing is full of humor and action. Give this to fans of Suzanne Collins' Gregor the Overlander (2003) or J. Scott Savage's Case File 13 series.-- Fredriksen, Jeanne Copyright 2010 Booklist

#1937264 (Vol. 03) Dark Days (Hardcover (Trade))

written by James Ponti

Molly and the Omegas fight to contain the storm unleashed by Operation Blue Moon. As they do, Molly's personal life is thrown into turmoil when she discovers that one of her closest friends has joined the ranks of the undead, a development that threatens the Omegas as well as Molly's relationship with her mother.

978-1-4814-3636-6 ©2015 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 5 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 4.5 Lexile 730

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

Dead Family (Trade)

#2330033 (Vol. 01) Grave Mistakes (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kitty Curran

Molly Dade has big problems. But then Molly's mom and twin brother Marty were killed in a freak accident. No one knows why, but Mom is now a ghost and Marty is a poltergeist. Oh, and there's also Molly's younger sister Dyandra, who is a zombie.

Keeping all this supernatural stuff a secret from everyone is hard work, especially when the dead (undead?) members of the family still want to participate in things like the Parent Teacher Association meetings or come to the (very public, very potentially embarrassing) school concert.

978-1-368-08347-8 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 720

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A middle schooler discovers that her unusual family is the least of her problems. Readers will have no problem understanding why Molly Dade is stressed--being as her spacey mom is dead but still present as a disembodied voice; Marty, her likewise dead twin brother, is hanging around as a prank-loving poltergeist; and Dyandra, her adopted little sister, is a zombie who craves brains. Keeping these facts from becoming general knowledge has turned both school and her lifelong friendship with classmate Grace into nightmares. Oh, and Molly has actual nightmares, too, along with other symptoms suggesting that she's been cursed by a witch. Emerging hints that the explosion that (more or less) killed her mother and brother a year ago wasn't accidental steer the plotline to a melodramatic climax, but overall, debut author Curran keeps the tone light by, for instance, replacing Molly's supposed grief with irritation at the cloying sympathy she has to endure in public to keep up pretenses. Curran also surrounds her with a secondary cast that, to Molly's amazement and relief, takes her family's differences calmly in stride once they're revealed. By the end, some villains remain at large for future rematches, but everyone else, even ex-nemesis classmate Cara, is on Molly's side--and Molly herself is not quite as "normal" as she had supposed. Most characters seem to be White; one of Molly's grandmothers was Chinese. Addams Family lite for readers seeking spooky fun grounded in relationships. (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Deadlands (Trade)

#2321555 (Vol. 01) Hunted (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Skye Melki-Wegner

When the Fallen Star struck, it brought death and despair, ash and toxic rain. But some dinosaurs survived . . . and were changed. Their minds grew alert. They learned to speak. To dream. To wage war. As the two remaining dinosaur kingdoms fight for territory, Eleri, the disgraced son of a prince, is exiled from his home for saving an enemy.

978-1-250-82769-2 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

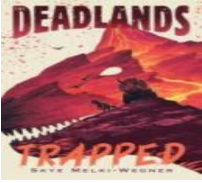

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Fifty years after a falling star wreaked havoc on the prehistoric landscape, two dinosaur kingdoms are locked in a never-ending war. Eleri, a young oryctodromeus, dreams of being a storyteller, not a soldier; but when he inadvertently saves a foe's life, he finds himself exiled to the dreaded Deadlands, a scorched desert left to lawless carnivores and offering endless ways to die. Eleri happens upon exiles from the enemy kingdom, and while they're all desperate enough to put aside their animosity, it's unclear how long the uneasy truce will last. When they learn of a traitorous plot to take down both kingdoms, they realize they'll have to work together to save their worlds and return home. The terrific series opener is packed with detailed dinosaur data and humorous asides, and the world building is well developed, with intricate mythologies, governments, and histories in place from the start. The growing rapport between species is a delight, and though the focus is on friendship and family, there are deeper meditations on morality and war. A treat for any dinosaur devotee.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews ve their warring clans from a deadly outside threat in this all-dinosaur debut. Fifty years after a Fallen Star laid waste to the planet but magically rendered the remaining dinosaurs more intelligent, the herbivorous residents of the Mountain Kingdom and the Prairie Alliance of Cretacea are gathering rival armies for a decisive battle--unaware that the carnivorous raptors of the Carrion Kingdom have formed an unprecedented alliance and are poised to descend in a killing frenzy on the battle's survivors. Expelled or estranged from their herds for various reasons, several young plant eaters, each a different type of dinosaur, meet by chance in the devastated Deadlands and discover the treacherous scheme. Can they put aside rivalries and conflicting agendas to pull off a save? Melki-Wegner provides helpful introductory notes on the large cast, which feels human in all but species ("Look, if we're gonna survive out here, we've both gotta play to our strengths," wheedles aspiring tale spinner Eleri, the small but agile oryctodromeus in the lead role). The story pits the doughty exiles against foes ranging from a horde of ratlike (and unintelligent) warmbloods to a towering tyrannosaur. Keeping the levels of explicit gore and violence low, the author propels her feathered or armored heroes through contrived but suspenseful and ultimately successful efforts to disperse the carnivores and end the original battle in a draw, leaving any resolution or reconciliation to future episodes. Prehistoric adventures with a (more-or-less) period cast. (map) (Adventure. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In a fast-paced trilogy opener, dinosaurs have been capable of "songs and thoughts and language," dreaming, and waging war ever since they were exposed to the star-mist created upon impact of a cataclysmic asteroid 50 years ago. The Mountain Kingdom and the Prairie Alliance; two warring, herbivorous factions; have been at odds for decades. So when, in a moment of compassion, Mountain Kingdom princeling and storyteller Eleri, an oryctodromeus, saves the lives of Prairie Alliance soldiers, he's exiled by his peers to the Deadlands, "an endless sea of charred bones and barren wastes" that is home to innumerable carnivores. There he encounters other young exiles: airborne anurognathid spy Zyre, grumpy triceratops and Prairie Alliance soldier Tortha, gregarious genius ankylosaur Sorielle, and oracular sauropod Lerithon. The quintet form a tentative herd and endeavor to end the war for good, but their quest instead uncovers an insidious carnivore scheme. Melki-Wegner (The Hush) centers intrepid apparent rivals learning to trust and rely on one another while facing natural hazards and threats at every turn. The narrative's emphasis on; and carefully researched depictions of; lesser-known dinosaurs will undoubtedly spark interest among Jurassic enthusiasts, and the engaging adventure will entice readers to subsequent volumes. Ages 8: 12. (Apr.)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2348328 (Vol. 02) Trapped (Hardcover (POB)) written by Skye Melki-Wegner As bloody battle rages between the two surviving dinosaur kingdoms, Eleri and the other young exiles—including a peppy stegosaur, a stoic sauropod, a testy triceratops, and a mysterious spy—search for proof to convince their herds that the war is a setup orchestrated by the secret Carrion Kingdom, a conniving cabal of carnivores determined to feast on every living herbivore. But without evidence, not a soul believes them. 978-1-250-82770-8 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 650	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Seeking to escape carnivorous pursuers, a band of exiled prehistoric plant eaters go from the frying pan into the fire (literally) in this follow-up to The Deadlands (2023). Calamities compound as a desperate flight over the treacherous, volcanic Salted Scorch—with a carnotaurus colonel and a squad of raptors hot on their trail—leads oryctodromeus Eleri and his four herbivorous allies not to the hoped-for safety of the Drylands but straight into the magma-heated tunnels of the Fire Peak: the headquarters of the Carrion Kingdom. There, along with the very personal danger of being captured and eaten at any moment, the fugitives find not only a captive herd of fellow herbivores in need of rescue but a cache of terrifying weapons certain to turn the tide in the larger ongoing war between predator and prey species. As is proper for a middle volume, Melki-Wegner raises the stakes while developing characters and relationships within the contentious main group. And if she continues to lean too heavily on a conveniently broad magical premise to move her story along, she does effectively sweep readers toward a climax that leaves the captives (including a bonded couple of elderly female triceratops) released and the Carrion Kingdom dealt a fiery, but not final, setback. Jurassic juniors again thwart toothy foes, but the prospects for a plant-based peace remain dim. (Adventure. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2375467 (Vol. 03) Deadlands: Survival (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Skye Melki-Wegner As bloody battle rages between the two surviving dinosaur kingdoms, Eleri and the other young exiles—including a peppy stegosaur, a stoic sauropod, a testy triceratops, and a mysterious spy—have temporarily thwarted the Carrion Kingdom, a conniving cabal of carnivores, and destroyed their secret stronghold. 978-1-250-82773-9 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$18.99

Dear Sister (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2081683 Dear Sister (Hardcover (POB)) written by Alison McGhee What do you do when you have an incredibly annoying little sister? Write her letters telling her so. A collection of short, humorous letters (with drawings to match!) from an older brother to his little sister. 978-1-4814-5142-0 ©2018 5 x 8 192 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.6 AR Pts .5 Lexile 560	1	$13.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Letters, drawings, and homemade coupons form this epistolary accounting of two siblings' young life together, a portrait of frustration and love that spans 10 years: from the birth of Sister to her 10th year, when her brother departs for college. The missives Brother sends reveal his feelings; notes their parents ("the wardens") make him pen, apologies (also forced), and sibling progress reports ("Whininess: Excellent"). Initially, Sister is an annoyance (she cries, insists Brother read a book for the "763rd time," fails to respect restroom privacy). But affection grows between them, and amusement and tenderness come through in the letters' postscripts (from a note to camp: "PS: I miss you, too"). Drawings by Bluhm complement the handwritten text, mimicking the boy's sketches and the way they change over time. The authentic sibling relationship may border on nostalgia, but it offers a meaningful look at one of life's realities: sibling-hood and all its foibles. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 10-up. Author's agent: Sara Crowe, Pippin Properties. Illustrator's agent: Larissa Helena, Pippin Properties. (Oct.)

#2329659 Dear Brother (Hardcover (POB))

written by Alison McGhee

(Companion Novel) Sister has been the overlooked younger sibling for years. She knows the drill. Her brother's banjo band is praised while no one acknowledges Sister's bongo skills. Sister does the grunt work, but Brother gets the credit. But this time, the blatant injustice has gone too far. This time, America's Famous Nothing has been granted the incredible power of choosing the family pet. And what does he choose? Certainly not a dog, the pet Sister has begged and pleaded for—a pet the whole family could love. No, Brother chooses a bearded dragon.

978-1-5344-8708-6 ©2023 5 x 8 192 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 1.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

Delphine (Trade)

#2213116 (Vol. 01) Delphine and the Silver Needle (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alyssa Moon

When Delphine, a young orphaned dressmaker mouse living in the walls of Cinderella's chateau, stumbles upon an enormous secret, it upends everything she thought she knew: The magical tailor mice of legend really existed.

978-1-368-04802-6 ©2021 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 For those readers who ever wondered, while watching Cinderella, about the life of the surprisingly agile and talented mice who inhabit the chateau, this is the book to hand to them. Moon vividly portrays a society for mice and other small creatures that parallels that of humans. Delphine was left on the mouse-sized doorstep of the house with nothing but a swaddle and a human-sized needle, and she grows to become a seamstress. She catches the eye of the princess and receives an invitation to the castle where she meets foppish noble mouse Alexander, who is intrigued by the legends of mystical tailor mice who used enormous needles to perform magic. Not a moment after Delphine discovers her needle might be the stuff of legends, she and Alexander attract the attention of King Midnight and his army of rats, and both flee, embarking upon a journey of discovery. This imaginative, exciting spin-off of Disney's Cinderella is a page-turning mystery that banks on the charm of complex, fantastical stories going on unnoticed right under the noses of humans. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A foundling mouse sets out to uncover the mystery of her origins and of the magical needle sized for humans that was left with her. Delphine's travels begin with a summons to the palace, where her growing reputation as a brilliant seamstress commands an order for a ball gown for Princess Petits-Oiseaux--and also gives her a chance to discover exciting hints about a vanished order of needle-wielding magic mice known as the Threaded and of an ancient war with the rats. Meanwhile, no sooner does Midnight, cruel king of the rats, learn that the needle they have been seeking for a century has been found than said old war suddenly heats up and turns into a deadly chase. Also meanwhile, only barely noticed by the animal cast but sure to snag readers' attention, certain events involving another seamstress, a pumpkin coach, a ball, a prince, and a glass slipper are happening above the floorboards in the parallel human world. That isn't the only sly touch in this bibbidi bobbidi debut, which is rich in clearly delineated character types, features plenty of brisk action, and is also, overall, more than a bit reminiscent in tone and setting to Brian Jacques' Redwall series (though with more focus on fashion than food). While this volume is mostly setup, heroes and villains alike end up on their marks, and plenty of loose ends remain to stitch up later. A charming series opener. (Animal fantasy. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6—Delphine appeared one night as a young mouseling on the steps of the Chateau Desjardins (aka Cinderella's abode), wrapped in a cloth with a human-sized needle. Now grown, she has never quite felt like she belongs in the mouse community, though she took pleasure in her passion for sewing. Soon after Delphine sews an exquisite gown for the mouse princess, her mysterious origins catch up with her. The rats, who have had a treaty with the mice for the last 100 years, attack her in an attempt to steal her needle. Delphine's daring escape with the dashing obnoxious Sir Alexander (Delphine does not need rescuing, thank you very much) is the beginning of a quest to find out who she is and how she fits into the ancient magical order of the Threadeds. Along the way, she awakens the magic in the needle and herself as she realizes not all in the order are gone. This anthropomorphic animal story offers a new perspective on the typical "Cinderella" story, while hearkening back to the "Redwall" series, complete with an abbey run by a badger. The mood of this fairy-tale adventure is both exciting and reassuring, and the fast-paced plot gives enough clues to keep readers guessing without making all the connections. This first installment ends on an exciting cliff-hanger. VERDICT A delight of a quest story that will fill the need of readers seeking a fractured fairy tale, talking animals, or just a quick-moving adventure.—Clare A. Dombrowski, Amesbury P.L., MA

#2269829 (Vol. 02) Delphine and the Dark Thread (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Alyssa Moon

Fresh off the heels of King Midnight's rat-army invasion at the Winterberry Ball, Delphine, Alexander, and Cornichonne are on the run, making their way through the far reaches of Peltinore. Unlikely allies pop up at every turn, but so do new enemies. While evading the rats hot on their tails, the trio uncovers new clues about the legendary Threaded tailor mice, including surprising discoveries about Delphine's magical needle.

978-1-368-04833-0 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Armed only with her magical sewing needle, founding mouse Delphine sets out to confront the cruel rat king in this duology closer. As vicious rat armies pillage the mouse realms in search of her and her pointy, long-hidden treasure, Delphine finds herself waging an inner war that parallels the outer one. According to dusty documents and other reputable sources, the needle's good powers can be perverted, but she sees no other way except killing to stop evil rat King Midnight. While struggling with a grim determination to go over to the dark side that sets her at odds with her own fundamentally loving nature, Delphine threads her way along with loyal allies past various scrapes--only to come, climactically, face to face with not only her nemesis, but her own past. Moon stitches in flashbacks to fill out the details of a tragic old love triangle that reaches its fruition here and sews her tale up with a return to Château Desjardins just in time for Cinderella's wedding and a celebratory rodentine ball in the chandelier overhead, and she leaves a fringe of epilogue hinting at further installments to come. Less charming than the opener but does feature a thimbleful of moral quandary at its center. (secret codes) (Animal fantasy. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—When we last left our mouse (and cat) heroes, they had escaped the rat attack of the Winterberry Ball at the Palace. Now, they are in the dark woods in search of the evil self-proclaimed rat king, Midnight, to put an end to the terrible war. The path is hard, cold, and snowy with little food, but Delphine and courtly Alexander, along with faithful cat Cornichonne, are surviving as best they can. All the while Delphine is channeling anger into her magic, making it more dangerous and forbidden while trying to ignore the quest of finding out who she is. But the answer to where she came from may also reveal how to beat the rat king. Perhaps anger is not the way to unknot past wrongs and spells. Readers will need to read the first book, Delphine and the Silver Needle, as not much backstory is given and things start right where the last book ended. Some of the fairytale aspects are lost in this installment as it veers more into a hero's quest, but readers will still become immersed in this animal world. Familiar characters experience growth, and delightful new ones are introduced, such as a helpful family of bats. Past and present plot lines intersect (with distinguishing typeface), eventually revealing connections and rendering the plot a beautifully intricate tapestry. While the hemming up of the plot at the end tends toward hurried and unbelievable based on the actions of the characters throughout, readers will likely appreciate the happy ending. VERDICT A sound sequel that brings adventure and mystery, and weaves an animal story that will appeal to a wide audience.—Clare A. Dombrowski

Diary of a Nerd (Trade)

#2181668 (Vol. 01) Diary of a Nerd, Vol 01 (Hardcover (POB))
written by Philip Osbourne

Diary of a Nerd stars Phil, a twelve year old boy living in Manhattan, NY. He is a talented, self-professed nerd ... an intellectual who enjoys spending his days with his friends, known as "The Geek Team".

978-1-950912-18-6 ©2021 6 x 9 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $12.99

#2234059 (Vol. 02) Diary of a Nerd, Vol 02 (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity 1
Unit Price $12.99

written by Philip Osbourne

Phil likes a girl in his class named Loren, but he also knows that he could never compete with Ted, Loren's boyfriend. One night, while Phil is sleeping, Darth Vader appears to him like a vision in his dream, inviting him to use his strength to challenge the bullies and win the love of Loren.

978-1-950912-29-2 ©2022 6 x 9 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Diary of a Roblox Pro (Prebound)

#2350408 (Vol. 05) Zombie Invasion (Prebound)

written by Ari Avatar

Ari and his friends are on another adventure in the fifth title in the unauthorized Diary of a Roblox Pro series! Citizens of Blockville have been going missing, and there are rumors that a new threat looms over Ari's town. Ari's best friend Zeke thinks it's zombies. But those don't exist... right?!

978-1-5364-8229-4 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 128 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 620

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.95

#2377450 (Vol. 06) Mega Shark (Prebound)

written by Ari Avatar

Ari's dad is a Marine Biologist and has invited Ari, Zeke and Jez to a trip out to sea to track dolphins for his research. Ari and his friends are totally stoked, but there is something lurking deep beneath the water that might derail the entire day. Before they know it, Ari must find a way to save his dad and friends from danger without becoming prey himself!

978-1-5364-8457-1 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 128 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 660

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.95

#2380961 (Vol. 07) Cash Splash (Prebound)

written by Ari Avatar

Ari and his friends have discovered a portal to a parallel universe. And Ari is shocked to find that in this world, he's a millionaire! With a butler, dragon pets, and all the candy he could possibly eat, why would Ari ever want to go back home? Or is there something more threatening in this universe that Ari can't see?

978-1-5364-8477-9 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 128 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 580

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.95

#2309758 (Vol. 01) Monster Escape (Prebound)

written by Ari Avatar

Ari and his friends can't resist a challenge. Rumor has it there's some kind of monster living in the local abandoned warehouse who devours anyone who steps foot inside. Ari doesn't believe the gossip and accepts a dare to enter the building. But as soon as they set foot in the warehouse, all of the doors lock behind them and they come face-to-face with the beast itself!

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.95

#2317485 (Vol. 02) Dragon Pet (Prebound)
written by Ari Avatar

It's time for another field trip! Ari and his class visit a farm where they are entrusted with an egg to adopt. This is a big responsibility for Ari but he's excited nonetheless. Everyone's egg hatches into harmless animals, except for Ari's. His hatches into a baby dragon! Cool, right? Wrong! As the dragon grows, Ari realizes he may have bitten off more than he can chew. Ari and his friends have to figure out a way to capture the dragon before it destroys all of Blockhaven! Can they handle it?

978-1-5364-7838-9 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 128 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 1.0 Lexile 550

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

#2327211 (Vol. 03) Obby Challenge (Prebound)
written by Ari Avatar

Ari Avatar is just your average Roblox kid living in a blocky world! Battle monsters and avoid disasters in a Roblox world -- all through the eyes of Ari and his friends. Diary of a Roblox Pro is a must-read for any kid who loves to play Roblox!

978-1-5364-7981-2 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 128 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 1.0 Lexile 570

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

#2331273 (Vol. 04) Lava Chase (Prebound)
written by Ari Avatar

Ari and his friends have to go on a boring geography field trip to a dormant volcano. Ugh! Ari and his friends sneak off... only to get lost. Then they realize their class went home without them! Much to their surprise, Ari, Zeke and Jez also discover that the volcano may not be quite as dormant as they thought. It's time to get out of here!

978-1-5364-8047-4 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 128 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 1.0 Lexile 650

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

Diary of a Wimpy Kid (Prebound)

#2350283 (Vol. 18) No Brainer (Prebound)
written by Jeff Kinney

Up until now, middle school hasn't exactly been a joyride for Greg Heffley. So when the town threatens to close the crumbling building, he's not too broken up about it. But when Greg realizes this means he's going to be sent to a different school than his best friend, Rowley Jefferson, he changes his tune. Can Greg and his classmates save their school before it's shuttered for good?

978-1-5364-8218-8 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 224 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.2 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.95

#2298580 (Vol. 17) Diper Overlode (Prebound)
written by Jeff Kinney

Middle-schooler Greg Heffley charts the rise of his teenage brother's band, Loded Diper, as they live out their rock-and-roll dreams. But things could get messy for Greg and Rodrick when the Diper hits the road.

978-1-5364-7631-6 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8 224 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.3 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews th volume. Greg's older brother, Rodrick, has longed to become a rock superstar, and his band, Loded Diper, is s tarting to generate some heat. At least, that's what Rodrick thinks. Greg is a bit more skeptical about Loded Diper's looming success but is just interested enough to catalog the band's efforts to gain enough notoriety to win the Battle of the Bands as Metallichihuahua, Rodrick's idols, did when they were starting out. Setbacks abound, including late nights, a swindling night club owner, band infighting, and financial struggles, accompanied by an endless parade of diaper jokes and toilet humor. The book will be fine enough for die-hard Wimpy Kid readers, but even the biggest fans of the Heffley clan will find this one doesn't live up to previous series high points. Rodrick has long been the weakest character in the Wimpy Kid canon, a one-dimensional lout who was never developed as well as the other Heffleys or even some tertiary characters. This book is squarely placed upon Rodrick's shoulders, and there just isn't enough there for him to make it pop. The rambling series of misfortunes becomes cumbersome after a while. The book is a swing for the long-running series--an attempt to center a long-neglected character--but unfortunately the effort strikes out. A commendable effort that nevertheless misses the mark. (Graphic/fiction hybrid. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Diary of an Awesome Friendly Kid (Prebound)

#2223110 (Vol. 03) Rowley Jefferson's Awesome Friendly Spooky Stories (Prebound)
written by Jeff Kinney

Grab a flashlight, crawl under the covers, and dive into the twisted, unexpectedly hilarious world of Rowley Jefferson's imagination. You'll meet zombies, vampires, ghosts, and much more in these comically terrifying tales.

978-1-5364-6792-5 Amulet Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 224 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 2.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.95

Disney Chills (Prebound)

#2239422 (Vol. 05) Liar, Liar, Head on Fire (Prebound)
written by Vera Strange

On the outside, twelve-year-old Hector seems like he's got it all. He's strong, fast, and rumored to be the favorite to win this year's Zeus Cup at the Mt. Olympus Spartan Race, the highest honor in his small Midwestern town. Hector's parents and his five siblings trained to win gold in their twelfth year, but all fell short.

978-1-5364-6934-9 ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 224 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

#2206182 (Vol. 03) Second Star to the Fright (Prebound)
written by Vera Strange

Second Star to the Fright, Book 3 of the all-new Disney Chills chapter book series, tells the tale of a kid who finds he's hooked far more than he can handle when Captain Hook creeps out of Neverland and into our world. With shuddersome spooks and blood-curdling frights, readers should grab their night-lights and prepare to be chilled!

978-1-5364-6680-5 ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 240 pgs.

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

#222522 (Vol. 04) Be Careful What You Wish For (Prebound)
written by Vera Strange

Thirteen-year-old Delia loves fashion. She loves beauty products. She spends hours in her room attempting to take the perfect selfie. All she wants is to be as cool and trendy as the other girls in her school. Unfortunately, Delia's family is not exactly flush with cash, so keeping up with the latest styles is next to impossible. But when Delia finds a near flawless faux fur coat at her local thrift store, she discovers that when she wears it, she's transformed.

978-1-5364-6779-6 ©2021 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.95

#2167024 (Vol. 01) Part of Your Nightmare (Prebound)
written by Vera Strange

When eleven-year-old Shelly Anderson finds a mysterious nautilus shell at her family's aquarium and meets The Little Mermaid's infamous sinister sea witch, Ursula, she agrees to help the witch in exchange for becoming the fastest swimmer on her school's swim team. But after Shelly's wish quickly goes belly-up, she must figure out how to back out of the witch's deal before it forever binds her fate.

978-1-5364-6357-6 ©2020 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.95

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Shelly Anderson's parents own the aquarium in Triton Bay, but popular girl Kendall pressures Shelly to do environmentally irresponsible things like toss trash into the ocean. That's how she catches the attention of Ursula, the half-human, half-octopus sea witch, who tricks Shelly into making a contract-binding wish that allows her to be the fastest swimmer, beat her rivals, please her friends, maybe even impress her parents so much that they fall back in love. What Shelly does not anticipate is sending Kendall into a jealous rage by shattering her record time or that Ursula would gradually turn her into a fish. Vera Strange (nom de plume of Jennifer Brody) places a creative spin on the Disney classic The Little Mermaid in this first of a new novice horror series; there is no happy ending unless you consider the life lesson from Enrique, fellow marine biology enthusiast, who questions Shelly's decision to change for others rather than holding out for people who accept her as herself. Even Enrique's attempts to help Shelly escape the crafty, sea-dwelling diva's "squid pro quo" may not be enough, though, in this Goosebumps-flavored Disney tale that hearkens back to the tale's grittier Andersen origin. Hand this book to a fan of Grimm's fairy tales or Disney villains; they'll appreciate the unhappily ever after. QB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A new middle-grade series featuring Disney stories' scary elements opens with The Little Mermaid's Ursula. Shelly Anderson has struggled to make friends ever since she changed schools following her parents' breakup. Even though she's the eco-conscious daughter of an aquarium owner, the spineless Shelly allows her new, popular-clique friends to peer-pressure her into tossing a disposable coffee cup into the ocean. After littering, she's stalked by sea witch Ursula, who offers a deal: She'll make Shelly a fast swimmer in exchange for a favor to be named later. Of course, there's something fishy with the deal: Shelly starts slowly transforming into a fish (first gills, then webbing between her digits and scales); to reverse it, she must retrieve the old trident that's in the aquarium for Ursula. The narrative's insistence on telling over showing causes it to fail to capture any visceral sensory details needed for the body-horror storyline to succeed. Ironically, the most successful horror moment is the least logically connected to the magic at play (her brother's dead goldfish appears in the school toilet to warn her off from the deal). The half-baked environmental storyline features after-school-special levels of heavy-handedness. The ending's unhappy for Shelly, though there's a touch of humor and her safety's implied. Most characters lack descriptions; Shelly has olive skin, and one significant secondary character is coded Latinx. Coasting on a popular villain isn't enough to keep the watered-down story afloat. (Horror/fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-- Middle-schooler Shelly is struggling with trying to fit in at a new school. After her parents split up, she and her brother moved with their mom into a townhouse in a quaint seaside village. Her family runs the local aquarium, so Shelly takes comfort in her love of aquatic life. The problem is that her passion just doesn't fit with the in-crowd. Narcissistic Kendall and her two sidekicks, Attina and Alana, think anything science related is nerdy and not cool. Shelly downplays her love of science but is shocked to witness two eyes glowing with a strange light when they take a school field trip to the aquarium. That night, she awakens to a strange light flashing in her brother's room. When she investigates, she finds a nautilus shell that she had gifted her brother from her aquarium visit to the aquarium that day. As soon as Shelly touches the glowing shell, she is transported to a strange underwater world ruled by the sea witch, Ursula. Ursula offers Shelly one wish in exchange for an unnamed deed. Just wanting to fit in with her newfound friends, Shelly signs a grim contract only to discover terrible consequences. She wished to be the fastest swimmer on her school's swim team but realizes Ursula's magic is slowly turning Shelly into a fish. Shelly desperately tries to hide her changing state yet receives vile, aquatic reminders from Ursula that she must pay back her wish. The plot is fast-paced and suspense is well maintained. The ultimate lesson of "be careful what you wish for" will resonate with bibliophiles. VERDICT This sinister tale will wrap its tentacles around avid mystery lovers with a moderate dose of chills.--Julie Shatterly, W. A. Bess Elem. Sch., Gastonia, NC Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2167027 (Vol. 02) Fiends on the Other Side (Prebound)

written by Vera Strange

Fiends on the Other Side, Book 2 of the all-new Disney Chills chapter book series, tells the tale of a boy who turns into a shadow after striking a dark bargain with The Princess and the Frog's Dr. Facilier.

978-1-5364-6358-3 ©2020 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

Reviews by: School Library Journal GR 3-5-In the second book of Disney's "Chills" series, twins Malik and Jamal must work together if they and their beloved New Orleans are to survive. Malik is smart, good at basketball, and has just been voted class president. Jamal feels like he is always in his brother's shadow and desperately wants to be noticed. When the twins' mysterious and reclusive grandmother dies, she leaves two boxes for the boys. Malik's box contains a cool antique trumpet, and Jamal's a strange skull necklace and a cryptic note. Once again Jamal feels he has been cheated. What Jamal doesn't know is that the evil Dr. Facilier wants that necklace, and he is willing to do anything to get it. Fans of "Goosebumps" and Alvin Schwartz will like this title. The story isn't keep-you-up-at-night scary, but it is creepy. Each book in the series incorporates a Disney villain that young readers will be familiar with and will enjoy reading about. The New Orleans setting brings an interesting element to the book and Jamal learns a very important lesson about friendship and the destructive nature of envy and jealousy. VERDICT If you are looking for a new series to satisfy students seeking a creepy, but not bone-chilling story, this is one to consider.--Peggy Henderson Murphy, Wyandot Elem. Sch., Dublin, OH Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2285935 (Vol. 06) Once Upon a Scream (Prebound)

written by Vera Strange

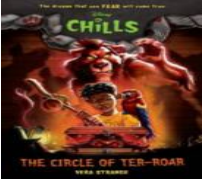

Torn away from her favorite place in the world and shipped off to live with her two cooky aunts in the countryside, Dawn is miserable in her new life. While her parents see this as a chance for her to be away from the bad influences that kept getting her into trouble, Dawn sees her new dumpy town of Moorsland as a sticky and smelly prison with way too many bugs. But no one seems to care what Dawn wants, so she's stuck helping her aunts in their dusty antique shop and finishing the year out in a new school filled with mean girls.

978-1-5364-7457-2 ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A drop of blood unleashes an evil fairy in this installment in a middle-grade series featuring Disney villains. Maleficent features in this updated retelling of "Sleeping Beauty" in which readers meet Dawn Flores, who's been sent to live for six months in rural Castletown after getting in trouble for helping her best friends shoplift. Sixth grader Dawn is staying in the Deep South with her married aunts, Fleur and Merry, and she dislikes everything about the countryside and misses her family, friends, and city life. Dawn soon finds herself at odds with popular classmate Leah, the mayor's daughter. Leah socially excludes and publicly humiliates Dawn, stoking her desire for revenge. While helping her aunts clean out a dusty shed of estate-sale acquisitions for Spindles 'N' Things, their antiques shop, Dawn accidentally pricks her finger on the spindle of an old spinning wheel, unleashing a frightening, evil magical force. Maleficent wants to reclaim her stolen spinning wheel, and she ensnares gullible Dawn in a scheme to help her amplify her powers. The magical tricks deployed by Maleficent include bewitching animals, casting sleeping curses, and possessing people—all while Dawn and her new friend, Phillipa, attempt to maintain control of a losing situation. Despite some tense moments, the predictable plot spins mechanically, bogged down by heavy-handed descriptive language that tells more than it shows. Dawn's shoplifting friends are brown-skinned; other cast members follow a White default. Mild scares woven from well-worn threads. (Horror. 8-12)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2331790 (Vol. 07) Circle of Ter-ROAR (Prebound) written by Vera Strange Twelve-year-old Silas is a scaredy cat. Everything from an unexpected door slam to someone coughing in class scares him, and the other students waste no time in ruthlessly reminding him of it. Hakuna matata is the theme of Camp Pride Rock that was the pride and joy of Silas's Aunt Scarlet. But when she suddenly passes away and gives all ownership to her brother, Silas's father, they find upon arrival that the camp isn't in the shape they they thought it would be. And deep inside Silas's closet is an old, mysterious trunk. When he is finally able to unlock it, he finds the spirit of Camp Pride Rock--the pelt of an old lion named Scar. 978-1-5364-8071-9 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 224 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710	1	$16.95

Disney Villains (Insight Editions)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2231599 Portrait of Evil (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Pat Shand This gruesome grimoire collects the deepest secrets and darkest spells of dastardly Disney villains like Maleficent, Cruella de Vil, Ursula, Mother Gothel, and Prince Hans. Look behind doors and lift secret flaps to uncover the villains' personal keepsakes and collectibles, including the incantation the Evil Queen summoned to poison Snow White's apple and Doctor Facilier's tarot cards. 978-1-64722-058-7 ©2021 10 x 11-1/2 40 pgs. Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic	1	$19.99

Disney Villains (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2026546 Mistress of All Evil: A Tale of the Dark Fairy (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Serena Valentino So what of the dark fairy, Maleficent? Why does she curse the innocent princess? What led to her becoming so filled with malice, anger, and hatred? Many tales have tried to explain her motives. Here is one account, pulled down from the many passed down through the ages. It is a tale of love and betrayal, of magic and reveries. 978-1-368-00901-0 ©2017 320 pgs. Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 750	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Disney's Villains series' fourth installment highlights Sleeping Beauty's Maleficent. Maleficent turns to the villainous witch trio the Odd Sisters for aid finding Aurora. Although they were lost in the land of dreams after Poor Unfortunate Soul (2016), they give enough advice that Maleficent succeeds in the spindle plot. But Maleficent needs Aurora gone for good, so she abducts Prince Phillip and seeks the assistance of two other powerful witches, Circe and Nanny, to ensure Aurora never wakes. The connections with the previous books of the series (including periodic recaps and reminders as well as appearances by Princess Tulip, Snow White, Queen Grimhilde, and more) as well as the back story shared among Maleficent and the other characters are told in lengthy, sometimes-clunky expository passages and flashbacks. The nonlinear plotting allows for forward plot progression on the storyline with Circe and her sisters, as well as a metafictional one about a storybook. In flashbacks, Maleficent goes from an isolated outcast adopted by Nanny to a victim of extreme bullying to the villain. Feminist Maleficent sneers at the princesses-needing-rescue trope, thereby insidiously reinforcing it, and the book primarily concerns itself with all manner of relationships between females. The story builds to a revelation that answers the question of why Maleficent seeks to destroy Aurora. Aside from colorful Maleficent (she modulates between green and lavender), if other characters' skin tones are described, they're pale. Despite frequently inelegant prose, the story will probably please series fans. (Fantasy. 10-18)

#2067384 Mother Knows Best: A Tale of the Old Witch (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Serena Valentino

So what of the old witch, Mother Gothel? Where does she come from? And how does she come across the magical golden flower? Here is one account that recounts a version of the story that has remained untold for centuries... until now. It is a tale of mothers and daughters, of youth and dark magic. It is a tale of the old witch.

978-1-368-00902-7 ©2018 400 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 700

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

#2106957 Odd Sisters (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Serena Valentino

Throughout the Villains series, the Odd Sisters have meddled in the lives of the Wicked Queen, The Beast, Ursula, Maleficent, and Mother Gothel, changing the course of fate for the greatest villains ever known. Now, it's time for their reckoning.

This novel goes deeper into the lives of the twisted, diabolical Odd Sisters, finally revealing the dark truth about who they are and where they're from.

978-1-368-01318-5 ©2019 288 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 740

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--Circe, identified as the Enchantress from Disney's Beauty and the Beast, sets out to right the wrongs caused by the three women who brought her to life: witches Lucinda, Ruby, and Martha. Her companion Snow White has her own mysteries to explore, and they receive advice from The Fairy Godmother, Nanny, and Oberon. Circe's travels lead her and Snow White to information about the evil witch Nestis and her role in Circe's own family past. The final scene of this sixth book in the series involves Circe and her family and Snow White and her mother Grimhilde, with a cliff-hanger ending. Even die-hard fans will find it difficult to enthuse over this walk on Disney's dark side. Far too many characters with similar titles, roles, and motivations cause the story to lumber along. The first half of the book consists of uninspiring dialogue and lengthy reflections on character backstories that do not provide much clarity or drama. Snow and Circe sit around for over 100 pages before they commit to any action. The backstory often seems written to explain away inconsistencies or fill in gaps rather than to entertain and inform. Exclamation-ridden dialogue reeks with tedious platitudes. The earnest effusions of Snow and Circe don't line up with the edgy exploration of the villainous Disney characters or the intended middle grade audience. VERDICT Avoid unless you have readers eager for every Disney book in existence.--Caitlin Augusta, Stratford Library Association, CT Copyright 2019 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2284486 Never Never (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Serena Valentino

As a baby, James Bartholomew fell out of his pram and was taken to Neverland.

James is claimed by his parents just shy of seven days-after which he would have officially become a Lost Boy. Once he returns to London, he never stops thinking about Neverland.

As he grows up, he hates his life in London, and everything to do with growing up and eventually becoming a gentleman. So he seeks a position on the ship of the infamous pirate, Blackbeard.

978-1-368-02529-4 ©2022 5-1/2 x 7 256 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.5 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Peter Pan origin story centering the perspective of Capt. Hook. The notorious baddie started life as a precocious child in London. In fact, at one point the infant James Hook vanished from his pram when his nurse's attention was elsewhere. Six days later, after a magical sojourn in Never Land, he was reclaimed by his family—but he continued to long to return there. Years later, disenchanted with his aristocratic life, Oxford-educated James leaves everything behind to become a pirate in hopes that this path will eventually lead him back to Never Land. Entering the world of piracy with loyal servant Smee by his side, James engages in many battles at sea, being attacked by a kraken as well as human enemies and experiencing time moving at a different rate. After Capt. Blackbeard hands his ship over to James to command, James confronts witches and other magical beings, including Tinker Bell. In the vein of other entries in this series that offers alternate perspectives on beloved tales, readers will hear Capt. Hook's perspective on how his infamous feud with Peter Pan began. This fast-paced, intriguing, and immersive story will capture the attention of its readers with its page-turning adventures and themes of trust and betrayal. Characters read as White. Full of magic and laughs. (Fantasy. 12-14)

#2327852 Fire and Fate (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Serena Valentino

Ruler of the Underworld is not the title Hades would have chosen for himself, but when he and his brothers made a deal to split the world in three, Hades drew the short straw. And a deal is a deal. But eternity proves a long time to be shoved into a role he never wanted, and with each passing day of being treated as a villain, he grows more vengeful. When he discovers he wasn't invited to the celebration of his nephew Hercules' birth, and Hades reaches his limit.

978-1-368-07657-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 7 304 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Doctor Who (Trade)

#2283442 Doctor Who: A Short History of Everyone (Hardcover (Trade))

written by

For over forty years, the Doctor has battled against the monsters and villains of the universe. This book brings together the best - and the worst - of his enemies, companions, and fellow Time Lords. Why are the Daleks so deadly? What did Sarah Jane Smith do after she left the Doctor? Who exactly is the Master? And how did the Doctor defeated every threat, with a little help from some friends and a lot of luck.

978-1-4059-5232-3 ©2022 6 x 9 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$28.99

#2349346 Doctor Who Annual 2024 (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Paul Lang

The Doctor Who 2024 Annual is THE place to start this incredible journey. With exclusive information about this amazing new era, including behind-the-scenes photos, dialogue, costumes and hints from the new episodes. It even includes an exclusive never-seen-before Fourteenth Doctor story, and a sneak peek at the long-awaited Fifteenth Doctor...

978-1-4059-5689-5 ©2023 8 x 11 64 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$12.99

#2349347 Doctor Who: Tenth Doctor Christmas Collection (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Steve Cole

The Doctor's tenth incarnation was: hilarious, furious, fun and vengeful. (He also had great hair.) He also saved the world, and the universe, more times than anyone can remember. But from the Christmas Invasion to the Runaway Bride, things always seemed to need saving around the festive season...So follows a series of ten incredible tales across the universe, as the Doctor (and Rose and Martha and Donna) battle aliens and cross the boundaries of space and time to save Christmas Day.

978-1-4059-5690-1 ©2023 6 x 9 240 pgs.

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$20.00

Doctor Who: The Decades Collection (Trade)

#2357935 Doctor Who, 1960s: Imaginary Friends (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jacqueline Rayner

It's Christmas, 1963, when nine-year-old Gerald starts dreaming of strange worlds and monsters. His parents think it's harmless at first. But Gerald is convinced it's real - his dreams of Daleks and cavemen and insects as big as a person.

978-1-4059-5694-9 ©2023 5 x 8 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2357936 Doctor Who, 1970s: The Cradle (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Natasha Suri

It is London, 1978, and tensions are high. Seema and her family are struggling, but she has learnt to keep her head down, not create trouble. That is until she and her two friends, Terrence and Inderjit, decide to join an anti-National Front protest in the East End. And when trouble does inevitably find them, the friends are saved by the appearance of a mysterious, seemingly broken-down bus.

978-1-4059-5696-3 ©2023 5 x 8 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2357937 Doctor Who, 1980s: The Self-Made Man (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mark Griffiths

Midnight, 1984. In a sprawling, run-down housing estate in south London, a man returning from a night out in the West End finds himself pursued by a strange hooded figure. So naturally when the Doctor and Romana arrive in the TARDIS the next day, they find themselves in the middle of a crime scene. But when child genius Matthew Pickles - inventor of a hugely popular handheld videogame - arrives to help them crack the case, they discover there is more to this than meets the eye.

978-1-4059-5698-7 ©2023 5 x 8 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2357938 Doctor Who, 1990s: Wannabes (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Dave Rudden

It's Dublin in 1994, and the Doctor and Donna have arrived at the tiny nightclub known as Tripod. Tripod is famous for precisely one thing - the night where four young women came together to make the biggest girl band of the 90s: the Blood Honeys. Donna has convinced the Doctor to visit their first ever concert - and he has begrudgingly agreed. Naturally the band is kidnapped by a deadly pack of siren-like creatures who feed off human adulation, with an eye on taking over the world.

978-1-4059-5701-4 ©2023 5 x 8 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2357933 Doctor Who, 2000s: The Monster in the Cupboard (Hardcover Trade)

written by Kalynn Bayron

When the Doctor and Rose stumble across thirteen-year-old Lily, they both agree she needs their help. Lily thinks there are monsters in the closet, hiding under the bed. And that they've taken her mother and brother - who went missing months ago. When asked about the monster, Lily can only say it's made of immense light and power. Rose and the Doctor must find out who and what the creature is, and where it's taken Lily's family.

978-1-4059-5703-8 ©2023 5 x 8 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Dog Diaries (Trade)

#2283974 Dog Diaries: Mission ImPAWsible and Curse of the Mystery Mutt (2-in-1) (Hardcover Trade)

written by James Patterson

First, you'll read about the RUFF time Junior had when his pet humans went on a trip and left Junior behind in a FUR-RAISING place. Find out how Junior and his pooch-pals did the imPAWsible to get home. Then put on your detective hat and join Junior as he uses his smarts and his sniffer to track down the culprit TERRIER-izing his town! It's up to Junior to solve a TAIL-CURLING mystery.

978-0-316-46842-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$13.99

Dog Squad (Prebound)

#2317380 (Vol. 01) Dog Squad (Prebound)

written by Chris Grabenstein

Duke is not your average dog. Along with his crew, he fights crime and goes on claw-biting adventures helping dogs in peril in the hit streaming sensation-DOG SQUAD! Fred is a pretty average dog. He's scrappy. He's loveable. But he's not brave like his heroes on Dog Squad.

978-1-5364-7804-4 ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 570

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5 A shelter dog chosen to serve as temporary substitute for an injured TV star proves that a noble heart trumps good looks every time. Though he misses his first chance at stardom when Broadway hip-hop musical Washington closes after one night, Fred refuses to throw away his shot to act the heroic lead in Dog Squad while the streaming series' original prima donna, Duke, recovers from a broken leg. Not only is Fred a natural on set, in real life he saves babies and puppies and, in a display of true altruism, sets out to rescue Duke from abusive trainer Big Tony Bomboloni. Aside from that stereotyping gaffe, the human and canine supporting cast is an appealing mix of rivals and sidekicks. In frequent ink-and-fill scenes (not seen in finished form), Hughes depicts the courageous canine (part boxer, part hound, "part who knows what") in action from various dramatic angles. Grabenstein bills his "wags-to-riches" tale as a series kickoff, but notwithstanding a broad hint about the next episode, this stands (all four paws) firmly on its own. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An unlikely dog becomes the star of a popular dog adventure television show in this series opener. Fred the dog is a "bitzer. A little bit of this, a little bit of that." He idolizes Dog Squad, a television show featuring live-action dogs in daring escapades, and its canine leading star, Duke. Since Fred's original owner dumped him at an animal shelter, he's been living in New York City with Big Tony, who hopes to turn him into a ferocious guard dog and sell him for a big profit. An alley confrontation lands Fred back in the animal shelter, but this time he's rescued by entertainment industry animal trainer Jenny Yen and her young niece (and self-proclaimed pet psychic), Abby. Ideal for reluctant readers with its short chapters, energetic illustrations, plentiful action, and "pawsome" puns, this light fantasy follows Fred, who bears an uncanny resemblance to Duke, as he adopts the starring role in Dog Squad when Duke becomes injured. But does this unassuming dog have what it takes to be a hero both on and off the camera when a natural disaster, a dognapper, and more disasters strike? Teamwork from Abby and co-stars help guide the way and set the scene for more installments. An author's note touchingly describes the Mr. Lemoncello's Library series creator's source of inspiration: his own Fred, a formerly stray, retired Broadway canine star. Doggone fun. (Animal fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Grabenstein's hilarious series starter begs readers to explore what it means to be a hero. Presented in third person, the story chronicles a dog's journey from famine to fame. Left behind by his owners, Fred must fend for himself. Along the way, he encounters breeds kind and cruel at a city shelter, a Broadway performance, and Second Chance Ranch, where Jenny and Abby train strays to become stars for the popular Dog Squad television series featuring famous canine idols Duke, Nala, and Scruffy. As a mixed-breed dog, Fred faces identity challenges. He looks exactly like the real Duke in the show, but he thinks he's just an average pup. When Fred finally meets the real Duke, he reconsiders his assumptions. Rendered in tight, snappy prose, each chapter builds a narrative arc that leaves readers wondering what will happen next. The tone is humorous, and characters are similar to the kids whom readers might encounter. Laced with positive messages but never preachy, this allegorical, fast-paced, rollicking adventure will appeal to all readers. VERDICT Through expertly paced conflict and characterization, this canine adventure shows what it means to be brave.—Jennifer Strattman, Freelance Writer, Cambridge, NY

Dog Squad (Trade)

#2296880 (Vol. 02) Cat Crew (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Chris Grabenstein

Fred, the loveable stray who became the star of the hit streaming sensation, DOG SQUAD, is back and working on a new show-Cat Crew! But wait a second-there's something funny about these felines! And something suspicious about their animal trainer. Is this cat crew being electronically controlled?!?! And what exactly is the evil trainer plotting? Can Fred save the day . . .and the cats?! It's time for an all paws on deck top-secret rescue mission!

978-0-593-48087-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 630

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Dog's Purpose (Trade)

#2329304 Zeus: Water Rescue (Hardcover (Trade))
written by W. Bruce Cameron

Ellie is a very special dog with a very important purpose. From puppyhood, Ellie has been trained as a search-and-rescue dog. She can track down a lost child in a forest or an injured victim under a fallen building. She finds people. She saves them. It's what she was meant to do.

978-1-250-81556-9 ©2023 6-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Cameron once again tackles the subject he is known for: adventure-seeking dogs and the humans who love them. Zeus, a chocolate Labrador puppy, enjoys a simple life of food, lying in the sun, chewing sticks, and playing with his mom and siblings. But one by one, the others, his mom included, leave home with new adoptive families. Only Troy and Zeus, the two largest puppies in the litter, are left when Italian American paramedic Marco Ricci from the Oahu Search and Rescue team arrives. He takes them both for testing, evaluating their abilities and courage in situations including wave pools and waterslides. When single father Marco's 13-year-old son, Kimo, returns from his Native Hawaiian mother's house in Indiana, Zeus immediately bonds with the boy: "Every dog has a person. This one was mine." Training dogs for search and rescue is his business, yet Marco feels moved by his son's love for Zeus. Additional complications arise when Bear, a dog Marco kept after he failed a critical search and rescue test and couldn't be sold, struggles with hearing loss and depression. Written from Zeus' first-person perspective, this novel offers fascinating details about the lives of working dogs and explores relatable themes of purpose, love, and finding family that will resonate with middle-grade dog lovers. An absorbing read celebrating canine courage and heart. (reading group guide) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Dog's Way Home (Trade)

Quantity
Unit Price

#2160298 Bella's Story (Hardcover (Trade))
written by W. Bruce Cameron

1 $16.99

Even though Bella has to hide from the neighbors and learn boring games like No Barks and Go Home, she loves her boy, Lucas, who rescued her from an abandoned building. Then one day Bella is picked up by animal control and Lucas is forced to send her to a foster home far away. Bella waits and waits for Lucas to come and get her, but days go by and he does not come. Finally Bella realizes what she needs to do--she needs to Go Home to Lucas--and even four hundred miles of dangerous Colorado wilderness won't get in her way.

978-1-250-21276-4 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 630

Donut Dreams (Trade)

#2195284 Ready, Set, Bake! (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Coco Simon

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Everyone knows Lindsay loves working at the bakery counter in her family's restaurant... So how is she going to deal with a new bakery in town that will compete with Donut Dreams? Not only that, the owner's daughter, Maria, is in her class. She's glamorous, exciting, and just moved to town from Chicago. She's everything Lindsay wants to be--or at least that's what Lindsay thinks.

978-1-5344-8038-4 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 160 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

#2168250 (Vol. 04) Donut for Your Thoughts (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Coco Simon

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Casey thought that coming back from sleepaway camp would mean picking up right where she left off. But when she gets home, it seems like everyone has changed at least a little bit, even her BFF Lindsay.

978-1-5344-7373-7 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 830

#2224263 (Vol. 06) Ready to Roll! (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Coco Simon

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Kelsey loves working in her family's restaurant at the Donut Dreams counter, but she feels like she could be doing something more. When her friends tease her about always having strong opinions, she decides to start a blog, Kelsey's Corner. Kelsey is positive her words will be her ticket to popularity. But she soon discovers a handful of good friends is far better than a baker's dozen of insincere ones.

978-1-5344-8547-1 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 160 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

#2236603 (Vol. 07) Donut Goals (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Coco Simon

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Molly is thrilled to hear that a college scout will be coming to her big soccer game to evaluate the players. But when a player on the opposing team starts making rude comments about Molly's soccer skills and appearance, Molly begins to lose her confidence. Now she can't help but wonder--is the girl just trying to bring her down, or is Molly really not as good a player as she thinks?

978-1-5344-9598-2 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 160 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

#2133243 (Vol. 01) Hole in the Middle (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Coco Simon

Home feels different ever since Lindsay's mom passed away two years ago. And not having her mom around to help her get through the start of middle school doesn't help her "first day of school" angst. But with her cousins Kelsey and Ava by her side, not to mention her BFF Casey, Lindsay soon discovers family and friends go a long way towards filling any hole in your heart. And life can still be as fun as a pink donut with rainbow sprinkles!

978-1-5344-6026-3 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 160 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Two weeks before starting middle school, 12-year-old Lindsay reports for her first job, working at the donut counter in her grandparents' restaurant. Family plays a strong role in Lindsay's life. She and her younger brother have five cousins in the area, and since her mother's death two years ago, her grandparents have helped Dad keep everything running smoothly at home. Because she's grown up in a small, Midwestern town and knows every kid in her grade, middle school doesn't seem like a big step to Lindsay, but as the first day approaches, she's not so sure. She finds herself missing Mom more than ever, just when her relatives are rallying to support her. While the many characters, particularly family members (a list or chart would have been useful), can lead to some confusion, loyal readers will get to know them better as the Donut Dreams series progresses. Apparently, the first-person narrator will shift from book to book, as it has in Simon's 32-volume Cupcake Diaries series and newer Sprinkle Sundays series. A light, enjoyable family story.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews It is the summer before middle school when Lindsay Cooper begins her first job working for the family business, Donut Dreams. Though many of her friends spend summer days at the lake, Lindsay has dreams of going away to college; her steadfast commitment to work motivates her to not lounge the summer away. This summer is different, though, as middle school looms. Since her mother died two years ago, Lindsay's paternal grandparents spend a lot of time helping Lindsay, her dad, and her younger brother, Skylar, adjust to their new reality. Once Lindsay's best friend, Casey, returns from summer camp texting a long-distance "boyfriend," the two BFF's speculate about middle school, both feeling an undercurrent of the possibility that their bond may potentially shift in a new environment. When Lindsay's maternal grandmother, Mimi, comes to visit, the family organizes a party to help Lindsay pick a dress for the upcoming fall dance. Grief finally overtakes Lindsay when she learns that the party has been organized to compensate for her mother's absence during this rite-of-passage time for Lindsay. Narrated by Lindsay, this series opener is a comforting read, set in a small town where everyone knows everyone, the donuts are sweet, and familiarity and closeness ease childhood grief. The cast is default white. The book ends with sample chapters for the upcoming Donut Dreams title. As sweet and straightforward as...well, a donut. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2133257 (Vol. 02) So Jelly! (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Coco Simon

Happy-go-lucky Kelsey hasn't been so happy-go-lucky lately. She's starting to feel pretty jealous of her cousin Lindsay and all the extra time Lindsay is spending with her aunt, who just happens to be Kelsey's mom. The worst part is it seems like Kelsey's mom wants to spend time with Lindsay instead of her!

978-1-5344-6029-4 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 160 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

#2161465 (Vol. 03) Family Recipe (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Coco Simon

Molly has always considered her adopted family her real family. She's never had reason to question where she fits until she has to do a report on her family tree for school. Being mixed up with doubt may not be a recipe for success, but when Molly reaches out to the people she depends on, they are ready to support her, as always. Molly is soon ready to serve up a perfectly sweet look at what family really is because the main ingredient in any real family is love.

978-1-5344-6540-4 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 160 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 650

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

#2258982 (Vol. 08) Donut Delivery! (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Coco Simon

Casey is planning lots of fun things to do over spring break with her BFF Lindsay. But her parents ruin her plans when they tell her she has to join them on a family trip to look at colleges with her older sister, Gabby. Casey is devastated until things take a surprising turn for the better when she runs into her summer crush, Matt!

978-1-6659-0079-9 ©2021 5 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

#2282708 Donut Dreams: Hole in the Middle; So Jelly!; Family Recipe; Ready, Set, Bake! (4-in-1) (Hardcover (POB))
written by Coco Simon

Lindsay Cooper is about to start middle school. In her free time, she works at her family's restaurant, The Park View, handing out the world's most delicious donuts at the Donut Dreams counter. Her grandmother started the counter as a way to earn extra income to send Lindsay's dad to college, and Lindsay wants to use her job the same way-to make her dream of going to school far away from her small town a reality.

978-1-6659-1842-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 640 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.99

Doomsday Archives (Trade)

#2363047 (Vol. 01) Wandering Hour (Hardcover (POB))
written by Zack Loran Clark

While bonding with Hazel and Serena, his new neighbors and fellow horror fans, Emrys documents the town's creepypastas, spooky legends, and cryptid sightings in a Wiki. It's all in the spirit of good fun . . . until one day, the trio stumble upon the Doomsday Archives, a mysterious collection of relics that reveal something is very, very rotten in New Rotterdam.

978-1-63893-030-3 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist The authors of the Adventures Guild series unearth something frightful in their new middle-grade series. Known as one of America's most haunted cities, the seaside town of New Rotterdam is no stranger to unexplained disappearances. Protagonist Emrys Houtman has recently moved to the area, and he counts himself lucky to find camaraderie with Hazel and her curt friend Serena, apartment neighbors who share his passion for horror. Emrys and Hazel bond over “The Doomsday Archives” page of the New Rotterdam Wiki Project, where they log all unnatural events occurring in town. When the kids inspect unusual activity in their upstairs complex, they discover a talking, anthropodermic book that transports them into another realm of supernatural relics. They are given the chance to join the Order of the Azure Eye and prevent disappearances involving an ominous, blood-red hourglass. Only time will tell if this trio possesses the confidence and strength to stop these disturbances before others disappear. Clark and Eliopulos expertly build heart-pounding suspense by intercutting the story’s action with illustrations and wiki entries on past supernatural occurrences, formatted to resemble Wikipedia pages. The book champions accepting each others’ quirks and weirdness, which will resonate with anyone who’s struggled to fit in. A superb choice for fans of Jonathan Stroud’s Lockwood & Co. series, Tom Booth’s Eerie- on-Sea books, and creepypastas.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Three kids gain access to magic in a fight against their town's evil underbelly. New Rotterdam has so many strange occurrences that it has its own wiki to keep track of them. Emrys is new to town and delighted to live in one of America's Most Haunted Cities. He resides in the same apartment building as Hazel, his old camp friend, who shares his interest in all things spooky, and Hazel's friend Serena, who does not. All three, however, are equally fascinated with their reclusive penthouse neighbor, Mr. Van Stavern. One night, they find his apartment trashed and him trapped within the pages of a grimoire. Mr. Van Stavern inducts the trio into the Order of the Azure Eye--a group dedicated to protecting occult relics--and gives them access to the Blue Reliquary, a magical space holding those items. And just in time, because people are disappearing in New Rotterdam, and Emrys, Hazel, and Serena are the only ones who can stop the evil forces at work. The wiki framing is clever, providing readers with background information and mirroring how many tweens would begin their own research. Legitimately scary scenes resolve quickly, with resolutions driven by the kids' strengths and actions. A big reveal at the end promises exciting developments in future installments. Emrys and Hazel are white; Serena, who has dads who are Black and Dominican, is Black. An engaging start to a promising new series. (Horror. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A terrifying local legend tests the mettle of a resolute trio of sixth graders in the first installment of this grisly horror series by Loran Clark (The Lock-Eater) and Eliopulos (the Minecraft Stonesword Saga). Emrys is excited to move to New Rotterdam despite the town's gloomy atmosphere; after all, it's a "hot spot for urban legends," and the home of his best friend Hazel, a fellow creepypasta fanatic and cataloger of New Rotterdam lore on the town's active wiki. Though he feels like a third wheel around Hazel's childhood friend and cryptid skeptic Serena, Emrys champions teamwork when a power outage prompts the middle schoolers to investigate a shadowy neighbor's ruined apartment, from which they're hurled into another dimension embroiled in a conflict between two opposing magical organizations. Guided by a deadpan talking spell book, the friends confront a demonic hourglass named The Wandering Hour that spells gruesome doom for anyone who gazes upon it. This dark plot-driven adventure, sprinkled with insightful New Rotterdam wiki entries, winking humor, and heaps of horror sensibilities, is unsettlingly creepy. Emrys and Hazel are white, and Serena is Black. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. Agent: (for Loran Clark) Ammi-Joan Paquette, Erin Murphy Literary; (for Eliopulos) Josh Adams, Adams Literary. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--The coauthors of "The Adventures Guild" trilogy have written a fantastical horror set in New Rotterdam, a small seaside town teeming with urban legends and mysterious disappearances. Eighth grader Brian Skupp encounters an hourglasslike object on his school bench. As he's studying it, he notices everyone is frozen in time. Keys don't fall. People don't move. The only person who seems to see him is a moving ghostlike woman with fangs. The ominous phrase, "He was never heard from again" segues into one (of many to come) wiki articles about mysterious happenings in the area. The book starts again with three present-day friends, Emrys, Hazel, and Serena, and their story of how they found the Doomsday Archives. The hourglass makes a comeback, as do a variety of life-threatening monsters who like to swallow things, and weird occurrences, such as the Midtown Mummy, an ember bishop, and a wandering hour. This would be a good read-aloud for a middle school class for the month of October, especially if paired with their town's local urban myths. VERDICT A story about kids helping keep their town and neighbors safe will speak to those who love to sink themselves into a different realm and play armchair detective/hero, this is a great choice for middle grade shelves.--Tanya Boudreau Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Dork Diaries (Prebound)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2181594 (Vol. 15) Tales from a Not-So-Posh Paris Adventure (Prebound) written by Rachel Renee Russell Nikki Maxwell deals with the trials and triumphs of middle school in this fifteenth installment of the #1 New York Times bestselling Dork Diaries series! 978-1-5364-6606-5 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 320 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 4.0	1	$17.95

Dragon Rider (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2065540 (Vol. 02) Griffin's Feather (Hardcover (Trade))	1	$17.99

written by Cornelia Funke

It's now been two years since Ben and Firedrake defeated Nettlebrand and rescued the silver dragons. Both boy and dragon have finally found homes, but they must live hundreds of miles apart and can only see each other every once in a while.

978-1-338-21553-3 ©2018 6 x 7-3/4 432 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.3 AR Pts 13.0 RC Lvl 6.3

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Dragon rider Ben Greenbloom feels an emptiness in his heart being away from his silver dragon, Firedrake. But when he and his family discover the last Pegasi in the world who need the precious sun feather of a Griffin to hatch, he must lie to the dragon. Griffins and dragons are mortal enemies. Ben and his father Barnabas along with a motley crew including a troll, a rat, and a homunculus (the last of his kind), attempt to complete this dangerous quest which takes them to a remote island ruled by the cruel "lion birds." Most of the characters are familiar from Funke's Dragon Rider and this book does not disappoint as a sequel with suspenseful adventure, creative characters, and the mixing of the modern world with the fantastical. Even those who have not read the previous work will enjoy delving into this world, as enough background is given for it to be a standalone. Detailed black-and-white drawings curve around and throughout the text, adding visual context for the story. Well-chosen quotes from various famous modern and ancient literary works perch on each chapter heading. A glossary of the myriad human and animal characters allow readers easy reference as needed throughout. VERDICT A not-to-be-missed fantasy by an author who is master of her craft.-Clare A. Dombrowski, Amesbury Public Library, MA Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2280978 (Vol. 03) Aurelia Curse (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Cornelia Funke

A new peril has emerged in the world of Fabulous Creatures. One that could cause the disappearance of their kind. But the threat is real and quickly encroaching. A villain from the family's past is seeking revenge. And all the while, the mysterious Aurelia, the most fabulous and powerful creature of all, moves across oceans to its final destination, introducing a new underwater world to enjoy.

978-1-338-21555-7 ©2022 6 x 7-3/4 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 13.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews This Dragon Rider novel, written in English rather than translated from German like previous entries, pits the Greenblooms and fabulous creatures against an evil acquaintance from Barnabas' schooldays. An ancient myth states if waterfowl form swirling, flowerlike images on four different bodies of water, the mythical Aurelia, bearing healing pods, will appear where the lines connecting these locations intersect. It seems this is now happening, and the Greenblooms are preparing by calling the magical earth, air, fire, and water creatures who will carry the four pods to their appropriate realms. However, if the Aurelia or her pods are met with violence, she will cause all the fabulous creatures on Earth to disappear. While the Greenblooms and their magical friends are preparing to welcome the Aurelia, evil Cadoc Eelstrom is preparing to steal one of the pods to make himself immortal. The execution of this basic good-versus-evil plot is incohesive and disjointed. While the narrative voice changes with each chapter, the progression of the plot, alas, does not. Readers, reminded for the umpteenth time that the Aurelia will make all fabulous creatures disappear if she is angered, may begin to feel frustrated. Plunked on top of the thin plot are snippets describing the properties of the many magical creatures the author introduces, but these many, undeniably imaginative embellishments cannot resurrect a story that doesn't have depth and characters that lack nuance. Black-and-white illustrations add a whimsical touch. Most human characters read as White. Best for existing series fans. (cast of characters) (Fantasy. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Dragon Warrior (Trade)

#2180059 (Vol. 02) Fallen Hero (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Katie Zhao

Faryn Liu thought she was the Heaven Breaker, destined to command dragons and defeat demons. But a conniving goddess was manipulating her all along... and her beloved younger brother, Alex, has betrayed her and taken over as Heaven Breaker instead.

978-1-5476-0197-4 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 The second installment in the Dragon Warrior series once again takes readers on a delightful adventure that melds classic Chinese mythology with original, contemporary folklore. We follow Falun Faryn Liu, formerly known as the legendary, gods-appointed Heaven Breaker, as she tries to keep her loved ones—and the rest of humanity—safe from bloodthirsty demons, vengeful spirits, disapproving gods, and her traitorous brother, Alex. Zhao's returning cast is bolstered by several intriguing new characters, and she seamlessly integrates the backstory of book one, providing accessible flashbacks for those readers jumping into the series here. As Faryn and her friends embark on their second high-risk, high-stakes quest, they navigate the wrath and tricks of the gods to avoid death and destruction, while the former Heaven Breaker must find a way to unite her family before it's too late. The multilayered, high-energy, interwoven plots will keep fans guessing with the many twists, and the author's signature tongue-in-cheek, authentic teenage voice makes learning about Chinese mythology, language, and tradition highly enjoyable. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—This sequel picks up immediately after the events concluding last year's The Dragon Warrior. Faryn and the rebel deities land in Manhattan's Chinatown seeking refuge with a group called the New Order. She spots her long-lost father in the crowd, but is devastated when he doesn't recognize her. This bittersweet reunion, combined with the recent betrayal of her brother Alex, leaves Faryn feeling truly alone. But she doesn't have time to dwell on her despair as destiny calls again, sending her on another quest to continue the mission of saving humanity from the Jade Emperor's army. Secondary plots reinforce the central themes of familial connections and overcoming other's perceptions. Faryn's newest companions are siblings Ashley and Jordan, who also share her outsider status and deep desire to belong. As more challenges are thrown their way, all three questers confront their fears and Faryn discovers inner strength from ancestral bonds. Like book one, there is plenty of tongue-in-cheek cultural humor and many Chinese terms and names are interwoven throughout the text. A helpful glossary of the Chinese deities, demons, and terms that appear in the text is included in the back matter. VERDICT Fast-paced and funny, this action-packed fantasy sequel dives deeper into Chinese mythology while exploring the universal need for friendship and acceptance.—Sophie Kenney, Aurora P.L., IL

#2121628 (Vol. 01) Dragon Warrior (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Katie Zhao

As a member of the Jade Society, twelve-year-old Faryn Liu dreams of becoming a warrior. But the Society shuns Faryn and her brother due to their half-Chinese heritage, forcing them to train in secret. Then, during an errand into San Francisco's Chinatown, Faryn runs into a demon—and helps defeat it. In truth, she's the fabled Heaven Breaker, meant to work with the gods, command dragons, and wage war against demons...

978-1-5476-0200-1 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Starred Review Zhao's impressive and captivating debut adventure novel brings mythology and magic to life as 12-year-old Faryn Liu and her younger brother, Alex, discover an entirely new side to the Jade Society, an elite organization of warriors and demon hunters, in whose shadow they've resided since their father's mysterious disappearance and their mother's passing. But the Jade Society has become complacent and smug after decades of silence from the realms of gods and monsters, keeping their home, San Francisco's Chinatown, demon-free since '83. Nevertheless, Ye Ye, the children's grandfather turned guardian, keeps them on their toes with his stories and training sessions, and Faryn and Alex throw themselves into these outlets, hoping to tune out the mocking voices of the Jade Society bullies who label their father a traitor and discriminate against them for their mixed heritage. When a competition arises for the role of the prophesied Heaven Breaker, Zhao's spot-on writing will have readers empathizing and rooting for Faryn in no time, and her seamless blending of memorable and quirky gods and demons from myriad mythologies—Greek, Phoenician, and Chinese, to name a few—will be both familiar to young readers and also culturally educational. This plot-propelled, action-packed story about family legacy and heritage, as well as self-discovery, is an ideal choice for fans of Rick Riordan's Percy Jackson series and Roshani Chokshi's Aru Shah and the End of Time (2018). (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Ever since their father disappeared four years ago on a demon hunt, twelve-year-old Faryn and her younger brother Alex have been outcasts from San Francisco's Jade Society, which believes that the demons they pledge to hunt have been long eradicated. When Faryn slays a real nian (dragon-like demon) on the Lunar New Year with the help of one of the Chinese gods, it proves that demons still run amok—and Faryn, the Heaven Breaker and the only one who can wield the legendary Fenghuang spear, must bear the responsibility of fulfilling a prophecy for the Jade Emperor. Faryn teams up with her brother and her former best friend to travel to the gods' home on Peng Lai Island, before the Lunar New Year ends, to become guardians of the Jade Emperor. Fans of Rick Riordan will recognize a very similar structure to The Lightning Thief (BCCB 10/05) as the characters jump from Chinatown to Chinatown, face quirky twists like a perfect girlfriend-turned-dragon, traps like the hotel of the love goddess Chuangmu, betrayals by friends, and witty quips (in response to picking up the Fenghuang: "I just . . . King Arthur'd"). As in Riordan's work, the humor is interspersed with cultural commentary, from the Jade Society members' discrimination against Faryn's darker skin to expectations for a perfect wife. Those looking for a story in line with the surge of modern mythological quests will find this take on Chinese mythology a worthy addition. The final copy will include a glossary. NB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Chinese folklore and fantasy intersect in this adventure. Faryn and her younger brother, Alex, were lovingly raised by Ye Ye, who's now seriously ill. Viewed as outcasts by their Jade Society community, the family lives outside of San Francisco's Chinatown but still are dedicated to worshipping the gods and train to fight demons. During a risky trip into Chinatown to get Ye Ye's medicine, Faryn subdues a nián monster with the help of a stranger. The stranger later appears at their society's annual banquet, revealing himself to be Erlang Shen, the god of war. He shares the Jade Emperor's decree that whoever can complete a quest and arrive at the banquet atop the heavenly mountain on Peng Lai Island will be deemed the Heaven Breaker, the ultimate warrior, inspiring several hopefuls to race for the title. Spurred by Erlang Shen's hints and sudden attacks by demons, Faryn reluctantly wields Heaven Breaker's weapon, Fenghuang, and takes off, accompanied by Alex. The two hope they can also find their missing father, lost during his quest to find Peng Lai. Attempts to call in favors earned by their father prove largely futile, however. Zhao seamlessly incorporates Chinese terms and themes into the fast-paced plot. Unfortunately, the book's humor relies heavily on Asian stereotypes. Still, the story takes intriguing twists with its cultural background, and they keep the pages turning. Faryn and Alex are multiracial: Chinese on Ba's side and a mix of Mediterranean heritage on their mother's. An ambitious debut with imperfect execution--here's hoping the sequel is smoother. (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this action-packed debut steeped in Chinese mythology, a modern-day warrior is unexpectedly chosen as the Heaven Breaker, destined to lead the Jade Emperor's armies against demons threatening Earth. Ever since the disappearance of their father, a legendary hero, Faryn Liu and her younger brother, Alex, have been ostracized by the rest of the secret Jade Society. But when the gods choose Faryn to embark on a quest to prove her worth, she and Alex finally have a chance to restore their family's reputation. With demons at every turn, capricious gods pursuing their own agendas, and a tight deadline, Faryn will have to make hard decisions and painful sacrifices. Zhao reimagines classic Chinese deities and monsters in an accessible, entertaining manner while filtering the adventure through Faryn's snarky, relatable voice. With engaging characters, a fast-paced plot, and a skillful blend of modern culture and ancient traditions, this series opener will appeal to fans of Percy Jackson and Aru Shah. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Penny Moore, Aevitas Creative Management. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Demons have been dormant in San Francisco for decades, but despite a warning from her sick grandfather, Faryn ventures into the city for his medicine on Lunar New Year. Faryn is stunned when she comes face to face with a powerful nin. Using her warrior training, she defeats the demon with the help of an anonymous stranger, who reveals himself to be the God of War and issues a challenge that will determine the fabled "Heaven Breaker," a champion of the Gods. When Faryn is able to carry the legendary spear meant only for the Heaven Breaker, the community who ostracized her family sends candidates of its own. Together with her brother and best frenemy, Faryn undertakes an epic quest that she hopes will not only redeem, but reunite, her family. This disparate group bands together to solve riddles, fend off foes, and uncover a devious plot to end the world. By embracing her role as Heaven Breaker, Faryn finally meets her destiny—but it comes at a cost. The integration of Chinese terms and cultural influences richly elevates the story with authentic details. VERDICT Inspired by classic Chinese mythology, this #OwnVoices fantasy adventure delivers on action, humor, and heart. Share with fans of Rick Riordan and Roshani Chokshi.—Sophie Kenney, Delray Beach Public Library, FL

Dragons in a Bag (Trade)

#2080869 (Vol. 01) Dragons in a Bag (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Zetta Elliott

When Jaxon is sent to spend the day with a mean old lady his mother calls Ma, he finds out she's not his grandmother--but she is a witch! She needs his help delivering baby dragons to a magical world where they'll be safe.

978-1-5247-7045-7 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 160 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 4.0 RC Lvl 4.5 GR Lvl T Lexile 740

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews "What a breath of fresh air: a chapter-book fantasy with an urban setting, an array of brown-skinned magic wielders, and a lovable black protagonist readers will root for and sympathize with... Good, solid fantasy fun."

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When nine-year-old Jaxon's mom leaves him to stay with "Ma," the woman who raised her (presumably, his grandmother), he is startled by a mysterious, moving package on her table. Soon, Jax learns that Ma is a witch to whom his mother was once apprenticed, and that the package contains three baby dragons that must be delivered to a parallel realm, since Brooklyn lacks sufficient magic to sustain the beasts. Jax joins her, deciding he'd like to be her apprentice, but the transporter, an old guardhouse in Prospect Park, mistakenly deposits them in the Mesozoic era instead. When a dinosaur threatens them, Ma pushes Jax and her dragon-filled purse into the transformer, and Jax arrives back in Brooklyn with two essential missions: save Ma, and safeguard the dragons. Filled with entertaining characters, including the grandfather Jax has never met and a man who may just be invisible, the story entertains from start to finish. Readers will mirror Jax's surprise at and joy in discovering the world Elliott (Bird) brings to life. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8-12. Author's agent: Jennifer Laughran, Andrea Brown Literary. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal "Elliott skillfully introduces themes about creating positive change, examines issues of othering and the fear of differences, and touches upon the complexities of family, gentrification, and segregation. A promising start to a new series."

#2107665 (Vol. 02) Dragon Thief (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Zetta Elliott

Jaxon had just one job--to return three baby dragons to the realm of magic. But when he got there, only two dragons were left in the bag. His best friend's sister, Kavita, is a dragon thief! The gates to the other realm have shut tight! Jaxon needs all the help he can get to find Kavita, outsmart a trickster named Blue, and return the baby dragon to its true home.

978-1-5247-7049-5 ©2019 6 x 8-3/4 176 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 700

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine According to Aunty, "every problem has a solution." But what if your problem is a dragon that won't stop growing? This sequel to Dragons in a Bag (rev. 9/18) alternates between Jaxon, the previous book's protagonist, and Kavita, sister of Jaxon's best friend Vikram. After she steals a dragon from Jaxon ("I just wanted one for myself-and Jaxon had three!"), Kavita has that very problem. She soon learns that there is a gate that will get the dragon back home to the realm of magic-but the gate is open for only a short period of time. In another part of the city, Jaxon and Vikram are looking for Kavita so they can get the dragon back. Will they do it in time? If not, what will happen to the balance of this world and the realm of magic? This quick-paced, suspenseful, and entertaining sequel leaves readers ready for Kavita, Jaxon, and Vikram's next adventure. Final art not seen. Nicholl Denice Montgomery November/December 2019 p.85(c) Copyright 2019. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2364919 (Vol. 05) War of the Witches (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Zetta Elliott

Jaxon could never have imagined the adventure that would start with an old witch called Ma and three baby dragons shipped to Brooklyn. Ever since he returned the dragons to the magical realm of Palmara, Jax has searched for a way for humans and magical creatures to live in harmony. But despite his efforts, an ancient monster has been released. The Scourge has defeated the powerful Guardian of Palmara and set its sights on the human realm.

978-0-593-64862-9 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 760

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

#2265920 (Vol. 03) Witch's Apprentice (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Zetta Elliott

Ever since the baby dragons were returned to the magical realm, things have been off. The New York summer has been unusually cold. A strange sleeping sickness is spreading across the city. And Jaxon's friends Kenny and Kavita have begun to change, becoming more like the fairy and dragon they once cared for.

978-0-593-42770-5 ©2022 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 790

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Jaxon and company return in this follow-up to The Dragon Thief (2019). Jax is frustrated with Ma, the witch he's apprenticed to. Instead of teaching him about magic, she's teaching him about plants. Then, mysterious ash starts falling from the sky and the adults of New York City start falling asleep all over the place, just as Ma, Jax, and Ma's coven leave Brooklyn for the annual convention in Chicago. Jax's first-person narration chronicles his frustrations with Ma, which go beyond her unwillingness to teach him magic to a deeper theme: adults who don't communicate thoroughly with children and don't allow children agency. When a face from the past shows up and challenges his assumptions, Jax begins questioning much of what he's been told--and believes. In the end, Jax must decide whether using his voice or following orders is more important, but the consequences may be steeper than he bargained for. While the themes are compelling, the plot unfortunately relies on the device of miscommunication to propel it. Apart from this, fans will be happy to return to Jax's story (and encounter a new magical creature). The cliffhanger ending points to a future series entry. Most characters are Black; some names cue South Asian heritage. A solid third installment. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2309088 (Vol. 04) Enchanted Bridge (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Zetta Elliott

With their new special abilities, Jaxon and his friends are not the ordinary kids they used to be. No longer destined to become a witch, Jax finds himself caught up in a secret plan involving the Guardian of Palmara's mysterious twin brother, Ol-Korrok. As the ambassador to the realm of magic, Jax must convince Sis that magical creatures should be free to return to the human world. But to reach Palmara, Jax and his friends must cross Ol-Korrok's enchanted bridge connecting the two realms. Is Ol-Korrok really the ally he pretends to be? Or has Jax set in motion a plan that will endanger both realms?

978-0-593-42774-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 800

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Dragonwatch: A Fablehaven Adventure (Trade)

#2008816 (Vol. 01) Dragonwatch (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brandon Mull

Because Dragonwatch, an ancient group of wizards, enchantresses, and dragon slayers, is crumbling, an uprising of dragons threatens to destroy the magical preserves as well as overrun the nonmagical world.

978-1-62972-256-6 ©2017 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 12.0 RC Lvl 3.5 Lexile 620

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-The dragons who were confined to sanctuaries in the celebrated "Fablehaven" series are now restless, and the safe havens feel more like prisons. Celebrant, the King of the Dragons, has pledged to free them and bring back the Age of Dragons. His attacks have caused Wyrmoost's defenses to weaken, as have all other hidden sanctuaries that protect the world from danger. The last remaining members of Dragonwatch call upon 13-year-old Seth and 15-year-old Kendra to guard the sanctuary of Wyrmoost, as it is believed that human caretakers can help strengthen the sanctuary's defenses. The teens face great opposition from their former allies, the dragons, and also from their subjects in Wyrmoost, who are skeptical that two youngsters can succeed where all others have failed, even though they are known to be dragon slayers. Calm, logical Kendra and reckless, wisecracking Seth must work and stay together to find a way to hold the dragons in check. Seth and Kendra have many exciting and dangerous confrontations with fantastic beasts, but they are resourceful and brave, and there is never a doubt that the heroes will triumph. The action moves slowly, especially in the beginning of the book, as much of the backstory is explained and characters reintroduced through dialogue. VERDICT Sure to please loyal "Fablehaven" readers and may be appreciated by fantasy and adventure lovers who have advanced beyond the "Magic Tree House" series.-MaryAnn Karre, Binghamton, NY Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2082866 (Vol. 02) Wrath of the Dragon King (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brandon Mull

After a humiliating defeat at the hands of Kendra and Seth, Celebrant, King of Dragons, prepares to unleash his fury and take control of his native preserve. Armed with information from a new ally--Ronodin, the dark unicorn--Celebrant seeks a legendary talisman--the dominion stone.

978-1-62972-486-7 ©2018 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 416 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 13.0 Lexile HL 630

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

#2107359 (Vol. 03) Master of the Phantom Isle (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brandon Mull

Cursed by the Key of Forgetting, Seth's memories of his past--his relationships, experiences, and who he really is--are gone. For now he will align with his new mentor, Ronodin, the Dark Unicorn, who brings him to the Phantom Isle, the secret gateway to the Underworld. Though not formally a prisoner, Seth is heavily influenced by Ronodin, who wants to use him and his special Shadow Charmer powers for his own dark ends.

978-1-62972-604-5 ©2019 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 384 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 16.0 Lexile 670

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

#2212467 (Vol. 04) Champion of the Titan Games (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brandon Mull

As the war with the dragons intensifies, all eyes are turning to Titan Valley for help. A dragon sanctuary unlike any of the others, this one is home to enslaved dragons ruled by the powerful Giant Queen, one of the five monarchs of the magical world. In addition, it houses the arena for the Titan Games, a series of gladiator-style battles presided over by none other than Humbuggle, the demon who stole Seth's memories!

978-1-62972-788-2 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8 544 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 17.0 Lexile 720

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.99

#2265470 (Vol. 05) Return of the Dragon Slayers (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brandon Mull

Seth must face his most dangerous quest--the fulfillment of his pledge to the Singing Sisters. With only Calvin the Tiny Hero at his side, Seth needs to collect the pieces of the Ethernem, including the stones from the crowns of the Dragon King, the Giant Queen, and the Demon King.

978-1-62972-930-5 ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 624 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 19.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$21.99

Dress Coded (Trade)

#2314891 First Rule of Climate Club (Large Print) (Large Print Library Binding (Trade))

written by Carrie Firestone

(Companion) Mary Kate and her friends have big plans to bring lasting change to their community and beyond. And now is the time for the young people to lead and the leaders to follow--or get out of the way.

979-8-88578-271-5 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 489 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 790

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$24.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Mary Kate Murphy is 1 of 10 incoming eighth-graders at Fisher Middle School chosen to participate in a climate-change pilot project. Warned that this will be a "non--traditional" commitment, the group begins investigating ways within their community to help save the planet. Initially, the students struggle to find their niches but eventually realize they can be more effective when they work cooperatively. Unfortunately, the group encounters an obstacle in the form of the town's mayor, who is resistant to its ideas. Meanwhile, Mary Kate's BFF is suffering from an undiagnosed illness. Applying her abundant pluck and drive, Mary Kate spearheads efforts to help her friend regain her health. Firestone has created a lively and inspiring companion to her successful Dress Coded (2020). Using podcasts, letters, and a variety of other devices, she covers a broad range of ills with realistic energy. This novel addresses more than climate change, also touching on equity and inclusion as well as traditional and natural healing methods. Readers will cheer as the students' actions bring about positive change. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Eager to address climate change, Connecticut eighth graders also confront economic inequality, racism, and politics. Bearsville Climate Club is an innovative pilot program: Its students will study climate science and develop community-based initiatives to address environmental concerns. Observant young naturalist Mary Kate Murphy applied along with her bat-loving BFF, Lucy Perlman (both are White), but Lucy is now kept home by a mysterious illness. Initially lost by herself, Mary Kate warms to Mr. Lu, the club's charismatic Chinese American teacher, who pairs her with composting enthusiast Shawn Hill, a Black student who commutes from Hartford to their better-resourced suburban school. As the students explore their priorities—for example, growing hemp, eliminating leaf blowers, addressing disposable fashion, ending meat consumption—they also learn about and discuss racism's toxic legacy in their towns and families. Mary Kate is chagrined to learn that wealthier, predominantly White communities, including hers, outsource their trash to the incinerator polluting Shawn's neighborhood. When the longtime mayor makes Shawn's out-of-district address an excuse to invalidate the club's application for a community grant, the students take action, which proves an energizing antidote to feeling helpless about the future. Fast-paced and often funny, this stand-alone companion to Dress Coded (2020) has a similar mosaic structure. Podcast transcripts, checklists, school assignments, and short vignettes showcase Firestone's gift for illustrating how apparently unrelated issues intersect—or collide—while realistically portraying the voices of middle schoolers. A passionate novel uplifting young activists. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Mary Kate Murphy and her classmates in the eighth grade climate science pilot program at Fisher Middle School, with the guidance of their teacher Mr. Lu, set out to create a composting program. When their attempt to apply for a town grant to pay for the program goes awry because of the mayor's racism, Mary Kate and her classmates, family, and friends must find another way to raise funds. Meanwhile, Mary Kate's best friend Lucy is really sick, and Mary Kate works hard to find out what's wrong while juggling activism, her efforts to get teacher Ms. Lane elected mayor, and her frustrations with the current mayor's lies and prejudices. But with the help of school faculty, the ingenuity of her classmates, and her sister's advice, Mary Kate just might find a way to accomplish her goals. Told through short chapters, podcast scripts, flyers, letters, and lists, this book shares with readers the power of determination and unity. VERDICT A great choice for middle grade readers interested in climate change, social justice, and student activism.—Heidi Grange

#2275209 Dress Coded (Large Print) (Large Print Library Binding (Trade))

written by Carrie Firestone

Molly Frost is FED UP because Olivia was yelled at for wearing a tank top. Because Liza got dress coded and Molly didn't, even though they were wearing the exact same outfit. Because middle school is hard enough. And so Molly starts a podcast where girls can tell their stories, and before long, her small rebellion swells into a revolution. Because now the girls are standing up for what's right, and they're not backing down. 978-1-4328-8596-0 ©2021 400 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 760

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$24.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Molly is an eighth grader at Fisher Middle School, where the patriarchal administration is hell-bent on enforcing a dress code that values compliance over comfort and dignity. Female students are regularly pulled over, harassed, and shamed by the callous Dr. Couchman and his henchwoman Fingertip?so named for her favorite rule: hemlines of shorts, skirts, and dresses will reach below the student's extended fingertips while standing. After witnessing a friend's humiliation at Couchman's hands, Molly decides enough is enough. She begins publishing everyone's horror stories through Dress Coded: A Podcast, and as the school year progresses, her peaceful protest grows into a movement. Finally, she and her classmates take their case to the board of education. Molly's first-person narration, delivered in brief sections? occasionally formatted as bullet points, letters, or transcripts?lends a powerful intimacy to the text. That's good, because this story feels personal, for both Molly and author Firestone. They?and countless others?are fed up, and that energy fuels the beautifully paced pages of this book, full of humor, rage, and heart. An uncommonly sprawling cast of students gives authenticity to Molly's middle-school experience, bolstered by subplots of friendship, crushes, and vaping, and a triumphant ending shows how systemic change can be made when girls stand together. Absolutely necessary for tweens and teens, especially non-males too busy to bother with toxic, patriarchal nonsense. Straight fire.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A spirited eighth grader and her friends leverage the power of social networking to fight their school's oppressive dress code. Students are furious when the class campout is canceled because fellow student Olivia contravened the dress code. That changes after Molly persuades Olivia to tell the embarrassing story on her new podcast. Going public at first worsens her mortification; both girls are targeted by bullies. Then, as Molly's podcast followers mount, others post photos of dress-code shaming on Instagram, revealing the harm caused by policing girls' appearances while ignoring social, cultural, and economic realities that govern their lives and clothing choices. Talia's hair (she's Trinidadian) triggers the dress code. While Molly's pre-pubertal figure is ridiculed by an obnoxious classmate (Megan, with cerebral palsy, knows how that feels), her violations of the dress code are ignored, but girls with curvier bodies are repeatedly sanctioned. When district administrators ignore their petition to end dress coding, students strategize next steps. Molly, a refreshingly average student gifted with empathy, has a brother who deals vaping paraphernalia, stressing her white middle-class family financially and emotionally. Diverse secondary characters include several with disabilities. Beyond code inequities, everyday issues like family stress and active-shooter lockdowns complicate the lives of these appealing characters. Vividly conveyed, their almost-palpable adolescent angst is at once uniquely contemporary and timeless. Readers will root for them as they discover that taking action makes an effective antidote. Timely, engaging, and full of heart. (Fiction. 10-15) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When Olivia Bonaventura, a girl in Molly Frost's eighth grade class, is dress coded for wearing a tank top with spaghetti straps, it results in the class camping trip being canceled. Everyone blames Olivia, but she'd only removed her sweatshirt to cover a period blood stain on her white jeans. It's the latest example of the school's unfair rules, which target young women ("the girls with boobs and butts, the prettiest girls, and the girls with long legs") and fail to account for socioeconomic and other circumstances that can make the code challenging to adhere to. Molly begins Dress Coded: a Podcast, where students share their experiences and together try to challenge the rules. As the students protest, Molly learns the power of her voice and finds the strength to handle hardships at home, namely her brother's vaping addiction and dealing of vape pods to middle schoolers. With timely, important anecdotes that ring painfully true, Firestone (The Unlikelies) cuts to the heart of the damage that dress coding can inflict. Chapters alternate between podcasts and letters that Molly writes in this deeply satisfying, variously inclusive journey with a wonderfully flawed main character. Ages 10: up. Agent: Sara Crowe, Pippin Properties. (July)

Reviews by: School Library Journal

Gr 6-8--When eighth grader Molly Fisher becomes fed up with her school's unfair enforcement of the dress code policy, she starts a podcast in protest. Through interviews she conducts with her classmates, Molly educates her listeners (and readers) on how the dress code is enforced almost exclusively through young women, and disproportionately affects those who have developed sooner or more than their classmates. Outside of school, her family is in crisis after they discover that Molly's brother has been selling tobacco vape pods to younger kids on the bus. The issues are timely without seeming trendy, and Firestone's crackling writing makes every day in Molly's life interesting to read about--even one of the most boring events on Earth, a school board meeting. By painting such a full picture of Molly's life, Firestone shows how difficult it can be to simply exist in the world of middle school. VERDICT Hand this first purchase to blossoming activists of every cause; this is a deeply, often scathingly honest work of modern fiction. -
-Chance Lee Joyner, Haverhill Public Library, MA

Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Edge of Extinction (Trade)

#2004718 (Vol. 01) Ark Plan (Paperback (Trade))

written by Laura Martin

One hundred and fifty years ago: The first dinosaurs were cloned. Soon after, they replaced humans at the top of the food chain. The only way to survive was to move into underground compounds. Five years ago: Sky Mundy's father disappeared without a trace. Today: Sky has just stumbled upon a clue that points to the surface. To find her father--and possibly even save the world--Sky and her best friend, Shawn, are venturing topside to a land reclaimed by nature and ruled by dinosaurs.

978-0-06-241623-0 ©2017 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 11.0 RC Lvl 5.2 Lexile 790

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$6.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Sky Mundy has heard all her life how the Noah saved the citizens of the United States from extinction during the Dinosauria Pandemic, getting them into the old nuclear bomb shelters that were safe from ferocious dinosaurs and the fatal virus they carry. But Sky sees the dark side of the Noah's Marine enforcers. She is singled out because she is an orphan and thus a burden (though she refuses to acknowledge that her father, missing for five years, is dead), and her life is a litany of work details and isolation in the Guardian Wing of the North Compound. Sky desperately hopes for word from her absent father, and finally, on her 12th birthday, her best friend Shawn finds a clue hidden in the compass Sky's father gave her just before he disappeared. With that information, Sky decides it's time to go "topside" to look for her missing dad. Shawn helps her make a daring escape from the compound, and the two discover that the world outside is not as they were led to believe. There are certainly dinosaurs, and most of them are out to make Sky and Shawn dinner. But there are also people living topside, not to mention fresh food and fresh air. In this clever take on Michael Crichton's Jurassic Park, the tale is reimaged on a worldwide scale. The characters are developed, and the postapocalyptic world is well imagined and replete with detail. The plot moves forward briskly, with a few good twists, and the ending sets up neatly for a sequel. Nonstop action, marauding dinosaurs, and kids on the run: What's not to like? VERDICT This is a great buy for the sci-fi adventure-loving crowd.-Gretchen Crowley, Alexandria City Public Libraries, VA Copyright 2016. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2004721 (Vol. 02) Code Name Flood (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Laura Martin

Last week, twelve-year-old Sky found a cryptic message from her dad, who mysteriously fled the safety of their underground compound five years ago. The note said the fate of the world depended on her going topside, to a lost world that's ruled by dinosaurs. Today, after a treacherous journey through the wilderness, Sky and her friends have made it to their destination: Lake Michigan. There they discover a hidden underwater lab, and with the help of its scientists, Sky will finally learn the truth about her father's secret mission.

978-0-06-241625-4 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.9 AR Pts 11.0 RC Lvl 5.6 Lexile 870

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Martin continues to delight both dinosaur lovers and techno geeks with her effectively conceived and well-written tales about a world where a dinosaur-sourced pandemic has ushered in a new era. In this fun and fast-moving sequel to The Ark Plan, the adventure starts with a bang, or rather with a frantic race from enraged dinosaurs, and never stops. Sky and her two companions, Shawn and Todd, are still searching for clues to the mystery of Sky's missing biologist father and his connection to "the Noah," a self-styled savior of the United States who cropped up after the pandemic wiped out much of the country's population. All they have to go on is the map that Sky's father left in his compass and a port plug that they don't have the technology to read. The map leads them to a secret compound. From the deep, plesiosaur-infested waters of Lake Michigan to the remains of the New York City subways, Sky and her companions elude pursuers, both dinosaur and human, in their quest to stop the Noah. Martin doesn't pull her punches, the dinosaurs pack a vicious bite, and the guns shoot real bullets. VERDICT An exciting thriller that will more than satisfy fans of the first title.-Gretchen Crowley, formerly at Alexandria City Public Libraries, VA Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Eighth Day (Trade)

#1755424 (Vol. 01) Eighth Day (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Dianne K. Salerni

"Orphan Jax Aubrey doesn't expect much on his thirteenth birthday, but when he discovers there's an extra day squeezed between Wednesday and Thursday whose origins are rooted in Arthurian legend, it's clear his life will never be the same"--

978-0-06-227215-7 ©2014 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 10.0 RC Lvl 4.5 Lexile 730

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-7-Jax Aubrey wakes up one day to discover he is a Transitioner; a person gifted with an extra 24-hour day between Wednesday and Thursday. His guardian, Riley, is also a Transitioner, and begins to slowly introduce Jax to a secret world of magic and adventure. Jax soon realizes it's not all fun and games. Not all Transitioners are who and what they appear to be, and Riley is tasked with guarding the girl next door, a prisoner who only exists in this magical Eighth Day. The girl, Evangeline, is the key to rival Transitioners' plans to use the extra day to destroy the normal world. Only Riley, Jax, and their allies can hope to stop them. The Eighth Day is an interesting concept, and Salerni makes it work by having Jax learn, along with the reader, to navigate this extra day that is both fascinating and extremely dangerous. The concept melds Arthurian legend into present day in much the same way that Rick Riordan uses Greek and Egyptian mythology, with characters being descendents of heroes long thought to be folklore and their place in this world sometimes dependent on that lineage. There are a few points where the action stalls slightly, but in general the writing is fast paced and exciting. The story lends itself to further adventures and readers will be excited to follow Jax and eager to see what happens next.-Erik Knapp, Davis Library, Plano, TX (c) Copyright 2014. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#1895669 (Vol. 02) Inquisitor's Mark (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

written by Dianne K. Salerni

After the all-out Eighth Day war in Mexico, Jax, Riley, and Evangeline have gone into hiding. There are still rogue Transitioners and evil Kin lords who want to use Riley, a descendant of King Arthur, and Evangeline, a powerful wizard with bloodlines to Merlin, to get control over the Eighth Day.

978-0-06-227218-8 ©2015 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 720

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7-This volume picks up right after the events of book one. Just weeks after saving the seven-day world from destruction at the hands of the evil King Wylit, Jax Aubrey discovers he might not be the orphan he thinks he is. When his best friend is kidnapped, Jax learns that he may have a mysterious long-lost Uncle and possibly the family he craves. Unfortunately, Uncle Finn happens to be the Inquisitor for the ruthless, criminally minded Dulacs, the family that had Jax's guardian Riley's entire family assassinated. During a search for Jax's liege-lady, Evangeline's sister Riley is trapped in the eighth day and Jax uses the time to rush to New York to save his friend and find out more about his family. Sure enough, Jax is related-his Uncle and Jax's deceased father look eerily alike, and Jax even has a near-identical cousin, Dorian. But is Dorian a friend or just another pawn in the seeming endless political intrigue of the Dulacs? Jax will need to find out soon or he could lose Riley, Evangeline, and much more. Salerni does a good job of portraying Jax's desperate need to fit in and find a family. Readers learn more about the Eighth Day, the Transitioners, the magical Kin, and their connection to Arthurian legend. The narrative is split between Jax and Dorian and there could have been a little more distinction between the two voices at times. The concept and the characters, however, are strong enough to carry the weight of a few minor flaws and The Inquisitor's Mark should continue to entertain its audience who will now eagerly await book three.-Erik Knapp, Davis Library, Plano, TX (c) Copyright 2014. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Elementals (Trade)

#2162528 (Vol. 03) Battle Born (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Amie Kaufman

Though Anders and his friends have delayed an all-out war between the Ice Wolves and Scorch Dragons, their mission isn't over. To rebuild Vallen, Anders, Rayna, and all their allies must find a way to unite humans, ice wolves, and scorch dragons, before they miss their last chance.

978-0-06-245804-9 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 326 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.9 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Elizabeth Webster (Trade)

#2181456 (Vol. 02) Elizabeth Webster and the Portal of Doom (Hardcover (Trade))

written by William Lashner

After her grand success in the courtroom against the demon Redwing, Elizabeth thought life would get much easier. But balancing homework with defending the undead is tricky. And lately, it's been tough convincing her father that she's ready to do more than sweep the floors of the family firm.

978-1-368-06289-3 ©2020 336 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

#2254416 (Vol. 03) Elizabeth Webster and the Chamber of Stolen Ghosts (Hardcover (Trade))

written by William Lashner

Reeling from recent struggles in the courtroom, Elizabeth Webster is surprised when two sisters ask her to find the spirits of their parents who have been stolen by a ghost thief. But this simple matter becomes the most terrifying case of Elizabeth's career.

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Soon, she finds herself battling the ghost thief himself, two cement Martha-Washington-faced dogs, and an army raised by the demon Redwing in the Chamber of Stolen Ghosts.

978-0-7595-5772-7 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Elizabeth Webster's legal troubles come to a head. The Philadelphia middle schooler hasn't been in the greatest shape of her legal career following the events of Elizabeth Webster and the Portal of Doom (2020). But she is nevertheless approached by Janelle and Sydney, two sisters who ask her for help: The ghosts of their late parents and grandfather used to comfort them and keep them company, but ever since they were stolen, the girls have been bereft. A ghost thief is on the loose, and it's up to Elizabeth to track the missing spirits down with the help of a most surprising helper: her mother. The ensuing adventure draws out the nefarious demon Redwing, leading to a showdown in the Court of Uncommon Pleas that holds the future of Elizabeth's world at stake and wraps up the trilogy. At this point, Elizabeth's fans know what they're getting--a delicate mix of legal sparring and paranormal trappings propping up a well-charted mystery. This final entry holds its own against its predecessors: Elizabeth remains an engaging protagonist, and her spooky environs are well fleshed out. There's an emotional undercurrent here that enriches this title, and fans will be pleased with how Elizabeth turns out in this series that remains charmingly original in the field of middle-grade paranormal mysteries. Elizabeth is White; Janelle and Sydney have light brown skin, and there is some diversity in the supporting cast. A rousing send-off for a wonderful young sleuth. (Mystery. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal ebster and her paranormal crew of friends and acquaintances. In this third installment of the series, Elizabeth and her cadre of mystery-solving associates set out on an adventure filled with intrigue, frights, and delightfully witty banter. Someone has been stealing the local ghosts, and it's up to Elizabeth and friends to discover who is responsible and how they can reunite the ghosts with their loved ones. As they uncover clues and make discoveries, many of which stem from the story of how Elizabeth's parents met, readers will be reintroduced to a persistent villain from the past, as well as a new cast of nefarious figures. Elizabeth is white and surrounded by a cast of diverse characters. VERDICT This is a must-purchase for any library that already has the series; it is a wonderful third installment. While this could be read as a standalone, readers might miss out on some background information that helps set up the engaging plot.--Maryjean Riou, Hunterdon County Lib., Flemington, NJ Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Ella Enchanted (Trade)

#2080155 OGRE ENCHANTED (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gail Carson Levine

In this companion novel to Ella Enchanted, which can stand on its own, young healer Evie is transformed into an ogre by the meddling fairy Lucinda. She'll turn back only if someone proposes and she accepts!

978-0-06-256121-3 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 630

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Evie only has one thing on her mind, and that's healing the sick. She isn't expecting her friend Wormy to propose to her, and of course she turns him down. But that answer isn't good enough for Lucinda, the meddling fairy who likes to attend special occasions and give terrible gifts. Outraged at Evie's lack of romantic spirit, she turns her into an ogre and gives her 62 days to accept another proposal or remain an ogre forever. Undaunted, practical Evie sets to learn what she can from other ogres and then returns to the world of men, where she becomes entangled in a political plot. But her clock is winding down, and every day she doesn't find true love brings her closer to life as an ogre. This prequel to the Newbery Honor Book Ella Enchanted (1997) is a clever, lighthearted spin on Beauty and the Beast that features a heroine more than capable of choosing her own path. Readers new and old to Levine's world will find much to love.--Maggie Reagan Copyright 2018 Booklist

#1662449 Ella Enchanted (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Gail Carson Levine

Ella is a girl with a most unusual gift, and her story has charmed readers and critics alike. Now Miramax Films brings this wholly original Cinderella story to the silver screen, complete with princes, ogres, wicked stepsisters, and a fairy-tale ending fit for a princess.

978-0-06-027510-5 ©1997 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 5.1 GR Lvl U Lexile 670

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Gr. 5-8. A superbly plotted and thoroughly enjoyable retelling of the Cinderella story that neatly incorporates elements of the original and mightily expands them. A 1997 Booklist Editors' Choice and a 1998 Newbery Honor Book.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Levine plays her debut expansion of the Cinderella story as a straight--well, nearly straight--romance, sloughing off its layers of Freudian symbolism and creating a lively, stubborn heroine to keep the action tumbling along. Lucinda, an extraordinarily foolish fairy, bestows on baby Eleanor the gift of obedience, condemning her to a childhood in which she's compelled to follow every order, no matter how casually given. By the time she is a teenager, Ella has perfected the art of turning any imprecision in a command back on its giver. With the help of her fairy-godmother-cum-family-cook, Ella keeps her curse a secret; along the way she is sent off to finishing school with the cruel daughters of her simpering stepmother-to-be, launches a fruitless quest to beg Lucinda for release, and falls in love with Prince Charmont (and he with her). She derails their courtship, realizing what a danger she would be to him, but can't pass up a last chance to see him. From that point, the story follows its traditional course, with masked balls, pumpkin coach, and glass slippers. When the prince entreats her to marry him, Ella fights an agonizing internal battle and, driven by love, breaks the curse at last, delightedly screaming refusals over and over before melting into his arms. This refreshing take on one of the world's most popular fairy tales preserves the spirit of the original but adds plenty of humorous twists and a spunky, intelligent female lead. (Fiction/folklore. 11-13)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This lighthearted fantasy and recent Newbery Honor book re-invents the Cinderella story. "A winning combination of memorable characters and an alluring fantasy realm," said PW in a starred review. Ages 8-12. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8-The timeless story of Cinderella is deepened and extended in Gail Carson Levine's Newbery Honor book (HarperCollins, 1997). Given the unfortunate gift of complete obedience, the young heroine recounts her struggles to maintain her own identity. Along the way she meets Prince Charmont and a host of fairy tale characters, including gnomes, giants, ogres and, of course, her wicked stepfamily. Her fairy godmother, Mandy, works as the family cook and is Ella's constant helpmate. Ultimately Ella outwits the cruel and charms the good. She also finds the strength to overcome the lifelong curse of obedience and marries the prince. This retelling of the familiar story is rich in detail and offers older readers a chance to revisit well-known characters. Eden Riegel is a skilled and enthusiastic narrator with enough vocal styles to make each character a unique individual. The occasional addition of mood music adds drama but is not intrusive. The recording has no prompts to indicate the end of each side. The lightweight cardboard container is attractive but too flimsy for circulation. Both public and school libraries will find audiences eager for this unabridged recording.--Barbara S. Wysocki, Cora J. Belden Library, Rocky Hill, CT Copyright 1999 Cahners Business Information.

Ellie Engle (Trade)

#2323060 (Vol. 01) Ellie Engle Saves Herself (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Leah Johnson

Ellie Engle doesn't stand out. Not at home, where she's alone with her pet fish since her dad moved away and her mom has to work around the clock. Not at the bakery, where she helps out old Mr. Walker on the weekends. And definitely not at school, where her best friend Abby--the coolest, boldest, most talented girl in the world--drags Ellie along on her never-ending quest to "make her mark."

978-1-368-08555-7 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist relatively simple. She is an avid comic book fan, and she has one friend, Abby, who is bold, fashionable, and, unlike Ellie, constantly in the spotlight. Ellie is fine with the simplicity of her life, and in fact, she prefers it. When an earthquake shakes her town for the first time in decades, it also shakes up Ellie's life: she's surprised to find that she wakes up with the power to bring dead things back to life. Ellie is immediately overwhelmed with her new powers. She was already beginning to struggle with the prospect of starting junior high, her developing feelings for her best friend, and the stress of helping her single mom, who is barely making ends meet. Now, she finds herself having to come to terms with the reality of being a bona fide superhero—and the spotlight, which she never wanted, that comes with it. This delightful, magical middle-grade debut from young adult author Johnson (Rise to the Sun, 2021) excellently harnesses the anxiety that is prevalent throughout the junior-high years. Ellie's magic serves as a metaphor that carves out a space for uncovering and awakening her identity as a young queer Black girl. Strongly recommended for all collections.—Nashae Jones

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A seventh grader doing her best to navigate middle school, a secret crush, and new family dynamics wakes up with a life-altering superpower. Elliot "Ellie" Engle, a 12-year-old Black girl, has always been fine fading into the background with her comic books. Best friend Abby Ortega, who is coded as Latine, always seems to have the spotlight. Following an earthquake during a sleepover at Abby's house, Ellie wakes up feeling weird. She returns home to find her beloved pet, Burt the Betta Fish, has died. While giving his eulogy, Ellie touches Burt, and, to her disbelief, he bounces back to life. Superhero-loving Ellie's first thought is to keep her new abilities a secret or risk being shipped off to some institution like the X-Men's Xavier Institute. But she tells Abby--incidentally her crush and therefore the object of her other big secret. Together, they attempt to test her powers, until an unfortunate incident on frog dissection day in science class throws Ellie's life into a tailspin. Ellie must come to terms with hard truths, but along the way she learns she doesn't have to live her life in the shadow of others and that true friends will support you through everything. This fast-paced, humorous novel will have readers racing to the end as they fall in love with Ellie's quirky and authentic personality. Johnson deftly explores identity and responsibility to ourselves and others in this joyful coming-of-age story. Marvelous. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Comic book enthusiast Ellie Engle, who is Black, sees herself as the epitome of ordinary, and she's content to dwell in the pressure-free shadow of her outgoing Latina best friend, Abby Ortega. But after an earthquake strikes Plainsboro, Ind., the day the girls start junior high, Ellie realizes she has a crush on Abby, and she also somehow manages to resurrect her own dead pet fish. Slowly, Ellie discovers that she can bring living organisms back to life, for a cost. Ellie, who sometimes experiences panic attacks, doesn't want to cause trouble for her hardworking single mom, and she worries about how the powers of the supers in her comics affect their loved ones. But when popularity-intent Abby pressures Ellie to mask and even reverse her powers, Ellie is reluctant to let them go; even as knowledge of her abilities goes viral, leaving her no choice but to stand on her own two feet. Marrying her customary openhearted style with a necromancy-oriented origin story, Johnson (You Should See Me in a Crown) tackles the pains of growing up; changing bodies, shifting bonds, early crushes, and defining oneself on one's own terms; making for a warmly rendered, lightly speculative love story about a girl learning to believe that she's anything but ordinary. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Patrice Caldwell, New Leaf Literary. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8—Twelve-year-old Ellie Engle is preparing to start junior high, and wondering what to do with the fluttery feelings she has for Abby, who has been the center of her universe as long as they've been friends. But when a random earthquake leaves Ellie with superpowers (including the ability to resurrect the dead), Ellie finds herself with bigger worries. Add to that her mom's struggles to pay the bills in the wake of a divorce, and Abby's determination to "make her mark" in their new school at all costs—including, perhaps, their friendship—and Ellie's whole world is turned upside down. Things get even worse when a viral video exposes her newfound powers and thrusts her into the spotlight. In lesser hands, these many plot threads might become tangled, but Johnson masterfully weaves them together to explore themes of belonging, identity, responsibility, friendship, heroism, and growing up. Ellie's voice is honest, warm, and sharply funny, and readers will enthusiastically root for her as she learns to love and celebrate herself for all that she is. Ellie is Black and Abby is Latina. VERDICT Joyful and magical. A first purchase for all collections.—Lauren Strohecker

Ellie's Deli (Trade)

#2333324 (Vol. 01) Ellie's Deli: Wishing on Matzo Ball Soup! (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa Greenwald

When Ellie accidentally overhears that her family deli is most likely going to close, she does the only thing she can think of. She makes a wish on matzo ball soup.

978-1-5248-8455-0 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Emily Windsnap (Spotlight)

#2294941 (Vol. 02) Emily Windsnap and the Monster from the Deep (Library Binding)

written by Liz Kessler

Emily is reunited with her merman father and lives on an island located in the Bermuda Triangle, where she accidentally awakens the fearsome kraken and faces a bully from her past. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5121-5 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 6.0 RC Lvl 3.2 GR Lvl S Lexile 520

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$22.95

Reviews by: Children's Literature Being a teenager is tough. It is even tougher if you are half-human and half-mermaid, moving to a new mermaid only island where you only have one friend and are already on Neptune's bad side. This is the predicament Emily Windsnap is in at the beginning of this story. It only gets worse from there. While trying to prove that she is a real mermaid, she accidentally awakens the Kraken a few years too early. The beast begins wreaking havoc on the island and the surrounding waters. In the midst of this chaos, Mandy Rushton, Emily's nemesis from her old school, shows up. This book will be a delight for middle school girls. While the story is purely fantasy, they will be able to relate to Emily as she tries to fit in with other girls and as she tried to cope with a bully. The book is told from Emily's point of view with a few chapters told in Mandy's words. While this is a sequel to another book; it can be read alone and understood, however, there are some parts that seem a little confusing. Consider buying both books rather than this one alone. Part of the "Emily Windsnap" series.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When Emily Windsnap and her parents arrive at their new home in the middle of the Bermuda Triangle, she hopes she can fit in with the mermaids there better than she did with her classmates at Brightport High. Half-human, half-mermaid herself, she wants to make an impression on her new friends, but instead awakens a deadly kraken, angers King Neptune and endangers them all. Neptune hopes to put the kraken back to work sinking human ships; his first target carries Emily's long-time enemy, Mandy Rushton. Occasionally, Mandy interrupts Emily's story; the change of narrator is indicated by a new typeface, and a jarring shift to present tense. Neither Emily nor Mandy are developed enough to account for their change of heart at the end, but the action moves briskly, with a satisfying amount of underwater description and much attention to varied tail styles. The imaginative premise will intrigue readers and the suspense will be enough to keep them reading to the happy ending and perhaps send them back to Emily's first story, The Tail of Emily Windsnap (2004). (Fiction. 9-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly With a sparkling energy and humor, Finty Williams brings to life the new adventures and travails of a likeable half-mermaid tween in Emily Windsnap and the Monster from the Deep by Liz Kessler. This time Emily accidentally rouses a sea monster called a kraken and invites the wrath of Neptune. (May). Copyright 2006 Reed Business Information.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Emily is ecstatic. In The Tail of Emily Windsnap (Candlewick, 2004), she learns that she is a mermaid and reunites her human mother with her merman father. Now, the happy family is going to live together on an island smack dab in the center of the Bermuda Triangle. King Neptune himself has designated Allpoints Island as a safe place where humans and merfolk can coexist in peace. Even better, Emily's mermaid buddy Shona is moving to the island as well. Unfortunately, Emily is still feeling a little different as she is the only half-human/half-mermaid hybrid she knows. In an attempt to impress the others, she unwittingly unleashes a monster sleeping at the heart of the island. To put it to rest, she must now face not only her fears but also her old rival from middle school, Mandy Rushton. Constantly shying away from taking responsibility for her actions, Emily opts for the path of least resistance time and again, only stopping the murderous kraken when forced to do so. The book comes across as overly simplistic much of the time and relies too heavily on coincidence and some unbelievably cheery endings. Just the same, mermaid lovers everywhere will undoubtedly enjoy this story. Consider purchase if the first book is popular.-Elizabeth Bird, New York Public Library Copyright 2006 Reed Business Information.

#2294938 (Vol. 03) Emily Windsnap and the Castle in the Mist (Library Binding)
written by Liz Kessler

When she incurs Neptune's wrath by finding a diamond ring under rocks in the ocean, Emily is put under a curse that will force her to choose between being a mermaid or human, and searches for someone who can help her. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5122-2 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 6.0 RC Lvl 3.6 GR Lvl S Lexile 620

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$22.95

Reviews by: Children's Literature It is hard being half-mermaid and half-human, as Emily Windsnap knows all too well. Her parents have recently reunited, but are having trouble reconciling their different worlds. Emily's mother worries that all Emily learns at mermaid school are things like hair braiding and nothing like mathematics. But when Emily finds a mysterious ring, her troubles have just begun. The ring once belonged to King Neptune and he wants it back. The ring, however, cannot be removed, so King Neptune curses Emily to be neither human nor mermaid. Emily must find another ring to break the curse and return her body to its natural state. With the help from some old friends and some new faces, Emily seeks the ring that holds her fate and the fate of all half-human, half-mer people. The story is a strange mix of whimsical and serious fantasy that does not entirely work. Kessler tries for a deeper social commentary, but the outcome is so predictable that her lesson gets lost in the cliché. Still, Emily is an entertaining figure, and the threat to her way of life will keep the reader hooked to the end.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Back for a third adventure, Emily Windsnap, half-human/half-mermaid, has settled into life with both parents on and around Allpoints Island, where she's found a new best friend, Shona, a mermaid "all girly and sparkly, with shiny long blond hair." But her parents' arguments worry her. Perhaps they are planning to split up. On a class trip she finds a diamond ring King Neptune wants, but it won't come off her hand. Neptune's angry response is to send her far away where she finds a castle inhabited by a dark-haired, green-eyed boy, a semi-mer like herself. Together, the three young people find the ring's missing counterpart, undoing a 500-year-old curse and making possible peace between humans and merfolk-including her own parents. The improbable plot is told in first person, quickly paced and supported by plenty of descriptive detail about the appearance of the characters and the colorful underwater life. This should be an easy sell to girls looking for a friendship story with more than a touch of make believe. (Fiction. 9-12)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6Half-human/half-mermaid Emily should be happy. She's living with her recently reunited parents (a human mother and merman father), she has a best friend, and she loves her new school. Still, this third book in the series finds her preoccupied with her parents' escalating bickering. After awakening King Neptune's fearsome monster in book two, Emily has vowed to stay out of trouble, but that is exactly what she finds in a magic ring from the ocean floor. When the king finds out that she has hidden it from him, he is furious and puts a curse on her: at the next full moon, she will become all human or all mermaid, whichever he chooses. So begins an adventure that takes the girl to a secret castle where she learns that she may not be as unique as she previously thought. Kessler combines the whimsy of life as a mermaid with the problems of an average middle-schooler. She keeps the story moving, with each chapter posing a new problem. Plenty of dialogue and Ledwidge's soft, dreamlike line drawings add textual and visual interest, making for a zippy story in an attractive package. Fans of mermaids and things that sparkle are the likely audience for this light fantasy.—Adrienne Furness Copyright 2006 Reed Business Information.

Reviews by: Voice of Youth Advocates (VOYA) In this third installment of the series about twelve-year-old Emily, Neptune has allowed merfolk and humans to live in harmony. Emily is ecstatic to be living with both her merman father and her human mother. Emily herself is a mix-human on land and mermaid at sea. But these days her parents seem to argue constantly. Emily is terrified that they will separate again and that she will have to choose between them. The real trouble begins when Emily finds a diamond ring at the bottom of the ocean. Neptune wants the ring, and when she is unable to take it off her finger, he puts a curse on her. If she does not hand it over before the next full moon, she will lose the ability to change form. Then a storm conjured by Neptune's rage strands Emily and her best friend, Shona, alone in the middle of the ocean. The story really takes off when Emily decides to explore a mysterious castle visible in the distance. There she meets a boy desperate to save his family, encounters an ancient mystery, and learns a secret from Neptune's past. This quick read is light and charming but also heartfelt. Emily's overactive imagination and excessive worry about her parent's marriage ring true for a girl her age. After many anxious moments, the fairy-tale ending will satisfy the target audience, especially those who have enjoyed the previous two books in the series.

#2294944 (Vol. 04) Emily Windsnap and the Siren's Secret (Library Binding)
written by Liz Kessler
 Emily is finally enjoying a swimmingly peaceful life on Allpoints Island, but her fun is cut short when she learns that the Windsnaps and friends must return to their old home, where construction projects are threatening a secret mermaid community under the sea. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.
 978-1-0982-5123-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 296 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 3.3 GR Lvl S Lexile 600

Quantity 1
Unit Price $22.95

Reviews by: Children's Literature This fourth book in the "Emily Windsnap" series continues the tales about Emily, a semi-mer (finned lower half when in water, two-legged when on dry land); her best friend Shona; a male interest, Aaron, and a nemesis, Mandy. The conflict in this book involves three groups whose cold peace with each other is beginning to heat up. Neptune has declared a policy of detente between humans, such as Emily's mother, and merpeople. Because of Emily's brave actions in previous stories, he assigns her and her family the job of carrying it out. It is a challenging assignment, however, because humans are threatening to destroy underwater caves, an act likely to result either in the destruction of merpeople's homes or in the merpeople's becoming a degrading circus act to entertain humans. Meanwhile some mermaids, including the principal of Emily's school, are fostering enmity between full mermaids and semi-mers. Adventure, too, heats up when a family friend, Mr. Beeston, starts acting strangely, Shona and a "Lost thing" must be located, and a magic map must be deciphered. The source of the excitement and suspense are threatening sirens, a particular disappointment to Emily, who wants to grow up to become one. The conclusion reveals the intertwined relationships among the groups and leads to their acceptance of one another. The story sustains suspense and multiple story lines. Readers who have not read the earlier books can with close attention understand and enjoy it and those who have will appreciate this back-by-popular-demand sequel. Reviewer: Cynthia Levinson

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—Emily Windsnap, half-human/half-mermaid, is faced with her biggest challenge yet when she learns that the mermaid village of Shiprock is about to be destroyed by bulldozers. While attempting to unite humans and merpeople to prevent the disaster, Emily discovers that whenever she and Aaron hold hands, weird things start happening, like people suddenly forget that they're not supposed to know that mermaids exist. She and her best friend, Shona, find some lost sirens but then get stuck underneath a waterfall with them with no way out. The characters are multidimensional, the book is fast paced, and the mishaps and adventures are entertaining.—Kira Moody, Hunter Public Library, West Valley City, UT

#2294940 (Vol. 05) Emily Windsnap and the Land of the Midnight Sun (Library Binding)
written by Liz Kessler
 Convinced that his nightmares herald an approaching threat, Neptune enlists half-

Quantity 1
Unit Price $22.95

mermaids Emily and Aaron for a top-secret mission to find and eliminate the source of the trouble. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards.

Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5124-6 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 280 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 3.4 GR Lvl T Lexile 600

#2294943 (Vol. 06) Emily Windsnap and the Ship of Lost Souls (Library Binding)

written by Liz Kessler

Emily and Aaron discover a ghostly pirate ship that only they can see, and it is up to Emily to enter a portal to bring the ship's passengers back before the portal is closed forever. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5125-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 3.4 GR Lvl T Lexile 600

Quantity 1
Unit Price $22.95

#2294939 (Vol. 07) Emily Windsnap and the Falls of Forgotten Island (Library Binding)

written by Liz Kessler

While on vacation, Emily finds herself swept up in an ancient prophecy that foretells how the people on the island can be saved from a devastating earthquake--and the prophecy revolves around Emily, her boyfriend, and a mysterious, mythic giant.

Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5126-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 312 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 3.2 GR Lvl T Lexile 550

Quantity 1
Unit Price $22.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Following her adventures in Emily Windsnap and the Ship of Souls (2015), part-mermaid Emily finds an idyllic island vacation disrupted by an ancient prophecy. Thirteen-year-old Emily's "an adventure magnet." After promising her mermaid best friend, Shona, she will "not be tempted by adventures, risks, or mysteries for at least one month," Emily arrives on a secluded island with Shona, her parents, and her "semi-mer" boyfriend and instantly stumbles onto another adventure. During a boat tour to nearby Forgotten Island, thought to be uninhabited and inaccessible, Emily and Shona explore behind the waterfall and are literally swept into a "whole new world" where Emily overhears people discussing a prophecy about an impending disastrous earthquake. On a second visit to Forgotten Island, Emily becomes lost in a maze of tunnels and encounters the same people, who convince her she's the answer to their prophecy about a girl with a fish tail finding a giant who saves the island. Conflicted by her promise to Shona and her desire to save the island's inhabitants, Emily enlists her boyfriend's help. Emily's fast-paced, first-person narration lends immediacy to her latest quixotic quest, one that tests the bonds of friendship and closes with a surprising twist. Spot art reinforces the maritime theme; friendship and relationship angst ground the story emotionally. Both humans and mer-people seem to be white. Exciting new adventures, risks, and mysteries for Emily Windsnap fans. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2018) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2294942 (Vol. 08) Emily Windsnap and the Pirate Prince (Library Binding)
written by Liz Kessler

Emily ends up on a life-changing adventure to rescue her boyfriend when he is kidnapped by pirates; she helps unravel riddles to the legendary Trident's Treasure, making sure her friends are safe, and realizing how to be true to herself. Aligned to

Quantity 1
Unit Price $22.95

Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.
 978-1-0982-5127-7 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 288 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 7.0 RC Lvl 3.1 GR Lvl T Lexile 520

#2294945 (Vol. 09) Emily Windsnap and the Tides of Time (Library Binding)
written by Liz Kessler
 Emily must travel through time and into the future to save both of her hometowns to make a future that's bright for everyone. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.
 978-1-0982-5128-4 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 272 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 7.0 GR Lvl T Lexile 580

Quantity 1
Unit Price $22.95

Reviews by: School Library Journal of the "Emily Windsnap" saga, the titular character is experiencing friendship problems. Just when she thinks she has fixed the problems in her life, the wishing stone leads her to a mysterious rift in the ocean floor and she is transported through time to see what effect her decisions have on her future self. Each time Emily travels through the tides of time, something always goes wrong to cause her future to be less than ideal. Emily must find the correct formula to ensure the best possible future for both herself and her friends and family. This book introduces the importance of recycling and keeping our oceans clean. While the book uses the classic premise of a Groundhog Day-esque theme, readers are able to directly see the results of Emily's actions. VERDICT Purchase where the "Emily Windsnap" series has been popular and for collections that need more hi-lo choices for tweens.—Sara Brunkhorst, Glenview Public Library, IL

Emily Windsnap (Trade)

#2332033 (Vol. 01) Tail of Emily Windsnap (Deluxe Anniversary Edition) (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Liz Kessler
 For as long as she can remember, twelve-year-old Emily Windsnap has lived on a boat. And, oddly enough, for just as long, her mother has anxiously kept Emily away from the water. But when Mom finally agrees to let her take swimming lessons, Emily makes a startling discovery—about her own identity, the mysterious father she's never met, and the thrilling possibilities and perils shimmering deep below the water's surface.
 978-1-5362-3048-2 ©2023 5 x 7-1/2 224 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 540

Quantity 1
Unit Price $15.99

Emmie and Friends (Trade)

#2004742 Invisible Emmie (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Terri Libenson
 This is the story of two totally different girls. Quiet, shy, artistic Emmie. Popular, outgoing, athletic Katie and how their lives unexpectedly intersect one day, when an embarrassing note falls into the wrong hands...
 978-0-06-248494-9 ©2017 192 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 4.3

Quantity 1
Unit Price $22.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 If quiet seventh-grader Emmie could have her way, she'd draw all the time, hang out with her best friend Brianna, and otherwise keep to herself. Though things stay pretty quiet at home, middle school is another story, especially when a fake love note she wrote to her crush ends up in the hands of an obnoxious, gossipy classmate. Interspersed with Emmie's doodle-laden first-person narrative are comics about popular, athletic, and confident Katie, who has it all figured out. At first, the two narratives seem unrelated, but as the stories begin to intertwine and Emmie starts finding more confidence in spite of the love-note disaster, the connection between Emmie and Katie becomes crystal clear. Libenson's amiable illustrations from Emmie's snarky (though sometimes glib) cartoon commentary in subdued tones to Katie's brightly colored, picture-perfect comic book life add plenty of comical flavor to the relatable story. With all-too-familiar middle-school drama and an empowering lesson about speaking up and bravely facing down embarrassment, this should find an easy audience among fans of Wimpy Kid or Dork Diaries books. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2017, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide In this clever tale, super-shy seventh grader Emmie rarely speaks to a soul at school but loves to draw. Occasional comics-style sections follow super-popular, impossibly perfect "Katie." After a classmate shares Emmie's note about her crush with everyone, Emmie goes from feeling invisible to feeling embarrassingly visible. But as Emmie becomes more satisfyingly confident, Katie gradually disappears--a no-longer-needed coping mechanism that existed only in Emmie's drawings. (Copyright 2017 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine The main narrative follows a day in the life of super-shy seventh grader Emmie, who rarely speaks to a soul at school; occasional sections follow Katie, super-popular and impossibly perfect (she gets straight As, her parents have never embarrassed her, and everyone wants to be her BFF). Emmie loves to draw and fills her narration with amusingly labeled doodles, while Katie's story is told comic-style. When a classmate finds a note Emmie wrote about the boy she likes and shares it with everyone, Emmie goes from feeling completely invisible to feeling embarrassingly visible, with all her classmates staring and laughing at her. Both text and illustrations contain appropriately kidlike descriptions of her social anxiety (a squeezey feeling in my stomach) along with humorous examples of the various horrors of middle school (an illustration shows a spotlight shining on Emmie as she changes clothes for gym class). The more visible (and satisfyingly confident and outspoken) Emmie becomes, the less visible Katie becomes, until she completely disappears--a no-longer-needed coping mechanism that existed only in Emmie's imagination and drawings. Libenson's clever tale will entertain readers in the throes of middle school as well as younger students both wary of and intrigued by their near future. jennifer m. brabander (Copyright 2017 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews One bad day in seventh grade can feel like a lifetime. However, even end-of-the-world-level heartache can have surprising and comic consequences. Emmie's story is part of the growing subgenre that hybridizes the middle-grade and graphic novel. With doodle-illustrated prose chapters depicting Emmie's world and entire comics-style sections depicting the popular Kate, Libenson takes readers inside the halls of middle school with the same nod to weirdness and eye-rolling angst as such format standards as Diary of a Wimpy Kid and Dork Diaries. Emmie is a painfully shy girl who is forced to see and be seen one fateful day when a playful game with best friend Brianna turns into a nightmare. Libenson uses two different illustration styles to distinguish between Emmie, the soft-spoken wallflower, and Kate, the outgoing girl of fabulousness. An artist using her doodles to illustrate the seventh-grade world, Emmie sees herself as someone with no voice, while the enigmatic, charismatic Kate is full of confidence and determined to push Emmie out of her comfort zone. Though readers may be puzzled by the device initially, Libenson's rationale for the dual portrayals becomes clear in the end. However, the repetition of Emmie's description as quiet, shy, and disenfranchised becomes as grating as a nasal whine. Both Emmie and Kate appear to be white, but school scenes reveal multiethnic classmates. Classic middle school themes come alive, but they fail to really go anywhere. (Graphic/fiction hybrid. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2017) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8-Readers follow a day in the life of Emmie, a shy, quiet eighth grader, as she scrambles to finish her homework, dreads gym class, and navigates hallways full of gossipy girls and spitty boys. She copes by disappearing into her drawing notebook. Interspersed between the illustrated chapters are comics-style panels featuring Katie, a pretty, popular, friendly, confident girl also going through the same middle school day. In homeroom, she notices "that quiet girl. She likes to draw. I'd rather talk. Or text." To amuse themselves during lunch in the chaotic cafeteria, Emmie and her best (and only) friend Bri compose gushy love notes to their secret crushes. Inevitably, Emmie drops hers, and it is found and circulated by the obnoxious class clown. Following the discovery of the love note, Katie comes to Emmie's defense, comforts her, and encourages her to stand up for herself. Many readers will recognize themselves in Emmie and her friends, who are at once self-conscious and eager to be seen for who they are. VERDICT A highly relatable middle grade drama. Recommended for most collections.-Jennifer Costa, Cambridge Public Library, MA Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2060583 Positively Izzy (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Terri Libenson

Izzy is the dreamer. She can never quite focus enough to get her schoolwork done. She wishes her mom (and annoying big sister) would get off her back and appreciate her for the one thing she's really good at: theater. Bri is the brain. While she's proud of her excellent grades, she wishes people would see there's more to her than just a report card full of As--the way her awesome BFF, Emmie, does. The girls' lives converge in unexpected ways on the day of the school talent show, which turns out to be even more dramatic than either Bri or Izzy could have imagined.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$24.99

978-0-06-248497-0 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.0 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.3 Lexile GN 390

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Following a similar structure as Invisible Emmie (2016), Libenson's sophomore illustrated novel tells parallel stories of two middle-school girls struggling to find a way to fit in. Brianna knows she's smart, but she's starting to chafe against her nickname, the Brain. When her mom, the new middle-school drama teacher, asks her to perform a scene for the talent show, she agrees despite her serious case of stage fright. Meanwhile, Izzy has been practicing for the talent show for weeks?to the detriment of her other school work?but when her mom finds out she flunked an important test, she grounds her on the night of the performance. Sneaking out obviously isn't a great idea, but Izzy's determined to get her time in the spotlight. Libenson nicely touches on classic middle-grade tropes, such as shifting friendships, crushes, and developing confidence, while the combination of comics, which make up Bri's story, and sections of text with spot illustrations are particularly well suited to the themes. A poignant twist ending adds a heartening note to an already charming story.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2018, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide This follow-up to graphic novel Invisible Emmie again alternates perspectives, with (Emmie's best friend) Brianna's story rendered via large cartoon-panel drawings, and artsy-dreamer classmate Izzy's in smaller, border-free vignettes. Izzy's grounded but sneaks off to perform in the talent show. Brianna, meanwhile, reluctantly steps in for someone at the show and connects with her drama-teacher mother. A twist reveals an emotionally rewarding surprise. Libenson captures middle-school dramas with candor, fast pacing, and relatable characters. (Copyright 2018 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine This follow-up to graphic novel Invisible Emmie (rev. 7/17) again alternates between two perspectives, this time those of Emmie's best friend Brianna (a.k.a. The Brain) and artsy dreamer Izzy. Brianna's story is rendered via large cartoon-panel drawings, and Izzy's story is shown in smaller, border-free vignettes (final art not seen). Brianna is adjusting to the embarrassing fact that her mother now teaches drama at her middle school. Izzy is eager to perform in the school's talent show, but she's grounded after getting a zero in math; she defies her mother by sneaking off to perform in the show. Brianna, meanwhile, reluctantly agrees to step in for someone at the show; she overcomes her fear of performing (but not without angst) and connects with her mother in a new way. An unexpected twist at the book's close, taking place at a family brunch, reveals a surprise about the book's timeline, an emotionally rewarding discovery that wraps up the story lines with ease. Libenson captures middle-school dramas?family, ?friendships, crushes, stereotypes, grades, self-discovery?with candor, fast pacing, and authentic, relatable characters. Positively satisfying. julie Danielson(Copyright 2018 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews This reader-friendly graphic/prose hybrid explores the lives of two very different girls who have an unexpected connection.Izzy and Brianna both, separately, navigate difficult middle school experiences. Brianna, whose story is told entirely in sequential panels, is studious, reserved, and a little lonely. Izzy, who tells her story in paragraphs broken up by illustrations, is an unreliable middle sister with a love for performance and a lot of indifference toward schoolwork. Izzy sneaks out against her mother's wishes to perform in the school talent show, while Bri's mother (also a teacher at her school) convinces her to fill in for a sick actor. Both girls juggle complex family dynamics, shifting friend groups, and boys in the hours leading up to their performances. The story is light but resonant for middle graders, with constant comedic asides in the illustrations. Both girls appear white (based on the color cover), with multiracial supporting casts, and both threads of the story skirt larger issues. The opening pages, in which Bri complains about labels, hint at a larger theme that recedes into the background as the two girls struggle with their interpersonal relationships. Readers primed by the back-cover blurb will spend the whole book waiting for the two stories to intersect, with a surprise reveal at the end that may call for an immediate reread.A solid, not particularly daring addition to the hybrid format for middle-grade readers, mixing drama with heart. (Graphic/fiction hybrid. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2018) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-This charming book tells parallel stories of two very different girls, using graphic novel format to follow studious, introverted Brianna and a mix of handwritten prose and illustrations for creative daydreamer Izzy. The girls prepare for their middle school's talent show, which turns out to be a pivotal moment in both of their lives. Fans of Libenson's Invisible Emmie will be delighted to revisit some familiar characters. Like the previous title, this tale features a clever ending in which the two girls' stories converge. Some may be frustrated that the big reveal doesn't come until the very last page, but the twist is a satisfying one that invites readers to turn back and revisit earlier chapters. Funny details of Brianna and Izzy's lives ring true as the author explores relatable topics such as middle school friendships, self-discovery, and family dynamics. Libenson stresses the importance of being true to oneself, and readers will root for the characters to succeed. VERDICT A strong purchase for libraries where realistic graphic novels are in demand.-Allison Tran, Mission Viejo Library, CA Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2222744 Truly Tyler (Hardcover (Trade))	1	$24.99
written by Terri Libenson Ever since Tyler started getting into art and hanging out with Emmie, his friends and teammates have been giving him a hard time. He wonders why can't he nerd out on drawing and play ball? Emmie is psyched that she gets to work on a comics project with her crush, Tyler. But she gets the feeling that his friends don't think she's cool enough. Maybe it's time for a total reinvention.

978-0-06-289457-1 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 192 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.3 AR Pts 2.0

#2277766 Remarkably Ruby (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Terri Libenson

Ruby (aka Baked Bean Girl) is an outsider. She's bigger than all of her classmates and a bit socially awkward. But life-and middle school-take a turn for the better when she's asked to start a poetry club. Mia is a perfectionist. She must always have the right outfits, get good grades, and now she has to win her school class president election. The only thing, or person, ruining her perfect image is her former friend, Ruby.

978-0-06-313919-0 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8 384 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.2 AR Pts 2.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $24.99

#2323440 Surprisingly Sarah (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Terri Libenson

Sarah and Leo have been BFFs since they were little. They share everything... until Sarah starts crushing on Leo's friend Ben. Then one day Sarah is suddenly faced with a big choice -- ask Ben to the school dance! OR chicken out. Either way, Sarah and Leo's friendship will be put to the test. Which one would you choose?

978-0-06-313922-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 352 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.6 AR Pts 2.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $24.99

#2379100 (Vol. 08) Always Anthony (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Terri Libenson

Anthony is TPFW (Too Popular for Words), loves science, hates writing. Leah is a super-shy nerd who's finally making friends of her own. What could they have in common? A lot more than they thought, as it turns out! But then one day they witness Anthony's teammates bullying a sixth grader. What happens next could cement their new friendship-or blow it up forever.

978-0-06-332093-2 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8 336 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $24.99

Emperor of the Universe (Trade)

#2221800 (Vol. 02) Clone Catastrophe (Hardcover (POB))
written by David Lubar

Before Nicholas V. Landrew can enjoy more than a few weeks in his new role as emperor of the universe, his world begins to fall apart. His mortal enemies, the Craborzi, have cloned him, and are using these carbon copies to produce an intergalactic reality show called The Abominable Emperor--killing a clone in every episode!

Quantity 1
Unit Price $14.99

978-1-250-18933-2 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

#2343610 (Vol. 03) Emperor's Last Stand (Hardcover (POB))
written by David Lubar

Nicholas, Jeef, and Henrietta the gerbil face their most existential crisis yet when the universe is attacked by beings from a parallel universe intent on conquering every other parallel universe. If Nicholas fails in his mission to defend the universe, it'll mean the end of life itself.. The Empire's Last Stand is the third and final intergalactic Emperor of the Universe adventure.

978-1-250-18935-6 ©2023 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 192 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Endling (Prebound)

#2159174 (Vol. 02) First (Prebound)
written by Katherine Applegate

Byx and her companions must travel a perilous path out of Nedarra and into the snow-covered mountains of the country of Dreyland to the north. But just as the threat of war is growing across the lands, so too is the possible extinction of all Byx's dreams.

978-1-5364-6225-8 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$20.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In this second installment, the dairne Byx's quest is far from over. Applegate continues her otherworldly saga in this second installment of the Endling series. (Yes, the second book is called The First, while the first book was called The Last. Just go with it.) Here readers follow doglike Byx and her companions--humans Khara and Renzo, catlike Gambler, and the small and furry Tobble--as they attempt to find the traveling island of Tarok and, they hope, more dairnes, saving Byx from being the last of her species. Along the way, Applegate shifts focus from the first outing and uses Byx's narration to explore Khara's transition from a young girl to a leader. This change serves the story well, pulling readers further into the political turmoil of the land. The current reigning dictator, the Murdano, will soon be under attack by the no-less-vicious Kazar Sg'drit, who is enslaving other sentient species in his quest to build an army. Against this backdrop, Khara must rise as a leader and raise an army to stop a war even as Byx evolves from a pup to a leader in her own right. Themes of conservation, war, and human trafficking are skillfully interwoven into a world of magic and wonder. This second installment will have readers salivating for a third. Khara is explicitly described as having brown skin; absence of such specificity implies Renzo's white. Simply sublime. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7-The second in Applegate's "Endling" series continues her enchanting world-building with a cast of characters that support and bring out the best in each other. Byx, possibly the last of her magical kind, continues her journey with a pack of unlikely confederates in hopes of finding at least one other dairne like her. Dairnes always know when someone is telling the truth, and the ruling despot wants to use this to his advantage. But he also wants to controls their population. Byx's faithful group of human and animal friends intrepidly venture through tunnels, volcanoes, and even to the depths of the sea to find a rumored colony of dairnes. Along their travels they meet different species who subvert their preconceived notions, or are experiencing abuse and enslavement in the midst of the nascent war. The strength and talents of the group are tested, sometimes violently, against magical obstacles and sharp arrows. Each member of Byx's band has a moment of doubt regarding their ability in the face of danger, and readers will appreciate their inner and outer journeys to become heroes in their own right. VERDICT Timely issues combine with dynamic action and charming characters in this captivating sequel. The backstory provided makes this a solid read even for those who haven't read the first entry. Make some shelf space for multiple copies of this series.-Lee De Groft, Jamestown High School, Williamsburg, VA Copyright 2019 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2098689 (Vol. 01) Last (Prebound)

written by Katherine Applegate

Byx is the youngest member of her daime pack. Believed to possess remarkable abilities, her mythical doglike species has been hunted to near extinction in the war-torn kingdom of Nedarra. After her pack is hunted down and killed, Byx fears she may be the last of her species. The Endling. So Byx sets out to find safe haven, and to see if the legends of other hidden dairnes are true.

978-1-5364-5355-3 ©2019 5 x 7-1/2 410 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 11.0 RC Lvl 4.3 Lexile 690

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$20.95

Reviews by: Booklist In the land of Nedarra, six governing species reign supreme, but the dairnes—a cross between dog and sugar glider—are critically endangered. Hunted by humans to obscurity, the remaining dairnes have left their tree-top nests for more concealed abodes on the ground. Byx is the runt of her pack and highly curious about the world around her. When she sneaks out to explore one day, she rescues a wobbyk—imagine a silvery-blue chinchilla—named Tobble from a group of poachers, only to return home to the horror of finding her entire pack slaughtered by human soldiers. Byx flees with Khara—the poachers' young guide—and Tobble, but the unusual group is brought up short by unsettling news: Byx may be an endling—the last of her species. What follows is a dangerous, heart-stopping quest to stay alive and find an elusive island where dairnes are still rumored to live. Applegate (Wishtree, 2017) effortlessly constructs her fantasy world, briskly moving readers through its imaginative details while creating winning, unique characters. Readers expecting a whimsical animal adventure should be warned that the pervading tone is dark, calling attention to humans' greed and lust for power. Yet, Khara proves a loyal friend, as do others in Byx's unlikely crew. This epic series starter is a bracing, propulsive read that will be a challenge to keep on the shelf.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews What do you do when you're the last of your kind? Applegate transports her readers to a new land, one inhabited by numerous sentient species, six of which have fought to the top of the food chain: humans, dairnes, felivets, natites, terramants, and raptidons. In this world, readers meet Byx, a daime—a doglike creature that walks erect, glides like a flying squirrel, and has opposable thumbs—on the day she becomes the last of her species. It's also a day when Byx meets two other creatures: Tobble, a wobbyk, with large ears and a short round body, and Khara (short for Kharassande), a 14 year-old, brown-skinned human girl who pretends to be a boy so that she is not limited by the gendered rules of human society. Bonded through lifesaving acts, the three embark on a journey to find Ferrucci the Gharri, a scientist and scholar who may be able to protect Byx from a human emperor who is hellbent on killing off her entire species. Applegate skillfully builds a fully realized world of intrigue and wonder without ever letting up on the story's quick pace. Themes of genocide, conservation, and magic are interwoven, providing thought-provoking questions for astute readers and educators. A savvy choice for readers of fantasy; individual readers and book clubs will love it and demand to know when the sequel will be available. (Fantasy. 8-11)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7-Byx has always thought of herself as last: last-born sibling, the youngest in her whole family, and least adept at all the skills valued by the caninelike "dairnes." But when her family, the last-known group of dairnes in Nedarra, is hunted down and murdered by humans under the rule of the villainous Murdano, she truly becomes the last-an Endling, the sole survivor of a species. Byx sets out on a desperate but hopeful journey in search of Dairneholm, a mythical settlement of dairnes. Along the way she is joined by an increasingly unlikely group of adventurers including Khala the human, a girl disguised as a boy with a mysterious past, and Tobble, the small and fiercely loyal wobbyk. Their mission becomes more dangerous as they discover the true machinations behind the dairnes's eradication. Fantasy lovers are in for a treat with this smartly paced, enthralling adventure that pairs novel and exciting world-building with classic high fantasy tropes and political intrigue. Applegate's characters feel fresh and modern, and their questioning of the status quo will resonate with today's middle graders. Illustrations and maps will help young readers imagine the rich setting filled with fantastical creatures that vie for power in Nedarra. The heart and courage Byx and her companions must find within as they stand up against unimaginable odds will inspire and delight. VERDICT A sweeping fantasy epic for the middle grade set that will have readers clamoring for a follow-up. A first purchase.-Darla Salva Cruz, Suffolk Cooperative Library System, Bellport, NY Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2271784 (Vol. 03) Only (Prebound)

written by Katherine Applegate

In the beginning, Byx's original quest was to discover if there were more of her kind, or if she was destined to become an endling--the last daime alive. She did indeed find more dairnes, and along the way she also created allies among other creatures in her world, including humans, felivets, raptidons, and wobbyks.

978-1-5364-7255-4 ©2022 5 x 7-1/2 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$20.95

EngiNerds (Trade)#2210882 (Vol. 03) EngiNerds Strike Back (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jarrett Lerner

Alien invasion? At the end of Revenge of the EngiNerds an alien appeared and it turns out he's the real deal. He explains he was sent to Earth as an envoy to scope things out for a planned massive, futuristic billboard--which will mean demolishing the planet! Here? On Earth? In their town? Not if the EngiNerds have anything to say about it. Time to save the day and the planet!

978-1-5344-6934-1 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 800

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—This third installment picks up immediately after the cliff-hanger ending of Revenge of the EngiNerds, with the gang facing a new peril. Aliens from the planet Plerp have judged humans galactically useless because they are intellectually inferior and neglect the environment. The Plerpians have chosen Earth as the site for a giant billboard, even if it will wipe out all life on the planet. It's up to Ken and the EngiNerds to prove that Earthlings have redeeming qualities. While the kids are described as "smarter than average, mechanically and technically proficient," Lerner doesn't provide readers with even cursory details about any of their engineering projects. As the kids work together on a robot that will save the world, readers learn about all the food the kids eat but only one tool they use: a screwdriver. Despite what the title suggests, the emphasis here is not on STEM but on middle school high jinks and silly humor—the aliens wear collared shirts and ties but no pants. Ken's dog is named Kitty. No clues are given regarding characters' ethnicities, and Ken's father, the sole grown-up in the book, hews to the standard "clueless adult" trope. Short chapters may encourage reluctant readers, but many are only one or two pages, which interrupts the narrative flow and feel structured to create artificial drama. VERDICT Purchase where the previous two novels are popular.—Marybeth Kozikowski, Sachem P.L., Holbrook, NY

#2017690 (Vol. 01) EngiNerds (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jarrett Lerner

Ken is an EngiNerd: one of a super-smart group of friends--all nerds--who have been close since kindergarten. They may be brainiacs, but they're just like everyone else. Well, maybe not just like everyone because Ken's best friend Dan has been building robots. He then secretly sent one to each of the EngiNerds.

978-1-4814-6872-5 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 4.0 RC Lvl 4.3 Lexile 700

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Kennedy receives a robot named Greeeg on his doorstep. But excitement turns to dismay when he discovers Greeeg's insatiable appetite and bullet-like excrement. Before long, Kennedy and his fellow EngiNerds (all boys) must use engineering savvy to stop a robot horde menacing their town. Short chapters brim with scatological humor, action, and affection for all things nerdy; a cliffhanger ending indicates a sequel. (Copyright 2018 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A gang of science nerds unwittingly unleashes a squadron of destructive robots and must engineer a way to save the town in Lerner's debut novel. When a mysterious box appears outside Kennedy's house, he enlists the help of best friend and fellow EngiNerd Dan to sift through the metal parts and hardware. Together, they piece together a polite but ravenous robot named Greeeg. The robot eats all the food in the house--refusing only radishes--and Kennedy discovers that Greeeg is both insatiable and unmanageable. The potential for catastrophe is fully realized when Greeeg propulsively "disposes" (that's robot defecation) tiny, window-shattering, brown-black cubes. Is the robot from Grandpa K., Kennedy's hero and a former engineer? Is it coincidence that his best friend also hates radishes? Unfortunately, Kennedy isn't the only one with a robot problem. Eighteen bullet-farting robots storm town, and the EngiNerds must band together and use ingenuity to prevent the robots from consuming and destroying everything in their wake. Sci-fi readers will enjoy the science and tinkering, but dangerous excreta is pure schoolboy horseplay. The story includes clever duct-tape solutions, the construction of catapults from disposable chopsticks, and a good, old-fashioned water fight in this action-packed celebration of nerd culture. The absence of ethnic markers implies that Kennedy is white, but the surnames of the EngiNerds suggest a diverse assemblage. A boisterous balance of potty humor and geek pride in this rollicking young engineer's adventure, the first of two. (Science fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2017) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2089245 (Vol. 02) Revenge of the EngiNerds (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jarrett Lerner

When last we met, the EngiNerds were battling a horde of ravenous robots, but in this latest caper, they're on the hunt for just one rogue robot. But who knows what kind of mayhem one mechanical creature can cause? And why is Ken the only EngiNerd who's worried about the runaway robot?

978-1-4814-6874-9 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 4.0 RC Lvl 4.7 Lexile 770

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Days after the end of book one, Ken and the EngiNerds are tracking down the final robot from the horde that menaced their town. A girl named Mikaela, who claims she's seen an alien, is a distraction, but Ken refuses to be thrown off his mission. Ample humor, short chapters, and the introduction of a smart, independent girl character make this a worthy successor to EngiNerds. (Copyright 2019 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Enola Holmes Mystery (Wednesday Books / Trade)

#2238873 (Vol. 01) Enola Holmes and the Black Barouche (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Nancy Springer

When a young professional woman, Miss Letitia Glover, shows up on Sherlock's doorstep, desperate to learn more about the fate of her twin sister, it is Enola who steps up. It seems her sister, the former Felicity Glover, married the Earl of Dunhynch and per a curt note from the Earl, has died. But Letitia Glover is convinced this isn't the truth, that she'd know-she'd feel-if her twin had died.

978-1-250-82295-6 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.2 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 7-9 In 1889, Enola Holmes, the clever younger sister of Sherlock (and a fellow private investigator), meets her brother's latest client and quickly takes the lead in solving the case. Miss Letitia Glover recently received word of her twin sister, Flossie's, death, but she is suspicious of her brother-in-law, a wealthy earl. Traveling in disguise, Enola arrives at his stately home, wrangles an invitation to stay, and uses her time to observe the household and ferret out information. Locked into Flossie's boudoir, she discovers an important clue and then makes a perilous escape. Readers drawn to the audacious main character and her lively, droll first-person narrative will find themselves learning about Victorian English society while increasing their vocabularies. Sherlock Holmes contributes the book's prologue and epilogue. In The Case of the Missing Marquess (2006), Springer first introduced Enola to mystery lovers. Five sequels quickly followed. The Netflix film Enola Holmes (2020) has brought a new wave of readers to the original books, and this latest novel continues the chronicle of this capable, ingenious, and fiercely independent young woman. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Teenage sleuth Enola Holmes is back in a follow-up to earlier, middle-grade offerings. A self-described "Scientific Perditorian," grandiloquent Enola Holmes arrives at Baker Street to find her brother, Sherlock, nearly catatonic due to a fit of melancholia. However, when Miss Letitia Glover shows up, convinced that news of her twin sister Flossie's death cannot be true, the puzzle-loving Holmes siblings can't resist taking on the case. Flossie's husband Caddie Rudcliff, the Earl of Dunhynch, sent word that a fever had quickly overtaken Flossie and that she was immediately cremated without so much as a funeral--the same fate as his first wife, Myzella. As Sherlock and Enola investigate, readers are treated to an altogether delightfully engaging romp about Victorian London through visits to horrifying asylums and sprawling manor houses, the antics of a fractious horse, and lush sartorial descriptions. Women's agency--or the lack thereof--is brought to the forefront as Enola repeatedly encounters difficulty due to her gender. With nearly a decade having passed since Springer penned a case for Enola (with a graphic novel and a film being released in the interim), this is an excellent entry point for both established fans and newcomers, and it includes a helpful recap in a prologue from Sherlock's point of view. Enola's voice is wholly charming, prone to just the right bit of humorous snark and a penchant for lists. All characters are presumed White. A clever whodunit with broad appeal. (Mystery. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal la Holmes has reached a dTtente with her much older brothers, having amply proven that she can outwit them both and take care of herself. So when Tish Glover seeks to consult an indisposed Sherlock, Enola offers her services instead. Tish's identical twin, Flossie, has been reported dead by her aristocratic husband, but Tish refuses to believe it; rumors hint that the Earl of Dunhynch's first wife, also reported dead, was actually taken away in a "black barouche." Not knowing what that means, Enola decides to investigate by going to Dunhynch herself. Soon she, her aristocratic friend Tewky (Viscount Tewkesbury), Sherlock, Tish, and Dr. Watson all become involved in a harrowing adventure to expose the truth behind the black barouche—and Flossie's disappearance. Springer's historical worldbuilding is exe mplary. Evocative sensory descriptions paint vivid pictures of Enola's England, from the Earl's elegant manor to Bedlam's abject misery, and character interactions reflect Victorian treatment of women. Echoing Conan Doyle's prose style, the author's dry wit and sophisticated vocabulary ("scagliola," "crepuscular," "erinyes") will delight some readers, but may confound others. Moving at a speedy pace, the story offers more adventure than mystery, since Enola discovers the truth in the first half of the book. Although characters are distinctive, the adventurous and fashion-loving Enola has the most depth. Characters' ethnicities are generally not described. VERDICT Hand Enola's lively new adventure to fans of Sherlock Holmes, historical fiction, or Netflix's Enola Holmes.—Rebecca Moore, The Overlake Sch., Redmond, WA

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2290322 (Vol. 02) Enola Holmes and the Elegant Escapade (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Nancy Springer Enola Holmes, the much younger sister of Sherlock, is now living independently in London and working as a scientific perditorian (a finder of persons and things). But that is not the normal lot of young women in Victorian England. They are under the near absolute control of their nearest male relative until adulthood. Such is the case of Enola's friend, Lady Cecily Alastair. 978-1-250-82297-0 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs. Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic	1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Scientific Perditorian Holmes returns to crack her eighth case. Enola Holmes, a clever sesquipedalian sleuth (and younger sister to Sherlock and Mycroft), is terribly worried about her friend Lady Cecily Alistair. Life in 19th-century London affords 17-year-old Lady Cecily little autonomy, and she suffers under the hand of her abusive, social-climbing father, Lord Eustace, who left her with aunts who starve her and cut her off from all she loves. As Enola enlists to help Cecily, she realizes that Lord Eustace's mistreatment has had a terrible impact on her friend's psyche. In Cecily's fragile state, she goes missing: Will Enola be able to not only find Cecily, but also free her from her overbearing father? Those familiar with the series should be at home here with the fiercely feminist and sartorially inclined detective, and those new to her adventures are provided enough backstory to follow and enjoy her exploits. This installment, however, does not quite come together as a mystery. The plotting feels rushed and a bit underdeveloped; the characters, by contrast, are well fleshed out, making this feel more like a character study than a traditional whodunit. All quibbles aside, Enola is a wholly likable character, and more time with her is always welcome. All characters default to White. A cozy installment best suited to established series devotees. (Mystery. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2343617 (Vol. 03) Enola Holmes and the Mark of the Mongoose (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Nancy Springer In May of 1890, Enola Holmes is finally fully on her own and, no longer hiding from her older brothers Sherlock and Mycroft, attending classes and occasionally pursuing her chosen profession as a scientific perditorian, a finder of lost things and people. 978-1-250-88573-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs. Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic	1	$20.00

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 7 Up--This latest in the series continues the adventures of this intelligent, curious, witty, and engaging heroine. Enola Holmes, sister to the famous Sherlock and Mycroft, is ready to solve her first case under her own name. Unfortunately, her first potential client refuses to see her as the competent detective she is, and rudely declines her services in favor of her brother. Determined to work the case despite this misogyny, Enola embarks on the trail of a missing man identified as "Cotswold" who disappeared one evening while on a walk. Using her skills of observation and her ability to remake herself into any number of characters, Enola infiltrates the downstairs kitchens as easily as she partakes of tea in wealthy drawing rooms gathering needed information. The world of late Victorian London is captured in the many layers of grit and grime that reside one street over from the pomp and pageantry of great wealth. Springer expertly shows how society is muddling through turn-of-the-century transitions as gender roles are questioned, science behind the discovery of new things, and change is in the wind. Enola embraces it all, and through grit, determination, a sense of humor, irony, and sometimes sheer luck, she solves her case. While the series need not be read in order, it does have a story arc that will satisfy far more by doing so. Once readers have read the books, send them to the Netflix series for a visual take on the stories. VERDICT Recommend this book and series far and wide. Students who like steampunk, fashion, girl power, historical fiction, and light mystery will enjoy these well-written novels.--Connie Williams Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Epic! Originals: Creepy Cafetorium (Trade)

#2260276 (Vol. 01) Creepy Cafetorium (Hardcover (POB))

written by Colleen AF Venable

Welcome to the Cafetorium! It's a cafeteria, a gymnasium, and possibly a portal to a world where cube-shaped mashed potatoes are plotting against the almost-definitely-robotic lunch staff. Join Liz Dawson, Declan, Remy, and the rest of Newville Elementary as they learn that when you have plans in the Cafetorium, the Cafetorium has plans for you, too!

978-1-5248-7175-8 ©2021 6 x 9 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 2-4—Set in an ever-shifting Cafetorium (part cafeteria, auditorium, and gymnasium), these illustrated vignettes mix over-the-top wackiness with expressive illustrations. Gertie, the elderly custodian, tells stories about Newville Elementary, each set in the Cafetorium and focusing on a different student. Each of the six entries is edited by Venable and written by a different author, which keeps the overall tone consistent yet fresh. Though the book is described as "serving up spooky thrills and plenty of laughs," the spookiness component is debatable. The plots are too ridiculous and the humor too broad for the tales to seem genuinely eerie—in one story, Jell-O transforms into people, but no one notices except one shocked girl. In another, a boy gets an "excuse notepad," from a book fair and his new prize makes all his excuses come true. Still, the odd happenings and quirky characters give off a zany "Wayside School" vibe that kids will likely find funny. VERDICT Large font and evocative illustrations make this an inviting option for early readers ready to try chapter books.—Rachel Rosenberg, North Vancouver District Lib., BC

#2333451 (Vol. 02) Creepy Cafetorium: Six More Spooky, Slimy, Silly Short Stories (Hardcover (POB))

written by Colleen AF Venable

The Cafetorium is open for lunch-and play rehearsal, gym class, and unintentional interdimensional travel! Join comic book fan Dee Dee, master gamer Jackie, and the rest of the crew (including everyone's favorite goat) in this brand-new set of wonderfully weird tales.

978-1-5248-7867-2 ©2023 6 x 9 192 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Escape from a Video Game (Trade)

#2177851 (Vol. 01) Secret of Phantom Island (Hardcover (POB))

written by Dustin Brady

Cooper Hawke and the Secret of Phantom Island is the greatest video game nobody has ever played. The treasure-hunting adventure was supposed to set a new standard for gaming. Then, just one month before its release date, it fell off the face of the earth. Now, for the first time, you get a chance to play the mysterious game - from the inside.

978-1-5248-5887-2 ©2020 6-1/4 x 9-1/4 176 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 680

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$15.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8—The reader is the hero of the greatest video game never launched in this interactive title. Readers step into treasure-hunter Cooper Hawke's shoes to find the secret of Phantom Island. As a plane heads at full speed to crash land, do you choose a grenade launcher or a wingsuit? Plopped down in a world of killer bees and carnivorous plants, readers must solve puzzles, anagrams, and sudoku to move forward on the journey. Collect achievement letters along the way to unlock the secret message at the end of the book. Make the wrong choice, and you're sent back to checkpoints to start over. Face tests of intelligence and logic as you explore volcanoes, ancient temples, and laboratories (think Jurassic Park). Scan explorer William Shandling's diary for clues. Brady's sardonic wink to video game clichés includes second-person narration and obligatory signature weapons. When you die, you always get to start over. High stakes situations—monster chases in tunnels, giant gorillas choking tree houses—can make for random and awkward story lines, but readers will stick with it for the interactive problem-solving and breakneck pacing rather than the plot. Keep a pencil and paper handy to work out clues and keep track of page numbers. Leafing back and forth through the book may prove tricky, and the story could use reiteration of the central premise. VERDICT An engrossing ride for die-hard "Choose Your Own Adventure" fans and video game devotees.—Sarah Webb, City and Country Sch. Lib., NY

Ethan Marcus (Trade)

#2084014 (Vol. 02) Ethan Marcus Makes His Mark (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Michele Weber Hurwitz

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Ethan's laid back and takes things in stride. Erin's a little more intense and doesn't really like to go with the flow. So when these two polar opposites are invited to attend an invention/maker camp during winter break it seems almost impossible.

978-1-4814-8928-7 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 550

Reviews by: Booklist No, seventh-graders Ethan and Erin Marcus are not twins though they were born less than a year apart; in fact, they are exact opposites. As a result of last year's science fair win, they are recommended for a week-long select Zak Canzeri invention and marketing workshop over winter break. Their best friends, Brian and Zoe, can't attend, but Erin's archrival, Marlon, does. The day camp is glitter and competition, but Ethan suspects Zak is being less than forthright. Does he have enough information and time to ferret out Zak's intentions, while finessing his standing desk invention? And who will win the week's prize? The Marcus' team (yes, they joined forces) or Marlon? Hurwitz captures sibling rivalry with insight and humor; tweens will see themselves, their friends, and frenemies in the characters and identify with the middle-school life and drama. Voice is important here, adding dimension and raising tension as the narrative shifts between Erin's, Ethan's, and Marlon's perspectives. This entertaining sequel to Ethan Marcus Stands Up (2017) begs for a comfy reading corner where laughs are permitted.--J. B. Petty Copyright 2018 Booklist

Evers (Trade)

#2349051 (Vol. 01) Forever Twelve (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stacy McAnulty

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

WHAT IF YOU COULD LIVE FOREVER? The secret lies with a group of kids who call themselves the Evers. They claim to have been alive for hundreds of years. They hide among the rest of the students, their immortality a complete secret...until now.

978-0-593-42962-4 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 600

Reviews by: Booklist Indie best-seller McAnulty presents another middle-grade adventure about gifted students, this time featuring secrets, lies, and the importance of memory. Goal-oriented Ivy is determined to excel at any cost at her new boarding school. But when her strange roommate, Abigail, insists that she and her friends, "the Evers," are centuries old—and that Ivy is the key to finding their missing companion—Ivy is caught up in the mystery, despite inner qualms and unreliable clues from her grandmother's compromised memory. Meanwhile, Ronan, the underachiever from Ivy's old school, struggles to cope with newly inherited psychic powers. Underdeveloped character motivations make it hard to connect to the ensemble cast, and the stakes of the conflict are undercut by a lack of on-page consequences; much of the lore feels like set dressing rather than impacting the plot in a meaningful way. However, entertaining touches like Ronan's attempts to subvert his psychic visions add levity. This book will appeal to fans of multiple perspectives and American history (which the Evers were present to witness). A cliff-hanger ending foretells a sequel.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews ear-old in a 12-year-old's body meet at boarding school and work to solve a disappearance. Talented, determined Ivy is driven to succeed by a deathbed promise to her mother, who died of cancer; she sees boarding school as the first step on her path to becoming a Supreme Court justice like Ruth Bader Ginsburg. Ronan wants to escape his hometown, where everyone knows that his mother is a psychic, but he can't escape the abilities he's inherited. Abigail is an Ever: forever 12 after being saved (or cursed) following a near-death experience. Their lives intersect as students at West Archer Academy, and the story unfolds in short, tightly paced chapters that switch between Ivy's, Ronan's, and Abigail's third-person perspectives. Abigail befriends roommate Ivy immediately, partly because she looks like her best friend, Grace, who's been missing since 1944. Abigail wants Ivy's assistance in investigating what happened to Grace after her disappearance from West Archer. Ivy reluctantly agrees to help Abigail, and they make a surprising discovery. But Este, the oldest Ever of all, is protective of the Ever family and wants to keep Ivy out, ultimately leading to a clash and a cliffhanger ending that sets things up for a sequel. An intriguing premise, complex characters, and a compelling mystery make for a series opener that will leave readers desperate for the next entry. Main characters are cued white. Fantastic. (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two seemingly ordinary tweens are suddenly thrust into a chaotic adventure in this inviting mystery by McNulty (Millionaires for the Month). Twelve-year-old classmates Ronan Haywood and Ivy Stewart are the only two students in their middle school who have been selected to transfer to prestigious West Archer Academy, an exclusive North Carolina boarding school for gifted kids. As the duo acclimate to their new environment, they develop a begrudging yet steadfast friendship that helps them weather anticipated challenges such as increased workload, imposter syndrome, and homesickness. But nothing could have prepared Ronan and Ivy for the realization that Ronan has begun developing psychic powers, or that Ivy's roommate Abigail is both immortal and part of a secret society of kids called Evers who've been alive for centuries. Ronan, Ivy, and Abigail's alternating POVs provide multifaceted glimpses into the ever-widening scope of West Archer Academy's secrets. The appealing boarding school setting, cliffhanger ending, and thematic focus on how to cultivate strong, long-lasting friendships are sure to invest readers in this paranormal series opener. Main characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Lori Kilkelly, LK Literary. (Oct.)

Explorer Academy (Trade)

#2293314 (Vol. 07) Forbidden Island (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Trudi Trueit

Amid assignments that take the Explorer Academy recruits from the iceberg-filled waters of Antarctica to the bone-dry deserts of Argentina, Cruz Coronado is scrambling to complete the last piece of the cipher. With Nebula agents and the elusive explorer spy still out there, his opportunity to recover his mother's world-changing formula is slipping away. But as Cruz has learned from his time aboard Orion, true explorers must never give up.

978-1-4263-7339-8 ©2022 6 x 9 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

#2071198 (Vol. 01) Nebula Secret (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Trudi Trueit

Cruz leaves his tranquil home in Hawaii to join 23 talented kids from around the globe to train at the Explorer Academy with the world's leading scientists to become the next generation of great explorers.

978-1-4263-3159-6 ©2018 6 x 9 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 8.0 GR Lvl X Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist The first fiction series from National Geographic's new Under the Stars imprint features Cruz Coronado, 12, who's selected to attend the elite Explorer Academy in D.C. in this action-packed illustrated adventure. Cruz and 23 other kids from around the world are training to become explorers aboard the academy's flagship, which travels around the globe doing research. As if the training—and having an aunt on the faculty—isn't hard enough, a scarred man in snakeskin boots is stalking Cruz. He warns Cruz to leave or Nebula will kill him like they did Cruz's mother, who died mysteriously in the academy's synthesis lab when Cruz was five. Who or what is Nebula? Can the codes that Cruz loves to decipher help him solve his mother's death? The students' training includes lessons on cool technologies available now or in the near future, plausibly incorporated into the plot. Not all the characters are fleshed out, but there's potential to learn more about them in future installments. Sure to appeal to kids who love code cracking and mysteries with cutting-edge technology.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Following his deceased scientist mother's legacy, Cruz Coronado has been selected to attend the Explorer Academy, a school that prepares a diverse group of the brightest young budding scientists "To discover. To innovate. To protect." Prior to his departure for the academy, while taking one last surf at his favorite Kauai beach, someone tries to pull him under and then mysteriously disappears. His new roommate also notices that a strange man is following Cruz. Strange occurrences arise, the most dangerous when the students are almost killed during a training simulation. Cruz's pursuer eventually reveals himself, warning him that members of the nefarious Nebula are out to get him due to a secret project his mother had been working on. A cryptic message she left behind may provide a clue to her death—and may save his life. In the meantime, Cruz and his fellow academy recruits learn to navigate secret holographic technology called the CAVE, which prepares them for the terrain they will explore in the real world. This series opener from a new imprint of National Geographic is a fully packed high-tech adventure that offers both cool, educational facts about the planet and a diverse cast of fun characters (Cruz is Mexican-American). The plot, with preteens in a life-threatening mystery, is not new. The package is glitzy enough, with full-color illustrations throughout, that action-craving readers may not mind. "The Truth Behind the Fiction" concluding backmatter grounds the adventure. Comfortable formula fiction with a scientific twist. (Science fiction. 8-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After 12-year-old Cruz Coronado is invited to attend the prestigious Explorer Academy in Washington, D.C., he leaves his Hawaii home to join fellow students from around the world who are training to become the next generation of conservationists, scientists, explorers, and more. It appears that someone is determined to obstruct Cruz's efforts, however (he is grabbed by a diver while surfing, then followed in an airport), and he soon suspects that the sabotage may be tied to his mother's mysterious death, years earlier. Cruz must discover the truth behind these events before his time at the Academy is cut short. While the story line by Trueit (The Sister Solution) focuses on the mystery, the book's real strength rests in its adventure, as its heroes, including Cruz's new friends, Emmett Lu and Sailor York, tackle puzzles and simulated missions as part of the educational process. Maps, letters, and puzzles bring the exploration to life, and back matter explores the "Truth behind the Fiction," such as notable real-life National Geographic explorers and relevant science. This exciting series opener introduces young readers to the joys of science and nature. Ages 8-12. Agent: Rosemary Stimola, Stimola Literary Studio. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—This new National Geographic series introduces 12-year-old Cruz, who lives in Hawaii with his dad and has been accepted into the elite Explorer Academy in Washington, DC. It's where his mother, a scientist, was killed in a lab accident, and his aunt, an anthropologist, is still a teacher. He and his classmates are set to embark on an expedition aboard the ship Polaris, but only after training at this high-tech Hogwarts-like academy using things like Augmented Reality Challenges and mind-control cameras. In addition to the pressure of academics, Cruz has acquired a mysterious stalker in cowboy boots and learned that his mother's death may not have been an accident after all. When he is falsely accused of cheating and immediately expelled, he must rely on family and friends to clear his name and track down his mother's hidden journal. An afterword explains "The Truth Behind the Story" and directs readers to the online Explorer Academy. VERDICT Nonstop action and a mix of full-color photographs and drawings throughout make this appealing to aspiring explorers and reluctant readers alike, and the cliffhanger ending ensures they'll be coming back for more.—Laurie Slagenwhite Walters, Brighton District Library, Brighton, MI

#2093861 (Vol. 02) Falcon's Feather (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Trudi Trueit

It's an adventure of a lifetime when Cruz Coronado sets sail for the shores of Iceland and Norway aboard the Explorer Academy ship to continue his studies at sea. But, things take a turn while exploring the icy north, when he embarks on a dangerous mission to uncover the first piece of an important puzzle his mother left behind.

978-1-4263-3304-0 ©2019 6-1/4 x 9-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0 GR Lvl X Lexile 690

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve-year-old Cruz Coronado's adventures as part of a group of student explorers continues in book two of the Explorer Academy series (The Nebula Secret, 2018). They find themselves traveling by ship, leaving Maryland to traverse through Nova Scotia, Iceland, and Norway's Svalbard Global Seed Vault. In Canada's Bay of Fundy, they rescue North Atlantic right whales entangled in fishing netting. Cruz communicates with the whales using a UCC (Universal Cetacean Communicator) that the female tech-lab chief developed. Cruz, who received a threatening anonymous note from someone on board, isn't totally surprised when someone tampers with the UCC helmet and he almost dies. He suspects pharmaceutical company Nebula is responsible: both he and Nebula are after marble fragments, left by Cruz's deceased mother, which contain a formula that Nebula will do anything; even kill; to obtain. This exciting, fast-paced, far-flung story is full of science facts and James Bond: like gadgets, accompanied by colored illustrations. The ending is guaranteed to keep readers eager for the next series installment.

Reviews by: ForeWord Magazine Cryptic puzzles, heart-pounding action, and international intrigue power this second book in Trudi Trueit's Explorer Academy series, The Falcon's Feather.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Cruz Coronado is still feeling on edge after the attack on his life in series opener The Nebula Secret (2018) as the Explorer Academy sets off on the research vessel Orion for the next phase of its educational journey. Before Cruz's scientist mother's mysterious death, she hid the clues to a secret formula with world-changing healing potential in a holo-journal. Cruz and his academy friend and roommate, Emmett Lu, keep the secret of the journal close even as they discover that someone aboard the Orion is trying to steal it. Lani Kealoha, Cruz's childhood friend, video-calls Cruz and crew regularly from Hawaii, using her decoding skills to help decipher the journal's holographic clues. While dodging his assassins, Cruz pursues his studies, leading Team Cousteau to Norway, where the author infuses cool, scientific facts about the endangered North Atlantic right whale and the Svalbard Global Seed Vault into the narrative. The educational component of this story takes readers outside of the book via a link to an interactive companion website. Like its predecessor, this book is chock-full of National Geographic adventure interlaced with techno-future gadgets the academy provides its diverse young students (cued by naming convention). However, the author basically follows the same storyline rubric as the first book, so if readers aren't hooked by the science, there's little else for them. A formulaic second installment that takes readers around the globe but doesn't push the story forward. (Science fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2118181 (Vol. 03) Double Helix (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Trudi Trueit

The adventure continues for Cruz, Emmett, Sailor, and Bryndis as they continue their studies at sea and travel to exotic locations around the world. A mysterious person alerts Cruz to impending danger while he and a few trusted pals explore ancient ruins in Petra, Jordan, and search for another piece of the puzzle his mother left behind.

978-1-4263-3458-0 ©2019 6-1/4 x 10-1/2 216 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 9.0 GR Lvl R Lexile 690

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

#2155920 (Vol. 04) Star Dunes (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Trudi Trueit

Cruz, Sailor, Emmett, and the gang are on their way to Africa when Nebula misses their intended target and someone close to Cruz ends up on the brink of death. Secrets creep out from the shadows and leave Cruz with more questions than answers.

978-1-4263-3681-2 ©2020 6 x 9 216 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 700

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

#2222739 (Vol. 05) Tiger's Nest (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Trudi Trueit

On an island nation in the Indian Ocean, the explorers venture through a vast underwater world and take part in a friendly robotics competition. But the tides of good fortune change quickly. Suddenly, Team Cousteau jumps into action to rescue a faculty member from the brink of death. Meanwhile, the team follows the Cruz's mother's clues to a magnificent tomb and center of spirituality precariously perched on the side of a cliff. There, Cruz is confronted by a familiar foe who's determined to stop him from completing his most important mission of all: Retrieving the final pieces of his mother's cipher. In this life-or-death showdown, Cruz witnesses the ultimate sacrifice and uncovers a hidden message that makes him question his own mortality.

978-1-4263-3862-5 ©2021 6-1/2 x 9-1/2 216 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 670

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

#2254465 (Vol. 06) Dragon's Blood (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Trudi Trueit

Still reeling from the life-changing discovery he found buried in the mysterious archive, Cruz Coronado grapples with an important secret as the gang heads to China in search of the second-to-last piece of the cipher. Under the watchful eye of a new adviser, life on the ship returns to almost normal...Almost.

978-1-4263-7166-0 ©2021 6 x 9 216 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

F.A.R.T. Diaries (Trade)

#2278135 F.A.R.T.: Top Secret! No Kids Allowed! (Hardcover (POB))

written by Peter Bakalian

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$13.99

The Ultimate Guide to Hacking Your Kids was written by an organization called F.A.R.T. (Families Against Rotten Teens), a secret society of grizzled parents whose origins date back to antiquity. FP is determined to get to the bottom of this, but when he begins investigating F.A.R.T., the manual goes missing, his parents deny knowing anything about any kind of book, and-maybe strangest of all-kids at school start listening to their parents and teachers. What kid would ever do that?

978-1-5344-3619-0 ©2022 6 x 8 144 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 610

#2329660 F. A. R. T. Attack!: Kids Strike Back (Hardcover (POB))
written by Peter Bakalian

Furious Popcorn and his best friends, the Only Onlys, are about to blow the cover of the dangerous and dastardly F.A.R.T. (Families Against Rotten Teens) by exposing their bizarre Parenting Manual. But then Furious Popcorn discovers that one of the Onlys-Apricot-is under F.A.R.T.'s control and he worries they've used their diabolical Brain Modem on her! Can Furious Popcorn save Apricot from becoming a zombie? And can he stop F.A.R.T. from unleashing the Brain Modem on the rest of the planet?

978-1-5344-5183-4 ©2023 6 x 8 160 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $13.99

Factory (Trade)

#2293338 (Vol. 01) Undercover Latina (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Aya De Leon

Fourteen-year-old Andrea Hernandez-Baldoquin hails from a family of spies working for the Factory, an international organization dedicated to protecting people of color. For her first solo mission, Andrea straightens her hair and goes undercover as Andrea Burke, a white girl, to befriend the estranged son of a dangerous white supremacist.

978-1-5362-2374-3 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
 Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile HL 630

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-9 This upper-middle-grade debut is a fast-paced spy novel that weaves difficult issues like race, identity, and belonging into a fun, engaging, and geeky adventure. Fourteen-year-old Andréa Hernández-Baldoquín and her family are members of the Factory, an international spy organization founded to protect people of color. For her first mission as lead agent, Andréa must go undercover to befriend the estranged, high school-age son of a white-supremacist terrorist. The catch? She'll have to become "Andrea Burke" and pass as a white girl. Everything from her hair to the way she pronounces her name must be sacrificed for the mission. The operation (and her feelings on identity) becomes even more complicated when she finds herself falling for her target's Latine best friend. Undercover Latina takes the fantastical idea of a teenage spy and grounds it in the emotions and issues faced by contemporary teens. Its social commentary feels neither heavy handed nor patronizing to younger readers, and its honest, earnest conversations about tough topics make excellent jumping-off points for class discussions. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews "This fast-paced adventure, de León's first for younger readers, takes audiences on the ride of a lifetime. Andréa spotlights racism, discovers friendship (after years of home schooling and constantly moving), develops her first crush, and deeply explores what it means to be Latine and a person of color. Social criticism is woven into a fun read centered on kids of color; the narrative is accessible and engaging, never shying away from difficult conversations about race and privilege or the many forms White supremacy can take. The cast of characters is rounded and three-dimensional, making Andréa's story all the more believable. An engaging, insightful adventure with a heartfelt conclusion."

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Andrea Hernandez-Baldoquin, 14, is on her first lead mission as a full agent of the Factory, a government-unaffiliated "international intelligence organization that serves people of color," for which she, her Mexican father, Puerto Rican mother, and brother are all spies. Undercover in Carson, Ariz., Andrea, passing as white "ANN-drea" with only her mother as backup, must befriend Kyle

Summer, the estranged son of a white supremacist threatening a "localized Armageddon." Getting close to Kyle means not only withstanding inclusion in a clique of classmates who call themselves "First Class," but also learning the ins and outs of Kyle's favorite fantasy card game and spending time with his cute Latino best friend, Ramon Santiago. As reinforcements arrive in the form of a second teenage agent, Andrea struggles to juggle the case, her budding feelings for Ramon, and maintaining her cover as white. Portraying Andrea as a spy skilled in espionage, quick problem-solving, and making visual connections, De Leon (A Spy in the Struggle, for adults) adeptly interrogates themes of ageism, colorism, institutional racism, and sexism, layering them with a thrilling tale of a teenage girl. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Jenni Ferrari-Adler, Union Literary. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Connection "The pace moves quickly as characters build relationships amid the action...With strong male and female characters, suspense, and gaming, this novel is sure to appeal."

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Fourteen-year-old AndrTa Hernandez-Baldoqufn comes from a family of spies; they work for The Factory, an international organization that serves people of color. AndrTa goes undercover posing as a white teenager in Arizona, trying to infiltrate the high school and befriend Kyle, whose estranged father might be a dangerous white supremacist. With her mother, they become Andrea and Barbara Burke as they assimilate into the community. AndrTa finds out that her target, Kyle, is an avid player of an online fantasy card game called Tringulo, and she learns how to play to befriend him. Things get tangled up when she develops feelings for Kyle's Latinx friend, Ram=n, but she can't divulge her own Latinx heritage. As a white girl, AndrTa observes racism toward the Latinx community from a new perspective and grapples with her hidden identity. Trying not to blow her cover when a potential deadly threat is unearthed, AndrTa travels with Kyle to the San Diego ComicCon as characters from Tringulo. An author of spy novels for adults, de Leon tries her hand at her first foray into fiction for younger readers, and she has created a fast-paced, resonant story that touches on inter- and intra-community discrimination. VERDICT A strong selection for gamers and middle graders who enjoy action-packed narratives. With broad appeal to fans of spy novels, this title will engage tweens while offering a thoughtful conversation-starter. Highly recommended.—Michele Shaw

#2349018 (Vol. 02) Untraceable (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Aya De Leon

Fifteen-year-old Amani Kendall's biggest problem is being the only plus-size Black girl at a white private school-until her house burns down and her family is unexpectedly on the run. Suddenly, she's reeling from the news that her formerly boring mom is being pursued by an ex-boyfriend turned stalker, and her scientist dad has gone MIA. How much danger is their family really in, and how untraceable are they trying to be?

978-1-5362-2375-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In this YA companion to middle-grade thriller Undercover Latina (2022), a Los Angeles teen's family tries to escape her mother's dangerous ex. Fifteen-year-old Amani Kendall goes from practicing roller skating for an upcoming birthday party one day to starting over in a different school with a cover story and a fake name the next. Amani never fit in at elite, STEM-focused Penfield Academy as a "plus-size Black girl who wore African braids...because her mother wouldn't let her flat-iron her hair." But after Amani encounters a creepy man in her backyard and makes a police report (to her mother's great displeasure), everything changes. Her mom picks her up early from school, informing her that their house was burned down, possibly by a stalker ex-boyfriend. Amani's dad, a climate-change researcher, has been away working in the field for months. Amani and her mom take shelter with Sister Niema, who ran the Afrocentric weekend school for girls Amani once attended. Now going by Imani Kennedy, she starts over--with some negative preconceptions about her new classmates--at a public school that's dramatically different from her old one. But she can't help feeling like her mom is hiding something. This body-positive story has an exciting premise and addresses many relevant social issues. Unfortunately, the slow pace makes it difficult to sustain readers' interest, and the book juggles a number of plotlines that don't deliver on their promise. Underwhelming. (Fiction. 12-16) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 6 Up--Fifteen-year-old Amani Kendall receives the shock of her life when she discovers her parents are secret undercover agents of the Factory--an international organization of spies protecting people of color. She and her Mom are forced to move suddenly when their cover is blown, and they settle with a family friend, Sister Niema. Amani, using the name Imani, struggles to adapt to the abrupt cultural differences in being surrounded by Black students at her new public school in contrast to her former all-white elite private school. Eventually meeting up with her missing father, the family must embark on a dangerous journey that forces Amani to make some tough decisions. Amani's voice rings true as a plus-size Black adolescent struggling to accept her own beauty in a world where skinny and white represent the ideal. She is her own worst critic; young readers will identify with her anxieties. Amani's thought processes as she puts two and two together about her parents steadily builds the suspense through the narrative. There are multiple social issues covered, such as abortion and racism. The plot is extremely busy, and it may be hard for readers to keep up with the rapid fire action. This is a prequel companion to the author's Undercover. VERDICT A complex Black girl sleuth uncovers a web of lies in this spy thriller. Purchase where the genre is popular.--Julie Shatterly Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Fairy Books (Trade)

#2152409 Green Fairy Book: Complete and Unabridged (Hardcover (POB))

written by Andrew Lang

Some of the famous stories included are The Three Little Pigs, The Three Bears, The Blue Bird, The Magic Swan, The Enchanted Ring, The Twelve Huntsmen and many more!

978-1-63158-563-0 ©2020 6-1/2 x 8-1/4 436 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.99

#2163035 Gray Fairy Book: Complete and Unabridged (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Andrew Lang

The Gray Fairy Book has been admired time and time again, enchanting readers with its carefully crafted prose and eclectic assortment of fairy tales. Originally published in 1900, this collection of celebrated tales has stood the test of time.

978-1-63158-569-2 ©2020 6-1/2 x 8-1/4 360 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.99

Far Flung Falls (Trade)

#2281062 Molly and the Machine (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Erik Jon Slingerup

It's the summer of 1983, and one by one, the kids of Far Flung Falls are disappearing. With sheer drop-offs at every turn, the woods behind Molly McQuirter's house have always been a dangerous place—even before something big and metal started lurking in them. Finding the robot culprit only creates more questions, however, and when the unlikely mastermind behind the robot is uncovered, a new story begins to unfold—one of lost love, family bonds, and some seriously weird science.

978-1-5344-9799-3 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 760

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist for Molly since her mother's death. Her father, depressed and listless, expects her to look after Wally, her younger brother. One day, she's entertaining him with her secret project—a large Rube Goldberg-inspired catapult—when a 10-story-tall robot arrives, picks up Wally, and deposits him in its mouth. Molly and her classmates Arvin and Leonard chase the metallic monster on their bikes through the woods and bravely follow Wally into the robot, hoping to rescue him. The pace shifts at intervals throughout the book; like a roller coaster, the narrative starts off slowly as Slingerup introduces Molly, her family, and the boys, but the story speeds up considerably when the kidnapping of Wally sends Molly, her friends, and her beloved but impulsive great uncle hurtling headlong into action. Set in southern Ohio during the 1980s, the story includes a number of cultural references from the period. While the book's humor relies heavily on Wally's nose picking, robot fans looking for action stories will find plenty to entertain them in Slingerup's first novel. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Summer vacation 1983 is about to get a lot more exciting in Far Flung Falls, Ohio. Ever since her mom ran off with a mullet-haired, van-driving stranger, 11-year-old Molly McQuirter's depressed dad spends his time eating junk food and watching TV, leaving her to look after her nose-picking 8 1/2-year-old brother, Wally. Which is exactly how she doesn't want to spend her summer. Tinkering and inventing run in her family's blood, and when Wally won't leave her backyard Rube Goldberg machine alone, Molly banishes him to the wide-open space of the yard, where he is spotted by a giant robot and snatched up. Hopping on her tricked-out bike, Pink Lightning, she and her four-legged friends—dog Darryl, cat Crank, and chameleon Don Carlos—set off to rescue Wally. They are soon joined by neighborhood kids Arvin and Leonard and Molly's bootlegging, armadillo-owning, heavy metal-playing, motorcycle-riding Great-Uncle Clovis. Their adventures are filled with obstacles, but Molly brings all of her powers of invention and ingenuity to the rescue mission. The 1980s slang and pop-culture references keep readers firmly planted in the decade, and, as expected from the Cold War-era setting, fear of the Soviet Union is a recurring theme. The amusing tone and toilet humor sprinkled throughout will appeal to young readers. The characters present as White. A delightful adventure with a nostalgic twist. (Adventure. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In his middle grade debut, Slangerup delivers a STEM-themed romp bursting with hand-built tech and 1980s nostalgia. In 1983, 11-year-old inventor Molly McQuirter expects to spend a lonely, rural Ohio summer tinkering with her massive Rube Goldberg machine and reluctantly caring for her nose-picking younger brother, Wally, whom she blames for their mother's leaving, while the "dad-shaped shell" of her father wallows in front of the television. But when a giant robot abducts Wally from their backyard, Molly loads her bike with fluffernutter sandwiches, gadgetry, and assorted family pets to hunt what she suspects is a Soviet invention. Joined by an arcade-whiz schoolmate and her idiosyncratic great-uncle, whose inventions look "like something out of an old, low-budget sci-fi movie," Molly traverses the hazardous woods to rescue Wally. While the omniscient narration focuses primarily on Molly, Slangerup complicates the story and heightens comedy by occasionally following other perspectives, including the family dog's. On-the-nose emotional revelations limit the novel's thematic resonance, but slapstick and toilet humor drive a riotous adventure that's well calibrated to the audience's sensibilities. Characters cue as white; an author's note concludes. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Elizabeth Rudnick, Mackenzie Wolf. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—The summer after fourth grade is not shaping up to be a very good one for Molly McQuirter. Her dad has completely turned into a couch potato and constantly expects her to occupy her annoying younger brother Wally, even when she has amazing things planned such as testing her Rube Goldberg machine. Things take a serious twist when a giant robot comes along and swallows Wally up. Something in Molly snaps as she takes off on her souped-up pink bicycle, her prized possession, and the only nice thing she has, to get him back. She faces danger at every turn and must use her considerable ingenuity to face challenges and manage the menagerie of pets and people drawn to her that want to help along the way. Chapters are told from various points of view, although most focus on Molly. The characters, kids and adults alike, are often dealing with the pain of being let down or left by someone who was supposed to care for them. Molly is cued as white. VERDICT A plot-driven, farfetched, romp with a dose of fun 1980s nostalgia that will appeal to readers who want to go along for the ride.—Erin Wyatt

#2325304 (Vol. 02) Molly and the Mutants (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Erik Jon Slangerup

Molly and her friends take on giant mutant creatures in this second book in the hilarious and poignant Far Flung Falls middle grade sci-fi series set in 1980s Ohio--perfect for fans of Stuart Gibbs and James Ponti! The mystery of the giant brother-stealing robot may have been solved, but a new set of troubles for Molly and her friends has just begun. Strange things are happening once again in Far Flung Falls. Where have all the pets gone? And who--or what--is behind the disappearances?
 978-1-5344-9802-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Farah Rocks (Stone Arch Books)

#2169736 Farah Rocks Summer Break (Library Binding)
written by Susan Muaddi Darraj

It's summer break, and Farah is eager to attend an enrichment camp at her new school. But with car trouble and other family expenses, Farah's parents won't be able to pay for the camp this year. Taking matters into her own hands, Farah takes various odd jobs, including selling items at a yard sale, mowing neighbors' lawns, and finally starting her own tutoring business. When Farah discovers that someone is sabotaging her business by taking down her fliers, she's shocked. Can Farah find the culprit, continue her business success, and earn enough money in time to go to the camp of her dreams?
 978-1-4965-8340-6 ©2021 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 144 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 610

Quantity 1
Unit Price $15.95

#222238 Farah Rocks New Beginnings (Library Binding)
written by Susan Muaddi Darraj

Farah Hajjar is just starting sixth grade at the Magnet Academy when something terrible happens-her house burns down. Even worse, the house fire may be her fault.

Quantity 1
Unit Price $15.95

When her family moves to temporary housing, Farah feels the guilt piling up. Luckily Farah finds comfort in writing, and she channels her energy into starting a creative writing club at her new school. But can Farah convince her new science-focused school to support it?

978-1-4965-8341-3 ©2021 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 144 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690

#2246889 Farah Rocks Florida (Library Binding)
written by Susan Muaddi Darraj

When her little brother faces a lengthy stay in the hospital, Farah is sent visit her grandmother in Florida. Sitti Fayrouz doesn't speak much English, and she has lots of rules. She thinks rocks are dirty, that towels need to hang a certain way, and that hummus must be scooped from the side of the plate. Even worse, Farah managed to make an enemy out of one of her grandmother's neighbors-before she even arrived in Florida! Will Farah find a way to have fun being the only kid in a retirement community, or will she spend the trip worrying about her brother and counting the days until she can go home? Readers will love the fourth book in this series about a strong Palestinian-American girl.

978-1-4965-8342-0 ©2022 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 144 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 730

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$15.95

Fearless (Trade)

#2220933 (Vol. 01) Fearless (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Mandy Gonzalez

The Ethel Merman Theater is cursed. No one is sure how or why, but the evidence speaks for itself. Show after show has flopped and the theater is about to close. Enter twelve-year-old Monica Garcia, who has been cast to star in a Broadway musical revival of The Goonies, the theater's last chance to produce a hit before it shuts its doors for good.

978-1-5344-6895-5 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Gonzalez, a Broadway star and creator of #FearlessSquad, a group fostering inclusivity, aspiration, and camaraderie, brings drama, mystery, and more in her thrilling love letter to Broadway theater. Pulling from her own experiences, she offers here an adventure in which Monica, a young Latinx kid with a passion for singing, gets a call to be the understudy for one of the leads in Our Time. When she arrives in New York City, she is dazzled, right up until she learns about the curse on the theater where she's working. After receiving an odd key and some cryptic messages, she embarks on a journey to break the curse on the theater forever. More than just a mystery, this is about all the magic of theater, written by someone with a deep appreciate for the art form. Readers will learn about different shows and people, all the while easily relating to the main characters, who are vividly fleshed out on the page. The kids, especially Monica, are easy to root for, and the author delivers a very satisfying ending.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Following a Broadway dream takes a budding actress on an unforgettable adventure. Middle school student Monica Garcia is thrilled to learn that she's been cast as an understudy in a real Broadway musical. She travels from California to New York City with her abuelita to begin rehearsals for a new show at the legendary but financially failing Ethel Merman Theater. Monica learns to her surprise that due to unfortunate events she will be stepping into the lead role. As practice gets underway, Monica is unsure what to think of the rumblings from the cast and crew about a curse and possible haunting of the theater. When strange and unexplainable occurrences pull Monica and the other young actors, now dear friends, deeper into the mystery of the cursed theater, Monica finds that a tale from her family history might help point the way to turning things around. Though the storyline follows a familiar Scooby-Doo-type arc, the quirky theater setting and likable characters make for an engaging read. Penned by someone who is herself a Broadway star of such mega-hits as Wicked and Hamilton, the story is peppered with authentic theater lingo and interesting backstage tidbits. Monica and her family have Mexican ancestry. Will hit all the high notes for theater and mystery fans alike. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2275354 (Vol. 02) Boulevard of Dreams (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mandy Gonzalez

Twelve-year-old Relly can't wait for his beloved grandfather to finally see him on stage! But right before their night show, a member of the Squad loses their phone down an open manhole. With a series of clues, Relly discovers that his grandfather was a popular tap dancer, working the nightclub circuit and pursuing his dream of performing—something he's been discouraging Relly from doing lately. Perhaps this accidental fall into a different time wasn't so accidental after all. Can Relly help his grandfather and make it back in time for places in the show?

978-1-5344-6898-6 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 610

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

#2319518 (Vol. 03) In the Mix (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mandy Gonzalez

Twelve-year-old Hudson Patel has two great loves: Broadway and baking! In addition to giving his all to his role in the hit show Our Time, Hudson takes pride in keeping his castmates and fellow Fearless Squad members well-fed with all the delicious treats he creates.

978-1-6659-2201-2 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

#2374293 (Vol. 04) Takeover (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mandy Gonzalez

April feels on top of the world, but her brother isn't so thrilled about her attention always being glued to a screen. His warnings don't bother April. What's wrong with wanting more followers and likes? When meet and greet day arrives, the Squad helps make the event special. All goes without a hitch until April attempts to log into her social media—it's gone. Her previous posts have been erased, and a new one that April didn't make pops up. It's even worse than she thought—she's been hacked.

978-1-6659-2204-3 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Fifth Hero (Trade)

#2309012 (Vol. 01) Race to Erase (Hardcover (POB))

written by Bill Doyle

The Calamity Corporation is determined to end life on Earth as we know it. The company has built hotels that orbit Earth and small cities on the moon and has plans to move the human population to Mars. The sinister corporation is determined to ruin Earth so that people have no choice but to leave it. Not so fast! Four kids who secretly possess the powers of land, air, sea, and creatures are about to change the course of history. These kids may not be the likeliest of heroes, but they are determined to stop Calamity Corporation from destroying Earth. And they have a secret weapon: a fifth

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$13.99

hero. YOU!
978-0-593-48637-5 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The reader joins four young climate heroes to help save planet Earth in this interactive, near-future adventure story. Everyone knows that Earth is old and dangerous, and it's time for humans to get off the planet. At least, that's the message that the Calamity Corporation has been touting. When 11-year-old Jarrett attends a Climate Club meeting at the home of his classmate Lina, whose parents run the Calamity Corporation, everything goes haywire. Upon touching special spheres secretly created to destroy Earth, Jarrett and fellow club members Malik, Agnes, and Freya are imbued with powers relating to animals, water, land, and air. As they go on the run from evil robots, the heroes require assistance to save themselves and the planet. At three points in the book the reader is required to make a decision that will either end the journey or propel the adventure forward. The nonstop action is engaging, but these interactive elements detract more than add to the story, even if they do fit with the overall theme of how to be environmentally conscious. This tale kicks off a new series, and the ending provides only the barest amount of satisfying closure, leaving much open for future installments. Though characters' races and ethnicities aren't described, the book cover depicts one character as brown-skinned; the others are light-skinned or tan-skinned. It's hinted that Jarrett and Malik's relationship is more than just a friendship. Full of fun action but not entirely rewarding. (fact files about kids finding ways to help the environment) (Science fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2364988 (Vol. 02) Escape Plastic Island (Hardcover (POB))
written by Bill Doyle

The Calamity Corporation is determined to destroy Earth. Their latest plot leaves "ugly" animals in the cold-literally. Any less-than-cute critter will be frozen and blasted into space. Luckily, five climate heroes have the skills to save the day. Make three decisions in this interactive adventure to help the heroes put the Calamity Corporation on ice. Choose incorrectly and it's game over. But choose wisely, and you might save the planet-and the story!

978-0-593-48641-2 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.99

Finally Seen (Trade)

#2365480 (Vol. 02) Finally Heard (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kelly Yang

When ten-year-old Lina Gao sees her mom's video on social media take off, she's captivated by the potential to be seen and heard! Maybe online she can finally find the confidence she craves. Whereas in real life she's growing so fast, she feels like microwave popcorn, bursting out of her skin!

978-1-6659-4793-0 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist In this sequel to Finally Seen (2023), Lina becomes self-conscious when she realizes that she's showing signs of puberty earlier than her fifth-grade classmates. Her mother encourages her to become active on social media platforms, and to some extent, Lina is successful. But when she learns that some of her schoolmates are criticizing others online, and their personal attacks become increasingly hurtful, she eventually unleashes her pent-up anger online. Later, she realizes that she can't undo the damage she's done. After she reflects on her actions and candidly expresses her feelings to those she has hurt, help arrives swiftly, sometimes from unexpected sources. Yang writes well, but in this novel, she also has a practical purpose, as explained in the informative author's note about her experiences as a parent researching social media and dealing with its consequences. While some readers will find the didacticism heavy-handed, others might consider that aspect of the narrative secondary to the importance of making the downside of social media apparent to middle-grade readers and dissuading them from using it.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In this cautionary tale, the sequel to Finally Seen (rev. 1/23), the perks and perils of social media play a pivotal -- and educational -- role. The Gaos still struggle with bills, and Lina's mom joins Instagram to sell more bath bombs. Fifth grader Lina gets her first smartphone, and while technology offers some positives (video-chatting with her Beijing grandma, promoting her neighbors' small businesses), they are outweighed by the negatives. She envies her classmates' fancy homes, worries about her physical appearance, and experiences cyberbullying (as both a target and a bully); and her best friend gets catfished by an adult. Everything converges when the school holds a "Dangers of Social Media" event and a "Justice Session" to discuss student online behavior. Yang integrates facts about how social media is addictive and detrimental to people's mental health into the story and back matter. She helpfully shows readers a way to cut through social media's downsides -- by having honest conversations "brainstorming how to break the dopamine loop. How to not be played by the algorithm." Michelle Lee(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews ith social media and puberty in this follow-up to Finally Seen (2023). A few months after the events of the revious book, Lina's mother's bath bomb business is stalling, so she records a heartfelt social media marketing video. It immediately goes vira , inspiring Lina to overcome her self-consciousness about her changing body to post online videos supporting the business, too. When her mother bruptly gives Lina her old phone, she finally feels included at school, diving headfirst into the world of texting and posting on social media. Bu along with the initial highs of connection, Lina experiences practically every negative impact of internet use, including misinformation, troll ng, a craving for views, envy, FOMO, and body shame. After phone use by Lina and her classmates becomes more disruptive, their teacher expla ns the science behind what they're experiencing, sharing information about dopamine, oxytocin, algorithms, and the online disinhibition effect. Th ngs come to a head when Lina enters a flame war on Discord and gets accused of cyberbullying just as best friend Carla discovers she's been catf shed. While Yang clearly has an important message to deliver, and readers will learn a lot about the dangers of the internet and social media, her eption of fifth graders' out-of-control phone use and the focus on teachable episodes cataloging online harms leave little room for organic storyte lling and character development. This highly anticipated sequel delivers less heart and more education. (author's note, social media research) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--Lina Gao of Finally Seen is back in Yang's latest novel, learning to find her voice amid new technology and pubescent self-esteem struggles. Lina's mom is hoping to grow her small bath bomb business with the help of a social media influencer--until she discovers the cost. Encouraged by her daughters, Mrs. Gao creates her own simple, heartfelt video, which quickly garners a wave of positive attention. Lina, despite feeling uncomfortable in her changing body, flexes her creative muscles and, with the help of her best buds, begins creating social media promotion videos for her mom and other struggling small businesses. Things are going great until Lina's mom hands over her phone (and unfettered social media access) to Lina permanently. Yang's novel posits the Internet as the great equalizer, in ways both good and bad. On the plus side, it allows small businesses to spread the word about their products freely, and one's creative visions can be realized with a few taps on a screen. Conversely, kids and grown-ups alike struggle with misinformation, trolls, insecurity, addiction, and scams. In addition to offering plenty of food for thought in her characters' choices, Yang smartly employs Lina's teacher as a conduit for sharing information about the effects of social media on the brain. The lesson learned is how to make healthier technology choices rather than abstaining from it entirely. VERDICT A recommended first purchase that tackles tweenhood and technology woes head-on.--Lindsay Loup Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2311164 (Vol. 01) Finally Seen (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kelly Yang

As she reckons with her hurt, Lina tries to keep a lid on her feelings, both at home and at school. When her teacher starts facing challenges for her latest book selection, a book that deeply resonates with Lina, it will take all of Lina's courage and resilience to get over her fear in order to choose a future where she's finally seen.

978-1-5344-8833-5 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 650

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Lina was five years old when her parents and two-year-old sister moved from China to America, leaving Lina with her beloved grandmother. For five years, Lina has wondered why she was left behind. Now she is flying to Los Angeles to grow up with her sister and her parents. Confused by the disconnect between her dreams of America and the reality of her family's poverty, she helps her mother make and sell items in hopes of avoiding eviction from their small apartment. Lina feels guilty about leaving her aging grandmother, and she avoids speaking English at school for fear of ridicule. But after she begins to accept help from others, Lina discovers allies, learns to express her emotions through words and pictures, and even finds the courage to speak up before the school board when a wealthy parent seeks to ban a book by a Chinese American writer. In this involving, realistic chapter book, a likable character overcomes a series of obstacles while forging strong connections with her parents, her sister, and two friends. Yang, the author of Front Desk (2018), writes with a beguiling combination of clarity, simplicity, and immediacy in a new story exploring the practical and emotional challenges of immigration as experienced by children.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine This contemporary immigrant tale follows a Beijing girl as she reunites with her parents and younger sister in California after five years of separation. Lina Gao, ten, thinks that her father is a successful microbiologist who owns a big house. -Reality kicks in when the fifth grader discovers that her father is a farm worker, the family lives in a cramped apartment, and her mother sells bath bombs online in hopes of covering the back rent. Yang does a skillful job in portraying Lina's multitude of emotions. There's the sadness of leaving her grandmother behind in a Chinese nursing home and the isolation and loneliness stemming from language barriers. Issues of racism and class come up when her parents struggle to be paid fairly and to get updates on their green card applications, Lina is teased at school, and a graphic novel with an Asian American protagonist is targeted for censorship. The most poignant scenes occur as Lina slowly removes the "invisible thread" that prevents her from freely expressing herself, especially when ESL teacher Mrs. Ortiz tells her that even though immigrants are "burdened with a lot of guilt," it is important to remember that "your dreams matter. You matter. Never forget that." Michelle Lee(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Chinese girl moves to America to be reunited with her family. When she was 5, Lina's parents and baby sister left her in Beijing with her grandmother. Now she arrives in Southern California as a 10-year-old stranger to her own family. And what of the American dream? Her scientist father toils (sans green card) for a villainous, bigoted organic farmer, while her mother, unemployed since the pandemic put the nail salon where she worked out of business, makes bath bombs to sell online. They live in a one-bedroom apartment whose back rent is due in six weeks. Why isn't Lina in any of the pictures displayed in their home? School is worse. Bullied by mean girls for her English, she vows never to speak again. But with the help of her ELL teacher, the school librarian, and a new friend, Lina begins to find her confidence and her voice through reading. Yang covers a lot of ground, from immigrant experiences and socio-economic inequities to climate change and middle school angst. The plotline that really stands out, however, is when Lina discovers that books can comfort the struggling, link people together, and create changes both internal and external. This theme propels the action through the book's satisfying climax when she must decide whether to use her voice to stop a book that she loves from being banned in her classroom. Timely and pointed. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Five years after her parents left her in Beijing with her maternal grandparents, Lina Gao eagerly awaits being reunited in America, where she'll be starting the fifth grade. Though she's sad to leave her beloved Lao Lao behind, she's enthusiastic about what she perceives as the American dream: endless Frappuccinos and saying "I love you" all the time without embarrassment. But American life isn't how her parents have described it in letters. The two-story house she's been told about is actually an apartment, its back rent looming ever since the pandemic closed the salon that employed her mother. To make ends meet, Lina's mom sells bath bombs online, while her father works long hours for an irritable, xenophobic farmer who engages in shady business practices. As Lina attempts to adapt, facing bullying at school, she finds solace in the form of an encouraging teacher, new friends, and the school library. And gradually, when a class book selection that resonates deeply with Lina is challenged, her growing confidence develops into a tool she can use to speak out. In a thematically wide-ranging, character-driven novel, Yang (Front Desk) highlights the importance of representation alongside one child's experience of navigating a complex reality. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Tina Dubois, ICM Partners. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Arriving in Los Angeles from Beijing after five years away from her parents and little sister Millie, fifth grader Lina Gao has a lot of challenges. First, she found that her parents have been lying about their lives in the U.S.--her microbiologist dad is not a scientist as he claimed in his letters; he is an organic regenerative farmer who works at least 15 hours a day in the field. Her family does not live in a two-story blue house with a white fence, but in a cramped apartment in Los Ramos where she sleeps on a bunk bed. And her mother and little sister make and sell bath bombs on Etsy to repay the extensive back rent they owe from the pandemic. Lina also discovers her parents' green card applications still haven't been filed, after years of waiting. On top of that, Lina has a lot of adjustments at school, including making friends and speaking English. Luckily, she is assigned to work with a special education teacher, Mrs. Ortis, who is a young immigrant from Guatemala. With support from Mrs. Ortis and school librarian Mrs. Hollis, who recommends books that speak to her experience, Lina begins to adjust to her new life. Yang's latest depicts Lina's courage, kindness, and hard work to navigate her first year in the U.S. while building relationships new and old. VERDICT A great novel that depicts the challenges of being a Chinese immigrant in the U.S. while highlighting universally relatable themes of feeling like an outcast for middle schoolers.--Anna Ching-Yu Wong Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Ten-year-old Lina emigrates from China to join her family in America after a five-year separation in the heartfelt middle-grade novel Finally Seen by Kelly Yang (Parachutes).

Fire Queen (Trade)

#2293074 (Vol. 02) Crown of Flames (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sayantani DasGupta

iniki never expected to be the leader of the resistance -- in fact, she's gone on record spitting at the idea. But as domination and persecution of rakkosh continues, she summons her courage for a triumphant return to reluctant leadership in this thrilling sequel.

978-1-338-76681-3 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 12.0 Lexile 820

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Firebird Song (Trade)

#2225920 (Vol. 01) Firebird Song (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

written by Arnee Flores

The Kingdom of Lyrica was once kept safe by The Firebird, whose feather and song meant peace and prosperity. But when an evil Spectress killed the royal family and the Firebird vanished, the Kingdom fell to ruin. Everyone lived in fear of the Spectress and her volcanic monsters. Almost twelve-year-old Prewitt has only known life without the Firebird.

978-1-5476-0512-5 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 9.0

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Starred Review Prewitt has always known Lyrica to be a gray place full of rain and sadness, where the Spectress rules mercilessly behind the strength of her ash golems. When his granny Arila falls ill one night, she reveals to Prewitt that his destiny is tied to that of the lost princess of Lyrica, the one person who can bring back the Firebird--the only creature that can defeat the Demon and the Spectress who wields his power. Now, 12 years after the events that gave rise to that evil, Prewitt meets Calliope, who learns that she is the lost princess, and the two set off on a journey to find a lost Firebird feather, meeting ancient spirits, traveling to realms unknown to humankind, and discovering hope along the way. Readers will find themselves immersed in Prewitt and Calliope's magical world full of secrets, ancient beings, and mysterious histories. The complex feelings the characters share--from fear to guilt to hope--and the difficult and seemingly hopeless conditions they face will cause readers to reflect on their own perceptions of the world and see what is truly important. A fast-paced, heart-squeezing adventure, perfect for fans of intricate fantasy worlds and memorable characters. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books In the kingdom of Lyrica, ruling queens long used the Feather and sung the Firebird Song to summon the Firebird and ensure its ascendancy over the Demon in a battle of cosmic forces. Then, twelve years ago, the Feather was stolen, the last queen died, and the evil Spectress and her army of ash golems seized power. In the present, Prewitt the Bargeboy and Calliope the princess--hidden and raised in secret and isolation by Prewitt's father--join forces to find the Feather, fulfill a prophecy, and enable Calliope to sing the Firebird Song to restore the kingdom. The story has many inventive elements and effective prose, but the mythic background and the action are missing the connective tissue they need to really hang together. Intriguing set pieces such as the Halcyon Glade and its giant Guardians and warrior girls, or the fantastical Queen's Barge and hereditary Bargeman position, command attention but are only nebulously accounted for in the world building. Nevertheless, readers may be drawn to the evocative settings and adventure quest and be inspired to seek out more firebird and fire demon lore. FHK COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Two tweens embark on a journey to fulfill a prophecy and save their kingdom. Years ago, Lyrica was filled with life, warmth, and hope, protected as it was by the Song and Feather of the Firebird. Until the night when the Spectress and the Demon of Fear filled the sky with darkness, killing the queen and everyone else in the castle--and leaving behind a cold land, devoid of hope. In the present, Prewitt is turning 12, the Age of Hope, and Granny Arila is finally telling him the truth about Lyrica's dark past, satisfying his curiosity about things no one speaks of openly. Prewitt discovers not only that the Lost Princess survived that terrible night, but that their destinies are tied together through a mysterious prophecy. Prewitt leaves home, searching for the princess, and runs into Calliope, a girl who has been hidden from the world for 12 years. When he realizes she is the Lost Princess, something she had not known herself until recently, they embark on a dangerous quest to find the Firebird's Feather and Song and save Lyrica. Their journey is a fast-paced adventure full of monsters and magic. Told in the third person, the book focuses on Calliope and Prewitt, but secondary characters' stories are neatly woven in. Finding hope, true friendship, and bravery lies at the heart of their journey. Prewitt has brown hair and skin; black-haired Calliope has honeyed skin. A fantastical adventure full of hope. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-8—A Princess, a Demon, a Firebird, a Prophecy. In the dystopian Kingdom of Lyrica where no one dares to read, sing, or even hope, two children might just be the ones to restore their home. Young Prewitt has just turned 12—the Age of Hope—when he discovers Calliope, a long-hidden princess. The two undertake a quest to defeat the evil Spectress ruling Lyrica and call back the Firebird who once protected the kingdom. While this debut grapples with themes of hope and empowerment for young people, its well-worn tropes make it predictable and offer little to make it stand out among middle grade fantasies. In addition, it contains such extended world-building and elevated vocabulary that the intended audience may find the plot difficult to follow. The two protagonists are admirable in their courage and grit, yet the narrative is uneven in the emphasis placed on each character throughout the story. Calliope does most of the heavy lifting during the quest as Prewitt's role shifts from central to supporting and never recovers in a satisfying way. Dedicated young fantasy readers will enjoy this book, but it's unlikely to become a standout favorite. VERDICT A suitable addition where there's a demand; for large youth fantasy collections.—Kelly Jahng, South Park Elem. Sch., IL

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2295380 (Vol. 02) Spirit Queen (Hardcover (Trade))	1	$16.99
written by Arnee Flores
When Calliope's friend Ilsbeth is kidnapped, Calliope and the Bargeboy, Prewitt, are sent on a secret quest to save her—a quest that traps Calliope on the Nymph Isles, a place of great darkness and ancient Spirit Magic. Calliope's confidence as the new Queen of Lyrica was already faltering, but now, with her people once again in danger, can she learn to wield ancient magic and most of all, find the strength she needs to be the leader her people need?

978-1-5476-0515-6 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist After Calliope defeated the Spectress in The Firebird Song (2021), hope returned to Lyrica and Calliope returned to her rightful place as princess—soon to be queen. But there remained in Lyrica an uncertainty that keeps Calliope unsettled. When the Silver Shag, claiming to serve an Ancient Spirit, reaches Lyrica and spreads the rumor that the Spectress is still alive, a fight ensues and Calliope's friend Ilsbeth is kidnapped. With her dear friend Prewitt, Calliope sets off to rescue Ilsbeth, and their journey takes them to magical forests and islands, where Calliope discovers the truth about this new threat to Lyrica. Fans of book 1 will welcome this enchanting sequel and the return to Calliope's mysterious and magical world, enriched this time around by the revelation of tragic backstories. As Calliope and Prewitt journey to save their loved ones and their kingdom, their realization of the magic found in the everyday and in their own stories is sure to inspire readers to consider their own.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Princess Calliope must discover her magical ability in order to keep her kingdom safe. After calling back the Firebird and defeating the Spectress in The Firebird Song (2021), 12-year-old Calliope, the Lost Princess of Lyrica, is back in the Royal City. The time has come for her to assume the throne, but Calliope isn't sure she's ready to be the queen. The people are still fearful, and her responsibility is to keep them safe, but she has no idea how. The Bookkeeper recalls learning that the queen can use Spirit magic by listening to the Firebird Song. After many failed attempts, Calliope finally hears something, but it isn't the Song: It's screams and cries for help from afar. On top of that, someone called the Silver Shag is trying to overthrow Calliope and take the throne for an Ancient Spirit. When the Silver Shag kidnaps Ilsbeth, former leader of the Glade Girls, Calliope and Royal Bargeboy Prewitt embark on a journey to save their friend and the kingdom. This fast-paced sequel focuses on the characters' internal struggles with duty, grief, fear, and loneliness. Calliope pushes away the past, forcing herself to be hopeful and, in the process, hindering her growth. Finding strength from our stories and trauma--rather than silencing them--lies at the center of this journey. And although magic is important, readers learn that humans make their own magic through hard work, determination, and resilience. A heartfelt adventure. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Fireborn (Trade)

#2252272 (Vol. 01) Fireborn (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Aisling Fowler

Ember is full of monsters. Twelve gave up her name and identity to train in the art of hunting them--so she says. The truth is much more deadly: she trains to take revenge on those who took her family from her. But when Twelve's new home is attacked, she'll find herself on an unexpected journey, where her hidden past is inescapably intertwined with her destiny--and the very fate of her world.

978-0-06-299671-8 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve gave up her identity and history when she arrived at the lodge to begin training as a Hunter, an elite warrior sworn to protect—and maintain peace between—the seven clans of Ember. The 13-year-old is an extraordinary fighter but less skilled at interpersonal relationships. Except for one curious, dreamy girl called Seven, Twelve avoids bonding with her fellow students and papers over traumatic memories with a prickly demeanor. An unexpected, magical assault on the grounds sees Seven snatched away by goblins with nefarious intentions, and when the grown-ups are too slow to respond, Twelve impulsively follows on a rescue mission. Former tormentors and a sentient stone dog appear as allies, and the motley crew has to unravel the mystery of the attack, free Seven, and learn to trust one another in the process. It's a gripping tale, packed with twisty reveals, spectacularly sinister creatures, elaborate backstories, and surprising humor to lighten the story. This tale of fighting and forgiveness, of revenge and adventure, is a beautiful reminder that there is always time to become the person you truly want to be.

#2319963 (Vol. 02) Phoenix and the Frost Palace (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $19.99

written by Aisling Fowler

Twelve is now a fully fledged hunter, with a new name worthy of her fiery powers: Phoenix. But with her new powers come new responsibilities. When a plea for help arrives from the long-lost witch clan, it's clear Phoenix's newfound fire is their only hope. Phoenix and her friends must travel to Icegaard, the witches' home, to combat the mysterious darkness there--one that grows stronger each day. But deep within this darkness lies an enemy that could destroy Ember entirely... unless Phoenix can find the strength to stop it.

978-0-06-299674-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 448 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1 Unit Price $19.99

#2374905 (Vol. 03) Starling and the Cavern of Light (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Aisling Fowler

Phoenix and her friends vow to save Ember from all but certain doom in this final unmissable chapter in the sweeping series that New York Times bestselling author B. B. Alston called "the best kind of children's fantasy story." Following the shocking events at Icegaard, Phoenix and her friends gather with the Hunters, desperate to unite the warring clans before their enemy, the Master, launches his attack on Ember.

978-0-06-299677-0 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 512 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Fishing Chronicles (Spotlight)

Quantity 1 Unit Price $22.95

#2371183 (Vol. 01) Monster of Farallon Islands (Library Binding)

written by Lane Walker

A shipwreck, a greedy billionaire, and a record-sized great white shark are about to invade Casey's life as he tries to uncover a deep secret in the Pacific Ocean. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5368-4 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 176 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 860

Quantity 1 Unit Price $22.95

#2371184 (Vol. 02) River King (Library Binding)

written by Lane Walker

Bobby and his best friends can't wait for their trip down the Cass River in hopes of catching a "River King," but not long into their journey, they discover they aren't alone. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5369-1 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 128 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 760

Quantity 1 Unit Price $22.95

#2371182 (Vol. 03) Ice Queen (Library Binding)

written by Lane Walker

The week of the Ice Queen fishing tournament, Josey and her brother learn their family will lose their bait shop unless they can repay their debt, but in order to save the shop, the kids will have to beat a 61 year old record, find the Lost City, and convince a recluse to help them. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

 978-1-0982-5370-7 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 136 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 770

#2371181 (Vol. 04) Bass Factory (Library Binding)
written by Lane Walker
 Rock Conrad was set to begin the best and final year of his high school education, but a freak accident changes everything, including Polk High's fishing dream team. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.
 978-1-0982-5371-4 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 136 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 760

Quantity 1
Unit Price $22.95

#2371185 (Vol. 05) Search For Big Lou (Library Binding)
written by Lane Walker
 Presley dreads her forced summer camp adventure, but epic prank wars, standing up to the camp bully, and fishing for Big Lou, a 100-pound catfish, make the experience one for the record books. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.
 978-1-0982-5372-1 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 144 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 750

Quantity 1
Unit Price $22.95

Five Kingdoms (Trade)

#1947019 (Vol. 04) Death Weavers (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Brandon Mull
 Trapped in a world where magic is powerful and dreams are real, Cole's epic adventure continues in book four of the New York Times bestselling "fanciful, action-packed adventure" series (Publishers Weekly, starred review), from the author of the Fablehaven and Beyonders series. Cole and his friends have made it to the fourth of the five kingdoms that comprise the Outskirts--Necronum, land of the dead. New allies and new dangers await...
 978-1-4424-9709-2 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 17.0 RC Lvl 4.3 Lexile 580

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Hero Cole Randolph returns in this fourth of a planned five books, this time adventuring in the unstable and terrifying land of Necronum. Filled with echoes, ghosts, shades, and enemies, Necronum is different from everything Cole knows, and as he searches for information about the whereabouts of friends Honor and Destiny, Cole and his crew finds more than they bargained for. Cole, at a loss without his magical powers, has some soul-searching to do, as well. Intrigue and chills build higher as the group seeks out the Cave of Memory for answers while trying to follow clues from Queen Harmony. Equally as compelling as the adventure is the development of interpersonal relationships between Cole and his band of friends. Cole continues to be the everykid champion, and he remains one of the most enduring reasons readers return to this engrossing series. Series fans are already begging for this hotly anticipated title; multiple copies are a must.--Comfort, Stacey Copyright 2016 Booklist

#2026784 (Vol. 05) Time Jumpers (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Brandon Mull

Cole and his friends are pushed to the limit in this finale to the bestselling Five Kingdoms series. Will they finally be able to restore magic to the world of the Outskirts and find their way back home?

978-1-4424-9712-2 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 14.0 RC Lvl 3.3 Lexile 570

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

Float (Trade)

#2282322 (Vol. 02) Vanishing Act (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Laura Martin

Hank, Emerson, and their friends have returned to Camp Outlier for another summer of fun and shenanigans! Hank won't let his RISK (Recurring Incidents of the Strange Kind) factor of inconvenient invisibility stop him from having the best summer ever, even when it starts mysteriously turning people and objects around him invisible too. But between his invisibility and an internet celebrity joining their cabin, camp clown Hank is struggling to maintain his spotlight.

978-0-06-313676-2 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 13-year-old boy with an unpredictable power returns to camp for another summer of misadventures in this follow-up to Float (2018). "Inconsistently invisible" Hank can't wait for another summer at pricey Camp Outlier, the one place where he and other RISK kids stigmatized for their uncontrollable abilities, or Recurring Instances of the Strange Kind, can find a sense of belonging. However, his excitement turns to worry when his time-traveling friend appears in the airport bathroom with a tearful warning that Hank is going to die. To make matters worse, a YouTube heartthrob joins their cabin, stealing the center of attention from Hank and making him feel more invisible than ever. On top of that, someone is attempting to sabotage their camp. At this camp of misfits, the cast of characters is predominantly White, with race largely indicated through clumsy, stereotypical descriptors ("gingerbread-colored skin," "almond-shaped eyes"). Hank flirts constantly with girl campers, referring to them as "ladies" and commenting on their attractiveness regardless of their interest in him, behavior in keeping with the book's overall presentation of gender relations: "I'd had my sights set on her at the beginning of camp the summer before, but after I'd realized that Emerson did too, I'd done the gentlemanly thing and stepped back. Besides, Kristy was an intriguing challenge, and I liked intriguing challenges." Not unlike Hank's flirtation, the story's lesson about technology addiction lacks subtlety and nuance. A sequel filled with boys-will-be-boys sensibilities. (author's note) (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2060770 (Vol. 01) Float (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Laura Martin

Emerson can float...he just can't do it very well. His uncontrollable floating is his RISK factor, which means that he deals with Reoccurring Incidents of the Strange Kind. The last place Emerson wants to be is at a government-mandated summer camp for RISK kids like him, so he's shocked when he actually starts having fun at camp--and he even makes some new friends.

978-0-06-280376-4 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 11.0 RC Lvl 5.5 Lexile 840

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Emerson floats. Unfortunately, he has almost no control over his floating, which makes it a Reoccurring Incidents of the Strange Kind (RISK)afactor. He and other kids like him are sent to Camp Outlier where the government can keep a close eye on them. It's a motley crew in Emerson's cabin: Gary is sticky, Hank can't control his invisibility, Zeke has sporadicaX-ray vision, and Anthony is a human torch. For once in his life, Emerson feels like he finally fits in. With lots of action, great dialogue, and plenty of humor,aMartin's style and tone are reminiscent of Gordon Korman and Dan Gutman. VERDICT With a great premise and solid writing,athis

Fog Diver (Trade)

#1918377 (Vol. 01) Fog Diver (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joel Ross

In this futuristic high-stakes adventure, humanity clings to cities on the highest mountain peaks above the deadly Fog, and airships transport the pirates of the skies. Daring 13-year-old tetherboy Chess and his salvage crew must face the dark plans of Lord Kodoc and work to save their beloved Mrs. E.

978-0-06-235293-4 ©2015 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 4.5 Lexile 630

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-It's been years since the formation of the deadly Fog that drove the last people from the surface of the Earth. The only remaining humans live in towns high in the mountaintops. With few resources, it's a hard life. For a slum kid like Chess, working on a salvage airship is the best way to keep from starving. As his ship's tetherboy, Chess must dive into the Fog and recover relics from Earth that can be traded for food for his crew. Most tether boys don't last a year. Those who avoid the Fog sharks eventually succumb to Fog sickness in the end. All except Chess. For Chess, the Fog never hurts. Chess's deepest secret is that he was born in the Fog, and it has marked him. His whole life, Chess has kept his head down and avoided notice. Now things are changing. Mrs. E., Chess's guardian, is dying of Fog sickness, and Chess and his friends must race against the clock to get her to the cure. Unfortunately, the greedy Lord Kodoc has found out about Chess's affinity for Fog and has made other plans. With plenty of action, and characters who are as precocious as they are prodigious at their airship duties, this is a fun beginning to a unique new series. An abundance of pop culture references gone hilariously wrong add appeal for reluctant readers. Oh, and there are air pirates! VERDICT A solid choice for fans of adventure series or speculative fiction.-Liz Overberg, Darlington School, Rome, GA (c) Copyright 2015. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#1966039 (Vol. 02) Lost Compass (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joel Ross

Chess and his crew--Hazel, Swedish, and Bea--may have escaped the slums, but they cannot escape the Fog that threatens to swallow the entire mountaintop city of Port Oro. Only one thing can stop the fog: an ancient machine known as the Compass.

Only one person can find it: Chess. With the help of his crew, Chess faces dangerous encounters, brutal battles, and deadly driftsharks to unearth the hidden instrument. It's a race against time to save this high-altitude sanctuary.

978-0-06-235297-2 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 630

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-The adventure continues for Chess and his airship crew in this action-packed sequel to The Fog Diver (HarperCollins, 2015). Having recently escaped from the greedy and powerful Lord Kodoc, ruler of the mountaintop empire known as the Rooftop, the crew are sure they'll be safe on a faraway mountaintop called Port Oro. No sooner have they arrived in the strange new city, however, than they learn that Kodoc isn't even close to done with them. He still seeks a mysterious object known as the "Compass," a device that lies somewhere on the surface of the Earth, deep in the Fog. Legend says that the Compass can control the Fog-even make the Fog go away. With the Compass, Kodoc will have the power to determine the fate of his entire Empire, and he knows that Chess is the key to finding that power. The race is on for Chess, his crew, and their new friends on Port Oro to recover the Compass before it falls into the wrong hands. Chock-full of positive themes about loyalty and teamwork and packed with hilariously misinterpreted pop culture references, Ross's middle grade adventure series about a juvenile airship crew raised in a junkyard continues to shine. In this case, with deeper characterization, even more nonstop action, and much higher stakes, the sequel is even better than the original. Readers will find themselves alternately laughing out loud and biting their nails as they anxiously follow the adventures of Chess and his friends. VERDICT A fast-paced narrative and hilarious dialogue make this series an essential purchase where smart middle grade fantasy/adventure is in demand.-Liz Overberg, Zionsville Community High School, IN Copyright 2016. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Forgotten Five (Trade)

#2266516 (Vol. 01) Map of Flames (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa McMann

Thirteen years ago, eight supernatural criminals fled the city of Estero to make a new life in an isolated tropical hideout. Off the grid, the missing criminals were presumed dead—but that wasn't really the case. Until recently, when the last one died. When Birdie finds a map with a set of instructions directing her to a stash of treasure that's secret from everyone—including their missing parents—she knows it holds the power to change everything, for better or worse.

978-0-593-32540-7 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 12.0 Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 McMann's new middle-grade series features the descendants of supernatural criminals, left to forge their own paths in a world that does not take kindly to them. After Birdie finds a treasure map that might hold the answers to her and her seven companions' lives, answers even their parents didn't share with them, they must all leave their longtime tropical hideaway. These kids haven't had it easy since their parents left, and the text explores this with nuance, addressing complicated family dynamics, grief, and the ups and downs of friendship. With otherworldly skills such as the power to talk to animals, healing abilities, body camouflage, and heightened sensory abilities, this group of preteens would be unstoppable if they could only figure out how to wield their gifts as a team. They must learn how to survive on their own and create the identities that fit them best rather than live with those that prior generations have imposed upon them, intentionally or not. Entertaining and meaningful. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When the last supernatural criminal adult in their seaside hideout dies, their five children journey to the far-flung country of Estero. To escape the outside world with its harsh stigma against anyone supernatural, the eight parents fled to a coastal refuge following a final heist 15 years ago. However, a need for supplies pulled most of them back to Estero, trips from which they mysteriously never returned, leaving just one parent behind. Three years later, 13-year-old Birdie Golden's father succumbs to an illness; his final request that she find her mother haunts Birdie. Reluctantly, the five supernatural young people--Birdie, who communicates with animals; her younger brother, Brix, who heals rapidly; Seven Palacio, whose body is perpetually camouflaged; Tenner Cordoba, who has extrasensory strengths; and Cabot Stone, who has great talents but has yet to develop any powers--depart for Estero City. Armed with a flame-enchanted map that leads to the final heist's stash, they travel across sea and jungle to a city full of modern wonders, secret allies, and an anti-supernatural plot at the highest levels of society. The narrative jumps among the characters' internal perspectives, highlighting each of their personal conflicts in ways that reveal their individual complexities. Though the worldbuilding is rather wobbly and there are loose threads (hopefully to be resolved in a sequel), plenty of humor and fun demonstrations of powers keep readers' attention. Names and skin tone are used to indicate some diversity among the cast. Supernaturally cool. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A decade and a half after their supernatural criminal parents stole a fortune, five children raised on a tropical island enter the mainstream world and contend with their parents' complicated legacy. When her father, the only adult who hasn't vanished during runs to Estero over the last several years; dies, 13-year-old Birdie Golden, who can communicate with animals, is determined to follow his last request: find her mother and pass on a map to a fabled treasure stash, which he'd moved without telling the other adults. Birdie returns to Estero City, accompanied by younger brother Brix, whose super-resilience allows for rapid healing (the siblings are white); brown-skinned Tenner Cordoba, who possesses superhuman senses; Seven Palacio, whose camouflage powers result in changing skin tone; and white Cabot Stone, whose powers have yet to manifest. But the crew's special abilities and unfamiliarity with modern life make it difficult to function; let alone track down their missing parents; in a world where being supernatural is a crime. Though the worldbuilding feels ungrounded in McMann's (the Unwanted series) cohort adventure, an alternating third-person perspective deftly depicts the five friends struggling to remain together as they navigate contemporary technologies, all the while employing their superpowers to survive in a dangerous new environment. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Michael Bourret, Dystel, Goderich & Bourret. (Feb).

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Birdie and Brix, along with Tenner, Cabot, and Seven, once lived with their parents in the city of Estero. They all are supernaturals, like their parents, with powers plucked from the animal kingdom, such as camouflage and night vision. When the city condemned the use of superpowers and labeled them criminals, the families fled for safety to an island far away from civilization. While the children were still very young, all but Birdie and Brix's dad left to confront their mislabeled reputations. That was 15 years ago, and no one has heard from them since. As far as the kids know, their parents are dead. While still grappling with this abandonment, the five kids face a new dilemma—the death of the remaining parental figure in their lives, Birdie and Brix's dad, and a note that directs Birdie to find a secret map and deliver it to her mother in Estero. Though told to keep this mission a secret, Birdie is forced to share this new information with the other supernaturals so they can join forces and help uncover the surprising truth behind their parents' disappearance in the unfamiliar, modern city of Estero. This new series blends science fiction with the animal kingdom, highlighting incredible feats of nature alongside a compelling quest to survive. VERDICT Middle graders seeking a new twist on science fiction and superpower heroism will find this fast-paced first installment the answer to their search.—Sabrina Carnesi

#2300537 (Vol. 02) Invisible Spy (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa McMann

The forgotten five have made it to Estero to search for their missing supernatural criminal parents. Now the president's henchmen are searching everywhere for the children who broke out Elena, driving the group into hiding in the ancient underground tunnels beneath the city. Meanwhile, President Fuerte is making headlines for his nighttime flights to other countries accompanied by an invisible man. But why would the president who outlawed supernaturals be working with the people he supposedly hates? And could it be that some of the five's own parents are helping him?

978-0-593-32543-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 760

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

#2326213 (Vol. 03) Rebel Undercover (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa McMann

Estero City is in an uproar following the exposure of President Fuerte as a supernatural, as well as the surprise announcement by Magdalia Palacio--Seven's mother--that she will oppose Fuerte in the upcoming election. The forgotten five and their allies know the president is corrupt to the core. But no one knows if Magdalia can be trusted.

978-0-593-61580-5 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 790

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews As the Forgotten Five investigate President Daniel Fuerte's plans to build an army of supers, the reappearance of their criminal parents continues to complicate matters in this sequel to 2022's The Invisible Spy. Reeling from Cabot's decision to rejoin her parents, who are coerced members of President Fuerte's supers criminal gang, the rest of the Five--Birdie, Brix, Seven, and Tenner--grapple with their friend's perceived defection. Is Cabot (whose latent powers have started appearing) now a baddie? But other storms arise. Following the public unmasking of President Fuerte as a super, protesters from around Estero storm the presidential palace. The surprise announcement of a presidential run by Magdalia, Seven's AWOL mom, also threatens Fuerte's bid to retain power. As the presidential race gets heated, stalwart ally Lada preps to infiltrate the presidential palace by going undercover as a recruit for Fuerte's army, a risky move that's deadlier than the group realizes. Meanwhile, The Librarian's enigmatic actions begin to raise the Five's suspicions about their once-reliable spy mentor. Like a well-oiled Saturday-morning cartoon, McCann's series continues to feature boisterous superpower hijinks and lighthearted espionage with dabs of engrossing familial melodrama. The political shenanigans remain deeply, endearingly silly, and the author does a fine job of maintaining high stakes as the plots get knottier and the twists even dizzier. Another doozy of a cliffhanger swoops in at the end to carry willing readers into the following installment. Fantastically silly fun! (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2366582 (Vol. 04) Dangerous Allies (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa McMann

Following an explosive showdown with President Fuerte and his supernatural henchmen, the forgotten five and their allies are feeling lost. Their trusted friend and mentor The Librarian has left the group and declared her loyalty to the corrupt president. Has the Librarian really abandoned them in their quest to take down Fuerte's regime, or has she been kidnapped?

978-0-593-61583-6 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 780

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Fowl Twins (Trade)

Quantity Unit Price

#2254386 (Vol. 03) Fowl Twins Get What They Deserve (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Eoin Colfer

1

$18.99

For almost two years, Lord Teddy Bleedham-Drye, the Duke of Scilly, has been plotting revenge against the Fowl Twins, who humiliated him in Book One. Teddy plans to give them exactly what they deserve: permanent death.

978-1-368-07567-1 ©2021 5-1/4 x 8 320 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.4 AR Pts 14.0

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Artemis Fowl's preteen sibs have it out with archnemesis Lord Teddy Bleedham-Drye one last time. Or so it would seem, though, considering Lord Teddy's fondness for clones and the various nonpermanent fatalities in earlier episodes, nothing should be taken for granted. In a plot aptly framed as "a big bang, followed by a series of smaller bangs, then another big bang"--many of which turn out to be epic gaseous blasts or, to use the delighted Beckett's term, "fartsplosions"--the evil genius's latest (as the omniscient narrator puts it) "elaborate and unnecessarily complicated" revenge scheme pits young "aspiring mastermind" Myles and his action-loving brother, aided by diminutive but capable blue-skinned pixel (pixie-elf) Lazuli Heitz and the ghosts of a large number of indignant Bleedham-Dryes whom Lord Teddy has murdered over the years, against first a goblin hit squad then, climactically, an army of fireball-shooting goblins. Generous measures of banter and villainous gloating grease the wheels as well as ridiculous contrivances that pull the twins from any number of obviously hopeless pickles on the way to their hard-won triumph. In an epilogue set in Ho Chi Minh City, Colfer closes another series arc by dropping in a tantalizing revelation about Lazuli's hidden parentage. Magical cast members come in a variety of colors; human ones read as White. Any yarn with the phrase "pinwheeling flatulence juggernaut" is a must-read, and not just for fans of Fowl play. (Fantasy. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2123631 (Vol. 01) Fowl Twins (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Eoin Colfer

Quantity

Unit Price

1

$18.99

One week after their eleventh birthday, the Fowl twins--scientist Myles, and Beckett, the force of nature--are left in the care of house security (NANNI) for a single night. In that time they befriend a troll who has clawed his way through the earth's crust to the surface. Unfortunately for the troll, he is being chased by a nefarious nobleman and an interrogating nun.

978-1-368-04375-5 ©2019 368 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.5 AR Pts 14.0 Lexile 1060

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Make way for a new generation of Fowl adventures and fans. In Colfer's opening volume of this spin-off to his popular Artemis Fowl series, readers are introduced to the Fowl twins, Artemis' much younger brothers, who prove their mettle in combat with wrong-doers as they navigate the intersection of a techno-dominated human world and that of Fairie?equally gadget-driven but uniquely oddball. While Artemis is on his way to Mars, the twins (Myles, besuited and intellectual; and Beckett, a wild, wide-eyed nature-child) prove themselves up to the task of defying the evil-minded on two fronts: first, the machinations of Lord Bleedham-Drye, an uber-rich 150-year-old intent on living forever; and second, Sister Jeronima, a nun who leads a secret, government-sponsored organization devoted to infiltrating the unhuman. When a purple, toy-sized, bristly troll emerges on the island off Ireland where the twins live, non-stop adventure is set in motion. Will the Lord or the nun manage to wrest the troll from the others? And to what purpose? Twists of tongue and story line make for a fun experience.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Fan favorite Colfer returns to the well for another crowd-pleasing, cross-genre adventure with the Fowl family. This time the action unfolds around eleven-year-old twins Myles and Beckett Fowl, the predictably precocious younger brothers of original criminal mastermind-cum-fairy-ally Artemis Fowl. The story opens with a wily nemesis, an escaped troll, and the expected LEP agent (Lazuli Heitz) before leaping into action when the twins are kidnapped by a secret operative nun, who is intent on unmasking the reality of fairies before they unleash chaos on the human world (again). As they are alternatively chased and dragged across the European continent, Myles and Beckett gradually accept the truth of the stories their older brother has told them, before partnering up with a fairy confederate, grappling with their own fairy-linked disaster, and defeating their enemies once and for all (or not). Ultimately this novel offers up just what familiar readers would expect, with its hallmark pithiness, elaborate wordplay, and omniprescent narrator providing background, tangents, and running commentary. Prior misadventures of the Fowl-fairy alliance are mentioned, but no knowledge of the previous series, or the twins' brief appearances in it, are needed, making this fine, fun fare for a new cohort of readers, who will likely reach for earlier books while waiting for planned sequels. AM

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews With their big brother Artemis off to Mars, 11-year-old twins Myles and Beckett are swept up in a brangle with murderous humans and even more dangerous magical creatures. Unsurprisingly, the fraternal Irish twins ultimately prove equal to the challenge--albeit with help from, Colfer as omniscient narrator admits early on, a "hugely improbable finale." Following the coincidental arrival on their island estate of two denizens of the subterranean fairy realm in the persons of a tiny but fearsome troll and a "hybrid" pixie-elf, or "pixel," police trainee, the youngest Fowls immediately find themselves in the sights of both Lord Teddy Bleedham-Drye, a ruthless aristocrat out to bag said troll for its immorality-conferring venom, and Sister Jeronima Gonzalez-Ramos de Zárate, black-ops "nuninterrogation" and knife specialist for ACRONYM, an intergovernmental fairy-monitoring organization. Amid the ensuing whirl of captures, escapes, trickery, treachery, and gunfire (none of which proves fatal...or at least not permanently), the twins leverage their complementary differences to foil and exasperate both foes: Myles being an Artemis mini-me who has dressed in black suits since infancy and loves coming up with and then "Fowlspaining" his genius-level schemes; and Beckett, ever eager to plunge into reckless action and nearly nonverbal in English but with an extraordinary gift for nonhuman tongues. In the end they emerge triumphant, though threatened with mind wipe if they ever interfere in fairy affairs again. Yeah, right. Human characters seem to be default white; "hybrid" is used to describe nonhuman characters of mixed heritage. Like its bestselling progenitors, a nonstop spinoff afroth with high tech, spectacular magic, and silly business. (Fantasy. 11-13) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Colfer's clever spin-off of the Artemis Fowl series focuses on Artemis Fowl's twin younger brothers; hyperintelligent Myles and near-feral Beckett, both 11. With their older sibling on Mars, the fraternal twins are dragged into a madcap adventure when they're kidnapped by Lord Teddy Bleedham-Drye, a 150-year-old duke seeking the secret to immortality, which he believes rests in the venom of a diminutive troll that the twins are protecting. Sister Jeronima, a nun and agent of the secret organization ACRONYM, also has them in her sights. Meanwhile, Lower Elements Police Specialist Lazuli Heitz, a pixel (pixie-elf hybrid), seeks to rescue the imperiled troll; and the twins by extension. A globetrotting caper transpires as the myriad factions attempt to outwit, outsmart, escape, and double-cross one another. Colfer's trademark tongue-in-cheek narrative voice is on full display, his characters existing in a preposterous balance between sincerity and absurdity, mad science, and technology. Though a working familiarity with the previous books is handy, this series opener is accessible and entertaining: the fast-paced plot, filled with unexpected betrayals, death-defying feats, and secret train cars, will appeal to Fowl readers established and new. Agent: Sophie Hicks, Sophie Hicks Agency. Ages 10: 14. (Nov.)

Reviews by: School Library Connection Myles and Beckett Fowl, the eleven-year-old twin brothers of the infamous Artemis Fowl, are very different. While there is a strong family resemblance, Myles is brainy, calculating, and has a few O.C.D. tendencies. Golden-haired Beckett, on the other hand, talks to animals, has energy to spare, and wears his dead goldfish, Gloop, as part of a tie around his neck. As with many twin siblings, they are a force to be reckoned with when working as a team. When resident bad guy, Lord Teddy Bleedham-Drye tries to capture a troll believed to be the key to his quest for immortality, the twins spring into action to intervene. This puts the boys on the radar of Jeronima, a Spanish nun who works for a secret society, and Lazuli, a blue fairy-pixie hybrid also trying to capture the troll. Reluctantly, they form an alliance to thwart Lord Teddy's efforts because while they may not be exactly the 'good' guys, they aren't all bad either. Fans of the Artemis Fowl novels will not be disappointed with this first novel of the spinoff series. Colfer's razor sharp wit and fast-paced writing will keep readers engaged, entertained and grinning at the puns. High tech spy gadgets blend sci-fi elements to this fantasy novel. With the Artemis Fowl movie release over the summer, this new series will be in high demand. Barbara S. Zinkovich, Media Specialist, Salt River Elementary School, Scottsdale, Arizona Highly Recommended

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8—Based on the same Eurocentric adventure platform, The Fowl Twins transcends the original "Artemis Fowl" series. Welcome to a new level of zany ridiculousness with the warm-hearted interplay between Miles and Beckett, Artemis's now 11-year-old twin brothers, as they fight together with a fairy creature against an elderly Duke and an evil nun, two of the most hilarious supervillains of all time. As his characters chase each other across Western Europe, Colfer mocks predictable tropes with ingeniously unexpected turns made possible by wacky technological or magical marvels and astounding physical feats. The wry narrator's choice of metaphor and unique turns-of-phrase are as delightful as the action on the page. Masterful pacing includes complicated action sequences broken into different perspectives, with time sped up or slowed down to maximize both the reader's excitement and their ability to revel in Miles's cleverness, or to guess at Beckett's hidden talents. Kids familiar with European landmarks will be especially pleased at glimpses of Amsterdam, Verona, and the Irish Coast; Spanish-speakers will appreciate the nefarious nun's frequent exclamations. A handful of beloved characters from the original series make brief cameos. VERDICT Funnier and more appealing than its popular progenitor, this title is destined to become a favorite.—Rhona Campbell, Georgetown Day School, Washington, DC

#2181425 (Vol. 02) Fowl Twins Deny All Charges (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Eoin Colfer

The second Fowl Twins adventure, a spinoff of the blockbuster Artemis Fowl series, starts with a bang--literally. Artemis's little brothers Myles and Beckett borrow the Fowl jet without permission, and it ends up as a fireball over Florida. The twins plus their fairy minder, the pixie-elf hybrid Lazuli Heitz, are lucky to escape with their lives. The Fowl parents and fairy police force decide that enough is enough and the twins are placed under house arrest.

978-1-368-04504-9 ©2020 336 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.5 AR Pts 13.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 As heirs to their big brother Artemis' legacy, the young Fowl twins Myles and Beckett are taking it from here.

From now on, if the denizens of the land of Faerie brew up any shenanigans, the twins are sure to be involved. After 20 years of the Artemis Fowl series, this new branch of stories stands out thanks to the protagonists' spooky, ESP-like connection and their loyalty to one another in spite of their differences. This time around, some belligerent dwarves team up to kidnap Myles and use his intelligence to figure out how to enter a building where an ancient trove of gold is being held. Beck?all action, as usual?and his friend Holly leap to the rescue despite the Fowl patriarch's new rule against the twins mingling with the Faerie world. James Bond-type gadgets, plenty of action, and more than a few punny jokes regarding exactly how dwarves expel the excess dirt they dig make this another treat for Fowl fans.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A scheme to inveigle Artemis Fowl's younger sibs into helping steal a huge trove of gold doesn't go at all well for the schemers. Introduced in Fowl Twins (2019), 12-year-olds Myles and Beckett kick off their second round of exploits, dealing in midair with a guided missile to which their hybrid pixie-elf chaperone Lazuli Heitz has been strapped, then go through a series of equally ridiculous captures and rescues to several showdowns with bad guys, saving not only tons of gold, but thousands of Irish teens at a flash convention from the vengeance of a maddened, human-hating warrior dwarf. How, you ask? By employing a unique skein of complementary abilities: Myles, as dapper and at least as egotistic as his older brother, brings the mental wattage, and Beckett supplies the clever hands, unexcelled martial prowess, and a gift of tongues that extends to animals and plants. Along an improbably daft plotline that even the seldom-reflective Beckett finds "fart-centric," Colfer also strings dazzling displays of high tech, heartwarming peeks at the family dynamics of the closely knit if decidedly eccentric Fowl clan, dolphin-back rides, huge blobs of slime (some of it explosive), and a climactic exhibition of prejudice gone off the rails that is intense enough to leave readers queasy. As a teaser for future adventures, Lord Teddy Bleedham-Drye, arch archvillain from the previous volume, pops up for a cameo at the close. The human cast presents as White. More high-octane Fowl play. (Fantasy. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal is Fowl" spin-off series doesn't hit the same funny bone as its 2019 predecessor, The Fowl Twins, but fans of Myles and Beckett will enjoy their time with the goofiness anyway. In this installment, the white, male Irish twins' parents put them un er house arrest in their mansion, which only works until Myles gets kidnapped and Beckett goes to the rescue. This book's villains, an ambitious dw rf family, aren't nearly as hilarious as the bad guy of the first book, although what they can accomplish with spit and farts is impressively creati ve. Action sequences are bogged down with distractingly long, multi-paragraph explanations of backstory and world-building. Myles' cleverness remains to be marveled at, as is Beckett's physical prowess. There are some rather spectacular flatulence and magic technological feats along the way. Other than the dwarves, there are no new characters, nor are there any fabulous locations. VERDICT Recommended only for those who intend to stay through the whole series.--Rhona Campbell, Georgetown Day Sch., Washington, DC Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Frances and the Monster (Trade)

#2287058 (Vol. 01) Frances and the Monster (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Reife Tuma

What would you do if you accidentally brought a monster to life and set him loose on your town? Frances Stenzel, aspiring scientist and inventor, has done just that. She was trying to prove her scientific worth to her parents so they would take her with them to their scientific symposiums for once--instead, she reawakened her great-grandfather's secret and most terrible invention. Before it can destroy the town, she sets off after it, with her pet chimp and sarcastic robot tutor by her side. Monster-hunting isn't easy and along the way she'll face a persistent constable, angry locals, and an unexpected friendship all while the trail for the monster goes cold and time is running out before her science career, and the city itself, are doomed forever.

978-0-06-308576-3 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Frances is an unusual girl for 1939: she bucks the fashion codes and wears whatever is comfortable, she has globe-trotting parents who encourage her scientific and intellectual passions even at her young age of eleven, and she hasn't left their mansion for years. She hopes she'll be able to finally go with her parents on a trip to Brussels, but instead her father gifts her with Hobbes, a mechanical tutor that he built, and leaves her behind. Frances is unimpressed, and in her attempts to find a way to dismantle Hobbes permanently, she stumbles upon the research of her great-grandfather, a brilliant scientist who was apparently experimenting on how to reanimate life. Frances decides to continue his work and manages to reanimate a body frozen in the mansion's lab, but she soon deeply regrets her choice, and when the monster flees, Frances knows it is on her to stop it. Frances quickly (and thankfully) makes her first human friend, who helps her through the seemingly endless, confounding ways of the outside world, but the star companion is poor Hobbes, now only a head in a birdcage after Frances used his parts for her creation. Clever and careful readers may foresee the twist ending, though even if they do, the exact execution will likely still make for a series of heartbreaking events and a tender conclusion. Readers familiar with Shelley's Frankenstein will quickly notice the significant similarities, and those who do not know the original story will likely want to dive into the source material to better understand the points of connection. AS COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When her scientific experiment unleashes a monster, an 11-year-old Swiss girl's extraordinary efforts to capture him reveal a surprising secret. A solitary girl who likes tinkering with machines and wearing lab coats, Frances Stenzel has been raised by her famous scientist parents and a series of tutors inside her great-grandfather's mansion in Bern. It's August 1939, and she leads a quiet life, never going anywhere and rarely seeing anyone. When her parents depart for a symposium in Brussels, they leave Frances in the care of Hobbes, a mechanical man designed and programmed by her father to be her perfect tutor. Unhappy about being left with a machine, Frances explores the basement, discovering her great-grandfather's journal and a secret lab with a frozen body. Deciphering the notes in the journal, she successfully animates the body, creating a massive monster. Immediately, Frances regrets what she has done and knows she must stop the monster as he flees into the center of Bern. Leaving home, Frances tracks the monster through the streets, across rooftops, along the river, and down into the city's bear pit and sewers. Pursued by the police and aided by Hobbes, the chimpanzee her mother has been doing intelligence enhancing experiments on, and a boy who befriends her, Frances exhibits remarkable courage and resolve. Her memorable adventure, with strong echoes of Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, plays out against a colorful background as she confronts who she is in a truly shocking finale. A fast-paced and remarkably original tale. (Adventure. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In 1939 Switzerland, 11-year-old Frances Stenzel, who longs to join her famed scientist parents at a Brussels science symposium, is dismayed to be left behind as she always has been following the accident that took her ear seven years prior. This time, though, she's left in the care of a specially engineered android tutor named Hobbes. Chafing under the attention of her indefatigable caretaker, inventive Frances searches for a way to power Hobbes down, and instead discovers her great-grandfather Grimme's encoded journal and secret laboratory, which houses a corpse encased in ice. Deciphering the journal, Frances devises a way to complete Grimme's final experiment: reanimating the body, which promptly escapes the manor into the nearby city of Bern. Wracked with regret and clad in a bow tie and fedora, Frances sets out in pursuit, aided by sardonic Hobbes; a kind local boy, Luca Frick; and Fritz, a chimpanzee with artificially enhanced intelligence. Bursting with wry humor and references to Frankenstein, Tuma's (the What the Dinosaurs Did series) idiosyncratic, utterly original tale moves at breakneck speed through a richly imagined landscape, accumulating vividly rendered characters and settings; including a bear pit, a sewer, and the famous Zytglogge clock tower; while injecting considered discussions of modern themes such as gender roles and privilege. Characters are presumed white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Marlo Berliner, Jennifer De Chiara Literary. (Aug.)

#2330239 (Vol. 02) Frances and the Werewolves of the Black Forest (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Reife Tuma

Frances achieved the impossible, but at a great cost. She stopped the monster her great-grandfather created from tearing her town apart, but Hobbes doesn't remember their adventure. Her great-grandfather's journal, full of dangerous secrets, is missing. And Frances is still reeling from discovering the truth of her birth parents and the procedures that saved her life.

978-0-06-308581-7 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews More reanimated corpses rise to menace stalwart Swiss tinkerer Frances Stenzel and an expanding crew of allies in this sequel to Frances and the Monster (2022). Forced to flee into the Black Forest when her train to Brussels is diverted, 12-year-old Frances goes from hunter (in the opener) to hunted for the refinements she made to her great-grandfather Albrecht's imperfect method of bringing the dead to life. As it turns out, bad actors are conducting their own experiments at Fanggarten, an isolated nearby castle. While trying to elude a sinister hunter, reclaim Albrecht's stolen notebook, and free a group of local villagers seized as experimental subjects, Frances is pursued by moaning revenants, suddenly feral pet dogs, and unnaturally large wolves. Despite struggling with social skills--in part a result of being raised in secret for years--Frances has and enlists allies galore, ranging from a snotty mechanical butler and a chimpanzee with a large sign language vocabulary to her parents, Victor and Mary (wink, wink), and a group of abandoned village children, including one who is deaf. The author opens with a note about different sign languages and shows a knack for describing hand and finger motions clearly. Though the book is set in 1940, there is no mention of Nazis and but one oblique reference to the war. Despite plenty of undead bodies, gunfire, animal attacks, and massive explosions, the casualties, if any, are scrupulously kept offstage. The cast reads white. A rollicking adventure. (Adventure. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Fred Bowen Sports Story (Trade)

#1644865 Throwing Heat (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Fred Bowen

Eighth-grader Jack Lerner relies on pitching fast balls until a young college coach

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.95

teaches him that throwing the heat may not be the best way to win games.
 978-1-56145-573-7 ©2011 5-1/2 x 7-7/8 128 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.4 GR Lvl R Lexile 600

Reviews by: Children's Literature Last year, in seventh grade, Jack struck out almost every batter he faced. Things are different this year, however. He has moved up to another level and the distance from the pitching mound to home plate is longer. Jack's fastball is no longer staying in the strike zone. He is walking too many batters and allowing too many runs by his opponents. Finn, his older sister's new boyfriend, is a pitching coach at a local college. He offers to give Jack advice. Finn tells Jack there is more to pitching than throwing heat, and he talks about the difference between two former baseball players: Steve Dalkowski and Sandy Koufax. Who is Steve Dalkowski? Jack asks that same question. Although he hears what Finn tells him, he is not convinced until the final game of the regular season to put the directives into action. Bowen seamlessly weaves baseball history into this story. There is plenty of baseball action to keep sports fans engaged. His character-building themes unfold subtly. Young athletes will find smooth dialogue, well-developed characters, and a storyline with which they can identify. This satisfying read is highly recommended. Reviewer: Sharon Salluzzo

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—This is a quick, easy read with no aspirations beyond what it is: a traditional middle school sports novel. Eighth-grader Jack Lerner is proud of his 75-mph fastball, but has trouble controlling it. When his sister's new boyfriend, a part-time college pitching coach, tells him to take something off his fastball and concentrate on spotting his pitches, Jack is initially resistant, but eventually comes to see the wisdom of the advice. A subplot having to do with a Ping-Pong tournament in which Jack and his friends are involved reiterates the theme that success in sports is more about refining your skills than overpowering your opponents. No overarching social issues are touched upon, and character development is minimal, but sports-minded readers should find the brisk pacing and simple vocabulary to their liking. As in other books in the series, a "Real Story" afterword describes how pro athletes dealt with issues similar to those faced by the characters in the book.—Richard Luzer, Fair Haven Union High School, VT

#2312288 Off the Bench (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Fred Bowen

Chris comes from a sports-loving family. His brother is the star scorer on the high school team, and is being recruited by Division 3 colleges. Chris longs to earn the same adulation, and he's a good scorer for his junior high team. But why won't his coach start him? He's better on defense than his rival, Carlos, and nearly as good a shooter. Soon Chris becomes obsessed with earning a place in his team's starting lineup. He does everything he can think of—including being an invaluable player every time he comes in. But nothing seems to get Coach's attention. Even after he learns the history of the valuable "6th man," Chris can't seem to let it go. How will he ever be a big scoring star?

978-1-68263-410-3 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 144 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

#2366354 Extra Innings (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Fred Bowen

"Strike one is the best pitch in baseball." Mike loves pitching, and he loves knowing his team counts on him to deliver wins. But Mike's father starts to worry that Mike is getting too carried away with baseball and not spending time working at after school jobs and developing a sense of responsibility. Can Mike and his father reach a compromise in order to let Mike play the game he loves and help his team win the league championship?

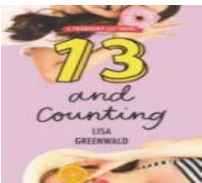

978-1-68263-411-0 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 144 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Fourteen-year-old Mike McGinn is a promising pitcher for his baseball team, the Rays, but his father sees baseball as a frivolous hobby. Mike's dad thinks he should be working this summer, so the teen takes a job caddying at the local country club while continuing to hone his pitching skills. But sometimes hard work and solid pitching aren't enough, as Mike finds when his team makes it to the final game of the end-of-season tournament. The game goes into extra innings, and though Mike's pitching is top-notch, the results aren't quite what the Rays had expected. Still, Mike learns important lessons along the way. Bowen balances action both on and off the field as Mike and his father slowly come to understand each other a little better. Baseball fans will especially appreciate the baseball terminology and slang and the descriptions of the Rays' various games and Mike's pitching. They'll also enjoy learning that this story is based in part on a historical baseball game--in 1959, Pittsburg Pirates pitcher Harvey Haddix threw 12 perfect innings against the Atlanta Braves, only to lose in the 13th. The Rays' summer schedule, game line-ups, league standings, pitching schedule, a scoreboard, and team statistics provide an immersive reading experience. Physical descriptions are minimal, though character names imply diversity in Mike's community. Will tide over youngsters longing for the start of the sport's spring season. (more information on Harvey Haddix) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Friendship List (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2106884 (Vol. 03) 13 and Counting (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lisa Greenwald Some friends feel like family. So, when big life-stuff happens early in the school year--like divorce drama, a sick Bubbie, and lunch table awkwardness--Kaylan and Ari band together to prove their friendship is 100% strong with a new list of 13 goals to achieve before the school year ends and summer begins. But what happens when the challenges they choose expose issues in their friend group? Can a friendship be real and true if secrets are kept between one BFF and the other? 978-0-06-287524-2 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 610	1	$16.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2167416 (Vol. 04) 13 And 3/4 (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lisa Greenwald BFFs Ari and Kaylan aren't sure how they're going to survive their first summer apart. No pool. No sleepovers. No emergency late-night chats on the porch. So as Ari returns to Camp Silver and Kaylan heads off to comedy camp, they come up with a new list of 13 and 3/4 ways to keep their friendship strong as they tackle everything from bias to batik and moping to matchmaking. Told in alternating perspectives. 978-0-06-287527-3 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 11.0	1	$16.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2010112 (Vol. 01) 11 Before 12 (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lisa Greenwald The first day of middle school means trading in freeze tag at the pool for new schedules, fabulous outfits, and a fresh start. But for eleven-year-old Kaylan, the chaos of new locker combinations, cafeteria cliques, and potential first kisses is more than she can handle. She dreads the start of sixth grade and feels like she wants--no, needs--a winning game plan. 978-0-06-241174-7 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 416 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 590	1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-During the last weeks of summer, Kaylan and her friend Arianna become very nervous about entering middle school. To alleviate some of their fears, they create an "11 Before 12" list-11 things that they hope will make them fabulous and confident by the time they turn 12 in November. After the two have initial success with list items such as "highlight our hair" and "make a guy friend," the school year starts, and the social dynamics of middle school put a strain on their friendship. With Arianna not speaking to her, Kaylan must figure out a new way to handle her anxiety and navigate tense situations at home. Kaylan finds support in unexpected places and discovers surprising strengths of her own, but she also realizes that she misses Arianna, and she works to regain her friendship so that they can celebrate the completion of their list. Although this story does not break much new ground, the voice of a tween dealing with the pressures of adolescence is authentic, and this book will entice those who want to read about a relatable, funny young woman. VERDICT Purchase where tales about the dramas of middle school and family life are in great demand.-Sarah Reid, Four County Library System, NY Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2070511 (Vol. 02) 12 Before 13 (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lisa Greenwald Inspired by the success of their first birthday bucket list, Ari and her BFF, Kaylan, set twelve new goals for the new school year. And this time? They're totes not forgetting to focus on their friendship. 978-0-06-241177-8 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 590	1	$16.99

From the Desk of Zoe Washington (Prebound)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2240646 (Vol. 01) From the Desk of Zoe Washington (Prebound) written by Janae Marks This book follows Zoe Washington after she receives an unexpected letter on her twelfth birthday from the incarcerated father she's never met and her courageous journey to uncover the truth about his crime. 978-1-5364-6974-5 ©2021 5 x 7-1/2 320 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 660	1	$20.95

Reviews by: Booklist This exceptionally sweet debut from Marks illustrates profound cracks in the American criminal justice system while telling an affecting story grounded in the middle-grade experience. Zoe Washington, a soon-to-be seventh-grader growing up outside Boston, is celebrating a birthday bereft of friends due to distance and betrayal, when a surprise letter from her incarcerated father arrives and throws her life into emotional disarray. The clandestine correspondence they strike up, letters and a few phone calls facilitated by her maternal grandmother, has to be kept a secret from her mother, especially once Zoe decides to investigate whether her father is truly guilty of the dreadful crime that sent him to prison before she was born. Marks tells this story of forgiveness and redemption in a way that will make sense to tween readers without being patronizing or overly complicated. The troubling ways race affects the characters Zoe, who is Black, is subjected to microaggressions when out in public with her white stepfather and Black mother, and she questions whether her father would have been treated differently if he looked less like a typical suspect will facilitate important conversations about racial profiling and incarceration rates for people of color. Fortunately, Marks' capable storytelling and engaging characters also combine into a wondrous confection of a book, full of heart and hope and promise.--Shaunterria Owens Copyright 2019 Booklist

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Twelve-year-old Zoe Washington is startled to receive a letter from her biological father, Marcus, who was convicted of murder before she was born. Though she's on the outs with Trevor, her next-door neighbor and quondam best friend, she accepts his offer to help investigate the situation, since Marcus seems smart and kind in his letter, unlike the man her mother described. Despite her mom's firm no-contact rule, Zoe secretly responds to Marcus, hoping to get to know him and learn more about his sentence. Meanwhile, the aspiring young pastry chef is also hoping to audition for her favorite TV baking competition, and she's proving herself worthy to her family by interning at a local bakery. Marks delivers a spirited central character whose determination to get to the truth is admirable. While the outcome is wishful-Zoe uncovers an injustice in Marcus' sentencing that eventually leads to his release-the plot effectively explores a problematic system that allows for disproportionate wrongful conviction of African-American individuals, with telling details such as the talk many Black parents have with their children about interactions with police. An involving family story, this novel could also serve as an introduction to social justice for elementary schoolers. QB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews r incarcerated father, whom she's never met, 12-year-old Zoe sets out to prove his innocence. It's the summer before seventh grade, and aspiring pastry chef Zoe sets her sights on perfecting her baking skills to audition as a contestant on Food Network's Kids Bake Challenge. One day, she receives a letter from her father, Marcus, who was sent to prison for murder right before Zoe was born. She's never met Marcus, and her mother wants her to have nothing to do with him. So Zoe keeps the letter a secret and begins corresponding with Marcus on a regular basis. He shares his favorite songs and encourages Zoe's baking-competition dreams. When Marcus proclaims his innocence, Zoe is shocked: How could someone innocent end up in prison? With the help of her grandmother and her friend Trevor, Zoe begins to learn about systemic racism and how black people like her and Marcus are more likely to be wrongfully convicted of murder than white people. Zoe's relationship with Marcus is at the center of the novel, but her relationships with her mother, stepfather, grandmother, and Trevor are also richly conveyed. This powerful debut packs both depth and sweetness, tackling a tough topic in a sensitive, compelling way. An extraordinary, timely, must-read debut about love, family, friendship, and justice. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly On her 12th birthday, Zoe Washington receives a letter from Marcus, the biological father she's never met, who has been serving time for murder since just before Zoe's birth. Zoe's mother and stepfather don't want her in touch with Marcus, but Zoe, curious, strikes up a correspondence with the help of her maternal grandmother, who believes Marcus to be "a good person at heart." Aspiring pastry chef Zoe grows busy as she makes up with her best friend Trevor, writes to Marcus, and interns at a family friend's bakery, where she hopes to prove to her parents that she could compete on Food Network's Kids Bake Challenge. When Marcus tells Zoe he is innocent, and her grandmother agrees, Zoe begins to learn about inequality in the criminal justice system, and she and Trevor set out to find the alibi witness who can prove his innocence. Debut author Marks seamlessly weaves timely discussions about institutionalized racism into this uplifting and engaging story that packs an emotional punch. Zoe is a relatable tween, with friendship and familial frustrations that will resonate with readers. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Alexander Slater, Trident Media Group. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up--On her 12th birthday, Zoe Washington receives a letter from her birth father, Marcus, who has been in prison her entire life. He wants to get to know her, and even though she knows her mom won't like it, she writes back. In their letters they bond over a shared love of baking--Zoe is interning at a Boston-area bakery over the summer and dreams of becoming a pastry chef--and music. When Marcus dodges Zoe's questions about the crime he committed, she Googles him and is horrified to discover that he was accused of murdering a college classmate. But Marcus also claims he's innocent and that there's even a witness out there who could prove it. Zoe doesn't know what to believe--can innocent people really go to prison? In the course of researching wrongful convictions, she learns about racial bias in the prison system (Zoe and her biological parents are black, a stepfather is white) and decides to search for the alibi witness herself, even though Marcus doesn't want her to get involved. But keeping secrets from her mom quickly gets Zoe in over her head, jeopardizing her chances of obtaining the information she needs to save Marcus. This is one of only a small handful of middle grade novels to explore the experience of having a parent in prison, and the subject is handled with grace and sensitivity. It also exposes the important and timely issue of racial bias in the prison system in a way that is approachable to a middle grade audience. Zoe is a bright, compassionate protagonist for whom readers will root. She is supported by a loving family whose viewpoints differ yet who all want the best for her. The baking subplot will have readers itching to try out Zoe's recipes. VERDICT A smart, necessary, and hopeful middle grade debut that expertly balances a gentle, heartwarming tone with searing insight into systemic racism. Hand to readers who enjoyed Lisa Ramee's A Good Kind of Trouble or Kekla Magoon's The Season of Styx Malone.--Elizabeth Giles, Lubuto Library Partners, Zambia Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

From the Desk of Zoe Washington (Trade)

#2310928 (Vol. 02) On Air with Zoe Washington (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Janae Marks

Two years ago, Zoe Washington helped clear Marcus' name for a crime he didn't commit. Now her birth father has finally been released from prison and to an outpouring of community support. So, everything should be perfect. Right? However, starting a new place is much more difficult than it looks, and despite being innocent--Marcus is having a harder time re-entering society than anyone expected. Between hosting her show, testing recipes, managing shifting friend dynamics, and trying to make sure Marcus and her stepdad each have enough time with her--Zoe is stretched thin.

978-0-06-321231-2 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Zoe Washington, along with her newly exonerated birth father, returns in this upper-middle-grade novel about balancing your passions, finding your voice, and overcoming prejudice. When Marcus mentions his dream of opening a BBQ restaurant, idea girl Zoe is off to the races. But getting a loan isn't easy for someone with no credit score or work history due to incarceration. Zoe and Marcus must find a way to make their dreams come true—even if they have to change—all while Zoe learns that while not everyone who was incarcerated is innocent, they still deserve a second chance. This is a novel of family and a timely discussion of justice issues, also interwoven with middle-school-friendship changes, a ton of sweet baking, and a lovely podcast element that will get readers excited about sharing their own passions with the world. Marks captures the exuberance and energy of early teens in her prose and delicately balances Zoe as a likable protagonist—one with room to broaden her horizons.

Front Desk (Trade)

#2290613 (Vol. 04) Key Player (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

written by Kelly Yang

The Women's World Cup coming to Southern California, everyone is soccer-crazy -- especially Mia Tang! The U.S. is playing China in the finals, and Mia feels like her two identities are finally coming together. Less exciting, though? The fact that her P.E. teacher wants Mia to get out of the soccer field, too -- or fall short of the grade she needs to earn a spot at journalism camp.

978-1-338-77625-6 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 600

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Mia's feelings about her Chinese and American roots are complicated by the Women's World Cup soccer final between Team USA and Team China. Bookworm Mia Tang struggles to kick a soccer ball, but she must raise her grade in her least favorite class, PE, if she hopes to attend the journalism camp she's dreaming of. She perseveres in her goal of interviewing the women playing for the U.S. and Chinese teams. While Mia remains the keystone for this title, the supporting characters also help elevate the story. Her friend Jason's dad's storyline--told through Jason's eyes--reveals internal pressures to succeed as an immigrant and the importance of family in Asian cultures. Meanwhile, Lupe, Mia's other close friend, dreams of winning the Math Cup, but Mia's mother gets into trouble for helping to coach the team. A central theme of this title is identity, and many Asian American children will relate to being ostracized as perpetual foreigners. Beloved adult characters also experience inequities in housing and the workplace. Yet the hope and excitement for the soccer players clearly inspire Mia, her family, and friends to fight for respect for themselves as they strive to do things others don't believe they can achieve. Reassuringly, everything is resolved positively. Yang scores another win with this tightly paced entry that will ramp up the excitement for Mia's next empowering adventure. A heartwarming story about living your own life fully, even in the face of obstacles. (author's note) (Historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2333176 (Vol. 05) Top Story (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kelly Yang

She's spending winter break with Mom, Lupe, Jason, and Hank in San Francisco's Chinatown! Rich with history and hilarious aunts and uncles, it's the place to find a great story--one she hopes to publish while attending journalism camp at the Tribune. But this trip has as many bumps as the hills of San Francisco . . .

978-1-338-85839-6 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$18.99

FunJungle (Trade)

#1626018 (Vol. 01) Belly Up (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Stuart Gibbs

Twelve-year-old Teddy investigates when a popular Texas zoo's star attraction--Henry the hippopotamus--is murdered.

978-1-4169-8731-4 ©2010 5-1/8 x 7-5/8 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 10.0 RC Lvl 5.4 Lexile 820

Quantity
1

Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 Henry the hippo is dead. Yes, the signature denizen of Americas newest and largest zoo has been found belly up in his highly, uh, unsanitary habitat (hippos are extraordinarily regular in their habits, so to speak). But theres worse to come when 12-year-old Teddy begins to suspect its murder most foul andin the fine tradition of mysteries for youthsets out to solve the crime by himself. Well, he does have some help from beautiful Summer, the 13-year-old daughter of the zoos fantastically wealthy owner. Who could have dunnit? Large Marge, the surly security guard who has a cold spot in her heart for Teddy? Charlie Connor, the midget clown whos hated Henry ever since the testy hippo took a bite out of him? Or could it be a guerrilla act perpetrated by the anti-zoo Animal Liberation Front? First-novelist Gibbs offers no shortage of suspects in his fast-paced story, which deftly mixes humor and suspense. Cleverly plottedaside from one hippo-sized deus ex machina momentthis book is an auspicious debut that will leave readers clamoring for more.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2010, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Something is rotten in FunJungle, the huge Texas park that's a cross between Disneyland and the San Diego Zoo, and it's up to twelve-year-old Teddy, the son of the park's primate specialist, to figure out what it is. The problem starts with the death of Henry, the foul-tempered hippo who's the park's mascot, and who turns out to have been deliberately killed. Teaming up with Summer, the daughter of the park's owner, Teddy investigates the crime and stumbles into what looks like a conspiracy-but can he solve it before Henry's killers come after him? Promotional copy connects Gibbs to Carl Hiaasen, and there's definitely something of Hiaasen's easygoing, direct style and ecology-related theme here. Even more than Hiaasen's work, though, this is steeped in old-fashioned adventure, starring a kid with enviable freedom and opportunity, who's tangling with classic crime (smuggling of emeralds!) and who's backed by two strong, protective parents. The setting is key, and Gibbs draws a vivid picture of FunJungle, a kajillionaire's pet project that's torn between gate-turning revenue and animal-preservation respectability. Teddy's free-range access to myriad animal enclosures is an alluring fantasy, which the book firmly supports with clear-eyed information about animal behavior and zookeeping logistics. Touches of humor provide additional enjoyment, with many readers likely to find the high and low point simultaneously in the high-speed splatter of a long-rotting hippo carcass. Smart, unironic, and confidently bereft of cool, this is a solidly enjoyable action mystery, a useful complement to Anderson's satirical Thrilling Tales titles (Whales on Stilts, BCCB 4/05, etc.). DS

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Twelve-year-old Teddy is in heaven living with his gorilla-researcher mom and wildlife-photographer dad at the world's largest zoo. When the zoo's hippo mascot is murdered, Teddy not only wants to solve the mystery but also discover why no one else seems to care. Gibbs writes with absurdist humor and seemingly an insider's knowledge of how zoos operate. (Copyright 2010 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Twelve-year-old Teddy is a world traveler with a wildlife-photojournalist father and a mother who does gorilla research. Stateside, the family lives at FunJungle, the world's biggest and newest state-of-the-art zoo and theme park, the pet project of a Texas moneybags whose daughter inspired him. Action opens at Hippo River with the death of mascot Henry the Hippo, a beloved creature despite an irascible personality. Teddy sneaks into the autopsy and later strikes up a friendship with Summer, the daughter of the billionaire owner, in his efforts to solve the mystery of who killed Henry. Not a typical child, Teddy has amassed a considerable knowledge of arcane facts of human nature as well as animal behavior in his travels. Overall, the story is great fun, despite a sometimes plodding approach to the narrative that is too reminiscent of a report. In his authorial debut, screenwriter Gibbs combines details of the inner workings of zoos with some over-the-top action for an entertaining read. (Mystery. 9-13)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—Teddy Fitzroy, 12, yearns for a little excitement at FunJungle, an animal theme park in Texas where his parents work. When star attraction Henry the Hippo dies under mysterious circumstances, Teddy is convinced that it was murder. Colorful suspects abound, from Large Marge, the security guard, all the way up to J.J. McCracken himself, billionaire owner of FunJungle. Teddy teams up with J.J.'s daughter to ferret out the culprit even as animal-related accidents begin to threaten his safety. A decomposing hippo disaster denouement will fill young minds with equal amounts of horror and glee. Dense with animal trivia, Belly Up will suit attentive readers who love mystery and random facts. Teddy's first-person narration allows readers to solve the mystery along with him, but his voice is oddly adult. The content and expression of his thoughts emerge as extraordinarily calm and rational, far from the typical preteen sensibility. His dialogue sounds much more realistic. Gibbs handles issues of animal welfare in a fair way without being preachy, and his motley cast of characters holds its own with quirky personalities and memorable details. Overall, this first novel brings together suspense, wild chase scenes, and enough character development to hold children's attention, despite a few incongruities. Hand it to fans of Gordon Korman's Swindle (Scholastic) and Jody Feldman's The Gollywhopper Games (HarperCollins, both 2008).—Caitlin Augusta, Stratford Library Association, CT

#1999104 (Vol. 04) Panda-Monium (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stuart Gibbs

FunJungle is frenzied, awaiting the arrival of its most thrilling animal yet--Li Ping--a rare and very expensive giant panda that the zoo went to enormous lengths to secure. But when the truck transporting Li Ping shows up, its precious cargo has vanished into thin air.

978-1-4814-4567-2 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 11.0 RC Lvl 4.7 Lexile 780

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide In the follow-up to Big Game, FunJungle Wild Animal Park is abuzz about a new panda--until the truck arrives minus the animal and its escort. As usual, Teddy ends up in the thick of the investigation. Well-researched and cinematically paced, this mystery-romp is only more enjoyable for the improbability that a thirteen-year-old is repeatedly smarter than the adults involved. (Copyright 2018 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In this fourth roller coaster of an endangered-species mystery, Teddy is still living at the giant zoo/amusement park called FunJungle, and he's still smack dab in the epicenter of the brouhaha. Middle schooler Teddy, his girlfriend, Summer, and hundreds of panda fanatics anticipate the arrival of a rare panda from China named Li Ping. However, when the guarded truck reaches FunJungle, Li Ping is gone, replaced by a ransom note. Having learned from past mistakes and at the behest of the FBI, Teddy tries to avoid getting involved. No such luck, because his bungling park-security nemesis, Marge, blackmails him into investigating the official investigation. When a villain dressed as a panda throws Teddy into the freezing-cold water of the polar-bear exhibit, Teddy and Marge forge a new dimension to their relationship. They begin to work together, making some headway into narrowing down the suspects (which include the mythical chupacabra) of this monkey-wrenching whodunit. Gibbs never scrimps on creating belly-laughing hullabaloo for his white protagonists. Interweaving animal facts (pandas can produce 50 pounds of poop per day) into his plot, the author seamlessly inspires compassion and urgency on behalf of species endangered due to lack of habitat and exotic animal trafficking. Never slumping into the formulaic doldrums, the FunJungle series keeps on chugging. (author's note) (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2017) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#1937272 (Vol. 03) Big Game (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stuart Gibbs

When someone takes aim at Rhonda Rhino, FunJungle's pregnant (and endangered) Asian greater one-horned rhinoceros, the zoo steps up security measures in order to protect this rare animal and her baby. But the extra security isn't enough--someone is still getting too close for comfort. Teddy and company start to suspect that whoever is after Rhonda is really after her horn, which is worth a lot of money on the black market. For the first time ever, the head of the zoo enlists Teddy for help--for once, he doesn't have to sneak around in order to investigate--and the results are even more wacky, and even more dangerous, than ever before.

978-1-4814-2333-5 ©2015 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 11.0 RC Lvl 4.5 Lexile 740

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

#2224369 (Vol. 07) Bear Bottom (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stuart Gibbs

The ranch's endangered bison have been mysteriously disappearing. Then a massive local grizzly bear named Sasquatch breaks into the house, causing chaos. In the aftermath, Kandace McCracken discovers that her exceptionally expensive sapphire necklace has vanished.

978-1-5344-7946-3 ©2021 5-3/4 x 8 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 820

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Leaving FunJungle Adventure Park for a vacation on a ranch in West Yellowstone, 13-year-old Teddy and his girlfriend, Summer, find themselves searching for missing bison while in the middle of solving a jewel heist. The latest book in Gibbs' FunJungle series leaves the adventure park for new territory. Even so, Teddy can't seem to escape mysteries. While staying at the Oy Vey Corral, his skills as a teen detective are enlisted by the ranch owners to help find out who is stealing their purebred bison. When a grizzly bear named Sasquatch breaks into the ranch house late one night and Summer's mother's dazzling multimillion-dollar necklace goes missing, Teddy finds himself working not just one whodunit, but two. From an old hidden room for hiding bootleggers' stashes to an abandoned gold mine and a bull on the loose, Gibbs keeps the pace moving and the action coming. While most of the main characters are presumed White, there is diversity in secondary characters. The owners of the Oy Vey Corral are Jewish. Gibbs doesn't shy away from discussing America's brutal treatment of Native peoples or the ways Americans have destroyed animal populations and habitats. This action-packed mystery with a satisfying resolution doesn't rest on predictable thieves or obvious answers. A thrilling, mystery-laden story with an incredible setting. (author's note) (Mystery. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2311066 (Vol. 08) Whale Done (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stuart Gibbs

First, a massive dead whale has washed up on the beach--and before anyone can determine what killed it, it explodes. Doc, the head vet from FunJungle, suspects something fishy is going on and ropes Teddy and Summer into helping him investigate. Then, Teddy stumbles upon yet another mystery involving tons of stolen sand. And the paparazzi start spreading rumors about Summer dating a celebrity, leading Teddy to question their relationship.

978-1-5344-9931-7 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

#2156199 (Vol. 06) Tyrannosaurus Wrecks (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stuart Gibbs

Teddy was all set for a campout at his friend Sage's family ranch--but then Sage gets terrible news: The skull of a rare dinosaur that was being excavated on his property has mysteriously vanished overnight in the middle of a rainstorm, even though it weighed 500 pounds. Not a single footprint has been left behind. Since the dinosaur was top secret, the police don't believe anyone outside the dig could have stolen it.

978-1-5344-4375-4 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 830

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Teddy and his friends have a new mystery to solve in this latest installment of the "Funjungle" series--the improbable theft of a rare, 500-pound T. Rex skull worth millions that was found on Teddy's friend Sage's ranch. The local bumbling sheriff thinks the theft must be a hoax and refuses to spend much time on the case, so Sage asks Teddy to investigate. Soon everyone's a suspect and Teddy and his friends have their hands full trying to solve the mystery. Side plots about the exotic animal pet trade, as well as animal abuse within the zoo (the "Zebra Spanker") add further intrigue and excitement. As in other "Funjungle" books, Gibbs mixes in plenty of information to keep animal lovers happy--such as how snakes flick their tongues to aid in smelling. VERDICT Gibbs has managed once again to write an engaging and educational fiction book that kids will love. Buy where the rest of the series is popular. --Laura Gardner, Dartmouth Middle School, MA Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2089256 (Vol. 05) Lion Down (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stuart Gibbs

For once, operations at the zoo/theme park appear to be running smoothly. But then a local lion is accused of killing a famous dog--and the dog's owner, an inflammatory radio host, goes on a crusade to have the cat declared a nuisance so it can be hunted. It looks like the lion might have been framed.

978-1-5344-2473-9 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 850

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Funny Kid (Trade)

#2042560 (Vol. 01) Funny Kid for President (Hardcover (POB))
written by Matt Stanton

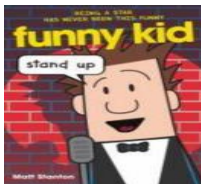

When Max gets blamed for pooping in the storeroom (which he did NOT do), tensions hit an all-time high between him and his terrifying teacher, Mr. Armstrong. But then, the most unexpected thing happens--the school principle, Mrs. Sniggles, suggests Max run for class president.

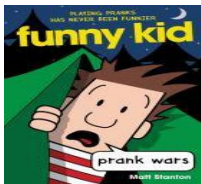

978-0-06-257291-2 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 2.0

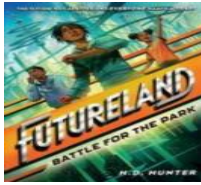

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$13.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5-Max Walburt decides to run for class president. Since he's not the best athlete, the smartest, the tallest, or the most handsome, his platform will be that he is the funniest. And funny he proves to be in this hilarious combination of text, drawings, and comics. Max has a lot to deal with: he's being stalked by a duck who thinks he's its mother, his teacher absolutely loathes him, and somebody pooped on the classroom floor (Max is blamed for this transgression even though he's innocent). And classmate Abby Purcell, who, like every villain, has one magical eyebrow that can be raised cynically at will, vows to beat him in the election. Poop, vomit, and snot jokes abound as each candidate is taken out of the competition by someone's evilly successful plan. But who is the culprit behind the election sabotage? Max and his friend Hugo are on the case. Max's droll observations are made even more comical by the simple but highly expressive line drawings, which enhance the humor and plot immensely. This book is guaranteed to be very popular with reluctant readers. Australian spellings will be easily

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2063697 (Vol. 02) Stand Up (Hardcover (POB)) written by Matt Stanton He's not the strongest, or the smartest, or the handsomest kid in his class--but he may well be the funniest! When an obnoxious clown threatens to steal the show, Max has to come up with a stand-up routine that people will never forget. 978-0-06-257294-3 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 3.0	1	$13.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2087112 (Vol. 03) Prank Wars (Hardcover (POB)) written by Matt Stanton Max is the Funny Kid and given the choice, he'd always rather laugh than fight. But when a prank war breaks out just before the big overnight class trip, Max has no choice but to pull off the funniest prank ever! 978-0-06-257297-4 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 3.0	1	$12.99

Futureland (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2299882 (Vol. 01) Battle for the Park (Hardcover (Trade)) written by H. D. Hunter Everyone wants a ticket to Futureland, where you can literally live out your wildest dreams. Want to step inside your favorite video game? Go pro in a sports arena? Perform at a real live concert? Grab your ticket and come right in. But things aren't quite right with the Atlanta opening. Park attractions are glitching. Kids go missing. And when his parents are blamed, Cam must find the missing kids and whoever's trying to take down his family... before it's too late. 978-0-593-47942-1 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 570	1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Walker family is building a new theme park above Atlanta, Georgia. Futureland is an imaginative, Wonka-esque place that gives kids their heart's desire, and it's fitted out with the latest technology, including humanlike androids called revs. Seventh-grader Cam Walker is heir to this legacy, but doesn't know if he wants it. He recently started real school on the ground, and all his new friends are envious of his life. No one would believe that all he wants is to be a regular kid. When some kids go missing after the park's opening night and Cam's parents start acting strange, Cam and his new friends must solve the mystery before the Futureland legacy is destroyed. Hunter makes good use of the Atlanta setting, exploring the city's rich history and populating it with mostly Black characters. Some troubling elements of Atlanta's past are highlighted throughout the book and add to the story's texture. A thought-provoking middle-grade sci-fi story with an adventurous pace.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Black seventh grader Cameron J. Walker has never been to a normal school before--he's been busy hovering above major world cities in Futureland. It's 2048, and the high-tech theme park is filled with his parents' imaginative inventions, including lifelike androids, or revs. But the plan this school year is to float above Atlanta so Cameron can enroll at Eastside Middle School, spend time with his Grandma Ava, and make some human kid friends. Plans go awry as corporate espionage and shady housing practices intersect before Futureland's Atlanta opening. The Atlanta Disuse and Redevelopment Corporation and its shady White CEO have been spying on them, hoping to sabotage the park and appropriate its technology in its continued efforts to exploit the city for profit. Their plan involves hacking into revs, undermining the park's--and surrounding community's--security and safety measures, as well as abducting children to elicit fear and acquiring the space for themselves. These events evoke the real-life child abductions of 1980s Atlanta and the displacement issues the city faces today. The book is not entirely successful in handling weighty subjects like missing Black children, gentrification, and racial inequities. Aspiring detective Cameron struggles with self-doubt, something that is relatable for readers but also compromises the momentum of such a high-stakes story. Nevertheless, with the help of friends (human and rev alike), Cam saves the day. Final art not seen. An imaginative and ambitious not-so-distant future tale with a lot to say about the present. (Science fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In 2048, Black middle schooler Cameron J. Walker lives in Futureland, a flying futuristic theme park he helps his family run. He's literally on top of the world until his parents decide that Futureland's next destination will be his mother's hometown, Atlanta, where they'll remain for the year while Cameron attends his first "real" school Earth-side, staying with his grandmother on school nights. New friends, portrayed as racially diverse, help Cameron settle in; he gets to assist with Futureland on the weekends; and excitement is high for the park's local launch. But everything changes when the park's robots start to malfunction, exhibiting emotional responses more complex than their coding should allow, and kids begin going missing. Cameron and his new pals start unraveling the occurrences, hoping to link them with his parents' odd behavior and a seedy corporation that's gentrifying Atlanta. Interspersed with comics-style illustrations by Khatib (The Marvellers) and featuring enigmatic interstitials, Hunter's debut foregrounds futuristic tech and themes about the value of charting one's own path, creating an exhilarating mystery. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Suzie Townsend, New Leaf Literary. (Nov.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8--Welcome to Futureland, the most innovative theme park in the year 2048. Traveling in the air, it offers visitors a one-of-a-kind VR experience where they can live out their biggest dreams. For seventh-grader Cameron Walker, who is Black, it's just his daily life: his parents created Futureland. Now, though, the park has stopped over Atlanta, and things start to go awry at the park. The revs--highly realistic, AI park characters--are taking on troubling traits; Cameron's parents are acting very strange; children are disappearing. In order to save Atlanta and the park, Cameron's going to have to use his best sleuthing skills to solve a mystery much more dangerous than he imagined. Readers will be bursting to visit every "destiny" in this fictional theme park, and the fast-paced plot will keep them reading. More than that, though, it's the characters and messaging that will stick with tweens. Featuring a cast that's made up almost entirely of people of color, the book speaks to social justice issues in middle grade-friendly ways. There are a few moments in the story where readers may stumble over a character's motive, but not enough to slow them down. Dynamic comic spreads by Khatib are sprinkled throughout the story, occasionally in places that feel abrupt, but overall they add to the moving plot. VERDICT An exciting new series that will grab readers with its futuristic setting, diverse characters, and brisk plotting.--Kristin Brynsvold Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2355955 (Vol. 02) Nightmare Hour (Hardcover (Trade))

written by H. D. Hunter

The most spectacular theme park in the world is headed to the Big Apple. After Atlanta, Cam Walker and his family are ready to turn over a new leaf with Futureland. This is where dreams literally come true, and the Walkers are going to show the people of New York City that their park is back and better than ever. But trouble isn't done with the Walkers yet. Glitches keep happening with the park attractions. There's a creepy carnival in town that gives Cam goosebumps. Plus, he just can't shake the feeling that his family is being watched. And it may be his imagination, but are the people around him acting... stranger than usual?

978-0-593-47946-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 630

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Galactic Hot Dogs (Trade)

#2161510 (Vol. 01) Cosmoe's Wiener Getaway (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Max Brallier

Cosmoe and the rest of the crew journey to food competitions across the universe. The Princess Dagger doesn't plan on going anywhere, and her presence on the ship means her mother is gunning for the Neon Wiener. Cosmoe rallies his friends to fight space jerks in all their many forms and vows to protect the princess. But can a group of hot dog enthusiasts face down an evil space queen?

978-1-5344-7797-1 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile GN 570

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

#2161512 (Vol. 02) Wiener Strikes Back (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

written by Max Brallier

The circus-goers can't get enough Galactic Hot Dogs, and between the death-defying acts and highly unusual employees. They soon discover there's more to the glitz and showmanship than meets the eye in fact, the hot-dog-loving crew may be in more danger than ever before. And getting to the bottom of the circus's secrets may mean confronting Cosmoe's troubled past.

978-1-5344-7800-8 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 3.3 Lexile 570

#2161514 (Vol. 03) Revenge of the Space Pirates (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Max Brallier

It's like deja vu all over again when Cosmoe is taken hostage by a space pirate with links to the hot dog seller's early days in space. Humphree's past also comes to light as the events of two friends' first days on the Neon Wiener are revealed. And the farther they go down memory lane, the more apparent it becomes that this pirate has landed them in a galaxy of danger.

978-1-5344-7803-9 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 3.2 Lexile 540

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Game Changer (Trade)

#2292696 Dinged (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tommy Greenwald

Caleb Springer is the up-and-coming star freshman quarterback on the high school football team, which isn't a surprise considering his dad, Sammy Springer, was an NFL superstar and is now the town celebrity. But just as Caleb's glory days begin, his dad starts to change. He's forgetting things and getting angry at random times. Caleb is forced to confront a bleak possibility: The sport that gives him so much status and self-worth might be the cause of his dad's strange behavior. Will Caleb keep playing the sport of his dreams, even if he knows how dangerous it can be?

978-1-4197-5515-6 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8 288 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A talented high school quarterback weighs gridiron glory against the scary possibility of permanent brain damage. Greenwald lays out a scenario—set a few years later at the same school as in Game Changer (2018)—that will give anyone whose world revolves around strapping on shoulder pads and getting into the huddle second thoughts. As he leads the Walthorne Wildcats through an undefeated season, freshman quarterback Caleb Springer shows every sign of being well on the way to following his father's footsteps into the NFL...except that ominous symptoms follow every hard hit he takes to the head, and as the season wears on, he also sees his strong, confident dad exhibiting ever more erratic behavior, uncharacteristic bursts of anger, and serious signs of memory loss. Will Caleb's love of the game, combined with the high expectations of his father, teammates, coaches, and fellow students, spur him to carry on despite determined opposition from his tough-minded new girlfriend, Nina Rojas, and even after his dad, forced at last to see a neurologist, gets a diagnosis of early-onset dementia? Along with a list of resources at the end, the author folds frightening scenes with an injured teammate and another ex-NFL player into the story as he takes his confused protagonist through the championship game to a decision that may be smart even if just possibly too late. The cast mainly presents White. A cogent cautionary tale showing football at its most violent and joyless.

Gamer (Stone Arch Books)

#2304468 Bandit Battle (Library Binding)

written by Shawn Pryor

Criminal mastermind Cynthia Cyber recruits a videogame super-villain named

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.49

Bandora Bandit to battle The Gamer. When the Bandit tracks down The Gamer, she transports him to her own videogame world for a Wild West showdown! Will The Gamer defeat the super-powered villain and find his way back home?

978-1-6663-4805-7 ©2023 5 x 7 40 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.2 AR Pts .5 GR Lvl O Lexile 560

#2304469 Clone Trouble (Library Binding)

written by Shawn Pryor

Criminal mastermind Cynthia Cyber has hatched her most devious plot yet. She's created an evil clone of The Gamer called Gamertron to defeat the superhero! Gamertron has the same powers and skills as The Gamer, and a group of digital ninjas is ready to do his bidding! Can The Gamer stop the villains, or will this be the superhero's final fight?

978-1-6663-4821-7 ©2023 5 x 7 40 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl O Lexile 560

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.49

#2304470 Dangerous Duo (Library Binding)

written by Shawn Pryor

A new supervillain named Mutiny Doom has come to town and kicked Cynthia Cyber out of her evil lair! Mutiny plans to do the thing that Cynthia can't do: defeat The Gamer once and for all! But when The Gamer is overwhelmed by Mutiny and his monsters, an unexpected team-up may just save the day!

978-1-6663-4828-6 ©2023 5 x 7 40 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts .5 GR Lvl O Lexile 540

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.49

Reviews by: School Library Journal Tyler Morant, who uses a device to activate powers and weapons for his battles against wicked digital monsters. Early in the book his nemesis, Cynthia Cyber, is defeated and replaced by malicious Mutiny Doom. As Tyler is playing in Crescent City Arcade, living versions of monsters from the games go on the attack against children. Tyler activates his powers and goes into combat first against the monsters, then confronting Mutiny Doom himself, eventually, with an assist from Cynthia. Text is sparse, typically with no more than four paragraphs to a page and fewer than 20 words per paragraph. Many pages feature onomatopoeic exclamations in enormous fonts, such as "KRASHHHH!" when The Gamer's energy field is destroyed by rocket fists. Illustrations are plentiful, but have a clumsy, computer-generated feel, are often oddly framed, and do little to complement or advance the story. The volume, written at a first to third grade reading level, concludes with a glossary of words highlighted throughout the text, such as atom, lair, and portal, as well as a list of discussion questions and writing prompts. VERDICT With little character development or plot, poor illustrations, and simplistic writing, this one is unsuitable for most libraries. Not recommended.

#2273783 Currency Control (Library Binding)

written by Shawn Pryor

Evil Cynthia Cyber is robbing banks with her latest creation, a villain named Currency. The stolen money will go toward building a machine that can capture people in a simulation program. There she could control every victim's life. It's up to the Gamer to stop Cynthia Cyber from taking over the world!

978-1-6639-7705-2 ©2022 5 x 7 40 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts .5 Lexile 550

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.49

#2273784 Digital Terror (Library Binding)

written by Shawn Pryor

Criminal Cynthia Cyber finds the most sinister video game monster and pulls him out of the digital world into reality! As the Terror Beast tears down buildings all over the city and creates nightmares for the citizens, the Gamer must use new strategy to beat his fears and stop Cynthia's latest threat!

978-1-6639-7706-9 ©2022 5 x 7 40 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.0 AR Pts .5 Lexile 500

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.49

Gamer Girls (Trade)

#2363353 (Vol. 03) Out of Control (Hardcover (POB))

written by Andrea Towers

Lucy is the newest member of the Gamer Girls. She loves her new school, her family, and her friends, but she misses her old life in California, too. After unsuccessfully trying to convince her parents to let her visit California, they decide to bring her aunt and cousin Jordan to HER! +10 XP for awesome parents.

978-1-5248-8867-1 ©2024 6-1/4 x 9-1/4 192 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1 Unit Price $19.99

#2323342 (Vol. 02) Monster Village (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Andrea Towers

Gamer Girls are four besties who prove that girls can game! But when a new game comes out, it's not a hit with everyone. Maybe they should stick to video game battles instead of middle school arguments!

978-1-5248-8452-9 ©2023 6-1/4 x 9-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 790

Quantity 1 Unit Price $19.99

#2323319 (Vol. 01) Gnat vs. Spyder (Hardcover (POB))

written by Andrea Towers

Thirteen-year-old Natalie lives a double life. By day, she's an average eighth grader at Golden Trails Middle. At night, she's Gnat112, a streamer for her favorite video game, Alienlord. But when the new girl moves in next door, will Natalie's double life be revealed?

978-1-5248-8453-6 ©2023 6-1/4 x 9-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 790

Quantity 1 Unit Price $19.99

Garbage Pail Kids (Trade)

#2180192 (Vol. 01) Welcome to Smellville (Hardcover (POB))

written by R. L. Stine

Welcome to the town of Smellville, where a dozen kids all live in a big tumbledown house and have as much fun as they possibly can. People may think that they're gross and weird and strange, but they're not bad kids--they just don't know any better. In this hilarious new series from bestselling author R. L. Stine, the Garbage Pail Kids--from Adam Bomb to Brainy Janie--get into mischief at their middle school, all while battling bullies and their archenemies, Penny and Parker Perfect.

Quantity 1 Unit Price $14.99

978-1-4197-4361-0 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8 208 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 4.0

#2219755 (Vol. 02) Thrills and Chills (Hardcover (Trade))
written by R. L. Stine

The Garbage Pail Kids are desperate to win the Smellville Pet Contest. But how can they compete against Good Boy, the perfect Chihuahua of the Perfect twins? Good Boy can stand on his head and do algebra problems blindfolded. But the whole thing goes out of control when our heroes meet five new kids who also call themselves the Garbage Pail Kids! (Includes Stickers)

978-1-4197-4363-4 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 208 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.6 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.99

#2256423 (Vol. 03) Camp Daze (Hardcover (POB))
written by R. L. Stine

Welcome to the town of Smellville, where ten kids all live in a big tumbledown house and have as much fun as they possibly can. People may think that they're gross and weird and slobby and strange, but they're not bad kids--they just don't know any better.

978-1-4197-4365-8 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8 208 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.99

Ghost Hunters (Trade)

#2269686 (Vol. 01) Bones in the Wall (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Susan McCauley

Twelve-year-old Alex may have lost his ability to play sports, but he gained the ability to see ghosts. Now he must figure out how to put an evil spirit to rest--or die trying.

978-1-951069-04-9 ©2020 6 x 9 182 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$29.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A bereaved boy discovers that he can see ghosts in this middle-grade novel. Ever since 1900, when spiritualists "tore a hole" between the real world and the supernatural realm, poltergeists have come through the opening and plagued mortals. Like all children, 12-year-old Alex Lenard was tattooed at birth with a mark shielding him from "evil spirits." His house in New Orleans is covered in pentacles and other signs of protection. Supernatural entities--and the arcane methods of keeping them at bay--are an everyday part of life. Alex is a star ghostball player at school. But on the way to the state championship, he is badly injured in a car accident. His mother is killed. Not only will the grief-stricken Alex never play again, the accident switches something inside of him. He develops psychic powers--a change thought to be impossible at his age. Alex doesn't wish to see ghosts. His dad is staunchly anti-psychic, and going back to school will be hard enough for Alex without having his crazy aunt and his weird, paranormal-obsessed cousin Hannah move in next door. But what Alex wants doesn't seem to matter. When he accompanies his aunt and cousin on one of their investigations, they uncover a spirit that needs putting to rest--and an evil entity hell-bent on stopping them. Backed by his Jamaican best friend, Jason Anderson, Alex must either accept his new situation or risk losing everyone he has left. McCauley writes in the first person, past tense and tells a simple story at an effective pace. The worldbuilding is a bit clumsy at first--the early chapters repeat some information--but once over its teething troubles, the book moves smoothly from premise to execution. The dialogue is well handled. The ubiquitous nature of the spirits is a pleasing facet that stands out. But of course the true focus is on Alex's loss and how he deals with it. Alex is an average but likable protagonist, and Hannah and Jason are able supporting characters. Young readers should find themselves deeply engrossed. A straightforward but well-structured and absorbing supernatural tale of change and coping. (glossary) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2269688 (Vol. 02) Pirates' Curse (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Susan McCauley Ghosts are commonplace in this dark and exciting world, and the psychics who deal with "the Problem" are rare. Apprentice psychic investigator Alex and his two best friends embark on their first solo case to discover who's haunting an old New Orleans pub. They battle ferocious winds, driving rain, and raging spirits to put a pirates' curse to rest. 978-1-951069-10-0 ©2021 6 x 9 178 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic	1	$29.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2275073 (Vol. 03) Spirit Fire (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Susan McCauley Who-or what-is causing the fires in the French Quarter? A little girl? A long-dead prisoner? An evil presence calling to those beyond the grave? In this spooky, fast-paced adventure, twelve-year-old Alex must fight smoke, flames, and ghostly prisoners to stop whatever's causing the blazes-before more lives are lost. 978-1-951069-13-1 ©2021 188 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic	1	$29.99

Ghostcloud (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2288242 (Vol. 01) Ghostcloud (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Michael Mann Kidnapped and forced to shovel coal underground, in a half-bombed power station, 12-year-old Luke Smith-Sharma keeps his head down and hopes he can earn his freedom from the evil Tabatha Margate. Then one day he discovers he can see things that others can't. Ghostly things. A ghostly girl named Alma, who can bend the shape of clouds to her will and rides them through the night sky. With Alma's help, Luke discovers his own innate powers and uncovers the terrible truth of why Tabatha is kidnapping children and forcing them to shovel coal. Desperate to escape, Luke teams up with Alma, his best friend Ravi, and new girl Jess. 978-1-68263-518-6 ©2022 320 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Two years ago, Luke Smith-Sharma was kidnapped by the wicked Tabatha Margate. Now enslaved at the Battersea power station, he moves and loads coal to keep the power working. When he and another girl are whisked off for a punishment worse than shoveling coal--cleaning sewage--he wishes for a different life. His wish is granted, but not in the way he thought: Luke is now a half-ghost. This change opens up the world for him, as he can now escape his body and fly through London. With his new bird's-eye view of the power station and help from full-ghost Alma, Luke plans an escape with his friends Jess and Ravi. The plan is simple, but there's danger at every turn, especially with Tabatha after them. Alma and the other ghost rules seem to be almost an afterthought--more a means to an end than the heart of the story. Still, this is a fun first novel in the vein of Obert Skye and Brian Farrey. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide In a post-apocalyptic alternate London, twelve-year-old Luke Smith-Sharma is one of the kidnapped children enslaved as a coal shoveler under the Battersea Power Station. When Luke and new-girl Jess accidentally drop coal dust on their cruel supervisor, Tabatha, they are locked up in an experimental incinerator room. There Luke makes an odd discovery: a girl he rescues from the incinerator turns out to be a "ghostcloud" who can take him riding through the sky on water vapor and who shows him some exterior vents on the power station they can use to escape. Luke and Jess begin secretly exploring the vents and uncover Tabatha's unsavory experiments in her hidden lab -- experiments that tie together ghosts, electricity, and the smog that shows up when children are kidnapped. The Dickensian hardships endured by the protagonists of this mystery-adventure will appeal to young readers who enjoy a little ostentatious exaggerated suffering in their fiction; so, too, will the characters' resourcefulness as they follow the clues and form alliances to combat the evil they uncover. The mild supernatural elements integrate smoothly into the alternate setting, while the idea of "halves" (Luke is "Half-Indian. Half-detective. Half-ghost") adds a somewhat wistful theme of identity to the rollicking action. (Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In a post-apocalyptic alternate London, twelve-year-old Luke Smith-Sharma is one of the kidnapped children enslaved as a coal shoveler under the Battersea Power Station. When Luke and new-girl Jess accidentally drop coal dust on their cruel supervisor, Tabatha, they are locked up in an experimental incinerator room. There Luke makes an odd discovery: a girl he rescues from the incinerator turns out to be a "ghostcloud" who can take him riding through the sky on water vapor and who shows him some exterior vents on the power station they can use to escape. Luke and Jess begin secretly exploring the vents and uncover Tabatha's unsavory experiments in her hidden lab -- experiments that tie together ghosts, electricity, and the smog that shows up when children are kidnapped. The Dickensian hardships endured by the protagonists of this mystery-adventure will appeal to young readers who enjoy a little ostentatious exaggerated suffering in their fiction; so, too, will the characters' resourcefulness as they follow the clues and form alliances to combat the evil they uncover. The mild supernatural elements integrate smoothly into the alternate setting, while the idea of "halves" (Luke is "Half-Indian. Half-detective. Half-ghost") adds a somewhat wistful theme of identity to the rollicking action. Anita L. Burkam(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A supernatural story of one boy's survival in the darkest of times, set in a dystopian London. It has been two years since Luke Smith-Sharma last saw his family. Kidnapped along with thousands of other children, he spends his days shoveling coal in Battersea Power Station, hidden away from the world. The setting is palpably Dickensian, covered in steam and soot, and controlled by Cruella de Vil-like villain Tabatha Margate. White and Indian Luke is also half-ghost, able to see things others cannot. Aiding Luke in his efforts to escape are richly developed supporting characters: his best friend and bunkmate, Ravi; plucky new girl and plumber's niece Jess; and Alma, a ghost girl yearning for closure. Along with Luke's newfound ghosting skills, Alma teaches him how to leave the physical world and fly above steampunk London, where he gains a larger perspective on their predicament. The situation becomes harrowing as he learns of Margate's despicable plans. Some of the content is quite gritty and dark as the novel critiques social inequities; it feels like Charles Dickens, Philip Pullman's His Dark Materials, and Neil Gaiman's The Graveyard Book rolled into one. Mann creates empathy for Luke, who shows clear hope and compassion for others during this evil time. The quick-witted humor and fast pace keep the entertainment factor high. Thrilling. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Scores of kidnapped children shovel coal into Battersea Power Station's underground furnaces, powering all of smog-ridden London, in debut author Mann's splendid escapist adventure. Two years after 12-year-old Luke Smith-Sharma, who's of Indian descent, arrives at the station, he tries to keep new girl Jess from slowing the shoveling line and jeopardizing his chance at a freedom-granting amber ticket. But an ensuing incident results in foul punishment for both: cleaning the sewers. It's during this task that Luke rescues a ghostcloud, or water-bonded spirit, called Alma, who recognizes Luke for the half-ghost he is, and reveals his ability to both perceive the uncanny and fly over an alternate London, which is overseen by evil magnate Tabatha Margate. This taste of the outside world sets aspiring detective Luke on the road to escape, accompanied by Alma, plumber hopeful Jess, and goods and information trader Ravi, who prove fully realized characters and co-conspirators. Smartly wrought worldbuilding aptly engages with themes of identity and equity while conjuring an atmospherically gritty London that's at once singularly inventive and reminiscent of works by Joan Aiken, Charles Dickens, and Philip Pullman. It's a thoughtful and well-built fantasy that's also rollicking good fun. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Stephanie Thwaites, Curtis Brown. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--In an alternate London, children are being kidnapped and forced to shovel coal underground to power the city. The factory is run by the watchful and villainous Tabitha Margate, who has threatened to turn slackers and complainers into fuel. Twelve-year-old Luke Smith-Sharma and his best friend, Ravi, know how to survive--keep their heads down, perfect their shoveling technique, and hope that they can earn an elusive golden ticket that would earn their freedom. When Jess, a new girl with a cheery attitude who has dreams of becoming a plumber, makes a mistake that could threaten the whole line of shovelers, Luke goes against everything he thought he believed in to protect her. When the two of them are sent to their punishment, Luke meets Alma, a ghost that only he can see and hear. He learns a surprising truth and that the mysterious and powerful Ghost Council may be the key to exposing Tabitha and saving everyone. This is a magical and engaging debut with likable protagonists and thrilling adventure set against the backdrop of a fascinating smog-covered London. It has wide appeal and will be especially loved by readers of Neil Gaiman, Roald Dahl, and the Rick Riordan Presents imprint. VERDICT A first purchase for all middle grade collections. This series opener is not to be missed.--Marissa Lieberman Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2348899 (Vol. 02) Nightspark (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Michael Mann	1	$17.99
Several months after the ghosts freed the children of Battersea and uncovered Tabatha Margate's sinister experimentation on ghostclouds and cloudghouls, Luke Smith-

Sharma struggles to divide his time between learning the ropes of being a ghostcloud and studying to become a detective. But not everyone made it out of the power station, and as he tries to adjust to "normal" life by pursuing his dreams, the guilt over his friends left behind is eating Luke alive.

978-1-68263-660-2 ©2023 6 x 8 336 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Ominous signs that murderous Battersea Power Station owner Tabatha Margate is staging a comeback lead to a rematch with former child worker and part-time ghost Luke Smith-Sharma. Actually, Londoner Luke has multiple foes to face in this sequel to Ghostcloud (2022)—notably the corrupt and treacherous mayor of London and the hostile Ghost Council, which wants him permanently dead instead of only sometimes. But Tabatha is by far the scariest threat, and eerie glimpses of her shadow lead through noxious, bone-strewn sewers to a smugglers' haven, followed by a nighttime Channel crossing into enemy territory and a dismaying revelation about her nefarious schemes to exploit Luke's ghostly skills. Fortunately, he not only still has several sturdy allies from the opener, but also new ones in his friend Ravi's hostile but helpful big sister, Radhika, and even Terence, once (and maybe still) Tabatha's right-hand man but now seemingly willing to turn over a new leaf. Along with that sewer crawl, a later trip in a crate of smelly cheese, and several massive explosions, Mann tucks much exhilarating zooming about on clouds (which is how ghosts get around) into this crowd-pleasing adventure and caps the lot with a last-tick save of everyone in London, both living and not so much. Names and the previous volume establish ethnic diversity in the cast. A melodramatic dust-up, with ghosts aplenty and a Dickensian flavor. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Giada the Healer (Trade)

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

#2349542 (Vol. 02) How to Save a Unicorn (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Meg Cannistra

Giada Bellantuono has traveled all the way from Italy to New York City to follow her dreams: begin her official training as a magical veterinarian! It wasn't easy going against generations of family tradition, not to mention saving said family from wicked witches.

978-1-335-45802-5 ©2023 6-1/4 x 9-1/2 384 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

#2293027 (Vol. 01) How to Heal a Gryphon (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Meg Cannistra

With her thirteenth birthday just around the corner, Giada Bellantuono has to make a big decision: will she join the family business and become a healer or follow her dreams? When a group of witches kidnaps her beloved older brother, Rocco, and her parents are away, Giada is the only person left who can rescue him. Swept into the magical underground city of Malavita, Giada will need the help of her new companions to save her brother-or risk losing him forever.

978-1-335-42687-1 ©2022 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 384 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist Giada is nearly 13—nearly old enough to take the oath of a magical healer of humans, as most in her family have done for generations. But Giada doesn't want to heal humans. She's happier caring for animals, including the magical ones around their coastal Italian city of Positano, and that's what she decides to do. But before she can tell her parents, her brother is kidnapped by malevolent witches and spirited away to their eerie underground city. It becomes clear that Giada is the only one who can get him back, though she will have to draw on all her magic and animal friendships to do so. Cannistra's wonderfully engrossing and atmospheric story is replete with intriguing Italian folklore, locations, and language (all witches are "streghe," the healers "guaritori"). Giada is a joy to befriend; she's aware of her shortcomings but also confident in her magic, and she unapologetically delights in her fat body and all that it's capable of. It's worth a trip to this enchanting (and enchanted) Italian coast.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this Amalfi Coast: set adventure steeped in Italian culture and folklore, Cannistra (The Trouble with Shooting Stars) introduces readers to a stubborn heroine determined to embrace her true strengths. Giada Bellantuono, nearly 13, is in training to become a guaritrice; an Italian witch specializing in the art of magical healing. But unlike the rest of her renowned streghe family, Giada doesn't want to serve the god Apollo and heal people, nor undertake a looming apprenticeship. Instead, she feels drawn to Diana, goddess of wild animals, and to healing creatures "ordinary and extraordinary," like the baby gryphon she finds. When Giada spills salt and olive oil, and wishes that her esteemed 16-year-old brother Rocco would disappear, he is kidnapped by the Streghe del Malocchio; witches who can "sniff out a person's bad luck." To rescue him, Giada and her new feline familiar, black cat Sinistro, must journey to Malafi, the witches' underground city, and accomplish an impossible task. Via a world where magic and modern medicine coexist, and a secret spell-casting community lives undetected year-round, Cannistra writes a compassionate quest that interrogates tradition, legacy, and humans' effect on the natural world. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Suzie Townsend, New Leaf Literary. (Oct.)

Gifted Clans (Trade)

#2326333 (Vol. 03) Last Fallen Realm (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Graci Kim

Riley Oh wasn't born into her family. Instead, as she recently discovered, she tumbled down to the earth many years ago as the last fallen star. Riley Oh also wasn't born to be a witch. Like, at all--even her status as a divine celestial being comes with zilch in the magical powers department. And Riley Oh definitely wasn't born to be a leader. But now the entire magical community thinks she and her soul-twin, Dahl, are meant to lead the world into the Age of the Final Eclipse (or whatever it is that the Haetae keeps saying they're "destined" to do). Greeeat. And in order to save the world, Riley must do the one thing she was born to do: believe in herself.

978-1-368-07316-5 ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The worlds-shattering conclusion to the Gifted Clans trilogy. Thirteen-year-old Riley Oh's world has turned upside down. Hattie, her adoptive sister, has opted to stay in the Spiritrealm to better understand her problems in the Mortalrealm; her parents have adopted Dahl, her soul twin from back when they lived in the sky; and to top it all off, she and Dahl are supposed to save the world and somehow defeat the Godrealm's vengeful goddesses, which is causing her more than a little anxiety. Luckily, Riley has the support of her friends from both the Spiritrealm and the witch clans, and she's going to need it, because the barriers between the Mortalrealm, the Spiritrealm, and the Godrealm are starting to thin—and even nonwitches have noticed. Nonstop action, a dash of humor, and a world of technology and Korean magic combine once again in the ways that make this series special. In this installment, Riley truly grows and changes (“compassion isn’t only for your friends—it’s for your enemies, too”), but the themes of family and friendship remain ever present, no matter how far into the Godrealm she may stray. With higher stakes, even more creatures from Korean mythology, and plot points from earlier installments finally addressed, this is an intense, satisfying series finale. Funny and heartfelt; a compelling tale featuring a sympathetic cast of characters. (author’s note, glossary) (Fantasy. 9-13)

Gingerbread Witch (Trade)

#2332742 (Vol. 02) Unsleeping Witch (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alexandra Overy

Maud may be made of gingerbread-plus a spark of magic-but she's a real witch! Even if she's still learning, and has a habit of making messes.and might have accidentally unleashed the hundred year old, Class IV sleeping curse that envelops a princess's bramble-covered castle. Oops.

978-1-335-45797-4 ©2023 6-1/4 x 9-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

#2288250 (Vol. 01) Gingerbread Witch (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Alexandra Overy

Maud has grown up in a house made of gingerbread, wanting nothing more than to be a witch like Mother Agatha. But just like all of Agatha's creations-from the magical

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

house made of sweets to the chocolate mousse squirrel, right down to the little sugar mice-Maud will turn back into gingerbread if anything ever happens to Agatha. To save herself and the other gingerbread creations, Maud will have to go into the dangerous forest of the Shadelands to find the First Witch's spellbook.

978-1-335-42686-4 ©2022 6-1/4 x 9-1/2 192 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After Mother Agatha, who raised her in a gingerbread house, is burned to ashes, 12-year-old Maud sets out through the dangerous Shadelands in search of a way to bring her back to life. Overy's new spin on fairy-tale favorites is a series opener that includes characters from "Hansel and Gretel" and "Little Red Riding Hood"--plus a three-legged wolf with violet fur aptly named Grim. Maud is not quite human but not fully witch either--she's a creation of Mother Agatha, who quite literally made her from enchanted gingerbread. After Agatha is pushed into a fire by witch-hunting Wolves, Maud seeks to revive her from the ashes. Along the way, she encounters the Wolves and a mysterious witch named Vira and learns to trust her instincts. Overy's story is well paced; the sense of urgency around saving Agatha keeps the pages turning. Maud's sidekicks--Grim and two gingerbread-made creatures, Nuss the squirrel and Florian the vulture--are utterly charming and full of personality. While most of the plot threads are tied together at the end, a few details are frustratingly left unresolved, possibly leaving room for a sequel. Although made from gingerbread, Maud is described as having white skin. A modern reimagining that reads like a well-told fairy-tale classic. (map) (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After witch-hunting Wolves reduce her mentor to ash, a 12-year-old aspiring witch fashioned of enchanted gingerbread must find a way to restore things in an innovative "Hansel and Gretel" subversion from Overy (the These Feathered Flames series). To maintain the form given to her by Mother Agatha; as well as that of other confectionary creations, including Nuss, a squirrel made of mousse; Maud must retrieve the spell book of the First Witch, long hidden in ancient glade deep in the deadly Shadelands. Inadvertently joining a caravan of Wolves, including Hansel and Gretel, who claim responsibility for Agatha's destruction, Maud must hide her true nature and her mission. As the journey takes them deeper into the Shadelands, she finds common ground with those who would destroy her, but newfound friendships may not be enough to overcome age-old enmity. Maud's good nature and sense of loyalty makes her a memorable protagonist in this refreshing fairy tale twist that considers the witch's point of view. Most characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Patrice Caldwell, New Leaf Literary & Media. (Sept.)

Girls Who Code (Trade)

#2013543 (Vol. 01) Friendship Code (Hardcover (POB))
written by Stacia Deutsch

Lucy is super excited about coding club at school. She has an idea for an app, and can't wait to get started! But her excitement turns to disappointment when she sees who else is at the first meeting: her ex-best friend Sophia; Maya, a cool seventh grader who Lucy's never dared talk to; and Erin, a quiet new girl. Lucy doesn't get to work on her app, and she's paired with Sophia, Maya, and Erin for a group project. But when Lucy starts receiving cryptic notes that seem to be in coding language, the girls join forces to figure out the mystery. They discover that coding takes time, patience, and dedication--and so does friendship!

978-0-399-54251-0 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 144 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 650

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--This fresh series starter from seasoned author Deutsch centers on a group of middle school friends who are learning the basics of computer code. Lucy is finally a sixth grader, which means that she can finally join Coding Club. She wants to figure out how to code so that she can make an app to help her sick uncle keep track of his medication. Unfortunately, the club members don't even get to use the computers during the first meeting! Plus, Lucy is put on a team with a former friend; an intimidating, sophisticated seventh grader; and the new girl who came into Coding Club sobbing. Over the course of a week, Lucy and her teammates are led on a mystery code-based scavenger hunt. Following the directions that are left in an envelope attached to her locker, Lucy relies on each of her teammates to help her decipher the messages, each of which teaches them the very basic elements of coding. Readers will appreciate the characters' diversity of interests and their love of coding. VERDICT A complex topic made accessible; recommended for elementary and middle school libraries and for collections that serve budding coders.-Kristin Unruh, Siersma -Elementary School, Warren, MI Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2018596 (Vol. 02) Team BFF: Race to the Finish! (Hardcover (POB))

written by Stacia Deutsch

Sophia and her coding club BFFs have the best time together. Sure, they work on coding projects, but mostly they gossip about crushes, eat cookies, and do totally silly impersonations. Now they're about to participate in their first hackathon--a full day of coding and meeting other coders--so it's time to step up their game!

978-0-399-54252-7 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 660

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$13.99

#2056875 (Vol. 03) Lights, Music, Code! (Hardcover (POB))

written by Jo Whitemore

Maya and her friends from coding club have an exciting new project: they're coding lights and music for the winter dance! But when Maya's old troublemaking friend Maddie moves to town, Maya starts spending a lot of time with her, and less time with her coding friends. Maddie just gets her in a way that her other friends don't.

978-0-399-54253-4 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 560

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$13.99

#2080565 (Vol. 04) Spotlight on Coding Club! (Hardcover (POB))

written by Michelle Schusterman

It's almost time for the talent show at school, and Erin couldn't be more excited. It's her time to take center stage! Plus, she and her friends from coding club are putting together an awesome coding program for the show. But Erin has a big secret: she has anxiety.

978-0-399-54254-1 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 680

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$13.99

Going Wild (Trade)

#2004660 (Vol. 01) Going Wild (Paperback (Trade))

written by Lisa McMann

Charlie Wilde knew her life would change forever when her family moved from Chicago to Arizona--but she had no idea how right she'd really be after she discovers a mysterious bracelet. After putting it on, Charlie notices odd things happening. She's suddenly able to run across the soccer field as fast as a cheetah and lift heavy objects as if she were as strong as an elephant. Of course, Charlie would be thrilled about her transformation if she had any idea how the bracelet works or how to control her amazing powers. So she and her new friends must work together to figure out what's happening to her and uncover the truth behind the incredible device.

978-0-06-233715-3 ©2017 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 400 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 12.0 RC Lvl 4.4 Lexile 710

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$6.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Charlie Wilde is moving to Arizona, leaving behind her best friend and all that she knows, where her physician mother and biologist father have taken new jobs. When she gets there, she struggles to fit in at her new school. As she searches for her soccer equipment, hoping that a tryout for the school's team will change her outlook on her new situation, Charlie comes across a package containing an odd metal bracelet. She realizes that the bracelet will lend her powers matching those of several animals, making her a sort of chimera. When Dr. Gray, the man behind a sinister group bent on retrieving Charlie's bracelet, discovers its whereabouts, he will stop at nothing to get it back, leaving Charlie and her new friends, Mac and Maria, with far more questions than answers. In this first installment of a new series from the creator of "The Unwanteds," readers will find themselves on a fast-paced adventure with a very likable heroine. VERDICT Fans of Rick Riordan and Brandon Mull will not be disappointed.-Wayne R. Cherry Jr., St. Pius X High School, Houston Copyright 2016. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2025419 (Vol. 02) Predator Vs. Prey (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa McMann

In Predator vs. Prey, Charlie Wilde's dad has been abducted by masked figures who might not even be completely human. And it will take more than her incredible bracelet--which gives her powers from the animal kingdom--to rescue him.

978-0-06-233717-7 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 12.0 RC Lvl 4.3 Lexile 690

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

#2080114 (Vol. 03) Clash of Beasts (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisa McMann

Charlie, Mac, and Maria rescued the Project Chimera scientists from Dr. Gray, but they still weren't able to catch him and his beastly henchmen. And now that Kelly has betrayed the kids and joined forces with the enemy, their foes are closer than ever to enacting their master plan: transforming humanity into a monstrous new species.

978-0-06-233720-7 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 13.0 Lexile 710

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Golems and Goblins (Trade)

#2290203 (Vol. 01) Naomi Teitelbaum Ends the World (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Samara Shanker

Naomi Teitelbaum is so ready for her Bat Mitzvah. Her prayers are memorized and she's definitely got a handle on her Torah portion (well, almost). Then she gets a mysterious gift: a tiny clay Golem. To Naomi's shock, it comes to life-and obeys her every command. But with each command, the Golem grows...and gets harder to hide.

To keep herself out of trouble and the Golem out of harm's way, Naomi gives the Golem well-intended instructions: save the world. Unfortunately, this leaves more room for interpretation than Naomi thought. Before long, the Golem is wreaking havoc all over Los Angeles, and only Naomi and her friends can stop it.

978-1-6659-0502-2 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 850

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Naomi Teitelbaum doesn't intend to end the world, but when she receives a tiny Golem as an anonymous bat mitzvah gift, chaos ensues. The Golem needs tasks to keep him busy, but he grows with each job he finishes, and it becomes increasingly difficult to hide him from Naomi's sister and moms. Additionally, Naomi's started seeing mysterious beings around her L.A. neighborhood, none of whom appear quite human. She enlists best friends Eitan and Becca, also preparing for their own bar and bat mitzvahs, who opt to give the Golem a meaningful task that's likely take a long time: improving the world by mitigating gun violence, saving wilderness areas, and assisting unhoused individuals. Linking the Golem tradition with a varied array of Jewish folktales, debut author Shanker gives Naomi and her friends; who draw on their varied skill sets and faith in each other; problems to solve, challenges to overcome, and unexpected sources of counsel. Despite a few loose ends, the three tweens are stubbornly realistic even as they grapple with creatures from legend and folklore, and the eventual solution comes from Jewish ethical precepts, as befits those tasked with taking on their roles as adults in the Jewish community. Protagonists cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Stephanie Hansen, Metamorphosis Literary. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—With just a few weeks until her bat mitzvah, 12-year-old Naomi receives a mysterious box from an unknown sender. Inside is a small clay figurine identified as the Golem, which Naomi unwittingly brings to life. It begins following her and responds to any request Naomi makes, which at first seems exciting and fun to her and her (also Jewish) friends, Becca and Eitan. However, before long Naomi and her friends start experiencing ghost-like encounters, and the Golem begins growing exponentially. When they send the Golem on tasks to do good deeds, their idea backfires and great chaos descends upon Los Angeles. With the help of rabbis (both living and ghostly), Naomi and her friends research Jewish folklore as they attempt to understand why the Golem was sent, his purpose, and how to rein in what is happening without getting themselves snatched by disguised demons. Shanker has created a refreshing, fast-paced book, while centering a culture often overlooked in middle grade fiction. VERDICT Full of adventure and Jewish traditions and customs, Jewish readers will relish in recognizing their own culture, while other kids will root for good over evil and learn about the Jewish faith along the way.—Michele Shaw

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2332995 (Vol. 02) Rebecca Reznik Reboots the Universe (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Samara Shanker Rebecca Reznik is having a rough time. Her dad lost his job, and her parents are fighting all the time. Her obnoxious brother, Jake, is acting out even more than usual. And post-Bat Mitzvah Becca is expected to be grown up and spiritually mature-whatever that means-but in the wake of these upsets to her routine, she just feels frustrated and helpless. Even worse, she's starting to suspect that the awful vibes surrounding her house might be about more than family drama. 978-1-6659-3523-4 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$17.99

Good Sports League (Prebound)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2331792 (Vol. 01) Ultimate Goal (Prebound) written by Tommy Greenwald Ben Cutler loves everything about soccer! He's got a great team, and they have the best pre-game chants and half-time jokes. He and his best friend, Jay-Jay, even invent dances for when they score a goal! And Ben is good at soccer. Like REALLY good. Too good for a casual rec team. Soon, he's recruited for a travel team. 978-1-5364-8073-3 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$16.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews eaves the recreational league for a more competitive team and discovers a different sports culture. Ben Cutler love playing soccer with his best friend, Jay-Jay Wright, in the Pizza League. Their team, the Anchovies, celebrate their goals with silly dances and enjoy postgame snacks, win or lose. But when Coach Cleary invites Ben to play for the West Harbor Soccer Academy, Ben finds a much more serious and less fun environment. He feels nervous before games and is surprised and confused by the "no joking around in soccer" attitude of both coach and players; charts listing the differences between West Harbor and the Pizza League are featured throughout. "Host-slash-narrator-slash-play-by-play man" Freddy introduces the Good Sports League series and pops up in graphic novel-style illustrations interspersed throughout; many readers will appreciate a break from the text, while some might find the switch between formats jarring. Freddy states the moral up front--sports should be enjoyable--and this fast-paced, heartfelt story bears out the message. The story closes out with fun activities, including an invitation for readers to create their own sporty nicknames, a sports quiz, and space for readers to write down a list of their goals in life. Ben presents white in the dynamic grayscale illustrations, while Jay-Jay is Black, and Freddy appears to be brown-skinned. Secondary characters are diverse. Good-hearted sporty fun. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Good Sports League (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2342732 (Vol. 02) Perfect Pitch (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tommy Greenwald Annabella Donatello likes to do everything. She likes to draw, fly kites, play soccer, cook, and eat what she cooks. She even likes to do math! But there are two things she loves most of all: softball and performing. So she's thrilled when she gets cast in the school play, on top of being the star pitcher of her softball team. Unfortunately, her softball coach is less thrilled about Annabella's busy schedule. And with the	1	$14.99 championships coming up, the pressure is on to make softball her number one priority, even when an important practice conflicts with opening night of the show. To be in two places at once, Annabella hatches a plan that will put all of her softball and acting skills to the test.

978-1-4197-6367-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 144 pgs.

Grades 1 - 4 Dewey# Fic

Goosebumps (Prebound)

#2346761 (Vol. 01) Scariest. Book. Ever. (Prebound)

written by R. L. Stine

From the delightfully twisted mind of R.L. Stine comes a fresh new vision for the fan-favorite brand. This new series will feature an ALL NEW line-up of incredible villains, with iconic monsters as you've never seen them before, whose antics are destined to make them every bit as beloved as Slappy. This exciting new Goosebumps series will have the same humor and terrifying tone that millions of readers love, but will be bigger, bolder, funnier, and scarier!

978-1-5364-8181-5 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.3 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 430

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.95

#2070412 Bride of the Living Dummy (Prebound)

written by R. L. Stine

When Slappy, the world's most evil ventriloquist dummy, shows up after being abandoned by his previous owner, things start to go wrong around the house. But this time Slappy may have met his match. There's another bad doll who loves to make a mess of things. Everyone better watch out for this imperfect couple.

978-1-5364-4574-9 ©2018 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.0 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 4.3 Lexile 440

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

Goosebumps SlappyWorld (Prebound)

#2053985 (Vol. 04) Please Do Not Feed the Weirdo (Prebound)

written by R. L. Stine

Robby and his sister Karla beg their parents to take them to a big carnival that has opened on the other side of town. When they arrive, the two kids are delighted by the rides, the sideshow, the interesting displays, and the great food booths.

978-1-5364-3367-8 ©2018 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 2.5 Lexile 450

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.95

#2064923 (Vol. 05) Escape from Shudder Mansion (Prebound)

written by R. L. Stine

In an old-fashioned "trapped-in-a-haunted-house" story, twins Riley and Scarlett receive an interesting assignment from their teacher, Mrs. Stermon. Everyone in class needs to do a documentary video about an adventure, something exciting that they experienced.

978-1-5364-4145-1 ©2018 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.6 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 2.6 Lexile 480

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

#2106793 (Vol. 08) Dummy Meets the Mummy (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

After being put back to sleep and abandoned in an old museum, Slappy is brought to life by a curious girl on a school trip. Out for revenge, Slappy uses his powers to raise an army of creatures from the exhibits. But when the museum closes, Slappy and his new friends are locked inside with Arragatis, an ancient mummy with his own plan for revenge. It's dummy versus mummy as Slappy faces his most dangerous and frightening opponent yet! Can Slappy defeat this ancient adversary? Or will it be a wrap for this dummy?

978-1-5364-5666-0 ©2019 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 150 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 470

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

#2080032 (Vol. 06) Ghost of Slappy (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Slappy's back as a ghost! And this time, the only thing you'll play is hide-and-go-shriek!

978-1-5364-4750-7 ©2018 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.3 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 2.5 Lexile 440

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.95

#1995358 (Vol. 01) Slappy Birthday to You (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

It's bad enough Ian Barker has to spend his twelfth birthday with his sister and their two annoying cousins. The four of them can't ever hang out without getting into trouble. Vinnie and Jonny always want to play with Ian's stuff. They take extra turns and break everything they touch. Even Ian's new birthday presents are up for grabs. But when Ian gets a Slappy dummy from his dad, things go from bad to worse. When Slappy's in charge, you don't fight over him, he fights over you!

978-1-5364-0414-2 ©2017 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.6 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 490

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.95

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Chuckles blend with chills in this first book in the Goosebumps SlappyWorld spinoff series, which resurrects Slappy, the ventriloquist dummy featured in some of Stine's earlier novels. In his new incarnation, Slappy is a 12th-birthday gift to Ian from his father, who refurbishes broken dolls; Slappy was sent to him to repair; in a package with no return address. Information that Ian's younger sister, Molly, discovers online casts an eerie shadow on Slappy: a sorcerer carved his head out of wood from a cursed coffin, and six words uttered aloud will supposedly bring the dummy to life. After one of Ian's obnoxious twin cousins shouts out the magic words, it unleashes pranks and insulting quips from the wisecracking Slappy, all of which are blamed on Ian. Stine again deploys a string of cliffhangers to close out many chapters, creating a jittery cycle of scares and relief. The author's many fans won't mind the fairly formulaic plot that unfolds, and the finale suggests that more mischief is ahead from other not-so-inanimate dolls. Ages 8--12. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Be very careful what you wish for. For Ian's birthday, his father surprises him with a unique gift: Slappy the Dummy. As veteran Stine readers are bound to know, Slappy is no ordinary toy. Ian's obnoxious cousins, Jonny and Vinny, who have a penchant for playing mean jokes on Ian and his little sister Molly, kidnap the dummy and read aloud the magical words that bring the evil creature to life. Unfortunately, no one believes Ian when he explains that the dummy is responsible for all the terrible things starting to happen. The cousins do, eventually, get their comeuppance. Fans of "Goosebumps" will find the usual winning formula at play here-short chapters, lightning fast pacing, slapdash character development, and groan-inducing humor balanced with slight scares. VERDICT Stock well where Stine devotees thrive.-Valentine Muyumba, Terre Haute, Indiana State University Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2006979 (Vol. 02) Attack of the Jack (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Devin and his sister Violet are visiting their Uncle Jack for the summer. He lives in an old house by the seashore. Jack was a sailor and he has collected strange and fascinating items from the sea. Exploring a back room, Devin and Violet discover a locked trunk.

978-1-5364-1296-3 ©2017 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 3.1 Lexile 520

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.95

#2018413 (Vol. 03) I Am Slappy's Evil Twin (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Luke Harrison's dad makes horror movies. It's very fun to be around such scary stuff- especially when you have your own monster museum at home. But when two ventriloquist dummies join the collection, things get real creepy. Real-life creepy! Slappy and Snappy can walk and talk on their own.

978-1-5364-2160-6 ©2017 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 2.4 Lexile 470

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.95

#2247427 (Vol. 15) Judy and the Beast (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Judy Glassman lives with her brother, Kenny, and father, Noah, in a village at the foot of Evil Rock. Every winter, Kenny accompanies their dad up to the mansion at the top of the mountain to assist the rich, eccentric Grendel family with their house repairs. But this year, Judy convinces her dad to let her come too. Judy has heard whispers about the Beast of Evil Rock -- a half-human creature who stalks the crags. And she's determined to find out for herself if it's true.

978-1-5364-7029-1 ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 460

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.95

#2234257 (Vol. 14) Fifth-Grade Zombies (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Scarlett Martenson and her friends are total zombie fans! With Ross as the brains, Annie as the makeup artist, Owen as the fright master, and Scarlett as their leader, the group is unstoppable as they terrorize their unsuspecting neighbors. But when Granny Z moves into the creepy, old, abandoned house at the bottom of the hill, things get rotten for the zombie club.

978-1-5364-6892-2 ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 450

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.95

#2181557 (Vol. 12) My Friend Slappy (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Barton Suggs has it rough. He only has one friend, Lizzie Hellman. The school bullies

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.95

are out to get him. And nobody believes him about it! After Barton gets pranked again, he's had enough! So when Barton brings Slappy to life, he's thrilled to find a new "friend" that's willing to help him get revenge on the bullies. Slappy's never had someone like him before. What's up with this Barton kid?

978-1-5364-6594-5 ©2020 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.3 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 430

#2167499 (Vol. 11) They Call Me the Night Howler! (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Slappy does his scariest thing yet!

978-1-5364-6391-0 ©2020 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 430

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

#2093304 (Vol. 07) It's Alive! It's Alive! (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Livvy and Jayden are the stars of their school's robotics team. Livvy is especially enthusiastic because her own mother works in a robotics lab and experiments with Artificial Intelligence. To impress her mom, Livvy and Jayden build a robot.

Desperate to win, Livvy and Jayden "borrow" an Artificial Intelligence module.

978-1-5364-5334-8 ©2019 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 148 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 2.5 Lexile 470

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.95

#2157052 (Vol. 10) Diary of a Dummy (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

What do Zoey and Billy Traister do when they find an abandoned ventriloquist dummy in an empty lot? They take him home, of course! As the pair tries to figure out why someone would throw out a perfectly good dummy, they accidentally bring Slappy to life. A night of horror ensues until the siblings put Slappy back into his case. But when they find Slappy's diary and clues that could lead to gold, they'll have to find Slappy's second diary while evading the evil dummy and other terrors.

978-1-5364-6187-9 ©2020 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 460

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

#2122092 (Vol. 09) Revenge of the Invisible Boy! (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Magic Club is supposed to be fun for Frankie Miller and his friends. But that pest, Ari Goodwyn is always ruining everyone's tricks. After a really embarrassing fail, Frankie wants revenge. When the legendary magician, Mystical Marvin, comes to town to perform his daring stunts, Frankie sees an opportunity to get even with Ari. There's only one problem: everything goes wrong.

978-1-5364-5924-1 ©2019 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 450

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

#2328380 (Vol. 19) Fright Night (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Kelly Crosby is the new kid in school. So far, it's not going so well. He's already gotten lost, had trouble making friends, and annoyed the monster that lives in the school basement.

978-1-5364-8008-5 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 420

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.95

#2322190 (Vol. 18) Night of the Squawker (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Beak-a-boo, it sees you! Cooper Klavan and his sister Anna are fishing with their parents at a woodland pond when they come across an injured bird. Anna, a huge animal lover, insists on taking it home to rehabilitate. But the bird really does not want to be rescued. It bites Anna, and scares Cooper. Soon, Anna is behaving very strangely. She's perching high up in trees, gathering sticks to hide in her room, and refusing to eat eggs-- once one of her favorite foods. Cooper doesn't want to jump to any conclusions, but his sister seems to be going to the birds.

978-1-5364-7861-7 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.2 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 410

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.95

#2271794 (Vol. 16) Slappy in Dreamland (Prebound)
written by R.L. Stine

This is Slappy's world -- You only scream in it! Richard Hsieh's life is about to become a total nightmare. His dad studies dreams and they hook his new Slappy doll up to the dream machine as a joke. All of a sudden, Richard's dreams are becoming scarier and scarier. Each time, seeing Slappy, his birthday present, come to life and wreak havoc. But they're only dreams, right? When his cousin Willow comes to spend a few days with him, she, too, begins to dream of Slappy. It's impossible! But when Slappy threatens to invade more kids' dreams, they'll have to figure out how to defeat him before he becomes a dream master.

978-1-5364-7261-5 ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 450

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.95

#2218803 (Vol. 13) Monster Blood Is Back (Prebound)
written by R. L. Stine

Sascha Nelson and her best friend Nicole Miller love to cook! After school, they spend their time concocting new dishes in the kitchen. So when their favorite TV show Kids Big Chef Food Fights comes to their school for a special competition, they're ecstatic! But with school cheaters Ashli and Diggs also in the show, things don't seem as fun anymore.

978-1-5364-6753-6 ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 470

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.95

#2281660 (Vol. 17) Haunting with the Stars (Prebound)

written by R.L. Stine

Space-obsessed Murphy Shannon is pumped that his 6th grade class is visiting the Rayburne Observatory. Except, being a know-it-all means he's totally bored with the lectures he has to sit through. So when classmates Orly and Cleo say they should explore on their own, Murphy sneaks out with them. But when they come face-to-face with the strange Dr. Rayburne and his experiments, they realize they may be in way over their heads. A grand adventure in space may be in store for them, if they can survive...

978-1-5364-7408-4 ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.4 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 460

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.95

Graveyard Girls (Trade)

#2291393 1-2-3-4, I Declare a Thumb War (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisi Harrison

Meet Whisper, Frannie, Sophie, Gemma, and Zuzu, five friends who tell eerie tales by night and navigate middle school drama by day. In Misery Falls, Oregon, it is the 100th anniversary of the electrocution of the town's most infamous killer, Silas Hoke, and the town is abuzz. When a mysterious text message leads the girls to the cemetery--where Silas Hoke is buried!--life can't get any creepier. Except, yes, it can, thanks to the surprise storyteller who meets them at the cemetery, inspires the first-ever meeting of the Graveyard Girls, and sets the stage for a terrifying tale from Whisper that they'll never forget.

978-1-4549-4454-6 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 620

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist The Grim Sleepers club, where sixth-graders Whisper, Frannie, Sophie, Gemma, and Zuzu have sleepovers and share scary stories, has gotten them through difficult times at home and at school. When Hoke Week arrives, the anniversary of the death of murderer Silas Hoke, and the town takes part in various activities to keep his spirit away for another year, each girl receives an anonymous message inviting her to the cemetery where Hoke is buried. Surprised at what they find, together the friends try to gather evidence of Hoke's spirit. This clever, fast-paced story is filled with thrills that will have readers flipping pages into the night. Each friend has her own personality and complex problems, and the girls form a support group for one another. The town of Misery Falls gives an eerie feeling resembling that of Fear Street's Shadyside, and the open ending will have readers excited for the next installment in the series. A strong first title for fans of scary stories, horror movies, and things that go bump in the night.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An infamous killer targets a quartet of tweens in this ghost story: centered novel by Harrison (the Pack series) and Kraus (the Teddies Saga). A century ago, Misery Falls, Ore., PE teacher Silas Hoke, a former Marine with a wooden leg, was sentenced to the electric chair for murdering a student tormentor; every year since, the grisly legend has it, he returns to claim another girl. Now, the town annually observes Hoke Week to banish the murderer's spirit; a tradition that's also a significant tourist draw. But as Misery Falls gears up for the celebrations, meek-looking but outspoken sixth grader Willow "Whisper" Martin is more concerned with the Grim Sleepers; a monthly club she's formed with her friends, who gather to share frightening yarns. When the club members receive an anonymous text inviting them to meet in the cemetery one school night, the event results in a genuinely frightening telling about the dangers of technology. Quick chapters alternate character perspectives; including Hoke's menacing first-person voice; propelling the plot while providing insight into each tween's personal turmoil around bullying, pressure to succeed, and more. Most characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Richard Abate, 3 Arts. (Sept.)

#2350210 Scream for the Camera (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lisi Harrison

It's been a month since the Graveyard Girls-Gemma, Whisper, Sophie, Frannie, and Zuzu-discovered Silas Hoke's empty grave. A month, and no answers. That changes when messages from the other side start to creep up on the Graveyard Girls. Who is trying to reach them... and why? Meanwhile, straight-A Sophie is spending way more time hanging out with "Danger Me" and way less time with the Graveyard Girls and her schoolwork. Will her scary story be enough to win back her pals, or will her picture-perfect life become the ultimate photo bomb?

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

978-1-4549-4456-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 670

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews nds tackle ghostly and real-world problems. Frannie, Whisper, Sophie, Gemma, and Zuzu--members of scary-story club the Graveyard Girls--are trying to find out who dug up the body of local legend Silas Hoke. Whisper finds a clue in her dad's therapist girlfriend's confidential patient notes that leads the girls to a local mortuary. A more pressing problem, though, is the fact that Zuzu has been possessed by Ginny Baker, Silas Hoke's murder victim. As the other girls try to figure out how to dispel the spirit, they have other problems to deal with. Frannie accidentally brings bad luck to her play and must concede her role to her nemesis and understudy. Gemma realizes that her efforts to save her family business, the Spirit Sanctuary, may be doing more harm than good. And the boy Sophie has been texting convinces her to move further outside her comfort zone than she's ready for, inspiring her scary story about a boy who turns out to be a monster. This story nicely balances supernatural and real-life plotlines and features plenty of imaginative creepy elements. With a plot that follows closely on the events of 2022's 1-2-3-4 I Declare a Thumb War and a cliffhanger ending, this installment will be best appreciated by committed series readers. Most characters read white; Zuzu's surname cues her as Japanese, and the cover art depicts Sophie as Black. Friendship is at the heart of this humorous, spooky tale. (Horror. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Graysen Foxx, School Treasure Hunter (Trade)

#2319061 (Vol. 01) Graysen Foxx and the Treasure of Principal Redbeard (Hardcover (Trade))

written by J. Scott Savage

Ordinary Elementary is anything but ordinary. Below the classrooms are winding, abandoned, underground passages filled with lost treasures. Fifth-grader Graysen Foxx, aka The Gray Fox--finder of secrets, solver of mysteries, and explorer of the unknown--is hot on the trail of the legendary treasure of long-since-retired Principal Redbeard, which includes a decades' worth of confiscated gadgets, rare comic books, first-edition Pokemon trading cards, an original Rubik's Cube, and a retro football handheld video game.

978-1-63993-103-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A long-lost treasure eludes the grasp of a determined adventure seeker. Fifth grader Graysen Foxx is on the hunt for the trove of Principal Redbeard. The rumored collection of confiscated toys, comic books, trading cards, and old-school gaming devices has been lost to the ages, but Graysen, who reads White, is determined to uncover its location. Unfortunately, his nemesis, Raven Ransom, a redheaded fellow fifth grader, hopes to find the treasure for herself and will stop at nothing to claim it. Graysen is ready for action, feats of derring-do, and the occasional brain teasing puzzle. With third grade twins Maya and Jack Delgado as his allies, The Gray Fox is on the hunt, with Red Raven, her Second Grade Spy Network, and ruthless sixth graders looking at every turn. The riff on Indiana Jones and Uncharted for the middle-grade set works well enough, peppered as it is with effusive verbiage that will get pulses going right from the start. The problem comes when the novel needs to keep up that pace: The high stakes and rollicking action get a bit cumbersome when breathlessly and repeatedly recounted at the same pitch. The modulation is off a bit, making the novel feel too long. Still, Graysen is an engaging protagonist, and his world is charming enough that readers will likely stick with it. Names signal ethnic diversity in the supporting cast. Final art not seen. A strong premise let down by its execution. (Adventure. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5--Treasure seeker Graysen Foxx is on the cusp of his greatest find: a laminated hall pass that will provide students in need with unlimited access to their elementary school. When his plan is foiled by his archnemesis the Red Raven, Graysen is stuck in detention. With gentle prodding from his classroom teacher and detention warden, he stumbles on to the discovery of the ages, that the fabled treasure of Principal Redbeard is real! With the help of two resourceful third grade assistants and an army of first grade soldiers, Graysen dodges a wily sixth grade mafia boss, the cranky janitorial cat, and a sneaky group of second grade spies as he tracks down the greatest fortune of all. With an overemphasis on heavy-handed social-emotional lessons and underdeveloped characters, this high-octane adventure falls flat. Stilted and unnatural dialogue makes the characters feel more like plot and theme devices instead of relatable, authentic individuals. Riddled with awkward similes, such as "the school clocks were as unreliable as a potty-training three-year-old," and a storyline that is too far-fetched to be believable, this plot-heavy adventure will find a limited readership. VERDICT Not recommended for purchase.--Louie Lauer Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2349902 (Vol. 02) Graysen Foxx and the Curse of the Illuminderdy (Hardcover (Trade))
written by J. Scott Savage

Graysen Foxx is no stranger to the mysteries hidden in Ordinary Elementary—the bat-filled tunnels, the secret passageways, the underground chambers, and the sticky spiderwebs—and he's on the hunt for a creepy old painting that will guarantee his victory in the school's Halloween room contest. But finding and claiming the painting is only the beginning of a wild adventure filled with puzzles that will put Graysen's treasure-hunting skills to the test.

978-1-63993-170-5 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Great Escapes (HarperCollins)

#2157619 (Vol. 01) Nazi Prison Camp Escape (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Michael Burgan

In the spring of 1942, Royal Air Force pilot Bill Ash's plane was surrounded and shot down by Germans. He was eventually brought to Stalag Luft III, a notorious camp for prisoners of war. The Germans boasted that the camp which was isolated, heavily guarded, and surrounded by wire fences was escape proof. But Ash was determined to prove them wrong.

978-0-06-286036-1 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 128 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 840

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Readers of this new historical fiction series meet Mr. Bill Ash, a U.S. citizen who joined the Canadian Royal Air Force in 1940. His indomitable spirit permeates the story as the author realistically depicts Ash's multiple escape attempts and the consequences of his failures. Informative sidebars about topics as varied as the Great Depression and prisoner-of-war camps in the United States complement the text by providing additional context. At least one sidebar feels out of place, however, because it details events that have not yet occurred. Readers learn through an author's note that the story is based on a real person and events, with fictionalized dialogue. Black-and-white illustrations serve the action of the text well. Since this is Ash's story, his character has the most depth, and the author portrays him positively throughout the narrative. The novel's strengths are the action-driven plot and the believable setting. A useful bibliography lists both adult and juvenile nonfiction titles. VERDICT A straightforward account that highlights a lesser-known World War II service member. Purchase where there is high demand for WWII literature.—Hilary Writt, Sullivan University, Lexington, KY

#2158015 (Vol. 02) Journey to Freedom, 1838 (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sherri Winston

Winter 1838, Kentucky. Determined to save her toddler son from being sold as a slave, the woman who became known as Eliza Harris began a long journey to freedom. Her goal: to escape across the frozen Ohio River, the boundary between the North and the South, between slavery and freedom in America.

978-0-06-286039-2 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 128 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 880

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2163451 (Vol. 03) Civil War Breakout (Paperback (Trade))
written by W. N. Brown

Civil War, 1863. Union soldiers Colonel Thomas Rose and Major A.G. Hamilton were captured by the Confederate Army and sent to one of the most horrific prisons

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$4.99

ever run--Libby Prison. Infamous for its harsh, overcrowded, and vermin-infested conditions, many soldiers entered Libby but very few left alive. However, Rose and Hamilton were determined to escape.

978-0-06-286041-5 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 128 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 2.0

#2189912 (Vol. 04) Survival in the Wilderness (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Steven Otfinoski

December 1920. Three US Navy lieutenants--Louis Kloor, Stephen Farrell, and Walter Hinton--boarded a hot air balloon for a routine training flight. But as the sun set, heavy rain and wind knocked the men off course, forcing an emergency landing deep within the snowy Canadian wilderness.

978-0-06-286045-3 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 128 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 2.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

#2220230 (Vol. 05) Terror in the Tower of London (Hardcover (Trade))
written by W. N. Brown

London, 1716. Lord William Nithsdale has been charged with treason after fighting against the British crown. Found guilty, Nithsdale is sent to the infamous Tower of London, where he awaits execution. When Lady Winifred Maxwell, Nithsdale's wife, learns of her husband's death sentence, she sets out to free him from the "Bloody Tower." If her plan works, her husband will escape his grim fate. If it doesn't, both their heads will roll!

978-0-06-286048-4 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 128 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 2.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

#2235559 (Vol. 06) Across the Minefields (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Pamela D. Toler

June 1942. In the hot desert military camp of Bir Hakeim, Free French Officer Susan Travers was one of few women at the battlefield of World War II. German Nazis had surrounded her troop. With their forces outnumbered and low on ammo, the French general gave a shocking order. They were going to breakout in the middle of the night--crossing through dangerous minefields and enemy territory--to reach their British allies. And Susan would have to steer them to safety.

978-0-06-286069-9 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 128 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

Great Pet Heist (Trade)

#2161505 (Vol. 01) Great Pet Heist (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Emily Ecton

Butterbean and her fellow pets have to come up with a grand plan to support

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

themselves in case Mrs. Food is unable to keep taking care of them. Can these animal friends can pull off the heist of the century?

978-1-5344-5536-8 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 520

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 When elderly Mrs. Food takes a spill and winds up in the hospital, her five pets spiral into a panicked frenzy. A temporary guardian is assigned to them, but the anxious animals—an aloof cat, a hyper dachshund, a chatty mynah bird, and two bonded rats—decide that the only solution is to amass their own wealth to control their destiny. Their initial pile of riches is a bit grim (including compression socks, a sparkly button, and a two-week-old piece of toast), but the pup reveals that she picked up a rare coin from another resident, and thus Coin Man becomes the target of a hastily planned heist. Ecton writes entirely from the animals' point of view, aided by the occasional, humorous black-and-white sketch. It's amusing just to watch the merry band of misfit pets navigate the wide world of the eclectic high-rise apartment, but there's enough true suspense to keep the larger story moving. This classic caper may have young readers looking sideways at their own pets when the story is through. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Five spunky pets go to extraordinary lengths to save themselves from abandonment. The pets: wiener dog Butterbean; Walt, nee Lucretia, a secretive black cat; Oscar, a dignified mynah; and Marco and Polo, an exuberant pair of rats. The hapless owner: an elderly woman affectionately dubbed Mrs. Food. The incident: a bad fall (entirely Butterbean's fault, though she hates to admit it) that lands Mrs. Food in the hospital and sends the pets scrambling to become "independently wealthy" lest they be removed from her apartment to the shelter. The accidental discovery of the wealthy Coin Man leads them to plot the "heist of the century" with the assistance of an octopus named Chad and vent-dwelling Wild Rat Wallace. Ecton tells the story from the pets' perspectives, which, while impressively executed, proves to be this madcap adventure's biggest shortcoming. The limited experience of the pets ensures that the human issues depicted—international crime, care of the elderly, deployed caregivers, deception of Child Protective Services—are treated more flippantly than their gravity merits. The scenes dealing with the kidnapping of a child are particularly dire; the character of the Coin Man feels almost too sinister for an otherwise lighthearted children's novel. Yet lighthearted it is: Bantering dialogue, the distinct personalities of the pets (expressively illustrated by Mottram), and the whimsical premise make for an exciting caper. Mrs. Food and the Coin Man present white; the pets' temporary caregiver has Korean heritage. Hilarious but haphazard. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—This cute tale about five household pets in a New York City apartment revolves around their plan to pull off a heist and become "independently wealthy" after their owner is taken away for a medical emergency. Teaming up with ventilation system rats, a lonely girl, and a crafty octopus, they set their sights on a frightening neighbor and his stash of unusual coins. Ecton creates a strong personality for each animal, from the hyper dog Butterbean to the know-it-all bird Oscar, and pet lovers will be sure to enjoy the banter between them. Some plot elements involving the humans are a little less fleshed out and stretch plausibility, leading the book's resolution to feel rushed; but this will be easily overlooked by those who enjoy the pets' adventures. Adorable illustrations from Mottram help readers visualize the characters and add an appealing visual element. VERDICT A story sure to charm children who like to imagine what their beloved pets are up to when they are away. Purchase for fiction collections that serve patrons who enjoy animal-centric stories.—Katie McBride Moench, New Glarus Middle and High School Library, WI

#2240786 (Vol. 02) Great Ghost Hoax (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Emily Ecton

Butterbean is bored. She and the other pets pulled off a heist once, but that was like a million years ago. Nothing exciting has happened since then. That is, until Mrs. Third Floor shows up at their apartment, convinced there's a ghost in the building.

978-1-5344-7991-3 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.7 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 490

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

#2319950 Great Vandal Scandal (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Emily Ecton

Big plans are afoot! Butterbean is going to become a therapist (unless maybe she means a therapy dog?). The white cat is going to do a commercial for caviar-flavored pet treats. And Wallace is moving into a great new apartment. But these plans don't include a group of rowdy raccoons taking over the loading dock and throwing the building into turmoil. (Companion)

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

 978-1-6659-1905-0 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 510

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A series of break-ins gives the Strathmore apartment building's animal detectives an exciting new mystery to solve. Who is plundering the basement storage cages at night? Only momentarily dismayed by a hysterical Yorkie's reports of scratching claws and "THOUSANDS OF GLOWING EYES," the motley multispecies squad--consisting at this point of two dogs, a feline diva, three rats, a mynah bird, and an octopus named Chad--feverishly plan and execute an investigation under the noses of their oblivious human companions, Mrs. Food and her temporary ward, Madison Park. They run up against a troop of foraging raccoons, sneaking in beneath the security cameras to wreak havoc. How to get them to lay off? When threats don't work any better than polite requests, it's time for a different approach. Maybe a little sympathy? (Butterbean the spaniel is scheduled for therapy dog tryouts.) Maybe the troop can be transformed into...a troupe? (The unnamed cat has starred in many cat food commercials.) The nonstop action and droll exchanges offer chuckles aplenty on the way to a tidy resolution made all the more satisfactory by a hilarious viral video and a well-deserved comedown for nasty nemesis Mrs. Hates Dogs on Six. Mottram's rich, if rare, spots and vignettes feature creatures as aglow with character as the racially diverse human cast. Another wild caper for this winning animal ensemble. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Great Shelby Holmes (Trade)

#1979839 (Vol. 01) Great Shelby Holmes (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elizabeth Eulberg
 Shelby Holmes is not your average sixth grader. She's nine years old, barely four feet tall, and the best detective her Harlem neighborhood has ever seen--always using logic and a bit of pluck (which yes, some might call bossiness) to solve the toughest crimes.
 978-1-68119-051-8 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 7.0 RC Lvl 4.3 Lexile 690

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal tson are back in school and back to sleuthing. When Shelby meets her new science teacher, Mr. Crosby she immediately senses something suspicious about him. When his watch is stolen, Holmes takes the case and is faced with her greatest adversary yet. Has Holmes met her match? Holmes's know-it-all personality and Watson's more laid-back persona continue to complement each other as they did in the previous book. Watson faces the challenges of beginning a new school, making new friends, coping with his parents' divorce, and navigating health issues related to his diabetes. Holmes continues to be the boisterous character who doesn't care what others think and will do anything to solve a case. Watson sets a great example for middle grade readers as he doesn't sacrifice his relationship with outsider Holmes as he makes new friends in school. Readers are treated to the softer side of Holmes as she learns that sometimes her ego gets in the way of the things that matter most. Eulberg does an excellent job of character development and presenting realistic family and friend relationships. The satisfying conclusion leaves open the possibility of additional sequels. VERDICT Another fantastic addition to the series which will have readers anxiously awaiting Holmes and Watson's next adventure.-Ashley Leffel, Griffin Middle School, Frisco, TX Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2017694 (Vol. 02) Great Shelby Holmes Meets Her Match (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elizabeth Eulberg
 Being friends with a super sleuth isn't easy, especially when she's nine years old and four feet tall, and full of attitude. But for eleven-year-old aspiring writer John Watson, being friends with Shelby Holmes is just the adventure he's looking for.
 978-1-68119-054-9 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 6.0 RC Lvl 3.7 Lexile 650

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Shelby Holmes and John Watson are back in school and back to sleuthing. When Shelby meets her new science teacher, Mr. Crosby, she immediately senses something suspicious about him. When his watch is stolen, Holmes takes the case and is faced with her greatest adversary yet. Has Holmes met her match? Holmes's know-it-all personality and Watson's more laid-back persona continue to complement each other as they did in the previous book. Watson faces the challenges of beginning a new school, making new friends, coping with his parents' divorce, and navigating health issues related to his diabetes. Holmes continues to be the boisterous character who doesn't care what others think and will do anything to solve a case. Watson sets a great example for middle grade readers as he doesn't sacrifice his relationship with outsider Holmes as he makes new friends in school. Readers are treated to the softer side of Holmes as she learns that sometimes her ego gets in the way of the things that matter most. Eulberg does an excellent job of character development and presenting realistic family and friend relationships. The satisfying conclusion leaves open the possibility of additional sequels. VERDICT Another fantastic addition to the series which will have readers anxiously awaiting Holmes and Watson's next adventure.-Ashley Leffel, Griffin Middle School, Frisco, TX Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2076702 (Vol. 03) Great Shelby Holmes and the Coldest Case (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Elizabeth Eulberg

After Watson's blog chronicling his and Shelby's case-closing abilities attracts the attention of a newspaper reporter, the pair becomes a media sensation in their Harlem neighborhood. So it's no surprise (at least, to Shelby!) when the article lands them their highest profile client yet.

978-1-68119-057-0 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 570

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Shelby Holmes and John Watson are back in school and back to sleuthing. When Shelby meets her new science teacher, Mr. Crosby, she immediately senses something suspicious about him. When his watch is stolen, Holmes takes the case and is faced with her greatest adversary yet. Has Holmes met her match? Holmes's know-it-all personality and Watson's more laid-back persona continue to complement each other as they did in the previous book. Watson faces the challenges of beginning a new school, making new friends, coping with his parents' divorce, and navigating health issues related to his diabetes. Holmes continues to be the boisterous character who doesn't care what others think and will do anything to solve a case. Watson sets a great example for middle grade readers as he doesn't sacrifice his relationship with outsider Holmes as he makes new friends in school. Readers are treated to the softer side of Holmes as she learns that sometimes her ego gets in the way of the things that matter most. Eulberg does an excellent job of character development and presenting realistic family and friend relationships. The satisfying conclusion leaves open the possibility of additional sequels. VERDICT Another fantastic addition to the series which will have readers anxiously awaiting Holmes and Watson's next adventure.-Ashley Leffel, Griffin Middle School, Frisco, TX Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2118654 (Vol. 04) Great Shelby Holmes and the Haunted Hound (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Elizabeth Eulberg

Now infamous for solving mysteries all over Manhattan, detective duo Shelby Holmes and John Watson stumble into their creepiest case yet. Residents of the Baskerville Estates see flickering lights and hear footsteps, scratching, and a wolfish howl at night--but the sounds come from an empty apartment! It can't be the ghost of former owner Hugo Baskerville's dog. . . can it?

978-1-5476-0147-9 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Greenglass House (Trade)

#2080318 (Vol. 03) Bluecrowne (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kate Milford

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Lucy Bluecrowne is beginning a new life ashore with her stepmother and half brother, though she's certain the only place she'll ever belong is with her father on a ship of war as part of the crew. She doesn't care that living in a house is safer and the proper place for a twelve-year-old girl; it's boring.

978-1-328-46688-4 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.9 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 840

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Cleverly pulling together Milford's earlier works, this prequel to The Greenglass House is the origin story of the house itself, and gives fans more insight into the world of Nagspeake. Twelve-year-old Lucy Bluecrowne grew up aboard the Left Handed Fate, living the life of a privateer's daughter. After a serious injury, her father has decided Lucy should live ashore with her stepmother, the beautiful Lady Xiaoming, and her stepbrother, Laio. Her father has even built a house for them atop the highest hill in Nagspeake. Lucy is furious; the sea is in her blood. On the suggestion of Laio, the pair goes to the harbor to see about procuring a bark to fix up to sail on the river. It is no accident that the two children run into roamer Foulk Trigemine and conflagrationeer Ignis Blister. Roamers use science to travel through time and conflagrationeers control fire—it just so happens that Laio has a talent with fireworks, and this is not the first time Foulk has "seen" Lucy. Both Foulk and Ignis are on missions involving the Bluecrowne family. This somewhat complicated amalgamation of story lines is resplendent with time travel, Chinese folklore, nautical explanations, and the history of Nagspeake. VERDICT This is a sophisticated tale filled with masterful world building, time travel, science, and nautical life. Ideal for confident readers looking for a challenge.—Stacy Dillon, LREI, New York Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2144391 (Vol. 04) Thief Knot (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kate Milford

Marzana's parents are recruited to help solve an odd crime, and she realizes that this could be the excitement she's been waiting for. She assembles a group of kid detectives with special skills—including the ghost of a ship captain's daughter—and together, they explore hidden passageways, navigate architecture that changes overnight, and try to unravel the puzzle of who the kidnappers are—and where they're hiding. But will they beat the deadline for a ransom that's impossible to pay?

978-1-328-46689-1 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 464 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 20.0 Lexile 800

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–7—The Republic of Gammerbund is a sanctuary for even the most legendary thieves and smugglers to hide and lead (mostly) normal lives. When a kidnapping threatens Gammerbund, 12-year-old Marzana's parents are recruited to help, and the lure of adventure is too much for the shy aspiring spy. She puts together a team of peers to investigate, each member bringing a talent more unusual than the last. But the case may be even stranger than anyone suspects. This novel takes readers back into the world Milford created in Greenglass House, adding richly detailed layers to a well-developed setting. While kids need not have read the other installments, those familiar with the series will appreciate the references to previous books. This is a perfectly plotted and well-told mystery, and the fascinating settings and characters make it unique. Children will find the plot's twists thrilling and immersive, thanks to Milford's world-building talent. VERDICT Readers will delight in this old-fashioned mystery, made fresh with intriguing places and people.—Kristin Brynsvold, Tuckahoe Elementary School, Arlington, VA

#2207616 (Vol. 05) Raconteur's Commonplace Book (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kate Milford

The rain hasn't stopped for a week, and the twelve guests of the Blue Vein Tavern are trapped by flooded roads and the rising Skidwreck River. Among them are a ship's captain, tattooed twins, a musician, and a young girl traveling on her own. To pass the time, they begin to tell stories—each a different type of folklore—that eventually reveal more about their own secrets than they intended.

978-1-328-46690-7 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.9 AR Pts 15.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist The wide-reaching world building of Milford's Nagspeake novels gets even more expansive in her latest. Fans of Greenglass House (2014) might recognize the title; it's the book of folktales about Nagspeake that Milo reads, and the stories within bolster just about every other book set in the world, with familiar characters, objects, and places periodically appearing. Beyond that, though, the stories are purely enjoyable, playfully toying with folktale conventions, offering a compelling variety of genres, and allowing each teller's voice to clearly come through in their tale. Some are eerie, like "The Hollow-Ware Man," which tells of someone making a desperate bargain, or "The Game of Maps," about a house with violent tendencies. Others are sweet, like "The Ferryman," featuring a boy who desperately loves riddles, or "The Coldway," about a seemingly doomed romance. As the stories go on, touchpoints emerge that gradually shape into revealing truths about the travelers. Though the importance of those truths might be lost on readers unfamiliar with Milford's other novels, the marvelous descriptions, delicious tension, and palpable atmosphere are plenty appealing on their own.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly As rain and the Skidwreck River's rising make "new rivers that had once been roads," 15 stranded individuals alternately spin stories in this deliciously folkloric, carefully plotted compilation that has roots in; and similarities to; Milford's Greenglass House. Interspersed with interludes in the Blue Vein Tavern and bearing repeating references and themes, the individual stories focus on "peddlers, tricksters, gamblers, and lovers"; keys, maps, and portals; and roads of ice and of old. In the moments between the tellings, the inclusive array of worldly and otherworldly guests; brothers with facial tattoos, a shawl-swathed woman, a child traveling solo; and the tavern's staff rotate across a great room's stage, manipulating physical objects (cards, an hourglass, whittled animals, music boxes) and engaging in continual patterns of movement (bookbinding, dancing, firekeeping). At once a deeply satisfying standalone and a smart addition to Milford's expansive world, this elegant feat of telescopic storytelling serves as both map and key, offering singular stories of consequence that slowly, artfully reveal an immersive mystery; one that will dazzle seasoned Milford fans and kindle new ones. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Barry Goldblatt, Barry Goldblatt Literary. (Feb.)

Greenwild (Trade)

#2325462 (Vol. 01) Greenwild: The World Behind the Door (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Pari Thomson

Eleven-year-old Daisy Thistledown is on the run. Her mother has been keeping big, glittering secrets, and now she has vanished. Daisy knows it's up to her to find Ma-- but someone is hunting her across London. Someone determined to stop her from discovering the truth.

978-0-374-39137-9 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.2 AR Pts 13.0 Lexile 870

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist used to the more ordinary magic that comes in the form of international travel and high-seas adventure, as her fearless journalist mother often whisks her away to to far-off places for her investigative articles. But when her mother goes missing on a dangerous assignment, a bereft Daisy discovers an unusual key that accesses Greenwild, a miraculous world of magic--specifically, a botanical magic that used to be accessible to the whole world but is now available only to the very few. When it's revealed that someone is out to use Greenwild's power for nefarious purposes, a determined Daisy resolves to find her mother and save her newfound home. This fabulous first entry in a series is brimming with marvels and magic, but it also tackles topics like environmental destruction and fear of immigrants and outsiders. Stunning imagery and a deeply detailed magic system will draw in young readers, and occasional illustrations and illuminations add to the enchantment. A reassuring reminder of the endless amount of magic in the natural world. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Eleven-year-old Daisy Thistledown receives the grim news that her renowned traveling journalist mother went missing while uncovering a story at the Amazon rainforests--Daisy, however, believes she is still out there. After running away from her strict London boarding school, she finds a secret door that reveals Greenwild, an enchanted world where Botanists rescue endangered plants with the use of Ógreen magic.Ó While spending her time in the town of Mallowmarsh, Daisy learns that her mother is a Greenwild Botanist, and that someone from Grayside, the human world, is threatening the livelihood of Botanists by making them disappear one by one and destroying Greenwild. The start of a dazzling series about a girl's determination to find her mother, Thomson's debut blooms with gorgeous wildlife descriptions that shape Greenwild's world-building and its diverse inhabitants. Daisy is bright and resourceful, and she copes with her loneliness and fears by sharing sentimental stories about traveling with her mother to her new friends, like the animal-loving Indigo and the brilliant Prof. The dialogue adds energy and nuance as Daisy builds up courage to protect a world that feels like the only true home she's ever known, putting herself at great risk to start a rescue mission. Fans of The Secret Garden will find clear nods to that book, while aspiring young explorers will happily spend time in this emotionally gripping adventure. Includes illustrations and a map of Mallowmarsh. DR COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A hidden door in Kew Gardens leads a child to life-changing truths about herself and her family. Having spent most of her life traveling around the world with Leila, her intrepid eco-journalist mother, 11-year-old Daisy Thistledown has acquired useful skills, from shoplifting to slingshot expertise, but not magic--or so she thinks. In the wake of her mother's sudden disappearance in the Amazon, Daisy enters Mallowmarsh, one of a set of pocket universes called the Greenwild where magical flora and the Botanists who preserve and study them shelter from the hostile Grayside, as they call our world. Met with both welcome and suspicion, Daisy quickly fits in without losing her determination to return to the Grayside to search for Leila and goes on to play a pivotal role in saving Mallowmarsh from mysterious eco-cidal villains dubbed Grim Reapers. The author tucks in a standard-issue magical school for Daisy to attend, though largely just as a setting for occasional class encounters with viciously feral plants, and kits her out with a lively supporting cast complete with a ghost, several previously unknown relatives, and (in the role of Draco Malfoy) bully "Poison" Ivy Helix to sneer at her supposed lack of magic and deride her for being an "unlawful immigrant." Daisy's mother is Persian, and her deceased English father is cued White. Finely detailed illustrations by Paganelli join Baker's equally exact botanical ones. Another magic school story, albeit expertly wrought and worth planting on shelves for its cogent themes. (map) (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Plant magic and majestic botanicals add fresh twists to debut author Thomson's series kickoff, a novel tinged with Frances Hodgson Burnett vibes. Eleven-year-old Daisy Thistledown, who is of English and Persian descent, usually travels the world with her intrepid reporter mother, but she's left at a London boarding school while her mom chases a dangerous assignment in Peru. When her mom is presumed dead after a plane crash, and the school Matron's actions turn both cruel and suspicious, Daisy and kitten Napoleon flee for London's Kew Gardens, where her mother bid her go if anything went wrong. There, Daisy; who's always had a strange connection with plants; is stunned to find an entry to a botanical realm called Greenwild, cared for by magical Botanists. Discovering that her mother is one of many Greenwilders to go missing from the Amazon, Daisy seeks to find out what is behind the disappearances in the mundane world, called the Grayside. Though conveniently rendered circumstances sometimes detract from this bright conservationist fantasy, Daisy's globe-trotting experiences grant her a mature worldview as she contends with a new magical reality, and a hidden-garden-set subplot proves affectionately wrought. Lavish b&w illustrations by Paganelli and Baker portray characters, gardens, and botanical visuals. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Peter Knapp, Park and Fine Literary. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--A superbly written, exciting debut that will leave fantasy lovers wanting more. Eleven-year-old Persian-British protagonist Daisy Thistledown lives a nomadic life of adventure, following her journalist mother as she chases global stories. Then, Ma goes missing while on assignment. Following her mother's last request, Daisy seeks refuge in Greenwild, a hidden world of botanical magicians ("Botanists") and discovers she is one of them. While unraveling the mystery of Ma's disappearance, Daisy and her new friends uncover a plot that threatens the entire planet. The children's harrowing adventures propel the story. Their efforts to stop the nature-destroying Grim Reapers end in a dramatic battle where Daisy's heroism shines. Thomson expertly uses figurative language to establish setting and engage readers. This title is perfect for fantasy fans and as a fiction accompaniment to conservation units. VERDICT With its clever worldbuilding, high-stakes plot, and well-developed characters, this first novel in the "Greenwild" series is a must-purchase.--Maria Bohan Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2387481 (Vol. 02) City Beyond the Sea (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Pari Thomson Desperate to join the expedition searching her mother and the other missing Botanists, Daisy and her friends abandon the safety of magical Mallowmarsh. Facing danger on the high seas, they find themselves pursued across the waves by ruthless Grim Reapers. But they will need help to defeat these dangerous enemies. Their greatest hope: to find the legendary Iffenwild, a mysterious city hidden beyond the sea and lost to time. 978-0-374-39139-3 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 400 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$17.99

Grimm Tales (Gidwitz/Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1620017 (Vol. 01) Tale Dark and Grimm (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Adam Gidwitz Follows Hansel and Gretel as they walk out of their own story and into eight more tales, encountering such wicked creatures as witches, along with kindly strangers and other helpful folk. 978-0-525-42334-8 ©2010 5 x 7-3/4 192 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 6.0 RC Lvl 4.3 GR Lvl V Lexile 690	1	$17.99

Reviews by: New York Times Book Review ...unlike any children's book I've ever read...Heavy. And yet...really, really funny...The tone ricochets between lyrical and goofy...And it all works. As the story progresses, it gets less and less faithful to the source material and becomes its own increasingly rich and strange thing...My 8-year-old daughter, a tough critic who doesn't like scary books, read A Tale Dark & Grimm three times, back to back. She was enchanted, not terrified. And no wonder. A Tale Dark & Grimm holds up to multiple rereadings, like the classic I think it will turn out to be.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Hansel and Gretel actually had their heads chopped off. Who knew? If that statement sends you scrambling for your favorite search engine, Gidwitz is savoring that reaction. And for readers who shriek with bloodthirsty delight, not skepticism, he has much more in store. Fracturing the folk tales of the Brothers Grimm, Gidwitz brings together old and new traditions of matter-of-fact horror. Hansel and Gretel become recurring characters in reworked versions of the Grimms' lesser-known tales, such as "Faithful Johannes" and "The Seven Ravens" (here, "The Seven Swallows"). The children are seeking a "nice" family after their father, no woodcutter but a king, pulls the aforementioned beheading stunt ("hey believed firmly in their little hearts that parents should not kill their children"). The perfect family proves elusive, and the children must extricate themselves from one outrageous situation after another—including, yes, a hungry old woman in an edible house. The rhythms and rhetoric of the prose are heavily influenced by verbal storytelling, which can on occasion strike a false note, but mostly add the intended wry wink to an audacious debut that's wicked smart and wicked funny. Ages 10-up. (Nov.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal and unexpected good cheer, Gidwitz reweaves some of the most shocking and bloody stories the Brothers Grimm collected into a novel that's almost addictively compelling. He gives fair warning that this is no prettified, animated version of the old stories. "Are there any small children in the room now?" he asks midway through the first tale, "If so, it would be best if we just...hurried them off to bed. Because this is where things start to get, well...awesome." Many of humanity's least attractive, primal emotions are on display: greed, jealousy, lust, and cowardice. But, mostly it's the unspeakable betrayal by bad parents and their children's journey to maturation and forgiveness that are at the heart of the book. Anyone who's ever questioned why Hansel and Gretel's father is so readily complicit in their probable deaths and why the brother and sister, nonetheless, return home after their harrowing travails will find satisfying explanations here. Gidwitz is terrifying and funny at the same time. His storytelling is so assured that it's hard to believe this is his debut novel. And his treatment of the Grimms' tales is a whole new thing. It's equally easy to imagine parents keeping their kids up late so they can read just one more chapter aloud, kids finishing it off under the covers with a flashlight, and parents sneaking into their kids' rooms to grab it off the nightstand and finish it themselves.—Miriam Lang Budin, Chappaqua Public Library, NY

#1682272 (Vol. 02) In a Glass Grimly (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adam Gidwitz

More Grimm tales await in the harrowing, hilarious companion to a beloved new classic.

978-0-525-42581-6 ©2012 192 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 3.5 GR Lvl X Lexile 630

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The author of A Tale Dark and Grimm (2010) starts over--sending young Jack and Jill on a fresh quest for self-knowledge through trials and incidents drawn (stolen, according to the author) from a diverse array of European folk and fairy tales. Foolishly pledging their lives on finding the long-lost Seeing Glass, cousins Jack and Jill, with a three-legged talking frog to serve as the now-requisite comical animal sidekick, set out from the kingdom of Märchen. They climb a beanstalk, visit a goblin market and descend into a fire-belching salamander's lair (and then down its gullet). In a chamber of bones ("It gave new meaning to the term rib vaulting"), they turn the tables on a trio of tricky child eaters. Injecting authorial warnings and commentary as he goes, Gidwitz ensures that each adventure involves at least severe embarrassment or, more commonly, sudden death, along with smacking great washes of gore, vomit and (where appropriate) stomach acid. Following hard tests of wit and courage, the two adventurers, successful in both ostensible and real quests, return to tell their tales to rapt children (including one named "Hans Christian," and another "Joseph," or "J.J.") and even, in the end, mend relations with their formerly self-absorbed parents. Not so much a set of retellings as a creative romp through traditional and tradition-based story-scapes, compulsively readable and just as read-out-loudable. (source note) (Fantasy. 11-14)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly The grossness quotient has gone up in Gidwitz's companion to A Tale Dark and Grimm, his grisly reimagining of classic fairy tales. Translation: this second foray is even more enjoyable than the author's acclaimed debut. The protagonists in this installment are Jack, Jill, and a talking frog, whose adventures begin separately in reworkings of "The Frog Prince" and "The Emperor's New Clothes," before the three join forces in "Jack and the Bean-stalk." Parental cruelties are more ordinary this time—mockery, neglect, and recrimination—but what the children find in their quest for the Seeing Glass is horrifying enough to compensate for any perceived softness at the outset. When Jill rescues Jack atop the beanstalk by accepting the giants' eating challenge, even the Monty Python gang might cringe at the results—it's the phrase "no guts, no glory" brought to Technicolor life. Gidwitz can do nuance, too, as Jill's perilous encounter with a sympathetic mermaid demonstrates. Technically polished, and with more original content, this romp has lost none of the edge of its predecessor. Ages 10-up. Agent: Sarah Burnes, the Gernert Company. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3 Up-Gidwitz is back with a second book that, if possible, outshines A Tale Dark & Grimm (Dutton, 2010). Once upon a time, in a faraway kingdom, cousins Jack and Jill have had a particularly tough day. Jack has a mean-boy problem: he's bullied and tortured by a clique whom he hero-worships. Jill has a mirror-obsessed, pettily cruel mother who lets her daughter walk naked, unaware, in front of the entire kingdom. But our woe-ridden hero and heroine are in for far worse: a skyscraping beanstalk, a fratlike group of giants, a deadly mermaid, and an oversize fire-breathing salamander show up before these brave, loving, and realistically flawed children get their happily ever after. This book, like the first, features a bold-font "storyteller" who introduces, explains, and comments on the story as it unfolds-usually with alacrity as he promises gore in the pages ahead, but with a fair dose of true insight into the characters and what makes them, like us, human. However, the chapters derive only loosely from fairy tales; they are mostly Gidwitz's inventions, which allows the character and story arcs to congeal into a satisfying whole. Most delightfully, that snarky, insightful narrator reminds us that stories were once verbal, communal experiences. This book begs to be read aloud, preferably to children who delight equally in hearing about pools of vomit and blood and about triumphant heroes.-Allison Bruce, The Children's Storefront, New York City (c) Copyright 2012. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#1733630 (Vol. 03) Grimm Conclusion (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adam Gidwitz

Sister and brother Jorinda and Joringel fight to keep their promise to stay together throughout a new series of gruesome, twisted, Grimm-inspired stories.

978-0-525-42615-8 ©2013 5-7/8 x 8-1/2 368 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 3.5 GR Lvl V Lexile 630

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7. In this final entry in Gidwitz's trilogy, the author once again mashes together unsugarcoated versions of classic fairy tales. Twins Jorinda and Joringel suffer gruesome fates at the hands of their stepfather—naturally—but that's only the beginning. Once they dispatch him, they stumble into other well-known fairy tales, such as Cinderella and Sleeping Beauty, as well as some less familiar stories, like The Juniper Tree. The metafictional approach can get distracting; along with regular interactions with the reader, Gidwitz eventually shares a pizza with, and reads his previous two novels to, Jorinda and Joringel. But interested readers won't be there for the narrative structure. No, they'll show up for the awesomely dark stories, full of beheadings, corpses, tyrants, murder, and terrible adults who treat children awfully until those children are empowered to fight back, taking the narrative power into their own hands to tell the stories with the happy endings they want to hear. Fans of the series will eagerly pore over this volume, which can comfortably stand on its own.

Reviews by: Horn Book Readers of Gidwitz's previous two books (A Tale Dark & Grimm, rev. 1/11; In a Glass Grimly, rev. 11/12) will not be surprised that the sister and brother in this story both endure terrible adventures, including death. From the beginning, when Jorinda and Joringel's wicked stepfather first tricks Jorinda into thinking she has decapitated her brother, then prepares a stew from the boy's flesh, this is gruesome, grisly, grim fun. Gidwitz works his two main characters into several different folktales including "Ashputtle" (a Cinderella variant) and "Sleeping Beauty." An omniscient narrator comments throughout, offering warnings, consolation, and explanations. It's not until Jorinda and Joringel visit the narrator in person in his Brooklyn classroom that the siblings, who have been tamping down their feelings of helplessness and anger, learn the importance of expressing their emotions and telling their stories. This volume is filled with metafictional references to the previous books and their characters; it also introduces some entertaining new characters, from a terrifying ogre named Malchizedek and a dimwitted prince to three ravens who offer their own arch commentary on events. Despite the gleeful horror, this is ultimately a warm and empathetic novel about devotion, and it will make a great read-aloud to groups that can handle the gore. susan dove lempke

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The names change, but the characters and themes not so much as Gidwitz takes a pair of children through a third series of folk-tale scenarios punctuated with washes of blood, fire, tears and parental issues that presage readers' encounters with Bruno Bettelheim. Before finally making good on their vow never to part, twins Jorinda and Joringel hie off on separate plotlines. Jorinda, as Ashputtle (freely translated as "Toilet Cleaner"), is betrothed to a comically clueless prince, survives three nights in an ogre's haunted castle, becomes a child tyrant queen and is murdered. Joringel, magically reconstituted after having his head snipped off by his stepfather, swallows a fear-killing juniper berry, gives Sleeping Beauty CPR and rescues his sister from hell with help from the devil's grandmother. So intrusive a narrator that even his characters hear him, Gidwitz offers commentary and (necessarily frequent) warnings about upcoming shocks. He then later steps in to shepherd his protagonists to modern Brooklyn for some metafictional foolery before closing with notes on his sources. After many tears, few of them happy ones, and much reference to suppressed feelings of anger and guilt, the children are reconciled with their neglectful, widowed mother and go on to a happy-ever-after in an anarchic day camp dubbed Jungreich, the Kingdom of Children. Entertaining story-mongering, with traditional and original tropes artfully intertwined. (Fantasy. 11-14)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly If it ain't broke, don't fix it, and Gidwitz deploys his successful formula of bloody happenings and narratorial intrusion in his third and final installment of unexpurgated fairy tales. The protagonists are Jorinda and Joringel, who go through hair-raising and stomach-churning travails similar to those of their predecessors, Hansel and Gretel (in A Tale Dark & Grimm) and Jack and Jill (from In a Glass Grimly); there are even a few cameo appearances by characters from the earlier books. Among the sources this time are "Cinderella" and "Sleeping Beauty," lesser-known tales such as "The Juniper Tree" and "The Boy Who Left Home to Find Fear," and a few non-Grimm tales. Reflecting his love of theory, Gidwitz takes an excursion into metafiction near the end that highlights the power of story, one of two key themes, along with the folly of repressing one's feelings. Underneath the gore, the wit, and the trips to Hell and back, this book makes it clearer than ever that Gidwitz truly cares about the kids he writes for. Ages 10-up. Agent: Sarah Burnes, the Gernert Company. (Oct.) (c) Copyright PWxyz, LLC. All rights reserved.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8-The conclusion to the trilogy that began with A Tale Dark and Grimm (2010) and continued with In a Glass Grimmy (2012, both Dutton) is equally gorey and awesomely dark. Jumping outside normal book conventions, Gidwitz not only relies on the previously recounted horror, but he also embraces and integrates it into the plot. "The third raven blinked at the little boy. 'The metafictional dimensions of that statement are kind of blowing my mind.'" Fans of these gruesome tales will not blink an eye, and newcomers are more likely to return to the previous titles to catch up than to find the references off-putting. The assured voice of the storyteller continues to be distinctive and clearly indicated by the bold type. Jorinda and Joringel, main characters in these adventures, gradually take on this storyteller role, upending the expected, and provide a satisfying conclusion while extolling the power of story. As innovative as they are traditional, the stories maintain clear connections with traditional Grimm tales while creatively connecting to the narrative, and all the while keeping the proceedings undeniably grisly and lurid. Gidwitz includes a note regarding the sources of his stories, which are not just Grimm, but also include Peter Dickinson, Hans Christian Andersen, Eric Kimmel, and his own fertile imagination. Readers will rejoice.-Carol A. Edwards, Denver Public Library, CO (c) Copyright 2013. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. No redistribution permitted.

Grounded for All Eternity (Trade)

#2283027 (Vol. 01) Grounded for All Eternity (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Darcy Marks

Mal and his friends are just your regular average kids from hell. The suburbs that is, not the fiery pit part. But when Hell's Bells ring out-signaling that a soul has escaped from one of the eternal circles, Mal and his friends can't help but take the opportunity for a little adventure.

978-1-5344-8336-1 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 720

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Middle school can be hell. In this case, quite literally, as middle school fallen angels Malachi, Lilith, and Crowley find themselves transported through an opening in the veil from their suburb in Hell to present-day Salem, Massachusetts, on Halloween. The trio are excited for the adventure, as their weeklong break from classes has been woefully disappointing; Hell's been in lockdown since the soul of Samuel Parris--the Puritan minister who oversaw the Salem witch trials--escaped from the eighth circle. After the three fallen angels attempt to return home, they realize that Parris escaped with them, and Hell has a rule that's keeping them from returning home: The same number that leaves must return. In addition, Parris' evil soul is affecting the citizens of Salem, making it a dangerous place and rendering him more corporeal. The trio have to work with young locals Charity and Sean (a witch and psychic, respectively) and social worker seraph Cassandra before Heaven obliterates the town to stop it from becoming Hell on Earth. This is an entertaining, high-octane story that moves with the speed of a bat out of...you know where. The forward momentum will keep the attention of readers who appreciate plot-driven stories. Mal's fear of change as he and his friends get older feels realistic, and his attraction to both Lilith and Sean adds some nuance, but other characters are more two-dimensional. All characters are presumed White. Fast-paced and amusing. (Adventure. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Dark fantasy collides with Dante-esque imagery in debut author Marks's nail-biting occult adventure, in which a fateful act of rebellion strands an adolescent group of literal hell's angels on Earth. In the infernal suburbs, black-winged middle schooler Malachi is on a school holiday before following in his parents' footsteps and becoming a "power"; a guardian of damned souls held in one of nine Dante-inspired circles. But vacation is rendered boring when an especially dangerous soul, puritan minister Samuel Parris; who acted as a ringleader during the Salem witch trials; escapes from hell's eighth circle (which houses manipulators), resulting in a lockdown. After stumbling through a thin interdimensional veil on Samhain, Mal, along with close friends and fellow fledgling powers Crowley and Lilith, become stuck in Salem, Mass., having unknowingly let another party; Parris; through the veil. Already simmering tensions heighten as the group test their training and friendship, desperate to return Parris to his prison and frantically navigating hell's bureaucracy in search of a way home. Though characterizations can be thinly rendered, a breakneck plot, rousing fight scenes, and light romance drive this action-forward fantasy with a unique premise. Characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Victoria Wells Arms, Wells Arms Literary/HG Literary. (July)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Malachi wants everyone to understand he's not a demon. Neither are his friends. Yes, they live in Hell and their parents work in Hell. But they're not demons. They're simply regular kids enjoying one last school break together before job training begins in this acerbic and spooky middle-grade adventure by Darcy Marks.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

#2328218 (Vol. 02) Afterlife of the Party (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Darcy Marks

Malachi and his friends are back in this fresh and uniquely funny second novel about a squad of teens from hell learning to be guardian angels.

978-1-5344-8339-2 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Life at a new school can be hell, especially when you're in Hell. After accidentally trapping themselves on Earth and battling the escaped soul of evil Salem witch trial judge Samuel Parris in Grounded for All Eternity (2022), fallen angels Malachi (the group's leader), Lilith (the intelligence officer and potential love interest), Crowley (the suave magic user), and Aleister (the muscle) are back in Hell and ready to take on a new challenge: being separated into different schools for the first time. They're coping with it as best they can, but when odd things start happening in Hell--odd enough to get even Lucifer's attention--the foursome work alongside friends old and new, discovering that the primordial force of Chaos is on the rise, threatening all the dimensions. Fans of the first book will be thrilled to catch up with these fallen angels, but the story unfortunately drags, continually hinting that something bad is coming but meandering aimlessly as the characters try to find it. Finally, three-quarters of the way through the book, the pacing picks up. Readers who make it this far may discover the spark of the fun that made the first book enjoyable, but it's a long trek to get there and for little reward. It's a shame because the premise is interesting. Sadly unfocused. (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

H.I.V.E. (Trade)

Quantity Unit Price
1 $19.99

#1758112 (Vol. 07) Aftershock (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mark Walden

A new era is beginning in the villainous world of H.I.V.E. as civil war looms, forcing Otto and his friends to take sides--perhaps against each other. Scheming, extorting, menacing, and general evilness are nothing new in the world of villainy--indeed, it's expected, especially at the Higher Institute of Villainous Education. But even so, there have always codes of conduct. Until now.

978-1-4424-9467-1 ©2014 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.8 AR Pts 10.0 RC Lvl 7.4 Lexile 950

Quantity Unit Price
1 $8.99

#1946720 (Vol. 08) Deadlock (Paperback (Trade))

written by Mark Walden

High-octane adventures continue in the eighth book of the H.I.V.E. series, and the team of supremely talented criminals is forced to question everything they know about life as villains. Otto and Raven are desperate to rescue their friends from the clutches of Anastasia Furan, head of the evil Disciples organization. First they must track down the location of the Glasshouse, the prison where Furan trains children to become ruthless assassins. But Otto is also being hunted. In the three months since his "expulsion" from H.I.V.E., The Artemis Section--an elite intelligence division that goes after the toughest targets and reports only to the US president--has had an opportunity to locate him. Set against the backdrop of a daring high-tech prison break, nothing is quite as it seems in Deadlock.

978-1-4424-9471-8 ©2016 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.0 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 1010

Quantity Unit Price
1 $17.99

#2282687 (Vol. 09) Bloodline (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mark Walden

As the students of H.I.V.E. face the challenges of their final year at the school, Otto Malpense is forced to confront his own legacy as a new threat rises from the shadows of his past.

978-1-4424-9473-2 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.5 AR Pts 11.0

#1678951 (Vol. 04) Dreadnought (Paperback (Trade))
written by Mark Walden

In this action-packed H.I.V.E. adventure, the world's most powerful villains have a problem: one of their own has gone rogue. It's up to Otto to save the world from a renegade faction of the world's most powerful villains, known as the Disciples. And when they kidnap two of Otto's friends, things get personal.

978-1-4424-1368-9 ©2012 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.3 AR Pts 11.0 RC Lvl 8.5 Lexile 1000

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$8.99

Reviews by: Children's Literature In this original and inspired title, the villain's perspective is shown in a creative and unusual way. The message seems to be, "Not all villains are created equally." Readers are drawn directly into the story, seemingly right next to the characters, whether in the heat of battle, or at a heartfelt goodbye. Best friends Otto and Wing are students at the Higher Institute of Villainous Education, or the H. I. V. E. For once, everything is going smoothly until a student disappears and decides to "go rogue," hiring himself out for evil deeds. Ironically, the H.I.V.E. students are the ones to triumph and save the day, even though they are typically the ones wreaking havoc. Every page is filled with exciting twists and turns, making this book a real page-turner. Violence is especially graphic in this addition to the series, as each blow is described in epic detail. Quite a few complicated technical words and phrases are used, most of which are never defined, and may be unfamiliar to young readers. Reviewer: Haley Maness

#1645482 (Vol. 03) Escape velocity (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Mark Walden

Pupils and staff at H.I.V.E.--the Higher Institute of Villainous Education--are horrified to discover that Dr. Nero has been captured by the forces of H.O.P.E., the Hostile Operative Prosecution Executive, the world's newest and most ruthlessly efficient security force.

978-1-4424-2185-1 ©2011 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.5 AR Pts 13.0 RC Lvl 8.4 Lexile 920

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist The breakneck, tongue-in-cheek saga of H.I.V.E. (Higher Institute of Villainous Education) continues, and fans of the series will enjoy that the action starts immediately an assassination aboard the London Eye with little introduction to ongoing story threads. Otto, the student at the center of previous series entries, makes a late appearance here but nonetheless gets to show off both his craft and his bravado by breaking into a secret spy agency against the will of H.I.V.E.'s current leadership to rescue evil Dr. Nero.--Goldsmith, Francisc. Copyright 2010 Booklist

#1649336 (Vol. 05) Rogue (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Mark Walden

The leaders of the world's villainous forces are being picked off one by one in a series of mysterious attacks and Dr Nero is forced to take temporary control of G.L.O.V.E. when Diabolus Darkdoom is seriously injured. Meanwhile back at H.I.V.E., the school's own automated defence systems turn against the pupils and staff. And there is no one there to stop it.

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal . LC number unavailable. Gr 5—8

#1666172 (Vol. 06) H.I.V.E. : zero hour (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mark Walden

Overlord is reborn, and has developed the chilling ability to move from body to body, erasing the host's personality but also ultimately killing them. He must find Otto, the only host designed to contain him, and for that he needs the location of H.I.V.E.

978-1-4424-2188-2 ©2012 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.7 AR Pts 10.0 RC Lvl 6.4 Lexile 920

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

#496122 (Vol. 01) H.I.V.E. : Higher Institute for Villainous Education (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mark Walden

Thirteen-year-old orphan Otto Malpense, a boy with a special talent for villainy, is kidnapped and taken to the remote Higher Institute of Villainous Education, where he is enrolled in a six-year training program and immediately begins formulating a plan to escape.

978-1-4169-3571-1 ©2007 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.5 AR Pts 12.0 Lexile 1040

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Thirteen-year-old Otto and three of his new friends are kidnapped and taken to H.I.V.E., a super academy for world domination where the particular talents encouraged are craftiness and daring. Students come from all over the world, speak varying degrees of English, and are often the offspring of H.I.V.E. graduates. Otto, however, is an orphan. He has real brilliance and a photographic mind. Both qualities made him relatively independent before he was kidnapped, and they now provide somewhat of a challenge to his would-be keepers at H.I.V.E. Otto spearheads the group's effort to escape and return home, an escape that is foiled in the course of an evening that involves H.I.V.E.'s electronic overseer, an out-of-control flesh-eating plant, and other technothrills. H.I.V.E. comes across as the shadow side of Hogwarts, but Otto and his pals aren't so much bad wizards as they are bright kids realizing they may be out of their depth. The cliff-hanger ending leaves much to be tied together in a sequel.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews How do super-villains become super-villains? Apparently, graduating from H.I.V.E. would be a good start. This fun romp starts with the arrival of a new class of students, kidnapped out of their daily lives and whisked away to an unknown hidden island. Whether sent by super-villain parents or snatched out of an orphanage because of a precocious prank on the Prime Minister of England, these teens must adapt to a new curriculum, consisting of Villainy Studies and Stealth & Evasion 101 in lieu of the traditional three Rs. Of course, some things never change--living up to a parent's reputation, dealing with the bullies from the Brute Squad and making new friends are part of every teen's life. And while some students are clearly happy to be where they are, there are those who are looking for a way out--any way out. This is a fun, intelligent and rapid read, an astringent breath of fresh air, in counterpoint to the sweetness of Hogwarts. Technology replaces magic, and brains are the key asset. This is Walden's first novel, but clearly not his last, as this is a six-year program. Let the adventure begin! (Fiction. YA)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Mischievously talented teenagers star in Walden's debut novel, which envisions the educational training of future megalomaniacs and criminal masterminds. Otto Malpense, a 13-year-old orphan, awakens aboard a helicopter with no memory of how he got there. He soon discovers that he and a few hundred other teens have been abducted by the Higher Institute of Villainous Education, a secret school committed to nurturing youth with "a special talent for the supremely villainous." Dr. Nero, the institute's founder, introduces the new students to the institute, located in a sprawling underground complex on a volcanic island. Otto, who has a photogenic memory, quickly befriends Wing Fanchu, a martial arts expert; Laura Brand, an expert with electronics; and Shelby Trinity, a dextrous jewel thief. The foursome conspire to escape their captors, and engineer a plan to return to their old lives. The multicultural array of staff and students Walden has created exude a cartoonish brand of over-the-top villainy reminiscent of Austin Powers or James Bond. Despite the villains' lack of bite (save for the giant man-eating plant) Walden's characters are memorable, if a bit cliched in execution. Otto and the others ultimately decide to stay at the institute; readers may well anticipate getting answers to several threads left open for subsequent installments. Ages 10-14. (May) Copyright 2007 Reed Business Information.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8. H.I.V.E. is operated on a volcanic island in a distant ocean by G.L.O.V.E., a shadowy organization of worldwide wickedness. And, as 13-year-old master of mischief Otto Malpense soon discovers, here the slickest of young tricksters, thieves, and hackers have been brought against their will to be trained as the next generation of supervillains. Otto and his friends refuse to be held prisoner at the institution and develop a scheme to escape from the island, but they must defeat the all-seeing computer system, a seemingly undefeatable assassin in black, and a giant carnivorous plant to succeed. Warner's first novel is a real page-turner; those who love superhero stories will eat it up and not want to put it down. Sequels are virtually guaranteed. Walter Minkel, New York Public Library Copyright 2007 Reed Business Information.

#501186 (Vol. 02) Overlord Protocol (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mark Walden

Still trapped at the Higher Institute of Villainous Education, or H.I.V.E., evil-genius-in-training Otto Malpense is nearly assassinated and must now not only try to escape, but also find out who murdered his best friend--and save himself.

978-1-4169-3573-5 ©2008 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 7.7 AR Pts 14.0 RC Lvl 8.6 Lexile 950

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Children's Literature Newsletter for Adults H.I.V.E. is not your typical school. It is the higher institute of villainous education, and it trains tomorrow's super villains. H.I.V.E. is where some parents send their too-smart children to keep them from doing something illegal. The rest of the students have no idea how they ended up on the school's rosters. Otto Malpense is one of those students. He is preternaturally smart, sees algorithms in his head and can walk through laser beams, but all he wants to do is escape the school. An opportunity presents itself when his best friend's father dies. Otto is allowed to travel to Tokyo with Wing to attend the funeral services. While they are gone, their friends Laura and Shelby uncover a plot to undermine the security system of the school and attack the boys. Unbeknownst to Wing and Otto, the attack goes off as planned. Upon their arrival, they are attacked by Cypher, one of the most devious masterminds on the villainous council. Wing is killed, and Otto sets out on a mission to hunt down Cypher. But hunting down a super villain is not so easy. Then Otto figures out that Cypher's target is actually the school. Otto is forced to team up with Professor Pike, the head scientist/tactician to reboot the school's H.I.V.E. mind and bring back its defenses. Will he finish the job before the school is infiltrated? Will Cypher use H.I.V.E. as a base for evil? Can Otto find it in himself to avenge his friend's death? Despite the fact that this is the second book in a series, the story is relatively easy to pick up. The story is full of rich details and will keep the reader guessing. The plot lines are extremely intricate, and the characters are quirky in a good way. This book belongs in uppermiddle school or high school. It would truly appeal to any science fiction patrons. Reviewer: Melyssa Malinowski

Reviews by: From the Publisher HOW FAR WILL OTTO GO TO PROTECT HIS FRIENDS? Otto Malpense and his friends thought their first year at the Higher Institute of Villainous Education was the most adventurous and exciting that they would ever encounter. They were dead wrong. When Otto and Wing are allowed off campus to attend Wing's father's funeral, they have no idea it's a trap, all part of a lethal plan organized by Cypher, the most ruthless supervillain any of them have ever known. He intends to use them to retrieve the Overlord Protocol, a device that has the capacity to help him take over the world. But when things go terribly wrong, Otto will stop at nothing to hunt him down and make him pay. With the help of Laura, Shelby, Raven, and his former nemesis, Dr. Nero, Otto must find a way to defeat an enemy that has overcome some of the planet's most infamous villains without even breaking a sweat. Because if he doesn't, the world as they know it will be changed forever.

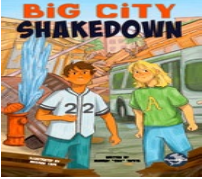

Reviews by: KLIATT Otto Malpense and his friends are back in this sequel to H.I.V.E.: Higher Institute of Villainous Education. Now they're in their second year at this unusual school, facing new deadly dangers. Otto and his roommate Wing leave the campus to attend the funeral of Wing's father, but when ninjas attack them they realize the occasion is a trap. Ambitious evildoer Cypher is trying to launch the Overlord Protocol, a computer AI (artificial intelligence) that can help him conquer the world. Wing is shot and Otto sets out to defeat Cypher with the help of his other friends and even his former foe, school headmaster Dr. Nero, in order to save himself and the world. As in Catherine Jinks's Evil Genius, the notion of a school that teaches villainy has great YA appeal. This volume can stand on its own, for those who haven't read H.I.V.E. Fans of Alex Rider's adventures will appreciate all the action and the technotalk, despite the rather stereotypical characters. Overall, it's fast-moving fun. Age Range: Ages 12 to 18. REVIEWER: Paula Rohrlack (Vol. 42, No. 1)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-9- If Alex Rider attended a school for bad guys, he'd end up at the Higher Institute of Villainous Education. In this follow-up to H.I.V.E.: Higher Institute of Villainous Education (S & S, 2007), the action doesn't stop for a moment. The story begins with Otto Malpense falling through the sky at a speed beyond acceptable parameters. It then flashes back two weeks to an assassination attempt on the life of Dr. Nero, headmaster of H.I.V.E., and the adrenaline keeps pumping from there. The mysterious Cypher is plotting some move against Dr. Nero that begins with the murder of Otto's friend Wing and continues with the mobilization of an army of assassins that is both unbelievably fast and nearly indestructible. Everything is connected somehow to the Overlord Protocol, an AI that went rogue and was then destroyed soon after it was booted up 15 years earlier. Now Otto and his friends, along with Dr. Nero and his staff, must work to counter Cypher and his ninjas. Plot twists and startling revelations continue to the very end. The conclusion suggests that a sequel is inevitable. Just-over-the-horizon technology gives this thriller a bit of a science-fiction flavor, and it's sure to appeal to readers interested in novels that combine action and intrigue.-Eric Norton, McMillan Memorial Library, Wisconsin Rapids, WI Copyright 2008 Reed Business Information.

Reviews by: Voice of Youth Advocates (VOYA) Otto Malpense and friends return in this sequel to H.I.V.E. (The Higher Institute for Villainous Education) (Simon & Schuster, 2007/VOYA June 2007). Otto is allowed to leave H.I.V.E. with his friend Wing in order to attend a funeral for Wing's father. The funeral, however, is actually part of an elaborate plan devised by the rogue villain known only as Cypher. Cypher hopes to seize power of the Overlord Protocol, an artificial intelligence that would allow Cypher to bring the world to its knees. Aided by the assassin Raven, Otto must track down Cypher in order to avenge Wing's apparent death and thwart Cypher's heinous scheme. Walden provides answers to several unsolved mysteries from the first book. Subplots that feature H.I.V.E.'s headmaster, Dr. Nero, and several of Otto's friends are nicely interwoven with the main plot. The action never slows as Otto, Raven, and their allies battle robot ninjas, overcome treacherous double agents, and save the institute from a hostile invasion. Tweens and younger teens will relish the escapism that this book provides. On the down side, several characters, especially the true villains, seem to speak in clichés. Villains, such as Dr. Nero, Raven, and even Otto, seem much too virtuous, and this impression strains the book's credibility. There is no denying, though, that this book is a quick, enjoyable thrill ride. Although not necessary, reading Walden's first H.I.V.E. novel will enhance the enjoyment of this book. A third installment is needed to answer some lingering questions. Reviewer: David Goodale

Hammerhead: Amazing Journeys in Historical Fiction (Seahorse Publishing)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2381563 Oh, the Humanity! (Library Binding) written by Murray Tapeta Josef and his family are heading home to America after visiting Josef's grandfather in Germany. Grandpa has a surprise for them. Instead of taking the boat home, they'll be riding a zeppelin across the ocean. The problem? They'll be aboard the ill-fated Hindenburg on its very last flight. Designed for Striving Readers. 979-8-88735-937-3 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl O	1	$24.50

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2381604 Big City Shakedown (Library Binding) written by Murray Tapeta Pietro is a huge San Francisco Giants fan. So when his dad scores tickets to Game 3 of the 1989 World Series, Pietro is ecstatic. Unfortunately, the world has other plans. A massive earthquake rocks the city, destroying buildings and derailing their plans. When help is needed, Pietro steps in. Will he be a hero, or will it be game over for him? Designed for Striving Readers. 979-8-89042-171-5 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl P	1	$24.50

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2381561 Liverpool Nightmare (Library Binding) written by Murray Tapeta During World War II, Nicholas and his brother John seek shelter. Their town of Liverpool is the target of constant Nazi bombings. As the city burns around them, Nicholas and John are forced into the streets, where chaos reigns. Without a home and with no one but the two of them, they fight to escape and stay alive. Designed for Striving Readers. 979-8-89042-172-2 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl O	1	$24.50

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2381562 Nuclear Skies Ahead (Library Binding) written by Murray Tapeta	1	$24.50

An enormous boom wakes Artem from his sleep. He discovers that a reactor at the nuclear power plant in Chernobyl has exploded. With radiation everywhere, his family is forced to evacuate their town of Pripyat. But not everyone can go, and Artem's beloved dog Estas is left behind. Learning the fate of the abandoned animals, Artem mounts a dangerous rescue mission into a nuclear wasteland. Designed for Striving Readers.

979-8-89042-173-9 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl P

#2381605 Terror from Above (Library Binding)
written by Murray Tapeta

Chris has never been to New York City. When she goes to visit her dad there, she arrives on the city's worst day: September 11, 2001. In a matter of hours, her entire world changes as she witnesses the terror and the horror of the attacks on New York City. It's a day that she and the rest of the United States will never forget. Designed for Striving Readers.

979-8-89042-174-6 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl P

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$24.50

Hammerhead: Amazing Journeys in the Paranormal World (Seahorse Publishing)

#2381611 Bigfoot Battle Bonanza (Library Binding)
written by Thomas Troupe

Cooper just wants to play games online with his friend. But outside, there's a fight happening between two bigfoots! They're huge, smell absolutely awful, and are trashing his backyard. How is Cooper supposed to stop the rumble before they destroy everything? Designed for Striving Readers.

979-8-88735-936-6 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl O

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$24.50

#2381615 Underground Town (Library Binding)
written by Thomas Troupe

Mort and his sister Shirley are exploring the woods outside Grandpa's cabin. Ignoring the old guy's warnings about the gully, they discover a secret beneath the surface. Before they know it, they've awakened an ancient evil. Can they escape? Or will they become dinner for the hungry undead of Underground Town? Designed for Striving Readers.

979-8-89042-165-4 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl P

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$24.50

#2381612 Clash at Chupacabra Corner (Library Binding)
written by Thomas Troupe

Bad news! Robby has to get up super early to deliver newspapers. Worse news! Strange creatures are lurking in the dark. Before they know it, Robby and his sister are

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$24.50

surrounded by hungry and nasty chupacabras! Will they survive the morning and make headlines? Or will they end up in the obituaries? Designed for Striving Readers.
979-8-89042-166-1 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl P

#2381614 UFO-No! (Library Binding)
written by Thomas Troupe

Tracy has always been a little strange. When she tells her school she's seeing UFOs, people think she's lost her mind. Tracy can see the otherworldly spacecraft, so why can't anyone else? Nothing she does can convince her classmates. But when the night sky is full of UFOs and students start disappearing, everyone will want to believe! Designed for Striving Readers.
979-8-89042-167-8 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl O

Quantity 1
Unit Price $24.50

Hammerhead: Amazing Journeys of Laughter (Seahorse Publishing)

#2381622 Scorebirds (Library Binding)
written by A.B. Clamant

The Forest Hill Falcons are a lousy football team. They've never even scored a point ever. When new star football player Vid Ruxley scores a touchdown, something happens. Birds, living in the scoreboard, come out and attack everyone--players, fans, coaches! Before long, birds have taken over the entire football field. Only bird whisperer Plim Wilson knows what to do. But is it too late? Designed for Striving Readers.
979-8-88735-938-0 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl P

Quantity 1
Unit Price $24.50

#2381621 Animals Have Had It (Library Binding)
written by A.B. Clamant

The animals of Cozy Cages Zoo have had enough. They're sick of the treatment they get and tired of their lousy enclosures. When a careless zookeeper named Phil hits a seal in the face with a fish, chaos erupts. The animals' anger spreads around the world, and in no time every animal on Earth revolts. What will it take for the animals to stop their rampage? Designed for Striving Readers.
979-8-88735-939-7 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl O

Quantity 1
Unit Price $24.50

#2381625 Toothpick of Titans (Library Binding)
written by A.B. Clamant

Crosby has fallen on hard times. He's lost his job and his family. Even his daughter doesn't speak to him. Oh, and his new job as a museum custodian stinks, too. While

Quantity 1
Unit Price $24.50

sweeping up one day, he discovers a small, strange sliver of wood. He uses it as a toothpick to dislodge some ham sandwich stuck in his teeth. And suddenly he has the powers of a god. When international art thieves descend on the museum, will Crosby save the day? Or will he keep sweeping? Designed for Striving Readers.

979-8-89042-169-2 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl O

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$24.50

#2381624 Stink of the Century (Library Binding)
written by A.B. Clamant

Russ Cavendish wakes up to an awful smell. Birds are falling out of the sky. Cars are crashing. Dogs are going crazy. Could the awful odor be the cause? Who knows? His strange neighbors are no help. But something really stinks at Shady Oak Apartments, and Russ is on a mission to find out what. Designed for Striving Readers.

979-8-89042-170-8 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl P

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$24.50

#2381623 Ski-rrel (Library Binding)
written by A.B. Clamant

Skiing is fun, right? Not when it's impossible to make it to the bottom of the hill without eating snow! When Emily and her family arrive at Harmony Hills, they see everyone is wiping out. Why? Emily investigates to discover the truth. She soon learns humans aren't the only creatures who love skiing. Snow way! Designed for Striving Readers.

979-8-88735-940-3 ©2024 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 64 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl P

Harry Potter Illustrated Editions (Trade)

#2252499 Harry Potter: A Magical Year (Hardcover (Trade))
written by J. K. Rowling

A unique and beautiful gift book celebrating the art of Jim Kay -- 366 magical moments from J.K Rowling's Harry Potter novels, evoked in spellbinding brushstrokes, characterful ink work, and illuminating pencil sketches.

978-1-338-80997-8 ©2021 7-1/2 x 9 240 pgs.
Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$36.99

#2181880 Quidditch Through the Ages (Illustrated Edition) (Hardcover (Trade))
written by J. K. Rowling

If you have ever asked yourself where the Golden Snitch came from, how the Bludgers came into existence, or why the Wigtown Wanderers have pictures of meat cleavers on their robes, you need Quidditch Through the Ages. This invaluable

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$34.99

volume is consulted by young Quidditch fans on an almost daily basis.
978-1-338-34056-3 ©2020 10 x 11-1/4 160 pgs.
Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 8.2 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 1280

#2029427 Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them (Illustrated Edition) (Hardcover (Trade))

written by J. K. Rowling

An essential companion to the Harry Potter novels, now fully illustrated! Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them, Newt Scamander's classic compendium of magical creatures, has delighted generations of wizarding readers. With this beautiful, large-scale new edition illustrated in full color, Muggles too will have the chance to discover where the Runespoor lives, what the Puffskein eats, and why shiny objects should always be kept away from the Niffler.

978-1-338-21679-0 ©2017 160 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$34.99

#2081602 Tales of Beedle the Bard (Illustrated Edition) (Hardcover (POB))

written by J. K. Rowling

A brand-new fully illustrated edition of J.K. Rowling's classic tales from the wizarding world.

978-1-338-26218-6 ©2018 10 x 11-1/2 160 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 8.3 AR Pts 2.0 GR Lvl U Lexile 1230

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$34.99

#1934343 (Vol. 01) Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone (Illustrated Edition)
(Hardcover (Trade))

written by J. K. Rowling

For the first time, J. K. Rowling's beloved Harry Potter books will be presented in lavishly illustrated full-color editions. Kate Greenaway-award winning artist Jim Kay has created over 100 stunning illustrations, making this deluxe format a perfect gift as much for a child being introduced to the series, as for the dedicated fan.

978-0-545-79035-2 ©2015 256 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 12.0 RC Lvl 5.3 GR Lvl V Lexile 880

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$39.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7-Harry Potter has spent 11 long years living with his aunt, uncle, and cousin, surely the vilest household in children's literature since the family Roald Dahl created for Matilda (Viking, 1988). But like Matilda, Harry is a very special child; in fact, he is the only surviving member of a powerful magical family. His parents were killed by the evil Voldemort, who then mysteriously vanished, and the boy grew up completely ignorant of his own powers, until he received notification of his acceptance at the Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. Once there, Harry's life changes dramatically. Hogwarts is exactly like a traditional British boarding school, except that the professors are all wizards and witches, ghosts roam the halls, and the surrounding woods are inhabited by unicorns and centaurs. There he makes good friends and terrible enemies. However, evil is lurking at the very heart of Hogwarts, and Harry and his friends must finally face the malevolent and powerful Voldemort, who is intent on taking over the world. The delight of this book lies in the juxtaposition of the world of Muggles (ordinary humans) with the world of magic. A whole host of unique characters inhabits this world, from the absentminded Head Wizard Dumbledore to the sly and supercilious student Draco Malfoy to the loyal but not too bright Hagrid. Harry himself is the perfect confused and unassuming hero, whom trouble follows like a wizard's familiar. After reading this entrancing fantasy, readers will be convinced that they, too, could take the train to Hogwarts School, if only they could find Platform Nine and Three Quarters at the King's Cross Station.-Eva Mitnick, Los Angeles Public Library (c) Copyright 2010. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2018822 (Vol. 03) Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban (Illustrated Edition) (Hardcover (Trade))
written by J. K. Rowling

For twelve long years, the dread fortress of Azkaban held an infamous prisoner named Sirius Black. Convicted of killing thirteen people with a single curse, he was said to be the heir apparent to the Dark Lord, Voldemort. Now he has escaped, leaving only two clues as to where he might be headed: Harry Potter's defeat of You-Know-Who was Black's downfall as well.

978-0-545-79134-2 ©2017 336 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.7 AR Pts 18.0 RC Lvl 5.9 GR Lvl V Lexile 880

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $39.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8-Isn't it reassuring that some things just get better and better? Harry is back and in fine form in the third installment of his adventures at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. His summer with the hideous Dursley family is cut short when, during a fit of quite understandable rage, he turns his Aunt Marge into an enormous balloon and then runs away. Soon, it becomes quite apparent that someone is trying to kill him; even after Harry is ensconced in the safety of fall term at Hogwarts, the attacks continue. Myriad subplots involving a new teacher with a secret, Hermione's strangely heavy class schedule, and enmity between Ron's old rat, Scabbers, and Hermione's new cat, Crookshanks, all mesh to create a stunning climax. The pace is nonstop, with thrilling games of Quidditch, terrifying Omens of Death, some skillful time travel, and lots of slimy Slytherins sneaking about causing trouble. This is a fabulously entertaining read that will have Harry Potter fans cheering for more.-Eva Mitnick, Los Angeles Public Library (c) Copyright 2010. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2107386 (Vol. 04) Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire (Illustrated Edition) (Hardcover (Trade))
written by J. K. Rowling

Harry Potter longs to escape his hateful relatives, the Dursleys, and live as a normal fourteen-year-old wizard, but what Harry does not yet realize is that he is not a normal wizard, and in his case, different can be deadly.

978-0-545-79142-7 ©2019 9 x 10-1/2 464 pgs.

Grades 5 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.8 AR Pts 32.0 RC Lvl 5.9 Lexile 880

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $47.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine (Intermediate) The fourth book in the Harry Potter phenomenon, at 734 pages, is what you call a wallow-one that some will find wide-ranging, compellingly written, and absorbing; others, long, rambling, and tortuously fraught with adverbs ("What sort of objects are Portkeys?" said Harry curiously). Year Four at Hogwarts finds Harry enjoined as the surprising fourth contestant in the Triwizard Tournament-"a friendly competition between the three largest European schools of wizardry"-during which he bests a dragon, rescues Ron from merpeople, and finds his way through a maze that, unbeknownst to Dumbledore and the powers of good, leads to the dark wizard Voldemort and to the death of one of the other contestants. Before and in between the book's major action (the tournament is not announced until page 186, and Harry's involvement not until page 271), Rowling explores her major theme of good vs. evil and her minor themes of the value of loyalty and moral courage and the evils of yellow journalism, oppression, and bigotry. We find out, for instance, that Hagrid is not just oversized but part-giant, which is considered a shameful heritage; we see Hermione being taunted as a "mudblood" for her mixed Muggle-wizard parentage. Rowling's emphasis here is much less on school life (not a single inter-house Quidditch match!) and much more on the wider wizard world and, simultaneously, on Harry's more narrow, personal world, as he has his first fight with Ron and asks a girl to his first dance. But on the whole the emotional impact is disappointingly slight. The death of the Hogwarts student causes nary a lift of the reader's eyebrow; the complicated explanation for Voldemort's infiltration of Hogwarts is fairly preposterous and impossible to work out from the clues given. The characterization, as well, seems to be getting thinner, with Dumbledore in particular reduced to a caricature of geniality. As a transitional book, however, Goblet of Fire does its job-thoroughly if facilely-and raises some tantalizing questions: Will Snape really turn out to be one of the good guys? What's the connection between Harry's and Voldemort's wands, between Harry and Voldemort himself? When Harry tells his tale of Voldemort's return, what does the fleeting gleam of triumph in Dumbledore's eyes signify? Stay tuned, Pottermaniacs, for Year Five. (c) Copyright 2010. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. All rights reserved.

#2293080 (Vol. 05) Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity Unit Price
 1 $54.99

written by J. K. Rowling

There is a door at the end of a silent corridor. And it's haunting Harry Potter's dreams. Why else would he be waking in the middle of the night, screaming in terror? It's not just the upcoming O.W.L. exams; a new teacher with a personality like poisoned honey; a venomous, disgruntled house-elf; or even the growing threat of He-Who-Must-Not-Be-Named. Now Harry Potter is faced with the unreliability of the very government of the magical world and the impotence of the authorities at Hogwarts.

978-0-545-79143-4 ©2022 9 x 10-1/2 576 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Haunted States of America (Trade)

#2115753 Curse of the Dead-Eyed Doll (Library Binding)

written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe

Alejandro Padilla isn't superstitious and he doesn't believe the stories that an old sailor doll in a Key West, Florida, museum is haunted. Al is quick to dismiss the odd occurrences as coincidence and bad luck . . . that is until they become more frequent and more sinister. Is the doll tormenting Al? And if so, what will Al have to do to get him to stop?

978-1-63163-347-8 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.
Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

#2115755 Phantom of the Tracks (Library Binding)

written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe

According to local lore, the town of Chester, New Jersey, has a resident ghost. But neither Kara nor her best friend (and newest Chester resident) Natalie have ever heard of these stories. Yet it isn't long before the girls discover the legend of the Hookerman, a railroad worker who was in an accident and lost his hand. Some say he still wanders at night looking for his missing hand. But that was a long time ago. There isn't anything Kara and Natalie can do to help the ghost now . . . is there?

978-1-63163-351-5 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.
Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

#2115757 Swamp of Lost Souls (Library Binding)

written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe

Manchac Swamp in New Orleans, Louisiana, is rumored to be haunted, but Josh Athens doesn't believe it. It certainly didn't affect his decision to take a job with Bayou Boat Tours. But while trying to reach a stranded boat of tourists, Josh's coworker, Carter, crashes their airboat and suddenly their rescue mission turns into one of survival. The boys find the swamp is not only teeming with insects and other wildlife, but also the souls of a long-ago town. And the ghost thought to be at the center of it all, Aunt Julia Brown, has taken a particular interest in Josh. Will Josh and Carter find their way out, or will they join the lost souls of Manchac Swamp?

978-1-63163-355-3 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.
Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

#2115759 Starlet's Shadow (Library Binding)

written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe

Isabella Rodriguez is thrilled that she and her sister get to spend a week with their aunt in sunny Los Angeles, California. A budding photographer, Isa keeps her camera at the ready to capture all the iconic sights: especially those of the historic Hollywood neighborhood where her aunt lives. After one of Isa's photos shows a mysterious shadowy figure, she learns that Hollywood Hills is haunted. Now the ghost in the photo won't leave Isa alone. She's trying to communicate with Isa . . . but what does she want?

978-1-63163-359-1 ©2020 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 750

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

#2220599 Haunt and Seek (Library Binding)

written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe

Ever since Ben Tajima found a toy boat on the Chicago Riverwalk, strange things have been happening. Ben keeps seeing a ghostly boy everywhere: the swimming pool, the living room . . . But who is the boy? What is he looking for? And what will happen when he finds it?

978-1-63163-475-8 ©2021 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

#2220598 Dead Below (Library Binding)

written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe

It isn't long after Treva Gallo moves into her new Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, neighborhood that she starts to see ghosts. As Treva researches the neighborhood's past, she unearths more than she expected. It seems the spirits want something from Treva. But what can a living person do for the dead?

978-1-63163-479-6 ©2021 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

#2076970 Beware the Bell Witch (Library Binding)

written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe

The only interesting thing in Adams, Tennessee, according to Miles Watley, is the Bell Witch Cave which is said to be haunted. Shortly after visiting the cave, ghostly things start happening. It becomes clear that the Watleys have something the ghost wants. It isn't their house, is it?

978-1-63163-203-7 ©2018 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 680

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

#2076971 Ghostly Reunion (Library Binding)

written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe

A predictable family reunion in Hibbing, Minnesota turns spooky after Robby Warner and his cousins tour an old bus museum. A video recorded while at the museum reveals a ghost who is looking for something. Will the ghost find what he's looking for, or will he keep searching for eternity?

Quantity 1 Unit Price $18.99

 978-1-63163-207-5 ©2018 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690

#2076972 Spirits of the Storm (Library Binding)
written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe
 A quiet night shift in a Galveston, Texas discount store turns spooky when Sara Leung spots ghostly children playing in the aisles of the store. What do the children need? And are they stuck in the store forever?
 978-1-63163-211-2 ©2018 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 730

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

#2076974 Trapped in Room 217 (Library Binding)
written by Thomas Kingsley Troupe
 Something is haunting Jayla Walters' Colorado hotel room--Room 217 of the Stanley Hotel. A ghost visits her room every night. What does the ghost want? And what happens when Jayla gets in her way?
 978-1-63163-215-0 ©2018 5 x 7-1/2 136 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 680

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-When Jayla's father whisks her and her brother Dion off on an unexpected trip to Colorado for a work commitment, they expect a fairly dull week stuck roaming around a hotel that doesn't even offer an indoor pool. What Jayla doesn't bargain for is that the hotel her father has chosen is the famed Stanley Hotel, known for its resident ghosts-and that the room they've booked is none other than number 217, popular with ghost watchers for its haunted reputation. Their first night there, Jayla and Dion are woken by a sudden chill in the air and the appearance of Elizabeth, a hotel maid who lights a lamp that no longer exists and leans down to pick up an unidentified object on the floor near the bed. After this action is repeated on multiple nights, Jayla decides to free Elizabeth from the confines of the hotel, an action that brings about disastrous results. Part of a compelling new series about "real" haunted locations across the United States, this installment is an entertaining ghost story, delivering just the right amount of chills. VERDICT Fans of Lauren Tarshis's "I Survived" series will quickly flock to this high interest, accessible thriller.-Joanna Sondheim, Columbia Grammar & Preparatory School, New York City Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Hawkeye (Marvel / Trade)

#2349209 (Vol. 01) Bishop Takes King (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Ashley Poston
 When Kate Bishop, the young Hawkeye, solves a minor crime and saves the surprisingly cute Milo in the process, she counts it as a rare win. But a mix-up of their bags means that nope, Kate's life is still refusing to run smoothly. In that bag is a mysterious book that holds powerful, dangerous secrets-ones that New York City's most powerful super villain, the Kingpin, would kill to uncover.
 978-1-368-07899-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.
 Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Kate Bishop must save herself before she can save the world. Kate Bishop is Hawkeye, a New York City superhero who claims to be the best archer in the world. When E.L. Albright, the enigmatic author of a well-loved children's book series, is killed at a bookstore's author event, Kate springs into action, ready to find the killer. Kate quickly learns that a villainous mob boss named Kingpin is searching for rare copies of Albright's books. Kate must team up with Milo, the author's grandson, to recover the volumes before the secrets held within them are used for evil; she also enlists the help of her best friend and fellow superhero, America Chavez. What should be a simple mission for one of the world's greatest heroes becomes complicated when Kate herself begins to feel the effects of the mysterious books' power. In a race against time, she confronts her greatest nightmare while attempting to save the world. Kate is a snarky yet lovable protagonist whose witty comebacks provide comic relief to the dark and twisted plotline. While the characters feel underdeveloped at times, the appeal of the Marvel universe pervades this action-packed volume, and fans will enjoy this refreshing take that showcases Kate Bishop as Hawkeye. Racial diversity is named in the supporting cast; Kate reads white. A clever murder mystery with all the charm one expects from the Marvel universe. (Mystery. 12-16)

Hazy Fables (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2119392 (Vol. 01) Hobgoblin and the Seven Stinkers of Rancidia (Hardcover (POB)) written by Kyle Sullivan Set in the faraway (and terrible-smelling) land of Rancidia, where it's good to smell bad and bad to smell good, this uproarious send-up of Snow White follows the adventures of the profoundly stinky Hobgoblin as he flees the jealous wrath of a monstrous, democracy-hating ogre tyrant named Fiddlefart. Along the way, he joins forces with the Seven Stinkers--an outcast band of foul-smelling creatures 978-1-948931-04-5 ©2019 6 x 8-3/4 180 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 860	1	$15.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A "Snow White" parody--substituting smelling grossest for fairest--about taking down a tyrant. The seven districts of Rancidia once existed in harmony, the people enjoying the blend of everyone's individual odors and governed by democracy. This putrid peace was shattered when ogre Fiddlefart conquered Rancidia and declared himself both king and Grossest Smelling in the Land. When Fiddlefart's magical Burping Bullfrog sees a new challenger for stinkiest--the humble Hobgoblin, a bean farmer from the neighboring Unincorporated Mucklands--the outraged ogre sends his top scent-assassin, Huntress, to scrub Hobgoblin so clean he'll never stink again. Instead of de-odorizing Hobgoblin, Huntress whiffs him into hiding with the Seven Stinkers, the ousted elected former government of Rancidia, who invite him into the resistance. Amiable but essentially an isolationist who tries "to stay out of politics," Hobgoblin initially takes action only for self-preservation (while Huntress warns: "Anytime a creature is treated unjustly--no matter who they are or where they're from--it's everyone's business"), but the fairy-tale plot trajectory pulls him in so he can join the effort to liberate Rancidia. The bodily functions and other stinky-things-based humor amp the kid-friendliness, frequently put the "pun" in pungent, and occasionally dip into parody musical numbers and sly self-awareness. Happy, rounded, nonthreatening cartoon illustrations make Hobgoblin's delighted tooting downright charming. Some of the Seven Stinkers are female, and one has two mothers. As the stench-loving Rancidians would say: It stinks! (Fantasy. 7-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2177925 (Vol. 02) Zombie, or Not to Be (Hardcover (POB)) written by Kyle Sullivan This brainy and hilarious parody of Shakespeare's Hamlet follows a young science-minded zombie named Edda as she deals with a myriad of death-altering problems including a climate crisis caused by the anti-science humans in Ignorway, the disappearance of her mom, and the greedy scheming of her villainous Aunt Agonista. 978-1-948931-13-7 ©2020 6 x 8-1/2 220 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 810	1	$16.95

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 Following 2019's Hobgoblin and the Seven Stinkers of Rancidia (loosely based on Snow White) the Sullivan twins do serious damage to a more highbrow classic. There's something rotten in the state of Deadmark besides its all-zombie population, as young Edda's chief executive mom has been spirited away and replaced by her anti-science tycoon sister Agonista. Battling not only a ravening appetite for brains but severe mood swings that even put her at odds with her former BFF and science partner Nerida, Edda decides to call on a troupe of Play Things to put on a play called The Thing and check Agonista's reaction. This gets her packed off on a ship bound for the werewolves of Fangland, from which she is rescued by a fleet of live humans from neighboring, thoroughly polluted Ignorway. Readers will chortle at the gross details, the Beetlejuice-style illustrations, and (given at least some familiarity with Hamlet) the parodic twists. Despite the fact that most of the cast is dead, the only violence here is to the original.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews There's something rotting in Deadmark, and it's not the zombies--it's a science-denial conspiracy! The humans of Ignorway destroyed the environment so badly that viruses ran rampant. One was a zombie virus, and eventually, the zombies abandoned the ruined land to create Deadmark, their rational, science-positive democracy. In this Hamlet-meets-zombies story, when Edda's mother, the elected Lead Scientist, mysteriously goes missing, Agonista, Edda's environmental lawbreaking businesswoman aunt, is selected to replace her. Greed-driven Agonista immediately starts dismantling sustainable energy sources in favor of oil. With the help of allies--vampire bat Bram, the enchanted floating skull Rick (of the Glob Theater)--Edda discovers her mother's dark, humanized fate. The heroes quickly stage a production of the scheme and watch for Agonista's guilty reactions. Adventurous twists and turns--exile, a naval battle, Zombies for the Ethical Treatment of Humans and their development of cruelty-free, lab-grown FeignBrain ("Make your next meal a no-brainer!")--go alongside puns and Shakespearian winks. The horror elements are so campy and over-the-top that, despite the brain-eating monsters, it's funny instead of scary. The resulting cartoonishness allows the story to get away with blunt moralizing without breaking the comedic tone, with the heavy-handedness played as part of the joke without undermining genuine messages. The zombies and Bram are shades of green; humans are racially ambiguous. A standing ovation for undead environmentalist theater. (Humor/Horror. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal ark. Protagonist Edda is a scientist who flees to Ignorway in pursuit of the virus that triggered a zombi outbreak. Shakespeare fans will recall Hamlet's first line--"Something is rotten in the state of Denmark"--then Hamlet fleeing to Norway. Simila allusions pepper the book--most notably, the title. Parallels with the coronavirus pandemic also emerge. Short-sighted greedy decisions damaged Ignorway's environment, and the degradation made an ideal home for the virus to flourish. The virus spreads rapidly, so zombies attack incre sing numbers of humans to satisfy an insatiable appetite for brains. Edda and her two loyal friends tackle the virus and wipe out the zombies. Preven ing future virus flare-ups is difficult because most Ignorwegians do not believe in science, so they will not commit to environmental cleanup. Among the hardliners is Edda's own Aunt Agnostia, who sabotages Edda's scientific work. In the end, Edda and her friends are able to control he zombie population, and they initiate environmental restoration. Fans of zombie novels will remember Max Brooks's World War Z, a readali e for its high caliber scientific background about how viruses spread, and the humanitarian complexities during a global pandemic. A global pandemic, environmental issues, and characters who do not believe in science are themes all too suitable for students seeking contemporary fiction to write about for class. VERDICT Highly recommended for a middle-grade collection that caters to fans of the paranormal genre. Middle graders hungry for the next zombie book will devour this one.--Amy Thurow, Westside Elem. Sch., Sun Prairie, WI Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2246856 (Vol. 03) Krampus Confidential (Hardcover (POB))

written by Kyle Sullivan

In this hardboiled parody of The Maltese Falcon, Ruprecht, a twelve-year-old krampus and wannabe detective, gets more than he bargained for when he takes the case of a terrified elf.

978-1-948931-26-7 ©2021 6 x 9 242 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 800

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.95

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When they open a detective agency in Tinseltown, Ruprecht and his ghost friend, Marley, become entangled in a deception contrived by a small elf with big bias. In this third installment of the Hazy Fables series, it appears that a krampus is jollifying elves, that is, overloading them on holiday spirit to the point of coma by showing them a snow globe reported to be the first toy Santa ever made. The bad news is that the police suspect young Ruprecht, who is a krampus, or goat/human hybrid from Germanic mythology, of being the perpetrator. Red herrings abound as Ruprecht and Marley race against the police, a goblin, and a bad witch to find the snow globe and the villain who is wielding it. It seems that society expects the worst of krampuses, and Ruprecht has already suffered from others' negative expectations, a circumstance that allows readers an opportunity to understand prejudice. But Tinseltown is packed with the usual (and unusual) suspects of Christmas lore, and the culprit could be anyone. Ruprecht narrates the mystery in a noir style that is both world-weary and tongue-in-cheek. The good news is that Ruprecht, unlike most noir protagonists, accepts help, especially from his parents, who are revealed to be legendary Christmas figures in their own rights. This charming work draws to a satisfactory close with justice restored. Good fun for youngsters who prefer their holiday cheer with a dark twist. (Fantasy/mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--Ruprecht, a 12-year-old Krampus, is not the most well-loved creature in Tinseltown, due to some previous misunderstandings and framing for bad behavior that he had nothing to do with. Now that it is winter break, he is working with his best friend, a girl ghost named Marley, to solve cases they get in their makeshift detective agency. However, things go south when an elf comes to them with an alarming amount of "jollification" cases, where an elf is so overwhelmed with holiday spirit that they crash into a coma. Who is the biggest suspect in this ring of jollifications?: An unidentified krampus. Ruprecht must clear his own name, as he has just become the number one suspect. Readers will need a lot of backstory in order to understand Ruprecht. He has a sarcastic, hyperbolic detective tone in his inner thoughts or to other characters that some young readers will find funny and quirky, but others might not recognize. The chapters are short and end in cliff-hangers, making this mystery a page-turner. However, the whodunit meanders and then slows down toward the middle of the book. VERDICT An additional purchase for elementary libraries where this series and other paranormal/fantasy series are popular.--Molly Dettmann, Norman North H.S., OK Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Healer of the Water Monster (Trade)

#2323617 Heroes of the Water Monster (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brian Young

(Companion Novel) Edward feels ready to move in with his dad's girlfriend and her son, Nathan. And Nathan is glad to have found a new guardian for Dew, the young water monster who has been Nathan's responsibility for two years. But Edward has a lot to learn about taking care of a water monster. And fast. In their search for the Modern Enemy, Nathan, Edward, Dew, and Yitoo must confront their past and their inner selves if they are to save the Fourth World from a devastating disaster.

978-0-06-299043-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 13.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In this sequel to Healer of the Water Monster (rev. 7/21), Nathan and his mother and Edward and his father have moved in together. Both boys can see Holy Beings from traditional Dine stories, such as playful Dew and powerful Yitoo, water monsters from the first book. Now that Nathan is entering puberty, he will soon lose his ability to see them, and before that happens, he needs to travel to the Third World to ask Yitoo to mentor Dew. She agrees, but upon her return to the Fourth World (this world), Yitoo finds that her water is being diverted from sacred Navajo land to be used for private swimming pools and water parks. She vows to take her water back and return it to its rightful owners, but her methods would destroy many cities and communities. Navajo author Young interweaves the atrocities of the Long Walk, Navajo traditional beliefs, and modern issues of climate change and water consumption in an action-filled adventure featuring two appealing Indigenous protagonists. Young readers are faced with big questions about identity, justice, and inherited trauma. An author's note and glossary add further context. Nicholl Denice Montgomery(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Before he ages out of seeing Holy Beings, Nathan must find water monster Dew a mentor. A couple of years after the events of Healer of the Water Monster (2021), Nathan's life in Phoenix, Arizona, is changing--he and his mother, Janet, are moving in with Janet's boyfriend and his son, the book's co-protagonist, Edward. More than that, Nathan's going through puberty and knows his time with Dew is limited--her new guardian will be Edward. But to ensure that Dew learns the water monster songs, she needs a mentor. Nathan wants it to be powerful water monster Yitoo Bi'aanii, who eagerly returns to the Fourth World. Upon seeing how her river has dwindled, Yitoo declares that an Enemy is stealing the water. The quest to thwart the Enemy is quickly complicated as the stakes rise and the heroes face conflicting loyalties. The environmentalist narrative embraces nuance and complications, avoiding easy answers without undermining the possibility of a hopeful future. Edward, newly informed of his Diné family's brutal relocation era story, also struggles with inherited trauma, while Yitoo, who was witness to the violence, carries the atrocities with her. Additionally, Edward grapples with the fact that his late mother was White and with being the only household member who is not fully Diné. The bittersweet ending is as beautiful as the prose describing the fantastical journey to get there. Thought-provoking and full of heart; a genuinely pleasurable read. (author's note, glossary, note from Cynthia Leitich Smith) (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-7--The second installment in the "Healer of the Water Monster" series is a fantastical blend of action, Navajo lore, and familial relationships. As Nathan is getting older, he understands he needs to pass the care of Dew the water monster off to Edward, his (sort of) stepbrother. But that doesn't make it any easier, coupled with the fact that Dew needs to learn more about her water monster siblings. So when Yitoo arrives to teach Dew, it seems like the perfect fit! However, Yitoo has quite the grudge against the Pale People and sets out on a path of revenge. Readers will be engaged in the fascinating Navajo legends and characters that Young has populated throughout the novel. Young deftly touches on a number of tough topics like climate change, generational trauma, and divorce in a manner that is insightful and age appropriate. The evolving relationship between Edward and Nathan is realistic and heartwarming and highlights the dynamics of blending families. Yitoo, while being downright mean at times, is still easy to empathize with. VERDICT An immersive and heartfelt story that tackles tough topics with grace.--Tara Peace Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Heroes of Havensong (Trade)

#2309157 (Vol. 01) Dragonboy (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Megan Reyes

Blue, River, Wren, and Shenli grew up on different sides of a war they didn't start.

Their land has been torn apart over centuries of conflict, with humans taught to fear all

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

things magical, dragons driven to near extinction, and magic under attack. All of them must follow the threads of Fate, leaving behind the lives and homes they know to discover the truth about the seemingly endless war--and the truth about themselves. As the barriers between them begin to crumble, can they unravel the lies they've been taught to believe in order to restore the balance between humans, dragons, and magic before it's too late?

978-0-593-48237-7 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist In the aftermath of a war that fractured the realm of Haven, drove dragons close to extinction, and divided magical and nonmagical humans, the fates of four characters are intertwined: Blue, who has the magical ability to smell emotions and who, by an odd turn of events, goes from stable boy to king; River, who seeks to be Lead Harvester of the village and who greets Blue and reveals truths previously unknown to him; Wren, part of the Meraki people who are tied to companion Magics and who live side by side with dragons; and Shenli, a mainlander who must work for Chancellor Cudek as payment for his father's debts and who has been taught to despise magic and dragons. When Meraki island is put in danger, these four must come together to discover the truth about the chancellor and the ongoing war and find a way to heal the realm. Reyes has woven together a deeply magical world where fear smells like wood and oranges, hiccups warn of a great danger, and secrets are hidden in every realm. The rich narrative is full of unforgettable characters who have gone through loss and sadness but are the definition of hope and bravery. This enchanting novel is perfect for readers who love their fantasies with humor and cleverness. Highly recommended.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In Reyes's ambitious fantasy debut, a series opener, four children must learn to trust one another after self-aware magic and gold threads of destiny bring them together to save the world. Blue, a dragon who was once a stable boy turned king, and his Rider, River, who never wanted to be bonded to a dragon, awoken from a decade-long hibernation to discover that the world is on the brink of war. Thirteen-year-old, tawny-skinned Shenli, in service to a cruel chancellor, balances his desire to protect his family with his yearning to rebel against corrupt royalty. According to her seer grandmother's prophecy, brown-skinned 13-year-old Wren, hailing from a mysterious island of long-lived people, will bring all four tweens together; to do so, she must defy her people's strictest laws while attempting to rein in her own erratic magic. In this complexly plotted adventure told in a nonlinear chronology, Reyes slowly weaves together seemingly disparate narrative threads; some of which take place over the course of several years; and often hints at long-hidden secrets tied to deeper worldbuilding, sowing excitement for the planned sequel. Character descriptions imply racial diversity throughout. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Joanna Volpe, New Leaf Literary and Media. (Jan.)

#2364972 (Vol. 02) Last Ice Phoenix (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Megan Reyes

Blue, River, Shenli, and Wren are still reeling from the discovery that they are the four heroes foretold to save their world. The weight of their destiny and the expectations that come with it is a heavy burden, but when danger once again finds them and the people they love, there's no choice but to act. Shenli and Wren both remain outsiders--one as a prisoner tired of being a pawn and the other banished from the home she fought to save. Meanwhile, Blue and River face a quest for a mythical creature that will take them beyond the world they know--with the fate of the Meraki people hanging in the balance. Although they just found one another, the four heroes are once again scattered across Haven--all facing new journeys, impossible choices and shocking truths.

978-0-593-48241-4 ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 670

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Hex Allen (Trade)

#2299467 (Vol. 01) Hex Allen and the Clanksmiths (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jasmine Florentine

Hex Allen can't do magic - a huge problem when everything from lights to locks is powered by simple spells that everyone (save a few unfortunate "Undevelopeds") can do. After years of feeling useless, Hex seizes the chance to change her future by journeying to the Wishing Wyrms, a legendary dragon that will grant a single wish once a century. But as they race to the Wishing Wyrms, Hex must decide between her friendship with the Clanksmiths and the wish that would give her a normal, magical life.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

978-1-943147-77-9 ©2022 6 x 9 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In a magical world, 12-year-old Hex Allen is used to being Undeveloped, or someone without magic. Her family accepts and supports her, especially her 6-year-old brother, Spanner, who loves the stories she tells about No Magic Girl that include descriptions of her clever inventions. But Hex knows that she can never really be independent without magic--and her only chance to gain magical abilities is to visit the Wishing Wyrms, a volcano-dwelling dragon who lives in the middle of the Great Barren, a desert enveloped in a perpetual sandstorm. Approximately once a century, the storm ceases, offering people the chance to receive a single wish from the dragon. Fortunately, the timing is right, and the sandstorm clears. On her journey to find the Wishing Wyrms, Hex joins Fuse and Cam, two fellow Undevelopeds who teach her about clank, their name for nonmagical laws of nature--in other words, science. The Clanksmiths show her that there's a lot more to the world than casting spells, and Hex wonders if wishing to be magical is really the right choice. Florentine's STEM-positive debut is a delight. The story drives home the fact that science is all around us, and we only have to use some imagination, trial, and error to apply it to reality. Hex and Cam read as Black; Fuse has olive skin and turquoise hair. A beautiful story of discovering science and self. (map, Hex's sketchbook with science project instructions) (Adventure. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Hidden Knife (Trade)

#2227690 Hidden Knife (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Melissa Marr

Twenty years ago, a door opened between the world of humans and the Netherwhere, allowing all kinds of otherworldly creatures entry. Some, like the kelpies and fairies, who like to bite, are best avoided. But the gargoyles are wise and wonderful, and show a special affection for humans.

978-0-525-51852-5 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 700

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Following a complicated series of events involving her mother's career as guard to manipulative Queen Evangeline, 12-year-old Victoria Wardrop, a powerful warder capable of working magic through both athames and sword, is sent to the Corvus School for the Artfully Inclined, where she hopes to learn enough to address her past. There, she meets Algernon Nightshade, son of the Queen's alchemist, who dreads the day he'll have to murder and replace his father, and street thief Milan, who sees the school as an unexpected route to stability and success. As the three form a tentative alliance, they also wrestle with their respective family legacies and discover that all is not right at the Hogwarts-esque school. Filled with ley lines and animate gargoyles, Marr's (Pretty Broken Things) engaging fantasy is primed for magic and mystery, but it feels more like an extended, jam-packed introduction than a full, fleshed-out arc. While the story line can feel unfocused, promising characters and intrigue-laced history suggest more to come. Ages 10: up. Agent: Merrilee Heifetz, Writers House. (June)

#2311580 Hidden Dragon (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Melissa Marr

Otter (short for Otilie) is a girl who is most comfortable on her family's ship, the Tempest, where she and her fathers collect the dragon hides that protect the queen's guards. The streets are full of homeless kids, and now one of them, a street-smart boy called London, has stowed away on the Tempest. He befriends Otter, and soon they realize that the fate of the kingdom needs to be in the hands of the kids. As they work to fight injustice and protect the defenseless, they earn the respect of the realm's most magical creatures--dragons and gargoyles--who all bond together as a force for good.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

(Companion novel)
978-0-525-51855-6 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 680

Reviews by: Booklist This exciting middle-grade fantasy set on the high seas follows Otter and her dads through their life on the Tempest as they collect dragon hides for the queen and her army. But despite the fantastic nature of the life aquatic, trouble arises in the kingdom, and Otter and her friends must see through the grownups' lies in order to save the day with their knowledge, courage, and kind hearts. Young readers will delight in the unexpected friendship between Otter and stowaway London, in watching the kids take a stand for what they believe in, and in plenty of thrilling moments as their adventures lead to encounters with dragons, gargoyles, and other creatures. This voice-y ride explores found family as well as finding your voice, and through shipwrecks and pirate battles, it's easy to root for Otter, London, and their allies as they continually save the day and, hopefully, their home. For a generation that celebrates supporting one another and finds strength in speaking out against prejudice and wrong, this is the perfect fantasy escape.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A uniquely talented seafaring girl steps up to save those she loves. Otilie Jo Maul, better known as Otter, has grown up aboard her fathers' ship, the HMS Tempest, the only boat licensed to seek out dragons. Otter uses her gift of telepathically sensing the presence of dragons to gather their shed skin for the queen and protect the secret of the dragons' existence. Meanwhile, Sofia finds herself uniquely positioned to demand the queen halt the use of the "relocation ships" responsible for the losses of many parents and children. When the Tempest becomes dangerously damaged, London, a stowaway-turned-friend, tells Otter of a place called the Netherwhere, where they may find the help their sinking ship needs along with the answers to other mysteries. While the plot is at times unclear, with too many different threads and subjects, an array of both common and more unusual fantastical creatures and a cheeky, lovable main character, supported by a close-knit family, will please readers. However, though chapters are brief and action is plentiful, frequent perspective changes are somewhat distracting, and separate storylines take too long to weave together. While this title is not billed as a sequel or part of a series, background knowledge of the Netherwhere and inhabitants would provide illuminating depth for readers. Though Otter is described as having multihued hair, physical descriptions of most characters are limited, implying a White default. A warm, loving family and the lure of dragon secrets boost a somewhat muddled portal fantasy. (Fantasy. 10-14)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this meandering nautical fantasy, a loose companion to Marr's The Hidden Knife, a seafaring tween with the ability to sense dragons embarks on a journey to save her friends and family. Twelve-year-old Otilie "Otter" Jo Maul is most at home aboard her adoptive fathers' ship, the HMS Tempest, which sails the Crimson Sea collecting shed dragon hides at the Glass Queen's behest. When streetwise orphan London sneaks aboard the ship in search of a better life, he and Otter forge a bond that serves them well after a dragon-related mishap at sea leaves them shipwrecked in a magical realm, Netherwhere. There, Otter discovers hidden truths behind her adoption and her affinity for dragon-finding. Meanwhile, street thief Sofia infiltrates the Glass Queen's court, hoping to shine a light on the plight of the empire's children, many of whom are unhoused or have gone missing. Through abruptly shifting parallel narratives that take time to intertwine, Marr gently works in themes of hope, compassion, and social responsibility, set against the backdrop of a fanciful, magic-filled world reminiscent of the Victorian era. Tidily resolved conflict gives way to an uplifting, character-focused tale about family and grand adventure. Ages 10: up. Agent: Merrilee Heifetz, Writers House. (Feb.)

Hither and Nigh (Trade)

#2290402 (Vol. 01) Hither and Nigh (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ellen Potter

Nell Batista has been in trouble one too many times. Now she's down to her last chance-literally. Join the Last Chance Club or be expelled from school. The kids in the club are an odd group, but when their teacher starts giving lessons in magic, things quickly go completely off the weird scale. But this magic is real-and powerful. As their skills grow, Nell and her new friends discover a parallel New York City called the Nigh. And it is all controlled by the terrifying Minister, who might hold the key to finding Nell's missing brother.

978-1-6659-1038-5 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 700

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Fresh clues about what happened to her vanished little brother send seventh-grader Nell Batista shuttling between two alternate versions of New York City, neither one quite ours—as readers will discover when, first, an after-school club the chronic truant is forced to join turns out to be a class in elementary magic, and then, after an attempted kidnapping, she finds herself immersed in Central Park's Bethesda Fountain, talking with the bronze angel. In fact, Potter so stocks her tale with exotic creatures, from tiny sprites to scary sewer monsters, that it's sometimes hard to tell Nell's familiar Hither from the (somewhat) more magical Nigh. But both prove excitingly dangerous places as Nell and allies who, like many of the people and locales in this delicious fantasy, aren't what they seem at first, or second, glance pass back and forth on the way to a climactic narrow escape from a ring of cruel magicians trafficking in children with fertile imaginations. The scary bits are leavened by sly humor and terrific flights of fancy. Some questions are answered by the end, but a general lack of resolution combined with an uncommonly appealing cast leave plenty of reasons to conjure up sequels.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Three years after Nell Batista's brother, River, vanished from Washington Square Park, skipping class to hustle chess players lands seventh grader Nell in the Last Chance Club, an after-school program. She's there alongside three eighth graders: beautiful bully Annika Rapp, once friend to River; cute new boy Tom Gunnerson, a rich kid in for stealing; and hulking Crud, who is rumored to be violent. Instead of doing community service, they're supposed to "perform miracles, help avert disasters, et cetera" by learning magic from mysterious Mr. Boot, who bears strangely detailed files on each child. As her magic skills develop and Nell glimpses River, she soon stumbles upon the Nigh; an alternate realm in which centuries' worth of children, kidnapped for their powerful imaginations, are trained by Magicians to build towering cities with their minds. Balancing the tweens' everyday social pressures with a dangerous quest across the fantastical 19th-century version of New York City that is the Nigh, Potter (the Big Foot and Little Foot series) satisfyingly blends contemporary snark with physical adventures heightened by spell-casting misfires, anxious close calls, and just-scary-enough monsters. Nell cues as Latinx; other characters default to white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Alice Tasman, Jean V. Naggar Literary. (Sept.)

#2348011 (Vol. 02) Golden Imaginarium (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ellen Potter

Weeks have passed since Nell Batista and her friends from the Last Chance Club learned how to use magic to access the hidden world of New York City called the Nigh. Weeks since Nell found her missing brother River in the Nigh and was forced to leave him behind. Desperate to find him again, Nell is eager to improve her spell work and get back to the Nigh.

978-1-6659-1042-2 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Holiday High (Trade)

#2330622 We Witch You a Merry Christmas (Hardcover (POB))

written by Blake Harris

Welcome to Holiday High. A magical school that exists for those who believe in holidays most, entrusted to safekeep the wonder. But when legacy enrollee Max December is surprisingly placed into the Halls of Halloween, all her Christmas dreams disappear into a thick haunted fog. With only one chance to earn his way back to Campus Christmas, Max must lead a misfit crew of ghouls, monsters, and costume keepers to reignite a forgotten All Hallows Eve tradition of magic, music, and song. just in time to find that there's more than one place our hearts can belong.

978-1-938447-59-4 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/4 128 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.99

Holly Horror (Trade)

#2328996 (Vol. 01) Holly Horror (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Michelle Jabes Corpora

After her parents' painful divorce, Evie Archer hopes that moving to Ravenglass, Massachusetts, is the fresh start that her family needs. But Evie quickly realizes that her new home-known by locals as the Horror House-carries its own dark past after learning about Holly Hobbie, who mysteriously vanished in her bedroom one night. But traces of Holly linger in the Horror House and slowly begin to take over Evie's life. A strange shadow follows her everywhere she goes, and Evie starts to lose sight of what's real and what isn't the more she learns about The Lost Girl. Can Evie find out what happened the night of Holly's disappearance? Or is history doomed to repeat itself in the Horror House?

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An ill-fated move into an inherited house may present an opportunity for a dark history to repeat itself. The home has been in her family for around half a century, but Evie Archer's first time seeing Hobbie House is the day she, her brother, and their mother arrive in search of a place to start fresh. After her parents' divorce, life in New York City has become too expensive. But strange events and bad omens begin to appear almost immediately after they get to Ravenglass, a small Berkshires town, and the disappearance of Holly, Evie's mom's and aunt's cousin, from the house 40 years prior doesn't seem to have faded from local lore as much as the Archers had hoped. Before she realizes what's happening, the shadow that suddenly starts following Evie everywhere begins to drag her deeper into a dark world where everyone she cares about stands in the way and the line between what Evie wants and what the shadow wants starts to blur. Sibling friction--between Evie and her brother and between Evie's mom and maternal aunt--complements elements like an utterly creepy talking doll and dreams of a girl in a bonnet. Evie makes some decisions that will have readers yelling "don't do that!" in excellent horror-movie fashion. Plenty of backstory is given to fill in the story of the disappearance of 15-year-old Holly Hobbie. Evie's family is cued as white. Energetic and colorfully descriptive. (Horror. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This brooding horror novel by Corpora (The Fog of War) follows high schooler Evie Archer, who's recently moved from New York to the quiet town of Ravenglass, Mass., to start a new life with her mother and younger brother following her parents' divorce. Upon arriving, teenage local Tina informs Evie that her new abode, Hobbie House; which Tina calls Horror House; is the site of numerous bizarre incidents, most notably the unsolved disappearance of a girl named Holly Hobbie, whose body was never recovered. When Evie finds Holly's diary and begins to unravel the history of the Horror House, her sense of reality warps and shifts as she begins hearing Holly's voice in her head demanding that Evie uncover the truth of her disappearance. The story becomes occasionally encumbered by standard high school drama, but its myriad twists will keep readers riveted all the way to the satisfying climax. Anticipatory ambiance enlivens the well-trod haunted house premise; bursting with dark history, ghoulish ghosts, and high-stakes secrets; and grounded, rock-solid prose anchors the sinister happenings. The Archers read as white; Tina cues as Latinx. Ages 12: up. (Aug.)

Home Team (Trade)

#1898764 Only Game (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Mike Lupica

Can a young baseball star maintain his love of the game after the loss of his brother? Find out in this start to the Home Team series about a small town with high hopes, from New York Times bestselling author and sportswriting legend Mike Lupica.

978-1-4814-0995-7 ©2015 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 5.2 Lexile 790

Quantity Unit Price
1 $16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal day of baseball in his small town, Jack Callahan, superlative seventh grade shortstop and arguably the best pitcher in town, surprisingly quits at the end of an outstanding first practice. Jack and his best friend Gus had expected to be strong contender in the Atlantic League with aspirations of playing in the Little League World Series in Williamsport, PA. Believing that an earlier tragedy involving his older brother Brad was all his fault, Jack takes a break from the only game he ever loved. This hiatus is short-lived, and he soon finds himself back at the diamond coaching girls softball. Slowly, he makes it back to his own team. Loyalty, friendship, courage, and teamwork are key components in the novel. Jack and his teammates have a falling out after Jack's decision to quit the team before the season even starts. This leads to new friendships with Cassie, a strong female character, and Teddy, an overweight, friendly guy whom Jack protects from bullying. Various acts of courage are displayed by Cassie, Teddy, and Jack. Lupica lays the foundation for a great sports series where friendship carries the characters through tribulations. Middle-grade readers will easily identify with the four friends. Although the story is sports related, this is more than a baseball book and will appeal to a wide variety of readers. A must-buy.-Glynis Jean Wray, Ocean County Library, Toms River, NJ (c) Copyright 2014. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#1946501 Extra Yard (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Mike Lupica

Teddy, a young football player, learns that sometimes bridging the distance in your family can be harder than stretching for an extra yard on the field in the second book of the Home Team series from New York Times bestselling author and sportswriting legend Mike Lupica. Last spring Teddy's life changed for the better. He started working out, shaping up, and even earned a spot on the Walton baseball team, and with the team he went all the way to the Little League World Series. But the best things to come out of that season were his friendships with Jack, Cassie, and Gus, and the confidence to finally try out for the sport he really loves--football. So when eighth grade begins, Teddy couldn't be more psyched. Until his mom drops a bomb: his father--who left them a long time ago--is back in Walton and back in their lives. And Teddy isn't happy about it. As a former star football player at the school, Teddy's dad is thrilled to find out his son is going out for the team, but Teddy begins to wonder if his father only cares about him now because he's putting on the helmet. Can Teddy find a way to go the extra yard for the team and for himself, or is the distance between him and his father too much to overcome?

Quantity Unit Price
1 $19.99

978-1-4814-1000-7 ©2016 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 4.7 Lexile 780

#1997720 Point Guard (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mike Lupica

Gus and Cassie have always been on the same team off the field, but can they stay friends when they're on the same court?

978-1-4814-1003-8 ©2017 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 5.3 Lexile 810

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Lupica trots his Home Team ensemble out onto the court for a whirl of fast-break hoops action threaded with provocative personal issues. Gus Morales is upset when his intensely competitive friend Cassie tries out for the boys' town basketball team. To Cassie and everyone else, his disturbance reads as a case of prejudice an accusation he stoutly denies. Cassie's vitriolic refusal to talk things out and some of her behavior after she makes the team only solidifies Gus' suspicion that she's out to win at any cost rather than be the best teammate (or friend) that she can be. Is he right or just rationalizing? Is her attitude justified or just a sign of selfishness? Lupica leaves it to readers to decide (and perhaps give their own buried attitudes a fresh once-over) as he carries the Walton Warriors through a series of dramatic last-second wins and losses. A subplot featuring racially charged local and student elections that directly mirror 2016's ugly presidential campaign will, hopefully, become less topical over time.--Peters, John Copyright 2017 Booklist

#2059230 Team Players (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mike Lupica

Cassie Bennett is great at being in charge. She always knows what to do to lead her teams to victory, keep her many groups of friends together, or fix any problem that comes her way. So when Sarah Milligan, an autistic girl with unreal softball skills, joins Cassie's team, Cassie's sure she can help her fit in with the team.

978-1-4814-1007-6 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 4.7 Lexile 780

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8-It's the summer after middle school and Cassie Bennett is gearing up for the all-star softball season. Cassie is a strong all-around athlete, having made waves as a standout on the boys' basketball team. Now she's looking forward to leading her Walton Red Sox through another undefeated season and competing for a chance to play for a regional championship in Fenway Park. The biggest challenge comes from the rupture of her friend group with the arrival of a new player, Sarah Milligan, who has Asperger's Syndrome. While several of the girls reject Sarah because her disability makes them uncomfortable, Cassie takes her on as someone to "fix." Alongside the softball story is a complementary one about Cassie's friends, Jack, Teddy, and Gus, and the plight of their baseball team after the removal of their overbearing coach and the related tension with his high-strung son, Sam. Through an eventful summer both on and off the field, Cassie and the others learn much about themselves and what kind of commitment it takes to maintain both a friendship and a team, while Cassie gets an insightful lesson from Sarah's mom about the difference between sympathy and empathy. Lupica describes game play with appropriate detail that should please fans but avoids letting the social plot get lost in the weeds. Periodic explorations into the psychology of pitching will be intriguing even to readers not interested in the game. VERDICT A compelling read with important lessons, Lupica's latest is highly recommended for libraries serving middle graders.--Bob Hassett, Luther Jackson Middle School, Falls Church, VA Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Homerooms and Hall Passes (Trade)Quantity
Unit Price
1
$16.99#2121126 (Vol. 01) Homerooms and Hall Passes (Hardcover (Trade))written by Tom O'Donnell*

When five young adventurers are magically transported into their H&H game by an ancient curse, they must band together to survive their toughest challenge yet: middle school. Who knew that battling ogres would be easier than passing algebra or navigating the cafeteria social scene?

978-0-06-287214-2 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 10.0

Reviews by: Booklist Pulling a terrific switcheroo on the trapped in a video game premise, O'Donnell sends five young adventurers of the magical land of Brfandalr (a paladin, a thief, a barbarian berserker, a depressive gloom elf assassin, and apprentice wizard Albiorix) into the challenging fantasy realm of the titular RPG they had been playing as a change of pace from the usual quests: to wit, J. A. Dewar Middle School. Fortunately, they arrive on Dress Like a Pirate Day; unfortunately, by the terms of both the game and the curse that has struck them, there will be no return if anyone blows it by flunking any class. If the maddening puzzles of Algebra I or the deadly peril of getting on queen bee Nicole Davenport's wrong side weren't hazards enough, the heroes discover that they've brought along Zazirak, an evil sorcerer who has taken over the body of the vice principal and intends to set the demon Azathor the Devourer upon our defenseless world. Played out with impeccable, hilarious logic, the plot leads up an adventuresome learning curve to a brisk battle in a local mall with animated mannequins, a really high-stakes duel involving the evocatively named phone game Oink Pop, and a final realization that Brfandalr's dangers, lore, glittering treasures, and opportunities for daring exploits seem a bit pale next to those of . . . exotic suburbia. Who's to tell them nay?--John Peters Copyright 2010 Booklist Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Five heroes face their most trying quest yet: surviving middle school. In the real world of Briandalör, Albiorix and his band of fellow adventurers thwart evil forces, but, once a week, on Thursday nights, they meet at the local tavern for a game of Homerooms & Hall Passes, their fantasy role-playing escape. With dice and their imaginations, they transform into students who worry about class elections, algebra tests, spirit week, and the dreaded five-paragraph essay instead of magic, traps, and treasure. However, even with all his dedication to the game, Albiorix never could have predicted he and his friends would end up transported by a curse into the world of J.A. Dewar Middle School. Now they must struggle through the final two months of the semester in the lives of their characters or risk disappearing forever. Apart from remarks about pointy ears, shiny hair, and muscles, O'Donnell doesn't give the characters much physical description, but the cover illustration and naming conventions suggest that both the Briandalörians and middle schoolers are fairly diverse. Every chapter opens with an excerpt from the Homerooms & Hall Passes rule book, capturing the spirit of their tabletop role-playing game and foreshadowing upcoming encounters. Each adventurer learns a different lesson and grows through their humorous attempts at embodying their game personas. The villain is satisfyingly over-the-top, and his defeat befits the book's silly sense of humor. A rollicking, affectionate parody of fantasy role-playing. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Five young adventurers--an apprentice wizard, a barbarian, a thief, a paladin, and an elf from Briandalör--spend one day a week away from their usual quests, playing a very unadventurous role-playing game in which they are suburban middle school students. When Devis, the thief, steals a cursed treasure, the five adventurers find themselves transported to the actual middle school of their game and take on their roles--a nerd, an overachiever, a loner, a weirdo, and an exchange student. The only way to break the curse and return home is to do the near impossible: survive and thrive in middle school. Each chapter starts with excerpts from the game books including teacher characteristics, student characteristics, and more information from a sociological perspective. There is a lot of middle grade humor, poking fun at the horrors of middle school and honing in on the fact that everyone feels like an outsider or imposter. Though the cover implies a diverse group, there's a lack of diverse cultural representation in the text. There is a map located at the front of the book. VERDICT A lighthearted and funny read for larger libraries.-Kristyn Dorfman, The Nightingale-Bamford School, New York City Copyright 2019 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Meet Devis the thief, Thromdurr the barbarian, Sorrowshade the gloom elf assassin, Vela the Valiant paladin and Albiorix the apprentice wizard--your typical group of middle school-aged Briandalörians. They take on campaigns "thwarting evil. Righting wrongs. Closing infernal gates opened by demented cultists"--you know, the usual. As a break from the quests, the crew plays its favorite game, Homerooms & Hall Passes (H&H), the "role-playing game of nonadventure... set in the fictional Realm of Suburbia." Players embody the roles of "middle-school students" and create characters who fit into different categories (Thromdurr plays Douglas the 8th level Nerd; Vela plays Valerie the 8th level Overachiever). When Devis steals from a cursed treasure horde, the tweens are transported to J.A. Dewar Middle School and into the lives of their H&H characters. All five must excel or they'll "blow it" and be "permanently eliminated from the game"--effectively, "academic failure... means death." (Thromdurr laments this fate: "I had hoped to be mauled by wild pigs... the traditional death of a berserker of the Sky Bear clan.")

#2178582 (Vol. 02) Heroes Level Up (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tom O'Donnell

Months after saving Suburbia from destruction, our heroes are back to their old lives of dungeon-delving and magical quests. All except the wizard Albiorix, who has given up adventuring and uses his time trying (unsuccessfully) to create his own board game. However, when the party finds their old friend June Westray's smartphone for sale in a Briandalorian bazaar, they fear the Realm of Suburbia is once more under threat.

978-0-06-287217-3 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist This sequel takes the contemporary heroes of Br8andalr back to the fantasy Realm of Suburbia to confront a triple threat: high school, a team of talented grifters from their own plane, and a surprise villain with a powerful grimoire left behind in the previous episode. The greatest of these challenges (arguably) turns out to be the first, as, according to the rules of the titular game's Advanced Module, winning requires a series of unlikely feats ranging from being elected Homecoming royalty to winning a state championship and beating all comers in a battle of the bands. Facing obstacles from sneering cliques to the odd warg, the team battles with help from both Non-Playable Characters (i.e., actual high-schoolers) and a certain magical Axe of Destiny that can shred as well as slice. Mostly, though, they find their way either by overcoming inner doubts or transcending their Types. Readers feeling the pressure, social or otherwise, to conform to standardized roles or expectations may come away reassured that there's still plenty of space for skills and attributes on their Character cards.

Hometown Hunters (Spotlight)

#2371277 (Vol. 01) Legend of the Ghost Buck (Library Binding)

written by Lane Walker

Hunting was an important part of Boone's family's heritage, and Boone hoped to add to their list of achievements by bringing down a legendary buck if he doesn't let his doubts get in his way. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5374-5 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 740

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$22.95

#2371276 (Vol. 02) Hunt for Scarface (Library Binding)

written by Lane Walker

Twins Kent and Kyle set out on an adventure to discover the secrets of Scarface, the thunder chicken, and finally bag him, but they are also on a hidden treasure hunt with someone else willing to do anything it takes to claim the prize. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5375-2 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 168 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 700

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$22.95

#2371279 (Vol. 03) Terror at Deadwood Lake (Library Binding)

written by Lane Walker

A terrifying near plane crash, a pack of menacing wolves, and a thunderous avalanche were just the beginning of Dre and his father's hunting trip, but in order to make it home, they'll have to survive a kodiak brown bear attack. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$22.95

#2371274 (Vol. 04) Boss on Redemption Road (Library Binding)
written by Lane Walker

City kid Hunter has to unplug from his video games when his family is forced to relocate to the mountains, but he learns there's more to the sleepy little town when he awakes to the majestic bugle call of an elk named Boss. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5377-6 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 192 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 660

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$22.95

#2371275 (Vol. 05) Day It Rained Ducks (Library Binding)
written by Lane Walker

Blair can't wait for her first duck hunt, but two massive storms collide and change what was to be an exciting hunt into a desperate struggle for survival. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5378-3 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 160 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 750

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$22.95

#2371278 (Vol. 06) Lost Deer Camp (Library Binding)
written by Lane Walker

After pulling an epic prank at his new school, Tucker is sent to live with his aunt and uncle, but despite his uncle's warnings to avoid the West Woods, Tucker discovers a creepy old sign, and something in the woods changes his life. Aligned to Common Core Standards and correlated to state standards. Chapter Books is an imprint of Spotlight, a division of ABDO.

978-1-0982-5379-0 ©2024 5-3/4 x 7-3/4 160 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 690

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$22.95

Hoops (Trade)

#2104864 (Vol. 04) Digging Deep (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elena Delle Donne

Elle is still reeling from her BIG decision but is also amazed at all the free time she has without basketball. With so much time to fill, she can figure out what she really likes doing--and maybe finding ways to spend more time with Amanda. But when she keeps being drawn back to the gym, could her big decision have been a big mistake?

978-1-5344-4124-8 ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 144 pgs.
Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 640

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal the "Hoops" series, 12-year-old Elle is struggling with the fallout of quitting the basketball team. She's trying out the Buddy Club, which focuses on preventing bullying, and is enjoying more free time now that she doesn't have basketball practice. Her b est friends, who are all still on the team, feel betrayed by her decision, especially when Elle accepts a temporary position on the volleyball team subbing for a teammate recovering from an injury. Elle reflects on what she can do to ensure playing on the basketball team is better suited to her mental and emotional needs. The series's plot is heavily inspired by the author's life as a professional women's basketball player and an Olympic gold medalist. Play-by-play scenes of practices and games are gripping and aren't bogged down by sports jargon. The writing keeps the story moving and will draw in newly independent readers and hold the attention of those who are dipping into the YA section. VERDICT Donne entices fans of realistic middle grade fiction by infusing this sports story with timely subjects such as bullying and friendship issues. She also uses her experience as an ambassador for both the Special Olympics and for the Global Lyme Alliance to add depth to the plot and characters. Highly recommended for middle grade sports collections.-Samantha Lumetta, Public Library of Cincinnati and Hamilton County

#2156187 (Vol. 05) Swish (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elena Delle Donne

Elle has been having a lot of fun on the volleyball team, a mentality she has decided to take with her to basketball once she rejoins the team. But even though Elle has decided she wants to return...will her teammates and coach welcome her back with open arms?

978-1-5344-4128-6 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 144 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

#2054222 (Vol. 01) Elle of the Ball (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elena Delle Donne

Elle Deluca is a seventh grader who is tall--not just sort of tall. She's six feet tall. And for a twelve-year-old girl, this means that her basketball team has high hopes for her changing positions and becoming their starting center. But a new position is not the only footwork she has to learn.

978-1-5344-1231-6 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 160 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 3.0 Lexile 650

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Delle Donne; a professional basketball player, youth coach, and author of the memoir My Shot (which publishes simultaneously); taps into her knowledge of the game and her insight into aspiring players in this first book in the Hoops series. As basketball season opens, Elle Deluca has skyrocketed to a height of six feet and outgrown her clothes; she now towers over the seventh-grade boys, including her ballroom dancing partner for the upcoming cotillion. Rather than boosting her confidence as a basketball player, Elle's growth causes high anxiety: "I grew ten feet overnight and became a total klutz," she says, and she suspects that her coach has assigned her to the demanding position of starting center because of her stature, rather than her skill. While avoiding melodrama, Delle Donne humorously portrays Elle's adjustment to her changing body and her increasing self-confidence and positivity. Play-by-play basketball action, friendship subplots, and the inspiration Elle draws from her older sister (who is deaf and blind and has autism and cerebral palsy) round out this engaging novel. Ages 8--12. Agent: Jennifer Keene and Erin Kane, Octagon. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Elle has always been tall, but as she enters seventh grade she is already six feet. It is a good thing she loves playing basketball since that is all anyone ever asks her about when they meet her. With her new extra height, she is moving from a guard to center this year. Along with learning a new position, she is adjusting to her new height, making her feel like she will never be coordinated again. Elle is also dealing with her school's annual cotillion in which she will have to dance with a boy for the first time ever. As the tween protests being forced to wear a dress and dance for a grade, she learns that her friends and her family love her for who she is and that she is more capable than she believes. The author, a former WNBA MVP and Olympic gold medalist, keeps the basketball jargon in check and believable for this age group. Readers will be eager to see where the rest of the series takes Elle and her teammates. VERDICT The author's name may draw some recognition from big WNBA fans, but the diverse cast and timely subject matter for girls in middle grades are what will make this a strong choice for middle grades sports collections.-Carli Sauer, Carmel Middle School, IN Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2063524 (Vol. 02) Full-Court Press (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elena Delle Donne

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Elle finds herself juggling her new passion, basketball obligations, and schoolwork. But when her grades start to slip, she's going to have to make a tough decision.
 978-1-5344-1234-7 ©2018 5-1/2 x 10-1/2 160 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.99

#2081742 (Vol. 03) Out of Bounds (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Elena Delle Donne

Elle is finally finding her groove and is excited about how her year is turning out. But when her team loses a major game against their rivals, Elle doesn't know if basketball is worth it anymore. It feels like she can't win--even when she's improving and doing well, everyone always expects more from her.
 978-1-5344-1237-8 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 176 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 660

Horrible (Trade)

#2327831 (Vol. 01) Horrible Bag of Terrible Things (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Rob Renzetti

When Zenith finds a strange, unsettling bag at his front door, he's not sure where it came from or who sent it to him. Zenith sets off into the bag to bring her back but soon finds a bizarre realm where malicious forests, a trio of blood-drinking mouths, and a sentient sawdust-stuffed giant are lurking within the seams. With the help of a greedy, earwax-nibbling gargoyle, Zenith will have to save Apogee from the Great Wurm and help them both escape the horrible bag before it's too late.
 978-0-593-51952-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 800

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Zenith, a mischievous eleven-year-old boy, allows his curiosity to get the better of him when a mysterious old bag appears on his front porch whilst his older sister Apogee is minding him. He brings the bag inside, examines it, and even sticks his whole head inside of it; relieved but somewhat disappointed with the bag's ordinariness, he clasps the bag shut, accidentally cutting his finger on the clasp of the bag. With a hearty laugh, the bag comes alive with the drop of blood from his finger, and then out springs a spidery monster, "Shlurp," as Zenith dubs him. Apogee comes to inspect the situation and ends up getting sucked into the bag, so now Zenith must travel through the bag's world filled with mythical creatures and monsters to save his sister and figure his way out before Shlurp or one of many terrible things in GrahBhag gets to them. Along the way, he encounters a variety of sometimes silly, sometimes frightening creatures, including a gargoyle named Kreeble who prefers to feast upon ear wax for sport, and an eight-foot-tall patchwork doll. Renzetti weaves an impressive middle grade novel about two feuding siblings that bond over their adventure in an unknown land. Apogee is the typical older sister, convinced she's right about everything, while Zenith is adventurous to a fault and more prone to mischief. Each chapter leaves off on a cliffhanger (sometimes quite literally for the characters), making for a suspenseful dark fantasy tale, and the ending leaves the series perfectly set up for a sequel, ensuring this will not be Apogee and Zenith's last journey to GrahBhag. JU COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Eleven-year-old Zenith Maelstrom is on a thrilling mission to save his older sister, Apogee, who was taken by a scary creature down into the world of GrahBhag. Zenith is stuck at home with 13-year-old Apogee when a mysterious weathered and worn bag appears on their front porch. Curious about this unmarked carryall, he brings it inside--and out crawls the horrific, spiderlike Shlurp, which drags Apogee down into the bag. Zenith follows her, and once inside, the magical, eerie world of GrahBhag opens up before him. He's thrust into a harrowing journey to save his sister before the unthinkable happens. Renzetti's story is fast paced and fully imagined, with completely original creatures and characters. The small, literal-minded gargoyle Kreeble proves an unlikely helpful companion for Zenith, perched on his shoulder throughout. The large ravens, Muncie and Hugh, are likable, interesting characters whose work in gathering and preserving history and knowledge makes the descriptions of the Collectory some of the most vivid in the story. The bond between brother and sister is well drawn and believable, as Zenith is desperate for a chance to protect and save his sibling. A painful story from their past shines light on just how much they rely on each other. The ending, resolved and yet open, sets the stage for a follow-up. Imaginative and immersive. (Horror. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two combative siblings must come together to survive an otherworldly kidnapping in this haunting adventure by Renzetti (Onward). Following a science-class mishap that resulted in his grounding, 11-year-old Zenith "Nit" Maelstrom is spending his summer constantly supervised by his patronizing older sister Apogee when a weathered satchel with a "general air of hostility" appears on the family's doorstep. After it belches forth a spidery creature comprised of knotted hair and toenails that drags his sister into the bag's interior, Nit dives in after her and emerges into an unsettling realm called GrahBhag. The eerie land proves populated by bloodthirsty, mouthlike seam monsters; a stuffed, patchwork man with a terrifying definition of friendship; and a gargoyle named Kreeble, who agrees to help Nit find Apogee in exchange for the opportunity to feast on the boy's earwax. A speedy plot hurtles a frantic Nit toward Apogee's cultlike captors and their insectoid leader, and insightful narration highlights the siblings' personal history to emotive effect. Renzetti imbues this series debut with classic horror inflections; the author's dedication to gross-out imagery transforms an otherwise straightforward fantasy into an inventive and genuinely creepy-crawly read. The siblings default to white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Rubin Pfeffer, Rubin Pfeffer Content. (July)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness The Horrible Bag of Terrible Things, a middle-grade horror novel by Rob Renzetti (Gravity Falls series), is exhilarating, spooky, and reminiscent of Through the Looking Glass--if everyone and everything in Wonderland was trying to kill Alice.

Hotel Between (Trade)

#2071429 (Vol. 01) Hotel Between (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sean Easley

Cam knows their father didn't abandon them, even though his twin sister Cass is certain he did. So when a door opens to "the hotel between," and Cam and Cass find a portal that opens doors to countries all over the world, with all sorts of magical treats (and tricks) within, Cam knows his father is somehow connected.

978-1-5344-1697-0 ©2018 6 x 7-3/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 12.0 Lexile 650

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7-Cameron's only link to his absent father is a coin which he wears on a chain around his neck. When a mysterious hotel appears in a strip mall near his home, the coin proves to be a link between Cam's mundane life and the magical world of the hotel, where doors open onto every part of the globe. There is some connection between Cam's missing father and the hotel. A cheeky teen doorman who befriends Cam promises to help solve the mystery. However, everyone at the hotel has secrets, and Cam must navigate treacherous circumstances and shifting allegiances in order to achieve his goal. The plot is fast paced but a little muddled. Reluctant hero Cam stumbles into adventure while single-mindedly pursuing the father he can barely remember. Cam's grandmother and his twin sister Cassia, who has spina bifida and uses a wheelchair, are incidental characters and remain left behind for most of the book. The hotel staff is diverse, though only a few of them get any significant character development. VERDICT Purchase for large collections where fantasy circulates well.-Misti Tidman, Mansfield/Richland County Public Library, OH Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2117901 (Vol. 02) Key of Lost Things (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sean Easley

When a grand party goes horribly wrong, Cam learns his twin sister, Cass, may also be up to no good. Now Cam must set out to prevent Cass and Nico from endangering the Hotel and keep it from falling into the hands of Mr. Stripe, a horrible magic. If he fails, The Hotel Between could be lost. Forever.

978-1-5344-3787-6 ©2019 6 x 8 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 760

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

How to Train Your Dragon (Trade)

#898196 (Vol. 01) How to Train Your Dragon (Hardcover (POB))

written by Cressida Cowell

Chronicles the adventures and of Hiccup Horrendous Haddock III as he tries to pass the important initiation test of the Tribe of the Hairy Hooligans by catching and

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.99

training a dragon.

978-0-316-73737-1 ©2004 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 224 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.6 AR Pts 5.0 RC Lvl 5.7 Lexile 930

Reviews by: Children's Literature Newsletter for Adults This book purports to be written by an imaginary young Viking hero named Hiccup Horrendous Haddock III and which was translated from the Old Norse by Cressida Cowell. It is the story of an unlikely hero, son of the tribe's leader, slight in stature and not very heroic looking. "Translator" Cowell added rough sketches of the characters, as well as sketches of dragons, maps, antique book pages and scenes. The main characters, all young hooligan Vikings, have names such as Beerbelly, Snotlout, and Dogsbreath and they do their share of farting, sweating, vomiting, scratching themselves and getting covered in slime, green dragon blood and mud. The story involves an imaginary country where young boys, in order to prove themselves worthy of leadership, have to catch one of the baby dragons that live in their country and train it to obey much as one might train a dog. Because he is the leader's son and heir, the story's hero stands to be embarrassed if he cannot catch and train a dragon. There is more folderol, including the arrival of two unimaginably enormous killer sea dragons, but most of the details involve the young heroes smacking each other around, being bitten by dragons and making rude conversation to show how primitive they are. There are a few grammatical criticisms to be made, such as why a story told by a young hero would be written in the third person with occasional comments in the first person, but these are minor when compared to the overall vulgarity and oafishness of the characters. 2003, Little Brown, Ages 8 to 12.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Facing sneering peers, plus a cave full of vicious young dragons and two mountainous, malign adult ones, brings an ordinary Viking lad around to becoming a "Hero the Hard Way" in this farcical import. Dispatched to capture and train some breed of dragon as a rite of passage into the Hairy Hooligan Tribe, unprepossessing Hiccup Horrendous Haddock III returns not with a mighty Gronkle, or an aptly named Monstrous Nightmare, but a shrimpy creature laughingly dubbed "Toothless"-who also turns out to be about as trainable as a cat, with an attitude to match. But Hiccup and Toothless develop into a doughty team when two humongous, fire-breathing Sea Dragons pull up to shore, looking for the odd village or army to devour. Cowell adds lots of jagged, William Steig-like sketches to a narrative rich in dragon muck, cartoon violence, and characters with names like Snotlout and Dogsbreath the Duhbrain. Her genuinely fierce, intelligent, and scary dragons nearly steal the show, but Hiccup and his diminutive sidekick ultimately come out on top, both displaying a proper hero's mix of quick wit, courage, and loyalty. (Fiction. 10-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this riotous paper-over-board farce, the timid protagonist from Cowell's picture book Hiccup: The Seasick Viking proves himself worthy of the sobriquet "Hope and Heir to the Tribe of the Hairy Hooligans." The protagonist is also given author credit (as Hiccup Horrendous Haddock III), with Cowell billed as translator "from the Old Norse." Indeed, "Hiccup" contributes an introductory note: "I was not the sort of boy who could train a dragon with a mere lifting of an eyebrow. I was not a natural at the Heroism business. I had to work at it. This is the story of becoming a Hero the Hard Way." From his initial challenge-Hiccup and his fellow warriors-in-training must each pluck a dragon from a "Dragon Nursery" where 3,000 young critters are hibernating-the likable lad faces a host of hurdles and beats tremendous odds to emerge triumphant. After selecting a tiny, toothless dragon ("I shall call [my dragon] Fireworm," says nemesis Snotface Snotlout. "What are you going to call yours, Hiccup? Sweetums? Sugarlips? Babyface?"). Hiccup tackles the chore of training the stubborn creature, which leads to some fresh, funny dialogue between the two (Hiccup has the rare ability to speak "Dragonese"). A rollicking finale finds the duo rescuing Vikings from a ravenous, mountain-size dragon. Short chapters, clever slapstick, kid-pleasing character names (e.g., Fishlegs, Dogsbreath the Duhbrain) and goofy, childlike drawings will keep even reluctant readers turning these pages-and chuckling as they go. Ages 8-12. (May) Copyright 2004 Reed Business Information.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5-Young Hiccup may be the son of Stoick the Vast, chief of the Hairy Hooligans, but he isn't exactly heroic Viking material. When he and the other boys of his tribe are sent on a mission to fetch dragons to train, Hiccup comes back with the scrawniest creature ever seen. Toothless, as Hiccup names him, is also rude, lazy, and greedy, but when the tribe is faced with horrible danger, Hiccup's unorthodox dragon-training techniques prove successful and he and his unique beast become true heroes. Sprinkled throughout with funny sketches, scribbles, and ink blots, this is a goofy and exciting tale of an underdog who proves that brains can be just as important as brawn. Kids will hoot at the ridiculous names and sympathize with Hiccup's exasperation with his truly obstinate but strangely lovable dragon. A delightful read that fans of Ian Whybrow's "Little Wolf" series (Carolrhoda) will particularly enjoy.-Eva Mitnick, Los Angeles Public Library Copyright 2004 Reed Business Information.

	Quantity	Unit Price
#1608416 (Vol. 07) How to Ride a Dragon's Storm (Hardcover (POB))	1	$14.99
written by Cressida Cowell
Hiccup Horrendous Haddock III, the reluctant Viking hero, tries to make the most of his somewhat limited time to discover America, return to Berk, save his father, fight

Polarserpents, and win a swimming race.
 978-0-316-07916-7 ©2010 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 272 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.9 AR Pts 6.0 RC Lvl 9.3 Lexile 1040

Reviews by: Children's Literature Hiccup Horrendous Haddock III thinks he is participating in a friendly intertribal swimming competition. But when Madguts the Murderous is involved in an activity, there is nothing friendly about it. Old grudges come to light as Hiccup, Fishlegs, and Camicazi bravely enter the freezing water, with mysterious instructions from Old Wrinkly to return in three months, five days, and six hours so they can be the last swimmers to return, thus winning the race. During their adventure, the three mighty little Viking children must battle Polar-Serpents, overcome the Curse of the Wanderers, escape an ancient beast, outwit Norbert the Nutjob, and navigate their way to American (and back!), all in time to return to the beach and save their tribes from the mad plotting of Madguts the Murderous. In this non-stop seventh book in the "How to Train Your Dragon" series, Hiccup and his friends must reach deep within themselves for the courage to face their fears and overcome seemingly insurmountable challenges. Author Cressida Cowell brilliantly balances action, humor, pathos, and lunacy as Hiccup careens from bad to worse with each improbable episode illustrated with hilarious drawings. Wisely, she creates stand-alone books that anyone can pick up and read without knowledge of Hiccup's previous adventures. However, with such raucous fun to be had, even reluctant readers will beg for all the books in the series. Reviewer: Keri Collins Lewis Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Praise for How to Train Your Dragon "Will keep even reluctant readers turning the pages--and chuckling as they go."

Reviews by: School Library Journal Praise for How to Train Your Dragon "Action-filled and compelling."

#1648283 (Vol. 03) How to Speak Dragonese (Paperback (Trade))
written by Cressida Cowell
 Packed with energetic black-and-white drawings and plenty of action, this book tells the boisterous tale of a young heir to a Viking chiefdom who must hunt down the fiercest dragon in the land, but ends up with the smallest, most ornery dragon.
 978-0-316-08529-8 ©2010 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 256 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.5 AR Pts 5.0 GR Lvl T Lexile 910

Quantity 1
Unit Price $8.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Thirteen-year-old Rowan and 11-year-old Nina went to stay with their eccentric great-aunts in Maine after their mother was killed in The Golden Hour (which PW called "an entertaining novel"). The Hour of the Cobra by Maiya Williams, finds the two headed to Egypt to save some ancient scrolls and they accidentally change the course of events in their own time. Ages 8-12. (May) Copyright 2006 Reed Business Information.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5-The misfit hero of How to Be a Pirate (Little, Brown, 2005) returns in another Viking tall tale. Chief's son Hiccup Horrendous Haddock III, his friend Fishlegs, and his cranky dragon, Toothless, get separated from their class during "Boarding-An-Enemy-Ship" practice. The peaceful fishing boat they are supposed to attack turns out to be a prowling Roman galley, crewed by some of the Empire's least-distinguished legions. The invaders are plotting to provoke war among the Viking factions by kidnapping the heirs of Hiccup's own Happy Hooligans and the Amazonian Bog-Burglar tribe. Then, while the locals are occupied, the Romans plan to make off with the entire dragon population of the islands. With the help of Bog-Burglar girl warrior Camicazi and the bumblebee-sized dragon Ziggerastica, the boys must find a way to counter the treacherous plan before they all end up facing combat to the death in the local arena. There is a lot of raucous humor and mock-heroic dialogue; ridiculous names add to the fun. The theme of brains over brawn is well defined. Warriors, Roman and Viking alike, are loud-mouthed, bullying braggarts, easy targets for clever, scrawny Hiccup. The sketchy, childlike black-and-white cartoon drawings are amusing but occasionally indistinct. Jon Scieszka's "Time Warp Trio" books (Viking), for slightly younger readers, have a sharper, more literate sense of twisted history, but the broad humor of Hiccup's misadventures will appeal to reluctant readers.-Elaine E. Knight, Lincoln Elementary Schools, IL Copyright 2006 Reed Business Information.

#1648284 (Vol. 04) How to Cheat a Dragon's Curse (Paperback (Trade))
written by Cressida Cowell

Quantity 1
Unit Price $8.99

Hiccup Horrendous Haddock III must rescue his best friend, Fishlegs, from the deadly disease Vorpentitis. The only cure is rare and almost impossible to find--a potato. But where will Hiccup find such a thing?

978-0-316-08530-4 ©2010 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.8 AR Pts 5.0 GR Lvl T Lexile 960

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-5 - Cowell is getting a great deal of mileage from her pseudomemoirs of the delightfully alliterative Viking. She retains her touch in this latest volume, which relates Hiccup's quest to find the Vegetable-That-No-One-Dares-Name, namely a potato that is the only thing that can prevent his friend Fishlegs from dying of Vorpentitis. The potato, you see, is an imaginary vegetable that comes from a place that doesn't really exist: America. When Hiccup realizes that he has only until 10 o'clock the next morning to find the mythical vegetable, it is a race against time and against the wishes of his father. It also requires traveling with the charming bog-burglar Camicazi, breaking into the headquarters of Norbert the Nutjob and his Hysterical tribe, and stealing the frozen potato while they sleep, all the while trying to avoid a fearsome sea predator. The result is an irresistible concoction. As with all the "Hiccup" books, this one is full of amusing illustrations, clever design that includes inkblots scattered throughout the pages, and an occasional explanation of hibernating dragons and venomous vorpents. This action-filled and compelling story will draw readers along. It's a must for libraries that have the previous books in this series, which is probably most.-Tim Wadham, Maricopa County Library District, Phoenix, AZ Copyright 2007 Reed Business Information

#1648285 (Vol. 05) How to Twist a Dragon's Tale (Paperback (Trade))

written by Cressida Cowell

It's Hiccup's birthday, but that's not going to keep him from getting into trouble. To save his dragon, Toothless, from being banished, Hiccup must sneak into the Meathead Public Library and steal the Viking's most sacred book.

978-0-316-08531-1 ©2010 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.9 AR Pts 5.0 RC Lvl 7.6 GR Lvl T Lexile NC 1070

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$8.99

#1648286 (Vol. 06) Hero's Guide to Deadly Dragons (Paperback (Trade))

written by Cressida Cowell

It's Hiccup's birthday, but that's not going to keep him from getting into trouble. To save his dragon, Toothless, from being banished, Hiccup must sneak into the Meathead Public Library and steal the Viking's most sacred book. But the Vikings see books as a dangerous influence, and keep them locked up and under heavy guard. To save his friend, Hiccup must brave the Hairy Scary Librarian and his dreadful army of Meathead Warriors and face off against the formidable Driller-Dragons. Will he make it out and live to see his next birthday?

978-0-316-08532-8 ©2010 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.9 AR Pts 4.0 RC Lvl 7.3 GR Lvl T Lexile 980

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$8.99

#1681947 (Vol. 08) How to break a dragon's heart (Paperback (Trade))

written by Cressida Cowell

Stranded on the exceptionally dangerous, and possibly haunted, Beach of the Broken Heart, Hiccup must face Ug the Uglithug and complete the Impossible Task--or die trying. Along the way, he'll have to battle Berserks, dodge Scarers, and save Fishlegs from being fed to the Beast, all while being hunted down by an old enemy with a dark secret about the mysterious Lost Throne. With Toothless by his side, and time to stage his rescue running out, what's a Hero to do?

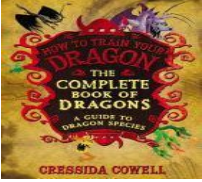

978-0-316-17617-0 ©2012 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 272 pgs.

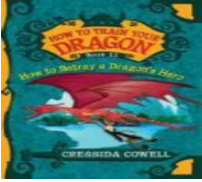

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.4 AR Pts 6.0 GR Lvl T Lexile 960

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$8.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1678777 (Vol. 09) How to Steal a Dragon's Sword (Hardcover (POB)) written by Cressida Cowell Hiccup the Viking must fight dragons, tongue-twisters, and vampire ghouldeaths to save the town from certain destruction. 978-0-316-20571-9 ©2012 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 384 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.3 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 6.3 Lexile 910	1	$12.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1765361 (Vol. 10) How to Seize a Dragon's Jewel (Paperback (Trade)) written by Cressida Cowell The Dragon Rebellion has begun, bringing the Vikings' darkest hour upon them. Hiccup has become an outcast, but that won't stop him from going on the most harrowing and important quest of his life. He must find the Dragon's Jewel in order to save his people...but where should he begin? Don't miss Hiccup's most dangerous adventure yet! 978-0-316-24408-4 ©2014 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 416 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.5 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 7.3 Lexile 940	1	$8.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1765364 Complete Book of Dragons: A Guide to Dragon Species (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Cressida Cowell This guide is a must-have for fans of the How to Train Your Dragon series that inspired the hit movie and TV show. This gift book features all of the dragon species from the series plus brand-new ones created just for this book, with color illustrations of each and every one! 978-0-316-24410-7 ©2014 5-1/4 x 7-5/8 224 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.7 AR Pts 2.0	1	$17.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1781892 (Vol. 11) How to Betray a Dragon's Hero (Paperback (Trade)) written by Cressida Cowell In Hiccup the Viking's misadventures, the stakes have never been higher, and it's friend versus foe to decide the fate of the world. 978-0-316-24411-4 ©2014 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 416 pgs. Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.2 AR Pts 8.0 RC Lvl 6.3 GR Lvl T Lexile 910	1	$8.99

I Funny (Trade)

	Quantity	Unit Price
#1919807 (Vol. 02) I Even Funnier: A Middle School Story (Hardcover (Trade)) written by James Patterson While on a mission to win the Planet's Funniest Kid Comic regional competition, New York middle schooler Jamie Grimm copes with rival comics and bullies, a buddy in	1	$13.99 trouble, and a sudden family emergency, all with a sense of humor and a loyal group of friends.

978-0-316-20697-6 ©2014 5-1/2 x 7-7/8 368 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 5.0 RC Lvl 4.4 Lexile 710

Reviews by: Booklist d-up comedian Jamie Grimm despite challenges introduced in this Middle School series spin-off's opener, I Funny (201). Those include being orphaned, confined to a wheelchair, and subjected to constant harassment from a bully as well as further setbacks as he advances to the national round of the Planet's Funniest Kid Comic contest. Once again Jamie gets loyal support from an appealing supporting cast led by girl friend (two words at the beginning, one word by the end) Gilda. The wisecrack-laced narrative is enhanced by lots of pen-and-ink cartoons with added dialogue. The book pokes fun at nerd dating, Las Vegas, and other such fertile topics, and it gives budding comedians in the reading audience useful tools both by showing Jamie developing his act from events in his own up-and-down life and by closing with a list of recommended online joke repositories.--Peters, John Copyright 2014 Booklist

#2060278 (Vol. 06) Nerdiest, Wimpiest, Dorkiest I Funny Ever (Hardcover (POB))

written by James Patterson

Comedian Jamie Grimm can't help feeling like he's reached the top--he has his own smash hit TV show and he's won a national funny-kid competition. But now he's taking his fame and fortune to international levels by competing in the upcoming world kid comic contest! Will Jamie prove that he's the funniest kid on earth--or does he stand (or sit!) to lose his crown?

978-0-316-34961-1 ©2018 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 650

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

I Survived (Prebound)

#1920387 (Vol. 08) I Survived the Japanese Tsunami, 2011 (Prebound)

written by Lauren Tarshis

In 2011, while visiting his father's hometown in Japan shortly after his death, Ben finds himself and his family being swept away by a terrible tsunami that leaves him stranded and alone in a strange country, far from home.

978-1-4844-0255-9 ©2013 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.7 GR Lvl R Lexile 650

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.95

Reviews by: Booklist Booklist (February 1, 2014 (Online)) Grades 2-4. Ben can't wait to leave Japan. The 11-year-old has been visiting his great uncle in his father's home city of Shogahama with his mother and 5-year-old brother, Harry. It's a trip he didn't want to make, since it was originally the idea of his father, a U.S. Air Force fighter pilot, who tragically died in a car crash four months earlier. The eighth entry in Tarshis' wildly popular I Survived series begins with an earthquake and hurls Ben through one of the worst natural disasters in recent history. Clear, direct writing doesn't gloss over Ben's terror as he finds himself separated from his family and surrounded by water, drawing upon his memories of his dad to give him the strength he needs to survive. A short overview of the disaster and a list of further resources round out another solid entry in the series.

#1920602 (Vol. 10) I Survived the Destruction of Pompeii, A.D. 79 (Prebound)
written by Lauren Tarshis

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.95

During the infamous eruption of Mount Vesuvius, one boy struggles to escape. Can he survive the most devastating disaster of ancient times?

978-1-4844-3641-7 ©2014 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 4.3 GR Lvl S Lexile 700

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 2-4. Marcus is an 11-year-old slave in AD 79 who finds himself in Pompeii the day before Mount Vesuvius erupts. Although he has noticed the mini earthquakes that frequently disrupt the city's activities, he is more concerned with his miserable life with his cruel owner. A chance encounter on the street reunites Marcus with his father, who has been sold to gladiators. Marcus braves a daring rescue of his father, and the two race up Vesuvius to escape their captors only to return to warn the unbelieving citizens of the impending disaster. Tarshis serves up another gripping adventure in the I Survived series, with the light-speed pacing and death-defying maneuvering fans have come to expect. The relationship between Marcus and his father softens the terror of the horrific eruption and the ensuing chaos and panic. The insights into Roman civilization and society will please readers with an interest in the time period. Back matter includes suggestions for further research and answers to frequently asked questions about Pompeii.

#1920488 (Vol. 09) I Survived the Nazi Invasion 1944 (Prebound)

written by Lauren Tarshis

In 1944, Max and Zena Rosen escape from their Polish ghetto and the Nazis and join up with Jewish resistance fighters.

978-1-4844-1832-1 ©2014 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 4.5 GR Lvl T Lexile 740

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.95

#1958129 (Vol. 13) I Survived the Hindenburg Disaster, 1937 (Prebound)

written by Lauren Tarshis

In May of 1937, the Hindenburg, a massive German airship, caught fire while attempting to land in New Jersey, killing 35 people. Lauren Tarshis's latest thrilling addition to the bestselling I Survived series, will feature an 11-year-old boy in the middle of this historic disaster.

978-1-4844-7275-0 ©2016 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 4.3 GR Lvl S Lexile 700

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.95

Reviews by: Booklist Booklist (April 1, 2016 (Online)) Grades 3-5. The latest entry in the I Survived series finds 11-year-old Hugo, his family, and a spy aboard the ill-fated Hindenburg on its final journey. Boarding in Frankfurt on the way home from a long stay in Kenya, Hugo is impressed by the craft's size, its smooth flight, and its luxury. A friendly fellow passenger introduces him to her father, Mr. Merrick, who works for the Hindenburg's owners and conducts a tour of the huge vessel. The trip turns out to be anything but routine as Hugo discovers that Mr. Merrick is the quarry of a spy-hunting Nazi officer; thunderstorms over the U.S. coast cause delays; and, of course, a sudden, massive conflagration sends Hugo frantically leaping for the ground amid showers of burning wreckage, not knowing whether his family has survived. Occasional spot art supplements the famous photo of the Hindenburg in flames, and the author closes with a historical summary and additional resources on the zeppelin's structure, its career, and how its catastrophic destruction changed the history of air travel.

Reviews by: Horn Book Horn Book Guide (Fall 2016) Hugo is excited to travel back to America with his family on the German zeppelin Hindenburg. He survives not only the airship's fateful explosion and fire but also maybe-witnesses a spy mission involving Nazis. Short, plot-driven chapters with cliffhanger endings tell a thrilling, if contrived, historical survival story. Black-and-white illustrations add atmosphere. Historical background and Hindenburg facts are appended. Reading list. Bib.

#1916884 (Vol. 11) I Survived the Great Chicago Fire, 1871 (Prebound)

written by Lauren Tarshis

Oscar Starling tries to survive during the Great Chicago Fire.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$14.95

978-1-4844-4949-3 ©2015 96 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 4.3 GR Lvl R Lexile 730

#1945082 (Vol. 12) I Survived the Joplin Tornado, 2011 (Prebound)
written by Lauren Tarshis

In 2011, eleven year old Dexter is thrilled to have the opportunity to go storm chasing with Dr. Norman Gage, but when the tornado they are following changes direction, Dexter's bravery is about to be tested.

978-1-4844-6044-3 ©2015 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.1 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 4.4 GR Lvl R Lexile 710

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.95

Reviews by: Horn Book Horn Book Guide (Spring 2016) This fast-paced story about a courageous kid caught in a natural disaster is based on thorough research on a real event, providing middle-grade readers with a fictional but accurate insider's-view of what really happened. Especially effective is Tarshis's afterword explaining that Joplin is where she grew up. Black-and-white illustrations add atmosphere. A narrative timeline and information about surviving tornadoes are appended. Bib.

#1977273 (Vol. 14) I Survived the Eruption of Mount St. Helens, 1980 (Prebound)
written by Lauren Tarshis

Eleven-year-old Sally Tanner knew the mountain well, and like many, she never imagined that this serene wilderness could turn deadly. But on May 10th, 1980, Sally finds herself in the middle of the deadliest volcanic eruption in U.S. history. Trapped on the mountain, she must escape clouds of poisonous gas, boiling rivers, and landslides of rock, glacial ice, and white-hot debris.

978-1-4844-9094-5 ©2016 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.7 Lexile 640

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.95

Reviews by: Horn Book Horn Book Guide (Spring 2017) Jess and twins Sam and Eddie are retrieving a camera Jess left in a vacation cabin when Mount St. Helens erupts; Jess braves the heat, darkness, and overpowering ash to seek help for her trapped and injured friends. Though the exaggerated survival aspect feels contrived, the exciting historical story provides a glimpse of the event from an intimate-feeling perspective. Historical background appended. Reading list.

#1983445 (Vol. 04) I Survived the Bombing of Pearl Harbor, 1941 (Prebound)
written by Lauren Tarshis

Eleven-year-old Danny Crane witnesses the bombing of Pearl Harbor and must find his way home in the midst of the terror, smoke, and chaos of the attack.

978-1-4844-9472-1 ©2011 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.5 GR Lvl R Lexile 620

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$14.95

Reviews by: Children's Literature It is December 7, 1941 and eleven-year old Danny Crane has an escape plan. His mom meant well when she brought him to peaceful Hawaii, but he was not afraid of living in New York City, even though some of his friends were being threatened by gangs. He was going back to make sure his best friend was OK. Just as he is about to leave, Danny hears the sound of war planes, gun fire, and bombs. Smoke fills the air. Pearl Harbor has been attacked. Tarshis does an excellent job of portraying this surprise attack. She captures the chaos, fear, and destruction in terms young readers can understand. Subplots throughout the story present the life of Japanese Americans in Hawaii and how they were treated after the attack. A fifteen-page appendix explores Japan's motivation for the attacks, America's response, and the changes in Pearl Harbor today. A timeline outlines the events of that fateful morning from 3:40 am, when a US ship first spotted suspicious activity at sea, to 10:00 am when the attack ended. Pencil sketches and a photograph of the Pearl Harbor memorial help bring this book to life. This well-written page turner is aimed at a third and fourth grade reading level but it will appeal to students as old as twelve. Reviewer: Leigh Geiger, Ph.D

#1983797 (Vol. 05) I Survived the San Francisco Earthquake, 1906 (Prebound)
written by Lauren Tarshis

Ten-year-old Leo loves being a newsboy in San Francisco --but early one spring morning in 1906 Leo's world is shaken, when he finds himself stranded in the middle of San Francisco as it crumbles and burns to the ground.

978-1-4844-9491-2 ©2012 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 1.0 RC Lvl 3.4 GR Lvl S Lexile 610

Quantity 1
Unit Price $14.95

Reviews by: Children's Literature Until twenty hours before the earthquake, Leo has his gold nugget. Leo also has warm memories of his papa telling stories of brave Grandpop and Papa saying that Leo has his Grandpop's "guts and good luck." His papa always ended the stories by giving the nugget to Leo to hold. But now his gold nugget, his promise of a better life, has been stolen by two vicious street thugs. For the enterprising young Leo, a self-sufficient orphan who supports himself selling newspapers on the streets of San Francisco, the destructive earthquake of 1906 follows a personal disaster of major proportion. Leo is intent on retrieving his gold nugget until his friend, Morris, and the earthquake foil his efforts. Survival becomes all that matters. All over San Francisco, buildings are collapsing; fires burn out of control and the people are helpless to take care of themselves. Leo will persevere and help other people. This chapter book, in the "I Survived" series, does not have one dull moment. The adventures are fast paced, the descriptions are vivid, and all the illustrations fit the time period and mood. The gold nugget illustration on the title page and at the beginning of each chapter sparkles! Good will prevail over adversity. The end papers are important to the story. The author, Tarshis, writes about her current impressions of San Francisco as she retraces Leo's steps. The question/answer section offers the where, why and what nature of earthquakes. The additional Facts on Earthquakes explain the pattern of earthquakes and their impact on land and sea and space. Reviewer: Jill Walton

#1984321 (Vol. 01) I Survived the Sinking of the Titanic, 1912 (Prebound)
written by Lauren Tarshis

Ten-year-old George Calder's life changes forever as he, his little sister, Phoebe, and their Aunt Daisy set out across the ocean on the "Titanic" in 1912.

978-1-4844-9592-6 ©2010 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 1.0 RC Lvl 3.3 GR Lvl Q Lexile 590

Quantity 1
Unit Price $13.95

Reviews by: Horn Book Horn Book Guide (Fall 2010) George, his sister, and their wealthy aunt sail from England on the ill-fated Titanic. When tragedy strikes, George is separated from his sister and aunt, but miraculously all survive the disaster. Though the events are contrived, reluctant readers may be drawn to this fast-paced book with short, easy-to-read chapters. Shadowy black-and-white illustrations add to the text.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Returning from England with his aunt and little sister, ten-year-old George Calder explores the Titanic and revels in the luxury of their first-class suite-until the night the ship hits an iceberg and his explorations and determination save their lives. In this first of a new adventure series aimed at reluctant readers, Tarshis has woven plenty of concrete, factual information into her narrative. In an attention-grabbing opening scene the sinking ship lurches and George falls and loses consciousness. Backing up 19 hours, the author describes George's last day aboard ship, using short paragraphs with plenty of dialogue. George recalls earlier escapades: climbing into the crow's nest, meeting third-class passengers-an Italian immigrant and his son-and sliding down the banister of the grand staircase. On the final night, looking for a mummy in the baggage room, he encounters a thief. Both immigrant and thief play roles in his survival. The plot involves too many convenient coincidences, but the fast pace and intrinsically fascinating disaster story will keep readers turning the pages to the unexpectedly sentimental ending. (author's note, additional facts) (Historical fiction. 7-10)

Reviews by: School Library Connection Library Media Connection (August/September 2010) This book follows ten-year-old George Calder on the Titanic as readers learn that George gets into trouble easily, loves his eight-year-old sister, Phoebe, and appreciates that their aunt Daisy provided their passage. When George thinks there might be a mummy on board, he decides to investigate; a man attacks him but is stopped when the ship hits an iceberg. George returns to his stateroom to find Phoebe gone. Through the help of Marco and his father, George and Daisy find Phoebe. Phoebe and Aunt Daisy get on a lifeboat, George and Marco stay with the sinking ship but finally get into a lifeboat. Intermediate students love adventures, so this volume gives them a chance to learn about this historic event and imagine being there. The book includes factual references, provides a good fictional account of the voyage from a child's point of view, and finishes with interesting information about the Titanic. Students will like the suspenseful action that provides edge-of-your-seat moments. The final details provide a chance to see some fun facts about the ship. Recommended. Marge Cox, Library Media Specialist, Veterans Memorial Elementary School, Naples, Florida

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1986580 (Vol. 06) I Survived the Attacks of September 11, 2001 (Prebound) written by Lauren Tarshis Lucas has to tell his dad's friend Benny, a firefighter, that his parents do not want him playing football anymore, and he takes the train into New York City to talk to Benny, but everything changes when the Twin Towers are attacked. 978-1-4844-9909-2 ©2012 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 1.0 RC Lvl 3.5 GR Lvl R Lexile 630	1	$14.95

Reviews by: Children's Literature Today's 8 to 10-year-olds were not alive the day the Towers came down, but are naturally curious about the events of September 11th. Tarshis helps them understand the events of the day through the eyes of 11-year-old Lucas, whose father and "Uncle" Benny are both members of the New York Fire Department, stationed less than 10 blocks from the World Trade Center. She frames the story around Lucas' love of football. Lucas is upset by their decision to end his playing days because of his frequent concussions. Convinced that Uncle Benny will take his side, he sets off on his own to talk to him at the fire station. As the pair walk and talk, they hear a loud roar and look up to see a low-flying airplane, so low he "could even read the letters on the tail: AA." Lucas watches as "the plane plunged like a knife into the side of one of the buildings" and almost immediately hears Uncle Benny shouting the alarm into his phone. Listening to the news as he waits in the now-abandoned fire station, Lucas becomes increasingly afraid and sets out to locate his father and Benny at the Command Center—and thereby is in the midst of things, with his father, when the first tower collapses. They run for their lives, helping people along the way. Tarshis includes vivid details yet avoids being gruesome by keeping everything from Lucas' perspective. Readers will have a clear understanding of the sequence of events as well as a sense of the emotions of those who were there. Dawson's gray pen and ink illustrations show readers what Lucas occasionally sees, again keeping the focus on him more than the horrific events. Backmatter includes a timeline, FAQs, and Tarshis' explanation of her decision to write this book. This is a title in the "I Survived" series. Reviewer: Peg Glisson

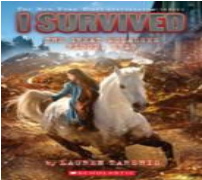

Reviews by: Horn Book Horn Book Guide (Spring 2013) When a football concussion benches Lucas, the son of a New York City firefighter, he skips school, goes downtown to the firehouse to be with his uncle, and is caught in the devastation following the attack on the Twin Towers. The narrative is rushed, but the fast pace and short, accessible chapters will draw reluctant readers. Black-and-white illustrations add atmosphere.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide When a football concussion benches Lucas, the son of a New York City firefighter, he skips school, goes downtown to the firehouse to be with his uncle, and is caught in the devastation following the attack on the Twin Towers. The narrative is rushed, but the fast pace and short, accessible chapters will draw reluctant readers. Black-and-white illustrations add atmosphere. (Copyright 2013 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

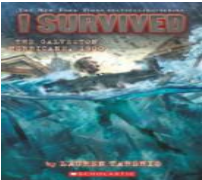

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A terrified 11-year-old gets an "extremely loud and incredibly close" view of the World Trade Center attacks in this disaster series' latest entry. Thoroughly bummed at having to drop football in the wake of his third concussion, Lucas cuts school for the lower Manhattan firehouse where beloved "Uncle" Benny--his firefighter father's colleague and closest friend--is stationed. He arrives just as the first plane does, and hearing that all firefighters have been summoned to the scene, he sets out to find Benny and his dad. Supplemented by occasional staid but realistic scenes from Dawson, Tarshis effectively captures not only the sequence of events and the pervasive confusion and shock as the catastrophe develops, but also its gargantuan scale. Though the author plays with readers' sympathies in the final chapter with a needless red herring, in general she crafts a dramatic, emotionally intense tale that takes account of 9/11's physical and emotional costs--short- and long-term--while ending on an upward beat. Though not yet born in 2001, the intended audience will come away feeling more connected to the tragedy and aware of its historical significance. (afterword, timeline) (Historical fiction. 9-11)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2354990 (Vol. 23) I Survived the Great Alaska Earthquake, 1964 (Prebound) written by Lauren Tarshis It was 1964 in the brand-new state of Alaska, a vast land of staggering beauty and heart-stopping dangers. Eleven-year-old Jack had grown up living happily with his parents in an off-the-grid cabin, miles from their closest neighbors. Grizzlies and wolves outnumbered people, and dark winter days were 30 degrees below zero. Jack had always thought of himself as strong -- "Alaska tough". But then the most powerful earthquake in American history -- the Good Friday Earthquake -- struck. 978-1-5364-8257-7 ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 144 pgs.	1	$16.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2292859 (Vol. 22) I Survived the Wellington Avalanche, 1910 (Prebound) written by Lauren Tarshis The snow came down faster than train crews could clear the tracks, piling up in drifts 20 feet high. At the Wellington train depot in the Cascade Mountains, two trains sat stranded, blocked in by snow slides to the east and west. Some passengers braved the storm to hike off the mountain, but many had no choice but to wait out the storm. 978-1-5364-7575-3 ©2022 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 144 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 570	1	$14.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2118223 (Vol. 19) I Survived the Great Molasses Flood, 1919 (Prebound) written by Lauren Tarshis There were warning signs that the molasses tank would break. The steel sides moaned and groaned. Molasses oozed from its seams. But the people of Boston's North End -- mostly poor immigrants -- were powerless to complain to the big molasses company. On a bright January day in 1919, the tank finally broke and almost three million gallons of molasses rushed the neighborhood. 978-1-5364-5857-2 ©2019 5 x 8 144 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.4 Lexile 610	1	$14.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2178172 (Vol. 20) I Survived the California Wildfires, 2018 (Prebound) written by Lauren Tarshis Josh and his cousin bond over tacos and reptiles and jokes, but on a trip into the nearby forest, they suddenly find themselves in the path of a fast-moving firestorm, a super-heated monster that will soon lay waste to millions of acres of wilderness and -- possibly -- their town. Josh needs to confront the family issues burning him up inside, but first he'll have to survive the flames blazing all around him. 978-1-5364-6524-2 ©2020 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 144 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 610	1	$14.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2247430 (Vol. 21) I Survived the Galveston Hurricane, 1900 (Prebound) written by Lauren Tarshis The city of Galveston, Texas, was booming. Perched on an island off the southern coast of Texas, Galveston had been founded in the 1830s. By 1900, it was Texas's richest and most important city. Boats loaded up with American cotton and wheat steamed from Galveston to countries around the world. Arriving ships were crowded with immigrants. The streets, paved with crushed oyster shells, sparkled like they'd been sprinkled with diamonds. 978-1-5364-7030-7 ©2021 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 144 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 560	1	$14.95

#2014426 (Vol. 15) I Survived the American Revolution, 1776 (Prebound)

written by Lauren Tarshis

The battlefield was soaked in blood. Screams of injured soldiers rang through the air. Eleven-year-old Nathaniel Knox knelt behind a rock, his gun clutched in his shaking hands. Nate had been heading to New York City to find his father. But now he was trapped in a terrible gunfight between American and British troops.

978-1-5364-1857-6 ©2017 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 144 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.8 Lexile 660

Quantity 1 Unit Price $13.95

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide After running away from his abusive uncle in Connecticut, eleven-year-old Nathaniel Fox finds himself alone in colonial New York during the Revolutionary War. A Patriot friend of Nathaniel's deceased father finds the boy and brings him to Fort Greene just as the Battle of Brooklyn is starting. Formulaic but well-paced historical fiction for early middle graders and reluctant readers; research notes included. Reading list. Bib. (Copyright 2018 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal School Library Journal Xpress (September 1, 2017) Gr 3-5-As with other historical events covered in the series, Tarshis focuses on one specific character and a limited time frame in order to make the story manageable for readers who may lack background knowledge. Orphaned Nathaniel Fox, 11, is living with his uncle in Connecticut in 1776. Uncle Storch is a Tory and a Northern slave owner. In an author's note, Tarshis explains that 40 percent of people in Connecticut in 1776 owned slaves. When Uncle Storch threatens to beat a young enslaved boy named Theo, Nate diverts his uncle's anger to himself, then runs away. He stows away on a merchant vessel with the idea of getting to New York City and becoming a ship's cabin boy. Instead, he ends up in a military camp, with American soldiers preparing to do battle with British forces. While Nate knows that a war is occurring, like many people, he is not highly interested or informed until it touches him personally. Reunited with a former employee of his father's, Nate fights in the Battle of Brooklyn in August 1776. After his adventures with the Continental Army, Nate learns that his uncle died, leaving Nate as his sole heir. The boy eventually returns home to free Theo and his mother. Tarshis successfully blends historical fact with an involving narrative. VERDICT Purchase where the series is popular. This would also be useful as a supplementary resource for studies of the American Revolution.-Lucinda Snyder Whitehurst, St. Christopher's School, Richmond © Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. No redistribution permitted.

#1994652 (Vol. 02) I Survived the Shark Attacks of 1916 (Prebound)

written by Lauren Tarshis

In the summer of 1916, ten year-old Chet Roscow is thrilled by the news that a Great White shark has been attacking people along the Atlantic Coast. One day, swimming with his friends, Chet sees something in the water.

978-1-5364-0354-1 ©2010 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 1.0 RC Lvl 3.4 GR Lvl R Lexile 610

Quantity 1 Unit Price $14.95

Reviews by: Children's Literature Ten-year-old Chet is swimming in a creek when he sees a shark swimming towards him. This exciting beginning leads to other dangerous adventures regarding a mysterious killer shark in this fictionalized account of the true story. It is 1916, and Chet is staying with his Uncle Jerry in New Jersey for the summer while his parents are away. He helps his uncle in the diner. After the opening scene, the story flashes back to nine days earlier when his friends show him an article about a shark that attacked and killed someone in New Jersey waters. His Uncle Jerry refuses to believe it, but Captain Wilson, a former whaling ship captain, believes that it happened and he tells his own story about how he fought off a shark that had attacked him. Chet and his friends swim at the creek, and they fool Chet about a shark attacking them. Chet plays a trick on them, and the boys get mad because Chet's trick about being bloodied by a shark terrifies them. When Chet actually does have an encounter with a shark, they don't believe him. In another series of events, Chet gets bitten seriously by the shark, but at the end, he is on his way to recovery and is reunited with his parents and friends. Several pages at the end explain the actual events as they happened in 1916. This story will keep the reader's interest, but it does have its share of violence. The book is one of the "I Survived" series. Reviewer: Vicki Foote

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—An absorbing story based on the shark attacks in New Jersey in 1916. Chet Roscoe, 10, moves in with his uncle while his father looks for work in California. He works in his uncle's diner and meets some local boys with whom he becomes friends. A story hits the papers about a shark attack about 10 miles away and their little town dismisses it as a fake, but a local fisherman begs to differ. The boys play a series of pranks on one another, but when Chet comes face to face with the shark in the river, the friends refuse to believe him, until they see it themselves. Black-and-white illustrations that resemble old photographs enhance the events of the story. Tarshis incorporates information about the real attacks and fictionalizes it, then follows the story with facts about the attacks and sharks. This is a gripping story that will hold the interest of reluctant readers.—Delia Carruthers, Roxbury Public Library, Succasunna, NJ

#1997805 (Vol. 07) I Survived the Battle of Gettysburg, 1863 (Prebound)
written by Lauren Tarshis
 In 1863, child slave Thomas and his sister Birdie journey north and meet up with Union soldiers who have orders to fight at Gettysburg.
 978-1-5364-0470-8 ©2013 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.8 GR Lvl S Lexile 660

Quantity 1
Unit Price $14.95

Reviews by: Booklist Booklist (April 15, 2013 (Vol. 109, No. 16)) Grades 1-4. Tarshis, author of the popular Emma-Jean Lazarus novels, presents a highly personalized narrative of the Battle of Gettysburg. The story follows former slave Thomas and his little sister Birdie as they fall in with Union forces and make their way north. The Union army rolls toward its epic clash in a small Pennsylvania town, and Thomas becomes an unwitting participant in one of the most formative events in American history. Tarshis writes with sharp, clear, emotional language: "There they were, rebel soldiers ready to charge. There were thousands of them—men in front on horseback, waving gleaming swords." Back matter includes common questions and answers about the Civil War, along with the text of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. Others in the I Survived series include high-interest topics such as Pearl Harbor and September 11.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Kirkus Reviews (January 15, 2013) The seventh (chronologically earliest) entry in the series pitches a young former slave into the middle of the Civil War's pivotal battle. Having saved a Union soldier named Henry Green by hurling a live skunk at his Confederate captors, young Thomas finds himself and his little sister Birdie adopted by Green's unit. Three weeks, an ambush and a quick march later, Thomas unexpectedly finds himself in the thick of the fighting—possibly on Missionary Ridge itself, though the author doesn't provide a specific location. Rather than go into details of the battle, Tarshis offers broad overviews of slavery and the war's course (adding more about the latter in an afterword that includes the text of the Gettysburg Address). She folds these into quick pictures of military camp life and the violence-laced fog of war. Afterward, Thomas and Birdie are reunited with their older cousin Clem, who had been sold away, and make good on a promise to Green (who doesn't survive) to settle with his Vermont parents and attend the school taught by his sweetheart. Sentimental of plotline but informative and breathlessly paced. (Q&A, annotated reading list) (Historical fiction. 9-11)

#1991218 (Vol. 03) I Survived Hurricane Katrina, 2005 (Prebound)
written by Lauren Tarshis
 Barry's family prepares to evacuate before Hurricane Katrina hits, but when his little sister gets very sick, they are forced to stay home and face the floodwater that sweeps Barry away.
 978-1-5364-0253-7 ©2011 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.3 GR Lvl Q Lexile 590

Quantity 1
Unit Price $14.95

Reviews by: Booklist Booklist (February 1, 2011 (Vol. 107, No. 11)) Grades 3-6. This novel in the I Survived series follows 11-year-old Barry Tucker, who resides with his family in New Orleans' Lower Ninth Ward in 2005. Though the Tuckers attempt to evacuate before Hurricane Katrina strikes, they end up trapped in their home as the storm approaches. Although the events depicted here could be scary for younger children, Tarshis offers a hopeful resolution, and a frank epilogue gives additional facts about the disaster. Expressive illustrations capture the drama of the storm and its aftermath, but the book's real power comes from its exploration of what it means to be a hero.

Reviews by: Children's Literature Both reluctant and eager readers may indeed choose this book because of its cover (by Steve Stone): intense and imminent danger confront a terrified boy and his dog as the jagged remains of a house come rushing toward them in the water. The story inside won't disappoint. This title in the "I Survived" series offers fast dialogue, faster action, threats—not only from Hurricane Katrina but a neighborhood bully and his "killer" dog—and the compelling example of a boy who finds strength and courage he never knew he had. Readers are pulled along with 11 year old Barry Tucker's family as the water rises in the Lower Ninth ward of New Orleans. Should they try to stick it out or leave town? Once they leave, should they return home because Barry's little sister is so sick and the line of cars so long? And what about that jagged house crashing through the water toward Barry? There are heroes and heroines in this fictional account just as there were during the real hurricane. There are several pages of interesting facts about Hurricane Katrina, as well as an author's note posing questions without an answer: why wasn't more done to make the levees stronger? Why was help so slow to arrive? The questions are valid but teachers or parents may need to help young readers discuss possible answers and relate the situation to their own lives. Other titles in the "I Survived" series include The Sinking of The Titanic, 1912 and The Shark Attacks of 1916. Reviewer: Karen Leggett Reviews by: Horn Book Horn Book Guide (Fall 2011) The book begins on a terrible Monday in August, 2005, with eleven-year-old Barry Tucker clinging to a tree as Hurricane Katrina ravages New Orleans. The text then backs up to tell of Barry's family's attempt to escape the city and how everyone weathered the storm. Accessible writing and fast pacing will appeal to reluctant readers. Shadowy black-and-white illustrations enhance the story.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide The book begins on a terrible Monday in August, 2005, with eleven-year-old Barry Tucker clinging to a tree as Hurricane Katrina ravages New Orleans. The text then backs up to tell of Barry's family's attempt to escape the city and how everyone weathered the storm. Accessible writing and fast pacing will appeal to reluctant readers. Shadowy black-and-white illustrations enhance the story. (Copyright 2011 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Tarshis (I Survived the Sinking of the Titanic, 1912, 2010, etc.) again transforms a historical event into a fast-paced adventure story appropriate for lower elementary students. This tale begins on that fateful day, Monday, August 29, 2005. Eleven-year old Bobby Tucker is hanging on to an oak tree trying to survive the floodwaters in the Lower Ninth Ward. After the dramatic opening scene, readers are taken back one day in time, to August 28. Life in the Lower Ninth is humming along as usual that day—Bobby and his friend Jay excitedly planning to send in an entry to a nationwide Create a Superhero contest—until evacuation orders convince Bobby's family to head of town. Unfortunately, Bobby's little sister gets so ill that the family has to return home and try to ride out the storm. The author's research and respect for the survivors of Katrina make this a realistic and gripping account that steers clear of sensationalism and sentimentality. Following the main text are "After the Storm: Questions about Katrina" and "Facts about Hurricane Katrina," both ideal for setting young readers who have been enthralled by Bobby's story on a path to discovering more about the true story of Katrina and its aftermath. (Historical fiction. 7-10)

Reviews by: School Library Connection Library Media Connection (May/June 2011) Tarshis has written about survival in other books and has done another masterful job with Hurricane Katrina as a backdrop in this heart-wrenching account of Barry and his family. With his little sister too ill to evacuate, Barry's family stays behind in the Lower Ninth Ward, though a terrifying rise in floodwaters caused by broken levees separates Barry from his family. The action scenes are gripping and described in vivid language that a reluctant reader can handle. The plight of animals affected by the storm is also incorporated into the story, which adds another layer of reality. Digging deep and realizing one's own personal strength is a positive theme in the story, and the author ends by relaying facts from the disaster. This could be a read-aloud in a social studies classroom or an independent read for any student with an interest in realistic fiction. Recommended. Jennifer Coleman, Library Media Specialist, St. Gabriel's Catholic School, Austin, Texas

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2053983 (Vol. 16) I Survived the Children's Blizzard, 1888 (Prebound) written by Lauren Tarshis The Schoolhouse Blizzard, also known as the Children's Blizzard or the Great Blizzard of 1888, caught people completely by surprise and resulted in 235 fatalities, including several children in one-room schoolhouses. What made the storm so deadly was the timing, the suddenness, and the brief spell of warmer weather that preceded it. 978-1-5364-3365-4 ©2018 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 112 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.5 Lexile 630	1	$13.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2088750 (Vol. 18) I Survived the Battle of D-Day, 1944 (Prebound) written by Lauren Tarshis In commemoration of the 75th anniversary of D-Day, Lauren Tarshis shines a spotlight on the story of the Normandy landings, the largest seaborne invasion in history and foundation for the Allied victory in World War II. 978-1-5364-5278-5 ©2019 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 140 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.5 Lexile 630	1	$13.95

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2080020 (Vol. 17) I Survived the Attack of the Grizzlies, 1967 (Prebound) written by Lauren Tarshis Eleven-year-old Melody Vega and her family come to Glacier National Park every year. But this year is different. Mel comes face-to-face with the mighty grizzly. Now her only thought is one of survival. 978-1-5364-4743-9 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 144 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.2 Lexile 550	1	$13.95

Ice Cream Machine (Trade)

#2312374 Human Kaboom (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adam Rubin

In a swanky New York City hotel, a reclusive guest appears to have spontaneously combusted. On a school field trip to a human anatomy museum in space, two kids try to pull off the greatest prank in history. Somewhere on a deserted island, three siblings try to make a life for themselves after the rest of the planet has been decimated by gigantic rock monsters. And then there's the small, quaint fishing town where a boy visiting his sister stumbles across an ancient curse; the traveling circus where a young girl becomes the assistant to a death-defying human cannonball; and the rugged wilderness where one kid with superpowers just can't seem to find some peace.

(Companion Novel)

978-0-593-46239-3 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 416 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 810

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Rubin follows up The Ice Cream Machine (2022) with a second gathering of original stories, each with several pictures by different up-and-coming illustrators. Though varied in plot and style, each is shared and spun from the same title in earnest of Rubin's message to young prospective writers that "inspiration is everywhere." The tone fluctuates even more than in the previous outing: there's a hilarious field trip that takes readers to an orbiting amusement park shaped like a human body (which offers a whole new definition for full moon), and a gruesome, twisty whodunit that leads to a character-driven bildungsroman about a temperamental Canadian superhero's journey to mature human. Best of the lot is a thrilling and poignant circus tale that recounts the career of a blind high-wire artist. The author closes with an invitation to his audience to take his title and run with it themselves, while perhaps checking out the instructional videos on his website. Pedagogical purposes notwithstanding, there's more than enough entertainment value to light the fuses of readerly—as well as writerly—readers.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books The Human Kaboom acts as the prompt-and all of the titles-for the six stories in this explosively eclectic collection of illustrated stories, which author Rubin hopes will inspire creativity in readers. These particular kabooms deliver that motivation with aplomb, from a swanky hotel's not-quite murder mystery to a near-future where siblings outsmart some thick-headed rock monsters to a blind tight-rope walker's final performance. While shared humor and a propensity for the outlandish tie the stories together on some stylistic levels, the varying approaches to the prompt also share an unexpectedly raw depth; several characters lose loved ones tragically, love is bittersweet, and even tremendous superpowers are shown in a dark, violent, isolating light. A unique popcorn recipe follows Rubin call's for kaboom-y story submissions to end the book, giving readers options for their explosive creativity. WJ COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Rubin returns with six new tales--all featuring the same title--to tickle the funny bone. An Iowa boy discovers an ancient curse while visiting his older sister on an island in northeastern Canada. A young girl from a family of circus trapeze artists lacks coordination but finds her role assisting a human cannonball. Two practical jokers have their sights set on pulling off the biggest prank the universe has ever seen. A guest in a New York hotel mysteriously and spontaneously combusts. Siblings make the best of things on a deserted island in the wake of the end of the world. Rubin, a humorist with a flair for explosive prose and side-splitting gags, is in good form here: All the stories boast laughs, smart characterization, clever plotting, and explosive incidents. The collection's opener kicks things off in style, but the pinnacle is the fifth, "The Human Kaboom (the one with the cursed pirate treasure)." A seventh entry, entitled "The Human Kaboom: (the one that hasn't been written yet)," is in fact a plea for readers to create their own incendiary tale and send it to Rubin. The gags are plentiful, the action is exciting, and the variety is commendable. Each story is illustrated by a different artist, featuring artwork from Marta Altés, Adam de Souza, Daniel Gray-Barnett, Rodolfo Montalvo, Daniel Salmieri, and Gracey Zhang (final art not seen). Most characters read White. Impossible to resist. (popcorn recipe) (Humor. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2266472 Ice Cream Machine (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adam Rubin

Reader, be advised that the events in this book may tickle your funny bone: A boy and his robot nanny travel the globe in search of the world's tastiest treat. A girl and her sister compete in an ice cream eating contest--against an honest-to-goodness pig. A child prodigy invents a new way to create the freshest dessert ever. And we should probably mention the evil ice cream seller terrorizing local kids.

978-0-593-32579-7 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 384 pgs.

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 Having properly established that dragons love tacos in his popular picture books, Rubin moves to longer-form writing with a creative exercise--six short stories, each with the same title (plus a few other shared elements) but different plots, casts, and even illustrators. The tales range from spectacularly gooey riffs on "Strega Nona" and various folktales about hastily phrased wishes to one that features a worldwide tour of ice creams and similar sweet treats, and another about evil ice cream man Cromulous Blotch (a Roald Dahl-ish name if ever there was one), who delights in tricking children so he can salt his sweet potatoes with their tears. Along with added tips and encouragement for budding writers, the author also offers convincing proof that words are magical--as anyone who casts an effective "anti-butt" spell with a "Wet Paint" sign on a park bench or transforms their mom into a "jiggling puddle of warm fuzzies" by slipping a love note into her jacket pocket can attest. Scoops of entertainment and insight for young readers as well as writers. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A compilation of stories drawing upon the appeal of ice cream. Six short tales are combined into an ice cream-themed collection written by Rubin and illustrated by half a dozen leading illustrators. Each story is entitled "The Ice Cream Machine," although the characters, settings, and genres vary greatly, and the subtitles are distinct. The only connections between the stories are that each features an ice cream machine of some type and that each story's characters have an affinity for exclaiming "jangus!" Some stories are more successful than others. "The Ice Cream Machine (the one with the sorcerer's assistant)," illustrated by Miles, combines magic and humor to create a story with a surprisingly deep moral, while the "The Ice Cream Machine (the one with the alien space lab)," featuring art by Miller, is a slow-burn spiraling tale of wish-making reminiscent of The Twilight Zone. Others aren't as successful: "The Ice Cream Machine (the one with the five-armed robot)" meanders, and "The Ice Cream Machine (the one with the ice cream eating contest)" is fun but has a superficial subplot about bullying that will make most readers roll their eyes. As a whole, the text is entertaining but may not be as consistent as readers will hope for. The variety of artistic styles forms a pleasing complement to the different entries. An uneven collection that mostly succeeds. (author's note, writing prompt; ice cream recipe, illustrator bios) (Short stories. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this madcap middle grade debut billed as six "wildly different stories with the exact same name"; each illustrated by a different contemporary artist; Rubin (Gladys the Magic Chicken) varies genre, setting, and subtitle in tales that all feature ice cream as an integral component (and "have a half a dozen little wormholes in common, too"). In "The Ice Cream Machine (the one with the ice cream eating contest)," illustrated by Charles Santoso, sisters living in a community of anthropomorphized animals clandestinely enter a contest to unseat the unpopular champion. In Liniers-illustrated "The Ice Cream Machine (the one with the genius inventor)," a mechanically minded kid coaxes a loved one to cognizance, while "The Ice Cream Machine (the one with the sorcerer's assistant)," illustrated by Nicole Miles, offers a gross-out medieval fantasy retelling. Via a varied cast of characters, impish humor, and largely upbeat endings, Rubin underlines the idea, outlined in an introduction, that "writing is magic." Though the collection offers little innovation, the result is comforting, entertaining, and uniformly funny. A seventh chapter invites readers to create a story of their own; back matter includes a recipe and instructions to make ice cream without mechanical assistance. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jennifer Joel, ICM Partners.(Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Picture book author Rubin (Dragons Love Tacos) makes his middle grade debut with this compilation of six short stories of the same name, "The Ice Cream Machine," each with its own subtitle (e.g., "The one with the ice cream eating contest."). With the common theme of an ice cream machine, each story is creative and fun. Featuring original ideas, an amusing cast of characters (including a robot nanny named Kelly), and exhilarating adventures like searching for ice cream in an uninhabited forest in Peru, the book deftly illustrates how one idea can be deeply, uniquely explored. Rubin's writing is inspired, and tweens will enjoy the wordplay. Rubin concludes with a challenge to write the seventh short story for this compilation, prompting readers to get creative and craft their own variation on the theme (a mailing address is included for receipt of said story). Each entry also has exciting black-and-white art from a different illustrator, bringing even more life to the pages of Rubin's fascinating conceptualization of the short story genre. VERDICT Ice cream lovers and tweens in general will get a kick out of this adventurous, whimsical, and funny book. A compelling twist on a sometimes underrated format, this short story collection is a winner.—Gretchen Schulz

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Adam Rubin (Dragons Love Tacos; Gladys the Magic Chicken) proves that "writing is magic" in his middle-grade debut, a hilarious collection of six stories, illustrated by different artists, that share the same title: "The Ice Cream Machine." The six stories include Shiro Hanayama and his robot best friend, Kelly, who travel the world in search of the best ice cream; two sisters deciding to challenge the repeat winner of their town's annual ice cream eating contest; a sorcerer's assistant unexpectedly filling in for the sorcerer. The titular machine defies definition and is personified in each iteration as something slightly different. In "(the one with the ice cream eating contest)," it's a nickname. In "(the one with the sorcerer's assistant)," it's an enchanted object whose creations bring joy to a kingdom. Set in space, on a farm, in the future and in the past, every story in this collection is distinct and original, imaginative and inventive. Each is its own world, written in a different genre with characters who feel as real and vivid as those in the last. The writing style for every tale is similar enough to allow the book to feel cohesive, with humor reminiscent of Louis Sachar and an outlandishness that brings Roald Dahl to mind. The illustrations--by Daniel Salmieri, Emily Hughes, Charles Santoso, Nicole Miles, Liniers and Seaerra Miller--help create a feeling of continuity through their grayscale palettes and make each story an individual art piece. The Ice Cream Machine brings as much inspiration as it does laughter. COPYRIGHT(2022) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

I'm Ok (Trade)

Quantity 1 Unit Price $16.99

#2081721 I'm Ok (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Patti Kim

Ok Lee knows it's his responsibility to help pay the bills. With his father gone and his mother working three jobs and still barely making ends meet, there's really no other choice. If only he could win the cash prize at the school talent contest! But he can't sing or dance, so he tries the next best thing: a hair braiding business.

978-1-5344-1929-2 ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 670

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In the wake of his father's unexpected death, sixth-grade Korean immigrant Ok Lee ("No one at school says my name right... Say "pork." Drop the p sound. Now drop the r sound") is determined to earn money to help his mom, who works three jobs, and "keep alive father's plan for success in the USA." Unfortunately, Ok's money-making schemes; braiding his classmates' hair, tutoring the most popular kid in class, and learning how to roller skate to win the school talent contest prize; prove less profitable than he had hoped, and in addition, he is often bullied over his name, his appearance, and his traditional Korean food. As Ok and his mother are forced to move into a smaller apartment, Ok feels like he's failing, and his desperation leads him to lie, steal, blackmail, and betray newfound friends. Debut author Kim, also a Korean immigrant, tells a moving story of family, culture, and growing up, through the eyes of a boy who struggles to fulfill his father's American dream and maintain his own sense of pride. Ok's anger and frustration about his father's death and his mother's burgeoning relationship with a deacon from their church ring particularly true, as do his ethical and emotional growth. Ages 10: up. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-7-When Ok's beloved father dies in a construction accident, his mother works several jobs but can't make ends meet. Determined to help pay their bills, Ok writes a business plan for a braiding business. He doesn't make much at first, but he gets the attention of lots of girls, including the retro-fashion obsessed Mickey McDonald. Ok thinks things are under control until the suspiciously nice Deacon Kohl from the First Korean Full Gospel Church begins courting his mom. Ok becomes convinced that no one needs him anymore and he hatches a plan to run away. Ultimately, Ok learns he's not alone, friendless, or unwanted. Things might not go the way he wants them to, but he's going to be fine. Ok's hilarious observations shine in this realistic fiction title about conformity, individuality, and loving people for who they are, not who you want them to be. The Korean American characters stand out as the most nuanced and compelling throughout. The culturally authentic details Ok shares in his first-person narration bring his relationship with his parents into sharp focus. Unfortunately, Ok's friends Mickey and Asa speak in pronounced dialects, perhaps to indicate their belonging to uneducated families. Consequently, their dialogue seems exaggerated and their character development suffers. Although the plot has a few logistical holes and the character development is uneven, Ok's sincerity will hook many young readers. VERDICT The compelling, funny protagonist makes this a solid general purchase for school and public libraries.-Amy Seto Forrester, Denver Public Library Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

#2162904 It's Girls Like You, Mickey (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Patti Kim

For the first time in her confident, bold life, Mickey McDonald is nervous about starting school. She becomes friends with Sun Joo, who has just moved to town. Their connection is instant and strong. But things get complicated when Sydney, the popular (and mean) girl in Mickey's class, also takes a shine to Sun Joo. (Companion Novel)

978-1-5344-4345-7 ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 660

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This standalone companion to Kim's I'm Ok shifts the focus to Ok's friend Mickey McDonald, now starting the seventh grade and exchanging postcards with Ok, who has moved away. After the family is deserted by her father, self-described "fat poor white girl" Mickey lives with her overworked, irritable mother and helps care for her little brother, Benny, and their menagerie of animals. When new girl Sun Joo, who is Korean, is assigned to be Mickey's science partner, Mickey helps Sun Joo acclimate, learning Korean phrases and relishing having someone make her a friendship bracelet and nominate her for student government. Mickey sees a chance for them both to upgrade socially when Sun Joo gains the favor of the most popular girl in school, but encouraging her to join the popular group destroys their friendship and tests Mickey's unshakable confidence. Despite money stress at home, Mickey stays upbeat and inventive, as when she creatively repurposes a pillowcase into a skirt, and models both empathy and compassion while confidently standing up to the school's mean girl. Along with her desire to help others, Mickey's unfiltered commentary, for example about her first period and her mother's smoking habit, make her an inimitable protagonist worth rooting for. Ages 10: up. (June)

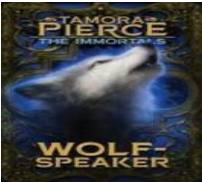

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—The usually confident Mickey McDonald is on shaky ground as she navigates a new year of school without her best friend, Ok. As if her problems weren't bad enough, her mom is having a hard time making ends meet which means no new back-to-school clothes, and it looks like her dad is out of the picture for good. Mickey's one ray of light is her new friend, Sun Joo Moon, who is new to the school and to the United States. Mickey feels it is her duty to protect Sun Joo and show her the ropes, even if it means pushing and pulling Sun Joo places where she might not want to go. Over the school year, Mickey struggles with everything from her first period to friendship breakups. She has a huge heart and cares a lot for the people around her. Her character growth is admirable, and she eventually learns what is most important. That being said, much of Mickey's behavior as she evolves may be hard for readers to connect with. Throughout the book, she ruminates extensively on random topics in passages that can come across clunky and hard to comprehend. The voice feels inconsistent; at one point, Mickey seems eloquent and well-rounded and in the next breath, she's making another ill-advised decision. It may make for a confusing reading experience. VERDICT Though Mickey is an entertaining character, the inconsistent voice and stream-of-consciousness passages may lose young readers' engagement.—Myiesha Speight, Towson Univ., Baltimore, MD

Immortals (Trade / Pierce)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1937155 (Vol. 01) Wild Magic (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tamora Pierce The mage Numair, the knight Alanna, and Queen Thayet enlist thirteen-year-old Daine's help to battle the dreadful immortal creatures that have recently begun to attack the kingdom of Tortall. 978-1-4814-4023-3 ©2015 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs. Grades 6 - 9 Dewey# Fic Lexile 670	1	$19.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this first volume of a series, Pierce returns to the world and characters she introduced in her Song of the Lioness fantasy epic. Here, she tells the story of Daine, a 13-year-old orphaned girl with an extraordinary talent for communicating with animals. The teenager is swept up in the first skirmishes of a war, and is forced to master her fears and learn how to marshal her magical abilities. Trying to make the sequel to four previous novels stand on its own is no mean feat, and Pierce has a lot of exposition to relate. By telling the story through Daine's eyes, she allows new readers a chance to "catch up" on who's who along with her heroine. Although this device proves effective for the most part, some of the scenes are a little bewildering. However, Pierce's inventive descriptions of Daine's apprenticeship as a Mage, her riveting battles with griffins, dragons and other monsters, and her delightful, egalitarian ideals more than compensate for this minor flaw. Ages 10-up. (Oct.)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1937164 (Vol. 02) Wolf-Speaker (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tamora Pierce With the help of her animal friends, Daine fights to save the kingdom of Tortall from ambitious mortals and dangerous immortals. 978-1-4814-4025-7 ©2015 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs. Grades 6 - 9 Dewey# Fic Lexile 710	1	$21.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #1937139 (Vol. 03) Emperor Mage (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tamora Pierce Sent to Carthak as part of the Tortallan peace delegation, Daine finds herself in the middle of a sticky political situation. She doesn't like the Carthaki practice of keeping slaves, but it's not her place to say anything -- she's just there to heal the emperor's birds. It's extremely frustrating! What's more, her power has grown in a mysterious way. 978-1-4814-4027-1 ©2015 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs. Grades 6 - 9 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.8 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 750	1	$21.99

	Quantity	Unit Price
#1937146 (Vol. 04) Realms of the Gods (Hardcover (Trade))	1	$21.99

written by Tamora Pierce

Daine and Numair set out on a fantastical adventure that takes them from Earth to the realms of the gods, through huge battles and dangerous encounters with dragons in an attempt to make peace and save others from doom.

978-1-4814-4029-5 ©2015 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 6 - 9 Dewey# Fic Lexile 770

Improbable Tales of Baskerville Hall (Trade)

#2332566 (Vol. 01) Improbable Tales of Baskerville Hall (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ali Standish

What if young Arthur Conan Doyle really went to a secret school for extraordinarily gifted children called Baskerville Hall? When a mysterious man with a pipe notices young Arthur's incredible deductive skills, Arthur's offered a spot at the esteemed Baskerville Hall and a chance to lift his family out of poverty. There Arthur makes quick friends with Irene Eagle, a girl who boldly strides into any adventure, and Jimmie Moriarty, a boy whose brilliance rivals Arthur's own. But he makes enemies, too, who want Arthur expelled . . . or worse.

978-0-06-327557-7 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Starred Review A young, impoverished Arthur Conan Doyle is invited to attend an elite, secretive boarding school named Baskerville Hall. Motivated by curiosity and his determination to support his parents and sisters in the future, Arthur accepts. There he meets his roommate, Jimmy (James) Moriarty; their classmate, Irene Eagle; Dr. John Watson (professor of anatomy and physiology); and Mrs. Louise Hudson, deputy headmistress. Eventually he will also meet Sherlock Holmes in memorable encounters that will leave dedicated Sherlockians' heads spinning. As Arthur and his new friends rise to various challenges during their initiation to a secret society, he begins to question the club members' motives. Meanwhile, he attempts to identify the perpetrator of a series of unsettling misdeeds at his new school. The author of The Ethan I Was Before (2017), How to Disappear Completely (2020), and Yonder (2022), Standish does a capable job of recreating the late-nineteenth-century British setting and laying the foundation for a new series with elements of alternate history and science fiction, all while telling a well-paced, exciting story in which stalwart heroes attempt to outwit inscrutable villains. As Professor Holmes tells Arthur at the novel's end, "The game is afoot." Readers who love period mysteries and adventure stories are sure to enjoy the experience. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A promising young sleuth investigates curious cases at his new school in this series opener written in partnership with the Conan Doyle estate. Young Arthur Conan Doyle is an observant Scottish boy living in poverty in Edinburgh in 1868. When he helps save a young mother and her baby, his keen intellect and quick wits do not go unobserved; soon afterward, he receives an invitation to attend a secretive institution, "the most rigorous and innovative school in these British Isles." A futuristic airship whisks Arthur away to Baskerville Hall, where he's greeted by peculiar professors. He soon makes equally eccentric friends, such as an Irish girl who hoards useful miscellanea in her pockets and a South Asian British boy who writes obituaries for his very much alive acquaintances. There's also a snobbish bully, the son of a member of Parliament. The multilayered mystery brings together the initiation rituals of a secret society, a dinosaur egg, and a mysterious grandfather clock. It builds on the familiar setting of a strange school with quirky inhabitants, evoking the mood of and incorporating characters from Conan Doyle's classics, including professors Sherlock Holmes and John Watson, and Arthur's roommate, James Moriarty. These details will delight fans, but the intricate worldbuilding may overwhelm readers unfamiliar with this universe. The coed student body includes international students and is marked by gender parity and socioeconomic diversity. A satisfying mystery shrouded in layers of scene-setting details. (historical photos and drawings) (Mystery. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In 1868 Edinburgh, Arthur Conan Doyle is a boy who notices things, and his observations are "almost never wrong." An unexpected scholarship to Britain's prestigious Baskerville Hall is Arthur's ticket to making something of himself. Upon arrival, though, a chance to join a powerful secret society tests his integrity, while break-ins lead Arthur and his friends on a perilous investigation. So begins this meta mystery series starter written in partnership with the Conan Doyle Estate and Working Partners, which imagines the Sherlock Holmes author as the hero of his own childhood capers. In a narrative voice that melds wry humor with convincing period detail, Standish (Yonder) situates Baskerville Hall against the vivid backdrop of Victorian society on the cusp of great cultural and scientific change. The mix of canonical characters and fresh faces will appeal to Conan Doyle fans as well as newcomers to the author's genre-spanning universe. Throughout this tautly constructed tale of suspense, adventure and academic exploration are central pillars of young Arthur's unusual education; as Baskerville Hall's headmaster tells the young protagonist upon his arrival at school, "risks must be taken in the service of knowledge." It's a tantalizing playground for inquisitive minds. Characters are portrayed with various skin tones. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Chelsea Eberly, Greenhouse Literary. (Sept.)

In the Beautiful Country (Trade)

#2280892 In the Beautiful Country (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jane Kuo

Anna is counting the days until her family gets to move to America—the so-called beautiful country—though she's only ever known life in Taiwan. But the beautiful country isn't at all what Anna pictured. Her family can only afford a cramped one-bedroom apartment. Anna is bullied and lost at school because she doesn't understand the new language. And the restaurant her father poured his savings into is struggling to stay afloat. Why is the version of America Anna and her family are experiencing anything but beautiful? Novel in verse.

978-0-06-311898-0 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 It's difficult for 10-year-old Anna to imagine leaving her grandparents, aunts, and cousins in Taiwan and joining her father in "the beautiful country, the Chinese name for America." He went first and bought a fast-food restaurant, which he is running alone, but soon Anna and her mother join him. Difficulties arise on every front: Anna struggles with discrimination against Asian Americans at school, the restaurant struggles to break even, and teen vandals throw bricks through the front window. Discouraged, her parents consider returning to Taiwan but gradually find the support they need to keep going. Inspired by their example, Anna decides how she wants to treat the people around her. Based on Kuo's experiences as an immigrant growing up in Los Angeles in the 1980s, this novel in verse will resonate with many children who have faced similar challenges, including taunting, bullying, and, once they feel accepted by their peers, the temptation to be equally cruel to other newcomers. Anna's candid first-person narrative makes this first novel an absorbing and ultimately moving book. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine At the start of this emotional novel in verse full of vivid imagery, ten-year-old Ai Shi Zhang and her parents leave Taiwan for the suburbs of Los Angeles. Money is tight after a business deal goes wrong and the family restaurant is repeatedly vandalized, and the Zhang family considers giving up and moving back. Ai Shi is forced to grow up quickly, code-switching and translating for her parents, all while suffering bullying at school and grappling with her new reality and shifts in identity. Kuo conveys the life of a new immigrant, including constant commentary from others on their differing appearances, clothing, and foods. In the end, Ai Shi learns to approach others, even her bullies, with a sense of generosity and empathy, so as to "get off this never-ending merry-go-round of hurt and hate." With the help of a few friends, and through sheer tenacity and creativity, the Zhangs begin to realize that they are, in fact, building a place they can call home. Gabi K. Huesca(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Taiwanese family tries their luck in America. In this verse novel, it's 1980, and nearly 11-year-old Ai Shi and her mother prepare to leave Taipei to join her father in California, where he is pursuing a business opportunity with a friend. The extended family send them off, telling Ai Shi she's so lucky to go to the "beautiful country"—the literal translation of the Chinese name for the U.S. Once they are reunited with Ba, he reveals that they have instead poured their savings into a restaurant in the remote Los Angeles County town of Duarte. Ma and Ba need to learn to cook American food, but at least, despite a betrayal by Ba's friend, they have their own business. However, the American dream loses its shine as language barriers, isolation, financial stress, and racism take their toll. Ai Shi internalizes her parents' disappointment in their new country by staying silent about bullying at school and her own unmet needs. Her letters home to her favorite cousin, Mei, maintain that all is well. After a year of enduring unrelenting challenges, including vandalism by local teens, the family reaches its breaking point. Hope belatedly arrives in the form of community allies and a change of luck. Kuo deftly touches on complex issues, such as the human cost of the history between China and Taiwan as well as the socio-economic prejudices and identity issues within Asian American communities. A powerfully candid and soulful account of an immigrant experience. (Verse historical fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Kuo debuts with a pensive novel in verse centering a Taiwanese girl grappling with a new life in America. On the cusp of her 11th birthday in 1980, Zhang Ai Shi leaves behind the only place she's ever known; along with all the people, places, and food that she loves; to move with her mother from Taipei to Duarte, California, and join her father to co-run a small fast-food restaurant. Their new home is in "the beautiful country," as America is translated in Chinese, but it doesn't feel beautiful, and it definitely doesn't feel like home. As she works to familiarize herself with unfamiliar language, surroundings, and traditions, Ai Shi grapples for joy and comfort amid increasingly upsetting changes, including instances of classism, school bullies, and vandals attacking the family's struggling new business as well as leveling racist slurs. Together, Ai Shi's family must find a way to adjust while holding on to their memories and to each other. Employing a reflective tone and sincere lines that capture the heartbreak of leaving home alongside a clear portrayal of the family's varied experiences, Kuo paints a vivid story of interpersonal bonds and persistence that also touches on nuances of navigating shared Taiwanese and Chinese ancestry. Ages 8: up. Agent: Jennifer Laughran, Andrea Brown Literary. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—A beautifully written novel in verse about finding your way in the world. Set in 1980, Ai

Shi/Anna, a Taiwanese girl, moves with her parents to California—or as they call it, the beautiful country. Anna is thrilled to be moving, until she arrives and learns that life in California isn't what she expected. She is the only Asian student at school, and the kids bully her for being different. Her parents put all their money into a fast food restaurant that is costing them more than they make, especially with reoccurring vandalism. What started as a big dream may actually be a big mistake. Kuo doesn't shy away from the hardships, but presents them in a suitable manner for the target audience. The racism that Anna and her parents experience is very relevant today, with some of the depictions (pulling at eyelids and reciting racist rhymes) likely to cause discomfort. This book is a work of fiction, but is inspired by Kuo and her family's immigration to the United States. While Anna was born in Taiwan, her father is Chinese, and she discovers what it means to be from both places during that time. Anna's story is a true journey, and Kuo skillfully breaks it into parts that allow readers to think and reflect on each piece before moving on. VERDICT A moving historical fiction book that is valuable for all readers and belongs in libraries and classrooms.—Amanda Borgia

#2326156 (Vol. 02) Land of Broken Promises (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jane Kuo

After a rocky first year, Anna and her parents have settled into life in California--their restaurant is even turning a profit. Then her family makes a discovery that shatters their tranquil reality: their visas have expired. Anna's world is suddenly overwhelmed by new words like "undocumented" and "inequality." She longs to share the towering secret that looms over every aspect of her life, but her parents strictly forbid her from telling anyone.

978-0-06-311904-8 ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 3.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist A sequel to In the Beautiful Country (2022), which told of Anna and her mother leaving Taiwan and joining her father in America, this story opens 18 months later, during Anna's sixth-grade year. She has adjusted well, and the family business, a fast-food place, is supporting them. But later that year, she learns that her family's visa has expired and that, no matter how hard they work, they have no path to citizenship. To someone who increasingly sees herself as an American, this comes as a devastating revelation, but by the story's end, Anna has confided in her best friend, worked through her initial emotional turmoil, and found a way to move forward. Based on Kuo's experiences within a family of undocumented immigrants who were granted amnesty and, eventually, American citizenship, Anna's first-person, free-verse narrative unfolds with simplicity, precision, and insights into what drives the people around her as well as herself. Written in short chapters, this inviting novel in verse offers a rewarding reading experience for young people.

Incorrigible Children of Ashton Place (Prebound)

#1965203 (Vol. 05) Unmapped Sea (Prebound)

written by Maryrose Wood

Determined to break the wolfish curse that's threatening her charges and their unborn baby sibling, Miss Penelope Lumley takes a seaside holiday in the hope of gaining answers from an aging mariner.

978-1-4844-8205-6 ©2016 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 13.0 Lexile 850

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.95

Incorrigible Children of Ashton Place (Trade)

#1924120 (Vol. 03) Unseen Guest (Paperback (Trade))

written by Maryrose Wood

Returning with the other children to London with unsolved questions about Lord Ashton, Ashton Place and herself, Penelope decides to take matters into her own hands and embarks on an investigation in the estate's local forests.

978-0-06-236695-5 ©2015 5-1/4 x 7-3/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.4 AR Pts 11.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$6.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Those incorrigible children of Ashton Place are back. The story is rife with colorful characters, catchy phrases, mad-cap adventure, and a touch of mystery. Tantalizing pieces of the puzzle concerning the children's origins and their connection to Miss Lumley and Ashton Place continue to be cleverly revealed throughout the story, creating just the right balance in this fast-paced, fun read. It begins with the appearance of a stray ostrich, soon followed by the Widow Ashton and Admiral Faucet, pronounced Faw-say, who plans on raising, racing, and marketing ostrich as a means to a fortune. His plans also include marrying wealthy Widow Ashton. Faucet is fascinated by the feral Incorrigible children, suggesting that they be used as exhibitions in a traveling show. He's mollified to have them lead the search for his missing ostrich, Bertha, in the nearby forest. Once back in the forest in which they were found, the children revert to many of their wolfish ways, much to Miss Lumley's chagrin. Bertha is found, but all of Faucet's schemes come crumbling down with the appearance of Judge Quinzy. Or is it really the Widow Ashton's late husband? Quinzy/Ashton doesn't stick around long enough for a definitive answer, but his widow is convinced of his identity and cancels her engagement to Faucet. He departs, and readers are left with an epilogue that only whets the appetite for the next installment in this wonderful series. A must-have.-Mary Beth Rassulo, Ridgefield Library, CT (c) Copyright 2012. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#1964846 (Vol. 05) Unmapped Sea (Paperback (Trade))

written by Maryrose Wood

Determined to break the wolfish curse that's threatening her charges and their unborn baby sibling, Miss Penelope Lumley takes a seaside holiday in the hope of gaining answers from an aging mariner.

978-0-06-211042-8 ©2016 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 13.0 Lexile 850

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$8.99

#2063713 (Vol. 06) Long-Lost Home (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Maryrose Wood

Mysteries are solved and long-lost answers are found. Only one question remains: Will Penelope and the Incorrigibles find a way to undo the family curse in time, or will the next full moon be their last?

978-0-06-211044-2 ©2018 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 448 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.3 AR Pts 14.0 Lexile 890

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$15.99

#1599964 (Vol. 01) Mysterious Howling (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Maryrose Wood

Fifteen-year-old Penelope Lumley is hired as governess to three young children who have been raised by wolves and must teach them to behave in a civilized manner.

978-0-06-179105-5 ©2010 5-7/8 x 8 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.8 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 8.5 Lexile 1000

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Fresh from the Swanburne Academy for Poor Bright Females, 15-year-old Penelope Lumley reports to remote but palatial Ashton Place and discovers just why the advertisement for a governess indicated a strong preference for "Experience with Animals." The three young children are not the offspring of disdainful newlywed Lady Ashton but were recently found in the forest, raised (apparently) by wolves. Lacking magical props but in every other respect a Mary Poppins in the bud, Miss Lumley quickly gets the wild but winning trio out of the barn and into the nursery, washed, properly dressed and—thanks to a savvy strategy of "careful demonstration, a great deal of repetition, and the occasional use of tasty treats"—on the road to civilized behavior. Tongue so forcibly in cheek that medical intervention may be required, Wood plunges her inexperienced but resourceful heroine into an unusually challenging domestic situation, winds the plot up and closes with an aftermath laced with tantalizing hints that All Is Not As It Seems. It's the best beginning since The Bad Beginning (1999) and will leave readers howling for the next episode. (High melodrama. 10-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this humorous kickoff to the Incorrigible Children of Ashton Place series, Wood (My Life: The Musical) injects new life into the governess theme by charging genteel 15-year-old Penelope Lumley (educated at the Swanburne Academy for Poor Bright Females) with three wild children—Alexander, Beowulf, and Cassiopeia—who were raised in the woods and taken into the "care" of Lord Frederic Ashton and his selfish, superficial bride (the children are living in a barn when Penelope arrives). With a Snicketesque affect, Wood's narrative propels the drama; Penelope is a standout, often invoking the truisms of her school's founder ("The best way to find out how fast a horse can run is to smack it on the rump") while caring for the Incorrigibles—named such so they won't be presumed Ashton's heirs. Despite the slapstick situations involving the children's disheveled appearance, pack behavior, and lack of language, the real barbarism comes from the Ashtons and a society that eagerly anticipates their failure. Though the novel ends a bit abruptly, the pervasive humor and unanswered questions should have readers begging for more. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8–12. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8-Jane Eyre meets Lemony Snicket in this smart, surprising satire of a 19th-century English governess story. A witty omniscient narrator speaks directly to modern readers and follows 15-year-old Penelope, recent graduate of the Swanburne Academy for Poor Bright Females, to British country manor Ashton Place, where conniving Lord Fredrick has discovered three wild children apparently raised by wolves while hunting in his vast forest property. To Lord Fredrick, who's named them Alexander, Beowulf, and Cassiopeia Incorrigible, the children are trophies and property ("Finder's keepers, what?"); to young Lady Constance they're savage nuisances who howl, chase squirrels, and gnaw on shoes. Enter Penelope Lumley, charged with taming them in time for a Christmas party, and bolstered by her top-notch classical education and an endless supply of platitudes from Agatha Swanburne. She also comes armed with a cherished book of poetry and her favorite fiction series, "Giddy-Yap, Rainbow!" There are stock characters, and there are mysteries. Most of all, without taking itself too seriously, there is commentary on writing itself, the dangers and the benefits of relying on books for moral courage, and the perils of drawing false expectations of the world from literature. Penelope shows growth, confronting issues of social class and expectation versus reality, and eventually realizing her own capacity for insight. Humorous antics and a climactic cliff-hanger ending will keep children turning pages and clamoring for the next volume, while more sophisticated readers will take away much more. Frequent plate-sized illustrations add wit and period flair.-Riva Pollard, Prospect Sierra Middle School, El Cerrito, CA (c) Copyright 2010. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#1631217 (Vol. 02) Hidden Gallery (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Maryrose Wood

Fifteen-year-old Miss Penelope Lumley, a governess trained at the Swanburne Academy for Poor Bright Females, takes the three Incorrigible Children of Ashton Place to London, England, and learns they are under a curse.

978-0-06-179112-3 ©2011 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.5 AR Pts 10.0 RC Lvl 7.5 GR Lvl V Lexile 960

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Children's Literature In the tradition of Lemony Snicket's Baudelaire children, who live in a time and place where children are ignored and mistreated, villains lurk around every corner and teamwork proves to be a truly favorable trait, the Incorrigible Children enter the literary world. Three unidentified children have been discovered living in the woods within the vast grounds of Ashton Place. Upon their discovery and "capture," the Lord of this vast estate and his young bride engage a governess. Miss Lumley is a recent graduate of the Swanburne School for Poor Bright Females, and she is fully prepared to accept the challenge of teaching these children to behave in this very social world. The children, named Alexander, Beowulf and Cassiopeia by their discoverer, struggle to learn to speak and to display perfect manners. They are constantly watched by the senior gardener and the housekeeper. The fifteen-year-old governess uses all of her training to prepare these children for their public appearance at the estate's Christmas Ball, as demanded by Lord Frederick and Lady Constance. However, unknown sources are at work to undermine all of Miss Lumley's efforts and create chaos at the great Christmas Ball. Unexpected events at the Ball will cause Lady Constance to question her own control of her household and will bring new respect for Miss Lumley. This is Book 1 of a promised series about the "Incorrigible Children at Ashton Place." It will be an excellent series addition to middle school media centers and reading curriculums. Reviewer: Joyce Rice

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Fresh from the Swanburne Academy for Poor Bright Females, 15-year-old Penelope Lumley reports to remote but palatial Ashton Place and discovers just why the advertisement for a governess indicated a strong preference for "Experience with Animals." The three young children are not the offspring of disdainful newlywed Lady Ashton but were recently found in the forest, raised (apparently) by wolves. Lacking magical props but in every other respect a Mary Poppins in the bud, Miss Lumley quickly gets the wild but winning trio out of the barn and into the nursery, washed, properly dressed and—thanks to a savvy strategy of "careful demonstration, a great deal of repetition, and the occasional use of tasty treats"—on the road to civilized behavior. Tongue so forcibly in cheek that medical intervention may be required, Wood plunges her inexperienced but resourceful heroine into an unusually challenging domestic situation, winds the plot up and closes with an aftermath laced with tantalizing hints that All Is Not As It Seems. It's the best beginning since The Bad Beginning (1999) and will leave readers howling for the next episode. (High melodrama. 10-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this humorous kickoff to the Incorrigible Children of Ashton Place series, Wood (My Life: The Musical) injects new life into the governess theme by charging genteel 15-year-old Penelope Lumley (educated at the Swanburne Academy for Poor Bright Females) with three wild children—Alexander, Beowulf, and Cassiopeia—who were raised in the woods and taken into the "care" of Lord Frederic Ashton and his selfish, superficial bride (the children are living in a barn when Penelope arrives). With a Snicketesque affect, Wood's narrative propels the drama; Penelope is a standout, often invoking the truisms of her school's founder ("The best way to find out how fast a horse can run is to smack it on the rump") while caring for the Incorrigibles—named such so they won't be presumed Ashton's heirs. Despite the slapstick situations involving the children's disheveled appearance, pack behavior, and lack of language, the real barbarism comes from the Ashtons and a society that eagerly anticipates their failure. Though the novel ends a bit abruptly, the pervasive humor and unanswered questions should have readers begging for more. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8–12. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—Jane Eyre meets Lemony Snicket in this smart, surprising satire of a 19th-century English governess story. A witty omniscient narrator speaks directly to modern readers and follows 15-year-old Penelope, recent graduate of the Swanburne Academy for Poor Bright Females, to British country manor Ashton Place, where conniving Lord Fredrick has discovered three wild children apparently raised by wolves while hunting in his vast forest property. To Lord Fredrick, who's named them Alexander, Beowulf, and Cassiopeia Incurrigible, the children are trophies and property ("Finder's keepers, what?"); to young Lady Constance they're savage nuisances who howl, chase squirrels, and gnaw on shoes. Enter Penelope Lumley, charged with taming them in time for a Christmas party, and bolstered by her top-notch classical education and an endless supply of platitudes from Agatha Swanburne. She also comes armed with a cherished book of poetry and her favorite fiction series, "Giddy-Yap, Rainbow!" There are stock characters, and there are mysteries. Most of all, without taking itself too seriously, there is commentary on writing itself, the dangers and the benefits of relying on books for moral courage, and the perils of drawing false expectations of the world from literature. Penelope shows growth, confronting issues of social class and expectation versus reality, and eventually realizing her own capacity for insight. Humorous antics and a climactic cliff-hanger ending will keep children turning pages and clamoring for the next volume, while more sophisticated readers will take away much more. Frequent plate-sized illustrations add wit and period flair.—Riva Pollard, Prospect Sierra Middle School, El Cerrito, CA

#1738889 (Vol. 04) Interrupted Tale (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Maryrose Wood

A latest entry in the award-nominated series that includes The Mysterious Howling finds a heartbroken Miss Penelope Lumley assuaging the disappointments of her 16th birthday by accepting an invitation to speak at her former school, which will be closed if she cannot prove the academic progress of her incorrigible charges.

978-0-06-179122-2 ©2013 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.3 AR Pts 12.0 RC Lvl 6.2 Lexile 900

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-In Wood's continuing comic-gothic series, nanny Penelope Lumley is called back to the Swanburne Academy for Poor Bright Females to deliver a speech at the Celebrate Alumnae Knowledge Exposition, and she takes her three wolfish charges along. They find things much changed from Penelope's pleasant descriptions of the institution that was so instrumental in forming her character and philosophy. The Board of Directors has experienced something along the lines of a hostile takeover. Any enjoyment of life on the part of the poor, bright females is being squelched. It doesn't take long for Penelope to suspect that Judge Quinzy, who now heads the Board, is actually the supposedly deceased father of Lord Ashton and that he is after a book that may hold clues about the mysterious curse of the Ashtons. Readers learn that the three incorrigible children are not the only wolfish humans in the series and also a fair amount about poetic feet—especially iambic pentameter. It is all great fun and delightfully complicated—an essential purchase for libraries owning the previous three titles.—Miriam Lang Budin, Chappaqua Library, NY (c) Copyright 2014. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Incredibly Dead Pets of Rex Dexter (Trade)

#2269855 (Vol. 03) Everybunny Loves Magic (Hardcover (POB))

written by Aaron Reynolds

One thing quickly becomes clear...somebunny hates magic. Whoever it is, they're attempting to put Booper the Mystical out of the birthday biz for good. And they're willing to kill to do it. It's a cold cruel world out there. But don't worry. I'm on the case. And so is Darvish. Also, Sami Mulpepper. (Don't ask.) The point is, nobunny pulls one over on Rex Dexter...and his best friend...and his maybe-girlfriend...and his dead chicken.

978-0-316-10537-8 ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

#2158908 (Vol. 01) Incredibly Dead Pets of Rex Dexter (Hardcover (POB))

written by Aaron Reynolds

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$13.99

Rex Dexter is itching to have a dog. He was practically born to have one. His name is Rex, for crying out loud. When Rex's B-Day for Me-Day finally arrives, his parents surprise him with a box. Could it be? Yes! It has to be! A Chicken? Pet poultry? How clucky. Rex's uninvited ghostly guests are a chatty, messy bunch. And they need Rex to solve their mysterious deadly departures from the Middling Falls Zoo before it happens again. But how?

978-1-368-05183-5 ©2020 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 5.0 RC Lvl 3.4 Lexile 560

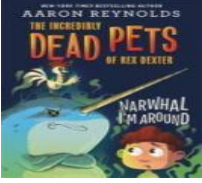

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 As the name of the town suggests, life in Middlington Falls is unremarkable. That is, until Rex Dexter tangles with a wish-granting grim reaper, in the form of a vintage arcade game. Unfortunately, Rex loses the game, and instead of walking away with a real live pet (please be a chocolate Lab!), he is cursed with the ability to see and speak to dead animals—including his rooster practice pet, which just got flattened in the parking lot. Narrating with unchecked confidence and sarcasm, Rex comes to understand that the incorporeal zoo animals now appearing in his bedroom—a charred rhino, a drowned gorilla, a squashed elephant, and a zapped panda—need his help to solve the mystery of their untimely deaths. Picture-book author Reynolds brings his knack for off-kilter comedy to his first novel in a gleefully entertaining fashion. While Rex recklessly leads with self-ascribed charm, he is balanced by his intelligent, good-natured friend Darvish. The zany animal cast adds to the fun of this series starter, perfect for fans of Stuart Gibbs' FunJungle mysteries. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Rex Dexter wants a dog. His parents say no. Unlike other fictional kids who prove their responsibility and earn their reward, though, Rex—with best friend Darvish and a starter pet chicken in tow—takes on the Grim Reaper in an arcade game, loses, and is cursed with being designated advocate for dead animals seeking closure. It starts with his steam-rollered chicken, who returns as a best friend wannabe, and escalates as animals in the local zoo are killed and show up at his house (in various states of post-mortem dishevelment) seeking assistance and shelter. There's a mystery to solve, a crush to pursue, a sixth-grade report to write, and revenants to organize, all of which add up to pretty standard middle-grade fare. As a narrator, Rex Dexter has a mouth that doesn't stop delivering glib patter that will either delight or exhaust readers, depending on their bent. His capacity for self-delusion is on constant groan-worthy display, while his magnificent vocabulary adds to the glee (e.g., on the subject of Beefarooni school lunch: "It is a travesty of colossal proportions wrapped in a veil of tomato sauce and guile"). With another plot queued up for a proposed series, Reynolds is bound to attract fans drawn to overconfident Rex and whatever challenge the Grim Reaper cares to deal him. EB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Haunted by the ghosts of dead pets, a kid must right their wrongs. All sixth grader Rex wants is a "real-live" pet of his own; preferably a chocolate Labrador. Everyone he knows has a pet. His best friend, Darvish, a "pet hoarder," has four; maybe five. In answer to Rex's constant pleading, his parents give him a "practice pet": a chicken. One hour and 14 minutes after the chicken enters Rex's life, it becomes a real-dead pet. Things go from bad to worse when, after losing a mysterious carnival game called The Reaper's Curse he finds on the sidewalk, Rex can not only suddenly see the ghosts of dead animals, but speak to and understand them. The chicken; Drumstick; is the first of many to communicate with Rex. As a de facto animal "afterlife errand boy," can Rex help these ghosts rest in peace? Reynolds' new series debut is nonstop comedy, poking fun at everything from animal rights groups to the education system. Rex's first-person narration; heavily unreliable and hyperbolic; smartly utilizes direct address to implicate readers in the ridiculous plot. Though several jokes only just toe the line, one punny reference to "spirit animals" goes a bit too far. Most of the human characters are white by default; Darvish is Pakistani American. Laugh-out-loud ludicrousness. (Fiction. 8-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When avid dog lover Rex Dexter, a sixth grader, begs for one; "a chocolate Labrador. That's a proper pet"; for his birthday, he doesn't expect his parents to get him a chicken as a "practice pet." Nor does he expect said chicken to be promptly run over by a steamroller, shortly after Rex loses a carnival game called The Grim Reaper, one that promises a curse. Nor the chicken's ghost to turn up in his bedroom calling him "bestie." More ghosts appear: of the rhino that burned to death at the local zoo, of a dead gorilla with a shark attached to its rear. Rex has become a lightning rod for dead animals, and it's clear that something sinister is happening at the zoo. Now he, his spectral companions, and his best friend, Darvish, must get to the heart of the matter before further animals meet similarly dismal fates. In this entertainingly spooky romp, Reynolds (Dude!) tempers his morbid premise with the absurdity of Rex's situation, the ghostly entourage's distinct personalities, and a hilarious, simultaneously formal and sarcastic, narrative voice. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jodi Reamer, Writers House. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6--Sixth-grader Rex Dexter desperately wants a dog, but his parents have deemed him too irresponsible. When he loses an old-fashioned Grim Reaper carnival game, he is cursed with the ability to see and communicate with dead animals who passed away with unfinished business. The first one he sees is his own pet chicken, which died moments before in a steamroller accident while Rex wasn't paying attention. Soon after, he starts seeing the ghosts of animals from a local zoo, all of whom died under strange circumstances. Rex must solve the mystery of who is killing off rare animals so that the victims can move on to the afterlife. And if he does, maybe he can convince his parents that he is responsible enough to own a dog, too. Hapless Rex follows in the footsteps of characters like Timmy Failure, who think they are much cleverer than they actually are. His hijinks will amuse those who enjoy slapstick humor just a little on the dark side. The mystery has a twist ending that will surprise and satisfy readers who thought they knew what was coming. VERDICT Purchase where funny books are popular—that's

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2226194 (Vol. 02) Narwhal I'm Around (Hardcover (POB)) written by Aaron Reynolds Rex Dexter is cursed ... with brains ... and daring ... and more than his fair share of devilish good looks. But also with an actual curse: dead animals keep showing up in his bedroom, wanting him to solve their murders. After successfully sleuthing a series of endangered animal assassinations, Rex is pretty sure he's home free, spiritually speaking. But that's when he finds a two thousand pound narwhal in his beanbag chair. And this tough guy is dead. And super crabby about it. 978-0-7595-5523-5 ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 224 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 4.0	1	$13.99

Individual Titles: Fiction

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2215943 Dragon World (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tamara Macfarlane Lurking in every corner of the earth, from the deepest depths of the oceans, to the tips of the tallest mountains, even tucked beneath the very ground that you tread on, dragons watch and wait. They take many forms--sea monsters, serpents, wild cats, eagles, and they represent many different things; Gods to be revered, evil kings to be feared, wise friends, and fierce foes. 978-0-7440-2765-5 Dorling Kindersley ©2021 7-1/2 x 10 80 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile IG 950	1	$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–8—Beautifully illustrated in bold, vibrant colors, this dragon guide book will have anyone who even slightly admires dragons drooling; it is a true feast for the eyes. Divided into four sections of Asian Dragons, European Dragons, Dragons of the World, and Dragon Discoveries, the book teaches readers interesting details about many different dragons and how they came to be. Each section contains a history of the dragon; its dwelling; body description such as eye shape, neck length, and overall shape; as well as the dragon's powers and traits. Powers and traits range from controlling the weather and shape-shifting to consuming everything in sight. The book also contains several dragon myths that originate from different regions around the world: "'What will we call this creature?' Liu asked. 'It is a sacred creature for our village,' said Mei. 'It made a sound like thunder when it came out—let's call it Dragon,' Chen said. (Dragon sounds like the Chinese word for thunder.)" The final sections of the book contain information about dragon eggs, what they look like and where the nests are built, and dragon jewels. Readers are shown different gems that dragons are often attracted to and accused of stealing. The book ends with information on drawing your own dragon and real animals that resemble dragons. There is a glossary and index to close out the book. VERDICT A must-purchase for libraries where dragon lovers lurk.—Tracy Cronce, Stevens Point Public Sch. Dist., Stevens Point, WI

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2342645 Winter Tales: Stories and Folktales from Around the World (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Dawn Casey Written by award-winning author Dawn Casey and with beautifully detailed artwork by illustrator Zanna Goldhawk, this is a magical book to be treasured for generations to come. Some of the 18 stories included are: "The White Bear King," "The Mitten," "The Apple Tree Man," "The Twelve Months," "The Snow Queen," and more. 978-0-7624-8477-5 Running Press Book Publishers ©2023 9-1/2 x 10-1/2 96 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic	1	$19.99

#2246391 Eleanor Amplified and the Trouble with Mind Control (Hardcover (Trade))

written by John Sheehan

Join world-renowned investigative reporter Eleanor Amplified as she goes undercover to help a student reporter and fan, Miku Tangeroa, expose the corruption at her middle school. Together they discover that the new organic lunch program and tech-based learning systems are doing more harm than good and might actually be part of an evil plot that might put all of Union City in danger.

978-0-7624-9883-3 Running Press Book Publishers ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Life has changed drastically at Brighton Middle School since a tech corporation stepped in to provide every student with VR headsets, personal tablets, and suspicious smart foods—and not for the better. Seventh grader Miku Tangeroa (race unspecified) knows something's amiss, but her investigative journalism skills alone aren't enough to find out what. Instead, she turns to her hero, ace reporter and radio host Eleanor Amplified, who embarks on an undercover mission as a substitute social studies teacher. Together with Miku's friends and another teacher, they work to crack open a case that links Miku's middle school troubles with Eleanor's preexisting examination of a shady manufacturer. The plot of this novel is fast paced and exciting in its interrogation of the corporate takeover of classrooms. The third act twist does, however, disappoint in replacing this line of thinking with an arc that strains credulity. The diverse cast of characters is well rounded and fun to follow; the narrative alternates between third-person perspectives of Miku's and Eleanor's exploits. VERDICT The ending leaves space for the launch of a new series that fans of middle grade mystery and of the eponymous podcast where Eleanor Amplified originated will enjoy.—Gina Elbert, Dobbs Ferry P.L., NY

#2368804 Underdogs of Upson Downs (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Craig Silvey

Annie Shearer lives in the country town of Upson Downs with her best friend, an adopted stray dog called Runt. After years evading capture, Runt is remarkably fast and agile, perfect for herding runaway sheep. But when a greedy local landowner puts her family's home at risk, Annie directs Runt's extraordinary talents toward a different pursuit--winning the Agility Course Grand Championship at the lucrative Krumpets Dog Show in London.

978-0-593-70363-2 Knopf Books for Young Readers ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 720

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Eleven-year-old Annie Shearer and her adopted stray dog, Runt, live with her family in Upson Downs, Australia. Their sheep ranch has seen better days; drought and an aggressive neighbor (who has diverted the town's water supply to his own property in hopes of buying out everyone) have made life difficult, spurring Annie's efforts to fix things for her family. Annie and Runt enter the agility contest sponsored by Krumpet's Dog Show in London, hoping for the grand prize, which could save the farm. Silvey's heartwarming story features cleverly named characters (evil neighbor Earl Robert-Barren; nasty dog-show competitor Fergus Fink), a direct and often slyly humorous writing style, plenty of local color, and a plethora of groan-worthy puns ("Horrific Axe-ident at the Woolarama Leg Chop!"). What shines through the witticisms, however, is this family's love and their ability to work together, which holds them in good stead throughout their travails. With a satisfying (although not entirely predictable) ending and a cute dog, this one is sure to please middle-grade readers. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews s. 375 days. That's how long it's been since it rained in the Australian sheep-farming town of Upson Downs. Businesses have shuttered, and multigenerational farms are being gobbled up by the aptly named Earl Robert-Barren. Eleven-year-old Annie Shearer is eager to help her family save their farm. She and former stray dog Runt, who's her best friend, have an unshakable bond that makes them a skilled herding and agility duo. Yet no one knows that, because Runt freezes when anyone but Annie is watching him. Then an opportunity comes up for Annie and Runt to qualify for the prestigious Krumpet's Dog Show in London--with a grand prize of $250,000. The Shearer family bands together to bring their hidden talents into the spotlight. The novel reads like a well-designed agility course, complete with engaging challenges and pacing that reward focus as well as speed. Expository chapter headings function as an aperture, offering pleasing wit and levity before jumping into the action. Obstacles posed by the aforementioned land-grabber and a peacocking pedigreed-dog handler heighten the tension as the stakes rise. Annie and Runt are the main attractions, and their relationships with the other scrappy Shearer family members--especially Annie's aspiring botanist dad--are authentically drawn and lovingly flawed, making them easy to cheer on and adding depth to a beautiful, rewarding narrative that's a fresh addition to the genre. Main characters read white. A perfect run of a novel with the heart of a champion. (Fiction. 8-12)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old Annie Shearer's family farm, located in the desperately parched Australian town of Upson Downs, is at risk of being sold to greedy landowner Earl Robert-Barren in this warm and sincere tale from Silvey (The Amber Amulet). When her canine companion Runt aces a doggie obstacle course at the local fair, Annie realizes that her pet's hidden talent could be her shepherding family's ticket out of debt, and her admirable drive to "fix everything" prompts her to enter Runt into competitions to raise money to help alleviate her parents' financial burdens. There's just one problem: Runt will only perform when no one but Annie is looking, and only under the near-magical guidance of Annie's index finger. In a flurry of brief, propulsive chapters, Annie and her daredevil older brother Max devise a clever workaround to Runt's performance anxiety, rally community support, and land a spot at the prestigious Krumpet's Dog Show in London, drawing the ire of presumptive champion Fergus Fink. Forgoing nuance for charm, Silvey uses broad strokes to craft slightly cartoonish yet joyful characters who propel this affirming small-town adventure that radiates good humor and a generous spirit. Primary characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Lesley Thorne, Aitken Alexander Associates. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Annie Shearer's family lives on a sheep farm in Upson Downs, a small town in the Australian countryside. Annie is great at fixing things but is troubled by a problem apparently beyond her skills. It hasn't rained in Upson Downs in so very long, and the only source of water has been siphoned off by a greedy neighbor. Businesses are closing, and townspeople are moving away. To help bring rain, Annie builds a rainmaker machine. But rain still doesn't come to the town. At a local fair, Annie has a new plan to get money for her family—she enters her dog, Runt, in an agility contest. Runt is fast, but Runt trusts only Annie and freezes when other people are around. Amazingly, Runt wins the agility contest at the fair and goes on to win at a countrywide contest as well. This win propels Annie and Runt to an international championship in faraway London. Annie is keen to go as she figures the prize money will help her family keep the farm. A series of circumstances causes Runt to lose the final competition, but all is not lost as rain finally comes to Upson Downs. Previously published in Australia as Runt, this novel was named the Book of the Year at the 2023 Australian Book Industry Awards. Giving the characters names like Earl Robert-Barren and Basil Peppercorn, Silvey crafts lyrical prose and leaves hidden gems for readers young and old. This novel will keep middle grade readers wishing for more stories about Runt and Annie. VERDICT A delightful novel about a girl and her dog that will capture the imaginations of readers.—Charla Hollingsworth

#2286855 Double O Stephen and the Ghostly Realm (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Angela Ahn

Stephen loves pirates. What he doesn't love is his name: Stephen Oh-O'Driscoll. He believes when his Korean mother and Irish father gave him this name, that it was just one cruel setup for being teased. Giving things the proper name is important, which is why Stephen thinks that it's time to update the definition of "pirate." They've got a bad rep, and maybe they deserve some of it, but Stephen still likes a few pirate traditions, like bandannas and eyepatches -- he's just not that into stealing things from people. He has the perfect new word: piventurate. A sailor who passionately seeks adventure. That's what he wants to be.

978-0-7352-6827-2 Tundra Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 620

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Pirate-loving Stephen's dreams are about to come true--in a ghostly way. Despite his mother's disapproval, 12-year-old Stephen Oh-O'Driscoll, who is of Korean and Irish descent, wants to be a pirate. With his bandanna and eye patch, he and best friend Brandon are ready for adventure, specifically becoming piventurates, a portmanteau term for pirate adventurers that Stephen coined himself. And one day, adventure comes, but not in the form of a pirate, or at least not really. Instead, it turns out Stephen is a baksu mudang, a Korean term for someone who can communicate with ghosts. Some of the ghosts he meets are friendly, some are scary--and one may or may not have been a pirate. Stephen's mother thinks he should have nothing to do with these spirits, but Stephen doesn't agree. Halmeoni, his late maternal grandmother (who is also a ghost), has been kidnapped, and to save her he will have to help the maybe-pirate ghost. But he isn't really complaining: This is what the Piventurate's Oath is all about! Stephen and friends new and old travel between the worlds of the living and dead, finding self-confidence and the truth about a few family secrets along the way, Full of swashbuckling and supernatural fun, this book touches but never dwells upon serious subjects for too long. Light, appealing, nonstop adventure. (Paranormal. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2238468 Dollhouse: A Ghost Story (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Charis Cotter

Alice's world is falling apart. Her parents are getting a divorce, and they've cancelled their yearly cottage trip--the one thing that gets Alice through the school year. Instead,

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Alice and her mom are heading to some small town where Alice's mom will be a live-in nurse to a rich elderly lady.

978-0-7352-6906-4 Tundra Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 360 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 640

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews It's 1997, and 12-year-old Alice's regular life is in turmoil; a move to the countryside leads to supernatural adventure. Alice has an overactive, vivid imagination--at least, according to her mother. But is what she sees always imaginary? After telling her emotionally absent, workaholic husband that she's leaving him, Alice's mother takes her daughter to Blackwood House, where she has a live-in nursing job caring for a wealthy old woman while she recovers from a fall. Alice is befriended by teenage Lily, the housekeeper's daughter, who informs her that her bedroom is haunted. As Lily and Alice explore the house, they find a dollhouse in a locked room that becomes real in Alice's dreams. Who are Fizz and Bubble--the sisters who also appear in her dreams--and what is her purpose in their lives? In her everyday world, Alice hopes her parents will reunite, worries about her mother's flirtation with the local doctor, and tries to stay out of the way of her mother's cranky patient. This is a twisty tale that goes in many different directions but never loses the main thread. The author carefully lays out clues for readers who like to solve mysteries themselves. Both Lily and Bubble are developmentally delayed; they are described respectfully and are fleshed-out characters. The cast members default to White. A time-traveling mystery that will keep readers involved and guessing up to the very end. (Paranormal mystery. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2234596 Alice Fleck's Recipes for Disaster (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Rachelle Delaney

Alice Fleck's father is a culinary historian, and for as long as she can remember, she's been helping him recreate meals from the past--a hobby she prefers to keep secret from kids her age. But when her father's new girlfriend enters them into a cooking competition at a Victorian festival, Alice finds herself and her hobby thrust into the spotlight.

978-0-7352-6927-9 Puffin Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 670

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 While Alice enjoys cooking with her father, a culinary historian, she finds it unsettling that his new girlfriend has arranged for them to compete as a team on Alice's favorite cooking show, Culinary Chronicles. Another surprise comes after they arrive at a grand country estate for the week of filming: rebranded as Culinary Combat, the show will now be hosted by the notoriously combative Tom Truffleman. The competitive experience is challenging, and Truffleman is demeaning, but Alice finds support from two new friends, Tavi and Henry, a young detective. After suspicious mishaps occur on the set, they join forces to identify the saboteur. Readers who watch competitive cooking shows will enjoy the backstage view, while others will relate to Alice's anxiety about appearing on TV, as well as her reluctance to accept her father's girlfriend. Delaney creates an array of colorful characters and keeps them in play as suspects, but Alice remains in the spotlight, focusing on problems, adapting to changing circumstances, and shifting her preconceived notions. A lively mystery sprinkled with anecdotes from culinary history. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Mix one shy tween, one unwelcome new woman in her single dad's life, one Victorian hotel, and one TV cook-off prone to mysterious failures. Shake and bake. Ever since the fifth grade calf's foot jelly incident, Alice has kept her love for cookery on the down low--but all bets are off after she learns that Hana, her food historian dad's girlfriend, has signed him up for a weeklong reality cooking competition ominously christened Culinary Combat. Events conspire to keep Alice on the hop too, as the challenge of facing the show's caustic, terrifying judge while preparing dishes like Victoria sponge cake and charlotte russe on camera--at first as her dad's sous-chef, then alone after he's eliminated for alleged misbehavior--is complicated by a string of malfunctioning appliances and other odd kitchen mishaps...not to mention her own tangled feelings about Hana, who introduces her to the intriguing world of Japanese desserts and is actually pretty cool in other ways. Spooning new friends with surprising talents, savvy detective work (it turns out the show does have a saboteur), and mouthwatering foodie talk (if no actual recipes) into this culinary caper, Delaney dishes up a savory tale that tests her young cuisinier--in the face of change as much as in the kitchen--on the way to a flying finish. Alice and her dad present White; Hana has some Japanese ancestry; and there is diversity in the supporting cast. Generous portions of yum for fans of mysteries and mille-feuille. (Mystery. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Rising seventh grader Alice Fleck, 12, who has unruly "ginger-colored hair," secretly enjoys being sous-chef to her culinary historian father as they whip up historically accurate, sometimes stomach-churning, recipes. But then her father's "unnecessary"

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

girlfriend, Hana Holmes, announces that she has entered the duo into their favorite cooking show, Culinary Chronicles, "quite possibly the friendliest cooking competition on TV." Alice doesn't want to be on-screen; or around Hana, since the program will be shot at the "week-long Victorian festival" Hana is lecturing at. Things go from sour to downright unsavory when the production team announces that the show has been acquired and transformed into Culinary Combat, evaluated by Tom Truffleman, "the fiercest judge in the world of competitive cooking." As the contestants prepare Victorian dishes such as charlotte russe, suspicious kitchen accidents point to sabotage, and Alice and her new friends, two other children at the festival, must find the perpetrator; especially after Truffleman accuses Alice's father of cheating. Detailing fascinating food history and delectable dishes, Delaney (Clara Voyant) serves a toothsome culinary caper amid a gentle, well-balanced portrait of one preteen's journey toward accepting adaptability and change. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Amy Tompkins, Transatlantic Agency. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Variety may be the spice of life; but for 12-year-old Alice Fleck, too many changes spell trouble. Alice is not looking forward to middle school, and she isn't very happy about her dad James's new girlfriend, Hana. Things heat up when Alice realizes that her dad and Hana have been planning for them all to attend a Victorian festival where Hana will be lecturing—and that Hana signed Alice and James up to compete on Culinary Capers, a historical cooking show that's filmed there. Alice and her culinary historian dad have been cooking together all her life, but not in front of cameras. Granted, Culinary Capers isn't as intense as most cooking shows; plus, it doesn't even air on a popular station (just the history station), so it's not like anyone will see it. But Alice and James discover there have been some changes to the familiar show. Culinary Capers has become Culinary Combat, complete with a new host, a new network, and a ruthless new judge, Tom Truffleman, who does not like kids. Alice feels alone until she befriends two other kids at the festival, Tavi and Henry, and they decide to figure out who is behind all the "accidents" happening on set. Alongside the mystery plot, Alice's insecurities and family concerns feel authentic, as does her relationship with her father. Alice and her dad are white, and there is diversity among the supporting characters. VERDICT Delaney takes readers on an adventure that feels like a cross between Kids Baking Championship and Scooby Doo in all the best possible ways, along with a few behind-the-scenes glimpses of reality TV and social media. Recommended for fans of cooking shows and sweet family stories.—Heather Webb, Worthington Libs., OH

#2312439 Big Sting (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Rachele Delaney

Eleven-year-old Leo is an "armchair adventurer." Unlike his little sister Lizzie, Leo is not a risk-taker. So when he, Lizzie, Mom and Dad leave the city to visit Grandpa on Heron Island, Leo finds all kinds of dangers to avoid -- from the deep, dark ocean to an old barn on the verge of collapse. Despite Leo's best efforts to avoid it, adventure finds him anyway when Grandpa's beehives go missing in the dead of night.

Infuriated, Grandpa vows to track down the sticky-fingered thieves himself... with risk-averse Leo and danger-loving Lizzie (plus a kitten named Mayhem) in tow.

978-0-7352-6930-9 Tundra Books ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 640

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A story full of mystery, adventure, and personal challenges that will have readers buzzing. Eleven-year-old Leo and his younger sister, Lizzie, are staying with their maternal grandfather on Heron Island, British Columbia, after the recent passing of their grandmother. Originally Leo's parents were also staying there, but when a booking opens at an exclusive nearby spa, Leo's city-loving father seizes the opportunity to go somewhere with reliable Wi-Fi under the pretense that the kids' mom needs to unwind from her stressful job. Leo and Lizzie stay with their grandfather, a choice that ultimately proves to be vital when the farm's 12 beehives are stolen. The hives originally belonged to Grandma, but after her death, Grandpa learned how to keep bees, and he is desperate to get them back. The trio embark on an adventure to discover the culprit, learning more about each other along the way. A subplot in which Leo is distressed about his results from an online personality test matching users with career paths that his father constantly talks about is nicely woven into the story, demonstrating how labels can limit people as well as define them. Readers who love adventure will enjoy the overall plot, but while the mystery is solved--and Delaney plays fair with the clues--the pacing will make it difficult for armchair sleuths to discover who stole the hives before the grand denouement. The overall story makes up for this minor shortcoming, however. Main characters read White. A sweetly engaging novel exploring family relationships. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When their parents interrupt a family trip by heading to a spa, 11-year-old Leo and nine-year-old sister Lizzie are unexpectedly left with their cantankerous, recently widowed maternal grandfather on Canada's Heron Island. The kids' father, who is changing careers and obsessed with personality quiz site Fatefinder.com, has dubbed cautious, curious Leo an "Auditor." And it's true that Leo prefers the orderly world of virtual farming game Applewood Acres to Grandad's dilapidated barn and overgrown field, but he's also peeved about being pigeonholed and attempts to embrace the shifting situation. "Adventurer" Lizzie, meanwhile, is ready for anything. The theft of their late, pun-loving apiarist grandmother's dozen hives soon plunges the unlikely trio into a mystery. They set out on an unexpected adventure to track down the beeknappers, with their grieving Grandad declaring, "No. Puns. Allowed"; Lizzie embracing a barn kitten she calls Mayhem; and Leo, true to his careful nature, assessing possible risks along the way. This character-forward beekeeping mystery from Delaney (Alice Fleck's Recipes for Disaster), considers the limitations of labels and the authentic messiness of IRL adventures. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Amy Tompkins, Transatlantic

Agency. (Feb.)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness In this tender, comical and thrilling (yes, all three!) middle-grade novel, a cautious, thoughtful boy--more inspired by virtual adventures than real-life escapades--finds himself embroiled in a mystery involving stolen beehives, a wild pig named Penelope and more puns than can be BEElieved.

#2269711 Grave Thief (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Dee Hahn

Twelve-year-old Spade is a grave thief. Spade and his brother get caught in a royal trap, and Spade must find the master of the Woegon: a deadly creature that is stalking the castle by night. Along the way, he meets Ember, the queen's niece, and together they race to solve the mystery of the legendary Deepstones and their connection to the Woegon, the queen, a missing king and the mysterious pebble Spade finds in the Wyndhail cemetery.

978-0-7352-6943-9 Puffin Books ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 344 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 740

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-8 When a heist goes awry for 12-year-old grave digger Spade, he becomes embroiled in a royal trap that requires him to find the master of a fearsome creature who stalks the castle grounds by night: the Woegon. In atmospheric Wyndhail, Spade and his family put food on their table by selling the jewels they dig up from the dead. Introverted and nocturnal by nature--and invested in his role that often allows him to hide his limp from prying eyes--Spade soon finds himself sucked into the castle mystery. When Miss Ember, the queen's niece, complicates matters by unexpectedly joining his quest, they must learn to cooperate in order to save those they love, and together they discover that the graveyard holds more secrets than they ever imagined. Hahn's poignant messages about courage, loss, and forging new friendships are wrapped in an action-packed shell, bound to excite readers who would love Neil Gaiman's The Graveyard Book (2008) crossed with medieval fantasy. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 12-year-old grave robber is conscripted as the royal spy. Spade is a Joolie, a member of a traveling people known mostly for theft. Unlike many of their relatives, Spade's family makes their living through robbing graves. When Spade's dad sends him after too valuable a prize, Spade ends up being captured by Queen Carmelia herself. There's not much poor Spade can do when the queen orders him to steal a magical stone from the Moor Mage--Carmelia is keeping Spade's brother captive, and Spade is scared of her henchman, Henschcliff. Against his will, Spade is joined on his quest by the queen's niece, Ember, a redheaded spitfire seemingly modeled on every other ginger girlboss fantasy sidekick. Ember might be a pest, but she's also clever and brave--and she's helpful as Spade learns more about what makes him special. Spade, born with a limp that only appears when he needs a moment of poignant drama, works with Ember to save himself, his little brother, and the kingdom from the terrifying Woegon. The serious drama is peppered with some moments of silliness. All characters read as White in this European-style fantasy world. Unfortunately, the portrayal of swindling, thieving, willfully ignorant Joolies treads extremely close to real-world bigotries about itinerant travelers. Derivative but entertaining. (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Spade Archer Rustle doesn't believe in luck. In Wyndhail, a grave robber born with a bad leg can't exactly afford to rely on anything but his wits, after all. So when his father sends Spade and his younger brother, Benji, behind the Wyndhail castle walls to steal from a baron's freshly dug grave, Spade's not entirely surprised the plan doesn't work. In order to free Benji from the dungeon—and armed with little more than his uncle Malachi's fairy tales and the help of a persistent, adventure-hungry princess named Ember—Spade will have to face the most dreaded beast in the kingdom, the Woegon. Fast-paced and full of magic, this debut is sure to be a smash hit with fantasy and adventure lovers. Readers should come prepared with a box of tissues, however, as there are some tearjerker moments. Main characters are cued as white. VERDICT An easy recommendation for fans of Neil Gaiman, Cornelia Funke, or Sayantani DasGupta. Recommended first purchase.—Kaitlin Frick

#2317445 Green Velvet Secret (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Vicki Grant

Yardley and her grandmother, Gidge, are best friends. Sharing a love of vintage clothing and quirky jewelry, Yardley and Gidge spend a lot of time together, which suits Yardley just fine. So when Gidge reveals to Yardley and her parents that she has been diagnosed with terminal cancer, Yardley is devastated. Yardley finds solace at Over Easy, befriending the owner, Con, and, begrudgingly, his nephew, Harris, a boy her age. And when a strange woman walks into the store claiming to win a prize --

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Gidge's green velvet dress -- in a contest she doesn't remember entering, Yardley starts to believe her grandmother may have come back to life.

978-0-7352-7012-1 Tundra Books ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 680

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A beloved grandmother's death drives this moving mystery from Grant (Tell Me When You Feel Something). Twelve-year-old Yardley O'Hanlon is close to her free-spirited grandmother, Gidge, who shares her love of crafting and guerrilla fashion. But Gidge's balloons-and-champagne announcement of her terminal cancer diagnosis; "an exciting new phase of my life"; promises to change that. Using her remaining time to get her karma, and her belongings, in order, Gidge begins writing letters of apology, sorting her vast vintage clothing collection, and trying to persuade Yardley that she could use a friend her own age. When she discovers that a favorite former student owns the Over Easy Vintage Emporium, Gidge urges Yardley to befriend his sullen nephew, Harris. Devastated following Gidge's tenderly portrayed physician-assisted death, Yardley takes up work at Over Easy and embraces Gidge's belief in reincarnation; soon spotting Gidge in a customer who comes in to claim the late woman's green velvet dress. As Yardley seeks the stranger with Gidge's eyes, she discovers that her grandmother; and karma; have surprises in store. Quirky, fully fleshed characters and a tender third-person narration accompany themes of grieving, making amends, and living a full life in this winning novel. Characters read as white. Ages 10: up. Agent: Fiona Kenshole, Transatlantic Literary. (Mar.)

#2285365 Fire on Headless Mountain (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Iain Lawrence

Virgil is making his older siblings trek to a mountain lake on a trip unlike any they've have taken before. They carry precious cargo: the ashes of their beloved mother, who asked that her remains be scattered at her favorite spot. But when a forest fire is sparked by a bolt of lightning at the exact moment when their van breaks down, the journey quickly turns to disaster.

978-0-8234-4654-4 Margaret G Ferguson ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Eleven-year-old Virgil Pepper and his two older siblings are traveling along the "Boneyard" road in the family's old campervan, winding through a mountain range to scatter their mother's ashes at Little Lost Lake. When the van dies and a raging forest fire encroaches, however, the Peppers must survive as the heat steadily rises. The siblings almost immediately become separated, and Virgil draws upon the lessons from his late mother, a no-nonsense woman of science, who impressively instilled in him skills ranging from ad hoc water filtration to how to eat bugs for survival. An omniscient narrator presents the survival challenges the kids face individually, including injuries, mountain lions, and stranger danger, while naturalistic accounts of the fire as a havoc-wreaking beast heighten the tension. Virgil is the focus of this richly imaginative survival adventure, but flashbacks to his mother's and a wacky uncle's teachings hint at dysfunctional family dynamics but are underexplored. The same can be said of the siblings' obvious need to mourn outside of a life-or-death scenario, and the conclusion offers little to believe they'll be afforded such opportunity in the future. Still, the unrelenting drama of their immediate peril makes for a nail-biting read, sure to satisfy fans of Paulsen's Hatchet. WJ COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews ter their mother's ashes in a wilderness lake turns dire. Eleven-year-old Virgil, 15-year-old Kaitlyn, and 19-year-old Joshua Pepper are taking Rusty, their family's old camper van, to Little Lost Lake, miles into the Pacific Northwest wilderness, to scatter their mother's ashes. It is a place filled with special memories for Virgil, as it's where his beloved science teacher mother taught him wilderness skills like using the stars as a compass and building a fire without matches. Thirty-three miles into the trip on the cratered dirt road known as the Boneyard, Rusty breaks down. There is no cellphone signal, and the siblings discover they have forgotten the food and water. The only nearby dwelling is a creepy so-called Sasquatch museum--a run-down trailer, its fence decorated with animal skulls and antlers--that their mother hated. To make things worse, a lightning strike has started a forest fire. Kaitlyn is injured while climbing a tree as a lookout, and the siblings plan a course of action--Joshua will go off for help, and Virgil decides to try to fix Rusty. But their plans go awry, and Virgil becomes lost and separated from the others as the fire rages closer. Clutching the box with his mother's ashes, he must remember everything she has taught him in order to survive. This page-turning and atmospheric adventure story also teaches fascinating science skills. Characters read as White. A superb tale of survival and courage. (Adventure. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When 11-year-old Virgil Pepper and his siblings, 19-year-old Joshua and 15-year-old Kaitlyn, head to spread their mother's ashes at her favorite forest haunt, Little Lost Lake, the engine on their camper van unexpectedly blows. Their artistic father hasn't joined them, and though the kids' science teacher mother taught them excellent survival skills, escalating disasters follow their arrival alongside a wild electrical storm. The siblings lack food and water, the only nearby structure is the eerie "Sasquatch museum," Kaitlyn injures her ankle falling from a tree, and a fast-moving wildfire cuts off the soon-separated siblings' path to safety. Vividly wrought, scientifically grounded text layers facts to develop the protagonists' plight, while occasionally pace-slowng flashbacks hint at their parents' differing worldviews. Lawrence (Deadman's Castle) draws from his experience fighting forest fires; that expertise informs harrowing descriptions of the out-of-control blaze, creating an elucidating and hopeful portrait of grief amid the natural world. Characters cue as white. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Danielle Egan-Miller, Browne & Miller Literary. (Aug.)

#2215969 Deadman's Castle (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Iain Lawrence

Ever since he was five years old and his father witnessed a terrible crime, Igor and his family have been on the run from the Lizard Man, a foreboding figure bent on revenge. They've lived in so many places, with so many identities, that Igor can't even remember his real name.

978-0-8234-4655-1 Margaret G Ferguson ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Ever since Igor can remember, his family has been on the run from a shadowy, terrifying figure known as the Lizard Man. They frequently change their names and move to houses in different communities, but the rules remain the same: for starters, keep the doors locked and the curtains closed, and let no one in. Now that the boy is 12 years old, he's determined to attend school for the first time and make friends. His father fearfully, grudgingly agrees, but he lays down new rules. When Igor breaks them, his worst fears materialize. He endangers himself and his friends as they struggle to escape from a man bent on vengeance. Lawrence, the Canadian writer whose High Seas Trilogy encompassed chilling historical novels, now offers a menacing, contemporary tale of dread, danger, and revenge. Portraying family dynamics and middle-school antics with equal insight and attention to detail, Igor's first-person narrative is absorbing. The well-paced story leads readers to wonder, along with Igor, whether his father is simply paranoid, until events lead to a very different conclusion. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Igor's family has been running from the Lizard Man for so long that Igor has forgotten his original home, how many times they've moved, or even what his real name is. Each move has happened suddenly, with Igor's father spotting some clue that the Lizard Man has caught up to them again, and within minutes, they've grabbed their bags, notified the Protectors, and headed to a new life. Now twelve, Igor wants roots and school and normalcy, and when he manages to find some new friends, they suggest that Igor's dad may actually be fabricating all of this, either intentionally or from mental illness. Igor as narrator is at once both exasperating, as he is painfully oblivious to what he is risking with his tween rebellions, and effective as it's clear just how much he has suffered and lost by being on the run, constantly off center and terrified, with only his parents and little sister. Lawrence weaves in enough hints that the Lizard Man could be either real or imagined to keep later plot turns surprising. Readers seeking a (relatively safe) thriller will likely find this fills the bill, with an added bonus of a memorably complex but relatable narrator. AS Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine This is a creepy adventure tale, a family story, and a story of an outsider finding his way in "the freak show known as middle school." Igor Watson's father once saw a man do a terrible thing. He reported it to the police, and ever since, the man has been after them, vowing revenge. "Watch for a man with a lizard tattooed on his skin," Igor's father told him years ago, and since then they have been on the run across the country, chased by the Lizard Man and under the care of the "Protectors." They've lived in so many places, in so many new homes, and under so many aliases that narrator Igor doesn't even remember his real name. Now he is twelve, and he wonders about his father being the only one ever to have seen this Lizard Man. Is their predator real, or is his father "crazy," as some people say? This tension drives the gripping tale to a pulse-pounding conclusion. An author's note describes the "bird's nest of memories" that led to this story. Dean Schneider(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The Lizard Man is after his family--or so a tween believes. By the time Igor, his unlikely chosen name, has reached his 12th birthday, he wants it all to end. He and his parents and little sister have been on the run from the person he's dubbed the Lizard Man, after his distinctive tattoo. When he was 5, his father reported a crime, after which they hurriedly left town; now they move frequently and keep to themselves while Dad reports to the Protectors. In their current town, Igor finally convinces his father to let him attend school, where he makes friends and plays sports and computer games for the first time. Goth Zoe favors black clothing and makeup. Angelo becomes his constant companion, even inviting him for a sleepover. In the company of his new friends and sometimes on his own, Igor begins to explore their town (against his father's firm directives), feeling a strange sense of familiarity with the streets and buildings. It is in Deadman's Castle, an odd building filled with underground rooms and passages, that Igor, his friends, and the Lizard Man come together in a life-threatening encounter. Friendship difficulties provide a contrast and an anchor to the terrifying threat, and the various plot elements are deftly tied together in a fitting twist that will have readers quickly turning the pages. Main characters are cued as White. Filled with suspense and intrigue. (Mystery. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A family perpetually flees from a man with a lizard tattoo in this intriguing middle grade mystery. Six years prior to this book's start, Igor Watson's father "saw someone do a terrible thing"; ever since, the family has been on the run, changing towns and identities, and reporting to a witness protection agency, the Protectors, each time an ambiguous character known only as the Lizard Man tracks them down. Now 12, Igor; his most recent alias; persuades his parents that he should attend school. Slowly settling in, making friends, and experiencing bullying, Igor realizes just how restrictive his family's rules are: always be home before dark, keep the curtains closed, lie about the family's background. As Igor's cover story starts to slip and he feels an odd sense of familiarity in his "new" town, he must decide just how far to trust his friends, even as he questions his father's stability and the Lizard Man's very existence. Against a suspenseful backdrop, Lawrence (The Skeleton Tree) pits Igor's longing for normalcy against the precautions he takes to keep his family safe, creating a rapidly moving story with an interesting emotional arc. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Jane Jordan Browne, Browne & Miller Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Igor and his family have been running for as long as he can remember, ever since his father witnessed a crime. But now he is 12, and this time he gets to choose his new name while his father chooses his boundaries, where he can go alone, and mostly where he cannot. Breaking those boundaries was how Igor came to discover Rutherford B. Hayes Middle School and his absolute desire to be there. He has never had friends or any idea what a normal life could be until he insists on going to school. His first friends ever Zoe (an edgy goth girl who changes her identity yearly by choice) and Angelo (an Italian American former class bully) push him to start a new adventure without fear of the past and fear of the Lizard Man, who threatened his family all those years ago. Just as Igor begins to ask questions, the Lizard Man reappears. Featuring effective worldbuilding, this is a great, suspenseful tale of terror for upper middle graders. The hurried ending is the novel's only flaw. VERDICT A solid addition to middle school collections.—Sarah Voels, Cedar Rapids P.L., IA

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2299415 Different: A Story of the Spanish Civil War (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Monica Montanes Between 1936 and 1939, a civil war raged across Spain. For almost three years, ordinary citizens lived in fear of bombs dropping from the sky. When fascist dictator Francisco Franco declared victory, he began to persecute everyone who had once opposed him. Spain became a country of secrets, where anyone who was different was in danger. 978-0-8028-5598-5 Eerdmans Books ©2022 6-1/4 x 8 88 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 890	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist In alternating chapters inspired by reminiscences of the author's father and aunt, two children describe their experiences living in a climate of suspicion after their "Rojo" (Republican) father is forced to flee the Franco regime in the wake of the Spanish Civil War. Nine-year-old Paco, always hungry, dreams of stealing a classmate's lunch and lies when questioned by a new teacher of the ruling Falangist Party about his father's occupation. Meanwhile, his little sister, Socorro, angrily defies the repressive nuns at her school while recalling other women in her life, like her bookish grandmother, and also learning about liberator Simón Bolívar. Eight years later, the children and their mother leave for Venezuela—Socorro describing the long journey, Paco the relief that being different "stopped being something dangerous for us." The publisher has appended context-filling accounts of the war's course and what became of its refugees to go with an excellent resource list. Atmospheric vignettes and wordless full-spread scenes in colored pencil capture both vivid personalities and details of the historical settings.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2271613 Coming of Age: 13 Bnai Mitzvah Stories (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Albert Whitman What does it mean to become an adult in your faith? Join thirteen diverse characters as they experience anxiety, doubt, and self-discovery while preparing for their b'nai mitzvah. 978-0-8075-3667-4 Albert Whitman ©2022 5-1/2 x 8 240 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic GR Lvl O Lexile 670	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Twelve short stories and a poem, connected by shared faith and stage of life, explore the Jewish rite of passage of b'nai (bar and bat) mitzvah in an expansive and accessible collection for middle-grade readers of any faith. With contributions from notables including Jane Yolen ("Ceremony") and Laura Shovan ("A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Bimah"), this easygoing collection spans millennia and locales. Stops along the way include Noah's Ark, the Upper West Side in 1922, hotel reception rooms, synagogues, Greece, and even the pun-filled Planet Latke. Mitzvot are made and valuable lessons learned, particularly among protagonists who appreciate the sentiment behind their simpler celebrations. "The yacht, the band, the dancing—they were all false idols" to the girl envying her cousin's lavish party from her own pandemic-era -parking-lot affair. The feel-good collection weaves threads among disparate adolescent episodes in a way that successfully honors the individuality of the coming-of-age experience without losing sight of this unifying factor: Judaism. Mazel tov! COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews B'nai mitzvah are a monumental part of many Jewish adolescents' lives. At age 12 or 13, Jewish children are called to the bimah to read from the Torah and become responsible adults in their Jewish communities. In the United States, this momentous occasion is generally celebrated with a large party. This collection of 13 short stories, plus one poem by Jane Yolen, is all about becoming b'nai mitzvah and coming-of-age. Some of the tales are poignant, more than a few are silly, but the majority unfortunately fall flat, being too short and lacking the necessary space to accomplish effective worldbuilding in sufficient depth, something particularly noticeable for the stories with fantastical plots. The introduction states that some of the stories are based on fact; the collection would have carried more weight if each of the narratives were accompanied by an author's note speaking to its origin and inspiration. Rosen's heartfelt introduction invites readers in, promising representation for Jewish readers, who form less than 3% of the United States' population, and hoping to build bridges with non-Jewish readers. This book could appeal to those readers currently working toward their own b'nai mitzvah, but the lukewarm stories are not likely to attract a wider audience. Main characters are Jewish and presumed White; there is racial diversity in the supporting cast. Short stories of varying quality centered around coming-of-age in the Jewish American community. (glossary) (Anthology. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2179981 Exceptional Maggie Chowder (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Renee Beauregard Lute

Twelve-year-old aspiring forest ranger Maggie Chowder wants to be just like her favorite comic superhero, the Exceptional Eagirl. So when her dad loses his job and her family moves from a house to a small apartment, Maggie is determined to make the most of her new circumstances. But it's not always easy to be strong like Eagirl when her best friend LaTanya gets to move into a big house and get a puppy because her dad has been recruited to coach for the Seattle Seahawks. It's especially not easy when nitpicky, comic-book-hating Grandma Barrel comes to stay. Maggie Chowder may not always do what Eagirl would do, but with the help of an unforgettable trip to Comic Con, she realizes that home is about more than a house, and families and friendships don't have to change just because life does.

978-0-8075-3678-0 Albert Whitman ©2020 5-1/2 x 8 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Maggie is a big fan of Eagirl, the environmental-activist superhero from her favorite comic book. Aspiring to follow in the superhero's footsteps, Maggie becomes a junior ranger to look after the forest and its creatures. If only keeping her own life running smoothly were as easy. Change has been the name of the game lately, with Maggie's family moving from a spacious house to a two-bedroom apartment, her father quitting his stable job to pursue acting, her stay-at-home mom resuming work, and her little brother beginning therapy for his autism. What's more, her best friend just moved into the rich part of town! Just when Maggie feels like her life cannot get any worse, her difficult-to-please grandmother decides to visit for the rest of Maggie's summer vacation. What would Eagirl do in her shoes? Maggie makes some big mistakes during her summer of change, but she also begins to accept and embrace the new. The book includes great black-and-white comic book-style illustrations and snippets of the Eagirl comic. Laugh-out-loud hijinks combine with preteen growing pains for a heart-warming story of self-discovery. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Twelve-year-old Maggie Chowder had been looking forward to a promising summer in Renton, Washington. However, things get progressively worse after her father loses his job and takes an unpaid role in a web series to pursue his dream of acting. Several changes that Maggie is not ready for quickly follow: Her mother starts a stressful new job at a grocery store; the family moves from Maggie's beloved home to a small two-bedroom apartment, where she has to share a room with her 4-year-old brother, Aaron, who has autism; and to make matters worse, Maggie's comic-book-hating Grandma Barrel comes to visit and her parents cannot afford to send her to Junior Forest Ranger Camp although she desperately wants to become a ranger and protect the wilderness like her favorite comic-book character, Eagirl. Maggie finds that she is increasingly embarrassed about her family's situation, especially since her best friend, LaTanya Richards, moves into a fancy new house and gets a puppy after her father gets a job coaching the Seahawks football team. But with time Maggie learns the value of family and friends. Lute's well-rounded characters capture the difficulties of change, and Valentine's black-and-white comic strips featuring Eagirl mirror Maggie's feelings about her life. Maggie and her family seem to be White by default; LaTanya's ethnicity is not specified. Empathetic, realistic, and very enjoyable. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In Renton, Wash., summer brings unexpected challenges to 12-year-old Maggie: her father loses his job and gets work acting on a low-budget web series, her mother takes a grocery store job, and the family sells their home to move to a "cozy" apartment near the grocer's, where Maggie shares a room with her four-year-old brother Aaron, who is autistic. The arrival of her opinionated, comics-hating grandmother only makes things worse, as does Maggie's best friend, LaTanya Richards, moving into a larger home courtesy of her father's new job coaching the Seattle Seahawks. Despite the upheaval, Maggie is determined to follow the example of her comic book idol, fearless superhero Eagirl, and to become a forest ranger, just like Eagirl. When opportunity arises to attend Seattle Comic Con and compete for a chance to attend Forest Ranger Camp, Maggie begins to see that maybe things aren't all bad. Lute's narrative sensitively portrays Aaron's autism, Maggie's mixed feelings about her new home, and her frustration with changes beyond her control, while interspersed Eagirl comics by Valentine bring readers a glimpse of the feminist ranger hero whom Maggie hopes to become. Ages 9: 12. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up—This is the story of Maggie Chowder, who longs to be just like her favorite superhero, the Exceptional Eagirl. When her best friend leaves for a month in the summer, Maggie assumes nothing new will happen to either of them and cannot wait for her friend to return. Little does she know that both of their worlds are about to shift. This novel is all about change. Readers will empathize with the upheaval of Maggie's life when her father loses his job and they have to move from their large home to an apartment. While this novel speaks to change, it also spotlights the power of platonic and familial relationships. Maggie must find a way to support her dad in his new job, her brother in his new learning environment, and her best friend in her new life as a professional football coach's daughter. She must also learn how to bring joy to her life amidst everything going on around her. The addition of the Eagirl comics at the start of each chapter is sure to attract readers of graphic novels, as well as introduce them to new readers. VERDICT A heartwarming, funny story about family and friends; a worthy addition to middle-grade collections.—Tegan Anclade, Lake Villa Dist. Lib., IL

#2318917 Alchemy of Letting Go (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Amber Morrell

Twelve-year-old Juniper Edwards can't stop chasing the endangered butterfly her sister died trying to catch. In her grief, Juniper finds comfort in her family's study of insects, because science is based on logic, order, and control. But then Juniper's search for the butterfly nearly kills her, too, and when she wakes up with newfound abilities, she discovers that the line between science and magic--and life and death--is not as solid as she thought.

978-0-8075-4937-7 Albert Whitman ©2023 5-1/2 x 8 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 660

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A tween girl is obsessed with bringing her sister back from the dead. Attempting to meld science, magic, and poetry into an uplifting mélange, this story instead labors through a flat-footed plot where little is earned and much is simply declared and whose characters are as two-dimensional as the dead bugs the protagonist collects. Seventh grader Juniper thinks the most important thing in life is science, and her one goal is to catch a Palos Verdes blue butterfly--an endangered species--to add to the collection she and her older sister, Ingrid, began before Ingrid tragically drowned two years earlier. On a class field trip, Juniper leaves the group to chase the butterfly and falls in the water. After being rescued, she finds a rock that glows green in her pocket. (Why? This isn't explained. But apparently this rock can make plants grow.) Next, Juniper meets a talking lemur who lives in the run-down house next to hers. She also meets scientist and magician Artemis, who lives there too, and together they hatch a plan to bring Ingrid back from the dead. Juniper's classmate Mateo, the new kid in town, loves poetry and also conveniently turns out to be a magician. Juniper's first-person, present-tense narration is a series of staccato declarative sentences delivering unearned insights that fail to draw readers into the story. Juniper and her family seem to default to White; Mateo is cued Latine. Interesting premise, labored execution. (Fantasy. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Seventh grader Juniper Edwards and her big sister Ingrid used to love studying insects together, but two years after Ingrid's death by drowning, Juniper has become obsessed with entomology. Moreover, she is determined to capture the butterfly that Ingrid most wanted for their collection; the rare Palos Verdes Blue, which lives in the coastal watershed near their Southern California home. After Juniper almost drowns during her pursuit, her rigorous scientific understanding of the world is shaken as she manifests powers that can bring dead flora and insects back to life. The discovery of magician neighbors; and the idea that she can approach her newfound affinity scientifically; lead to her taking on the practice with zeal, a singular goal in mind: reviving Ingrid. Juniper's magic often feels convenient; she becomes magically adept with frustrating ease; but the ramifications of her choices deliver profound emotional moments throughout. Twining matters magical and scientific in straightforward prose, Morrell's contemplative debut handles the complexity of grief with a deft touch while addressing serious ethical questions around life, death, and the responsibilities of power. Juniper and her family cue as white. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Travis Pennington, Knight Agency. (Mar.)

#2153014 Big Red (75th Anniversary Edition) (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jim Kjelgaard

From the moment Danny sees the beautiful Irish setter, he knows Red is the dog for him. Together Danny and Red face many dangers in the harsh Wintapi wilderness that they call home.

978-0-8234-4265-2 Holiday House ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 9.0 RC Lvl 5.4 GR Lvl T

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

#2250151 Dreamweavers (Hardcover (Trade))

written by G. Z. Schmidt

Twin siblings journey through the City of Ashes and visit the Jade Rabbit to save their grandpa in this Chinese folklore-inspired fantasy adventure.

978-0-8234-4423-6 Holiday House ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-7 It is time for the mid-autumn festival, a favorite time of year for 12-year-old twins Mei and Yun, because it is when their grandfather makes his famous mooncakes. This year they will have a special visitor, and their grandfather spends days preparing for their arrival. But when the day finally arrives, disaster ensues: their grandfather is arrested and set to suffer a dreadful fate while their small village is hit by a mysterious and catastrophic storm, destroying their crops and livestock. Now it is up to Mei and Yun to save their grandfather. Through their quest they will learn about old curses, encounter the legendary Jade Rabbit, and uncover the secrets of their family lineage. Schmidt has nicely woven Chinese mythology and history into a fantastic adventure. Readers will find themselves entranced by Schmidt's writing, which will draw them in much in the same way that a storyteller captivates listeners when retelling a folktale. The Dreamweavers is a story about love, family, and the perseverance of twin siblings when faced with the impossible. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books year-old twins Mei and Yun live with their grandfather in a small Chinese village. When the prince hears word of Grandpa's delicious mooncakes, he visits for the Mid-Autumn festival; alarmingly, the mooncakes' secret ingredient has everyone choking, and Mei and Yun's guardian is taken away to the imperial city to be tried. When the village is struck by a unseasonable snowstorm that kills its livestock and leaves its residents isolated, Mei and Yun set out to the City of Ashes, a place cursed by a woman named Lotus, whose lover was framed for treason by the Noble General. There they make a deal with the woman to clear her lover's name and reputation in exchange for the lifting of the curse, and the Jade Rabbit tells them they're dreamweavers (the secret ingredient in the mooncakes is accidentally a nightmare) and transports them to the palace, where they pretend to be servants and plan to clear the name of their grandfather. Schmidt creates a beautifully folkloric atmosphere imbued with elements of Chinese culture and myth. Mei, with her gut instinct and fighting skills, and Yun, with his nearsightedness and quick intelligence, make for a compelling lead duo, with plenty of opportunity for comedy and plot-propelling revelations. An author's note explains cultural references and folkloric icons, such as the Jade Rabbit and Monkey King. NB COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine A ghostly City of Ashes, a disappearing moon, and a sudden snowstorm are just some of the supernatural occurrences that kick off this mythology-inspired adventure novel set in China during the Ming Dynasty. Our protagonists are Mei and Yun Wu, twelve-year-old orphaned twins scrambling to rescue their grandpa after a disastrous encounter with the emperor's son during the Mid-Autumn Festival. The Wu twins' tale overlaps with the story of Lotus, a beautiful, haunted poet who cursed the region seventy years earlier when her family was torn apart by a scorned admirer. Along with a bratty noble boy and an inventive princess, the Jade Rabbit (a celestial being with magical powers) helps the peasant siblings on their quest in the Imperial City. Schmidt's story contains many familiar folktale plot points and tropes -- magical travel, cases of mistaken identity, riddles. Passages about the book's titular "dream weaving" are whimsically described. The prose does contain a few anachronisms (some dialogue sounds more like modern-day speech, and today's Western units of time and speed are used), but they won't be distracting to most readers. An entertaining tale for those who enjoyed Lin's Where the Mountain Meets the Moon (rev. 9/09) and Alice's Adventures in Wonderland but might not be quite ready for the scary parts of the Harry Potter and Narnia books. Michelle Lee(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Fraternal twins embark on a magical adventure to rescue their grandfather and break a decadeslong curse. After their parents' mysterious disappearance in the City of Ashes, 12-year-olds Mei and Yun have been outcasts in their village. Their orphan status and reputation for seeing vaporous auras have left them with few friends. The sister and brother have been raised by their grandfather, who is known for his delicious cooking. Word of his talent has reached the Imperial City, and the Emperor's son will be visiting to taste their grandfather's famous mooncakes. But a sour mood has overtaken the village, and the mooncakes taste disgusting and rotten. The twins' grandfather is taken away to the palace to await trial for supposedly using harmful magic on the prince. Determined to rescue him, Mei and Yun undertake a dangerous journey that reveals hidden truths about their family's roots and the cursed City of Ashes. Set in ancient China during the Ming dynasty, this fantasy incorporates elements of Chinese folklore, with the Jade Rabbit acting as a spiritual guide for the twins, references to the Monkey King, and the presence of a mirrorlike dream world. The twins' sibling bond never wavers throughout the challenges they face; like yin and yang, their individual personalities and strengths balance each other and highlight the story's theme of achieving peace by acknowledging both the light and the dark and creating your own destiny. An enchanting tale. (author's note, cultural notes) (Historical fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In the 1500s, 12-year-old fraternal twins Mei and Yun Wu, who have lived with their grandfather since their parents disappeared six years ago, eagerly anticipate the Mid-Autumn Festival, especially since the son of China's emperor will visit the village to sample Grandpa Wu's famed secret-ingredient mooncakes. But when strange weather sours the mood; and Grandpa's mooncakes; the prince is insulted, and Grandpa is taken away by royal officials. Opposite but balanced, the twins combine their strengths to devise a rescue plan, hoping to learn the truth behind their scholar parents' mysterious disappearance along the way. Their trek leads them to the cursed City of Ashes, where an encounter with the mythical Jade Rabbit reveals a tantalizing inherited gift. Armed with this knowledge, and striking a deal with a vengeful riddle-speaking poet, the twins sneak into the Imperial Palace for answers. In homage to her Chinese roots, Schmidt adroitly interweaves fantastical mythology with the historical context of the Ming Dynasty. Though some plot points skew predictable, the twins' unbreakable bond, paired with rich folkloric details, make for a heartening read. Back matter features an author's note detailing story influences. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Adria Goetz, Martin Literary Management. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Twelve-year-old twins Mei and Yun live in the mountains near the Pearl River with their grandpa and cat, Smelly Tail. The villagers find the twins strange and gossip about their parents' mysterious disappearance on a venture to the City of Ashes. Grandpa makes irresistible mooncakes for Mei, Yun, and the villagers using his secret recipe. When the buzz on Grandpa's renowned mooncakes travels to the emperor himself, he sends his son on a special trip to sample the dessert. It is the auspicious Autumn Festival and Grandpa is elated for the prince to try his homemade mooncakes. Instead, a nightmare transpires as the mooncakes taste horrid, the prince is displeased, and the villagers haggle to no end. Grandpa's arrest is the final straw as the village falls into chaos and the weather goes bonkers. It is up to Mei and Yun to grasp the reins and save their grandpa, village, and parents. United, they bravely journey to the obscure City of Ashes where they meet the Jade Rabbit, fly on a magic cloud, and attempt to undo the 70-year-old curse plaguing their village. Set in the mountains of southern China, Schmidt beautifully weaves a tale rooted in Chinese folklore. The book resonates with excitement and fantasy as Mei and Yun experience magic firsthand while using their wits and brainpower. The character development is evident and convincing. Peeling away at the many layers of the narrative sits revenge and love at the center. The captivating resolution is an emotional rollercoaster, but well worth the escapade. The story is balanced with imagination, love, sadness, new friends, old foes, and enchantment. When two ordinary siblings are guided by compassion and big dreams, the sky's the limit as they collaborate to achieve the unthinkable. VERDICT Rick Riordan fans will find this story to be entertaining and engaging as the magical adventure unfolds.--Suraya Jairam, Queens P. L., Hollis, NY Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness The Dreamweavers by G.Z. Schmidt (No Ordinary Thing) is set during China's Ming Dynasty and seamlessly incorporates folklore and magic into a vivid middle-grade adventure about sibling bonds and destiny. Twelve-year-old twins Mei and Yun don't have many friends in their small village in the mountains of southern China. They were raised by their Grandpa Wu after their parents disappeared six years ago in the dreadful, haunted City of Ashes. Grandpa Wu taught them that "not even the most powerful person in the world can diminish your true value." This lesson is important, as the twins often see things others don't: "soft mists hovering over the river of fish" or sunny wisps of smoke hanging over their cat's ears. When Grandpa Wu is arrested by the emperor's son for allegedly serving him tainted mooncakes at the Mid-Autumn Festival, the twins embark on a rescue mission that reveals an ancient curse and unlocks long-lost family secrets. Chinese mythology and philosophy play a prominent role in The Dreamweavers, with Schmidt sewing the Jade Rabbit (a popular character in Chinese culture), the dream world, and yin and yang into her spellbinding story. One successful way Schmidt does this is with the twins' personalities. While Mae is "as restless as an ant on a frying pan," her brother, Yun, is "careful, cautious" and moves at an "ant's pace." The twins' opposite traits complement each other and strengthen their connection, helping them on their quest. An entrancing story about the power of dreams, helping others and controlling our own destinies. COPYRIGHT(2021) Shelf Awareness, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2209053 Daughter of the White Rose (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Diane Zahler

Nell Gould is the daughter of the royal butcher, a commoner, but she has been raised as the playmate of King Edward and Queen Elizabeth's royal children: Princess Cecily, Princess Bess, Prince Dickon, and Prince Ned, heir apparent and Nell's best and closest friend. They think alike, her and Ned, preferring books and jousts to finery and gossip and the sparkle of the court.

978-0-8234-4607-0 Holiday House ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—Twelve-year-old Nell Gould narrates this engrossing medieval tale that reimagines the fate of royal princes Edward "Ned" and Richard "Dickon," imprisoned in the Tower of London in 1483 by their ruthless uncle Richard III. Nell's father is a butcher for the royal family, and Nell grows up happily playing with the royal children. Nell's mother dies after giving birth to Nell's brother Toby, born the same day as the Queen's son Richard. Nell's life changes when nine-year-old Ned goes away to learn his kingly duties and Nell realizes the princesses have outgrown her. Since she's a commoner and can never marry Ned, Nell wants to become educated. Her father hires a printer to teach her to read and write English, and young Jacob, a printer's inker, offers to teach her Latin. Edward IV dies and Ned becomes king at age 12. When ambitious Richard imprisons Ned and Dickon in the Tower, Nell must figure out how to save them. The story starts a little slowly but picks up steam and intensity toward the end. Nell is a fiercely determined girl who faces loss and disappointment but is stronger for it. She's empowered to learn to read and write and even imagines she might become a writer one day. An author's note provides additional information about the real royal princes. All characters present as white. VERDICT Readers who love historical fiction featuring strong female characters and suspenseful court intrigue will enjoy this story that's perfect for fans of Karen Cushman, Tamora Pierce, and Diane Magras.—Sharon Rawlins, New Jersey State Lib., Trenton

#2300646 Looking for True (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Tricia Springstubb

11-year-olds Gladys and Jude live in the same small, rust belt town, and go to the same school, but they are definitely not friends. But they both agree that a new dog in the neighborhood is being mistreated by its owner. They hide True Blue in an abandoned house on the edge of town, but as their ties to the dog--and to one another--deepen, so does the impossibility of keeping such a big secret. Yet giving True up will break all three of their hearts.

978-0-8234-5099-2 Margaret G Ferguson ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide This is a neatly constructed story of two parallel characters. Gladys is a small, bright, intense eleven-year-old with a sensitive nature and quirky clothing sense. Her mom runs an in-home daycare. Jude, also eleven, is big for his age, the son of a single mother and the frequent caregiver for his little brother. Their stories are told in alternating chapters (in different typefaces) and come together when each encounters True, a neglected dog in the neighborhood. True's rescue forms the core of the action. Springstubb (The Most Perfect Thing in the Universe, rev. 9/21) does a masterly job of creating two distinct voices and sustaining our interest in the two main characters equally. A supporting cast of flawed adults and hilarious preschoolers rounds out the picture. The setting -- a town formerly prosperous but now on the skids, where folks are just scraping by, with subtle reference to the opioid crisis and the collapse of the manufacturing economy -- is one that is underrepresented in contemporary middle-grade fiction, and it mitigates against the potential sopppiness of a dog-rescue story. The writing is fresh, sharp, and authentic: "This could be trouble, said his brain. Open the door, said whatever the opposite of a brain was." It's Because of Winn-Dixie (rev. 7/00) for a new generation. (Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine This is a neatly constructed story of two parallel characters. Gladys is a small, bright, intense eleven-year-old with a sensitive nature and quirky clothing sense. Her mom runs an in-home daycare. Jude, also eleven, is big for his age, the son of a single mother and the frequent caregiver for his little brother. Their stories are told in alternating chapters (in different typefaces) and come together when each encounters True, a neglected dog in the neighborhood. True's rescue forms the core of the action. Springstubb (The Most Perfect Thing in the Universe, rev. 9/21) does a masterly job of creating two distinct voices and sustaining our interest in the two main characters equally. A supporting cast of flawed adults and hilarious preschoolers rounds out the picture. The setting -- a town formerly prosperous but now on the skids, where folks are just scraping by, with subtle reference to the opioid crisis and the collapse of the manufacturing economy -- is one that is underrepresented in contemporary middle-grade fiction, and it mitigates against the potential sopppiness of a dog-rescue story. The writing is fresh, sharp, and authentic: "This could be trouble, said his brain. Open the door, said whatever the opposite of a brain was." It's Because of Winn-Dixie (rev. 7/00) for a new generation. Sarah Ellis November/December 2022 p.96(c) Copyright 2022. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Two kids in a small town join forces to rescue an unloved dog. Big-for-11 Jude lives with his mother and younger half brother; their mom works at a nursing home. Small-for-11 Gladys, who is adopted, helps her mom run an in-home day care; her dad was laid off from the auto plant. When Jude, Gladys, and a strange woman with a blue-eyed dog collide, both kids feel an immediate, wordless connection--to the dog, if not each other. When True Blue, as Gladys dubs her, disappears, Gladys and Jude find her and hide her in Jude and best friend Jabari's secret fortress on the wrong side of town, but it's not a long-term solution. Gladys' dad is allergic, and Jude's mom is afraid of dogs--how can they save True Blue from the owner who treats her poorly? Chapters from alternating close third-person perspectives show what Gladys and Jude think of themselves and each other, their deepest worries and fears, how their parents' beliefs have shaped their own, and how they are shaping each other. The protagonists are a study in contrasts, and the supporting characters bring different worldviews and advice. Jude reads White. Jabari's name and frequent, negative, othering mentions of the size, texture, and hair-product smell of Gladys' hair may indicate that they are Black. The repeated use of lame as an insult and insensitive language used to describe people with substance abuse issues detract from the otherwise moving writing. A bighearted novel that suffers from issues with representation. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Springstubb (The Most Perfect Thing in the Universe) crafts a heartfelt contemporary novel about unexpected friendship that kicks off with a Because of Winn-Dixie: tinged bond. When talkative, small-for-her age Gladys encounters quiet Jude, who's tall for his, the 11-year-olds feel an instant connection with a seemingly mistreated mutt in their small-town neighborhood. Neither can take the hound home: Jude's widowed mother fears dogs following a bite, and Gladys's father is severely allergic. Desperate to save the dog that Gladys calls True Blue, the tweens hide her in an abandoned house after they discover she's escaped from her owner's yard. The stakes grow more complicated when Jude's mother loses her job at a nursing home, resulting in tight finances for the family, and True Blue's owner offers a $500 reward for the dog's return. As each child navigates familial relationships; Gladys, who is adopted, around belonging and love, and Jude around a desire to make his mother proud; Springstubb gracefully conveys their need for both connection and independence, portraying sweet, protective relationships that each has with young children. Alternating third-person perspectives render unique characterizations. Jude cues as white; Gladys, depicted on the book's cover with brown skin, is described as having "recalcitrant" hair that "sprang out like the rays of the sun." Ages 8: 12. Agent: Kristin Ostby, Greenhouse Literary. (Nov.)

#2332411 Nothing Else but Miracles (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kate Albus

12-year-old Dory Byrne lives with her brothers on New York City's Lower East Side, waiting impatiently through the darkest hours of World War II for her pop to come home from fighting Hitler. Legally speaking, Dory's brother, Fish, isn't old enough to be in charge of Dory and her younger brother, Pike, but the neighborhood knows the score and, like Pop always says, "the neighborhood will give you what you need."

978-0-8234-5163-0 Margaret G Ferguson ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 After Pop is drafted and sent to Europe, reassuring his kids that their Lower East Side neighborhood will provide what they need, WWII becomes challenging for 12-year-old Dory. Her 17-year-old brother takes charge of the household, looking after Dory and her younger brother in their familiar apartment, and their neighbors are kind. The owner of a nearby restaurant gives them dinner weekly, and the baker frequently provides treats. When feeling really low, Dory asks the Statue of Liberty for help. When their supportive landlord dies, and the new one threatens to report them to the child welfare authorities, Dory dares to explore and finds an unusual living space where, she hopes, no one will find them. The author of A Place to Hang the Moon (2021), Albus creates a vividly realized setting during a period when families dreaded the loss of relatives fighting in war-torn countries. Even more memorable is the portrayal of Dory, who is worried about Pop and increasingly afraid but determined to save her family. An engaging historical novel with a rewarding conclusion. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Twelve-year-old Dory Byrne regularly gazes at the Statue of Liberty from the southern tip of Manhattan and confides in the statue, whom she calls "Libby," to process her feelings about her father's naval deployment during WWII. Her mother died of tuberculosis years prior, so Dory and her brothers are essentially parentless, with seventeen-year-old Fish overseeing the family and Dory helping to care for their precocious eight-year-old brother, Pike. They've been helped by families and businesses in their Lower East Side area, but when a mean new landlord takes over their building, the Byrnes become nervous that he will report their status as unattended minors to the city. Fortunately, Dory knows about the vacant building stories above a local restaurant, only accessible by a rope pulley-operated elevator, that could be the perfect place for the siblings to hide (and could contain life-changing treasure). Albus paints a picture of New York City life during the late stages of the WWII with engaging prose and a rich sense of setting, which the dedication indicates was informed by stories from the author's father's childhood. Direct-address parentheticals about a diamond hidden in an abandoned building break the flow of the third-person narrative, but clever Dory and her endearing family are easy to spend time with. Readers will surely become vested in this story of family and community and ache for Pop's safe return from war. An author's note is appended. KF COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews It's 1944, and Dory, 12, and her brothers, Fish, 17, and Pike, 7, are living alone; their father has joined the Navy, and their mother is dead from tuberculosis. The Byrnes live on New York City's Lower East Side. Their neighbors assist with food, but when a new landlord finds out their dad is away, he makes trouble for the siblings. Dory, an independent risk taker, learns of a long-disused dumbwaiter inside Mr. Caputo's restaurant in the Fulton Fish Market, where he regularly treats the kids to seafood stew. She uses the dumbwaiter to explore the otherwise inaccessible floors of an old hotel and brings her brothers there to live so they can avoid being sent to an orphanage. The story is both grounded in reality and embellished with entertaining exploits, keeping readers excited about Dory's experiences as she holds her family together and they await their papa. Occasionally, the text shifts from third to second person and shares with readers knowledge that is hidden from Dory, such as a mystery about a hidden diamond. The novel develops the setting through the kids' visits to places like the Empire State Building and Coney Island. Dory is an endearing character who confides her thoughts to Libby, her nickname for the Statue of Liberty. In the author's note, the secrets behind the real hotel that inspired this story are revealed. Characters read white. An absorbing tale about urban life on the World War II homefront. (Historical fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Three close-knit siblings rely on each other and their supportive Lower East Side community after their widowed father is called up during WWII in this suspenseful family novel from Albus (A Place to Hang the Moon). Free-thinking 12-year-old Dory Byrne lives in a fourth-floor walk-up (which she prefers to access through the fire escape) with her brothers; responsible 17-year-old Fish and wise eight-year-old Pike. From a perch on the wall of Battery Park's half-demolished Castle Clinton, Dory shares her many worries with a secret confidante: the Statue of Liberty ("Libby" to Dory). The siblings are managing thanks to the neighborhood's generosity, but when the Byrnes' understanding landlord dies and his mean-spirited replacement threatens to report the underage trio to city authorities, their situation grows precarious; until Dory's canny observations land them a perfect hideaway. Rich in New York City period detail and era-specific colloquialisms, the briskly moving telling succeeds in its well-executed combination of classic plot elements, sympathetic characters and community, and anxiety-provoking uncertainties, while parenthetical asides to readers create a deepening sense of engagement and intimacy with the Byrne family. Characters read as white. Ages 9: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--Dori talks to the Statue of Liberty. The 12-year-old pleads with "Libby" to bring Pop home safely from the battles of World War II, as the statue was the last to see his ship leave and would be the first to see him return. After Pop was drafted five months ago, Dori's life without him (mom died from tuberculosis) has been a struggle for her and brothers Fish, 17, and Pike, 7. The siblings survive through their fierce devotion to one another and the generosity of their neighbors. The new building landlord, however, suspects Pop's absence and wants to turn the children over to a city orphanage. Dori's adventurous spirit leads her to discover a new home to keep the siblings together: rooms in an abandoned hotel, accessible only through an old hand-pulled elevator hidden in a nearby restaurant. Albus (A Place to Hang the Moon) vividly recreates the landscape of New York City's Lower East Side and the varying cultures of the families whose kindness make Dori's neighborhood a haven. Period jargon ("He's a drip!") adds authenticity. Dori prides herself on "not being especially sensible" while her spunk encourages readers to join in her escapades as coconspirators. Fully realized supporting characters leave a lasting impression. The third-person narration engages readers with witty asides and plot hints. Albus sidesteps embellishing an already upbeat ending, instead dangling two tantalizing threads for a sequel. Back matter includes fascinating facts about WWII-era New York City. VERDICT Historical fiction at its finest: a first purchase.--Marybeth Kozikowski Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2308986 Carrefour Curse (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Dianne K. Salerni

Twelve-year-old Garnet regrets that she doesn't know her family. Her mother has done her best to keep it that way, living far from the rest of the magical Carrefour clan and their dark, dangerous mansion known as Crossroad House. But when Garnet finally gets summoned to the estate, it isn't quite what she hoped for. Her relatives are strange and quarrelsome, each room in Crossroad House is more dilapidated than the last, and she can't keep straight which dusty hallways and cobwebbed corners are forbidden.

Was she brought to Crossroad House as part of the curse... or is she meant to break it?
978-0-8234-5267-5 Holiday House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve-year-old Garnet Carrefour doesn't know much about her family and their ancestral home, the Crossroad House, but she does know they are tied to her power to harness the magic of stones. Her mother fled the house before Garnet was born, refusing to return—that is, until the (allegedly) dying patriarch summons them back in a way they can't refuse. Now Garnet gets to meet the family she's always dreamed of, but the blood ties to the house, the patriarch, and a family curse make this reunion a gloomy and potentially deadly occasion. Each chapter starts with a description of a precious stone, its properties, and how to care for it, a great way to educate about stones in a way that ties into the story and Garnet's powers. A fun page-turner that touches on the deeper themes of family, identity, and what it means to pay for the sins of the past. Readers not yet ready for Kate Alice Marshall will appreciate the emphasis on spooky mysteries and family secrets tinged with magic.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Twelve-year-old Garnet Carrefour is eager to learn more about the magical extended family her mother has hidden away from her, but when she finally visits the Carrefour House, she is greeted "with its peeling wallpaper and falling-down porch, the burned-out wing clinging to its side like a parasite." While unexplained events and accidents leave vulnerable relatives trapped on the cursed premises, Garnet starts having visions of other times, including one of a vanished girl connected to the curse. With newfound support from her cousins and family members from the past, Garnet desperately searches for evidence to reveal the truth about a decades-old mystery. The peculiar and cantankerous personalities of the Carreffours are reminiscent of the Addams Family, with the addition of magic in their spellbinding of natural elements. Suspenseful dialogue and pauses allow characters and readers to speculate on clues dating back from the 1700's, and cliffhangers build tension to creepily escalate the plot and conflicts. Fans of The Haunting of Hill House or Schwab's Gallant (BCCB 03/22) will surely stay up late at night reading this heart-pounding novel. Includes a map of the mansion, Carrefour family tree illustrations, and gemstone descriptions and properties. DR COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide This spooky, dark, and utterly delicious tale begins with a bang: protagonist Garnet is vomiting up frogs, a pestilence that will ease only when she returns to Crossroad House, the house her mother grew up in and fled, vowing never to return. The occasion is a fraught one. Family patriarch Jasper Carrefour is dying, and the last time he was seriously ill, two decades ago in 1998, a wing of the house burned down, four family members were killed, two were gravely injured, and another girl went missing. The suspicion is that Jasper recovered by stealing each one's life force. At Crossroad House, Garnet learns the reason for her mother's self-imposed exile: a cousin foresaw Garnet's disappearance while visiting ruins on the grounds of Crossroad House. Unable to leave this magically enforced family reunion until Jasper "transitions," Garnet promises to avoid the ruins, but with the house itself playing tricks, her promise might be difficult to keep. Building on a family where element-based magic is commonplace (Garnet and her mother work with stones; others wield weather, plants, or even fire), Salerni sustains an atmosphere of menace through a death, several near-fatal accidents, and revelations of other ancestors' fates that Garnet learns about through a newfound talent for time-walking that connects her to her great-great-grandmother and the missing girl from 1998. Interconnected mysteries keep readers turning pages, and when they all converge, the payoff is spine-chilling and satisfying. (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine This spooky, dark, and utterly delicious tale begins with a bang: protagonist Garnet is vomiting up frogs, a pestilence that will ease only when she returns to Crossroad House, the house her mother grew up in and fled, vowing never to return. The occasion is a fraught one. Family patriarch Jasper Carrefour is dying, and the last time he was seriously ill, two decades ago in 1998, a wing of the house burned down, four family members were killed, two were gravely injured, and another girl went missing. The suspicion is that Jasper recovered by stealing each one's life force. At Crossroad House, Garnet learns the reason for her mother's self-imposed exile: a cousin foresaw Garnet's disappearance while visiting ruins on the grounds of Crossroad House. Unable to leave this magically enforced family reunion until Jasper "transitions," Garnet promises to avoid the ruins, but with the house itself playing tricks, her promise might be difficult to keep. Building on a family where element-based magic is commonplace (Garnet and her mother work with stones; others wield weather, plants, or even fire), Salerni sustains an atmosphere of menace through a death, several near-fatal accidents, and revelations of other ancestors' fates that Garnet learns about through a newfound talent for time-walking that connects her to her great-great-grandmother and the missing girl from 1998. Interconnected mysteries keep readers turning pages, and when they all converge, the payoff is spine-chilling and satisfying. Anita L. Burkam (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A magical lineage threatens to crumble under the weight of its own secrets. The Carrefour family is imbued with magic. Each branch of the family tree has powers relating to nature and names to match their abilities: 12-year-old Garnet (like her mother, Emerald) can hear the magic in stones. Garnet connives to meet her large, estranged, extended family, which has both intrigued and fascinated her for much of her life; Emerald has told Garnet about the Carrefours but has never let her meet them. Jasper, Garnet's nonagenarian great-grandfather, seems in poor health but mysteriously never stays that way, leaning on a cane one moment and striding steadily the next. Given his advanced age, Jasper must choose his successor, the person who will ultimately shape the future of the family's crumbling ancestral manse, Crossroad House, the quasi-sentient source of their vast power. However, buried secrets and years of unexplained disappearances haunt the Carrefours, and before long Garnet must face--and ultimately try to address--the consequences of past generations' wrongdoings. Salerni's gothic charmer is deliciously creepy and atmospheric, building an immersive fantasy world that gently explores intergenerational trauma. A surprise ending hints that there may be more to discover in the Carrefour world. Main characters mostly read White. An enchanting and evocative tale. (floor plans) (Paranormal mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly gacy in this standout, genre-bending dark fantasy from Salerni (Eleanor, Alice, and the Roosevelt Ghosts). Twelve-year-old Garnet Carrefour's mother raised her far from the family estate, the source of their ley-line-based nature powers, but with great-grandfather Jasper dying, the family's magic compels the two back for an impending transfer of magic. Initially excited to meet her extended family, Garnet soon learns why her mother never visited Crossroad House: Jasper prowls the dilapidated home, leeching life force from his most vulnerable descendants, and an augury predicts that Garnet will repeat the fate of a girl who vanished during Jasper's last seemingly fatal illness. As "time-traveling visions" unpredictably jolt her into the missing girl's past, Garnet probes her family history, hoping to dodge the curse by solving a decades-old mystery. Salerni enlivens classic horror tropes and gothic ambience, complete with a sentient manor house, blending wry humor with atmospheric descriptions to create Garnet's compulsively readable first-person voice. The meticulously built, grounded magic system provides a fantastical buffer around realistic depictions of abuse, while supportive family relationships transcend a cycle of generational trauma. Main characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Sara Crowe, Pippin Properties. (Jan.)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness The Carrefour Curse, a darkly comic supernatural mystery by Dianne K. Salerni (Eleanor, Alice, and the Roosevelt Ghosts), begins with "a quiet but disgusting bit of magic."

#2348905 Pine Island Visitors (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Polly Horvath

Fiona, Marlin, Natasha, and Charlie McCready have been adopted by their unlikely guardian, Al, and finally settled into their new home on Pine Island in British Columbia. Fiona is struggling under the weight of trying to keep everything together, not to mention worrying about expenses, while Marlin tries to adjust to her new high school while facing rejections for her cookbook, Thirty Meals a Twelve-Year-Old Could Make and Did!. Natasha is still keeping to herself but is looking forward to learning how to play the violin when school starts. And Charlie is dreaming of what kind of dog she would like. It's been an adjustment, but they are loving being with each other and having Al next door.

978-0-8234-5295-8 Margaret G Ferguson ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist In this sequel to Pine Island Home (2020), the McCready sisters have settled into their British Columbia home and are looking forward to the school year now that neighbor Al is their official guardian. But troubles soon ensue: Mrs. Weatherspoon (who cared for the girls after their parents' deaths) comes for an extended visit, bringing her odious friend Jo along; Fiona, 15, and Marlin, 13, have trouble with peers at school; Natasha, 10, loves her new violin (until she doesn't); and Charlie, 8, longs for a dog. Much of the conflict centers around Jo, an opinionated manipulator who imposes her beliefs on everyone. The girls' dilemma (how to graciously evict two adults who are ruining their lives) provides the story's most thoughtful and humorous moments, and the solution—contrived by the ever-resourceful Fiona and executed by the always-dependable Al—is deeply satisfying. Horvath's prose is smooth and engaging (she excels at both comedy and pathos) and always respects children's inner lives. Contemporary yet classic, a fine addition to the family stories shelf.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Following Horvath's Pine Island Home, readers meet back up with the McCready sisters, who are settling into their new seaside British Columbian home and beginning the school year. After their parents' tragic death and then the passing of their subsequent guardian, Fiona, Marlin, Natasha, and Charlie are left to fend for themselves. The girls are now living in a small home independent of adult supervision, besides the occasional check-in and words of wisdom from their next-door neighbor and newly adoptive father Al. This year, each sister is dealing with their own unique growing pains, and on top of their own personal chaos, they've just received a letter from Mrs. Weatherspoon, a family friend, saying she has purchased a one-way ticket and will be staying with them, in their already cramped home, for an indefinite amount of time. With Mrs. Weatherspoon comes her friend Jo, a most adversarial woman who sets nearly impossible standards for the girls while taking up residence in their living room. Despite ample sisterly banter, Horvath's writing is at its best when checking in on the quiet lives of each girl. These small moments of reflection allow Horvath to show off her ability to weave authentic wisdom and beautiful writing into a middle grade book. Throughout the year, the sisters learn how to express their needs and support their family while trying to hold it all together. This is a cozy read for fans of The Vanderbeekers and The Penderwicks, but it works best having read the previous title. KJH COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Now happily settled after the drama of Pine Island Home (rev. 9/20), orphaned sisters Fiona, Marlin, Natasha, and Charlie face new challenges when their former guardian, Mrs. Weatherspoon, announces that she is arriving from Australia for a prolonged visit -- and unexpectedly shows up with a companion. Fiona, now fifteen, is furious that the nasty, intrusive, and demanding Jo seems to be ruining her family; she finds some solace in her journal, which becomes a friend, along with the teacher who responds to her entries. Meanwhile, Marlin is struggling with her outcast status at school and the lack of publisher interest in her cookbook, "Thirty Meals a Twelve-Year-Old Could Make and Did!"; Natasha turns out to be a prodigy on the violin but just wants to commune with the natural world; and youngest sibling Charlie desperately wants a dog. True to form, Horvath packs this sequel (which takes readers from the beginning of the school year through Christmas) with relatable incident, vivid dialogue, humor, and moments of profound reflection on the human condition. Martha V. Parravano(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Uninvited guests demand new survival skills from the McCready sisters in this follow-up to Pine Island Home (2020). The school year is about to start when Mrs. Weatherspoon, who cared for the girls in Borneo after their parents' death, comes to visit, upsetting the equilibrium. She arrives with another church lady, Jo Menzies, and everyone soon finds themselves towed along in Jo's manipulative, overbearing wake. At 15, Fiona can't relinquish the burden of being in charge of her family, shying away from their guardian Al's willingness to pay for things. Thirteen-year-old Marlin has yet to realize her ambition to publish her cookbook. Ten-year-old Natasha's contemplative approach to understanding the world manifests itself in a surprising way. And 8-year-old Charlie has an optimistic naïveté in the face of all this fierce independence. Jo is self-absorbed and almost comically evil in her disregard for everyone but herself. Horvath skewers those who try to wield power over others, using diet or religion or opinions as cudgels. As frustrated Fiona and Marlin find themselves feeling impotent rage, they also gain an understanding of what it means to be--and stand up for--oneself. Everyone presents as white. Horvath keeps the pace captivating in this domestic drama as she demonstrates that life's ups and downs are inevitable. Neither certainty nor confirmation of beliefs is forthcoming--there are few comeuppances for bad behavior--but what emerges is a compelling case for self-reliance, creativity, and kindness. Terrifically entertaining. (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this character-focused sequel to Pine Island Home by Horvath, the orphaned McCready sisters have just begun adjusting to their life on British Columbia's Pine Island with new guardian Al. Al mostly leaves Charlie, Fiona, Marlin, and Natasha to their own devices, and while the girls enjoy their independence and newfound security, each longs to move on from their past and build bright futures. Fifteen-year-old Fiona seeks to make things right with a boy she stood up the previous year; Marlin, 13, strives to become a published cookbook author; Natasha, 10, endeavors to learn how to play violin; and youngest child Charlie, eight, determinedly advocates for a dog. When the siblings' first guardian, Mrs. Witherspoon, along with her bossy, ill-tempered childhood friend Jo, arrive for a three-month visit, the sisters struggle to navigate this change. Frequent clashes between Jo and the girls, especially after Jo and Mrs. Witherspoon extend their stay to start a church, prompt the McCready clan to drive out their unwanted guests. Through steady, sober prose and the protagonists' complex relationships, Horvath creates successfully strained situations, giving way to gratifying resolutions that offer a comforting reassurance that bad times don't last forever. Ages 9: 12. (Oct.)

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2363075 Five Impossible Tasks of Eden Smith (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tom Llewellyn When Eden Smith moves into the beautiful and bizarre old mansion housing her	1	$17.99

grandfather, she discovers a strange society of elderly metalworkers whose mastery verges on the magical. Deadly mechanical birds, a cavernous chamber full of dirty dishes, a highly dangerous game of Machinist BINGO-life at the guild is not only strange, it's also dangerous.

978-0-8234-5312-2 Holiday House ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist al to miserable after her parents' tragic death-due-to-meteor, and after floating in the foster-care system for years, s e's flabbergasted to discover that a grandfather has been found. After she's unceremoniously dumped at his residence, the massive and mysterious Guildhouse of Smiths, it becomes apparent that he's in serious trouble. The master metalworker is being imprisoned for various guild in ractions, and as the bewildered pair grow closer, Eden learns that she can free him and reinstate his standing by completing five impossible task s—at the risk of eternal expulsion for them both. Eden, unwilling to give up newfound friends and family, accepts the challenge. The unusual guildhall backdrop is incredibly creative and compelling, and the kooky cast of characters, including eccentric elderly silversmiths, is a pleasure to befriend. Eden's willingness to throw herself into the unknown and question prejudice is an inspiration, and her smithing studies provide a glimpse into an increasingly rare physical art. A truly memorable setting for a terrific tale.

#2328982 Forget-Me-Not Blue (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sharelle Byars Moranville

With no one else to rely on, inseparable siblings Con and Sofie must decide who they can trust, and whether or not it's safe to share their hearts with family members who have the power to hurt them. Sofie has always turned to Con-and to books-during times of upheaval in their unstable lives. But as their mother is arrested and their guardianship becomes uncertain, Sofie will have to find hope in the most important story of all: her own.

978-0-8234-5359-7 Holiday House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Tough topics permeate Moranville's novel, which follows 10-year-old Sofie and her 13-year-old brother, Con, through a tumultuous year. Their free-spirited mother loves them intensely, but she also loves to party, get high, and bring around terrible boyfriends. As a result, Sofie and Con have learned to look out for each other. Their world's fragile order is disrupted when their estranged great-granddad, Gunner, comes to stay with them. Sofie just wants him gone, but when their mom takes off without a word (again) and gets herself arrested, Gunner becomes an unexpected source of stability and love. Moranville writes with candor and respect for her audience as she delves into the very real issues of poverty, addiction, physical abuse, foster care, and having an incarcerated parent, as well as the host of emotions that accompany these situations. Sofie finds respite in novels, and readers are sure to recognize the books that help her navigate the disruptions in her life. Though difficult and traumatic circumstances fill the narrative, readers who share Sofie's experiences will feel seen and ultimately reassured.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 10-year-old navigates the uncertainty of life with an unreliable parent while holding on to hope. Sofie has lived in difficult circumstances for a long time. Her mom has struggled with drug use and abusive relationships for much of Sofie's life. They live in poverty in Des Moines, Iowa, making frequent visits to the community center for free lunches and to borrow books, which Sofie takes comfort in. Although Sofie aches for her mother's elusive support, it becomes clear that she has love and support from Con, her 13-year-old brother; her recently sober great-grandfather; and family friend Tommy, her mom's boss at the restaurant. But her mother's erratic nature causes Sofie to harbor a persistent sense of unease and fear of abandonment. When her mother disappears for weeks and is subsequently sent to prison for crimes committed with her boyfriend, the question arises of determining an appropriate guardian. Life from Sofie's perspective is painfully but realistically conveyed, and the portrayal will resonate especially with readers with experience of poverty, addiction, or family trauma. Amid fears and crises, there are still small comforts to be found, capturing feelings of inherent value in her family. As the search for a caregiver finds a happy, albeit unlikely, resolution, the complex mood evoked by Moranville for much of the book is set aside for a softer landing. Most characters appear to be White. A poignant, pointed portrayal of the heavy burden parental instability places on a family. (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Fifth grade Des Moines, Iowa, resident Sofie feels lucky to have her 13-year-old brother Connie looking after her in their mother's chaotic household. Despite his care, however, she yearns to have a more stable relationship with her mom, who struggles with drug dependency and is often in abusive relationships. Things begin looking up when Sofie's mother starts working at the restaurant owned by family friend Tommy, until she suddenly disappears for three weeks. When she returns, she's immediately arrested for crimes she committed with her boyfriend. Now the children need a new guardian, but after the court deems that their beloved great-grandfather Gunner can only keep Con, due to Gunner's recent incarceration, Sofie worries she might be taken from the only people she feels safe with. Sofie's vulnerable POV and her propensity to highlight the good in every situation exude warmth, and a number of cozy, joyful moments, as when Con buys Sofie a pair of special "brand-new, in-a-box, straight-from-the-store shoes," help buoy wrenching setbacks and conflict caused by the characters' familial dynamics. An optimistic conclusion, ferried by an enduring heroine, rounds out this hopeful novel by Moranville (Surprise Lily). Main characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Summertime is often not a respite for those who depend on the structure, supervision, and food that public school provides. Moranville introduces siblings Sofie, 10, and her brother Connie, 13, as they parent themselves using wit above their years to avoid protective services and keep their family intact. Sofie and Connie's single-parent mom has abandoned the kids and let abusive boyfriends harm them in the past, and it appears her hard-partying ways are returning. Once Sofie's great-grandfather, Gunner, leaves prison on parole, Sofie's mom spirals out of control landing Sofie in foster care with more surprises along the way. This title has multiple social-emotional learning connections about accepting your feelings, fighting terror with new habits, building trust, and nurturing a garden. Moranville skillfully intersperses literature connections that implore readers to uncover just what was so comforting to Sofie, and to discover the power of reading in their own lives. VERDICT A unique book with the message that the scars of generational trauma are deep and lasting, but the cycle can be broken with creative outlets, strong family ties, and determination. A must-read companion to Leslie Connor's Waiting for Normal.--Laura Dooley-Taylor Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2326309 102 Days of Lying About Lauren (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Maura Jortner

Twelve-year-old Mouse calls an amusement park home. Nobody notices her, and that's the way she likes it. Mouse sweeps the streets and wears a uniform she "borrowed" and sleeps on the top floor of the Haunted House of Horrors. But one morning, a girl named Cat comes looking for Lauren Suszek. Cat notices her, and Mouse doesn't like it. Mouse cannot let this nosy pest find out who she really is! If Mouse gets discovered living in the park, Mama might come back for her, and Mouse doesn't want that. Or--even worse?--Mama might not come back at all.

978-0-8234-5362-7 Holiday House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Book Page The amusement park security guards that patrol the Haunted House of Horrors have yet to notice the ghost on the top floor. But it's not a Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After Lauren Suszek spends 102 days living inside a theme park, her cousin and a tornado show up on the same day. The 12-year-old goes by Mouse, since that's the name printed on what looks like an official employee nametag. Tall for her age, she pretends to be 16, since she'd have to be that old to be a park employee. During the day she sweeps the grounds; at night she sleeps inside the Haunted House of Horrors. She's been doing that ever since the day Mama took her to the park, put her on a ride, and walked away. Mouse has become friends with Tanner, a teenage employee who says she's a doppelgänger for his sister, a similarity that evokes a strong emotional reaction in him. When Cat, a tween girl who uses a cane, shows up claiming to be her cousin, Mouse denies it. But when a ferocious storm traps the two of them and Tanner inside the haunted house attraction, Mouse's world crumbles, walls and all. Debut author Jortner's writing is smooth and interesting; her setup is good, and the storm chapters are page-turners. However, the story treats the central trauma of Mouse's abandonment too lightly and resolves it without Mouse herself, a supposedly enterprising character, taking any action, which may disappoint readers. Main characters are cued White; there is racial diversity among the park employees. A promising story whose central premise demands deeper exploration. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly her at America's most famous amusement park, in Florida, tall-for-her-age 12-year-old Lauren "Mouse" Suszek hides in plain sight by posing as a 16-year-old park employee. She manages the deception admirably for the titular 102 days, living at the top of the Haunted House of Horrors and logging her self-imposed "Rules to Live By" and "Lies Told." She even befriends Tanner, a park employee who's also son to the park's CEO, and whose sister bears a striking resemblance to Mouse. But Mouse's luck changes quickly when Cat, a seventh grader who uses a cane, arrives and claims to be Mouse's cousin just as a tornado forces everyone in the park to take shelter. Huddled in an unstable building, Mouse struggles to confront her grief and anger alongside a now-injured Tanner, who is navigating his own tumultuous family dynamic, and suspicious but concerned Cat. Industrious Mouse's colloquial first-person voice layers her feelings about her circumstances with the logistics around her solo survival, resulting in a moving debut from Jortner that retains a sense of adventure while lightly exploring an experience of abandonment. Protagonists cue as white; the secondary cast is racially diverse. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Rena Rossner, Deborah Harris Agency. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—When she's abandoned by her mother at an amusement park, 12-year-old Mouse (also known as Lauren) spends her days pretending to be a park employee, hanging out with her friend Tanner, trying to blend in, and desperately avoiding thinking about her mother. For 102 days, it's been working: she sleeps undetected on the fourth floor of the Haunted House of Horrors, eats the cinnamon raisin bagels left out for breakfast for the park's "ghost," and follows five carefully constructed rules (the most important one is "Pretend to know more than you do"). But when she is spotted by someone who knows her real name and isn't easy to avoid, Mouse can't help but panic. This coincides with a dangerous storm at the park that leaves Tanner injured, and Mouse has to decide between outing herself or helping her friend. A lively voice and ingenuity carry this exciting story that is filled with humor and heart. Mouse discovers that people aren't always what they seem and that sometimes, breaking the rules is the best way to move forward. VERDICT Memorable, original, and engaging. Recommended for all libraries.—Rebecca Kirshenbaum

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness In Maura Jortner's funny and spirited debut novel, a stouthearted girl brings to bear all the cleverness, courage, and morality she can muster as she survives an impossible and terrifying situation.

#2368339 Luminous Life of Lucy Landry (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Anna Rose Johnson

Selena Lucy Landry (named for a ship, as every sailor's child should be) has been frightened of the water ever since she lost her father at sea. But with no one else to care for her, she's sent to foster with the Martins—a large Anishinaabe family living on a lighthouse in the middle of stormy Lake Superior. The Martin family is big, hard-working, and close, and Lucy—who has always been a dreamer—struggles to fit in. Can she go one day without ruining the laundry or forgetting the sweeping? Will she ever be less afraid of the lake?

978-0-8234-5363-4 Holiday House ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 A precocious young orphan with a big imagination finds her life uprooted again when she moves to a lighthouse on Harmony Island in Lake Superior. This upper-elementary chapter book blends historical fiction, adventure, and a coming-of-age story, elements that compete with each other in the relatively short page count. As Lucy adapts to the Martin household, she must learn to overcome her "allergy" to the lake if she wants to complete her dead father's mission of finding a missing necklace, and as the Martins share their culture with her, she's happy to forge a stronger connection to her own Ojibwe heritage. Lucy is bighearted but often too quick to act, which many young readers will likely relate to, even as she assumes different personas based on her emotional reactions in a given moment. While the story is quick to unfold, the pacing sometimes makes the story feel unfocused, and the historical fiction elements get overshadowed. All that said, there's still a lot of potential in the character of Lucy Landry, and young chapter-book readers who are more interested in character will appreciate this. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When her guardian Miss Mamie passes away, eleven-year-old Lucy is sent to the Martins, a family in charge of a lighthouse on Harmony Island in Lake Superior. While she and the Martins share Anishinaabe heritage, they have little else in common, and Lucy's intense fear of the lake—understandable after losing her sailor father to its waves—doesn't make her new life on a tiny island any easier. The one bright side is the island's proximity to Mermaid's Corner, a place visited by her father in his search for a lost shipwreck and a ruby necklace. She decides to resume his search, enlisting the help of the Martin children, but her efforts only bring trouble to the family and Lucy has to regain their trust. While the treasure hunt lends an easy structure to the plot, Lucy's interactions with the Martin children provide the story with layers of emotion as she negotiates her way in a family that is welcoming but not terribly warm. She gathers up her courage when near tragedy strikes, and her brave actions earn the other children's admiration, if not their affection. Spunky, precocious, and especially talented in elaborate storytelling, Lucy is surely kin with Montgomery's Anne, and the cozy tone and mild excitement make it an easy read-alike for fans of those books. KQG COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Lucy, a French and Ojibwe orphan living in Michigan in 1912, struggles to fit in with her new foster family. Living with the Martins, an Ojibwe family who are lighthouse keepers on an island in Lake Superior, isn't ideal for someone who's "allergic to lake water." Eleven-year-old Lucy long ago lost her mother to illness. When she was 9, her frequently absent sailor father died in a shipwreck. After her caretaker, Miss Mamie, passes away, Lucy experiences even more upheaval. She's haunted by her father's death—the origin of her fear of water—but she cherishes his stories of the 1866 wreck of the Elva Jane near her new home. The six Martin children have little tolerance for imaginative Lucy's fabricated stories, and from her loneliness grows a need to reconnect with Papa, motivating her to seek the ruby necklace that went down with the Elva Jane. This quest gives her a purpose but endangers the Martin kids and threatens Mr. Martin's job. In a climactic moment, Lucy must draw strength from Papa's memory and face down her fears. This charming page-turner centers a courageous young person whose journey is also a powerful testament to the importance of placing Indigenous children in homes that reflect their cultures. Despite the bumpy start, Lucy finds comfort in connecting with her Ojibwe heritage and also begins to learn some Anishinaabemowin words from the Martins. A heartwarming tale of belonging and learning that life's treasures aren't always shiny. (map, author's note, glossary) (Historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When French and Ojibwe 11-year-old Selena Lucy Landry's guardian dies, she's placed in the care of the Martins, a large Ojibwe family, in this uplifting tale by Johnson (The Star That Always Stays), a member of the Sault Ste. Marie Tribe of Chippewa Indians. Already apprehensive about the move, Lucy feels further anxious and isolated when she learns that the family inhabits a lighthouse on a small island in the middle of Lake Superior. Even as she copes with grief, Lucy tries hard to fit in with the six Martin children, regaling them with fanciful, sometimes true, stories. After she recounts the tale of a nearby capsized boat that carried a ruby necklace, her pseudo-siblings gently rib her about the epic's validity, prompting Lucy to set out in search of the necklace, certain that obtaining it for the Martins is her only way to gain acceptance. In this tender, wholesome book about family, Johnson acknowledges the importance of kindness and patience, especially in matters of grief and settling into new places and situations. Third-person passages deftly detail Lucy's tumultuous emotions and winningly balance the mystery of the shipwreck; Anishinaabe text throughout emphasizes how culture and environmental preservation shape the Martin family's values. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jessica Schmeidler, Golden Wheat Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Selena Lucy Landry (Lucy, for short) is full of imagination, wonder, and a taste for adventure—with one exception. After losing her father in a shipwreck, she has an overwhelming fear of the sea. This proves particularly difficult when she is sent to live with the Martins, a large Anishinaabe family of lighthouse keepers on a tiny island in Lake Superior. She arrives desperate to be loved but can never seem to say or do the right thing. Soon, however, a window of opportunity appears. The Martins live close to Mermaid's Corner, the site of a shipwreck her father often told her about. Can she find the ship's treasure that her father longed to discover? Will seeking it bring her closer to the Martin family, or is Lucy destined to not only be an orphan, but an outcast forever? Lucy has an enchantment reminiscent of Anne Shirley's, but Johnson adds so much depth to the 19th-century orphan story by weaving it with the girl's self-discovery as she connects more deeply with her Ojibwe heritage through her newfound foster family. There is also a nod to homeschooling as the Martins live far from school, and take pride in having their mother as a teacher. VERDICT Fans of L.M. Montgomery seeking diverse characters will rejoice at this heart-warming, feel-good adventure, as will families looking for books representing home learners.—Amira Walker

#2332504 I Am Kavi (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Thushanthi Ponweera

(Novel in Verse). 1998, Colombo. The Sri Lankan Civil War is raging, but everyday life must go on. At Kavi's school, her friends talk about the weekly Top 40, the Backstreet Boys, Shahrukh Khan, Leo & Kate. and who died-or didn't-in the latest bombing. But Kavi is afraid of something even scarier. She fears that if her friends discover her secret-that she is not who she is pretending to be-they'll stop talking to her.

978-0-8234-5365-8 Holiday House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Kavi is 10 years old but has lived a lifetime. Her father died shortly after coming home from war, her mother remarried quickly, and Kavi is left alone to manage her grief and confusion. The story is set in Colombo, Sri Lanka, during the civil war, which serves as a backdrop to this riveting novel in verse. Kavi's only source of stability is her education, and when she wins a scholarship to an elite school in the city, she has the chance to reinvent herself in her new environment—only, she chooses a problematic way of doing so. Ponweera employs spare but descriptive verse that perfectly captures the inner turmoil of a young girl wading her way through the complexities of family, friendship, identity, and emotions. Rich details of life in a middle school in Colombo add texture and nuance. Readers will find her story engaging and the resolution quite satisfying. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When Kavi earns a spot in an elite school in the city, she has mixed feelings. She'll miss her friends and the familiarity of her small Sri Lankan village, but she'll be away from her angry and neglectful mother, living instead with her aunt, who works as a housemaid and nanny at a wealthy family's home. Mala Nanda's employers are surprisingly kind, but school is another matter, and in order to fit in, Kavi lies, claiming she's a guest at the family's home, making up a backstory of money and fortune. Of course, that lie catches up with her, and soon she has to repair multiple relationships she managed to destroy. The verse novel has some striking imagery, skillfully capturing the intensity of Kavi's hope, doubt, shame, and determination as she negotiates her reality and her desires. Unfortunately, the verse structure limits the world building and character development, so the backdrop of the Sri Lankan war is nearly nonexistent and her mother's sudden affection for her at the end feels unearned. Nonetheless, Kavi has a distinct notion of right and wrong (even when she chooses wrong), giving her keen insight into how drastically money can affect quality of life, and her observations give a more nuanced explanation of her motives. KQG COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine At ten years old, Kavi has already experienced her share of trauma and heartbreak. Her father spent a decade at the front lines in the Sri Lankan civil war and returned to their rural home an amputee, only to die of a sudden heart attack. Kavi's mother remarries and becomes pregnant, leaving a still-grieving Kavi certain her mother no longer loves her. When she earns a scholarship to a prestigious school in the capital city, Colombo, Kavi jumps at the opportunity but soon feels ashamed of her poor, rural roots in a school full of wealthy city kids. The novel, set in the late 1990s, is a superb study of the Sri Lankan class system and the lengths to which someone might go to fit in.

Convinced she will have to change to make friends with the rich "cool" girls who have fancy new clothes, cars, and servants, Kavi pretends to be wealthy and creates a web of lies she soon gets caught in, ultimately revealing what really matters. A moving coming-of-age story written in verse about understanding and embracing who you truly are. The war acts as a highly charged political backdrop to Kavi's struggles to accept her family. Back matter provides context on the Sri Lankan civil war; in an author's note, Ponweera reflects on her own experiences growing up during the war. Julie Hakim Azzam(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews One Sinhalese girl's story set during the late 1990s amid the ongoing Sri Lankan civil war. Ten-year-old Kavi isn't happy, and she hasn't been happy for some time. Her father came home from years of fighting but only because he lost his leg. Then, shortly after Thaththa died, her mother remarried. Kavi's left with no father and a distracted mother who can't understand that no one can replace Thaththa. Her one solace is school; in fact, Kavi does so well academically that she wins a scholarship to attend school in the big city of Colombo. She isn't sure she wants to go live with her maternal aunt who works as a maid in a rich family's house, but it might be better than staying at home. The city is completely different from Kavi's village, and even as she struggles to fit in, she finds unexpected friendships and explores new experiences. But ultimately, Kavi's future will depend on the consequences of one mistake and whether she can remain true to herself. Told in accessible, economical verse, this novel explores Kavi's day-to-day struggles against a backdrop of civil war and social inequality. Though her problems at times seem insurmountable, this is ultimately a reassuring story of friendship, family, and finding solutions. A serious and relatable tale of everyday life intersecting with and diverging from the realities of war. (historical notes, glossary) (Verse historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Exploring friendship, family, and grief against the backdrop of the Sri Lankan civil war, Ponweera's debut, a stirring novel in verse, traces a 10-year-old's desire to fit in. In May 1997, Kavi lives in a village in Sri Lanka's Anuradhapura District with her mother, Amma, who works in the paddy fields, and her step-father, Siripala, whom she worries will replace her late father's role in their family. Kavi tries to be a "good Buddhist girl" and a "good Sinhalese girl," and dreams of achieving academic success so she and Amma can leave for the city. But when Kavi scores highest in her district, now-pregnant Amma cannot accompany her to Colombo for further schooling. Living with her aunt, who works as a housemaid, Kavi dreams of being like her "happy, fearless, popular" peers, and begins telling elaborate lies to fit in. The lies help her find acceptance from her peers, but they come at a cost; to Kavi's grades, her values, and her sense of self. Amid a historical setting informed by classism, colorism, and colonization, short reflective phrases and vivid cultural details bring out the nuanced story's emotional depth and show the devastating impact of war on Kavi and her loved ones. Back matter offers historical context. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jacqui Lipton, Raven Quill Literary. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Set in 1998, this novel-in-verse details an eventful year in the life of a 10-year-old Sri Lankan girl. Kavi's father returned from the long-running civil war, maimed and unable to provide for his family. He dies of a sudden heart attack, and Kavi is shocked when her widowed mother (Amma) remarries. Kavi resents her stepfather, Siripala, and feels displaced when she learns that Amma is pregnant. Kavi wins a coveted scholarship to study at a better school in the capital city, Colombo, but her triumph feels bittersweet. In Colombo, Kavi stays with her unmarried aunt, Mala Nanda, who works as a maid for a wealthy family. Kavi grows close to their daughter, Sasha, and chauffeur, Ranjith. At school, she lies about her background to win acceptance with the most popular girls in her class. This backfires when her new friends ask her to help them cheat on an exam, and she risks losing her scholarship. Kavi's perspective is naïve yet thoughtful as she sorts through new situations and challenges. In Colombo, terrorist attacks leave innocent victims dead and wounded; Kavi struggles to understand the senseless random violence. As she adjusts to city life, she misses Amma but finds solace in her core values as a Sinhalese-Buddhist. VERDICT This engaging, character-driven tale will appeal to readers who enjoy novels-in-verse, and fans of Padma Venkatraman, Rajani LaRocca, and Nizrana Farook's books.--Marilyn Taniguchi Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

#2348975 Sweetness All Around (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Suzanne Supplee

Almost-eleven-year-old Josephine is NOT pleased to be moving into the Happy World trailer park over the summer of 1974. She misses her beautiful bedroom with ballerinas on the wall and her pretty, well-dressed friends. Happy World isn't happy.

It's dingy and depressing! Nothing like the world that headstrong Josephine wants for herself.

978-0-8234-5369-6 Holiday House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Ten-year-old Josephine lives with her mother, who was recently forced to sell most of their belongings before they moved into a trailer in a run-down trailer park. Too angry to be civil, Josephine blames her mother and threatens to run away. Storming out of the trailer, she soon meets Lisa Marie, a friendly girl who welcomes Josephine, tells her about the other residents, and seems content living at the trailer park. When the two decide to search for and rescue another girl who was abducted the previous year from her mother's trailer, the story takes an unexpected turn toward mystery and adventure. In the end, Josephine comes to appreciate both her mother's choices and the strengths of their new community. The author of young adult novels such as Artichoke's Heart (2008), Supplee offers an involving middle-grade tale. Josephine is a likable protagonist who gets caught up in a complicated, possibly dangerous predicament. With a 1974 Tennessee setting and well-drawn main characters, the novel takes readers on a journey with a rewarding conclusion. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews It's 1974, and Josephine and Mama have given up their tony apartment and moved into the Happy World Trailer Park, in Glendale, Tennessee. Only problem is, it isn't a happy place. With Josephine's dad gone and Mama's sewing business suffering financially, they have no choice. The limited third-person narration describes Josephine's views of "every miserable thing there was to see in Happy World," from the rundown trailers to the residents who are facing challenges. Josephine meets Lisa Marie, who's also 10 and who lives with her granddaddy and great-uncle. Lisa Marie tells her about a girl from the neighborhood named Molly, who was kidnapped nearly a year ago and hasn't been found. Molly's mom looks as if she's barely hanging on. Josephine is struggling, too, but she's convinced that she and Molly have "a kind of sisterhood," and she's sure that if she can rescue Molly, her own circumstances will become bearable. Things move quickly after Josephine recognizes and interprets a clue that might point to Molly's whereabouts, leading to a thrilling and dangerous climax. The resulting relationships forged are well worth it all. Josephine's resilience and ability to reassess herself and her situation are admirable. Difficult topics such as divorce, poverty, abduction, terminal illness, and incarceration are thoughtfully and age-appropriately explored. Most characters are coded white. Colorfully relayed and gratifying to read. (author's note) (Historical fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Following a devastating warehouse fire that destroys her mother's sewing business in Tennessee, 10-year-old Josephine Willoughby and her mama must move into Happy World Trailer Park ("Dandiest Little Place on Earth!"), leaving behind what Jo thinks of as their "pretty life." A "rusty pipe fixing to burst" after the event, Jo is impulsive and sharp-tongued, mourning the sudden relocation and the loss of her friends. She nevertheless forges a reluctant bond with neighbor Lisa Marie, who introduces Jo to the park's rhythms and residents, including Lisa Marie's tender great-uncle Buster Lee as well as withdrawn Helen-Dove, whose daughter Molly was kidnapped a year earlier. As Jo spends the summer of 1974 on outings with Lisa Marie and accompanying her loving and pragmatic mama on seamstress jobs, Molly's disappearance is never far from her mind, and she's drawn to investigate the girl's whereabouts, despite warnings. Brimming with 1970s references and featuring a vivid setting and flawed, richly drawn characters, this immersive middle grade debut from Supplee (Somebody Everybody Listens To) offers up an eloquent portrayal of life's variability through a protagonist learning to search for the "sweetness in this life." Most characters default to white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Ginger Knowlton, Curtis Brown. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up--This funny, moving historical fiction novel set in Tennessee in the summer of 1974 is perfect for fans of such modern classics as Kate DiCamillo's Because of Winn-Dixie and Sheila Turnage's Three Times Lucky. Ten-year-old Josephine is having a tough summer. After a fire rips through her mom's business, they are forced to sell many of their possessions and leave their comfortable apartment downtown to move to "Happy World Trailer Park." Rundown and filled with a bevy of unique 1970s characters, including a motorcycle couple, a hippie couple, and a cranky, "hateful" landlady, the cheerfully named trailer park seems to mock Josephine who struggles to accept her new reality--and isn't afraid to say so! She is particularly focused on two of her new neighbors: Lisa Marie, a girl her own age who lives with her "granddaddy" and her Uncle Buster Lee, and Helen-Dove, a mother whose 10-year-old daughter Molly was recently kidnapped by relatives. Josephine fixates on Molly's disappearance and is determined to help find her, eavesdropping and looking for clues to her whereabouts around the trailer park. Readers will easily warm to Josephine, a memorable heroine who is charmingly imperfect and full of vim and vigor. She struggles to keep her always honest but sometimes unkind thoughts to herself and frequently lets her imagination run wild. Supplee has imbued the text with a southern vernacular and sense of place, along with a cast of lovable, realistic characters who are allowed to grow and change with the circumstances of their lives in a satisfying way. VERDICT An excellent, emotional novel sure to make an impact on readers young and old.--Kristy Pasquariello Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2368338 Warrior on the Mound (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sandra W. Headen

1935. Twelve-year-old Cato wants nothing more than to play baseball, perfect his pitch, and meet Mr. Satchel Paige--the best pitcher in Negro League baseball. But when he and his teammates "trespass" on their town's whites-only baseball field for a practice, the resulting racial outrage burns like a brushfire through the entire community, threatening Cato, his family, and every one of his friends.

978-0-8234-5378-8 Holiday House ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews It's 1939, and an African American tween in North Carolina is looking forward to following his older brother and now-deceased father into the Negro Baseball Leagues. Twelve-year-old Cato Jones desperately wants to be a great pitcher, just like his beloved father, Daddy Mo. Cato and his teammates go see the impressive new (but whites-only) ballfield, and they can't resist trying it out. But when they're accused of causing damage, Cato knows his denial won't be enough to challenge a white person's lie. Gradually Cato learns that Daddy Mo and Luke Blackburn, the white man who owns the field, were friends, but no one will share what happened on the night Daddy Mo died. Mr. Luke agrees to a game between the Black and white teams, an event disrupted by racial threats. The racist undercurrents in town go back decades, and some seek to use these divisions to sow even more discord. All of that seems unimportant when Isaac, Cato's brother, arrives home, the victim of a terrible beating. Debut author Headen has crafted a highly engaging novel that skillfully and believably weaves actual events into the story. The energy of sports and Cato's drive to excel propel the narrative. Family and community dynamics reflect the times but still allow today's readers to connect with Cato and his friends. An outstanding blend of history, sports, and coming of age: not to be missed. (author's note, historical notes, timeline, resources, further reading) (Historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Headen uses baseball to explore themes of racism in this powerful debut set in North Carolina during the Jim Crow era. In 1935, 12-year-old Cato Jones, who is Black, aspires to pitch for the Kansas City Monarchs in the Negro American League like his late father and older brother. Cato and his team, the Pender County Rangers, often skip school to practice on the new field built by white businessman Luke Blackburn for his own son's team. Cato dreams of playing an actual game on that field, with its real bases, bleachers, and pitching mound: "I would love to see the Rangers whip the tar out of that white boy and his team right on their own fancy ball field. Just one fair game, and we could do it." Scheduling a game against Blackburn's son proves easy; keeping it fair, however, is not. And after the ball game triggers a resurgence of racial violence, Cato's tight-knit Black community must rally around one another to keep each other safe. The protagonist's first-person POV adds immediacy to this emotionally charged sports novel, making for a winning combination of action-driven plotting and underlying historical tension that will inspire discussion surrounding Jim Crow era and contemporary prejudice. Ample back matter concludes. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Victoria Selvaggio, Storm Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—In Poplar Springs, NC, 12-year-old Cato aspires to play in the Negro Baseball Leagues, just like his dad and brother. A swirl of mystery surrounds the sudden death of his father, Daddy Mo, four years ago, but the pain remains just as strong. It's 1939 in the South, and the odds seem stacked against Cato with rampant racism and Jim Crow laws in place. While he and his friends get plenty of practice on their makeshift baseball field, the big talk is the new field built for the white boys. Cutting school and sneaking onto the new field gets Cato and his teammates into a pickle with the white team. In order to settle things, it is suggested that they compete in a series of games on the new field. While this sits very well with Cato and his team, the white players are not fond of the idea at all. The racial tension seeps from the field into every aspect of Cato's life, adding even more weight to each game and putting people in danger. Told in the first person, this engaging novel tackles themes of bullying, racism, segregation, strength, and forgiveness. Helpful back matter roots Cato's story in its historical context with an author's note, time line, bibliography, and biographies of the real Negro League players after which characters are named. VERDICT A home run of a book that is brave enough to speak the hard truths, this is a first purchase for all libraries.—Tracy Crouce

#2363068 Selkie's Daughter (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Linda Crotta Brennan

Brigit knows all the old songs and legends by heart: of Neve, the daughter of the sea god; of the warrior Finn MacCool; and of people who are not quite human. But Brigit knows the truth. It's evident in the webbing between her fingers—webbing that must be cut. She's the daughter of a selkie. A truth she must keep secret from everyone.

978-0-8234-5439-6 Holiday House ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 6.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Like her mother, Brigit has selkie (part human—part seal) heritage. But unlike Mum, she hasn't yet shapeshifted from human to seal form. Nor has she met her selkie relatives living in the sea near her small village in Nova Scotia. As Brigit grows toward maturity, she dreads the change but looks forward to it, too. The taunting at school is hard to bear, and soon the villagers spread mean-spirited rumors, blaming her family's selkie connection for diseases striking their friends and family members, as well as calamities at sea. With support from two loyal friends, Brigit prepares to don a sealskin and act with determination to save both her parents' lives and restore order amid escalating chaos. Brennan's first novel is a well-paced first-person narrative inspired by elements of Celtic folklore, which are communicated to readers through snippets from old tales and verses from a selkie-themed traditional ballad. In this quiet but compelling story, Brigit endures humiliation, prejudice, and loss, but she perseveres. A novel combining occasionally harsh realism with elements of magic and unshakable hope.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Brigit's fishing village sits balanced between land and sea, between solid practicality and fear of the supernatural: their hardworking lives abound with superstitions and songs about selkies, whose fabled secret home is said to lie nearby. As the daughter of a selkie woman and a human man, Brigit must conceal her dual nature—and periodically cut the webbing growing between her fingers—for fear of superstition and social stigma. When the Great Selkie sends a blight of storms and bad fishing in retaliation for the hunting of selkie pups, rumors start to fly, disaster threatens, and Brigit must leverage the selkie part of her heritage to save her family and community. The pacing is steady but lacking in rhythm: life-and-death confrontations with selkies and selkie-killers last about as long—and are as quickly and simply resolved—as schoolyard scuffles. This tends to take the wind out of the emotional dynamics, leaving them promising but underdeveloped. Still, the depiction of Nova Scotia maritime culture is engaging (be sure to have a Stan Rogers playlist handy), and Brigit's gradually strengthening friendships with childhood companion Margaret, newcomer Peter, and Peter's dog Tolly should warm the cockles of all but the most cynical of hearts. Sea lore aficionados might find more depth in Thomas' Secrets of Selkie Bay (BCCB 9/15), but readers just ready to dip their toes into selkie lore and Celtic legends à la Jane Yolen will find an easy introduction here. FHK COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: ForeWord Magazine A family is caught between the land and the sea in Linda Crotta Brennan's coming-of-age novel The Selkie's Daughter--a story rich in Celtic lore.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A girl comes of age and reconciles with her selkie blood in Brennan's debut novel. Brigit lives with a secret: Webbing grows between her fingers, and no matter how often her cousin Alys cuts it away, it grows back. Her village on the coast of Nova Scotia may be under a selkie "bane" that's affecting everyone's catch--possibly as retribution for the killing of baby seals. Rumors also swirl about the origins of her mother, who, as Brigit says, "has no ties on land." Brigit befriends new arrival Peter, an orphan who hails "from away"--in this case, Manitoba, where his family were homesteaders. Peter, who's arrived with new priest Father Angus, his uncle, learns about Brigit's life and community, revealing details about them to readers at the same time. This historical fantasy is loosely inspired by the Celtic legends Brigit adores, including the love story of Oisín (son of the warrior Finn MacCool) and Neve (daughter of the sea god). Brigit narrates events in the first person as her sense of self-identity develops through family tragedy, community hardship, and her increasing awareness of her heritage. Everything culminates in Brigit's dramatic quest to get the Great Selkie to lift the bane. The tale's strength lies in its writing: well-drawn characters, a strong sense of place, vivid images of the natural world, and evocative fantastical elements. All characters are coded white. An immersive reading experience threaded through with Celtic lore. (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this multilayered middle grade debut, Brennan (the Fact Files series) evocatively establishes the hardships of a tween living as an incognito selkie in the sea-blasted chill of Nova Scotia. Though Brigit Finn habitually cuts back the webbing between her fingers to facilitate her masquerade as human, she and her mother; who are shape-shifting magical seals from nearby Sule Skerrie; are still the topic of persistent gossip throughout her financially struggling rural fishing village. Brigit endures persistent bullying from classmates, but with the support of her family, which also includes her Scots-descended father and precocious five-year-old brother, she forms buoying friendships with her cousin and a newcomer, the Manitoban nephew of the local priest. When the village's fortunes shift for the worse, the fishermen; blaming selkies; target Brigit and her family, who are already suffering their own profound tragedies: someone has been killing young seals, angering the king of the selkies. At times shockingly dark and unflinching in its portrayal of the harsh realities Brigit and her family face, this fresh and evocative tale, rendered in Brigit's clear voice, is propelled by a resilient protagonist toward a satisfyingly complex resolution. The human cast is white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Karyn Fischer, BookStop Literary. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8--Brigit knows that in order to fit in, she must remove the webbing of skin that is growing between her fingers. Although painful, cousin Alys has always helped with this process. Kids at school aren't very accepting of her, given that she's half human, half seal. Being the daughter of a Selkie (seal woman), Brigit lives near Nova Scotia with her parents and little brother Willie. Thankfully, she develops some close friendships that end up being essential when she finds herself alone; her father has disappeared while fishing, and her mother has returned to the sea to find him. A large golden seal holds the key to the village's survival, as he is preventing the fish from being caught and even causing some of the storms that wreak havoc on the villagers and their way of life. The story is written in first person; Brigit and the other characters read as white. Have a tissue box nearby as heartbreak is in sure supply. The struggle between good and evil become blurred as readers are led to consider both sides, both of value. Topics presented include seal pup clubbing, diphtheria, bullying, food insecurities, storm destruction, and the cliques that come with small-town living. VERDICT Expertly told in poetic fashion, this book will hook its readers from sentence one. Highly recommended for all who love fantasy, tragedy, history, and folklore.--Tracy Cronce Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Author Linda Crotta Brennan (Fact Files series) makes her middle-grade debut with The Selkie's Daughter, a lyrical historical fantasy inspired by Celtic folklore.

#2363069 Light and Air (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mindy Nichols Wendell

When Halle and her mother both come down with TB, they are shunned--and then they are sent to the J.N. Adam Tuberculosis Hospital: far from home, far from family, far from the world.

978-0-8234-5443-3 Holiday House ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Halle (short for Hallelujah) is both hopeful and unhappy after her mother is diagnosed with active tuberculosis and taken miles from home to a sanatorium for treatment. Mama is expected to recover due to the institution's emphasis on fresh air and sunlight. But Halle, who has inactive TB, is unhappy at school, where classmates shun her because of her mother's disease, and miserable living with her father, who reacts to misfortune with anger. Increasingly distressed, she runs away, and soon she, too, is living at the sanatorium. There she befriends staff members, her roommates, and other children, but her real goal is to do whatever she can and take whatever risks she must to help Mama recover. Modeled after a socially enlightened sanatorium that treated an uncommonly diverse group of patients for the time in upstate New York, the setting is unusual and well described, from the architecture to the kids' camaraderie to conversations with the on-site beekeeper. Wendell's engaging, straightforward narrative makes the story highly accessible, and her portrayal of Halle will resonate with many readers. A satisfying first novel.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books It's 1935 in Western New York, and Hallelujah Grace Newton, known as Halle to friends and called Glory by her parents, lives a normal life, playing paper dolls with her best friend Thelma, helping Mama with chores, and bristling at Papa's harsh criticisms. When Mama starts coughing up blood, the family suspects that she has tuberculosis and admits her to J. N. Adam Hospital, a sanatorium where heliotherapy is presumed to help cure the deadly sickness. In addition to her worries about losing her mom, Halle feels shunned by the kids at school who call her a "filthy-lunger" and fear that she will spread TB, despite being cleared by the doctor to go to classes. Fed up with Papa's irritability and desperate to see Mama, Halle sets off to walk many miles to the sanatorium while Papa is at work, until she feverishly collapses and wakes up to find herself being treated in the hospital. Wendell's historical novel skillfully depicts the lived experiences of those affected by TB, and while most readers will have only fleeting familiarity with that disease, apt descriptions of anxiety around infectiousness, symptoms, and the uncertainty of recovery will be familiar to kids who experienced the COVID-19 pandemic. Beyond its timeliness, this story fits engaging plotlines into a trim page count, as Halle learns more about the active and dormant statuses of TB, endures the startling death of a friend, navigates a softening in her tense relationship with Papa, and persistently investigates why her mother's recovery is slower than expected. An author's note establishes the ways in which this story is rooted in historical fact. Readers may select this title seeking information about TB, but they'll stay for the sweet-as-honey cast of characters. KF COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 10-year-old becomes a patient at a tuberculosis sanitarium in 1935 New York. Halle's world is transformed when Mama begins coughing up blood one afternoon. Halle and Papa take her to the J.N. Adam Hospital in western New York, a 20-mile drive from their home. The sanitarium is stately and impressive, and, as their local doctor has pointed out, it welcomes everyone, regardless of race or socioeconomic status. But at home, Papa becomes short-tempered and remote. Wrapped up in his own worries, he seems oblivious to Halle's unhappiness. At school, Halle is shunned by classmates afraid of the disease. When Halle sets off on foot to get to her mother, she's stricken with sickness and becomes a patient at the hospital. Eventually Halle is placed in a dorm room with three other girls: Flossie, whose mother is a nurse at the hospital; Vivian, whose delicate paleness Halle finds striking; and Rita, an older girl whose well-off parents are uncomfortable around Flossie, who is Black (most characters are cued white). The book takes place nearly a decade before the use of antibiotics for TB, when treatment focused on fresh air and sunlight. Descriptions of the hospital's open-air porches and daily routines are smoothly incorporated, and Halle's fears for her own health and longing for her mother are relatable. A vivid work of historical fiction that explores how infectious disease can intersect with daily life. (author's note) (Historical fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Wendell's well-constructed historical debut, set in 1930s Upstate New York, chronicles six months of dramatic changes in fifth grader Hallelujah "Halle" Grace Newton's life as she and her family navigate the tuberculosis epidemic. When Halle's mother, whom Halle considers as her loving, steadfast lodestar, unlike her father, who always seems angry with her; contracts tuberculosis and is admitted to a sanatorium 20 miles away, Halle's life becomes a misery. She and her father test positive for the disease but remain asymptomatic; still, her schoolmates shun her. Her ill-conceived secret plan to walk to the sanatorium to be with her mother hastens Halle's budding case of pneumonia, resulting in her admittance as a patient, too. As Halle recovers, she bonds with other children in the ward, all of them undergoing "sun curing or air curing" treatments, but still pines for her mother, whose health is not improving. Via unflinching depictions of tragedy and strife, richly rendered period detail, and emotionally honest interpretations of parent-child relationships, Wendell builds satisfying suspense as Halle breaks facility rules to help her mother recover and struggles to win her father's affection. Historical notes conclude. Halle is white; supporting characters are racially diverse. Ages 8: 12. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--It's 1935, and Halle's life is nearly perfect. She has a best friend, Thelma, and they are perfectly matched. Her momma makes the best paper dolls and wants her to stay young, even though Papa believes Halle should help around the house more. The only not-perfect thing is her relationship with her father, who is always angry with her though they used to be so close. Then, momma falls ill. Momma, Halle's champion and protector from Papa's angry words, is taken to a treatment center to recover. Halle is left alone with her emotionally distant and demanding father who expects her to manage the home and care for him. Overcome with longing for her mother, Halle decides to walk to the treatment center to see her. She becomes quite ill en route and ends up convalescing in the same treatment center. During her recovery is when Halle learns the true meaning of friendship, family, and belonging. This historical fiction novel about the tuberculosis epidemic will resonate with today's readers. They will understand Halle's turmoil about growing up quickly, and in such a dramatic manner. The recent pandemic will connect readers to Halle's fears about community illness and her own battle. Many will also feel the pain Halle is as she misses her parent while worrying greatly about her health. VERDICT A coming-of-age story set in a historical time period that will appeal to many readers.--Jennifer Seebauer Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness A girl and her family live through a tuberculosis outbreak in this empathetic, hopeful middle-grade novel set in 1930s upstate New York.

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2366357 Not the Worst Friend in the World (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Anne Rellihan It's the thirty-fourth day of sixth grade at Our Lady of Perpetual Help Catholic School in Missouri, and eleven-year-old Lou wishes she could rewind time. Lou wants to go back to the ninth day of sixth grade-the day before she fought with her best friend	1	$18.99

Francie and said the terrible, horrible things she can't unsay. Or better yet, she would go back to fifth grade when Francie was still the Old Francie. Then the new girl, Cece Clark-Duncan, passes Lou a mysterious note. It says she was kidnapped. (!) If Lou can help Cece, maybe she can prove she's not the world's worst friend.

978-0-8234-5479-2 Holiday House ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review Lou and Francie have been best friends since kindergarten, but now, six years in, Lou senses that Francie is pulling away. Lou reacts harshly, saying hurtful things that she immediately regretted. Even several weeks afterward, she doesn't know how to mend their friendship. So when 11-year-old Cece, the new girl in their classroom, confides that she was kidnapped by her father and asks for help finding her mother, Lou tries to be the best possible friend: kind, smart, and supportive of Cece's ideas. But when those ideas include consulting an astrologer and taking a train alone to Kansas City, Lou's perspective shifts, leaving her torn between her fears of disappointing her friend and her realization that Cece needs far more help than she can give. In her first novel, Rellihan creates an appealing narrator in Lou, who carries a notebook like her literary heroine, Harriet the Spy, and bears a heavy burden of guilt for her cruel words to Francie. Grounded in everyday details of her life in her home, school, and church, Lou's narrative becomes increasingly involving as she hunts for clues, attempts to evaluate people, debates with herself, and tries to do the right thing. An engaging story told from a convincingly tween-age perspective. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In this pitch-perfect middle-grade novel, Lou (short for Louise) copes with her deep shame over some unkind words she said in anger to Francie, her (now former) best friend. Lou can hardly believe that new-kid Cece wants to be friends, but she's intrigued by the girl's conviction about having been kidnapped by her father. Lou's first-person narration is punctuated with her notebook entries trying to sleuth out if Cece is correct and with flashbacks documenting her friendship with Francie, from kindergarten to "The Tenth Day of Sixth Grade" -- the day everything changed. Parallels with Harriet the Spy are spelled out, so what happens to that notebook and the emotional ramifications that follow are no surprise. Lou's tart perceptions of her Catholic school, her family (her white mother, Black stepfather, and two young siblings), and the emotional dynamics of sixth grade are sharply observant, as is her journey to understanding that people change. Other themes include Cece's keen interest in astrology (and insistence on interviewing a local reader for a "Christ Is Alive!" school project) and Francie's mother's depression; the depiction of the hot and humid Missouri setting is another strength. The mystery and plentiful conversation help keep the momentum going all the way to the end. Susan Dove Lempke(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Louise Bennett gets a second chance to not be a terrible friend in this debut novel. Just over three weeks ago, at the start of sixth grade at Our Lady of Perpetual Help, a Catholic school in Mayfield, Missouri, Lou said "terrible, horrible things" to Francie Fitzpatrick, her best friend since kindergarten. Now she's trying to figure out how to get Francie to talk to her again. When new classmate Cece Clark-Duncan passes Lou a note, it sparks a friendship and a big mystery. Cece believes she's been kidnapped by her dad, and she wants Lou--a Harriet the Spy fan who's always writing in her notebook--to help find her mom, whom she's sure must be looking for her. Lou is desperate to be a good friend this time and not spill secrets, but as she pieces together the truth, the right thing to do becomes less clear. Flashbacks are interspersed, highlighting Lou and Francie's history and leading to the reveal of what tore them apart. This story takes on weighty topics from imperfect parents to faith and belief and presents them with such an empathetic yet light, matter-of-fact touch that they feel completely realistic, while still allowing for the friendships to take center stage. Lou's first-person narration is pitch-perfect and endearing, and the small-town setting shines with authenticity. The leads are cued white. The mystery will reel readers in, while the emotions and relationships make this a book to savor. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old Louise Bennett has been struggling with overwhelming guilt ever since she blurted out "terrible, horrible things" that ended her friendship with Francie Fitzpatrick. Lou is brainstorming ways to win Francie back when new girl Cece Clark-Duncan asks Lou for assistance in unraveling a mystery. Though Lou feels that she's "not the kind of friend you should trust with your secrets," she sees helping Cece as a chance to redeem herself. Cece, who believes that she has been kidnapped by her father, is convinced that Lou's propensity to record observations in her notebook à la Harriet the Spy will help her contact her mother. As the pair investigate, Lou realizes that Cece's predicament might not be what it seems, and she struggles with the possibility that the truth might hurt her new friend. Occasional flashback chapters depict Francie and Lou's friendship and provide context to their falling out, which occurs before the book's start. While the dual mysteries of the friendship breakup and Cece's possible abduction don't fully cohere, debut author Rellihan adeptly renders Lou's pain from her broken friendship. Main characters cue as white. Ages 8-12. Agent: Elizabeth Bennett, Transatlantic Literary. (Feb.) Copyright 2023 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--Eleven-year old Lou Bennett has been adrift since the 10th day of sixth grade, when a fight with her best friend Francie left her an outcast at Our Lady of Perpetual Help Catholic School. That all changes when the new girl, Cece Clark-Duncan, passes Lou a cryptic note asking to meet. Cece is convinced there's something sinister behind her family's sudden arrival in town and her mother's mysterious absence. Noticing that Lou keeps a Harriet the Spy-inspired notebook full of observations, Cece enlists her help tracking down her mother. With Cece, Lou sees a chance to redo her mistakes with Francie and prove that she can be a trustworthy friend. But Lou soon realizes that Cece's situation may be more complicated than anticipated, and their new relationship might not survive the truth. Flashbacks to Lou and Francie's bond are peppered throughout, slowly building up to the terrible fight that torpedoed their friendship. While the two mysteries lean toward the predictable, there's enough tension to keep readers turning the pages. There are no clear heroes and villains here. Just characters who are realistically flawed, their shortcomings lovingly rendered, and the turmoil of sixth grade friendship empathetically depicted. VERDICT A highly recommended story about friendship, family, and growing pains.--Alia Shields Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2368359 Deadly Daylight (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Ash Harrier

While the kids at school taunt her and call her "Alice in Zombieland," Alice England finds refuge at her father's funeral home, where the dead tell her stories. When she "meets" George Devenish, a man who died of a rare sunlight allergy, Alice knows George was murdered. As a determined Alice investigates, she is surprised to find Violet and Cal become more than just suspects, but allies-maybe even friends. However, Alice soon finds navigating her first real friendships might be harder than solving a murder.

978-0-8234-5562-1 Holiday House ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 In this first book in the Alice England mystery series, readers meet precocious Alice, who has a very peculiar existence for a 12-year-old: she lives in a funeral home that's been in her family for generations. Her father, the embalmer, lets her take charge of the cosmetic aspects of corpses, and her close work with the deceased and a slight limp have made her an outcast at school. Another outsider, Violet Devenish, wears gloves and a veil to school because she suffers from a severe allergy to UV light. Though initially at odds, Violet and Alice slowly become friends. When Violet's uncle dies under mysterious circumstances, Alice suspects foul play, and she convinces Violet to help her investigate. Harrier has crafted an intriguing mystery with a clever resolution, and a slight supernatural element to the plot adds to the engaging atmosphere. As Alice becomes a formidable antagonist against ridiculous adults, both she and Violet grow in emotional maturity, and while this mystery concludes satisfyingly, there's plenty of room for more stories in subsequent series installments. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An Australian girl who works in a funeral home hopes to solve a murder. Eighth grader Alice, who has muscular atrophy of one leg, loves to help out at her family's business, Tranquility Funerals. She assists with aesthetic services--"the beautification of the corpse"--and she's perplexed that anyone finds that odd. Alice also has a secret ability: Sometimes a body's accessories are "resonant," and they tell her a story about the owner's previous life. It's unsurprising that Alice has no friends. While she's perfectly happy being friendless, she's equally unbothered when a protective teacher matches her up with bullying victim Violet, who has a rare and extremely dangerous sunlight allergy called solar urticaria. Soon after, Violet's uncle George is found dead on the pier where he worked, and Alice has a resonant moment while helping to prepare his body. She's convinced he was murdered and ropes Violet in to her investigation. There are so many suspects! Was it George's widow, the rough teens who gather under the pier, the overwrought security guard, the sender of an anonymous note, or the terrifying celebrity allergist? Alice possesses a precocious vocabulary, tends toward pedantry, is obsessive to an extent that annoys her new friend, and struggles with empathy and tact ("Tact meant concealing your curiosity"). But they do make an excellent team, Alice finds she appreciates having Violet in her life, and readers will have fun getting to know them. Most characters read white. A series opener that introduces enjoyably quirky tween detectives. (Mystery. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Australian author Harrier imbues a classic whodunit with poetic melancholy in this haunting debut. Twelve-year-old Alice England, who has muscular atrophy in her leg due to complications during birth that also killed her twin sister, lives alone with her father in a seaside town and helps tend her family's funeral home. Shunned and unkindly dubbed "Alice in Zombieland" by her classmates both for her limp and her father's profession, Alice is friendless until she meets Violet Devenish, a fellow student who is deathly allergic to light and wears a black veil to protect herself from the sun. Harrier deliberately unspools the jam-packed plot at an unhurried pace, even when Violet's beloved uncle George; who shares Violet's allergy; is found dead of light exposure. Analytical Alice is immediately suspicious, thanks to the insight granted by her supernatural ability to "read the resonance" of objects belonging to the deceased, and her preoccupation with uncovering George's murderer soon puts her at odds with the town, the insular Devenish clan, and eventually Violet herself. While Alice's diversions occasionally slacken the tension, offbeat characters and lyrical writing sustain a thoroughly clever and engrossing riff on the murder mystery formula. Ages 9: 12. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6—Alice, almost 13, loves dinosaurs, gathering (but not collecting) items from the beach, and helping her father prepare corpses at the funeral home where they live and work. What truly sets Alice apart is her ability to connect with the memories of the departed through objects she calls "resonant." This gift comes in handy when her new friend Violet's uncle dies in a series of "unfortunate accidents" that Alice suspects was ultimately murder. Violet and her family share a life-threatening allergy to sunlight, acting as the central force of the plot. Alice uses her curiosity and ability to read people to solve the mystery with the help of her friends Violet and Cal. While the story does not shy away from morbid subjects, Alice's matter-of-fact nature and inability to be anything other than her authentic self balance the macabre plot. The side characters are quirky and lovable, adding a layer to the story as Alice learns how important yet difficult friendship can be. The mystery itself is satisfying, with plenty of twists to keep readers guessing until the end, but also enough hints being dropped for would-be detectives to try to solve it themselves. Alice is presented as light-skinned with red hair, and Violet is depicted with very pale skin and blond hair. VERDICT Simultaneously wholesome and somewhat ghoulish, this murder mystery is fun for children seeking an eccentric detective novel.—Nicolette Pavain

#2290668 Dogs of the Deadlands (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Anthony McGowan

As humans fled the nuclear disaster, they were forced to leave their pets behind. Without people, nature began to return to the woods surrounding the power plant—lynx, bear, and wolves. But the overgrown forest is no place for dogs. Can Zoya, and her pups Misha and Luka, learn to survive in the deadlands? And will Zoya ever find her way home to her beloved owner?

978-0-86154-319-9 Oneworld Publications ©2022 5-1/4 x 8 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Channeling Richard Adams, McGowan throws down a doozy of a historical novel that's more gritty nature program than Homeward Bound adventure—though threads of the latter do subtly find their way into this survival tale. Set in Pripyat, Ukraine, on the eve of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, the story explores the very real fact that people evacuating the city were forced to leave their pets behind, some of which survived by turning feral. Here, Zoya—a fluffy Samoyed puppy with a few drops of wolf in her blood—manages to stay alive and eventually have pups of her own: Misha and Bratan. These brothers rapidly become the focal point of the narrative, which tracks the dogs' harsh life in the woods surrounding the disaster zone, occasionally flashing to the humans who will play small but important roles in the dogs' survival. Readers will forge connections with the animal characters as they engage in adrenalin-pumping confrontations with wildlife; death and brutal injury are unavoidable, but Misha and Bratan also find meaningful versions of home and family among other disaster survivors. Haunting and riveting.

#2350426 Brazilian Culture Exchange (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Geiszel Godoy

Mori and his family went on a fun journey to Rio de Janeiro. They traveled many historical sites to learn about the rich history and culture of Brazil. This book offers readers valuable knowledge about the largest African Diaspora in the world, Brazil.

978-0-9994734-9-8 Black Sands Entertainment ©2023 6 x 9 70 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 920

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$20.00

#2349493 Hidden Truths (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Elly Swartz

Dani and Eric have been best friends since Dani moved next door in second grade. They bond over donuts, comic books, and camping on the Cape. Until one summer when everything changes. Did Eric cause the accident that leaves Dani unable to do the one thing in the world she most cares about?

978-0-593-48366-4 Delacorte Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 600

Quantity
1 Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Trust and doughnuts get two longtime besties over a deep rift in the wake of a traumatic accident. Dani lives and breathes baseball—but after achieving the ultimate triumph of making it onto an otherwise all-boy middle school team, a camper explosion leaves her with a broken leg, a concussion, and serious nerve damage. Her best friend, Eric, dragged her to safety, but he is tortured by guilt because, having a famously unreliable memory, he wonders if he forgot to turn the stove off. Was this disaster on their annual camping trip all his fault? Swartz skillfully tracks several emotional arcs in her two sixth graders through their alternating voices as Eric's eventual agonized confession creates a break that drives both well-realized protagonists to fasten onto (and be disappointed by) new friends before realizing their mistake and seeking to mend fences. Eric turns out to be better at this than his tough-minded but inarticulate friend. His MO involves talks with God and bringing doughnuts to social encounters. Dani, her all-consuming determination to heal fast enough to rejoin the team that season only partially dimmed by setbacks, has guilt of her own to overcome for failing to meet him halfway. Sensitive readers will understand what neurodivergent Eric means when he declares "I see stuff differently" as a superpower. The cast reads white; Eric is cued Jewish. A warm testament to the healing power of mutual respect--and doughnuts. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--Dani and Eric have been best friends and neighbors since the second grade. Dani has been training hard to make the boys' baseball team. When she finally does, she is ecstatic because she lives for baseball. Eric is into donuts, superheroes, and hanging out with Dani, while always being supportive of her love for baseball. As sixth grade approaches, their friendship changes abruptly when an accident leaves Dani injured, unable to play her favorite sport, and Eric wracked with guilt. Dani and Eric turn away from each other, and new friendships are developed that will test the bond they have formed, forcing them to question their personal motivations and loyalties. Middle grade readers will understand the issues troubling Dani and Eric as they struggle to find their footing within the newer friendships. Swartz includes socially relevant plot points many middle schoolers are dealing with, including honesty, bullying, peer pressure, and responsible social media use as well as a message about using one's voice to make change in society. VERDICT Swartz's latest is realistic fiction at its best. A solid story with a strong positive message about friendship, trust, and tenacity that will fit nicely into all collections.--Kim Gardner Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2332637 Midnight at the Houdini (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Delilah S. Dawson

Life has gone according to plan for Anna--she stays in the background, letting her sister, Emily, shine in the spotlight. But on Emily's wedding night, Anna learns that her sister is moving away, abandoning her--and all their shared dreams. Devastated, Anna leaves the reception in the middle of a raging storm, taking shelter in a hotel she's never seen before: the Houdini.

978-0-593-48679-5 Delacorte Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews To escape the clutches of a magical hotel, a Las Vegas teen must uncover its mysterious origins--or be forced to reside there forever. Sixteen-year-old Anna Alonso just planned the perfect wedding for her older sister, Emily. But when the girls' dad surprises Emily and her new husband with a condo in Manhattan as a wedding present, organized Anna, always prepared, is devastated; she'd planned on having the new couple nearby. To make matters worse, a tornado watch is issued as Anna, her dad, and his two business associates leave the wedding in their limo. Battered by the increasingly dangerous weather, they reluctantly head to the Houdini, the nearest of the hotels they own. When a telephone pole falls on the limo, trapping her dad and friends inside, Anna seeks help in the Houdini, but it's strangely deserted and the doors are locked, so she can't get out. Heading deeper into the hotel, she meets a resident boy named Max who offers to help--but can she trust him? Readers familiar with Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and The Tempest will notice the influences from both works, and fans of contemporary fantasy will be drawn into the magical world explored in this story that is full of twists and turns. Lush details, from descriptions of food and drink to the hotel's furnishings, will engross readers: While Anna is trying to leave the Houdini, readers might not want to. Most characters are cued white. Surreal and mysterious; a wild ride. (Fantasy. 12-17) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A teen must escape from a magical hotel or be trapped forever in this insightful mystery romance by Dawson (Camp Scare). Sixteen-year-old Anna, who lives in Las Vegas, is relieved when her older sister's wedding, which she had been planning, goes off without a hitch. Upon Anna's departure, however, a tornado sees her seeking shelter in one of her business-owning father's first hotels, a magic-themed casino called the Houdini. Once she arrives, nothing is as it seems: it's devoid of staff, and secret passages open and close. Anna is immediately enraptured by handsome, enigmatic teenage Max, who was raised in the Houdini with only his mother and ghostly guests for company, and who's spent years dreaming about a girl who looks exactly like Anna. Once she's in front of him, however, he must reconcile his dreams with reality, and help find her a way out of the hotel before it's too late. Employing evocative prose teeming with literary and pop culture nods and myriad enchanted elements, Dawson presents a dreamlike adventure driven by a fierce and vulnerable protagonist struggling with issues of self-reliance and forgiveness. Ages 12: up. Agent: Stacia Decker, Dunow, Carlson & Lerner Literary. (Sept.)

#2288318 Billion Dollar Girl (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Megan Shull

After a visit from Social Services goes horribly wrong, longing for security, River sets off on the run. Soon, a case of mistaken identity gives River a chance to live a life that she had never even dreamed. But, when her newfound safety is shattered, River discovers, against all odds—one in 307 million, to be exact—that life's true jackpot isn't anything that it seems.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

978-0-593-52457-2 Razorbill ©2022 416 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 670

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews changing summer and brighter future. Near the end of seventh grade, River has a terrible day. Her best friend, mi, dumps her because of their socio-economic differences: Sunny, River's single mom, is a bar waitress who often works nights, and River can't afford to pay her way when she's with Emi's wealthy family. Then Principal Martinez, worried about River's frequent absences, makes a home visit—but unreliable Sunny is a no-show. Fed up, River runs away. Although Sunny never discusses her family, she's kept a letter sent from Great Bear Island, so River heads there. By unbelievable chance, when she arrives, she's mistaken for Liv, a high school student who had accepted then rejected, a job at the Great Bear Lodge run by Sunny's sister, Jemma. To give herself time to assess her newfound family, River assumes Liv's identity, saying she changed her mind about working there. No sooner has River come to love her relatives, their Norwegian and Tsimshian heritage, and the island, than Sunny shows up to drag her home. All seems lost until a lottery ticket given to River by a stranger wins! Descriptions of island life are captivating, and likable River narrates with spirit and honesty. Wishful thinkers will buy into her story despite the many times they must suspend disbelief, including the unconvincing change in Sunny after the windfall. Names cue some diversity in the cast. Implausible but dreamy. (Fiction. 10-14)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Thirteen-year-old River Ryland's life "has pretty much been chaos from day one"; her mother Sunny works late as a waitress and goes out on the weekends, and their trailer often lacks basic necessities. After a friend distances herself from River ("You always need rides. You never have any money"), the teen finds an eviction notice on the trailer's front door, and a visit from the assistant principal results in the authorities being called. Taking matters into her own hands, River runs away, heading north from her Seattle-area home to Great Bear, a remote island in the fjords, where the maternal aunt she's never met runs a lodge with few amenities. Posing as a 16-year-old summer worker, River gets to know her Norwegian and Tsimshian family's history, and develops a deep connection to the spectacular nature around her. After her mother shows up to take her home, a sudden reversal of fortune offers River the chance to decide whom she is and where she belongs. Through River's candid voice, Shull (Bounce) intersperses sometimes unbelievable plot twists with languorous descriptions of the natural world, organically exploring themes of environmentalism and human connection. Ages 10: 14. (Sept.)

#2350433 Thin Air (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kellie M. Parker

Seventeen-year-old boarding school student Emily Walters is selected for an opportunity of a lifetime—she'll compete abroad for a cash prize that will cover not only tuition to the college of her choice, but will lift her mother and her out of poverty. Between keeping an eye on her best friend's flirty boyfriend and hiding her own dark secrets, she's not sure how she'll survive the contest, much less the flight. Especially when people start dying. As loyalties shift and secrets are revealed, Emily must figure out who to trust, and who's trying to kill them all, before she becomes the next victim.

978-0-593-52600-2 Razorbill ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile 770

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 9-12 Horror, the ugly side of competitiveness, and palpable fear permeate Parker's claustrophobic thriller. The book's locked-room mystery style puts readers in the middle of the dangerous drama that unfolds on a flight to Paris. Seventeen-year-old Emily Walters is eager to be on the flight, since it's taking her and 11 other teens to a competition for a massive cash prize that will more than cover four-years' tuition at any college they choose. Readers will feel and root for Emily, as they learn about her personal struggles and how her mother doesn't have the money to provide for her. Winning would completely change Emily's future. The story becomes increasingly unsettling as the 12 teens turn sneaky and violent on the flight, desperately trying to eliminate their fellow competitors for the prize. The read is truly original, making the most of its inescapable airplane setting. Filled with twists and dread, this novel will thrill those curious about the dark side of human nature and what it means to be a survivor. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A group of teens on a private jet are slowly picked off by a mysterious killer who seems to know all their secrets. Emily has just completed her junior year at an exclusive boarding school where she's on a need-based scholarship. Among other things, she's been hiding the fact that her mother blew their savings on an MLM scheme and is living in her car following the loss of their house. Fortunately, Emily managed to get a scholarship from a charitable foundation that will allow her to escape to Paris for two weeks over the summer. The unusual program takes 12 finalists from hundreds of boarding school applicants and pits them against one another as they compete in challenges related to "character, intelligence, leadership skills, teamwork, and talent." The kicker? It all begins as soon as they're in the air. Emily's first-person narration of this elaborate setup establishes her as a sympathetic and flawed protagonist. The initial chapter is a quick, interest-piquing vignette set seven hours into the chaotic flight, and it quickly sets the taut line of tension that's maintained throughout, with each chapter opening with a time stamp marking the plane's progress across the Atlantic. The fast pace will keep readers engaged, particularly fans of locked-room mysteries, although the romantic subplot feels a bit formulaic. Emily is cued white; secondary characters show some racial diversity. A fun page-turner. (Thriller. 13-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A dozen high schoolers are traveling to Paris aboard a private plane when, a few hours into the flight, teens begin turning up dead. The passengers are all students handpicked from elite schools across the country, each participating in an academic competition for a four-year, all-expenses-paid scholarship to an Ivy League college and a postgraduate mentorship. This would be life-changing for Emily Walters, who attends a boarding school in Connecticut on a needs-based scholarship; since her father stopped paying child support, Emily lives in the family Subaru with her unemployed mother when she's not at school. On the plane, Taylor, a student from Boston, is targeted via her nut allergy; she's saved with an EpiPen, but Paige from North Carolina isn't so lucky. It seems that someone is taking out the scholarship competitors one by one. And while Emily is desperate to obtain the prize, she must decide whether winning this deadly game is worth sacrificing everyone on board. Emily's empathetic first-person narration, rendered in assured prose, is a steadfast vehicle that drives readers from one suspenseful, if familiar, scare to the next. There are no snakes on this plane, but the dangers are real in this ticking-clock thriller by Parker. The cast is racially diverse. Ages 12: up. (Oct.)

#2330212 Together We Rot (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Skyla Arndt

Wil Greene's mom has been missing for over a year, and the police are ready to call the case closed—they claim she skipped town and you can't find a woman who wants to disappear. But she knows her mom wouldn't just leave, and she knows the family of her former best friend, Elwood Clarke, has something to do with it. Elwood has been counting down the days until his 18th birthday—in dread. Now on the run from a family that wants him dead, he turns to the only one who will believe him: Wil.

978-0-593-52627-9 Viking ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 680

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 9-12 Since Wil's mother went missing a year ago, her father has disappeared into addiction, and Wil has become consumed with the single-minded obsession of finding out what happened to her mom, alienating both the local police and her best friend, Elwood, in the process. The son of a powerful local religious leader, Elwood has always known that he will have to give his life over to the congregation when he turns 18, but as that birthday approaches, he begins to realize how literal that sacrifice might end up being. The dual-voiced narrative takes a while to pick up steam, but by the time our protagonists (re)join forces, a frightening and deeply rooted town secret has been revealed and a genuinely tense game of cat and mouse set in motion. As Wil and Elwood go up against a sinister and dangerous plan that has been generations in the making, readers will follow their personal and literal journeys with bated breath, making this debut novel a solid choice for fans of supernatural horror and gothic romance. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews When a religious cult threatens everything they know, former friends Wil's and Elwood's purposes collide. In the small Michigan town of Pine Point, 18-year-old Wilhelmina Greene's mom has been missing for a year, and everyone, including the local police, thinks she left voluntarily. Wil, on the other hand, is certain that her ex-best friend, Elwood; his father, local preacher Pastor Clarke; and Elwood's ultrareligious family and church are involved. Channeling her journalist mother's investigative skills, Wil refuses to give up, determined to find answers on her own. Meanwhile, 17-year-old Elwood has done his best to follow the path his parents have laid out for him even though it meant losing Wil's friendship. When he finds out that his parents have never truly loved him and in fact have been planning to sacrifice him for their cause, he flees, joining forces with Wil and their friends to find answers. Together, Wil and Elwood learn that everything they thought they knew was a lie, and they are in more danger than they could have imagined. Arndt's sparkling prose deftly explores the complicated nature of loyalty and religion against the lush background of the forests of the Upper Peninsula. The mythology of the town and its founders is compelling and convincing, setting up the history for the story at hand. Main characters are cued White. Haunting and spellbinding. (Horror. 13-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Former best friends Wilhelmina Green and Elwood Clarke must work together to save their small Michigan town from a terrifying religious cult in Arndt's spine-chilling debut. Teenage Wil's mother has been missing for over a year. Though local police insist that she skipped town, Wil is certain there's something sinister at play. Her solo investigation leads her to believe that the Garden of Adam, a religious organization run by her town's most influential family, has something to do with her mother's disappearance. Seventeen-year-old Elwood, meanwhile, has been doing his best to live up to his preacher father's expectations, especially knowing that he's expected to leave school at 18 and take up his father's mantle as the head of the Garden of Adam. But when Elwood discovers that his parents intend to sacrifice him to a mysterious entity in his town's surrounding woods, he flees. Wil agrees to hide him in exchange for help in proving that the Garden of Adam is responsible for her mother's vanishment. A meandering plot is buoyed by likable supporting characters, Wil and Elwood's snappy banter, and eerie, brooding atmosphere. Main characters read as white. Ages 12: up. (Aug.)

#2326186 Order of Things (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kaija Langley

Quantity 1 Unit Price $17.99

Novel in verse. Eleven-year-old April Jackson loves playing the drums, almost as much as she loves her best friend, Zee, a violin prodigy. They both dream of becoming professional musicians one day. When the unthinkable happens and Zee suddenly passes away, April is crushed by grief. Without Zee, nothing is the way it's supposed to be. April isn't sure how to move on from the awful feeling of being without Zee. Desperate to help Papa Zee, she decides to secretly deliver the mail he's been neglecting. But when on her route she discovers a classmate in trouble, she doesn't second guess what she knows is the right thing to do.

978-0-593-53090-0 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.9 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile NP

Reviews by: Booklist Eleven-year-old April's best friend (who, like her, is Black) is Zee, a boy who is a prodigy violinist. April herself is a wannabe drummer, taking lessons from Zee's father, Papa Zee. Life is good, but things begin to change when Zee faints one day at school for no discernable reason. Not long after, he experiences a frightening episode of rapid heartbeat but makes April promise not to tell anyone. She reluctantly agrees, but then the unthinkable happens: Zee suffers sudden cardiac arrest and dies. Suddenly, April's life is filled with change. Not only has she lost her best friend, but her single mama brings a date home: a woman whom April instantly dislikes. Then she learns a terrible secret about her tentative friend, a white classmate named Asa. Will she be able to keep Asa's secret after what happened with Zee? Langley has crafted a lovely, beautifully written, and well-plotted novel in verse, populated with memorable, empathetic characters who come alive on the page. Give her a standing O.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books April's Mama works the night shift for UPS, so the eleven-year-old girl lives in a quiet world of inverted sleep schedules, turned-off TVs, and definitely no drum sets. Luckily, April's best friend Zee's place serves as a second home, and there, sound is welcome. Zee, aspiring to be the first Black violinist to lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra, practices his scales; New Orleanian drummer Papa Zee cracks terrible puns; and when Mama wakes up, she brings over baked ham for a family dinner set to jazz music. When Zee gets into a new school to foster his musical talents, April decides she should also start taking her own dream-becoming a rockstar drummer, like Sheila E.-more seriously, beginning drum lessons with Papa Zee. April makes percussive progress but generally can't find a rhythm, missing Zee and unable to let anyone new in her life, when her world is entirely upended by Zee's sudden death. This novel-in-verse is a steady roll that powerfully builds, like a satisfying drum solo, and Langley creates a beautiful (if tragic) symphony out of the rearrangement of characters and dynamics following Zee's death, allowing for tender, heartrending expressions of intergenerational and found family caring in times of deep loss. April begins to see how she can make connections with and care for others in her community even in her grief, eventually helping a friend out of a domestic violence situation. Langley's final verses provide readers reassurance that ÒAll change leads to something different./ Different isn't always easy, nor is it always bad./ It's just different. And getting used to anything different takes time.Ó Fans of Kwame Alexander's emotionally charged and character-driven verse novels will have no problem dancing to the beat of this drum. The included author's note educates readers about sudden cardiac arrest. MC COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide In this compelling verse novel set in Boston, African American tweens Zee and April are best friends. Each lives with their single parent in apartments across the hall from each other -- narrator April with Chantelle, her army-veteran mom who works nights for UPS; and Zee with his dad, Papa Zee, a postal carrier. The four function like a family. A virtuoso violinist, Zee now attends an arts school, leaving April to face sixth grade without him. Though passionate about drumming, April lacks Zee's confidence and tenacity. After Zee faints at school, he refuses to rest, wanting desperately to perform the orchestra solo. When April finds out that Zee is secretly practicing, she agrees not to tell his dad. Meanwhile, April's mother has fallen in love with a female coworker, who is becoming more a part of their lives, despite April's resistance. A tragedy changes everything, and April feels responsible. Her grief interferes with her drumming, but music also helps her recover. Langley takes readers on an emotionally turbulent ride while highlighting characters' strengths and flaws. The protagonists' love of music breathes life into the plot and propels the action forward. An honest and poignant portrayal of loss and grief that affirms that time and a supportive community contribute to healing. (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In this compelling verse novel set in Boston, African American tweens Zee and April are best friends. Each lives with their single parent in apartments across the hall from each other -- narrator April with Chantelle, her army-veteran mom who works nights for UPS; and Zee with his dad, Papa Zee, a postal carrier. The four function like a family. A virtuoso violinist, Zee now attends an arts school, leaving April to face sixth grade without him. Though passionate about drumming, April lacks Zee's confidence and tenacity. After Zee faints at school, he refuses to rest, wanting desperately to perform the orchestra solo. When April finds out that Zee is secretly practicing, she agrees not to tell his dad. Meanwhile, April's mother has fallen in love with a female coworker, who is becoming more a part of their lives, despite April's resistance. A tragedy changes everything, and April feels responsible. Her grief interferes with her drumming, but music also helps her recover. Langley takes readers on an emotionally turbulent ride while highlighting characters' strengths and flaws. The protagonists' love of music breathes life into the plot and propels the action forward. An honest and poignant portrayal of loss and grief that affirms that time and a supportive community contribute to healing. Michelle H. Martin(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An 11-year-old girl suffers a devastating loss when her best friend suddenly dies. April and best friend Zee, both African American, live across the hall from each other in their Boston apartment building. Their tight unit is disrupted when gifted violinist Zee, who comes from a musical family, is admitted to a new STEAM charter school. April is happy for him but knows her school experience will change. Sure enough, she is paired with socially awkward Asa, who's shunned by the two other White girls in class. April asks Zee's dad, Papa Zee, to give her drumming lessons, fulfilling her own dreams. But there are difficult things too: Zee has some alarming health symptoms and swears April to secrecy, April's single mom is seeing a new woman, and Asa is behaving unusually. When Zee's next medical episode proves fatal, April's grief is compounded by her guilt over keeping quiet. Before long she's hiding something else, as she observes the extent of Papa Zee's depression. When she learns the truth about what Asa's family is going through, however, April realizes she has to share all she has been keeping inside. This well-crafted novel in verse is rich in detail and successfully conveys the depth of April's emotions. The characters are fully realized, and the themes of family, change, and grief are handled with sensitivity and care. A heart-rending narrative of friendship, family, and the path to healing. (author's note) (Verse fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Langley (When Langston Dances) explores communal grieving and found family in this middle grade debut, a layered novel in verse. With her "best and only true friend" Zee Ellis admitted to study violin at a Boston STEAM charter school, 11-year-old April Jackson enters sixth grade determined to fulfill her own musical dreams by taking drum lessons with Zee's dad. Music and her deepening bond with Papa Zee ground April as she clashes with a nosy, talkative classmate, takes in her queer single mom's new romance, and worries about increasingly distant Zee, who experiences a possibly stress-induced health scare. After April reluctantly promises to keep Zee's cardiac symptoms secret, his sudden death leaves her feeling regretful and "dreaming solo," and when Papa Zee's grief reaches new heights, April must reach out to her community to compose her new normal. Declarative lines paint a spare picture of interpersonal bonds and grief, while April's resilience and desire to uplift loved ones guides a narrative that's invested in themes of loss, ethics, and empathy. Most characters cue as Black. An author's note provides background on sudden cardiac arrest. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Charlotte Sheedy, Charlotte Sheedy Literary. (June) Reviews by: School Library Journal nces) deftly twines music, poetry, family, and friendship in her middle grade debut in verse. Eleven year-old April is a budding percussionist under the tutelage of neighbor and found family Papa Zee. When April's best friend Zee, Papa Zee's son and a violin prodigy, passes away unexpectedly, her life is thrown into chaos. Her mother is dating a woman from work and things are getting serious. Papa Zee struggles to maintain his job through his grief. At school, April's fledgling friend Asa is mysteriously unwell and frequently absent. As April navigates the tumult, she wrestles with a secret which might have saved Zee's life. Ultimately, an opportunity to use her voice to save another friend helps April find resolution. Langley's verse is both approachable and engaging. Despite a relatively low word count, characters, setting, and plot are richly developed. Readers coming for the music will stay for the feels; readers looking for a good cry may find themselves seeking out more about April's pantheon of "drum mavens." Characters are presumed cisgender; Mama is queer. April and most other characters are Black; Asa and her family are white. Papa Zee and April's mama are both single parents when the book begins. VERDICT A strong purchase for most collections and an easy recommendation for a variety of readers.--Taylor Worley Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2348830 Bittersweet in the Hollow (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kate Pearsall

In rural Caball Hollow, surrounded by the vast National Forest, the James women serve up more than fried green tomatoes at the Harvest Moon diner, where the family recipes are not the only secrets. Like her sisters, Linden was born with an unusual ability. She can taste what others are feeling, but this so-called gift soured her relationship with the vexingly attractive Cole Spencer one fateful night a year ago . . . A night when Linden vanished into the depths of the Forest and returned with no memories of what happened, just a litany of questions--and a haze of nightmares that suggest there's more to her story than simply getting lost.

978-0-593-53102-0 Putnam Pub Group ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 384 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile 870

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 9-12 The James women have been purveyors of charms and folk magic for generations, though, by day, they run a respectable diner in their West Virginia town of Cabell Hollow. Linden, 17, is one of four sisters who helps their mom and gran at the Harvest Moon, where baking soothes Linden's lingering anxieties from a traumatic incident the previous summer--if only she could remember what happened in the forest that night. In her well-crafted debut, Pearsall intertwines local lore about "the Moth-Winged Man" with James family history, Linden's inner turmoil, and a string of unexplained disappearances that include a decades-old cold case, Linden's experience the year before, and a murder. The closeness of the James family is lovely to observe, and a thread of romantic tension between Linden and an older boy is expertly teased out. Pearsall's authentic Appalachian setting is almost a character unto itself, and her subtle handling of the story's magic will enthrall fans of A. R. Capetta and Melissa Albert. Thoughtfully blending mystery, thriller, and folk horror, Pearsall proves herself to be an author to watch. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books On the night of last year's Moth Festival, then sixteen-year-old Linden James went missing in the deep forest that surrounds her small Appalachian town only to be discovered the next morning with no memory of what happened. The other Caball Hollow residents are convinced her disappearance has something to do with the Moth-Winged Man, a local legend—the James women are already known for their strangeness, after all, so their involvement with the supernatural wouldn't be surprising. Now, however, the body of another missing girl has been found, and Linden knows she must revive her memory to save the next girl from the Moth-Winged Man—or an all-too-human monster. Pearsall pulls on elements of Appalachian lore around Mothman but makes the creature and its origin uniquely her own, setting up Faustian deals and fateful tragedies that build tension and surely break hearts (both of characters and readers alike). The pace is impeccable, and if the ending suffers from the villain's over-explanation, the deliciously atmospheric journey to get there easily earns forgiveness. Mainstays of the supernatural genres are elevated by Linden's poignant narration, which captures both her discomfort with and pride in being a James woman as she figures out who she is outside her family, even as she maintains deep bonds with her sisters in particular. Pair this with Wallace's The Memory Trees (BCCB 09/17) or Sutherland's House of Hollow (BCCB 03/21) for an examination of how we are shaped by family legacy and lore long before we have a say in the matter. KQG

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Mystery and magic unfold in a West Virginian town surrounded by Appalachian forest. The James women are insular not by choice but because they are feared as well as loved by the small-town denizens who patronize their restaurant by day and purchase their magic by night. Narrator Linden, one of "four sisters born in as many years," can taste other people's emotions; the women in her family each have their own small but potent powers. But no magic can repair the fallout from Linden's disappearance last summer solstice. She went into the woods and tried to summon the local bogeyman called the Moth-Winged Man, only to vanish for a day and be found injured and with no memory of what had occurred. Her father has moved out, her nightmares won't stop, and suspicion trails her, especially when another girl disappears a year later. This multifaceted book successfully manages to be many things: a satisfying paranormal mystery, a family narrative examining the damage of secrets kept and the ways in which silence allows violence to grow, and a paean to the immense Appalachian forest and the small communities nestled between the trees. Luscious prose and a compelling setting make the book hard to put down as the mystery slowly and steadily unfolds over the course of just a few days. Main characters read white. Complex, well-realized, and engrossing. (Fantasy. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An empath is thrust into a supernatural murder mystery in this sensory-rich, genre-bending series opener set in the Appalachian Mountains. Every year, the town of Caball Hollow, W.Va., hosts the Moth Festival, a long-standing tradition celebrating a local cryptid called the Moth-Winged Man. A year ago, during the festival, rising high school senior Linden James disappeared into the nearby woods and resurfaced the next morning with no memories of her experience except for flashes of running through a dark forest and feeling overwhelming terror. On the anniversary of her life-altering vanishing, she discovers her former friend Dahlia dead in the same woods; rumors begin to percolate that not only is Dahlia's murder connected to the Moth-Winged Man, but also to both Linden's disappearance and a decades-old case of a missing child. Determined to find answers, Linden recruits her diner-owning sisters and their special gifts to uncover the truth. Via intimate first-person narration, debut author Pearsall balances paranormal thrills and the horrors of the central mystery to craft a cottage-core-infused world replete with cozy domestic enchantments, a close-knit female cast, and a captivating romance. Characters default to white. Ages 12: up. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 9 Up—The James women are special; some people in Bittersweet Hollow, WV, even call them witches. The talent of Linden, the third of four sisters, is feeling and tasting people's emotions and the ability to influence people's feelings. The previous summer, she disappeared on Solstice when she and classmates gathered in the woods to call up the Moth-Winged Man, a local folk legend in their parts. She was found suffering from amnesia. A year later, Linden discovers her friend Dahlia's body in the woods and is determined to find her killer. Dahlia's case is tied to a young boy who went missing in the same area almost 20 years ago, and the Moth-Winged Man myth. The teen's investigation leads to her family being vilified, their business vandalized, and her life threatened. Throughout, she struggles with her relationship with Cole, the local golden boy, who seems to shun her since her disappearance. Aided by her three sisters and their supernatural talents, along with their Aunt Sissy's willingness to share family secrets, Linden slowly unravels where folklore meets reality and the sacrifices her family has made. The story flashes back and forth from the present to the night she went missing as she recovers more of her memories. The writing is tense and suspenseful with each new discovery bringing more questions. VERDICT A compelling story as the James women struggle to deal with their own secrets, and in the process, reveal some the darkest ones in town. A first purchase.—Tamara Saarinen

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2317329 Aniana Del Mar Jumps In (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Jasminne Mendez	1	$18.99
Aniana del Mar belongs in the water like a dolphin belongs to the sea. But she and Papi keep her swim practices and meets hidden from Mami, who has never recovered from losing someone she loves to the water years ago. Mami forbids her from returning to the water but Ani and her doctor believe that swimming along with medication will help Ani manage her disease. What follows is the journey of a girl who must grieve who she once was in order to rise like the tide and become the young woman she is meant to be.

978-0-593-53181-5 Dial Books ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile NP

Reviews by: Book Page Aniana del Mar knows how to keep a secret. At her papi's insistence, Ani keeps her swim meets and the medals she wins hidden from her mami, who fears the water after a hurricane destroyed her home and killed her brother. So when Ani's body starts to ache, her joints swelling and her limbs radiating with pain, it's not a difficult decision for Ani to keep it all a secret in order to continue swimming.

Reviews by: Booklist d live in the water for the rest of her life she would, but she and Papi have been keeping her swimming practices a secret from Mami. Her mother still hasn't healed from losing someone close to her many years ago, and she's afraid that the water will betray her again. When Ani experiences increasing joint pain to the point that she can no longer move, the secrets come spilling out. After receiving a diagnosis of juvenile idiopathic arthritis, she is forbidden from swimming. Ani starts to feel her happiness slowly drain from her body, but if she is ever to swim again, she must regain her strength both physically and mentally. Aniana del Mar Jumps In is a story of love, loss, and growth that explores how our actions can unintentionally harm those who we love, how we learn to heal from that pain, and how we grieve not only those who we've lost but the people we once were, as well as embracing who we are becoming.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books "Mendez's novel beautifully crafts a first-person narrative with concrete poetry, forming shapes of teardrops, sea creatures, and storms to capture the physical and emotional journey of Aniana's desire to return to the water and navigate her newly diagnosed disability. Stanzas with English and Spanish dialogue, repetition, and spacing visually add to the tension and distance Aniana experiences with her family and friends."

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Aniana (Ani) del Mar lives on the Gulf Coast in Galveston, Texas, and the pull of the ocean is in her blood. But she must keep her passion for swimming secret from her devout Dominican mother, who lost a twin brother to a hurricane and deeply fears the water. A loving father, a preschool-age sibling, and a steady best friend help Ani keep her balance -- most of the time. But when she begins to suffer pain and swelling and is diagnosed with juvenile idiopathic arthritis, she questions everything -- her gift for swimming, her family relationships, and her own identity. Incorporating some Spanish words and phrases, Mendez weaves together free-verse poetry, concrete poems, haiku, tanka, and even texting and dialogue poems to capture character voice and emotion and propel the story forward. She uses the shape and structure of the poem on the page to add weight to the text, as when "New Ani" offers a list of ways in which the character feels she has changed and has come to accept herself. The story moves quickly as Ani competes in swimming and keeps it secret, then bogs down a bit as she grapples with her illness, but the poetry keeps the plot afloat as we engage with Ani in her struggles. (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Aniana (Ani) del Mar lives on the Gulf Coast in Galveston, Texas, and the pull of the ocean is in her blood. But she must keep her passion for swimming secret from her devout Dominican mother, who lost a twin brother to a hurricane and deeply fears the water. A loving father, a preschool-age sibling, and a steady best friend help Ani keep her balance -- most of the time. But when she begins to suffer pain and swelling and is diagnosed with juvenile idiopathic arthritis, she questions everything -- her gift for swimming, her family relationships, and her own identity. Incorporating some Spanish words and phrases, Mendez weaves together free-verse poetry, concrete poems, haiku, tanka, and even texting and dialogue poems to capture character voice and emotion and propel the story forward. She uses the shape and structure of the poem on the page to add weight to the text, as when "New Ani" offers a list of ways in which the character feels she has changed and has come to accept herself. The story moves quickly as Ani competes in swimming and keeps it secret, then bogs down a bit as she grapples with her illness, but the poetry keeps the plot afloat as we engage with Ani in her struggles. Sylvia Vardell (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A talented Dominican American swimmer fights to keep doing what she loves. Twelve-year-old Aniana del Mar lives up to her name: Living on the island of Galveston, Texas, the water feels like home. But that's a secret she keeps with her easygoing Papi, who sneaks her to the YMCA for swim practice and meets. Mami discourages Ani from swimming; after witnessing her own brother's drowning during a hurricane, Mami is terrified of losing Ani and her 4-year-old brother, Matti, too. When Ani can no longer hide the joint swelling that plagues her when she overexerts herself, however, her secret's out. Mami, who belongs to a strict Christian church, is furious, insisting that Ani's juvenile idiopathic arthritis is God's punishment for lying. Though Ani's physical therapist endorses swimming, Mami bans Ani from the water she craves. As her family's bonds fray, Ani grapples with the challenges of invisible illness, including loss of bodily autonomy and others' lack of understanding. Incorporating concrete poems, haiku, and tanka, Ani's aching, determined verse narration weaves English and Spanish words into striking imagery as she navigates tumultuous emotions and her loving but stifling relationship with Mami. Mendez, also disabled and Dominican American, explores post-traumatic stress and its effects with both compassion and honesty, respecting Mami's trauma without diminishing the pain her overprotectiveness causes Ani. Religious belief is similarly represented with nuance. Supportive, diverse secondary characters add warmth. A painful yet hopeful exploration of family, trauma, faith, and healing. (author's note) (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In Galveston, Tex., 12-year-old Aniana del Mar loves to swim: "All I want/ is to/ slip/ slide/ drift/ glide." During daddy-daughter dates, she and Papi head to the YMCA for swim practice and meets, but the two keep these events secret from Mami, who still grieves losing "her brother/ her house and/ her village" as a child during Hurricane Georges, and regularly fears the worst for her family. But everything comes crashing down when Ani's occasional post-exercise aches and swelling intensify into chronic pain, "statue-stiff/ mornings and clumsy/ collapses," and a diagnosis of juvenile idiopathic arthritis. Religious Mami believes that God is punishing Ani for keeping secrets and lies with her father, and, in spite of the physical therapist's recommendation otherwise, bans all swimming. Ani meanwhile feels abandoned by Papi, who's frequently away working for the Coast Guard. Via myriad poetic forms and sensorial verse, Mendez viscerally details the emotional family tumult of grief, mistrust, and resentment alongside Ani's heartfelt quest to reunite with water. Back matter details poetic forms used and notes that Mendez, like Aniana, is Dominican American and lives with chronic illness and disability. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Stefanie Sanchez Von Borstel, Full Circle Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-9—Acclaimed Dominican American poet Mendez's novel in verse centers around the coming-of-age struggles of a Latinx tween pushing against the expectations of a strict (and loving) family, while also figuring out her identity as an athlete with chronic illness. Aniana and Papi keep a secret from conservative Mami—instead of attending church on weekdays, the pair go to the YMCA where Ani is excelling at swimming. When the Afro-Dominican girl can barely get out of bed because of pain in her body, their secret is out, and Aniana is diagnosed with juvenile idiopathic arthritis. Convinced it's a punishment from God for lying, Mami forbids her from swimming. When Papi is away because of his work with the Coast Guard, Ani begins to pull away from him, too. Mendez never passes judgment on Ani's parents. Her mother's fears come from the traumatic death of Mami's twin brother during a hurricane, and she found comfort in religion during a bout of postpartum depression. A near-tragedy finally unites them, and the realistic conclusion will satisfy readers. Multidimensional characters and the time-honored conflict between daughters and their mothers will ring true. Spanish and English are often used interchangeably in Ani's conversations with her parents, and details about the Dominican Republic further add authenticity to the work. Mendez uses concrete poems, haiku, and tanka throughout to narrate this accessible story of forgiveness. VERDICT The nuanced depiction of disability, intergenerational conflict, and family trauma make this a must-have for all middle grade shelves.—Shelley M. Diaz?

#2332436 Dreamatics (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Michelle Cuevas

The Lunarian is a magical theatre with a mind of its own, often redecorating on a whim or making it snow from the rafters. The theatre's troupe call themselves the Dreamatics, and together they grow sets from seeds, sew costumes that can change an actor's shape, and each night when a girl named Luna goes to sleep, they produce her spectacular dreams: dreams of memories, family, and her beloved dog, Murph.

978-0-593-53222-5 Rocky Pond Books ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 820

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Starred Review Where do weird and wonderful dreams come from while we sleep? In the case of 10-year-old Luna Grande, an entire internal theater acts as a staging ground for her dreams every evening, and it takes an extraordinary crew to get it right night after night as she slumbers. The nocturnal theater troupe, known as the Dreamatics, has all of the necessary players in place: versatile actors, a put-upon director, spectacular set designers, and creative costumers. The entire company watches Luna's waking hours spent with her doting dads and beloved dog via the daily newsreels that play in a special screening room, and a lowly stage assistant, Dormir, is particularly enraptured by Luna's life. When tragedy befalls the human household, the magical theater is taken over by a terrible troupe who only produce nightmares, and an already struggling Luna falls into deep depression. Dormir is determined to fight the intruders, reunite the Dreamatics, and give Luna the comforting dreams that she desperately needs to heal. The sensational story is endlessly inventive and incredibly compassionate, and the exquisite descriptions make ephemeral emotions and experiences feel tangible. Every chapter brings a new delightful discovery, and whimsy, puns, trauma, and loss live comfortably side by side within the pages. Tough topics are tackled with gentleness and humor, and readers will be loathe to leave the cozy confines of the otherworldly theater. A dream to read, in every sense. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews ork, dedication, and how dreams come to be. Ten-year-old Luna Grande lives with her fathers, Dad and Papa, and urph, the dog she adores. Each night she has vivid dreams that are brought to life by the Dreamatics, a theater troupe at the Lunarian Grand. T ere are incredible actors, the Unseen Playwright, the Forty Winks Orchestra, costume designer Tuck, and more--all working together to perform Lun 's dreams. They are a happy ensemble who delight in what they do and who love Luna and her family. But one day, when tragedy strikes in Lu a's waking world, her dreams are replaced by nightmares, and the Dreamatics are supplanted by Coco and the Bad Dreams. However, humble stagehe d Dormir is determined to save the theater and give Luna her dreams back. This witty, magical, and touching tale will inspire giggles of de ight, appreciation of the inner workings of a theater troupe, and wonder at the behind-the-scenes process of dream-making. At its core, this is a story of dedication, loyalty, love, and friendship that takes readers on a roller coaster of emotions and leaves them feeling warm and fuzzy: "Life is not a dress rehearsal....The curtains are up and you are on, so get out there and give it your best shot." Papa is cued Latine; Dad and Luna are racially ambiguous. A dreamy, imaginative, and vibrant story full of heart and wordplay. (cast list) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A mythical theater troupe known as the Dreamatics performs dreams for a sleeping child each night until tragedy strikes in the real world, in this evocative and inventive fantasy by Cuevas (The Care and Feeding of a Pet Black Hole). Dormir is a stagehand at the majestic Lunarian Grand Theatre, home to the Dreamatics. Dormir adores the job, which sometimes involves making sure the weather closet stays closed so that winter doesn't creep onto the stage unbidden. He especially loves helping the group perform the dreams of nearly 11-year-old Luna. But when Luna experiences sudden hardship in the waking world, her dreamscape; and the troupe's performance; undergoes a drastic change from fanciful visions to frightening nightmares. If Dormir hopes to set the theater back to rights and help Luna dream in peace once again, he must figure out how to reverse things. Irresistibly rendered worldbuilding and delightfully limned, seldom-described characters buoy serious interrogations on trauma, its effects on mental health, and the process of healing. By utilizing lush yet conversational prose, Cuevas addresses each difficult topic and lesson with sincerity and care, allowing ample space for introspective rumination alongside joy-filled antics. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Inside Out meets the chaos and challenges of stage theater in this highly imaginative world where dreams are productions. Behind the scenes stands the team to make it happen--the director, light crew, sound crew, and many more who make the "dreams" come to life. Luna's dreams are produced by the Dreamatic cast and crew in The Lunarian Grand, a magical theater with a twist of its own. Like anything in life or theater, something can easily throw the whole production out of balance. When Luna and her family suffer a devastating turn of events in the waking world, a new director comes in the form of "Bad Dreams." To keep things in order and make them right it's up to Dormir, the loyal stagehand, and the Dreamatics team to help Luna and keep The Lunarian alive. This whimsical and magical theater story is one where love, determination, and loyalty are woven throughout. Fans of happy tales and lively characters will fall in love with this inventive concept. VERDICT With a fresh take on the familiar concept of dreams, this theatrical book will be a showstopper for young readers.--BreAnn Weeks Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness The Dreamatics is a heartfelt, wonderfully imaginative middle-grade fantasy about the cast of the Lunarian Grand, an acting troupe that performs the nightly dreams of 10-year-old Luna Grande.

#2328990 West of the Sea (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Stephanie Willing

When her mom disappears from their small Texas town, paleontology-loving Haven is determined to find her. Her mom can take the shape of a human and, in the right environment, also turn into an amphibious creature known as a kitskara. And so she, her older sister Margie, and her new friend Rye set off on a road trip across Texas's Gulf Coast to her late grandparents' abandoned home, where they're sure her mom has disappeared to.along with plenty of family secrets.

978-0-593-46557-8 Viking ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.5 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Haven lives on a farm, loves old sci-fi movies, and just found out she can turn into a salamander cryptid with gills and a tail. Seeing the ghosts of prehistoric megafauna might not be so bad if her mother were around, but Mom hasn't been herself lately--and she went missing last night. Haven, her sister, and new-kid-in-town Rye "borrow" a food truck to find her. As Haven endeavors to accept and control her new abilities, she must also learn to accept what she cannot control about her mother's depression. Part road trip adventure, part family reckoning, Willing's debut ambitiously approaches loss, mental illness, identity, neurodivergence, and adolescence and successfully explores those topics with compassion and depth. Though Haven's supernatural abilities occasionally feel disconnected from deeper themes, the overall impact of her journey of discovery and forgiveness is satisfying. Haven's prehistoric encounters will appeal to paleontology fans, while authentic dialogue and introspective narration will appeal widely. Sincere characters, vivid descriptions, and inventive fantasy elements make this Texan twist on the selkie myth a fun and rewarding read. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Haven West doesn't understand why her mother is always disappearing -- either outside or into the bathroom -- or why she herself sees prehistoric creatures in the Texas desert that surrounds her home, but no one else can. She's also not sure why her older sister, Margie, is irritable all the time, although Margie's sensory processing disorder and the way she steps up to keep the household running might have something to do with it. Rye, whose family just moved in nearby, wants to be friends, and his support comes in handy as Haven starts to unravel the mysteries of her family, which bend toward the supernatural. When Mom goes missing for good, Haven, Margie, and Rye -- with the help of Margie's provisional driver's license and Rye's father's food truck -- set off on a trans-Texas road trip that leads to plenty of answers, both about Haven's family and about her own identity and powers. The tone is slightly whimsical, even as the book delves into serious topics, an effective blend that keeps the plot moving and doesn't let the drama become overwhelming. The characters are likable and authentic, and the resolution is satisfying. Sarah Rettger(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Amid literal and emotional droughts, two sisters must find their mother and themselves during a road trip. Eleven-year-old Texan Haven and her older sister, Margie, are connected in odd ways to magic by their Scottish heritage. Their maternal grandparents came from Orkney, and Margie and Mama share red hair and eyes that change color with their moods. Meanwhile, Haven has started seeing the ghosts of prehistoric animals whenever she touches fossils, which her mom has an uncanny knack for finding. Her mom has been depressed and distant since her parents died a year ago, and after Haven glimpses her looking frighteningly inhuman, Mama leaves in the middle of the night. Meanwhile, Haven discovers that whenever she comes into contact with salt water, she transforms into a kitskara, or scaly cryptid that can breathe underwater. To get answers and find Mama, Haven and Margie (who has her learner's permit) join new neighbor Rye, who volunteers his dad's coffee truck for the search. Black and Mexican Rye, who's upset that his parents moved them from Austin to the middle of nowhere, is up for an adventure. On their journey to the Gulf of Mexico, Haven's developing powers dovetail well with themes of preserving past love while making room for change. Though Haven's closeness with Rye feels rushed, the sometimes-contentious but overwhelmingly supportive sibling dynamic grounds this story about healing and growth. Intriguing mythology with a prehistoric twist and an endearing family focus. (Fiction. 9-13)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Willing's sparkling debut incorporates profound family dynamics, ghostly dinosaurs, a shape-shifting cryptid, and Celtic mythology, culminating in a suspenseful, innovative read. Eleven-year-old Haven West's mother has been "a mood ring stuck on the blues" since Haven's grandparents died suddenly a year ago. Mama has been acting strangely as well; she spends long hours in the bathtub, and Haven often catches her muttering things like "my shape is trapped in the rock, what we need is in the air, but my power is in the water." Even more oddly, when Haven saw her last, Mama looked like a humanoid lizard. Then Mama vanishes. Accompanied by her environmentally conscious teenage sister Margie and kind, puzzle-solving tween neighbor Rye Wilson-Ruiz, the trio steal a food truck and set off across Texas to search for Mama. Their quest turns dire, though, after Haven briefly transforms into a lizard herself, prompting questions about the siblings' heritage. Willing skillfully balances the narrative's inherently fantastical underpinnings with a nuanced cast whose grounded challenges; including issues surrounding coming out and mental health; add ample heart to this road-trip adventure. The West family is white; Rye is Black and Latinx. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Alexandra Levick, Writers House. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Paleontology-loving Haven, 12, is fascinated with fossils and bones, so much so that one dry summer she knows she saw something that was not part of nature—at least, not of current nature. Living in a small town in Texas with her family, she has a carefree life as a typical girl. One day when her mom does not come home, she knows something is not right and is determined to find her. As her journey starts, she uncovers secrets that she and her mom share the ability to turn into amphibious creature called the kitskara. With this discovery, Haven, joined by sister Margie and friend Rye, sets off to find her mother and seek answers to understand herself, as she really is. This is a coming-of-age story for tweens who love mythology and fossils, that shows how growing up is always going to be awkward—but no one is alone in that transition. Willing gives clues to Haven's quest not only to find her mom, but to discover how she fits in her family. The book is heavy with paleontology terms that would be suitable for older middle grade students. VERDICT This adventure novel with heart will have kids rushing to learn more about the ancient creatures featured throughout Haven's journey. Recommended.—BreAnn Weeks

#2282506 Be Real, Macy Weaver (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Lakita Wilson

A humorous, heartfelt, and fashion-filled middle grade contemporary novel about Macy Weaver, a young girl struggling with how to be her true self and make a best friend-during a tumultuous year when her mom goes back to college.

978-0-593-46572-1 Viking ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-3/4 240 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 800

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Macy Weaver has a tough time keeping friends. She makes sure to learn everything about them, going so far as to pretend to like the things they like, even when she really doesn't. All of Macy's effort is wasted, however, because she always seems to lose her best friends. Things seem to look up for her when her family moves to Maryland, but she soon finds out that making friends isn't going to be easier just because she gets to start over with a fresh slate. Before long, Macy has to grapple with the consequences of lying and the dynamics of her changing family as she tries on yet another set of interests. Wilson's middle-grade novel is the perfect blend of humor, introspection, and authenticity. The major characters are both realistic and likable, and she creates a fully formed, three-dimensional world that integrates serious topics with knee-slapping humor and heartfelt growth. This is a must-read for children who are working through the process of developing their own identities. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A tween struggles to navigate friendship and family in a new community. For 11-year-old Macy Weaver, finding and keeping a best friend is a tough task. She thinks she has it all worked out with Josie, but their connection ends abruptly, and Macy is facing spending summer vacation alone. The news that her mom wants to move them from South Carolina to Maryland so she can attend college seems like a fresh start for Macy's friend despite the strain it places on her dad. Their family dynamic is further complicated by Macy's mom's decision to live on campus during the week while Macy and her dad stay in a small apartment. Once school begins, Macy is on a friendship mission, but, convinced she is not enough as she is, she makes up stories that she thinks will make her more attractive. When that does not work, she plants a wedge between two friends that backfires. Macy is an entertaining character whose desperate need shows the importance of friendship as young people develop. The portrayal of Macy's immature mom will resonate with readers as they come to understand that not everyone has perfect parents. The appealing cast of characters, pop-culture references, and lively pacing make this an engaging read. Macy and most of the cast are Black; one of her friends is Chinese and Black, and one uses they/them pronouns. A nice blend of life's joys and challenges for today's middle-grade readers. (author's note) (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After getting caught in a lie, South Carolina fifth grader Macy Weaver has lost another friend and is anticipating a dreadful summer alone. But when her mother is accepted to the University of Maryland and they have to move, Macy is ecstatic for a new start, one in which no one knows her history of mistruths. "Making friends was kind of hard" for Macy, whose "creepy-crawlies," or anxieties (which recur around "struggling to figure out just the right words and just the right way to say things"), compel her to keep her truths close to the vest. Attempting to make friends, however, causes Macy's anxieties to take over, and she tells her new friends that her mother is not a psychology student, but a famous fashion photographer. As Macy's lies unravel, and it looks like her past friendship breakups are destined to repeat themselves, she must learn that being oneself is the only authentic way to cultivate real connections. Wilson (Who Is Colin Kaepernick?) sensitively navigates anxiety and the societal pressures associated with belonging and making friends in this lighthearted volume with a predominantly Black cast. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Melanie Figueroa, Root Literary. (July)

Reviews by: School Library Connection 11-year-old Macy tries so hard to win a best friend that she drives them all away. She copies their hairstyles, makes them gifts, and fabricates stories to impress. When her family moves from South Carolina to Maryland so her unabashedly self-centered mother can attend college, Macy hopes for a fresh start. Kind and welcoming Brynn, an aspiring fashion model, seems to be the friend to have—if only she didn't already have a best friend in lawyerly Grace. Undeterred, Macy claims she lives in a mansion and has a fashion photographer mom with a closet full of designer clothes. In fact, Macy and her postal worker father live in a small, run-down apartment while Mom lives on campus. Observant classmate Pax, who intends to become a fashion designer, offers to help Macy create a fashion line, which they do after school with the help of neighbor lady PJ. With her single-minded focus on Brynn, Macy nearly loses all of her naturally budding friendships until she turns to the school guidance counselor for advice. Macy is a sympathetic character whose missteps are painful to watch. The honest work she puts into regaining her friends' trust is believable and worthy of the upbeat ending. Not so believable is her insufferable mother. That said, her multiracial classmates are well-drawn characters with their own challenges, while PJ, Dad, and the guidance counselor are good-hearted adults who provide support when Macy needs them. Middle graders will find this a compelling and satisfying read, especially so if they are fans of fashion-oriented shows like Project Runway. Jan Aldrich Solow, Elementary School Librarian, Retired, Kingston, New York Recommended Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7--Sixth grader Macy Weaver will do anything to have a best friend. She'll tailor her personality to match anyone she thinks has best friend potential. After this strategy leaves her with a bout of loneliness, she jumps at the chance to move to Bowie, MD, for a fresh start when her mother makes a spur-of-the-moment decision to go back to college. When Macy finds she is more alone than ever in her new home, she decides to craft a new fashion-forward persona far from her reality. As she struggles to keep up with the lies, Macy continues to feel unwanted as her true self, even when genuine friendships form. Readers will enjoy Macy's authentic voice as she reflects on her feelings and the nuanced secondary characters, all of whom are Black. The story's pacing may be slow for some readers, though it allows for tension to build around Macy. The main character's mother's absence and irresponsible spending habits are highlighted in the book, but Wilson does resolve these by the end. VERDICT This is a solid realistic fiction choice for fans of Renée Watson, Jamie Sumner, or Janae Marks. Recommended for purchase for all collections.--Monisha Blair Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Lakita Wilson, author of several Who HQ Now series titles, gives middle-grade readers an earnest and lighthearted novel that offers an honest look at friendships.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2348964 Sparkle (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Lakita Wilson Sparkle Moore is destined to be a star. Her mother is determined to turn her and her younger sister, Nova, into social media influencers and budding superstars. And after her dad has lost work as a sitcom actor, Sparkle wants to do whatever she can to help her family financially, too. 978-0-593-46575-2 Viking ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 770	1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Sixth-grader Sparkle has a shot at becoming a big star someday. Her father was once a well-known actor in Hollywood, and she attends an arts academy for drama, where some famous alumni have graduated. Plus, she has beautiful, thick, curly hair. Her parents struggle financially, and Sparkle has a lot of pressure to make it big. She is on the verge of becoming a social media phenomenon and a star in the school play, until she finds a bald spot and is diagnosed with alopecia. Losing her hair could hold her back from her dreams. Through Wilson's characters, we see the range of challenges for a middle school girl dealing with devastating hair loss. There are the bullies, of course, but there are also girls who pressure one another to look a certain way. This adept exploration of the definition of beauty for the middle-grade set will appeal to fans of Naomi Milliner's Super Jake and the King of Chaos (2019) and Jessica Kim's Stand Up, Yumi Chung! (2020).

 COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Black sixth grader's love of modeling and performing is challenged on and off the stage. Maryland tween Sparkle Moore is a budding social media influencer, and her hair—abundant “chestnut-colored locks”—is a big part of her persona. Her mother is a former model who has shifted her focus into making Sparkle and her sister social media successes. Sparkle and her best friends, Taryn and Rae, who are also Black, hope to make a good impression on Ms. June, the Arts Academy drama director. Sparkle wants to help her family out financially by landing a key role in the school's spring production and creating content that could attract the attention of Hollywood casting agents; Sparkle's dad was a famous TV star, but the residual checks they live on have been shrinking. Things take an unexpected turn when Taryn notices a small bald spot on Sparkle's scalp. Following a scary diagnosis of alopecia, Rae designs creative hair accessories to help Sparkle cover up her bare patches, but Sparkle's friendship with Taryn becomes strained as she deals with her shifting roles at school and home. This is an honest look at the impact of a medical diagnosis that affects appearance, particularly in the context of social media. Sparkle is an original character who is personally driven but also able to put her family first. The relationship dynamics among the friends will resonate with middle school readers. A timely and relatable story about self-perception and social pressures. (Fiction. 9-13)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly oore is diagnosed with alopecia, she must navigate anxiety and self-image issues in this intimately rendered read by Wilson (Be Real, Macy Weaver). Sparkle, a promising theatrical performer who has just started the sixth grade at Maryland Arts Academy is devastated to learn that the school's renowned theater director Ms. June will be retiring after one last production. Sparkle's manager mother, meanwhile, is delighted when Sparkle lands a shampoo ad, though the growing bald spots on Sparkle's head pose both an obstacle and a growing concern to the ad sponsors. To make matters worse, Sparkle's Emmy-nominated actor father is out of work, and she fears that the family needs her modeling to help support them financially. When she gets an opportunity to work with Ms. June, she's determined to make a good impression. But everything becomes much more complicated as she attempts to juggle her diagnosis with friendships and exciting opportunities. Using emotionally turbulent and candid prose, Wilson delivers a heartfelt narrative about personal growth in which Sparkle approaches each challenge with tenacity and drive. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--All her life, Sparkle has known she was destined to be a star. She has a mom who manages her social media, an actor dad, and a younger sister with her own star power. At her arts middle school, she is hoping for a big part in the annual musical; but it all seems lost when she begins to lose her hair. What follows is an exploration of self image, marketability in a social media influencer world, friendship, bullying, pursuit of passion, and family dynamics as they learn about her alopecia. Sparkle and her family are Black, and her school is portrayed as very diverse. The intense focus on social media and image can feel somewhat superficial but will also ring true for readers entering fraught middle school years during this era. The narrative is told through Sparkle's point of view, which is where the writing shines as an authentic experience for a sixth grader. If some of the other characters seem one-dimensional, that can also be attributed to the limited narrative style. While not a first purchase, this book will find an audience for its empathetic portrayal of a young person who is facing a fundamental shift in their self-identity. VERDICT A solid novel about alopecia through a social media influencer/aspiring actress lens for a tween audience.--Elizabeth Nicolai Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

#2327943 Once in a Blue Moon (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sharon G. Flake

James Henry hasn't been the same since that fateful night at the lighthouse when his momma went into the sea. Now months later, he is barely able to leave the house without having a panic attack, and talking to people, well, that's just too hard. Finding a way back into his own life will mean confronting the truth about what happened at the lighthouse--a step James Henry isn't sure he can take. Until a blue moon is forecast, and as Gran has said, everything is possible under a rare blue moon... (Novel in Verse)

978-0-593-48098-4 Knopf Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 336 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile NP

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Eleven-year-old twins James Henry and Hattie Mae live with their grandmother in North Carolina while their father earns money in Detroit to pay Ma's medical bills. James Henry hasn't left home since a mysterious accident traumatized him and left his mother hospitalized with unspecified injuries. Hattie Mae supports her twin against local bullies and tries to encourage him to confront his mental paralysis during a blue moon. In their story that's told in verse and set during the Jim Crow era, these African American twins are well aware of the rigid rules society dictates for them and the severe penalties for disobedience. The protagonists are well developed (James Henry has a passion for astronomy, Hattie Mae for her pet birds), and the support they receive from family is heartwarming; secondary characters--including the dentist's daughter, Lottie Jean (who has her own missing-mother issues), and the Baker brothers (most of whom are bullies)--are also multidimensional. An arduous journey to the beach where the accident occurred proves eventful and life changing, providing closure and a path forward.

COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In sparkling free verse, Flake delivers a rich and compassionate story of family love centered on forgiveness. Eleven-year-old James Henry and his twin sister, Hattie Mae, live with their grandmother in North Carolina, in the Jim Crow South. After a traumatic incident involving their mother and a beloved stray dog, James Henry becomes reclusive, never leaving the house or communicating with anyone except Grand and his sister. Shouldering tremendous guilt, James Henry, an astronomy buff, copes by pretending to fly to outer space with his steadfast companion and constant protector, Hattie Mae. But when she makes a new friend, his troubles become more complicated as now he has to compete for his twin's attention. He knows the only solution to his problems is to confront his anxieties. His first steps out of the house turn into an adventurous odyssey under the luminous guidance of a mystical blue moon that Grand calls a "wishing moon." "What you want for, wish for / or need / on that day is yours / according to her." An evocative, immediate novel with compelling characters and a wonderfully well-paced plot. Pauletta Brown Bracy(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After Ma nearly drowns one fateful night, a North Carolina boy doesn't go outside. Everything 11-year-old James Henry needs to do, including taking imaginary trips into the night skies with twin sister Hattie, he can do at home. He endures the stares and gossip of folks as they pass his house. Nobody but he knows what happened that night, but as long as he has the safety of home, as long as nobody touches him, and as long as he can avoid his own guilt, he's fine. But Hattie is done with James Henry's being "just fine." A rare blue moon is coming, and she thinks that it's time for him to go out and meet it. Everyone knows that things can change and worlds can shift under the blue moon. Using short poems, the tale takes readers on a soul-twisting journey once James Henry, a Black boy living during Jim Crow, leaves home with his sister and her friend Lottie Jean. Together they face off against racists and bullies. Readers also get joyous representations of Black children thriving in the outdoors: swimming, eating well, and using knowledge passed down to them to move forward. This is when these characters start to take full form, but it's interrupted by the mystery of what really happened to James Henry's Ma, something that haunts the storyline in confusing and distracting ways. The theme of recovery after deep trauma shines brightly. (author's note) (Verse historical fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Twins deal with the fallout of their mother's hospitalization in this emotionally raw verse novel by Flake (The Skin I'm In), set in Jim Crow: era North Carolina. After their mother nearly drowns, she's sent to a Detroit hospital, leaving 11-year-old Black twins James Henry and Hattie Mae in the care of Gran and Uncle. Only James Henry knows what really happened the night she almost died, but his anxiety, fear, and guilt result in him feeling unable to speak to anyone except Gran and Hattie Mae, prompting suspicion and blame from Uncle and other townspeople. James Henry even refuses to leave the house, creating a rift between the siblings. He finds refuge in astronomy, only going outside to survey the moon. When Hattie Mae learns that a rare blue moon; or a wishing moon, according to Gran; will soon be visible, she's sure that if they can get to the ocean, James Henry could wish away "his condition," as he calls it. But she must persuade him to leave the house first. Brief but impactful poems narrated by perceptive James Henry deliver a poignantly compelling intergenerational story that underlines themes of community and family, forgiveness, grief, and healing. An author's note concludes. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jennifer Lyons, Jennifer Lyons Literary. (July)

#2366259 Dancing in the Storm (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Amie Darnell Specht

Kate's life in Baton Rouge, full of friends and family, gymnastics and Girl Scouts, is just plain great. But then, at the age of twelve, she suddenly develops a mysterious shoulder pain that won't go away... and that will change her life forever. It turns out that Kate has one of the rarest genetic disorders in the world, Fibrodysplasia Ossificans Progressiva. FOP causes bone to form in places in the body where it shouldn't, and there's no cure yet. Kate will need to learn how to live with this difficult new reality, helped by those close to her and by a new pen pal named Amie, who has been living with FOP for years.

978-0-593-61946-9 Rocky Pond Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews with a rare, progressive disease. Gymnast Kate Lovejoy should feel elated after winning a gold medal in a meet, but a persistent shoulder ache dims her happiness. Downplaying her pain, she blames her tears on her dog's recent death. But soon, the pain becomes too agonizing to ignore, and eventually, Kate is diagnosed with fibrodysplasia ossificans progressiva, a genetic disorder in which muscles and connective tissue turn to bone. Because physical impacts can trigger flare-ups, doing gymnastics is no longer feasible. Her fellow gymnasts and Girl Scouts aren't sure how to act around her, and Kate's reluctance to disclose her diagnosis threatens her relationship with best friend Mandy. Kate has many fears: What if she'll require a wheelchair or need help with toileting? Fortunately, she's surrounded by supportive family and corresponds with a mentor, Amie--a self-insert of co-author Specht, who also has FOP. Kate and Amie's conversations simultaneously explore worries and challenges and offer reassurance and resources. As Kate gradually gains confidence, she discovers the perfect topic for her English essay on changing the world. Authors' notes explain that Kate's story is drawn from Specht's life, and it shows. Though the dialogue is occasionally somewhat stilted and the pacing slightly uneven, Kate's fear, loss, and anger are vividly portrayed, and others' awkward or ableist reactions ring painfully true. Kate and her family read white; secondary characters are racially and socioeconomically diverse. Educational and encouraging. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Seventh grader Kate, who lives in Baton Rouge, has her hands full competing in gymnastics, navigating friend politics, and nursing a crush on her older brother's best friend. Things get complicated further when shoulder pain after a gymnastics meet leads to a diagnosis of fibrodysplasia ossificans progressiva, a rare genetic disorder that causes muscle and ligaments to become bone. Learning that stress, illness, or falls can cause flare-ups prompts Kate's parents to pull her from gymnastics. As she struggles adapting to new life restrictions and the loss of her passion, Kate fears she will be perceived as different and worries about a future with decreasing mobility. While Kate's family is supportive; they replace their trampoline with an FOP-safe pool and consistently validate her frustrations; it's Amie, Kate's 35-year-old mentor with FOP, who helps her process her feelings. In this empathetic novel of loss, resilience, and joy, Hitchcock (One True Way) and debut author Specht deftly balance Kate's diagnosis with middle school drama, creating a deeply relatable telling in which community support and an openness to change lead to Kate's hopeful visions of a brighter future. Kate's dealings with FOP are candidly informed by Specht, who has FOP, according to an author's note. Kate and Amie present as white. Ages 8: 12. (Feb.)

#2324079 Back to the Bright Before (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Katherin Nolte

When eleven-year-old Pet Martin's dad falls from a ladder on their family farm, it isn't just his body that crashes to the ground. So does every hope her family had for the future. She's determined to fix things--but how? Good old-fashioned grit...and maybe a little bit of magic. When a neighbor recites a poem about an ancient coin hidden somewhere on the grounds of the local abbey, Pet forms a plan. But Pet isn't the only one who wants the coin...which means searching for it is more dangerous than she ever imagined.

978-0-593-56510-0 Random House Children's Books ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 208 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Pet, short for Perpetua, along with her younger brother, is on a quest to find a valuable coin rumored to be lost at a convent in Iowa, home to her novice-nun friend Melanie, who teaches her Latin. Pet hopes that if she can sell the coin, she can help her family: a depressed, injured father in need of surgery; a mom, tired from constant work; and the aforementioned brother, who stopped talking, except for the word cheese, the day their dad hurt himself. Of course, there's a bad guy--her neighbor's mean son, who wants the coin for himself--and faithful companions, including a white miniature horse and her brother's favorite hen from the nun's flock. They also are armed with a metal detector and a saltshaker, which Melanie says should be opened and sprinkled only in an emergency. Soon the landscape morphs into something magical, peopled with both frightening and helpful characters, such as a floating shepherdess, a giant, and a man in a monster mask. Like Oz or Narnia, the landscape will enchant readers looking for an eventful adventure. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A resourceful girl confronts a greedy foe with courage and an open heart. A debilitating injury prevents 11-year-old Perpetua's father from working, forcing her waitress mother to take double shifts. The cost of yet another surgery is prohibitive, so Pet and her younger brother, Simon (who since their father's accident says only one word: cheese), set off in search of a priceless coin said to have been held by Christ. The coin is rumored to be located somewhere on the 200 acres belonging to a nearby community of nuns, and the only clue to its whereabouts is a rhyme remembered by a neighbor, a woman with an irredeemably wicked and menacing adult son. Pet's undertaking involves "borrowing" another neighbor's pony and setting out onto the prairie. Everything becomes more challenging than Pet anticipates. But three individuals, perhaps divine beings, provide her and Simon with food, shelter, healing, and stories. The success of their quest, not expressly religious but with a sense of the divine, turns out to be practical as much as redemptive, and the satisfactory, if not entirely convincing, outcome is welcome. The dark cloud hanging over Pet's house is offset by her clear-voiced ebullience; she is a funny, determined, and charming narrator. Most characters read White. Final art not seen. A diverting, warmhearted, unusual fantasy. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After 11-year-old Perpetua "Pet" Martin's woodcarver father falls from a ladder and is unable to work, her mother takes on long shifts waitressing to make ends meet, and her nearly five-year-old brother Simon stops saying any word but cheese. Pet, meanwhile, carries significant guilt about her own involvement in the incident. When Pet hears a poem about a rare, valuable coin whose sale would pay for their now-depressed father's needed third surgery, she comes up with a brilliant plan to find it on the nearby sprawling grounds of Our Lady of Perpetual Help Abbey. But a neighbor's menacing adult son wants the treasure, too, and the siblings' adventure involves both borrowing a pony and keeping adults none the wiser, even as three enigmatic figures assist them. Debut author Nolte incorporates religious imagery and Latin vocabulary into a fantastical quest about a winningly indomitable protagonist who remains devoted to her family and mission. If some questions remain unanswered, a sweetly mystical vibe comes through as the story touches on themes of community care, familial alienation, and parentification.

#2333147 Something Like Home (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Andrea Beatriz Arango

Laura Rodriguez Colon has a plan: no matter what the grown-ups say, she will live with her parents again. Can you blame her? It's tough to make friends as the new kid at school. And while staying at her aunt's house is okay, it just isn't the same as being in her own space. So when Laura finds a puppy, it seems like fate. If she can train the puppy to become a therapy dog, then maybe she'll be allowed to visit her parents. Maybe the dog will help them get better and things will finally go back to the way they should be. (Novel in verse)

978-0-593-56618-3 Random House Children's Books ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8. Laura Rodríguez Colón just wants to go home, but she made the decision to call 911, and now she's living with an aunt she didn't even know she had and learning the ins and outs of kinship foster care. Disgruntled by the situation, mad at herself, and longing for home, Laura stumbles upon someone who needs her just as much as she needs someone: a lost dog that, somehow, her aunt agrees to let her keep. Laura is certain that the dog, Sparrow, is going to be her ticket back to her parents as she trains him to be a therapy dog. At her new school, luckily, Laura is befriended by Benson, a boy fighting sickle-cell disease who happens to be a good trainer, and a great friend who doesn't judge her for her parents' addiction. Full of the author's signature heart-tugging verse, a character you just want to hug, and threads of friendship, family, and belonging, Arango's follow-up to her Newbery Honor debut is a triumph for readers who need comforting encouragement without having to ask for it.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Sixth-grader Laura Rodríguez Colón will not unpack her bags. A nosy social worker's interference has led to Laura's relocation to the wealthy side of town with her Titi Silvia, but Laura has no plan to stay or to make friends with any of the rich snobs here. Instead, she's hatching a plan to get back to her old life, helping out on her parent's food truck and being with her three best friends. Titi Silvia and the social worker insist she'll just be a distraction to her mom and dad while they are in recovery at rehab, but when Laura finds an abandoned pit-bull puppy on the street, she's sure that training the pup to be a therapy dog for her parents will be her ticket to getting things back to normal. Arango's writing is succinctly genuine, and the verse composition makes each page feel like an intimate journal entry, revealing the complexity of Laura's feelings. Laura is a typical middle-school girl, and her moods vary day to day, which can reveal itself in humor, in reflectiveness, or in confusion, all of which Arango conveys with generosity and compassion; Laura's guilt over calling 911 after finding her parents passed out is delicately handled, focusing more on her feelings than their failures. This story provides honest insight into the difficult subject matter of foster care, addiction, and finding identity. KJH COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine If only life were as straightforward as the Rubik's Cube that Laura loves to solve. When this Virginia-set verse novel begins, the Puerto Rican sixth grader is on her way to a kinship foster-care placement "on the other side of town" with her titi Silvia, whom Laura has never met. Pulled from her admittedly chaotic life with her parents, who are struggling with addiction, Laura copes with the overwhelming changes that a new caregiver, new rules, a new school, and new peers bring, while suffering with extreme feelings of guilt over making the 911 call that resulted in her parents' being placed in rehab. Laura finds purpose in training a dog she rescues near Titi's house to be a therapy animal; her plan is to bring the dog to the rehab facility so she can finally see her parents. Arango's writing is intimate and heartbreaking, tackling such hefty issues as cultural identity, addiction, the pain of displacement and the anxiety it causes, and the adulation and rationalization that a child in pain can offer to adults they love. Arango (Newbery honoree for Iveliz Explains It All, rev. 9/22) accomplishes this with the believable voice of a girl in crisis and by tapping into compassion for all the characters amidst moving scenes of joy and connection. Amanda R. Toledo September/October 2023 p.68

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A powerful novel in verse about a girl coping after being ripped from her home. When 11-year-old Laura Rodríguez Colón calls 911 to save her parents from a possible overdose, authorities remove her from her home and place her into the care of Titi Silvia, her estranged aunt. Laura, who is Puerto Rican, resists "this borrowed life," anxiously awaiting the day her parents will be released from rehab. One day, she rescues a sick, abandoned puppy she names Sparrow, and he helps her feel better about everything. When the social worker informs her that children aren't allowed to visit the rehab center, Laura hatches a plan to train Sparrow to be a therapy dog and get inside that way. But when her parents leave without completing the program, Laura learns her stay with Titi may become permanent. Laura's distress increases when her mother shows up at school only to be sent away, leaving Laura torn between life with her aunt and love for her flawed parents. With the help of caring friends and adults, Laura learns that creating a new home doesn't have to mean discarding the old. The short sections written in accessible free verse create a segmented structure that mirrors Laura's experiences and drives the storyline. The clear narrative arc and strong symbolic system make the novel cohere, and Laura's emotional landscape is realistically contradictory. Arango's writing is a joy to read, combining strong storytelling, compelling characters, and rich language. Beautifully executed. (author's note) (Verse fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Latinx 11-year-old Laura Rodriguez Colon believes that it's her fault she was separated from her parents and sent to live with her aunt, Titi Sylvia, a "rich perfect stranger" who resides on the other side of Laura's Virginia county. If she hadn't called 911, she thinks, her parents wouldn't have been sent to rehab for substance reliance, and she wouldn't be staring down the barrel of an uncertain future with Titi Sylvia, whose emotionally closed-off nature makes Laura feel isolated. Though she'd rather be with her parents, she's elated when Titi Sylvia lets her keep the abandoned pup that Laura finds in town, which she names Sparrow. When Laura is told that she can't visit her parents in rehab, she resolves to train Sparrow as a therapy dog, because "Children may not be allowed in Harmonic Way... but apparently therapy dogs and their owners/ are." Laura's improvised training seems to go well, until a disastrous event imperils her hard work. In moving, approachable verse, Arango (Iveliz Explains It All) thoughtfully portrays Laura's guilt and the constant push-and-pull of her desire to be with her parents and her growing connection with Titi Sylvia. Abundant bird facts; which Laura learned on daily walks with her father; add sensitive insight into Laura's interpretation of family and loyalty. Ages 10: 14. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up—Everything in Laura's life is wrong, and it is all her fault. If she hadn't called 911, then the police wouldn't have found her parents on pills, and she wouldn't have been sent to live with an aunt she doesn't know while her parents are in rehab. Haunted by her guilt and lack of autonomy, Laura is struggling to find a place in a new school and in a house with rules she doesn't understand when she discovers an abandoned puppy and sets out to train him as a therapy dog. Maybe he will be the key to visiting her parents so she can apologize and they can all go home together. Extraordinarily honest and sensitive, this novel in verse tactfully and gracefully deals with foster and kinship care and some of the many emotions involved. Laura and her aunt are both Puerto Rican, although Laura doesn't speak fluent Spanish, and some simple Spanish phrases are included through their dialogue. The verse format and word choice make this a more accessible option than some other books on similar topics. Throughout the story, Laura learns to accept that her love for her parents does not make her responsible for their actions, and to allow herself to have space in her heart for all those who love and care for her. An author's note supplies more information for readers who are not familiar with foster/kinship care, as well as encouragement to those who have experienced it firsthand. VERDICT So much affirmation, exploration, and positivity for those in similar situations are packed beautifully into these verses, making it a solid addition to collections.—Emily Beasley

#2329831 Field of Screams (Library Binding (Trade))

written by Wendy Parris

Paranormal enthusiast Rebecca Graff isn't happy about being dragged to Iowa to spend the summer with family she barely knows. But when she tracks a ghostly presence to an abandoned farmhouse, she starts to think the summer won't be a total lost cause! But the more Rebecca discovers, the scarier the ghost becomes. Soon she is in a race to piece together the puzzle and recover a family legacy before it is lost forever and a horrible tragedy repeats itself.

978-0-593-56998-6 Delacorte Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 640

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$12.99

#2329676 Tiger Daughter (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Rebecca Lim

Wen Zhou is a first-generation daughter of Chinese migrant parents. She has high expectations from her parents to succeed in school, especially her father whose strict rules leave her feeling trapped. She dreams of creating a future for herself more satisfying than the one her parents expect her to lead. Then she befriends a boy named Henry who is also a first generation immigrant. He is the smartest boy at school despite struggling with his English and understands her in a way nobody has lately. Both of them dream of escaping and together they come up with a plan to take an entrance exam for a selective school far from home.

978-0-593-64897-1 Delacorte Press ©2023 5-3/4 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.0 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile 980

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Wen Zhou and Henry Xiao are fast friends. Their families migrated to Australia from different parts of China, bringing with them all manner of hierarchical mores that, combined with the difficulties of trying to survive in a racist environment, stack the odds against them for a good future. At the suggestion of their teacher, they decide to prepare for an entrance exam to a school that could help them realize their ambitious dreams. They study hard, helping each other, while their parents struggle with immigrant disillusionment, coping in ways that hurt the ones around them. When tragedy strikes, it falls to Wen to keep Henry on track for the exam, which means standing up to her abusive father for the sake of her friend. Wen is a smart, lively narrator whose voice crackles on the page, even when it wavers with vulnerability. Wen and Henry's story is one of community, friendship, courage, and solidarity in unexpected places. Tiger Daughter calls out the ways toxic masculinity intersects with class and race and ultimately hurts everyone, especially those bound up in it. Wen and Henry are part of a generation whose members can lead one another toward a new future, not by running away but by toppling ugly power with defiance, respect, and love. A middle-school must-read.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine ration immigrants to Australia from China -- aspire to escape their dysfunctional lives and constricted futures by being accepted to a prestigious, government-funded high school. Wen Li Zhou, thirteen, and her best friend, Henry Xiao, face different challenges. Wen's controlling, verbally abusive father strictly monitors and restricts his wife's and daughter's every move. Henry is brilliant at math and science but fears his English isn't good enough to pass the high-school entrance exam. When tragedy strikes the Xiao family, Wen becomes defiant and takes big risks to help Henry survive academically and emotionally; her mother, Teresa, joins the effort, at even greater risk to herself. Lim's prose realistically conveys the anguish and fear felt by Wen and Teresa as they hide their charitable deeds and growing involvement in the neighborhood from the tyrannical Mr. Zhou. Ultimately, empathy and kindness prevail in this novel as mother and daughter both learn it is better to risk everything to do what is important rather than take no action, turning a bleak story into one about resilience and change. Michelle Lee (Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews In this award-winning Australian import, a young Chinese immigrant fights to forge her own path, inspiring change in her loved ones in the process. Thirteen-year-old Wen Zhou feels stuck in an insular world, kept in motion by equal parts rage and fear. Having been a medical doctor in China, her father bitterly resents managing a restaurant. Ruling with an iron fist, he places unreasonably high expectations on Wen and her mother. A recent Chinese immigrant to Australia, Wen's best friend, Henry Xiao, has his own share of struggles. With fierce determination, he convinces her that they can escape their circumstances by entering a prestigious school on the other side of town. Just two weeks before the entrance exams, however, tragedy befalls Henry's family. To support her friend and keep their dream alive, Wen must have the courage to take risks and be resilient enough for the two of them. Lim weaves a powerful and empathetic account of the complex struggles of the immigrant experience from a child's perspective. Tough topics like poverty, grief, and domestic abuse are explored with poignant honesty and sensitivity. Despite the harsh realities faced by the characters, the book hums with an infectious sense of hope that is bound to empower readers who see themselves in Wen. Tough but uplifting and, above all, heartfelt. (author's note, note to teachers and librarians) (Fiction. 11-15) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Because of 13-year-old Wen Li Zhou's struggles with math, her father often deems her a "useless, insolent child." His verbal abuse also extends to her mother; once a vivacious woman, she now acts reserved to avoid Wen's father's outbursts. Wen finds peace with her best friend Henry Xiao. Both teens live in Australia with their Chinese immigrant families, and both plan to take the upcoming entrance exam to an "amazing, government-funded selective school," believing that attending it will change their lives for the better. When Henry's mother dies by suicide, however, everything comes to a standstill. Henry won't leave his house, and Wen's parents want her to stay away from him, but she refuses to let him suffer alone. To help Henry, Wen must tap into her own strength and learn to stand up for herself. Lim (the Mercy series) draws on her own experiences as a migrant child growing up in Australia, as outlined in an author's note, to deliver an eye-opening novel that covers weighty issues of abuse, grief, mental health stigma, racism, and sexism alongside the harsh realities faced by Wen and Henry's families. A tidy, uplifting ending, paired with Wen's vulnerable first-person voice, round out this heartstring-tugging read. Ages 10: up. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--For Wen Zhou, a first-generation Chinese immigrant living in Australia, life is challenging. Her father, Jin, who chooses to work in a restaurant after failing to complete a top-level surgical exam, is angry and disappointed. He tries to shelter Wen and her mother, Mei Ling, by forbidding their contact with other members of the community, and both are afraid to defy him. At her local school, Wen finds little solace other than her friendship with Henry Xiao. Both are studying for entrance to a better school more suited to their educational needs. Henry is confident; Wen, not so much. Sadly, Henry's mom dies by suicide, and in grief and humiliation, both he and his father retreat into their home. But Wen is determined to see that Henry keeps studying for the exam and, with the eventual help of her mother, they bring food and homework to his house daily. But can they keep it a secret from Jin? This book offers a fresh perspective on immigration in a setting outside of the United States. The author, an Asian Australian herself, creates the story and dialogue from a wealth of firsthand experience including rich detail on traditional Chinese cuisine and other customs. Young readers will enjoy the story's satisfying conclusion and its reminder to work hard and never forget your dreams. VERDICT A first purchase for libraries serving immigrant populations and highly recommended for those looking to diversify their collections.--Anne Jung-Mathews Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Tiger Daughter by Australian author Rebecca Lim (Mercy series) arrives Stateside already highly celebrated. Lim's novel might initially suggest another familiar immigration story, but her deeply empathic observations ensure an immersive coming-of-age exploration that should resonate with readers regardless of their backgrounds.

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2366569 Averil Offline (Hardcover (Trade))	1	$17.99
written by Amy Noelle Parks Twelve-year-old coder Averil can't do anything without her parents knowing. That's because her mom uses the Ruby Slippers surveillance app to check where she is, who she texts, and even what she eats for lunch. Averil wonders how she's ever going to grow up if she's not allowed to learn from mistakes. When she learns that Ruby Slippers is about to become even more invasive, she teams up with Max, a new kid at school dealing with overbearing parents of his own.

978-0-593-61864-6 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.
Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Twelve-year-old Averil is old enough to walk herself to school, sure, but she and her friends are never alone; their parents are always watching via a monitoring app called Ruby Slippers installed on their phones. In the name of safety, Averil's well-intentioned mother regularly invades her daughter's privacy, constantly monitoring Averil's location and communications and even demanding pictures of her meals. Averil's prowess at coding and puzzle-solving catches the attention of her classmate Max, who enlists her help on a bold plan: ditch their phones and sneak away from a coding camp to confront the app's reclusive, eccentric developer about its problematic use. While the puzzle-solving elements à la Mr. Lemoncello's Library make an easy draw for mystery-loving kids, Parks' portrayal of helicopter parenting and smartphone-enabled surveillance will ring true for many tweens. The book is strongest when Averil is slowly unpacking the ways this surveillance has stunted her emotions, unable at first to express anger or anything else for fear of how adults will react, and so desperate for independence she's willing to abandon her phone completely if it means finding freedom. Rather than fully reckoning with this reality, however, the narrative has to brush its complexities aside, flattening the characters to serve the highly contrived plot with an ideal, boundary-setting resolution between Averil and her parents. Nonetheless, Averil is a compelling character grappling with being underestimated as a girl interested in STEM and a child looking to find herself, and this book may provide an outlet for kids processing their need for independence. AMM COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Two kids rebel against intrusive surveillance. Averil's a computer whiz who excels in the Tech class that she and her friends Priya and Max are taking, but even she feels suffocated by Ruby Slippers, the app that her parents use to keep tabs on her. Max learns that the app will soon allow parents to turn on the camera and microphone on their kids' smartphones, and he wants to meet its creator, Rider Woollyback, who has a lab at the local university, and convince him to stop the increased surveillance. Max needs Averil's tech smarts to enter Woollyback's inner sanctum--to get in, visitors must win games and provide "interesting" answers to questions posed by his assistant. Max and his multimillionaire father have already failed to gain admittance, and he thinks that successfully getting in will raise his dad's opinion of him. He proposes that he and Averil ditch their upcoming coding camp and instead attempt to meet Woollyback while Priya covers for Averil. While the plot is a bit far-fetched, Averil and Max's burgeoning friendship is well developed and will pull in readers. Parks also deftly grapples with relevant issues, such as the sexism that women and girls in STEM often face, the overwhelming presence of technology in our lives, and young people's need for autonomy. Most characters are coded white; Priya is of Indian descent. An absorbing tale of determination, friendship, and tech gone wrong. (Fiction. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--Middle school tech whiz Averil attends public school in her upscale neighborhood with her best friend Priya. Despite her brilliance, the tech class is an uncomfortable place for Averil and the few girls there; the teacher, Mr. Ballinger, has created a hostile environment for them, and Averil responds by trying to go unnoticed. However, her skills catch the eye of new kid Max McClaren. Max is no tech genius but his father is, and he recognizes and admires Averil's capabilities. Max needs Averil's help to pull off a "cyber caper" to meet with famous young tech wizard, Rider Woollyback. Woollyback's Ruby Slippers app has created a mildly dystopian world of stifling parental oversight that has fractured the relationship between parents and children, eroding any trust. Max hopes that he and Averil can plead their case and put a stop to it. But it's a puzzling and suspenseful path to get to Woollyback, and when Averil sees the consequences of capitulating to the Mr. Ballingers of the world, she has a tough choice to make. This is a good fit for those who appreciate stories where kids have plenty to teach, and it's the adults who should sit down and listen. Averil's struggle to find her voice is a connection point, even for readers whose lives don't look like hers. VERDICT Parks expertly paints a picture of how gender discrimination affects students, while also illustrating the power of advocacy and autonomy wrapped up in a thrilling tech adventure.--Jill Shepard Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness There's a fine line between safety and invasion of privacy in Averil Offline, a thought-provoking middle-grade mystery by Amy Noelle Parks (Summer of Brave).

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2348840 Night Fox (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Ashley Wilda When seventeen-year-old Eli arrives at Raeth, a remote mountain retreat for teens with mental health issues, her mind is made up-she is not interested in participating, and	1	$19.99

she doesn't need to "heal." Still reeling from a breakup that left both her heart and faith shattered, she is determined to fake being "fine" so that the program's warden will clear her to return home.

978-0-593-61892-9 Rocky Pond Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 336 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 640

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 8-10 In an emotional and whimsical debut, Wilda weaves the present and past together to paint a story of pain and healing. A breakup driven by religious differences plunges Eli into an inescapable depression, leading her mother to take her to a mountainous retreat, Raeth. There Eli encounters others struggling with big life changes as well as Raeth's keeper, Gale. With the opportunity to learn about herself and discover pathways toward feeling well, Eli must take conscious steps forward to heal--but is she ready? In an afterword, Wilda describes the importance of themes of mental illness in the story and how the fiction loosely reflects her past. Readers who enjoy stories of angst and introspection in liminal environments, such as in Meg Wolitzer's Belzhar (2014) and Jenny Hubbard's And We Stay (2014), will appreciate Eli's narrative. Teens familiar with Tumblr culture--particularly its emo aesthetic--will also find plenty to recognize in the alternating prose and verse. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Mired in the torpidity of depression, recent high school graduate Liz is dropped off by her mother at Raeth, a nature retreat in the middle of the mountains for teens in crisis, where Gale, warden and fellow teen, explains rules that include picking a new name and going outside once a day. Determined to get home fast, Liz picks the name Eli and heads out into the mist surrounding the house, only to find herself—quite literally. Past the fog each day the landscape of Raeth magically changes: once a calm creek, once a grit-warm desert, once a cave starred by glowworms. In each outing Eli comes face to face with a version of her past and potential future selves, all with exhortations to move on from her heartbreak. Vining throughout the novel are poems from Eli's diary recounting love and breakup with a boy from school, written with the believably fevered angst of a lovelorn teenager. It quickly becomes apparent that Eli's desolation springs from the fact that the boy does not share her belief in God, and she therefore cannot see them being together in this life if they cannot have eternity together. All the components of the story work, from the fantastical setting to the poignant scenes of Eli grappling with distressing feelings. Readers will find complexity in Eli's navigating expanding beliefs and new experiences while staying true to a world view she feels certain of, especially in how she approaches the beliefs—or non-beliefs—of romantic partners. Sparingly few curse words, no violence, and chaste romance will make this a great fit for younger and older teens looking for a comforting read with high emotional stakes and a gratifying bit of magic. ART

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An evocative, imaginative story about our emotional landscapes and the quest for mental health and independence. In lyrical, sometimes overwrought language, Wilda's debut tells the story of a girl named Eli, a high school graduate who's mourning her first love and questioning her previously strong faith. The first-person point of view brings readers into the otherworldly wilderness of Raeth, a remote center for struggling teens. There are outings in a morphing natural world, encounters with other participants in supernatural circumstances, and talks and mugs of tea with the warden, Gale. Raeth reveals alternate versions of Eli, including an older self who tells her: "Life's gone dark, sure, but you didn't do anything wrong. You took the hard path. Not the wrong one. That just means you're brave." Between each chapter, readers encounter Eli's poetry, gleaned details about the relationship that led to her broken heart. With a growing sense of questing through her emotional life, Eli ventures on nighttime adventures, guided by a fox and culminating in the realization that she can both hold on to her first love and move forward into a purposeful life. The language and strong imagery will appeal to teens who enjoy literary fiction and poetry, while the concluding author's note with mental health resources will compel readers on their own journeys. Most characters read white. Prose and poetry weave the story of an inner journey of intense emotion, fantastical adventure, and, ultimately, healing. (Fiction. 13-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2330219 All You Have to Do (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Autumn Allen

In April 1968, in the wake of Martin Luther King, Jr.'s assassination, Kevin joins a protest that shuts down his Ivy League campus... In September 1995, amidst controversy over the Million Man March, Gibran challenges the "See No Color" hypocrisy of his prestigious New England prep school... As the two students, whose lives overlap in powerful ways, risk losing the opportunities their parents worked hard to provide, they move closer to discovering who they want to be instead of accepting as fact who society and family tell them they are.

978-0-593-61904-9 Kokila ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 432 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 640

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist This intense debut novel connects two young Black men struggling for acceptance and equality. In 1995, Gibran is a senior at Lakeside Academy, a mostly white suburban prep school outside Boston. When his request to attend the Million Man March is refused, he organizes a group to post a letter around campus sharing the realities of attending Lakeside as a Black student. In alternate chapters set in 1968, Gibran's uncle, Kevin, tries to find his place in the resistance as a Columbia University undergraduate. Tutoring young Harlem students and fighting for local tenants' rights is not enough, so after Martin Luther King Jr. is assassinated, Kevin joins the campus protests. Dawn is the woman who connects these men to their family expectations: As Gibran's mother, she urges him to keep his head down and graduate. As Kevin's sister, their estrangement haunts his thoughts while he joins the Hamilton Hall sit-in and waits for their demands to be met or, as happens, for the police to respond with shocking violence. Allen expertly integrates historical civil rights figures and events into a character-driven narrative that communicates how it feels to be transformed by a powerful speech, to face violence, and to stand tall every day in the face of injustice and racism. She ends with a moment of triumphant unity in a struggle that continues.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Alternating first-person accounts tell the intrinsically linked stories of Gibran in 1995 and his uncle Kevin in 1968. When Gibran, one of the few Black students in his Massachusetts prep school, and his friends ask to participate in a Day of Absence in support of the Million Man March, they are denied due to the event's "divisive" nature. Gibran leads the charge to respond in a manner that will get the entire school's attention -- and may jeopardize his future. In the parallel story line, Kevin is a Black activist attending Columbia University, keenly aware of the university's unjust practices and their effect on neighboring Harlem. Columbia's response to the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. adds to a growing list of concerns, and plans for a protest escalate into a (real-life) student takeover. Allen has created two fully developed, sympathetic characters who must decide what liberation truly means. Kevin and Gibran share a commitment to activism, sometimes to the detriment of their closest relationships. Both voices are clear in their convictions; flashbacks within Kevin's chapters and "What I don't say" sections within Gibran's deepen understanding. Allen's debut novel admirably explores various facets of African American activism and protest, including debates about what is deemed too radical for the movement, and discussion of the role of Black women. Lyrics "by" Gibran appear occasionally, along with some black-and-white illustrations by Karen Eutemey (unseen); a list of acronyms and organizations and an author's note are appended. Eboni Njoku(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Chronicles the experiences of two Black students balancing family and personal expectations while engaging in the precarious work of organizing. In 1995, Massachusetts high school senior Gibran's ambivalent about attending a mostly White prep school. When a talent show performance by White students uses Black rapper aesthetics for cheap laughs, Gibran, quite literally, pulls the plug on it. This small act results in a strong warning: one more "disruption" before he's expelled. His sympathetic mother reminds him to focus on his Howard University scholarship: "The question is, do you deserve the punishment you're going to get for giving them what they deserve?" But when Gibran and others who wish to honor the upcoming Million Man March clash with administrators, his choices place him in jeopardy. In 1968, the day after Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination, Columbia University student Kevin is organizing with the Society of Afro-American Students. They oppose Columbia's expansion into Harlem, which would displace residents, and, as the Vietnam War rages, they want the university to renounce ties to war research. After reading sensationalized headlines, Kevin's parents try to dissuade him from further participation in the lengthy, increasingly hostile student-led campus occupation. Allen constructs a vivid narrative that balances both timelines seamlessly and pointedly highlights often overlooked history. The crisp, succinct prose and fully realized characters make this a shining example of how principled research in lock step with exceptional writing creates an unforgettable reading experience. An electric debut: a must-read for all. (acronyms and organizations, author's note) (Fiction. 12-18)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly ve chapters that alternate between 1968 and 1995, Allen highlights two Black teens' parallel struggles for racial justice, 27 years apart, in this powerful debut. In 1995 Massachusetts, high school senior Gibran faces severe consequences and possible expulsion after disrupting a racist talent show performance at majority-white Lakeside Academy. Though his family pleads with him to "just graduate" and "finish your last year" without incident, Gibran can't help but chafe against the injustice he witnesses daily. Meanwhile, in the days following Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination in 1968, Columbia student Kevin fights to halt the construction of a university expansion that would further gentrify the surrounding Harlem community. Other culturally relevant happenings, including Vietnam War protests, add narrative heft as Kevin's attempts to organize initiatives cause a rift between him and his parents. The two boys' efforts to balance their equity pursuits with interpersonal concerns, such as the importance of caring for oneself amid taxing mental challenges, are expertly rendered. Through Gibran and Kevin's individual exploits of equality and accountability, fully fleshed-out characters, and skillfully cultivated narrative tension, Allen creates a layered debut that is timely and resonant. Ages 12: up. Agent: Cindy Uh, Creative Artists Agency. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 8 Up--A compelling portrait of the intersectionality of race, class, and intergenerational change that features two Black young adults, Kevin and Gibran, living through two different time periods. Because of their grandparents' and parents' upward mobility, both young men are students at prestigious, predominantly white schools. Kevin, a student at Columbia University, tells his story of growing up in a predominantly white suburb in the 1950s and early 1960s as well as his experience at the Black student--led sit-in at Columbia in April 1968. Gibran, Kevin's nephew, is a student at the prestigious White Oaks preparatory school and is driven to organize a group to attend the 1995 Million Man March in Washington, D.C. Readers will be intrigued by a family mystery that Gibran works to unravel and the nuanced relationship between uncle and nephew. Told in short chapters that alternate perspectives, the novel is written in one- to two-page fast-moving episodes, especially important in a book that clocks in at 400+ pages. Gibran's rap lyrics and drawings bring a welcome change of pace. This debut novel is meticulously researched and based on real events and people. Allen includes a list of acronyms and institutions as well as a note that shares her personal connection to these stories and how she made them emotionally realistic. VERDICT An important addition to the canon of YA historical fiction and especially recommended for readers who are invested in the history of racism and the struggle for freedom.--Jamie Winchell

#2362996 Curse of Eelgrass Bog (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mary Averling

Nothing about Kess Pedrock's life is normal. Not her home (she lives in her family's Unnatural History Museum), not her interests (hunting for megafauna fossils and skeletons), and not her best friend (a talking demon's head in a jar named Shrunken Jim). But things get even stranger than usual when Kess meets Lilou Starling, the new girl in town. Lilou comes to Kess for help breaking a mysterious curse--and the only clue she has leads straight into the center of Eelgrass Bog.

978-0-593-62490-6 Razorbill ©2024 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 660

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Book Page The Unnatural History Museum may be falling apart, but it's Kess Pedrock's home and contains almost everything she loves: mysterious and magical skeletons from Eelgrass Bog, her petulant and perpetually busy brother, and her best friend Jim, a demon trapped as a jarred shrunken head. Only her parents are missing, but maybe, when they come back from their trip in Antarctica, they can save the museum. Until then, it's up to Kess. One day, the museum finally receives a visitor in the form of a girl named Lilou Starling, who later reveals that her grandfather died and left her a mysterious map with a cryptic puzzle scrawled on its back. This puzzle can only be solved by venturing into the bog itself. Despite Jim's warnings, Kess sets off with Lilou, determined to both save the Unnatural History Museum and impress her new friend. But between the burning watch fires and eccentric witches, Kess discovers that more of her life is tied up in the bog than she could ever have anticipated. And digging too deep might destroy the one thing she's trying to save. Mary Averling bewitches with her debut middle grade novel, Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 With her parents away on an Antarctic expedition, Kess feels responsible for keeping the family's timeworn Unnatural History Museum from falling into ruin. With visitors few and far between, Kess determines that the only way to rouse interest in the museum is to find a new terrific treasure from the nearby forbidding (and forbidden) Eelgrass Bog. Before she can search for a new artifact, though, another girl turns up searching for leads about a family curse, and she partners with Kess. The ensuing adventure uncovers far more than simple skeletons; long-buried secrets come to the surface, and Kess realizes that she's saving not only the museum but the whole town--and herself. Averling's atmospheric writing deftly depicts the desolation of the vast bog and Kess' terrible loneliness, but to lighten the mood, there are also burgeoning crushes and plenty of comical details (notably Kess' closest friend, a talking shrunken demon head in a jar). Readers will enjoy excavating layers of history in this marvelous mystery with heaps of magic and heart. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books The Unnatural History Museum may be old and decaying, but it's still home to twelve-year-old Kess, as familiar to her as the stories of legendary creatures in the nearby Eelgrass Bog. Kess is certain that if she can just find the bones of one such undiscovered creature, the new exhibit would surely bring people back to the Museum, and she can have the place up and running again before her parents return from their expedition to Antarctica. When she meets Lilou, a girl on a mission to find the mysterious Endling Society, Kess finally has some company to go deeper into the bog, along with some guidance from Lilou's grandfather's letters, which were addressed to the Museum but unsent. Eelgrass Bog, however, and the Drowned World it leads to, won't let go of its secrets easily, and the girls will have to reckon with witches, monstrous serpents, and lost memories before they can find what they need. The perfect combination of eccentric and eerie, this builds an immersive, thrilling setting, filled with all sorts of unnatural happenings, while still tending to the interpersonal relationships that give the storyline heft and nuance. Kess makes a delightfully clever narrator, with a voice that is as bold as it is vulnerable, as authentic as it is sassy. A unique twist on a well-trod trope brings unexpected freshness, while the developing romance between Kess and Lilou makes a sweet, wholesome bonus. KQG COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Eelgrass Bog may be cursed, but Kess has her hopes pinned on what she'll find there. Twelve-year-old Kess and her older brother, Oliver, have lived alone in the Unnatural History Museum ever since Mam and Da left for Antarctica on a research trip ever so long ago. Well, there's also Shrunken Jim, a pickled, disembodied head Kess carries around in a jar, a staunch if unusual friend. Kess hopes that new exhibits will revitalize the museum, and when newcomer Lilou visits, Kess finds a partner in exploration--and what they learn in Eelgrass Bog upends everything Kess thought she knew. Averling's worldbuilding is deft and beguiling, from Kess' unfamiliarity with modern tech that tells readers something's very amiss to the delightful weirdness of the museum and its environs. Averling's use of the present tense effectively unmoors readers (as well as Kess) from time, and Kess' voice is a delight. "Oh, vermin," she curses, and she dismisses Oliver as "a prune-hearted cockroach." Shining brightest is her endearing relationship with Shrunken Jim--an excellent supporting character for all that he's brined. Most human characters are cued white; Lilou has two dads, and Kess and Lilou find that they might "like-like" each other, though active romance is left for Kess' future. A deliciously offbeat magical adventure. (Fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Twelve-year-old Kester "Kess" Pedrock and her older brother struggle to maintain their family's Unnatural History Museum in eerie Wick's End while their scientist parents are in Antarctica; without a steady flow of paying customers, the facility grows more decrepit daily. Determined to attract new visitors, Kess endeavors to find a rumored "undiscovered monster" on the outskirts of creepy

Eelgrass Bog. Despite feeling drawn to the area, Kess is strictly forbidden from visiting by her best friend Shrunken Jim, a companionable demon's head in a jar who warns that the bog lies atop the Drowned World, an eldritch realm of megafauna, "half-rotten" creatures, and ghastly witches who have succumbed to its dark, all-consuming magic. But after newcomer Lilou Starling; who gives Kess a "warm, sludgy feeling"; asks for Kess's help in breaking a mysterious curse, the pair quickly realize that the answers they seek lie deep within the heart of Eelgrass Bog, prompting them to venture into the Drowned World. While the engrossing mystery wraps up too early on, debut author Averling laces the overall setting with beguiling magical elements that make for an inventive adventure. Characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Kelly Sonnack, Andrea Brown Literary. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--Twelve-year-old Kess Pedrock's older brother Oliver has given up on the upkeep of the Unnatural History Museum, but not Kess. She is determined that her parents will return from their research trip in Antarctica to a well-maintained museum. This task is proving to be nearly impossible with the museum falling apart around her, plus she hasn't discovered any new monster exhibits to lure patrons. Until she has an interesting visitor, Lilou Starling. Kess feels an instant kinship with Lilou and visits her at home where she lives with her two dads. It turns out Lilou's grandpa left her an old map of Eelgrass Bog with specific instructions: "Beware the witches. Break the curse. Save the society." Kess has been warned to stay away from the bog, but the lure of solving Lilou's mystery is too strong. Foreshadowing is strong as Kess has murky memories of her past. Delightful characters abound, such as Shrunken Jim, a talking demon's head in a pickle jar (brine included). Setting details are equally eccentric; the girls discover a strange house that appears at the mouth of the Drowned World tunnel with eight iron legs and crouching "like a mechanical spider." Readers will be anxious to follow where this mystery leads. Lilou and Kess's relationship deepens to genuinely liking one another. Characters read as white. VERDICT A fetching, heart-stopping read with quirky characters, over-the-top depictions, a sinister setting, and the deep roots of family love.--Julie Shatterly Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2332543 Thieves' Gambit (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kayvion Lewis

At only seventeen years old, Ross Quest is already a master thief, especially adept at escape plans. Until her plan to run away from her legendary family of thieves takes an unexpected turn, leaving her mother's life hanging in the balance. In a desperate bid, she enters the Thieves' Gambit, a series of dangerous, international heists where killing the competition isn't exactly off limits, but the grand prize is a wish for anything in the world—a wish that could save her mom.

978-0-593-62536-1 Nancy Paulsen Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 670

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 9-12 You are trapped inside a house on a mission to steal a priceless vase. A cat is about to give away your presence. What do you do? If you're Rosalyn Quest, you hack the cat with a laser pointer. If you're not Rosalyn, a member of a family of accomplished thieves (who, frankly, often wishes to be someone else), well, then you're probably not in this situation. When she receives an invitation to compete with the best of thieves in an international heist competition, Rosalyn has more than an opportunity to break free from her family--she has a chance to save her mother. Lewis (The Half-Class, 2021) brings Rosalyn to life with more than quick quips, building the complicated relationship she has with her mother and the life the Quests live. The high-octane stakes will appeal to fans of Jennifer Lynn Barnes and Ally Carter, and the twisty plotting is reminiscent of Ocean's 8. This new teen criminal will steal hearts. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books The Bahamas-based Quest family are world-renowned thieves, but Rosalyn "Ross" Quest might just be ready to give it all up for some teenage normalcy, if only she can muster up the courage to tell her staunchly untrusting mother about the discreetly sent college applications and the acceptances she's received. Instead, Ross decides to take the easy route and plans an elaborate disappearing act for their next mother-daughter gig, but things quickly go awry when mom is seemingly kidnapped and a billion-dollar ransom forces Ross into a secret high-end thieving competition for the who's who of teen cat burglars. The contrivances that lead to this "Gambit" should give readers some pause, even as Ross is preoccupied with reconciling her immediate crush on a fellow crook with the familial commitment to distrusting all non-Quests. In fact, it's unclear how ransom requests from would-be killers are promptly taken at face value but mean girls and cute teenage boys might be the death of you. Nonetheless, the challenges of the competition transport the troupe of markedly savvy teens from France to Egypt to the Caribbean, from museum heists to sarcophagus scams to kidnapping attempts of their own, all while revealing tidbits of their respective family dramas and burdensome legacies of crime. The novel could sorely use more depth, but Ross' complicated relationships with her mother and others she trusted give momentary glimpses of emotional connection. WJ

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The ultimate competition between thieves tests friendships and family ties. Seventeen-year-old Rosalyn "Ross" Quest, a member of a notorious Black Bahamian family of globe-trotting thieves, has spent her entire life honing her skills and following in her mother's footsteps. But now she just wants to live a normal life, go to college, and make some friends her age. When her attempt to evade her family and secretly make it to a summer gymnastics camp goes awry, Ross' mother is left in a life-threatening situation, and the only way Ross can save her is by competing in the Thieves' Gambit, a potentially deadly heist competition that offers its winner one wish. Ross is up against the biggest names in the game from around the world, including Noelia, a Swiss girl who's her childhood enemy. Hopping from country to country as she competes in increasingly dangerous challenges, Ross must discern whom she can trust, if anyone, while her feelings for fellow competitor Devroe, a Black British boy, grow. In a manner true to the genre, the pacing is fast, and readers will experience the best kind of whiplash as the story moves from one heist to the next. The characters are also fully realized, and it's impossible not to root for Ross as she tries to figure out who she's meant to be. A fast-paced roller coaster of a read. (Thriller. 13-18)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Debut author Lewis illustrates a captivating push and pull narrative that centers a girl yearning for a "normal" life while navigating a dangerous game where cons and trickery are rewarded. Black Bahamian 17-year-old Ross Quest comes from a family of thieves; with her mother, she completes daring heists around the globe. Though her thrilling life has afforded her close family ties, Ross has always been desperate for friends, and intends to sneak away to a gymnastics camp. On the night she plans to leave her life of crime, the job her mother is on goes sideways, resulting in her capture by mysterious assailants, who hold her for a ransom of one billion dollars. To save her mother's life, Ross enters the Thieves' Gambit, a legendary, potentially fatal tournament in which the world's top teen thieves must complete a series of heists, competing to be granted their heart's desire. With her childhood enemy Noelia, who is Swiss and white, also competing, Ross knows she must remain guarded, but she soon finds herself taken with handsome and cunning Devroe, who is Black and British. Fresh descriptions of varied backdrops, including the Bahamas, Cairo, and France, elucidate wanderlust vibes in this edge-of-the-seat thriller. Ages 12: up. Agent: Chelsea Eberly, Greenhouse Literary. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 9 Up--The Quest family is the North American crime family and Ross Quest is no ordinary teenager; she's a prodigious master thief known for her skills in orchestrating daring escapes. However, she wants nothing more than to get away from her family and live an ordinary life. During their last heist together, Ross's mother is captured for a billion dollar ransom. This forces Ross to take part in prestigious criminal contest the Thieves' Gambit, an electrifying series of high-stakes and dangerous heists spanning the globe. The victor is allowed one wish. Ross believes she will win, and plans to use the wish to rescue her mother. As Ross navigates the contest, she finds herself pitted against other teens skilled in the ways of thievery. Among them are an adversary from her childhood and a smooth-talking, attractive contender. When the stakes are huge, Ross must make the difficult decision about who to deceive and who to trust, all the while racing against the deadline that her mother's captors gave her. This thrilling adventure takes readers on a roller-coaster ride through a world of international thievery and high stakes schemes. The plot is full of heists, double-crosses, and unexpected alliances. The pacing is brisk with tension steadily building through the narrative. One of the novel's strengths is its exploration of moral ambiguity--characters are often presented with difficult choices challenging their own notions of right and wrong. Readers feel characters' struggles as they grapple with the consequences of their actions; this adds complexity to the story and elevates it beyond a mere adventure tale. VERDICT A recommended purchase for any high school library, this is a compelling choice for readers seeking a fast-paced escapade filled with intrigue and daring thefts and those who enjoyed Jennifer Lynn Barnes's The Inheritance Games or Brittney Morris's The Jump.--Jeni Tahaney Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2349252 Hatchet Girls (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Diana Rodriguez Wallach

When Mariella Morse accuses her boyfriend, Vik Gomez, of murdering her wealthy parents with an axe, the town is quick to believe her. It doesn't help that Vik is caught standing over her parents' bodies with blood on his hands, unable to remember anything about the night in question.

978-0-593-64341-9 Delacorte Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 710

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A new start for one family collides with the violent and repeating history of another. Moving to Fall River, Massachusetts, was supposed to offer a fresh start for Tessa Gomez's family after her father's death. Her brother, Vik, has settled in more quickly than she has; he's head over heels for new girlfriend Mariella Morse, who is white and the daughter of the town's wealthiest, most well-connected businessman. She's also a descendant of the infamous Lizzie Borden. When Tessa, whose family is Puerto Rican, wakes to news that Vik, found covered in blood, was arrested for the axe-murder of Mariella's parents, she knows in her heart that there is more to the story. Though unraveling the truth about the threads of violence that run through Fall River will be dangerous, neither human nor supernatural forces are prepared for the determination of a sister who believes in her brother's innocence. This creative spin on the tale of Lizzie Borden asks readers to consider issues of race, power, and control through the abusive and dysfunctional relationships surrounding Mariella's family, some of which more effectively masquerade as healthy than others. Told from both Tessa's and Mariella's third-person viewpoints and packed with action, the book's layered, emotionally well-rounded characters add depth to the horror elements. A fresh, fantastic twist on a crime with an enduring legacy. (Thriller. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly orror novel by Wallach, inspired by the 19th-century Lizzie Borden murders, drips with blood, gore, and enging originality. Following an unexplained incident in her hometown, Puerto Rican high school junior Tessa Gomez, her 18-year-old half brother Vik, and their mother move to Fall River, Mass., famous for the Borden killings. Vik soon begins dating white-cued classmate Mariella, daughter of the town's richest residents, who endures constant emotional abuse from her father. When Vik is found at the site of Mariella's parents' deaths covered in their blood, everyone is certain he's the killer. But Tessa knows that Vik would never commit such an act and, aided by Mariella, vows to find the real culprit. The key to the mystery lies in the ominous local woods, where the girls must face monsters both human and demonic if they hope to survive the investigation. Present-day chapters; rendered in anticipatory-feeling prose and bursting with foreboding ambiance; follow Tessa as she seeks to absolve Vik of his crime, while alternating sections center Mariella at myriad points in time, including the night of the murders and the two months prior. Ages 12: up. Agent: Lane Heymont, Tobias Literary. (Oct.)

#2349244 Project F (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jeanne DuPrau

WELCOME TO THE FUTURE. There are no cars, planes, television, or smart phones. Climate change wreaked havoc on Earth hundreds of years ago, and now people live a simpler life. Then thirteen-year-old Keith uncovers a secret. It's a mysterious mission known only as Project F. It's advanced, it's scientific, and it's going to change the world. It's exactly the kind of adventure Keith has always longed to be a part of.

978-0-593-64380-8 Random House Children's Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-7 Keith Arlo, 13, lives in a postapocalyptic world where fossil fuels nearly made the planet uninhabitable; now, the use of those fuels is strictly outlawed. Tasked with the responsibility of bringing his cousin Lulu back home after she lost her parents in an accident, he sets off on his two-day train trip. It's there that he meets a man named Malcolm, and after an accidental swap of their bags, Keith unearths a hidden operation known as Project F. Intrigued by what the project could mean for the future, Keith decides to dig deeper to find out more about the operation that Malcolm is so determined to bring to fruition. What he uncovers, however, leaves Keith in a dilemma: Do the benefits of moving humanity forward outweigh the disadvantages it would also bring? The author of the popular City of Ember series is back with a story that comments on the dangers of global climate change and reliance on fossil fuels. Middle-graders who like their books short and fast-moving will enjoy this imaginative piece of cli-fi. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Several hundred years in the future, one boy has the chance to fly--but at what cost? When 13-year-old Keith Arlo's family receives word that his aunt and uncle have unexpectedly passed away, he is sent to collect Lulu, his 6-year-old cousin, and bring her back to live with them. Most people in Keith's country live in one of seven cities surrounded by nature, and most people do not travel far, so Keith is excited to finally experience train travel. On the journey, he happens upon a man who's involved with the mysterious Project F, and he cannot contain his curiosity. Even after he returns home, Keith keeps thinking about the project and its wonders. Project F has a darker side, however, one that is tied to the times that came before, the use of fossil fuels, and the massive changes humanity experienced long before Keith's birth. Meanwhile, Lulu struggles with the loss of her parents and the large secrets that she carries. This deliberately paced story, reminiscent in tone to older classics but original and timely in its subject matter, explores issues of environmental degradation, renewable energy, and how the future might be shaped. The narrative is satisfying and the questions prescient; young readers looking for something slightly different will enjoy speculating about how our future might appear. Main characters appear to be white. A compelling, nostalgic-feeling story exploring contemporary issues in a futuristic setting. (author's note) (Post-apocalyptic. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Centuries after the Sudden Fall, during which governments across the globe forbade the use of fossil fuels, humankind has adopted a more eco-friendly way of living based on rejecting electricity in favor of renewable resources. As a result, most children, like 13-year-old Keith Arlo, have never encountered a working car, cellphone, plane, or television. While traveling via train to Sandwater City to retrieve his recently orphaned cousin Lulu, Keith encounters a man named Malcolm who claims to be working on Project F, an engineering scheme in remote Graves Mountain. Upon Keith's arrival in Sandwater, he realizes that his and Malcolm's bags were accidentally switched, prompting him and Lulu to detour to Graves Mountain on their return journey. There, they learn the secret of Project F: Malcolm's team is developing a revolutionary new mode of transportation. Now Keith and Lulu are sworn to secrecy as they become embroiled in a venture that could change the world. Using distant-feeling omniscient prose and employing well-meaning messaging that provides much to think about, DuPrau (City of Ember) crafts a postapocalyptic adventure that reads like a cautionary tale about climate change, technology, and unchecked progress. Characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Nancy Gallt, Gallt & Zacker Literary. (Oct.)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Project F by Jeanne DuPrau (The Books of Ember series) is a gentle and affecting children's solarpunk novel about a 13-year-old boy's misadventures with a mysterious (and dangerous) technology.

#2355959 15 Secrets to Survival (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Natalie D. Richards

When classmates Baxter, Abigail, Turner and Emerson break a school rule, they're

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

forced to travel to the middle of nowhere for an extra credit project. They think things can't get much worse. After all, how will learning to survive in the wilderness help them stay out of trouble in school? What starts off as a weekend of team building takes a scary turn when their instructor goes missing and they are given nothing but pages of a survival guide to complete a series of challenges.

978-0-593-64412-6 Delacorte Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 384 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 740

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly All his life, 12-year-old Baxter Phillips has been part of what his mother coined "The Getalong Gang," a playgroup comprised of her and her best friends' children. In addition to gamer Baxter, there's perfectionist Emerson and her gentle-giant twin brother Turner Casella, and Abigail Walters, a competitive gymnast with confidence in spades. The problem is, the four middle schoolers rarely get along. When the tweens' tension comes to a head during a school-sponsored trivia contest, they're disqualified for unsportsmanlike conduct. As further punishment, they're forced to complete a group extra-credit assignment, which involves the gang being sent to stay with Baxter's survivalist great-uncle Hornsby in the Montana winter wilderness, an event intended to teach them teamwork. But when Uncle Hornsby sets up an elaborate network of interconnected puzzles, Turner, Emerson, Abigail, and Baxter, along with his feisty younger sister Vivi, rush to solve the puzzles with the help of pages from Hornsby's self-written guide to survival; until something goes awry with Hornsby's plans. Immediate first-person, present-tense prose keeps the emotional resonance high in this fast-paced adventure that features a charging moose, potential hypothermia, and plenty of friendship drama. Characters read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Suzie Townsend, New Leaf Literary. (Nov.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–6—Because their parents are best friends, Baxter, Abigail, Turner, and Emerson have been thrown together since they were babies, even being dubbed "The Get-along Gang." But the group is very different now, and they haven't actually been real friends in years. In fact, they actively dislike one another. When a school project goes awry due to "inappropriate use of the text chat feature," their parents decide to send the four off to Baxter's eccentric uncle, an ex-camp counselor and wilderness expert, for a weekend teamwork bootcamp in western Montana. Things do not go well. First there's the addition of Baxter's 18-month-old sister, Vivi, to their group (and the horror of changing her diapers). Then Uncle Hornsby unexpectedly goes missing, leaving the kids with nothing to guide them but a few pages of a survival handbook. This highly readable thriller highlights four kids with unique talents, all of which become crucial to complete their seemingly impossible task. Excellent characterization, rich details, and an exciting setting bring every harrowing adventure to life as the kids learn the value of working together, and the value of one another's strengths and passions. VERDICT A teamwork-oriented update of Hatchet, this fast-paced adventure story is recommended for all collections.—Rebecca Kirshenbaum

#2349054 Mr. Whiskers and the Shenanigan Sisters (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Wendelin Van Draanen

Mr. Whiskers is a street-wise stray dog with a nose for trouble and a fondness for two girls he calls the Shenanigan Sisters. So when Misty and Zelda's professor father is kidnapped, Mr. Whiskers follows that car, picking up vital clues.

978-0-593-64430-0 Knopf Books for Young Readers ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 208 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 640

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist A stray dog who “nose” his way around detective work helps two newly arrived boardinghouse sibs find and fetch back their “dadnapped” father in this breezy and pun-ishing caper. Hardly have Misty and Zelda Nanigan—dubbed the “shenanigans” by the canine narrator—seen their archaeologist single dad hustled off by toughs than they’re on the job, pulled, pushed, and prodded by a ruff streetwise pooch and supported by a network of doggy spies and informants. Along with laying down a trail of juicy clues to sniff out on the way to an exciting denouement, Van Draanen chucks in a stash of pirate gold (a classic MacGuffin if ever there was one) to go with a raft of likewise classic tropes, from a secret room and a hidden staircase to hints of ghostly doings in a ramshackle old San Francisco manor. By the end, the slobbery sleuth will have won over readers just as he does the Nanigan clan, though many will wish for more of Cataln’s well-crafted, detail-rich monochrome illustrations.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Misty, 10, and Zelda, 11, search for their kidnapped dad, Professor Nanigan. Narrator Mr. Whiskers, a pun-loving stray dog who roams the neighborhood looking for a home, calls the sisters the Shenanigans and their father Henanigan. The family lives in a broken-down San Francisco boardinghouse owned by Aunties Tiana and Jada, who can't afford to make much-needed repairs. After a suspicious-looking man claiming to be an FBI agent arrests the professor, and some supposed cops show up asking about stolen coins he was allegedly selling on the black market, the young sisters leap into action with Mr. Whiskers, who has a great sense of smell and some helpful four-legged pals. The girls decipher the meaning of their dad's parting words and discover some old coins in a secret room in the house. Is this what the phony law officers are after? Could this treasure help the Aunties? The girls and their doggy friend must use smarts and strengths to find the professor. The dog-related puns pile up as the narrative draws to a climax. Written by a prolific practitioner of the genre, this lighthearted, fast-paced mystery features an endearing canine lead, two fearless kids, and plenty of wordplay, all of which will appeal to young readers. The Nanigans present white in the detailed grayscale artwork, while the Aunties appear to be women of color. A mystery both gripping and heartwarming. (Mystery. 8-10) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Loose on the streets of San Francisco, a scrappy stray mutt with a "ruff"-and-tumble vernacular winningly narrates this snazzy mystery caper by Van Draanen (The Peach Rebellion). Canine Mr. Whiskers; so-named by 10-year-old Misty Nanigan and her sister Zelda, who seek him out every now and then to slip him treats on the sly; smells "trrrrouble" when a fishy-looking stranger claiming to be an FBI agent arrives at the Merryweather boarding house looking for Misty and Zelda's archaeology professor father. After "Fishy" uses zip ties to kidnap Professor Nanigan and usher him into a waiting Prius, Mr. Whiskers gives chase, gathering valuable clues that he then brings back to the worried siblings. As girls and pooch embark on their investigation, Misty and Zelda grow closer to their savvy, loyal pet, who's eager to take a bite out of crime. Using brief cliffhanger chapters, brisk pacing, and humor-infused prose, Van Draanen sustains suspense as the sisters navigate clue-filled riddles and secret passageways, uncover long-lost treasure, and outwit a nasty trio of thieves. Catalan captures key dramatic and heartwarming scenes featuring both people, most of whom default to white, and pup via cozy b&w illustrations. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

#2365863 Bumps in the Night (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Amalie Howard

Darika "Rika" Lovelace is in trouble. The kind of trouble that sends her to her grandmother's estate in Trinidad for the whole summer. But something about the island feels different. As soon as she steps off the plane, strange things start happening!

978-0-593-64587-1 Delacorte Press ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 730

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Now that her mom is supposedly off in New York and her dad is remarried to a woman with two children, Darika "Rika" Lovelace can't help but feel abandoned. After defacing school property using her artistic skills--a possible cry for attention--Rika is shipped off from Colorado to her granny's in Trinidad for the summer. Upon arrival, supernatural events involving jumbies (monsters) and evil spirits spring forth, revealing secrets of her maternal family's connection to witchcraft, along with her mother's true whereabouts. Rika will need to trust herself and work with new friends (and an adorable talking iguana) to protect the island--and the world--from further havoc. Howard, popular with adult and teen readers, fills her first middle-grade fantasy with Trinidadian folklore. She smoothly intertwines environmental issues and romance into the story for more depth. Many young readers will empathize as Rika learns to connect with her blended family, all the while gaining confidence in herself and her magic. An excellent read for those who crave adventure with a touch of eeriness. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Twelve-year-old Darika Lovelace is spending the summer in Trinidad with her grandmother; she feels like her dad and stepmother don't want her around because she has been getting in trouble. She also misses her mom, who left two years earlier. When she arrives in Trinidad, she notices a strange woman looking at her; she asks about it, but Granny brushes her off. Later, Granny asks her to clear out her mother's childhood room and finish the mural her mom started. While painting the mural, Darika begins to have strange visions of her mom trapped in a tree she painted. Darika learns from some neighborhood kids that she is a witch and must save her mother. Howard mixes Trinidadian folklore with present-day issues to create a fast-paced adventure. Her descriptions of the island are vivid and create a strong sense of place; references to popular video games add appeal. Fans of Baptiste's Jumbies series will enjoy this accessible page-turner. Nicholl Denice Montgomery(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 12-year-old has a lot to learn about her true powers and her mom's side of the family before she can save everyone she loves. Since her parents' divorce and her mother's disappearance, Skittles-loving Rika Lovelace-Rose from Colorado has had a lot of complicated feelings but not the best channels for expressing them. Sending her to visit Granny in Trinidad and Tobago was supposed to help. Yet, when she meets a talking iguana and a grimoire speaks to her, it becomes obvious to Rika that there's a lot more to her maternal line than meets the eye. An art project offers a revelation that may answer questions about where Mom's gone. With Piku (the baby iguana with the heart of a dragon) in tow, Rika teams up with a crew of magical tweens to uncover even more Trini folkloric mysteries that, as a Lovelace, she's intimately tied to. Eventually, it becomes obvious: Rika is a witch. The father of Nox, Rika's annoyingly cute crush, is trapped along with Rika's mom in an evil silk cotton tree; to get them back and save the world, Rika and friends must work together to navigate a maze, overcome puzzling trials, and combat Caribbean monsters, including douens, a soucouyant, and la diablesse. The twists and turns, mythological elements, and compelling narration pack a punch. The novel centers Black and brown characters, reflecting the diversity of the setting. Exciting, culturally rich fun and adventure. (author's note) (Paranormal. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A rebellious aspiring artist and incoming eighth grader delves into her family's history; and learns that monsters and magic are real; in this electrifying adventure by Howard. After being written up for vandalism "again" and kicked off the soccer team, brown-skinned Darika "Rika" Lovelace-Rose's frustrated father confiscates all her electronic devices and sends her from Colorado to Trinidad to spend the summer with her maternal grandmother. Upon arrival, Rika meets handyman Becks, who escorts her and Granny to the family estate. Becks warns Rika of the erratic weather the island has been experiencing and implores her to stay away from the nearby woods, claiming that the devil resides there. Though Rika doesn't believe in magic or monsters, she can't shake the feeling that her absent mother might be closer than she thinks. After Rika unearths a grimoire with her own name on it, she discovers that she comes from a long line of witches, prompting her to team up with new friends to search for her mother and uncover the truth behind the devil in the woods. Rika's determination to embrace her newfound magical abilities and save her family and maternal country land are admirably depicted. Combined with fantastical, climate-conscious scenarios and vivacious and illuminating Black Indo-Trinidadian diaspora folklore that springs from the pages, this beguiling read; led by an intrepid heroine; is one to savor. Ages 8: 12. (Feb.)

#2333510 See You on Venus (Library Binding (Trade))

written by Victoria Vinuesa

Mia has had a heart condition her whole life. She's not afraid of dying but something has always stopped her from her biggest fear: tracking down her biological mother in Spain...until now. Before her next surgery, Mia wants to meet the woman who gave her away once and for all. Kyle has always been the life of the party...that was until the car accident that killed his best friend. Since then he's been reeling with guilt and willing to do just about anything to escape his reality.

978-0-593-70514-8 Delacorte Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile 800

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$15.99

#2255295 Fairy Tale Land: 12 Classic Tales Reimagined (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kate Davies

The tales are expertly retold, perfect for bedtime, and each story is followed with an exquisitely illustrated, detailed map of its neighborhood. You can drop into Hansel and Gretel's cottage, explore the palace from Beauty and the Beast, and dive deep under the sea with the Little Mermaid. What wonderful things can you find in your favorites' homes?

978-0-7112-4753-6 Frances Lincoln Books ©2021 11-3/4 x 12-7/8 112 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$35.00

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Strange realms and enchanted kingdoms recur in this appealing collection of gently updated classics that encompasses mostly European fairy tales and stories, including Robin Hood, "The Snow Queen," and Treasure Island, Davies's retellings deftly preserve the originals' sense of magic while recontouring plots to better suit modern sensibilities; in "Beauty and the Beast," the Beast needs friendship, not love, to break his curse, and in "The Little Mermaid," the mermaid chooses to return to her family, spurning the shallow prince: "I have my own palace, thank you." Clerc's intoxicatingly detailed, lushly colored illustrations are richly botanical, offering a riot of blooms and branches, with protagonists of varying skin tones. Each tale is capped with a full spread landscape depicting the story's setting, even if distracting asides offer unnecessary commentary ("Cinderella's sisters are mean and cruel; avoid them"). Casts a charming spell all its own. Ages 7: 10. (Nov.)

#2378497 Wolf-Men and Water Hounds: The Myths, Monsters and Magic of Ireland (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Manchan Magan

Uncover the secrets of our island in this engrossing look at magical landmarks across the country. Traveling province by province through Ireland, Manchan outlines the stories most closely associated with each site, focussing on a specific beast or creature from legend and highlighting a magical word or phrase in Irish alongside.

978-0-7171-9611-1 Gill Books ©2023 11-3/4 x 10-3/4 64 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$27.95

#2308338 Wandi (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Favel Parrett

A young cub is snatched from his family and home by a giant eagle, then dropped, injured and alone, in a suburban garden. This is where he meets his first Human, and begins his long journey to becoming the most famous dingo in the world. He will never see his mountain home again, or his family. But it is his destiny to save alpine dingoes from extinction, and he dreams of a time when all cubs like him can live in the wild in safety, instead of facing poison and bullets and hatred.

978-0-7344-2063-3 Lothian Children's Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-3/4 256 pgs.
Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

#2377480 Night War (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kimberly Brubaker Bradley

It's 1942. German Nazis occupy much of France. And twelve-year-old Miriam, who is Jewish, is not safe. With help and quick thinking, Miri is saved from the roundup that takes her entire Jewish neighborhood. But Miri's life is no fairy tale. Her parents are gone-maybe alive, maybe not. One thing is certain: The person Miri meets that night will save her life. And the person Miri becomes that night could save the lives of many more.

978-0-7352-2856-6 Dial Books ©2024 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 288 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Paris, France. July 10, 1942. A Jewish refugee, 12-year-old Miri, is forced to flee Paris when gendarmes round up all the Jews in the city. She is helped in her escape with her neighbor's two-year-old daughter, Nora, by a sympathetic nun, who arranges transport to a small town in the French countryside. En route, Miri is separated from Nora and becomes desperate to find her and flee to Switzerland. Before that can happen, however, she--masquerading as a Christian--becomes a student at a Catholic girls' school. There, an elderly nun, Sister Annunciata, presses her into dangerous service as a guide, secretly leading refugees to the nearby Vichy border. To her surprise, Miri is aided by the elderly, imperious Madame Simone, who harbors an astonishing secret. Bradley has crafted a compelling historical novel told in Miri's apposite first-person voice. The book has a hint of magic that, while initially jarring, ultimately becomes as satisfying as the whole of this fine novel. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine In 1942, French police in Occupied Paris rounded up over thirteen thousand French Jews and corralled them into a stadium; almost all perished at Auschwitz. Bradley's (The War That Saved My Life, rev. 1/15, and sequel) story begins just before the Jews are forced into the stadium, and Miri's neighbor thrusts her toddler into Miri's arms and tells her to run. Thanks to compassionate, quick-thinking nuns, the two end up in a village near Catherine de Medici's sixteenth-century castle, Chenonceau. Hiding in plain sight among summer boarders at a convent school, Miri (now known as Marie) grows familiar with the castle -- and with a ghost visible only to her, of Catherine de Medici herself. When Miri gets involved in rescuing refugees, Catherine repeatedly steps in to help her out. This is an engaging, imaginative yarn, and Miri's vulnerability and sense of responsibility give it emotional weight and contemporary appeal -- despite, or perhaps because of, the ways it stretches credulity. Given the ease of a few elements as well as a helpful ghost and Miri's talkativeness -- even when hiding from German soldiers only a few feet away -- the novel is something of an unlikely confection, like the fairy tale-esque castle at its center. Best read in tandem with more straightforward Holocaust accounts. Deirdre F. Baker(Copyright 2024 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young girl escapes a Nazi roundup and plots to flee occupied France. The year is 1942. Twelve-year-old Miriam Schrieber and her parents live in Paris, having fled Berlin after Kristallnacht in 1938. But the Nazis invaded France two years later, and Miri remains haunted by the memories of witnessing her neighbor Monsieur Rosenbaum being taken away. Now, the gendarmes are rounding up all the Jews in her neighborhood and putting them on buses bound for the Velodrome d'Hiver, where they'll await an unknown fate. Miri's parents are missing when the roundup takes place, and Madame Rosenbaum urges Miri to escape with Nora, her toddler daughter. The girls flee and are saved by a Catholic nun, who arranges to send Miri to a convent school in Chenonceaux. The village fortunately borders Vichy France, offering an escape route to Zurich, where Madame Rosenbaum's cousin lives. Nora is placed with a Catholic family, and Miri does her best to fit in with the other students. A desperate moment leads Miri to channel her fear into the courage required to help refugees seek safety across the border, while also plotting her own escape with Nora. This poignant story moves quickly but takes care to consider with sensitivity the excruciating choices Miri must make at every turn as she's torn between choosing safety and honoring her heritage and her convictions. A gripping, humane tale that examines what war demands of children and what it costs them. (author's note) (Historical fiction. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This well-paced novel by Bradley (Fighting Words), set in 1942 Nazi-occupied France, poses thoughtful questions about religious divides and parallels through the experiences of 12-year-old Miriam Schreiber, a German Jew who fled Berlin for Paris with her parents after Kristallnacht. When all the Jews in her neighborhood are rounded up, Miri is separated from her parents and escapes with two-year-old neighbor Nora. Saved by a Catholic nun, the children are sent to Chenonceaux, where the Chateau de Chenonceau straddles the border of occupied France and French-controlled Vichy. Nora is given to a Catholic family, while Miri; pretending to be Christian and going by Marie; is sent to a convent school, where she discovers that two nuns are secretly helping to smuggle Jews across the border. Suffering from fear and anxiety and plagued by guilt for choices she believes she failed to make to save her mother and Nora's father, Miri; aided by a mysterious, imperious elderly woman; takes on risky responsibilities. Miri's highly credible emotions and actions make for a deeply sympathetic character facing increasingly dangerous and suspenseful circumstances; secondary characters are satisfyingly complex. All characters present as white; several are Jewish. A historical note concludes. Ages 9: 12. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--Historical fiction at its finest. In 1942 a brave Jewish girl escapes from a roundup in Paris and takes her neighbor's baby in a desperate flee to safety, hoping to be reunited with her family. Miri finds herself hidden in a Catholic boarding school in the town of Chenonceaux. She discovers that the nuns who are hiding her also work in the fledgling movement to help Jews escape Nazi persecution. The Château de Chenonceau spans the river Cher that separates Nazi-occupied France from Vichy France, and Miri undertakes several rescue operations through the castle despite the watchful patrols of Nazi soldiers. The layers of storytelling include the mystical presence of Catherine de Medici, who befriends Miri, and several memorable Catholic nuns. Two-time Newbery honoree Bradley is at her best here; this is a novel that brings layers of the past to life in a way, connecting readers to a historic era and showcasing the author's expertise as a gifted storyteller. VERDICT Bradley's latest masterpiece features a determined and daring heroine and details that bring the past to life. Readers will be wholeheartedly rewarded.--John Scott Copyright 2024 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2167566 Clan (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Sigmund Brouwer

Injured as a child, Atlatl dreams of one day earning his father's respect as a hunter. But when Atlatl brings the young saber tooth to his Clan, it leads to a devastating moment of torn loyalties between Atlatl and his father--a moment that will change their lives forever.

978-1-101-91849-4 Tundra Books ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 810

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up—Atlatl, a young boy living in the Stone Age, hopes to earn his father's respect as hunter. Atlatl's father is the leader of the Clan and shows his disappointment on an almost daily basis. Atlatl, who sustained a debilitating childhood injury, can't hunt and provide food. One day, when Atlatl experiments with a new weapon that he intends to show his father, he is stalked by a large female saber-toothed tiger. When a pack of wolves attacks and kills the mother, Atlatl is thrust into the caregiver role of protecting the baby sabertooth. He decides to bring the cub back to the Clan, which leads to consequences and even further isolation from his father—banishment, the worst punishment for any Clan member. Without the protection of the group, Atlatl is susceptible to a variety of predators: The short-nosed bear, dire wolves, and cheetahs. As the rainy season approaches and the Clan decides to move to higher ground, disaster strikes. Atlatl must find a way to survive using his wits, loyalty, and bravery to face his biggest foe yet and to save what remains of his Clan. VERDICT A solid read for fans of Gary Paulsen's Hatchet and general adventure fiction.—Amy Caldera, Dripping Springs M.S., TX

#2235052 Escape to Witch City (Hardcover (Trade))
written by E. Latimer

Emmaline Black has a secret. She can hear the rhythm of heartbeats. Not just her own, but others' too. It's a rhythm she's learned to control, and that can only mean one thing...Emma's a witch.

978-1-101-91931-6 Tundra Books ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 840

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly out this tale of survival, Latimer (Witches of Ash and Ruin) conjures the sensibilities of an alternate early 19th-century London, one in which magic exists and witches are vilified. Queen Alexandria Black, who staunchly set out on an anti-witch crusade after reclaiming the throne post: witch uprising, rules with a campaign of fear and surveillance. Emmaline Black, her niece, lives in the castle with her mother Isolde; both have the dark hair and pale skin of the family line. As Emma's 13th birthday approaches, she becomes increasingly restless, especially as she'll be Tested for witch blood; something every child, even Crown Prince Edgar, must undergo. While at the Testing, Emma meets two other 13-year-olds, dark-skinned Eliza, who has tight curls, and freckled, light blue-eyed Maddie. But things soon go awry, leading the trio, and Edgar, to flee the city in search of answers; and others like them. This pulse-pounding adventure will engage readers with its sense of wonder grounded by relatable, age-appropriate experiences, including arguments with parents, fear of not fitting in, and a burgeoning search for self. Ages 10: up. Agent: Silvia Molteni, Peters Fraser & Dunlop. (Aug.)

#2049776 Strongheart: Wonder Dog of the Silver Screen (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Candace Fleming

When movie director Larry Trimble travels to Berlin searching for his next big star--a dog!--he finds Etzel, a fierce, highly trained three-year-old German shepherd police dog. Larry sees past the snarls and growls and brings Etzel back to Hollywood, where he is renamed Strongheart.

978-1-101-93410-4 Schwartz & Wade ©2018 6-1/4 x 8 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 2.0 RC Lvl 3.2 Lexile 560

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Fleming and Rohmann (Bulldozer's Big Day; Oh No!; and Giant Squid) team up on a new book based on the true story of Strongheart, a vicious police dog turned lovable silent movie star. A puppy named Etzel is taken from his family and trained to act against his gentle instincts. Meanwhile, Larry Trimble and Jane Murfin, movie producer and screenwriter, respectively, are searching for a canine who can actually act. When Larry discovers Etzel, he renames him Strongheart and sets out to make him a silent movie star. He becomes a Hollywood sensation, able to convey emotions on-screen and sniff out the bad guys in real life. Rohmann's illustrations largely consist of Strongheart in various situations (at police dog training, on his first movie set, meeting orphan boys), with very few drawings of the human characters. The subject matter, coupled with the illustrations, make Strongheart ideal for reluctant readers, particularly animal lovers. The back matter (which includes photos of Strongheart and his on-and-off-screen partner, Lady Jule) is extensive enough to satisfy curiosity about the real Strongheart and illuminate the sections of the book that are Fleming's speculation, such as those parts of the story told from Strongheart's perspective. VERDICT This fictionalized account of true events provides a look into the life of a little-known historical figure, and makes an excellent choice for general purchase.-Jessica Ko, Los Angeles Public Library Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2067274 Marcus Vega Doesn't Speak Spanish (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Pablo Cartaya

After a fight at school leaves Marcus facing suspension, Marcus's mom decides it's time for a change of environment. She takes Marcus and his younger brother to Puerto Rico to spend a week with relatives they don't remember or have never met.

978-1-101-99726-0 Viking ©2018 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 6.0 RC Lvl 4.3 Lexile HL 580

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In Springfield, Pa., Marcus, a six-foot tall, 180-pound, mustache-sporting 14-year-old, exploits his appearance to run a bullying protection business, secretly contributing his earnings to his single mom's cash jar. When a conniving school bully calls Marcus's brother, Charlie, who has Down syndrome, the "R" word, Marcus gets suspended for punching him. In an effort to "spend time together as a team," Marcus's mother takes the boys to visit their absent father's relatives in vibrant pre-Hurricane Maria Puerto Rico. Cartaya (The Epic Fail of Arturo Zamora) poignantly sketches Marcus's desire to meet his father ("How do you start an email to a father you haven't seen in ten years?"), and clues about his dad's mercurial, irresponsible character build to a devastating realization. The loneliness of the family's Pennsylvania life contrasts starkly with the community they find in Puerto Rico; the events spark for Marcus a new understanding of his overworked mother and appreciation for his family and heritage, offering hope for deeper connections going forward. Ages 10--up. Agent: Jess Regel, Foundry Literary + Media. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7-This middle grade story, set in Pennsylvania and Puerto Rico, pulls together important themes of family, identity, bilingualism, friends, and bullying. Marcus Vega navigates his six-foot-tall, 180-pound frame through middle school while also caring for his younger sibling, Charlie, who has Down Syndrome. Because of his large size, some of his peers consider him to be a monster, or even a bully. When a real bully uses the "R" word in reference to Charlie, Marcus punches him in the jaw. This begins a series of events in which he is expelled from school before spring break, causing his mother to take the boys to Puerto Rico where they are introduced to their father's extended family for the first time. Marcus decides to locate his long-absent father and over the course of five days, readers travel the island with him as he is introduced to its rich flora and fauna, foods, community life, music, and friendliness. Marcus eventually comes to terms with his life challenges, including his own identity. VERDICT An excellent choice for upper elementary and middle grade libraries given its multiple, age-appropriate themes and the window it provides to life in a Puerto Rico before Hurricane Marfa.-Ruth Quiroa, National Louis University, Lisle, IL Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2178084 Eleanor, Alice, and the Roosevelt Ghosts (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Dianne K. Salerni

Murderous ghosts and buried family secrets threaten young Eleanor and Alice Roosevelt in this thrilling middle-grade novel that puts a supernatural spin on alternate history.

978-0-8234-4697-1 Holiday House ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 8.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 In her most recent novel, set in 1898, Salerni (The Eighth Day, 2014) expertly mixes fact and fiction to create a bright historical adventure. Many readers may not expect the history of a beloved presidential family to contain an alarming amount of death and calamity, but the Roosevelts experienced more than their fair share of tragedy, particularly in the case of cousins Eleanor and Alice. Salerni places their true story of loss and friendship in a fictional world plagued by ghostly eruptions of supernatural energy, and their strength in the face of adversity is made all the more memorable and noteworthy. The young women, teenagers in the tale, must investigate an unexpected haunting that brings to light a hidden and complicated family history. Their alternating perspectives provide fascinatingly different depictions of their resilience in the face of tribulations. This book is highly recommended for fans of historical fiction and thrilling mysteries. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide w York City, cousins Eleanor and Alice Roosevelt unite to solve the mystery of the ghost who has recently "erupted" in their aunt Bye's house. Here ghost eruptions are common; professional diagnosticians determine if spirits are Friendlies, Unawares, or Vengefuls. The one haunting Aunt Bye's house is initially categorized as a Friendly -- so why the vicious pranks, the cruel auditory hallucinations, the attempted poisoning of Aunt Bye, and worse? Salerni skillfully incorporates facts about the extended Roosevelt family (Theodore's grief over his first wife's death; the burgeoning romance between Eleanor and Franklin) into a lively and inventive ghost story/mystery/historical fiction mashup. Chapters alternate between Eleanor's and Alice's point of views, allowing readers insight into each young woman's thoughts, emotions, and personality. Introverted and awkward, Eleanor longs to continue her education in London and escape life with her oppressive Grandmother Hall; daring, self-confident, outrageously misbehaving Alice misses the mother she never knew and longs for her distant father's attention. Initially not at all close, the two bond over their shared mission to solve the mystery and dispatch the ghost, and in so doing uncover a second haunting and a dark family secret. Although the novel is engrossing right from the start, tensions build very quickly to a thrilling, Ghostbusters-esque climax, and readers will never think about FDR in quite the same way again after seeing him swing an iron poker at a ghost -- though in fact it is Eleanor and Alice who finish the job. Who you gonna call? An author's note provides additional information about the Roosevelt family. (Copyright 2020 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The Roosevelt family is haunted by a treacherous spirit. In an alternate 1898, ghosts are a common occurrence. Some are unaware of their own spectral status, most are harmless, but a few are a bit vengeful. When a peculiar spirit awakens in the old Roosevelt family house in New York City, cousins Eleanor and Alice must strive to overcome their differences and figure out just what this spirit wants. The ghost authorities claim the spirit is harmless, but the little tricks the presence pulls become more and more dangerous as time goes on. Meanwhile, another dark force has emerged in the house where Alice was born and her mother died. Are the two ghosts connected? The Roosevelt family secrets hold all the answers, and the two teen girls discover them one by one. This mix of history and fantasy creates a nifty setting for a middle-grade mystery, but there's one big problem: The Roosevelts all sound the same. Alice and Eleanor are described as total opposites, but their spoken patterns are nearly identical, making the complex relationships all the harder to decipher, even with the aid of the family tree that is provided. The constant muttering of "Wait, which one is talking this time?" kills the narrative's flow, destroying the pacing that's so crucial to a mystery's success. A poorly characterized mystery. (author's note) (Mystery. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Thirteen-year-old Eleanor Roosevelt and her 14-year-old cousin Alice could not be more different. Eleanor is practical and meek, while Alice is reckless and brash. And in this alternate version of 1898 New York City, ghosts are definitely real, and hauntings are an accepted part of life. When a haunting "erupts" in the home of the girls' beloved Aunt Bye, they resolve to overcome their differences and team up to investigate and hopefully eradicate the ghost. Their sleuthing leads to a shocking discovery that forces them to confront family ghosts, both literally and figuratively. The Roosevelt family is known for its many celebrated, larger-than-life personalities, and it is refreshing that Salerni centers these charismatic female characters. But the plot hinges on the alteration of the true circumstances of the deaths of Theodore Roosevelt's mother and first wife, a tragedy that is somewhat cheapened when retold as a ghost story. Nevertheless, the supernatural phenomena associated with the haunting are chilling, and the protagonists' plucky bravery is undeniable. Fans of presidential history will likely appreciate the novel's hint at a budding romance between Eleanor and Franklin, but true history buffs may be dismayed by Salerni's deviation from the truth. VERDICT A unique premise that doesn't quite live up to its potential, though it may appeal to ardent fans of historical fiction and ghost

#2209011 Place to Hang the Moon (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Kate Albus

It is 1940 and William, 12, Edmund, 11, and Anna, 9, aren't terribly upset by the death of the not-so-grandmotherly grandmother who has taken care of them since their parents died. But the children do need a guardian, and in the dark days of World War II London, those are in short supply, especially if they hope to stay together. Could the mass wartime evacuation of children from London to the countryside be the answer?

978-0-8234-4705-3 Margaret G Ferguson ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.0 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review The year is 1940, and German air strikes on London are looming. After their formidable, wealthy grandmother's funeral, orphans William (12 years old), Edmund (11), and Anna (9) Pearce learn that they will be evacuated to a village where (the solicitor charged with their welfare hopes) they might find a permanent home. They live with a butcher's family until Edmund retaliates against one of the bullying sons by placing a dead snake in his bed. A desperately poor mother with four young children takes them in but barely feeds them. Their only refuge is the lending library, where they find a warm fire, good books, and kind words. After their short-tempered caretaker slaps Edmund, the children strike out on their own and unexpectedly find a new home on Christmas Eve. Albus achieves a great deal in her first novel. While the Pearces' initially bleak situation is firmly rooted in classic children's books (a bibliography of their reading choices is appended), the narrative is fresh, lively, and captivating. The characters are drawn with conviction and a good deal of empathy. Lit by wit and humanity, the novel offers a heartening story in which three resourceful children keep a secret, find what they long for, and treasure it. COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When the grandmother of William, Edmund, and Anna Pearce dies, the siblings are left with an inheritance but no guardian, and 1940 London is hardly the place to go looking for anyone to adopt three children. They evacuate to the countryside, cautioned by their grandmother's solicitor not to mention anything about an inheritance unless all three agree they've found a worthy family. The first family seems promising, until the sons begin to bully the Pearce boys, and hot-headed Edmund is having none of that. The second family, comprising a worn-out mother and a brood of neglected children, is more interested in the Pearces' ration allotments and free labor than in caregiving. In the background of their tribulations stands the local librarian, Mrs. Muller, who understands that they need the refuge her library can provide and, as a village outlier suspected of having married a Nazi, also understands what it means to live on the margin. It doesn't take much guessing to know that Mrs. Muller's home will be their home, but it's in the often crisp, often cozy detailing and the ever-so-British turns of phrase ("For June of 1940 was, even for those who had not recently become orphans, a time of most uncertain futures") that this novel claims a place among the most kid-pleasing orphan stories. The loyal bonds among the Pearce siblings and Mrs. Muller's bottomless well of patience, ingenuity, and perfectly tailored reading lists will have readers aching to swap their own messier families, however briefly, for the Pearces' home and hygge. The characters' reading lists are included. EB

Reviews by: ForeWord Magazine In Kate Albus's wonderful novel A Place to Hang the Moon, terrible times lead to gutsy solutions for three orphaned children who take a chance to find a new home. William, Edmund, and Anna live with their atrocious grandmother in London. When their grandmother dies, the children are left with a pile of money, but nobody to look after them. Their family lawyer hatches a plot to send the children to the countryside; with luck, they will find a forever home and a new family to love. The three siblings pack their bags with the usual clothes, shoes, and "one small family memento." Edmund quips, "No worries there...That'll save you some room." His words become a poignant reminder of how little their children have from their parents, beyond the manufactured memories that William shares with his siblings at bedtime. The dramatic historical backdrop--World War II and the bombings of London--is blistering, characterized by suspicion toward anything German, and filled with danger. The children's life is hard: they are bullied as "filthy vakies," tangle with a frightening teacher, and face the grinding poverty of the war years. They bounce from house to house, never really finding the home they hoped for. But they remain affable. Their secret weapon is that they are all voracious readers: they find inspiration in The Count of Monte Cristo, and enlightenment through reading the encyclopedia. They find solace in the town's little library, whose librarian is their perfect adult contact, even if German connection makes her a social outcast. Both touching and genuine, the historical novel A Place to Hang the Moon speaks to the power of stories and families, both of which can be found in the most unexpected places. COPYRIGHT(2020) Foreword Magazine, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Three plucky orphan siblings are in search of a mother in wartime England. When their grandmother dies, 12-year-old William, 11-year-old Edmund, and 9-year-old Anna are left in London in the care of an elderly housekeeper. As part of the World War II evacuation of children to safety, they are relocated to the countryside, something the family solicitor hopes may lead to finding adoptive parents. However, they are billeted with the Forresters, an unpleasant family reminiscent of the Dursleys. Bullying by their hosts' two sons, who despise them; the ever present fear of German attack; and the dread of homelessness test their mettle to the limit. The orphans long to find a home of their own, and good boy William is stressed by his responsibility as head of the small family. Edmund's desire for revenge against the Forresters and a prank involving a snake get them evicted from their billet, and they end up in a much worse situation. They find sanctuary in the village library and a savior in the librarian, who is married to a German and therefore ostracized by the locals. Mrs. Müller provides them with moral support, a listening ear, and true appreciation and love. The classic books she chooses for them--The Wind in the Willows and Anne of Green Gables, among others--may generate ideas for further reading. All characters are White. A wartime drama with enough depth and psychological complexity to satisfy budding bookworms. (reading list) (Historical fiction. 12-16) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In this heartwarming debut that contains nods to British children's classics, three orphans; heirs to a fortune; join the WWII London evacuation after the death of their forbidding grandmother leaves them guardianless. Though they seek safety from the Blitz and the possibility of finding a permanent, loving home, the siblings' plight instead becomes precarious. At their first residence, responsible 12-year-old William, roguish 11-year-old Edmund, and earnest nine-year-old Anna encounter bullying from their foster siblings. At the next; a starkly impoverished billet with a harried mother of four; the children experience hunger, and the boys are forced to kill rats for extra funds. Happily, a friendship with their village's warm librarian, regarded by many with suspicion because of her absent German husband, offers solace and hope to the three. Albus infuses the closely bonded siblings' search for found family with dry humor ("Funeral receptions can be tough spots to find enjoyment"), affectionate and authentic-feeling characterization, and a plot that alludes to and aligns with the works of Enid Blyton, Frances Hodgson Burnett, and E. Nesbit. Includes a bibliography of books mentioned. Ages 9: 12. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7--It's 1940 in London, and William, Edmund, and Anna have found themselves orphaned for the second time in their short lives. With the Nazis breathing down England's neck, the children are sent, with hundreds of other children, to the countryside to live with a billet, a foster family that takes them in temporarily and protects them from the war. Their family's solicitor has advised them to be on the lookout for a family that could be a forever home for them while there. The oldest, William, has the best memories of their mum and dad and often tells stories about them to his siblings, one being that the children were so loved that they could probably hang the moon in the heavens if they wanted to. With that in mind, the three of them know that only a family that thinks the children "hang the moon in the heavens" will be the right fit. While away in the countryside, the children stay with a variety of families, some more traditional than others. With the solace of the little library as their only constant and the town librarian their only friend, the children learn to piece together a family until a real one is found. Told in third person, Albus's rich character descriptions and quick story pace will keep tweens turning the pages until the very end. Vivid details of World War II-era England are written from a child's perspective. Characters are white. VERDICT For fans of Kimberly Brubaker Bradley's The War That Saved My Life, this is a highly recommended purchase. Readers will laugh, cry, and root for the three siblings as they endeavor to survive in this endearing tale.--Tracy Cronce Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2227717 Most Perfect Thing in the Universe (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Tricia Springstubb While 11-year-old Loah Londonderry's mother, a noted ornithologist, works to save endangered birds of the shrinking Arctic tundra, shy and timid Loah stays home counting the days till her return. But now, believing she's sighted Loah's namesake, a bird long believed extinct, Dr. Londonderry sets off on a risky solo trek that alarms Loah and makes her wonder if her mother cares more about Loah the bird than Loah her daughter. 978-0-8234-4757-2 Margaret G Ferguson ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs. Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 6.0	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Eleven-year-old Loah Londonderry, a rather shy, quiet homebody, looks forward to her adventurous mother's return from the Arctic tundra, but one phone call soon derails that plan. Excited by the reported spotting of a loah bird, which was thought to be extinct, Dr. Londonderry, an ornithologist, has decided to track it down on her own for a few weeks. Meanwhile, Loah remains at home, under the care of elderly Miss Rinker and her brother. When both are hospitalized, she struggles to keep their absence a secret in order to maintain her independence. Another call brings alarming news from the Arctic, and Loah decides to act, though it will take all her wits, determination, and courage to save her mother. From Loah to her caretakers to her only friend, the characters have convincing backstories that shed light on their idiosyncrasies. The well-paced story, enhanced with avian information and enchantment, builds in intensity as Loah becomes more isolated and self-reliant, yet increasingly focused on others. The novel concludes in a heartening, wholly satisfying way, suitably accompanied by birdsong.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Eleven-year-old Loah is desperately looking forward to her ornithologist mother's return from an Arctic expedition when she receives a phone call from Mama saying that she's staying a little longer to track the elusive loah bird. Loah is a homebody, comfortable in her dilapidated house and cared for by the elderly Rinkers, but the news of Mama's delay is so painful that she uncharacteristically bikes across town in an attempt to escape her thoughts and ends up meeting Ellis, a girl who is also trying (unsuccessfully) to flee her own family turmoil. The two strike up a friendship, a lucky turn for Loah as she needs all the support she can get when the Rinkers end up in the hospital, the local housing inspector threatens to deem her house uninhabitable, and her mother goes incommunicado. The third-person narration manages both compassion and cleverness with direct addresses to the reader that oscillate in tone between thoughtfully poignant and drolly amused. There's sympathy for Loah but never pity, and the narrator has far more belief in Loah than Loah does in herself. The book makes clear the distinction between loving someone and caring for them, and both Loah's and Ellis' experiences convey how painful the absence of either can be. Like Standish's The Mending Summer, reviewed below, this forgives the failing adults in Loah's life without absolving them, and Springstubb wisely gives the Rinkers and Loah's mother enough depth to garner readerly understanding as well. An author's note explains that the loah bird is fictional, discusses ornithology, and summarizes conservation efforts; a bibliography is appended. KQG COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Loah's widowed mother, Dr. Anastasia Londonderry, a world-renowned ornithologist specializing in birds of the Arctic tundra, is fearless and adventurous, attributes that are the polar opposite of those possessed by her daughter, a shy homebody. Dr. Londonderry's passion takes her to the Arctic for extended periods, and she depends on an elderly pair of siblings, the Rinkers, to take care of Loah and the house -- a system that works well until it doesn't. The breakdown comes at the beginning of summer when Dr. Londonderry elects to stay in the Arctic, on her own. Her situation turns precarious; both Rinkers fall ill and are hospitalized; and the house, in a state of neglectful disrepair, is cited for numerous code violations. It's up to Loah to somehow save her mother, support the Rinkers, and deal with threatening visits from an unfriendly housing inspector -- a series of challenges not included in her usual skillset. Spurred into action by a new friend who is as bold as Loah is timid, Loah finds the internal strength to meet these external forces. The authentic and compelling narrative sings with avian metaphors as Springstubb plays with language, crafting her story around the concept of an egg -- "the most perfect thing in the universe" -- an object that initially houses life but in time allows that life to emerge independently. (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Loah's been left--again--in the care of the elderly Rinkers while her mother is on an Arctic expedition. A determined homebody, 11-year-old Loah doesn't enjoy her mother's long, sometimes perilous journeys. This one's been unexpectedly extended since her mom, an ornithologist, believes she's spotted a loah bird, the very rare animal for which Loah was named. Stiff, seemingly unemotional Miss Rinker and her brother, gentle, bumbling Theo, are nice enough, but they are inadequate substitutes for a mother who is so deeply engaged in her professional life. When Loah befriends Ellis (or L.S., whose real name is Little Squirrel), a girl just as deeply in need of TLC as Loah, it puts into motion a series of tender gestures. One lovingly crafted character after another (most seemingly White) reaches out to offer unexpected, desperately needed support, demonstrating a remarkable chain of interconnectedness. As Loah's mother had said, "All living creatures depended on one another in ways big and small." With mysterious noises emanating from Loah's crumbling home's turret, Ellis' seemingly monstrous grandfather, a threatening, busybody home inspector, and a suspenseful accident in the Arctic, there is plenty to keep readers engaged in this heartfelt exploration of goodness. Never-intrusive environmental lessons are an added bonus. Satisfying and life affirming: a perfect thing in the universe of juvenile fiction. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Eleven-year-old homebody Loah Londonderry, who enjoys knitting and loves the family's rickety old home, is the opposite of her single mother, a dedicated ornithologist who's away in the Arctic longer than planned, risking her life to save her daughter's namesake, the nearly extinct loah bird. Left in the care of elderly siblings, gentle Theo and tough Miss Rinker, Loah is overwhelmed by problems: Theo, falling ill, has to be hospitalized; a city home inspector keeps coming around, demanding repairs be made to Loah's beloved house in the woods; and her new friend Ellis wants to run away. Loah keeps her worries inside until an incident forces her to step outside her comfort zone, seeking aid and protecting what's dear. Through metaphor and imagery, Springstubb's (Every Single Second) tender, sensitively written story captures the essences of places and characters, including frequently dismayed, brave Loah. In addition to offering unique personalities across the cued-white cast and a lesson about global warming, the book provides a host of facts about birds. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Sarah Davies, Greenhouse Literary. (June)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6--Loah Londonderry's mother is off on yet another expedition while Loah stays behind in their large old home with caretakers Miss Rinker and her brother Theo, who look after her while Dr. Londonderry is away. Loah's mother may be an adventurer at heart, but timid Loah is a homebody, who counts the days her mother has been gone and tries to keep busy, as Miss Rinker always suggests. But this summer it seems everything is going wrong. Dr. Londonderry may be on the brink of a discovery, so her trip has been extended. Theo has a medical emergency, and Loah is left alone while Theo is in the hospital and Miss Rinker stays with him. And a man who says he is a housing inspector from the city keeps dropping by at unexpected moments. That would be a lot for anyone to handle, much less a shy homebody. Readers will cheer as Loah steps up and makes things happen, with the help of some unexpected friends. It's a sweet, satisfying story full of heart--and fascinating facts about birds, climate change, and the environment. An author's note explains that while Loah's namesake, the loah bird, is fictional, other bird facts in the book are true, including the fact that climate change is affecting many birds' habitats. Loah and most of the primary characters are cued as white. VERDICT An excellent choice for fans of realistic fiction and readers interested in nature.--Mindy Rhiger, Hennepin County Lib., MN Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

#2178086 Pine Island Home (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Polly Horvath

When the McCready sisters' parents are washed away in a tsunami, their Great Aunt Martha volunteers to have them live with her on her farm in British Columbia. But while they are traveling there, Martha dies unexpectedly, forcing Fiona, the eldest, to come up with a scheme to keep social services from separating the girls - a scheme that will only work if no one knows they are living on their own.

978-0-8234-4785-5 Margaret G Ferguson ©2020 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 240 pgs.

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 For those who like to settle into a comfy spot and spend quality time with spunky heroines and quirky supporting characters, Horvath's latest certainly fits the bill. Like the author's The Canning Season (2003) and Everything on a Waffle (2001), food plays a part in helping four orphaned sisters stick together despite the fact that their great aunt, who was meant to take them in, has actually died, leaving them to fend for themselves on her farm in British Columbia. In order to fool the locals into thinking an adult is watching over them, the oldest girls bribe a cranky neighbor, Al, who has his own secrets, with dinners delivered to his door. While Marlin pours her efforts into her culinary creations and Fiona handles their finances, Al goes along reluctantly, but crises keep popping up. One sister gets lost on a mountain, and another attracts the attention of a friendly, but hungry, bear. Readers will keep going with the hope that things somehow will work out. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2020, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books After sisters Fiona, Marlin, Natasha, and Charlie are orphaned, they're sent to stay with their great-aunt Martha on a Canadian island; unfortunately, they arrive in British Columbia to discover Martha's just died. Since she was their last resort and they're determined to avoid being split up, they decide to stay in Martha's house and fly under the radar ("If they didn't tell anyone they were living without a grown-up, who was to know?"). Eventually they're helped by the kind local teacher and by their grumpy, much-less-kind neighbor Al, who are in on the secret, but fourteen-year-old Fiona still struggles to keep her family together and provide for them as they need. Horvath fans will recognize her recurring subject of kids outside of traditional adult care, and the book deftly balances a twenty-first century setting with a classic orphan-story feel. Indeed, the story gains impact from the tension between the girls' belief in a storybook solution to their plight and the realities of loss ("The frightening knowledge that people you were a part of could be just gone") and a situation that is just too much for them to handle. The girls are well distinguished as characters, and there's plenty of humor in witty turns of phrase and their eccentric lives. Ultimately, it's an appealing domestic survival story with a slice of reality, bound to appeal to youngsters who contemplate an adult-free life. DS

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Horvath (Everything on a Waffle, rev. 5/01) returns to her sweet spot (parents lost in tragic accident; quaint British Columbia setting) for her latest novel. When after a long journey orphaned sisters Fiona, Marlin, Natasha, and Charlie arrive at the Pine Island home of the only relative willing to take them in, they discover that Great-Aunt Martha has died and that her house is theirs. They decide, audaciously, to stay. Reasoning that in order to avoid foster care they must find an adult willing to be their guardian, even if in name only, they hire a neighbor, the bellicose and usually hungover Al, to pose as theirs. The book's tension grows from Fiona's attempts to keep the tenuous deception going as she struggles to juggle household and school responsibilities; act as surrogate parent to her younger sisters; put off a suspicious lawyer; and find the money to pay hefty inheritance taxes. Of course, everything would be much easier if the girls had a real guardian, and they pin their hopes on teacher Miss Webster, who has been let in on their secret. Horvath's resolution nicely subverts just about all readers' expectations (though that ending comes quite abruptly); meanwhile, readers will be treated to a story featuring suspense, believable characters, a fully realized setting, and nuggets of Horvath wisdom ("It suddenly occurred to her that...Ya bear's] mind might be full of all kinds of things just as hers was. The things he loved, the things he feared, the things he missed, the new things he was puzzling out. That any creature's life was made up of the wonderful jumble of what they held in their head and their heart"). (Copyright 2020 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Horvath (Everything on a Waffle, rev. 5/01) returns to her sweet spot (parents lost in tragic accident; quaint British Columbia setting) for her latest novel. When after a long journey orphaned sisters Fiona, Marlin, Natasha, and Charlie arrive at the Pine Island home of the only relative willing to take them in, they discover that Great-Aunt Martha has died and that her house is theirs. They decide, audaciously, to stay. Reasoning that in order to avoid foster care they must find an adult willing to be their guardian, even if in name only, they hire a neighbor, the bellicose and usually hungover Al, to pose as theirs. The book's tension grows from Fiona's attempts to keep the tenuous deception going as she struggles to juggle household and school responsibilities; act as surrogate parent to her younger sisters; put off a suspicious lawyer; and find the money to pay hefty inheritance taxes. Of course, everything would be much easier if the girls had a real guardian, and they pin their hopes on teacher Miss Webster, who has been let in on their secret. Horvath's resolution nicely subverts just about all readers' expectations (though that ending comes quite abruptly); meanwhile, readers will be treated to a story featuring suspense, believable characters, a fully realized setting, and nuggets of Horvath wisdom ("It suddenly occurred to her that...[a bear's] mind might be full of all kinds of things just as hers was. The things he loved, the things he feared, the things he missed, the new things he was puzzling out. That any creature's life was made up of the wonderful jumble of what they held in their head and their heart"). Martha V. Parravano September/October 2020 p.92(c) Copyright 2020. The Horn Book, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Four orphaned girls try to figure out how to get along on their own. When a relative is found to take them in after their missionary parents' sudden deaths by tsunami, the McCready sisters move from Borneo to British Columbia only to discover that Great-Aunt Martha has died unexpectedly. However, Martha has left her paperwork in good order, registered the children at the local schools, and stocked her house with food and beds. Fourteen-year-old Fiona must keep everyone together and avoid alerting social services. The school principal is sympathetic and supportive. The cranky neighbor, Al, a drinker who lets fly the occasional oath and whose trailer home is in disarray, reluctantly agrees to pretend to be the girls' guardian. They think of him as the Waste Troll, based on a disparaging comment by the McCreadys' garden-gnome-look-alike lawyer. While Marlin, 12, discovers her affinity and talent for cooking and baking, Natasha, 10, becomes a bird-watcher, and Charlie, 8 and a worrier, befriends Al before any of the others. The default white is assumed. Horvath, ever respectful of the inner lives of children, has a way of incorporating moments of sweet hilarity into an account that makes the girls' situation seem plausible. She doesn't stint on vocabulary or on sophisticated observations, yet her narrative arc is direct and extraordinarily satisfying, with its emphasis on competence and survival of the domestic, familial, and emotional sort. Delightful. (Fiction. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Readers who have grown to love Newbery Honoree Horvath's (Everything on a Waffle) slightly quirky characters and unique situations will not be disappointed by this suspenseful story of four orphaned sisters in Borneo, who are in a pickle after their missionary parents are swept away by a tsunami. None of the girls' "suitable" relatives are willing to take in the four children, so as a last resort, 14-year-old Fiona and her younger siblings are sent to their "peculiar" Aunt Martha, who lives in the woods of British Columbia; upon arriving, they discover that Martha has died of a heart attack but had prepared her home for their stay. Terrified that they will be separated and placed into foster care, they reside in their aunt's cottage and bribe her grumpy, beer-guzzling neighbor Al to pretend to be their guardian if they bring him dinner; "a hot dinner"; every night. Still, practical-minded Fiona fears it is only a matter of time before social services or Aunt Martha's suspicious attorney discovers their ruse. Presenting a delicate balance between traumas (sister Natasha getting lost in the woods) and joys (finding an unexpected cohort in the elementary school principal), Horvath's wide array of contrasting personalities adds humor and depth to the familiar premise of orphans forced to survive on their own. Ages 9: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal GR 4-7-Fourteen-year-old Fiona's take-charge nature comes in handy when the four McCready sisters are orphaned, and only upon arrival find that their aunt no longer lives in British Columbia. Energetic Fiona, practical Marlin, dreamy Natasha, and timid Charlie hatch a plot to avoid social services, enlisting the crotchety next-door neighbor to pose as their guardian, trading him Marlin's home-cooked dinners and $20 a week for car rides and an adult signature when needed. Once readers are on board with the girls' very occasional sadness over the loss of both parents, the story is warm, funny, and insightful. School principal Miss Webster and conservation officer Don Pettinger help keep their secret, but the girls, in grades from high school to elementary, make a run at challenges quite ingeniously on their own. Al Farber is a richly drawn curmudgeon, with depth of character that brings to mind Susan Smith from Kimberly Brubaker Bradley's The War that Saved My Life. VERDICT Horvath hits the perfect notes of independence, adventure, and sentimentality, without being cloying. Hand to fans of Jeanne Birdsall's The Penderwicks and Karina Yan Glaser's The Vanderbeekers of 141st Street. Deserves a place in most middle school libraries.--Maggie Knapp, Trinity Valley Sch., Fort Worth, TX Copyright 2020 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2227716 Everywhere Blue (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Joanne Rossmassler Fritz

When twelve-year-old Maddie's older brother vanishes from his college campus, her carefully ordered world falls apart. Nothing will fill the void of her beloved oldest sibling. Meanwhile Maddie's older sister reacts by staying out late, and her parents are always distracted by the search for Strum. Drowning in grief and confusion, the family's musical household falls silent.

978-0-8234-4862-3 Holiday House ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.0 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 570

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The musical and natural worlds help a tween understand her family and her personal dynamics. Twelve-year-old Madrigal begins her story in November in a diminuendo mood. Maddie is studying the oboe, the instrument that voices the Duck in Peter and the Wolf, and she is dedicated to improving her technique so she can perform the solo in her school's winter concert. Her world changes when her older brother, Strum, a college student deeply concerned about the environment, disappears. Maddie compulsively counts objects and believes that even numbers are the best. She is a gifted math student who appreciates order and regularity, eating the same precisely prepared sandwich for lunch every day. January is a month of staccato as Maddie thinks of herself as a fraction, divided from the brother who makes her whole; reflecting his favorite color, she plays Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue. She regards February as a month of crescendo when, as a member of the environmental club at school, she visits a blue morpho butterfly exhibit that gives her an idea as to where Strum has gone. The combination of free verse and first-person narrative convey Maddie's thoughts as she learns to appreciate that both music and family follow strong emotional currents, not just the precision of a metronome. The family defaults to White. An insightful exploration of a girl's inner tickings. (Verse novel. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7—Musical and poetic, this is a brave, rich debut novel about mental health and climate change. Maddie, short for Madrigal (like everyone in her family, she has a musical name) likes sameness. Whenever Maddie is stressed, she counts things and hopes they come out to an even number; this calms her. There's a lot to be worried about these days—the quality of her oboe playing, her dad's strictness, her sister Aria's increasing distance, and her older brother Strum's sudden disappearance from college—and lots of her counting comes to odd numbers. There's a dissonance in this musical family, and no one can figure out where Strum has gone or why. Maman, who is French, flies to Colorado to search for him; Daddy follows and leaves Maddie home with Aria, who is even more determined to break the rules now that their parents are gone. Knowing Strum's increasing concern with ecology and conservation, Maddie joins Eco Club with her best friend, Emma, and lands a solo in the upcoming school concert; she experiences common middle school concerns like fitting in while navigating intense family struggles at home. The book is written in verse, and the plot is broken into four narrative segments and utilizes musical terminology like diminuendo in the beginning and crescendo at the end. The imagery of blue morpho butterflies swirling with the conflict and connection in Maddie's life during her oboe solo is particularly beautiful. VERDICT Libraries need more titles featuring young people who care about climate change and live with undiagnosed mental illness, and this fresh novel in verse fits the bill.—Jamie Winchell, Percy Julian M.S., IL

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

#1936533 Crenshaw (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Katherine Applegate

Jackson and his family have fallen on hard times. There's no more money for rent.

And not much for food, either. His parents, his little sister, and their dog may have to live in their minivan. Again.

978-1-250-04323-8 Feiwel & Friends ©2015 5-3/4 x 7-1/2 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.8 AR Pts 3.0 RC Lvl 4.2 Lexile 540

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6. Soon-to-be fifth-grader Jackson goes for facts and science—things that are real and true—and having a giant, talking cat around doesn't fit the bill. It has been years since his imaginary feline friend Crenshaw was on the scene, and Jackson can't figure out why he is back or how to make him go away. It soon becomes apparent that all is not well in Jackson's home. Though he has a loving family, money is tight. Jackson can't help remembering back to when they had to live in a minivan—that was when he first met Crenshaw—and he fears that might happen once again. Newbery winner Applegate (The One and Only Ivan, 2012) uses gentle humor, embodied by Crenshaw, to explore the topic of homelessness. Jackson's anxiety is central to the narrative, and his concerns will resonate with readers who have been in stressful situations. Though the story is weighty, it is a quick read that encourages people of all ages to be honest with one another and value family and friends (real and imaginary!).

Reviews by: Horn Book Jackson is a scientist, a skeptic, and nobody's fool. He's the resilient fifth-grader (the "most grown-up one in the house") in a dreamy, overwhelmed family that has fallen on hard times. But sometimes even the hyper-competent need help, and when Jackson's family faces homelessness once more, his former imaginary friend, a giant cat named Crenshaw who's visible only to Jackson, makes a reappearance. Crenshaw is neither cute nor obviously supportive. He takes bubble baths, constantly asks for purple jelly beans, and makes gnomish pronouncements ("You need to tell the truth, my friend...To the person who matters most of all"). Jackson tries to banish him, but Crenshaw insists that he has been summoned. Applegate walks a tightrope through this whole robustly sweet narrative. Crenshaw is both real and imaginary. Jackson's family is loving, optimistic, and functional in its way, but the tenuousness of the family's situation and Jackson's lack of control over his own fate are stressful. "Were we going to have enough to eat tomorrow?...Were we going to be able to pay the rent?...Would I go to the same school in the fall?...Would it [homelessness] happen again?" The tone is warm and, occasionally, quirkily funny, but it doesn't sugarcoat the effects of hunger and vulnerability. This novel adds a middle-grade perspective to the literature of imaginary friends and paints a convincing and compassionate portrait of a social class—the working poor—underrepresented in children's books. sarah ellis

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Applegate tackles homelessness in her first novel since 2013 Newbery winner The One and Only Ivan. Hunger is a constant for soon-to-be fifth-grader Jackson and his family, and the accompanying dizziness may be why his imaginary friend is back. A giant cat named Crenshaw first appeared after Jackson finished first grade, when his parents moved the family into their minivan for several months. Now they're facing eviction again, and Jackson's afraid that he won't be going to school next year with his friend Marisol. When Crenshaw shows up on a surfboard, Jackson, an aspiring scientist who likes facts, wonders whether Crenshaw is real or a figment of his imagination. Jackson's first-person narrative moves from the present day, when he wishes that his parents understood that he's old enough to hear the truth about the family's finances, to the first time they were homeless and back to the present. The structure allows readers access to the slow buildup of Jackson's panic and his need for a friend and stability in his life. Crenshaw tells Jackson that "Imaginary friends don't come of their own volition. We are invited. We stay as long as we're needed." The cat's voice, with its adult tone, is the conduit for the novel's lessons: "You need to tell the truth, my friend...To the person who matters most of all." Though the lessons weigh more heavily than in The One and Only Ivan, a potential disappointment to its fans, the story is nevertheless a somberly affecting one. (Fiction. 7-11)

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Although he is "not an imaginary friend kind of guy," rising fifth-grader Jackson recognizes Crenshaw immediately. The cat, who walks on two legs and likes purple jellybeans, first appeared to Jackson three years ago when his family was living in their van. Although life has been stable since then, Jackson notices "Big piles of bills. Parents whispering. Parents arguing. Stuff getting sold." When he asks his parents if they have "a plan for making everything okay," they respond with evasive answers like "maybe they could plant a money tree in the back yard." Newbery Medalist Applegate (The One and Only Ivan) poignantly conveys Jackson's memory of hunger and homelessness and his realization that both threaten his family again. Certain that he has outgrown Crenshaw, Jackson feels both dismay and wonder that his friend has returned, with his playful, attention-getting antics (taking bubble baths, doing cartwheels and handstands) and thought-provoking answers to Jackson's questions. This accessible and moving novel demonstrates how the creative resilience of a child's mind can soften difficult situations, while exploring the intersection of imagination and truth. Ages 10-14. Agent: Elena Giovinazzo, Pippin Properties. (Sept.) © Copyright PWxyz, LLC. All rights reserved.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-In her first novel since the Newbery-winning The One and Only Ivan (HarperCollins, 2012), Applegate tells the story of a 10-year-old boy whose imaginary friend helps him cope with a family crisis. Jackson, his parents, and his five-year-old sister once again are staring down the barrel of an impending eviction notice. What frustrates Jackson isn't just the lack of money: it's his artistically minded parents' tendency to gloss over their woes with humor and cheer rather than acknowledging the reality of their situation. It's understandably a shock to Jackson when an old friend reappears: Crenshaw, a seven-foot-tall talking cat, who first came into his life several years ago when the boy and his family were living out of their car shortly after his father was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis. Skeptical Jackson tries to dismiss Crenshaw as a figment of his imagination, but the cat's words of wisdom start to resonate with him. Employing sparse but elegant prose, Applegate has crafted an authentic protagonist whose self-possession and maturity conceal relatable vulnerability and fears. While sardonic Crenshaw may not be the warm and cuddly imaginary friend readers are expecting, he's the companion that Jackson truly needs as he begins to realize that he doesn't need to carry the weight of the world upon his shoulders. Though the ending wraps up a shade too neatly, overall, children will appreciate this heartbreaking novel. VERDICT A compelling and unflinchingly honest treatment of a difficult topic.-Mahnaz Dar, School Library Journal © Copyright 2015. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc. No redistribution permitted.

#2250939 Lost Language (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Claudia Mills

Sixth grader Betsy is the one who informs her best friend, Lizard, that thousands of the world's languages are currently threatened by extinction; Betsy's mother is a linguistics professor working frantically to study dying languages before they are lost forever. But it is Lizard who, gripped by the magnitude of this loss, challenges Betsy, "What if, instead of WRITING about dying languages, like your mom, you and I SAVED one instead?"

978-0-8234-5038-1 Margaret G Ferguson ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 4.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Sixth-graders Betsy (Bumble) and Liz (Lizard) have been best friends for years, despite Betsy's mother's reservations about audacious Lizard's influence on mild-mannered Betsy, who's under pressure from her mother to bloom. As Betsy's demanding mother battles with work challenges-she's a linguistics professor who studies dying languages-Lizard gets a thrilling idea: she and Betsy will learn one of those dying languages and help its survival, assisting Betsy's mom and proving the value of her project. The girls dive into basic GuernZsiais (the old language of the France-adjacent UK isle of Guernsey), but there's more going on with Betsy's mother than just work frustrations, and when the family situation erupts it leaves the girls divided and Betsy stunned. Mills writes in free verse here rather than her familiar prose, but her keen insight into dynamics and character remains evident, and the compact, accessible phraseology deftly distills the portrayals. Narrator Betsy is particularly well delineated as somebody who has her own strengths, not always visible to her mother, despite her willingness to let Lizard take the lead, and there's some gentle illumination of Lizard's limitations alongside respect for her. Betsy's family situation is also authentic, with its push-pull dynamic between her easygoing dad and hard-driving mother, and it's believable that her father's mishandling of her mother's suicide attempt-initially lying to Betsy about what happened and then letting the information leak so that Betsy's classmates know the truth before she does-rocks Betsy almost as much as the incident itself. Ultimately, though, it's satisfying to see Betsy weather adversity and prove her own strength: "I'm the one who gets to decide/ what blooming means to me." The author includes an extensive note about dying languages. DS COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide This verse novel is told in first person by one of a pair of sixth-grade best friends, both named Elizabeth. Narrator Betsy makes it clear from the beginning that her friend Lizard is more than a little bossy, as when she decides that Betsy was a "dumb name," eventually settling on Bumble as a better nickname. Betsy is also keenly aware that her brilliant linguist mother dislikes the nickname: "Every time my mom hears Lizard call me Bumble... / I can see her jaw tighten / with all the things she isn't saying." She realizes that her mom wants her to make her own decisions and not defer so often, but Betsy is comfortable in her role: "Lizard has to be the first at everything. / Most kids aren't as good as I am at being second." But friction arises between the two when Betsy wins a role in the school play and forms a new friendship; this eventually leads to a deep rift when Lizard reveals to their lunchmates that Betsy's mother is in the hospital following a suicide attempt. Mills uses poetry effectively to strip the layers away, conveying painful emotions in simple words that pack a punch: "Now Lizard doesn't have me / And I don't have her, / And we're never going / to have each other again." The format allows the titles of the poems to add their own little twists. The topic of a parent's suicide attempt is handled with sensitivity and compassion, and all the emotions ring true. (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An endangered language becomes a metaphor for people struggling to communicate. Betsy is "good at being second." Her mercurial linguistics professor mother works long hours, studying languages at risk of extinction, and has parental ambitions that sit uneasily on Betsy's shoulders. Her best friend, Lizard, meanwhile, is a possessive, outspoken, and brittle friend who brooks no opposition. Fortunately, Betsy's father is a steady, easygoing presence. The two Colorado sixth graders seize upon a plan: They will learn Guernésiais (a language from the Channel Islands with only a couple hundred speakers), get everyone at their middle school speaking it too, and surprise Betsy's mother with their good deed. The school musical--Betsy is excited to take part, Lizard is disdainful--leads to tension as Betsy considers the high personal cost of their friendship. Through well-drawn characters, this skillfully paced story thoughtfully addresses the need to be truly seen in our important relationships. However, the crisis of language loss is not sufficiently explained: The girls express a savior mentality ("I hope they'd be grateful that two kids in America / were at least trying to save their language for them") that is dramatically put in check. But without more context, readers may fail to fully understand the problem with their earlier attitude. Whiteness is situated as the default; Spanish-speaking students are present as background characters, and one of Betsy's friends from the play is Black. A sincere exploration of humanly imperfect love. (Verse novel.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Two presumed-white Colorado sixth-grader best friends named Elizabeth; known as "Bumble" and "Lizard," respectively; navigate their shifting friendship in this tender novel-in-verse by Mills (Zero Tolerance). According to Betsy's disapproving mother, a workaholic linguistics professor, Liz holds outsize sway in the girls' relationship. Still, when Lizard decides that she and Bumble should learn a dying language to save it from extinction and impress Bumble's mother, Bumble eagerly follows her lead. Their attempts prove frustrating, however, when no one else seems interested in their mission. Meanwhile, Bumble lands a nonspeaking role in the school's production of Alice in Wonderland and finds new friends, making Lizard jealous. When they both experience family crises, a cruel betrayal further threatens the girls' fragile relationship. Conveyed in the first-person perspective, Bumble's epiphanies and observations are crystallized through concise language and evocative descriptions ("Her face looks like/ the face in this famous picture/ of a person screaming/... like when you're in a bad/ dream and you're trying/ to call for help/ and no sound comes out."), while her evolving emotions surrounding her parents and Lizard are as eloquently conveyed as her growing understanding of the world. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Jennifer De Chiara, Jennifer De Chiara Literary. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up--Reserved Betsy trails in the wake of two domineering women in her life: her mother and her BFF, Lizard. Mom, a career-obsessed linguistics professor, has little time for Betsy or her devoted father. Mom's not fond of Lizard, whom she (ironically) thinks is too controlling. Betsy is aware of the imbalance in both relationships, but isn't ready to challenge them yet. In an effort to please Betsy's mother, the friends launch a club at their middle school to "save" a dying European language. The club fails, but sets Betsy on a path of making new friends. Alienated, Lizard retaliates by revealing to classmates that Betsy's mother has just attempted suicide. The author doesn't expand the verse format beyond standard line arrangement and the language lacks the imagery of Thanhha Lai's Inside Out and Back Again. But Betsy's first-person narration is engaging and will speak to the many young readers who feel quashed by stronger personalities all around them. It's a pivotal moment of acceptance when Betsy's father observes, "sometimes someone who is quiet/ has their spunk and spirit/ deep inside, like a hidden treasure." The novel ends on a realistic, satisfying note as Betsy's family moves forward--together--and she and Lizard reach a new understanding. Race of the main characters is not described. Back matter hints at a possible meaning of the novel's title: the language we must never lose is the words to tell those we love how we truly feel. VERDICT Empowering and heartfelt; recommended for all middle grade collections.--Marybeth Kozikowski, Sachem P.L., Holbrook, NY Copyright 2021 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2324603 In the Tunnel (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Julie Lee

Trapped in an enemy tunnel, a young refugee experiences the Korean War firsthand in this searing story of survival, loss, and hope, a companion to the Freeman Award-winning novel Brother's Keeper.

978-0-8234-5039-8 Holiday House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-3/4 304 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist sequel, part companion to Lee's debut, this story centers on Myung-gi, close friend of Sora, the protagonist of Brother's Keeper (2020). Myung-gi is intelligent and a dreamer, due in no small part to his father, the principal of the local boy's school. Then the Communist regime takes over North Korea, ushering in an era of social and intellectual oppression. On the eve of his family's planned flight to the south, Myung-gi's father is captured by soldiers loyal to Kim Il-sung. The boy blames himself for his father's fate, as he was supposed to be keeping watch. Forced to leave their home, Myung-gi tamps down his guilt and focuses on getting his mother and sister safely to a refugee camp in Busan. Afterward, however, he enlists in the army in order to return to the north to find and free his father. Once again, Lee brings readers to the beginnings of the North Korean Communist regime. Myung-gi is an intriguing main character whose self-loathing and guilt alienate him from others. Yet, his earnest yearning to be as strong and virtuous as his absent father draws the reader in, allowing them to sympathize with his existential plight. This is an absolute must-read for those who have already read Brother's Keeper and a heart-wrenching meditation on family bonds and the responsibilities they entail. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine This companion novel to Lee's Brother's Keeper tells the story of Kim Myung-gi and his family from the end of Japan's occupation of Korea through Russia's invasion to the start of the Korean War. The narrative begins harrowingly in 1952 with the war underway and sixteen-year-old Myung-gi, a North Korean soldier, trapped in a collapsed tunnel. Chapters alternate between his desperate attempts to escape and flashbacks beginning in 1945 when he is nine. (The shifts in time are clearly indicated at the start of each chapter.) When it becomes too dangerous to stay in their village, the family makes plans to flee south to Busan, but Communist soldiers abduct Myung-gi's father before they can leave -- and Myung-gi blames himself. Their mother decides they will follow through with the plan to escape; their journey is fraught with peril. Ultimately, Myung-gi is rescued from the tunnel; an epilogue told from his father's point of view, thirty-five years after the war, encapsulates the scope of loss for this family. Lee's vivid, visceral writing provides readers with an unflinching story of war and survival as well as an intimate look at everyday life for Koreans caught up in geo-political forces over which they have no control. Few books for young readers grapple with the Korean War from this perspective; it's an important story to tell, but the bleakness and emphasis on trauma make for a dark and intense read. Kitty Flynn(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A South Korean boy longs to rescue his father imprisoned in North Korea. It's 1952, and 16-year-old Myung-gi has joined the South Korean army in hopes of finding Ahpa, who was taken by North Korean soldiers two years prior. He's trapped in a tunnel at the North-South Korean border, and as he waits for what seems like inevitable death, flashbacks transport him to the events that led to this moment. He recalls his family's joy when Korea was liberated from Japanese imperial rule in 1945--and their despair as American and Soviet troops moved in and divided up the peninsula. His family ended up on the communist side. Myung-gi's father smuggled in Western books for him to read and committed other quiet acts of resistance before he was taken. His mother reminds him and his younger sister of his father's wish should he be arrested: They must undertake the dangerous journey hundreds of miles south to Busan, South Korea, and await him there. The family encounters numerous horrors along the way. Myung-gi's PTSD--in which nothing feels real and all that is familiar is rendered strange--rings entirely true, as does his prolonged grief over losing his father. Nuanced details about the immediate aftermath of World War II in northern Korea, with fraying political alliances, growing tensions among formerly friendly neighbors, and welcome pockets of ordinary life, shed much-needed light on this time in history. A gripping story about family, war, mourning, and resilience told with emotion and heart. (Historical fiction. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This moving historical novel from Lee (Brother's Keeper) opens in October 1952, centering bookish Myung-gi, who has joined the South Korean army in order to find his Ahpa. After an explosion traps 16-year-old Myung-gi in an enemy tunnel at the North-South Korean border, alternating chapters trace both his present awaiting death in the tunnel and past experiences beginning in 1945. Emotional third-person narration recounts Myung-gi's family's reaction to historical events, including the feeling of freedom at the end of Japan's imperial rule and rising tensions between Soviet-occupied northern Korea, where the family lives, and U.S.-occupied southern Korea. Ahpa's criticism of the occupying governments, his smuggling in Western books for Myung-gi, and his previous role as a factory owner necessitates the family's departure from their home to Busan. Myung-gi's father is taken by the Red Army before the family can execute their planned escape, however, and Myung-gi, younger sister Yoomee, and their Uhma must make a harrowing journey south to Busan alone, to avoid Myung-gi's recruitment. Interspersed between harrowing scenes of travel and remembrances of Myung-gi's father are the youth's thoughtful ruminations on the human cost of war. Lee compassionately depicts the difficult journey and Myung-gi's grappling with finding normalcy in this well-paced story about an underreported war. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Michael Bourret, Dystel, Goderich & Bourret. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up—Set in the 1950s, Lee's latest novel offers readers a glimpse of the brutal personal impacts of the Korean War. Myung-gi is 16—too young to go to war, and yet he's carrying a rifle, fighting in a conflict that's tearing families apart all across the country. He shouldn't be there at all. He loves books and reading, the sound of language flowing off the page, but he's come to the 38th parallel to find his father, Ahpa, who was taken by the secret police. This vivid, powerful title uses Myung-gi's story to give readers a firsthand glimpse of the political and military turmoil in mid—20th-century Korea. The book vividly captures the disorientation and longing of a young man who finds himself cut off from his home, his family, and his dreams for the future. Through flashbacks, Lee shows how her characters reassemble the pieces of their lives to create a new, more hopeful story. VERDICT This companion novel to Brother's Keeper is recommended for readers of historical fiction—particularly fiction that deals with themes of war, trauma, and disconnection.—Talea Anderson

#2282521 Star That Always Stays (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Anna Rose Johnson

Back on Beaver Island, Grand-père told Norvia stories--stories about her ancestors Migiizi and Anang, about Biboonke-o-nini the Wintermaker, about the Crane Clan and the Reindeer Clan. He sang her songs in the old language, and her grandmothers taught her to make story quilts. There, there was no shame in being Chippewa.

978-0-8234-5040-4 Holiday House ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 224 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.9 AR Pts 13.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Norvia grew up on Beaver Island, picking berries, listening to her grand-père's stories of their Ojibwe ancestors, and finding comfort in the stars up above. Now, at 14, in Boyne City, Michigan, Norvia's mother is remarrying. Norvia and her siblings know there will be difficult changes, but they are shocked that they must begin hiding their Native ancestry. As Norvia starts high school, she is heartbroken to realize that people are gossiping about her mother's divorce and their heritage. Norvia and her siblings find comfort and hope in their new family, though, and courage and friendship while navigating first experiences of high school. This beautiful historical novel, based on the author's family, contains flashbacks to the family's time at Beaver Island, providing insight into the traditions and time Norvia enjoyed, along with a glimpse into why her parents separated. A glossary, pronunciation guide, and family photographs add depth. A heartfelt novel about embracing one's identity, appreciating what the past has taught, and finding the courage to move forward. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A teen girl in early-20th-century Michigan faces loss and change. Fourteen-year-old Norvia Nelson's maternal grandfather, Grand-père, shared stories from their family's Ojibwe culture and history before his death. But now, everything has changed. Norvia's parents have divorced, and her French and Indian mother is rushing into a new marriage with a White man she barely knows. Worse still, she has asked Norvia and her siblings not to share the Native part of their background with their new stepfamily (the children's father is a Swedish immigrant). Norvia takes inspiration from the heroines in her favorite novels: Little Women, Anne of Green Gables, and What Katy Did, among others. She is determined to become popular at her new high school and hopes to maybe even find a beau. Norvia struggles to navigate new relationships under the shadow of her parents' divorce, which is the talk of the town. She is also torn between her love for her Native heritage and a desire to assimilate into her new life. Norvia proves to be a resilient and inspiring main character. Inspired by the author's family history, this gentle novel nimbly and tenderly confronts topics including prejudice, the challenge of blending families, young love, and staying true to oneself. A coming-of-age story with a kind heart and strong spirit. (author's note, glossary and pronunciation guides, family photos) (Historical fiction. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Johnson uses her own great-grandmother's story as a foundation to deliver an intimate tale chronicling an Indigenous 14-year-old's life in a new city, set in 1914 on the brink of WWI. Following Norvia Nelson's parents' divorce and her mother's whirlwind nuptials to a white man they hardly know, Norvia's mother, who is French and Ojibwe, asks her and her siblings to hide their Indigenous heritage from their new stepfamily. The Nelsons soon move from Beaver Island on Lake Michigan to Boyne City, where Norvia longs for her old life listening to her late Grand-pere tell stories about their ancestors. Struggling between embracing her heritage and attempting to fit in at her new high school, Norvia channels heroines from her favorite novels, including Anne of Green Gables and Little Women, to navigate shifting family dynamics, community gossip over her parents' divorce, prejudice, and first love. This introspective, unhurried debut, filled with personal touches from the author's ancestry as detailed in an author's note, is populated by memorable characters, such as Norvia's larger-than-life younger sister. Johnson's family photographs and an Ojibwe glossary conclude. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Jessica Schmeidler, Golden Wheat Literary. (July)

#2332405 Curious Vanishing of Beatrice Willoughby (Hardcover (Trade))
written by G. Z. Schmidt

When six-year-old Beatrice Willoughby vanished at the Amadeuses' annual All Hallows Eve party, people in the tiny mountain town of Nevermore were quick to whisper: They were always odd. Their house is full of dark magic. And when Mort Amadeus was pegged for the crime, the Amadeuses, once the center of society, retreated. They closed their doors, disappeared from life. People almost forgot. Until thirteen years later, when six envelopes land at the doorstep of six households in town: We cordially invite you to a celebration on the 31st of October this Saturday evening at the Amadeus household.

978-0-8234-5073-2 Holiday House ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews After 6-year-old Beatrice disappears from an All Hallows Eve party at the Amadeuses' mansion, Mort Amadeus is wrongfully imprisoned; now, it's time for a reckoning. Beatrice is only one of many children who've gone missing from the area, and Mort's loved ones know that he is not responsible. Thirteen years after the event, Maribelle, Mort's wife, and Wormwood, the Amadeuses' caretaker, invite several eccentric guests to the scene of the crime for another All Hallows Eve party. They've been hand-picked for their curious talents, and they can't leave the party until they've identified the real culprit among their number--and the statute of limitations for the crime will be up at midnight. The countdown is reflected in each chapter heading, heightening the tension. As the guests move from room to room, they decipher clues and conduct interviews. Their unusual techniques, enlivened by fantasy elements, include creating a specter hound, consulting folklore, resurrecting and talking with a deceased bird witness, and examining an odd scarecrow. It would be terrifying if it weren't so gloriously zany. Plus, the individual taking the lead on the case is Dewey O'Connor, an 11-year-old child who just needs to point the finger before it's too late. This atmospheric, magic-infused mystery with an unsettling ending is a party readers won't want to miss. Major characters read white. Devilishly clever. (Mystery. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In the remote European town of Nevermore, a child disappears each year around All Hallows' Eve. Even so, 13 years ago, the Incident; the vanishing of the mayor's six-year-old daughter from the Amadeus family's annual All Hallows' Eve party; rocked the community. In the aftermath, no satisfying explanation is found, but Mort Amadeus is arrested, and the Amadeuses cast a spell over their Inkwoods-situated home. Now, six unexpected invitations to the Amadeus mansion bid guests to return for an October 31 gathering. When the manor doors lock until midnight, the caper becomes a Clue-style mystery meant to root out those responsible for the event. Attendees include an alchemist, an heiress, a hypnotist, and a spy; as well as 11-year-old Dewey O'Connor, who systematically assesses possible suspects. Ghost dogs, unsettling scarecrows, a sinister groundskeeper, and heaps of eerie clues await the partygoers and their shadowy hosts. Supplying a relentless tempo to this uneasy whodunit, the chapter headings count down to midnight as Schmidt (The Dreamweavers) pits the wary guests against both the clock and one another in a fiendishly clever mystery whose atmosphere is thick with fevered accusations and Halloween fun. Protagonists read as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Adria Goetz, Martin Literary Management. (Sept.)

#2285362 Goblin Market (Hardcover (Trade))

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

written by Diane Zahler

Lizzie and Minka are sisters, but they're nothing alike: Minka is outgoing and cheerful, while Lizzie is shy and sensitive. But when Minka is charmed and ensnared by a prince of the zduzes-the goblins-and taken to his dark forest home, Lizzie will have to draw on reserves of strength she never knew she had and follow her sister into a world of dreams, danger, and death.

978-0-8234-5081-7 Holiday House ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 In this reimagined version of Christina Rossetti's poem "'Goblin Market,'" sisters Lizzie and Minka live with their parents on a farm with a village nearby. Lizzie, the younger, is shy and has synesthesia: she sees sounds as colors and being in a crowd can easily overwhelm her. She prefers to help on the farm while her vivacious older sister, Minka, takes produce and bread to market. One day, Minka returns talking about a handsome boy, Emil, who gave her a perfect plum from the fruit he brought to market. Yet in the ensuing time, Minka becomes lethargic and fretful, longing for more fruit from Emil's stand. Lizzie, suspicious of Emil, has to pluck up her courage and overcome her fears to rescue her sister. While the story Zahler tells differs from Rossetti's poem, the spirit is similar, and Zahler employs descriptive language not unlike Rossetti's. The love the sisters bear for each other is obvious from the start, which is an element of Lizzie's success. The well-rounded and appealing characters in this absorbing tale nicely ground the fantasy elements. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Shy, synaesthetic Lizzie and her bright, artistic elder sister Minka are as close as sisters can be-or so Lizzie thinks, until one day Minka comes home from the market enraptured with a handsome seller of marvelous fruits and soon falls strangely ill. To save her sister, Lizzie ventures beyond her own narrow comfort zone and learns of the zduzes (goblins), who steal away humans by promising their victims all they dream of-or leave them to die of longing. Lizzie's synaesthesia enables her to see colors along with sounds she hears and it proves useful for telling the difference between humans and shape-changing zduzes (goblins' voices have no color) as she finds a way to bring Minka back from the market and all its temptations. Zahler creates a historical-feeling world that combines Polish folklore and homey (if idealized) depictions of rural life with elements drawn from Christina Rossetti's lush, unsettling poem that shares the book's title. The sisters' relationship anchors the plot and resonates with emotion; Lizzie's hurt at not having realized that Minka wants more from life than she's shared is quietly heartbreaking. Happily, Lizzie and Minka learn that although sisterly love can't fulfill all dreams and aspirations, it can expand to include them. FHK COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Lizzie "sees" sounds as colors and is sensitive to direct eye contact and being touched; her older sister, Minka, looks out for her and paints the colors Lizzie describes. One day Minka comes home from the market rhapsodic over a new vendor -- a handsome young man selling the most delectable fruit. Over the next few weeks, Minka grows pale for love of him, loses her hair, and falls into a coma-like sleep. The girls' neighbor Jakob helps Lizzie learn what is wrong with Minka: upon investigation, they suspect she's been enchanted by a zduze, a goblin who steals away children and young women. The pastoral surroundings (and particularly Lizzie's description of rich sound-colors) create a lush setting for the folkloric ensorcelled-by-goblins plot, with its dreamy depictions of fruit and longing and with sprinklings of ethnological details from Eastern European cultures. On her quest to save her sister, Lizzie faces down many of her "worries" (going to the market, talking to strangers, knocking on people's doors) while also making use of her strengths (blunt honesty, unsentimental perception, bravery regarding snakes). The climax delivers some breath-quickening action, but this warmly reassuring tale, with its nontraditional protagonist, will keep readers engrossed from beginning to end. (Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Lizzie "sees" sounds as colors and is sensitive to direct eye contact and being touched; her older sister, Minka, looks out for her and paints the colors Lizzie describes. One day Minka comes home from the market rhapsodic over a new vendor -- a handsome young man selling the most delectable fruit. Over the next few weeks, Minka grows pale for love of him, loses her hair, and falls into a coma-like sleep. The girls' neighbor Jakob helps Lizzie learn what is wrong with Minka: upon investigation, they suspect she's been enchanted by a zduze, a goblin who steals away children and young women. The pastoral surroundings (and particularly Lizzie's description of rich sound-colors) create a lush setting for the folkloric ensorcelled-by-goblins plot, with its dreamy depictions of fruit and longing and with sprinklings of ethnological details from Eastern European cultures. On her quest to save her sister, Lizzie faces down many of her "worries" (going to the market, talking to strangers, knocking on people's doors) while also making use of her strengths (blunt honesty, unsentimental perception, bravery regarding snakes). The climax delivers some breath-quickening action, but this warmly reassuring tale, with its nontraditional protagonist, will keep readers engrossed from beginning to end. Anita L. Burkam(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young girl must face scary situations in order to save her sister from a goblin posing as a man. Elzbieta, who goes by Lizzie, enjoys her simple farm life and close bond with her older sister, Minka, despite their differences; Minka is outgoing whereas Lizzie is overwhelmed by social situations. One day, when Minka returns from the market after a day of selling bread and vegetables, Lizzie can sense something has changed. Minka has become smitten with a handsome new fruit seller named Emil. Soon after, however, she is struck down by a mysterious illness. As Lizzie tries to help her sister, she discovers that Emil is a zduze, or goblin, and is responsible for Minka's state. With the assistance of neighbor boy Jakob, Lizzie enters treacherous Noc Forest to try to defeat Emil and save Minka. This broadly appealing, straightforward story reads like a folktale with its spooky, fantasy elements and uncomplicated, yet satisfying, good-overcomes-evil plot. The Polish-inspired setting is primarily noted through character names and foods, although the worldbuilding is light. Creepy imagery, like a bleeding tree and a carpet of snakes, will entice readers looking for some chills, while themes of sisterhood, love, and bravery make the story overall more likely to induce sentimentality than nightmares. Lizzie has synesthesia--sounds evoke colors for her--and is coded as neurodiverse. Characters are implied White. Sisterly love triumphs in this endearing, somewhat spooky tale. (Fantasy. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Set in an unidentified region of what cues strongly as Poland, Zahler's (Daughter of the White Rose) folklore-based fantasy is rooted in the bond between sisters Elzbieta, called Lizzie, and Minka, who are vastly different from, yet devoted to, one another. Synesthete Lizzie, extremely anxious among people, thrives on solitude, while merry Minka, a talented painter, flourishes selling the family's bread and produce at the village market. Lizzie's perceptions involve seeing sounds in color: leaves rustling in spring are silver, Minka's voice is pink, and a thunderstorm is "a vortex" that makes her dizzy and nauseated. After Minka returns from the market infatuated with handsome fruit purveyor Emil and the delicious plum he gave her, Lizzie is suspicious. Her suspicions turn to fright when Minka succumbs to a delirious fever, and her golden hair turns gray and falls out. Meeting Emil and finding that no hue attends his voice, Lizzie is certain he is behind Minka's strange illness. Fueled by love for her sibling, Lizzie becomes entangled in the world of zduze, forest goblins of lore who entice and capture girls. As elements of horror build to an extended climax teeming with fiends, Lizzie's evolution from "shy, strange and fearful" to strong and determined is believably wrought, even as Minka's transformation is less credible. All characters read as white. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Jennifer Laughran, Andrea Brown Literary. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-8--Despite their opposite personalities, sisters Elzbieta (Lizzie) and Minka vowed they would stay together forever. Beautiful and vibrant Mink loves going to the village market to purchase and sell food. Lizzie, the quieter of the two, prefers to be at home or in the Wood. Lizzie can see sound as color--and it can be overwhelming for her at times. One day, Minka meets a boy at the market who gives her the most perfect and refreshing fruit. Minka can't stop talking about him or the fruit. Soon after, Minka grows frail, loses her hair, and falls in and out of a deep slumber. When Minka runs off with the mysterious Emil, Lizzie and her friend Jakob rely on the power of love and their courage to save her from the zduze's (goblin's) spell. Based on Christina Rosetti's 19th-century Victorian poem, "The Goblin Market," Zahler's immersive folktale narrative has just the right amount of spookiness and suspense for middle grade readers. Lizzie is a heroine whom readers will root for, and her sisterly bond with Minka is refreshing. Kids will want to enjoy this in one sitting. VERDICT A rich folklore setting, goblin magic, and a spooky atmosphere with a hopeful ending make this a top choice for upper middle grade and middle school collections.--Marissa Lieberman Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness Goblin Market is a delightfully imaginative story about the unbreakable bond between two sisters--one who unknowingly falls in love with a goblin, and the other who is driven to save her.

#2245947 Willodeen (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Katherine Applegate

Eleven-year-old Willodeen adores creatures of all kinds, but her favorites are the most unlovable beasts in the land: strange beasts known as "screechers." The villagers of Perchance call them pests, even monsters, but Willodeen believes the animals serve a vital role in the complicated web of nature.

978-1-250-14740-0 Feiwel & Friends ©2021 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.2 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 610

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-5 Starred Review You know you're in for a treat with an Applegate fantasy, but when she dreams up hummingbears--tiny, winged bears that nest in bubbles--it's instantly catapulted into irresistible territory. For Willodeen, who happens to have a flightless hummingbear as a pet, her heart is far more occupied with the welfare of unlovable creatures, namely the widely detested screechers--a grumpy combo of skunk (odor), warthog (snout, tusks), beaver (tail), and porcupine (quills). This is, perhaps, because Willodeen herself is an outsider, preferring to spend her time alone, observing nature and helping the two women--older, but spitfires--who took her in after a terrible wildfire claimed the lives of her family. Two events force Willodeen out of her comfort zone and into the company of other townsfolk: (1) the steady, mysterious decline in hummingbear populations, and (2) the bounty placed on screechers, as a way to rid Perchance of their smelly presence. Thus, the 11-year-old comes to find her first friend, a baby screecher in need of a home, and her voice when it matters most. Applegate's gentle yet honest tale mixes magic with very real environmental messaging, both warning of human-caused harm and pointing to nature's resilience and interconnectedness. Perchance feels charmingly antiquated without being idyllic, and Applegate empowers her young characters by not only granting them courage but also ensuring they earn the respect of their elders.HIGH-DEMAND BACKSTORY: Adored and acclaimed, Applegate has been given a 750k first print run for this release. That's a lot of hummingbears! COPYRIGHT(2021) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Since losing her parents and brother to a wildfire, eleven-year-old Willodeen is all too familiar with grief, and she suffers one more loss when the last of the screechers-animals beloved by her and her pa-is killed. The residents of her small town Perchance, however, are happy that the stinky and smelly vermin are no longer around to disrupt the tourist season, which revolves around the migration of the adorable hummingbears and their stunning nests. This year, though, only a few hummingbears arrive, and while others might think it's the heat, or the droughts, or the fires keeping them away, Willodeen is pretty sure their small numbers might be connected to the screechers. The folksy charm here never becomes treacly, just as the environmental message never becomes preachy; the screechers and hummingbears clearly mark Perchance with a bit of fantasy, but the town feels both timeless (no phones, no technology) and timely, a microcosm of a larger world dealing with shifting resources and a changing climate while attempting to plan for the uncertain future. Willodeen is scrappy and sympathetic, posturing toughness but narrating with a painfully raw simplicity as she grieves her family and fears any further connection: "That building and dreaming. Gone in a flash, in a frenzy of flames. What was the point in making things, if they only came to ashes?" Applegate is honest enough with her young readers to give a realistically untidy ending, but it's still a satisfying one; pair this with Gold's The Last Bear (BCCB 1/21) for a thoughtful look at the way personal loss can spur community action. KQG COPYRIGHT(2021) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Applegate's (Wishtree, rev. 11/17; The One and Only Bob, rev. 7/20) latest novel is set in a town that is home to two creatures unfamiliar to us but affected by similar environmental issues. The village of Perchance has put a bounty on "screechers," animals whose odor and appearance threaten the tourist industry; meanwhile, the small flying "hummingbears" that attract visitors are also disappearing at an alarming rate. Ten-year-old Willodeen lost her family and home to wildfire, but with the support of the two elderly women who took her in, she upholds her father's respect for the environment and remembers his words: "Nature, Willodeen, knows more than we do, and she probably always will." Like the unlovable screechers she admires and her pet hummingbear whose singed wings prevent it from joining its kind, Willodeen struggles in this community. She is most at ease alone in nature where she observes and takes notes. When Connor, another independent child determined to win her friendship, brings her to a town meeting, her anger at the villagers' environmental negligence results in a chain of events (and possible magic) that could ultimately right the balance of nature. With gentle line drawings throughout, this accessible fantasy offers hope as well as a tender examination of people re-learning to work together to care for one another and the world around them. Julie Roach(Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An orphan loner's small town faces a hard future after it unwittingly disrupts a natural cycle. Willodeen is lucky that elderly retired thespians Mae and Birdie took her in after the wildfire that killed her parents and brother, not only because they're a loving couple, but because they let her roam the woods in search of increasingly rare screechers--creatures so vile-tempered and stinky that the village elders of Perchance have put a bounty on them. The elders have other worries, though: The migratory hummingbears that have long nested in the area, drawing tourists to the lucrative annual Autumn Faire, have likewise nearly vanished. Could there be a connection? If there is, Willodeen is just the person to find it--but who would believe her? Applegate's characters speak in pronouncements about life and nature that sometimes seem to address readers more than other characters, but the winsome illustrations lighten the thematic load. Screechers appear much like comically fierce warthogs and hummingbears, as small teddies with wings. Applegate traces a burgeoning friendship between her traumatized protagonist and Connor, a young artist who turns found materials into small animals so realistic that one actually comes to life. In the end, the townsfolk do listen and pitch in to make amends. Red-haired, gray-eyed Willodeen is cued as White; Connor has brown skin, and other human characters read as White by default. The young folk and (of course) the animals are engagingly wrought in this tale with a strong ecological message. (Eco-fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2021) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Employing flawlessly simple, candid prose that belies deeper messages, Newbery Medalist Applegate again considers the complex relationship between humans and the natural world. Before Willodeen's family died in the Great September Fire when she was just six, her father taught her to love and respect animals, especially the most unlovable. Now, Willodeen's kind but occasionally cantankerous guardians don't seem to mind when the 10-year-old skips school to look for screechers. The sharp-toothed, foul-smelling animals are hated; and hunted; by Perchance's townspeople, who prefer sweet-faced, tourist-garnering hummingbears. Lately, though, both species have been disappearing. After Willodeen witnesses the killing of an elderly screecher, new friend Connor crafts one for her birthday that magically comes to life. Now, Willodeen must overcome her aversion to people to protect it while trying to solve the mystery of the animals' disappearance. Via imaginative depictions, including interspersed chapters from the screecher's point of view, Applegate brings an intimate cast of default-white human characters and scene-stealing mythical ones to life. Fiercely protective Willodeen is easy to champion, and her belief that "nature knows more than we do" is a message worth sharing. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Elena Giovinazzo, Pippin Properties. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-7—Applegate's latest fantasy is a simple but beautiful story about humans' relationship with the natural world. Orphaned Willodeen has never quite fit in with her peers. She loves all animals, but especially the widely despised screecher: a smelly creature with tusks, a snout, tails, and quills. She is happy keeping to herself until the screechers begin to disappear, mainly due to the bounty the town of Perchance has placed on them. The rest of the town is focused on the disappearance of the hummingbears, winged bears responsible for the tourist draw to Perchance. After witnessing the killing of an old screecher, Willowdeen's new friend Connor carves her one that is magically brought to life through her tears. Determined to save this last screecher, Willodeen finds the connection between the screechers and hummingbears and stands up for them at a town meeting. Red-haired Willowdeen is cued as white. Connor has brown skin. VERDICT A sweet fantasy about standing up for what you believe in. Hand to all young environmentalists.—Katharine Gatcomb, Nashua P.L., NH

	Quantity	Unit Price
#2290385 Odder (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Katherine Applegate	1	$16.99
Odder spends her days off the coast of central California, practicing her underwater acrobatics and spinning the quirky stories for which she's known. She's a fearless daredevil, curious to a fault. But when Odder comes face-to-face with a hungry great white shark, her life takes a dramatic turn, one that will challenge everything she believes about herself-and about the humans who hope to save her.

978-1-250-14742-4 Feiwel & Friends ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 272 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile NP

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review Odder the otter has always been just a little bit, well, odd. The aquatic daredevil is driven by an urge to dive deeper, play harder, and explore further, gifted with the ability to turn "frolic into art." Odder can't resist her instinct to explore the wide world and investigate its mysterious inhabitants, despite motherly advice to avoid anything unfamiliar. Unfortunately, there is another inquisitive (and hungry) animal in the bay, and a shark attack leaves Odder's life ebbing away after she washes up on shore. Not to worry: Odder finds herself in the care of a nearby aquarium, and as she convalesces, she hazily recalls her stay there as a wayward pup, before being returned to the wild. But what will become of the injured otter if she can't roam free? Based on the Monterey Bay Aquarium and its otter rescue and fostering program, this gorgeous story is told in flowing free verse that slips by as silkily as an otter in water. The unconventional form perfectly suits a story told almost entirely from Odder's perspective, imparting dreamy observations of the natural and human worlds from an animal's point of view. Handsome black-and-white illustrations, some of them simple studies of sea creatures, punctuate the verses; it's almost impossible to resist the depictions of fluffy otter pups. A stunning study of a remarkable and resilient sea creature. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Raised in the Monterey Bay Aquarium but now free to frolic in the bay, sea otter #156 is affectionately known by her friends as "Odder" for her bold and playful disposition. She's also a bit reckless, and when she and her friend Kairi swim too far out into the bay, both otters are attacked by a great white shark and must be rescued by the nearby aquarists--Odder for her shark bites and Kairi for suffering from the "shaking sickness" that plagues the otter population. Odder's injuries might mean a permanent stay at the aquarium, a fate she finds terribly depressing, but her role may be more important than she realizes, especially for Kairi's recovery. Applegate's third-person narrative delivers exuberant verse, with candid parentheticals, persistent alliteration, echoic expressions, and just enough satisfying rhyme within the free verse form. Changes in perspective situate young readers in the aquatic world, first through the heightened senses of the hungry shark in the opening pages, then through Odder's adult experiences in the wild, followed by a flashback to her formative days in the aquarium. Nonfiction fans will appreciate how closely this book is based on real events, with facts about sea animals and ecological conservation interwoven in the story, reinforced by a glossary, an extensive author's note, a selected bibliography, and suggested online resources (the live sea otter camera is sure to be a draw). Soft, black-and-white illustrations dot Odder's story, enhancing readers' emotional connections to a captivating tale about life's existential balance between survival and play. KF COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Guide Applegate and Santoso (Willodeen, rev. 9/21) pair for another creature story, this one a verse novel about an otter named Odder who lives off the coast of California near Monterey Bay. The tale is divided into three sections, beginning with "The Queen of Play," a reference to Odder's daredevil nature. But the opening poems are about sharks, foreshadowing what is about to happen. On this day Odder can't resist going a little too far, despite her more cautious friend Kairi's warnings, and is attacked by a great white shark; she manages to make her way to the Monterey Bay Aquarium. The second section flashes back to three years earlier, when as a baby Odder became separated from her mother and was rescued and painstakingly taught survival skills by the aquarium's aquarists. The final section returns to the present, as Odder, too injured to be returned to the wild, becomes a surrogate parent to another otter pup that has lost its mother. Applegate grounds the story in scientific fact, slipping in interesting details in a lyrical way, as when she talks about keystone species, "nature's glue, / holding habitats together." "Without otters, / sea urchins, purple as a bruise, / gobble kelp forests / until the ocean floor / becomes a barren wasteland." Santoso's tender black-and-white drawings, together with the large type, will make this novel very accessible and appealing to young animal lovers. Back matter includes a glossary; an author's note about Monterey Bay Aquarium and the real-life stories on which Odder's is based; and a selected bibliography. (Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Applegate and Santoso (Willodeen, rev. 9/21) pair for another creature story, this one a verse novel about an otter named Odder who lives off the coast of California near Monterey Bay. The tale is divided into three sections, beginning with "The Queen of Play," a reference to Odder's daredevil nature. But the opening poems are about sharks, foreshadowing what is about to happen. On this day Odder can't resist going a little too far, despite her more cautious friend Kairi's warnings, and is attacked by a great white shark; she manages to make her way to the Monterey Bay Aquarium. The second section flashes back to three years earlier, when as a baby Odder became separated from her mother and was rescued and painstakingly taught survival skills by the aquarium's aquarists. The final section returns to the present, as Odder, too injured to be returned to the wild, becomes a surrogate parent to another otter pup that has lost its mother. Applegate grounds the story in scientific fact, slipping in interesting details in a lyrical way, as when she talks about keystone species, "nature's glue, / holding habitats together." "Without otters, / sea urchins, purple as a bruise, / gobble kelp forests / until the ocean floor / becomes a barren wasteland." Santoso's tender black-and-white drawings, together with the large type, will make this novel very accessible and appealing to young animal lovers. Back matter includes a glossary; an author's note about Monterey Bay Aquarium and the real-life stories on which Odder's is based; and a selected bibliography. Susan Dove Lempke(Copyright 2022 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A Monterey Bay sea otter comes of age. Odder's mom told her to stay away from sharks, humans, and anything else she didn't understand, but after saving her friend Kairi from a shark attack, she encounters all three. Injured herself during the rescue, Odder ends up recuperating at the Monterey Bay Aquarium, or Highwater as the otters call it, where she once lived as a young orphaned pup. Last time, the humans helped her reintegrate into the wild, but because of her injuries this time the outcome might be different. Soon Kairi is there too, stricken with "the shaking sickness" and having lost her newborn pup. Now Kairi is fostering a new pup, and soon one is introduced to an initially reluctant Odder in hopes that she will help raise it so it can return to the wild. The free verse effortlessly weaves in scientific information, giving Odder a voice without overly anthropomorphizing any of the animals. The natural appeal of sea otters will draw readers in, but the book doesn't shy away from real-world threats such as predators, disease, and pollution. Loosely based on the stories of real sea otters rehabilitated at the Monterey Bay Aquarium, this novel will give readers lots to talk about, but uneven pacing and a rushed ending may leave some unsatisfied. Charming black-and-white spot art captures the world and life of the sea. Rich, naturalistic details will delight lovers of marine life. (glossary, author's note, bibliography, resources) (Verse novel. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Writing in exquisitely descriptive free verse, Applegate (Willodeen) delivers an uplifting tale of an inquisitive sea otter pup raised by scientists after being separated from her mother. Released back to the ocean, curious Odder spends her days reveling in her ability to "twist/ and pretzel and weave." Despite warnings to "be afraid of the world," the otter's adventurous nature lures her and a cautious friend, Kairi, into deeper waters, where they encounter an adolescent great white that lands Odder back with the people who raised her. Brief chapters that mimic the feel of each creature's movements capture both the meal-focused musings of the hungry shark; a "soundless ocean ghost" stalking prey; and the playful naivete of Odder (named because of "the way/ the little pup never settled,/... the way/ her eyes were always/ full of questions"). Though humans make cameo appearances in this edifying novel about otter life, the focus remains rightfully on its enigmatic star: a lovable otter who not only survives against the odds but thrives. Occasional art by Santoso (Wombat Underground) highlights the adorable protagonists. An author's note details the story's roots at California's Monterey Bay Aquarium. Ages 8: 12. Author's agent: Elena Giovinazzo, Pippin Properties. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal eal-life otter rescue program at Monterey Bay Aquarium, Applegate imagines a backstory for the se otter #156, named Odder. Odder is a bit of a misfit, feeling an inexorable need to push the boundaries of her local habitat. Interacting with human and exploring amid dangerous predators, her adventurous spirit eventually gets her in trouble. The dark yet humorous tone of the free verse paints a very human set of motivations for risk-taking and living life on one's own terms. Odder's origin story comes to life through her eyes s she convalesces following a shark attack that risked her friend's life and made Odder feel responsible, even while revealing her courage and loyal y by coming to the rescue. Santoso's grayscale illustrations complement the factual underpinnings of the narrative, encompassing the wild ocean wor d where predators rule and others struggle for survival. This book will appeal to animal lovers and anyone who feels a little stifled by conve ntion. VERDICT Hand this book to middle grade fans of marine biology, authors like Sharon Creech and Eliot Schrefer, and Applegate's Newbery-winning The One and Only Ivan.—Tara Kron Reviews by: Shelf Awareness In the delightful free verse novel Odder, Newbery Medalist Katherine Applegate (The One and Only Ivan) introduces a playful, inquisitive sea otter who lives off the coast of California.

#2060853 Bob (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Wendy Mass

It's been five years since Livy and her family have visited Livy's grandmother in Australia. Now that she's back, Livy has the feeling she's forgotten something really, really important about Gran's house. It turns out she's right.

978-1-250-16662-3 Feiwel & Friends ©2018 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 208 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 4.0 RC Lvl 3.3 Lexile 590

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Ten-year-old Livy, who lives in Massachusetts, hasn't visited her Gran Nicholas's house in Australia for five years. When she returns for a visit, Livy is struck by the feeling that something very important is waiting for her. Sure enough, a peek inside her closet reveals "a small zombie wearing a chicken suit," perched atop a dictionary. "You're back. Took you long enough," the creature says to the girl. Once upon a time, it seems, five-year-old Livy discovered this strange being, who goes by the comically understated name of Bob, and the two formed a secret bond. Picking up where they left off, Livy keeps Bob hidden while they hunt for clues about what he is, where he came from, and how to get him home. Authors Mass (the Willow Falls series) and Stead (Goodbye Stranger) team up for this irresistible tale of magic, mystery, and friendship that poses timeless questions about identity and belonging. Ultimately, the answers Livy and Bob seek are waiting in the pages of a cherished book;a tribute to the power of storytelling, which draws readers into the imaginative investigation. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 8--12. Authors' agents: (for Stead) Faye Bender, the Book Group; (for Mass) Ginger Knowlton, Curtis Brown Ltd. Illustrator's agent: Rebecca Sherman, Writers House. (May)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Five years ago, Livy left her friend Bob, who she describes as a zombielike creature, in the closet of her grandmother's house in Australia without saying goodbye. Bob has loyally awaited Livy's return, dressed in the chicken suit she made to disguise him, and hopeful about the promise she made to help him find his way home, wherever that may be. As Livy gradually eases back into the rekindled friendship, vague memories return to her that could lead to the discovery of Bob's home. Livy's separation anxiety about her mother's upcoming trip with friends and the drought in her grandmother's town round out the story for a full plot line. Mass and Stead's brilliant collaboration has produced a beautiful tale of friendship, love, and the magic of childhood. Livy and Bob's points of view alternate chapters, and each character's personality is wonderfully realized with subtle nuances of emotion and humor. A perfectly paced plot, supported by secondary characters to whom readers will relate and luminous artwork by Gannon, fill out a story that readers will eagerly embrace. VERDICT A must-have for libraries serving middle grade readers, this novel delights.-Amy -McInerney, Falmouth Elementary School, ME Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2287263 Midnight Children (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Dan Gemeinhart

In the dead of night, a truck arrives in Slaughterville, a town named after its windowless slaughterhouse. Seven mysterious kids with suitcases stealthily step out of the vehicle and into an abandoned home on a dead-end street. But lonely Ravani Foster witnesses their arrival and is eager to learn everything he can about his new neighbors: What are they hiding? And where are the adults?
 978-1-250-19672-9 Henry Holt & Company ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 590

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-7 Starred Review In a tale that manages to be scary, suspenseful, exhilarating, and really really gross all at once, a bullied, lonely child and seven fugitives from "Madame Murdosas Home for Wastrels Foundlings & Orphans" ("Madame Murdosa believed that commas and apostrophes were a waste of paint") change one another's lives while battling a coldly relentless orphan hunter. Of the seven young squatters who have slipped into an empty house on Offal Road in the town of Slaughterville, it's his agemate Virginia that Ravani first meets and bonds with when she stoutly defends him from sharklike serial tormenter Donnie. From the get-go she always knows when he's lying, a check that gives him the courage both to shrug off the bully's power over him (after a few false starts), and ultimately to help his new friend and her fellow "Ragabonds" find safe haven after years of flight. Along with showing a sure hand when it comes to exploring serious themes and crafting strong, sympathetic characters, Gemeinhart displays a literally cutting sense of humor here as he sets much of the action around and in the windowless meatpacking plant that is the town's chief industry--and though he doesn't offer extensive details, the setting will test the stomachs of even confirmed carnivores. A rare (yet well done) tale about second chances and being true to both self and friends. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Ravani Foster and the whole town of Slaughterville are changed by the arrival of seven unusual children. Skinny, lonely Ravani is the only one who sees the children arrive and move into the house across the street, and he soon finds a comrade in tough, golden-haired Virginia. Despite the local newspaper owner's assertion that Slaughterville is not the kind of town where exciting things happen, Ravani's life changes dramatically as Virginia and her chosen family of parentless kids calling themselves the Ragabonds let him in on their secret: They are on the run. When vicious bully Donnie learns that the Ragabonds are being pursued, he blackmails Ravani, who is desperate to protect them and equally desperate for Virginia, his first friend, to stay. She introduces him to the quietly revolutionary idea that things don't have to be the way they've always been. The omniscient narrative voice is a strong presence throughout, drawing readers' attention to themes including choices that make a difference, connections between people ("Sometimes, when two souls find each other in the darkness, the darkness goes away"), deciding who you want to be and not letting others define you, and the importance of home and family. Brief chapters from the perspective of the man hunting the Ragabonds ratchet up the suspense, culminating in an exciting sequence of events followed by a heartwarming ending. All main characters are coded White. A story of fierce friendship, bravery, loyalty, and finding--or making--a place to belong. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Slow-boiling danger elevates the stakes of Gemeinhart's (The Remarkable Journey of Coyote Sunrise) imagery-rich novel of transformative friendship. Acute loneliness wakes 12-year-old Ravani Foster the night that the seven Deering children appear in Slaughterville, a town as unchanging as the incessant "hiss-moooTHUD!" emanating from its slaughterhouse. He's the only person to see them arrive, and the newcomers intrigue Ravani, especially outspoken, parasol-twirling Virginia, also 12, who disrupts his routines and stands up to his relentless bullies. But the Deerings have "big secrets": they are Ragabonds, a parentless found family on the run from a ruthless Hunter, and trusting new friends jeopardizes their freedom. Still, the same quiet magic that woke Ravani the first night draws him closer to Virginia, urging them to take the risk; because "sometimes, when two souls leap, they catch each other." A quirky, intimate tone permeates the telling, developed through deliberate-feeling omniscient narration, amusing exclamations ("Holy spit"), and surprising metaphor (words that sound "like the smell of a campfire"). Amid suspenseful scenes and straightforward descriptions of slaughterhouse gore, the story's robust emotional core sees the children forge the story's path as they powerfully change their community through courageous honesty and emotional vulnerability. Characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Pam Victorio, D4EO Literary. (Aug.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Slaughterville, a town well known for its meat processing plant and little else. Virginia is a seemingly su len girl with a passel of siblings who sneak into town under the cover of night and set up camp in an empty house near Ravani's. So begins Gemeinrt's moody, magnificent novel. A Stephen King--esque blend of the sentimental and sinister flows through the story--alleyway bullies, creeksie confidences, a villain known as the Hunter with fingernails sharpened to points, and a breathtaking chase through the slaughterhouse's killing floor. The Hunter is in pursuit of Virginia's ragtag family, seeking the reward for their return to an equally sinister orphanage. However, as the story unravels, it's clear that the roving band of self-proclaimed Ragabonds are fine, functional, and perhaps a bit magical, living on their own. Their loving embrace of Ravani challenges his bleak view of his situation, and the powerful connection he forms with Virginia helps them both embrace their best qualities and become better together. Gemeinhart's omniscient narrator features heavily in the text, with an almost hypnotic commentary about souls and choices, but his best work in this book is scene-setting, painting the small-town tableaux fit for any drama required of his tale. Ravani and the Ragabonds are coded as white. VERDICT A tale by turns sweet and terrifying of friendship, bravery, and finding oneself in caring for others--this is for readers who enjoy dark tales with a lot of heart.--Emilia Packard Copyright 2022 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2346778 Farther Than the Moon (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lindsay Lackey

All thirteen-year-old Houston Stewart has ever wanted is to become an astronaut. His dreams feel like they're finally coming true when he's accepted to the highly-competitive Junior Astronaut Recruitment Program - if only he could bring his little brother, Robbie, with him.

978-1-250-20520-9 Roaring Brook Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 670

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Junior astronauts aim for disability inclusion in Lackey's conscientiously researched summer camp drama. After their father left, 13-year-old Houston Stewart, who cues as white, promised his now-10-year-old brother, Robbie, that they'd travel space together. So when Houston is accepted into the Junior Astronaut Recruitment Program, a NASA recruitment camp inaccessible to people with cerebral palsy and epilepsy, like Robbie, he feels guilt "like a black hole, sucking Houston into a familiar crush." Still, he goes, both to work toward his future and for an opportunity to meet his estranged maternal grandfather, astronaut Carey Broderick. He hits turbulence with Broderick upon arrival, and as a camp competition to propose a bold new project for NASA heats up, Houston wonders both how to work through conflict on his crew and whether space travel will ever be accessible to all humankind. Inspired by a family member with cerebral palsy, per an author's note, Lackey (All the Impossible Things) employs close perspective and nuanced characterization to capture the realities of full-time caretaking as well as the brothers' joyful connection. Anchored by the detail-rich space program environment, the book's competitive tension balances the introspective evolution of intersectionally diverse cast members. Age 10: 14. Agent: Elena Giovanazzo, Pippin Properties. (Sept.)

#2347332 Down Came the Rain (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Jennifer Mathieu

After Eliza's home in Houston is destroyed by Hurricane Harvey, she is forced to transfer to Southwest High School. Traumatized by the floods and anxious in her new surroundings, Eliza throws herself into environmental activism, even if it's against the wishes of her big-oil dad.

978-1-250-23267-0 Roaring Brook Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile 830

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 9-12 In the aftermath of Hurricane Harvey's rampage through Houston, white rising junior Eliza and her parents are living with her aunt, uncle, and baby cousin. She and her classmates also have to attend Southwest High while repairs are made at her school, Baldwin High. The kind of student who maintains a color-coded planner and attacks assignments with laser-like focus, Eliza is worried about how these arrangements will impact her goals for junior year. Baldwin and Southwest students are in separate classes, but Eliza connects with Javier, a Mexican American student whose house was spared, but suffers a panic reaction whenever it rains. Javier helps Eliza successfully set up an environmental club that is open to students from both schools. The story is narrated in first-person alternating chapters, and both characters reveal a lot about themselves: Eliza is action-oriented, but she is so tightly wound, readers will likely see her approaching unraveling. Javier's family is warm and loving, although they also don't understand what he's going through. The romantic relationship between Eliza and Javier is sweet and positive, and the ending is promising. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When Hurricane Harvey tears through Houston, it uproots privileged overachiever Eliza Brady's well-planned life, flooding her house, wrecking her upscale public school, and dropping her in nearby Southwest High for her all-important junior year. There she's motivated to start an environmental-action club, though her laser-focus is soon distracted by adorable, sensitive Mexican American Javier Garza. Javi, meanwhile, struggles with his own storm-related trauma and fears he'll always be the odd boy out in his family. After a meet-cute in the hallway, Eliza's passion project quickly sweeps him into a club co-presidency, an unexpected friendship, and a sweetly supportive romance. Yet even as Javi gains control of his anxiety, Eliza begins to spiral in the face of her fears for the planet's future and the stress of constantly maintaining an in-control facade. Emotionally evocative and compellingly real, this novel gives climate change a personal touchstone that frames the global crisis as a uniquely adolescent burden. The underlying politics are smartly conveyed, opening conversations about the limits of personal responsibility and not ignoring real world disparities both in the wake of weather catastrophes and in even the most well-meaning efforts to effect change. Eliza and Javi's low-key romance provides a welcome respite from the trauma-drama, and Javi certainly sets boyfriend-goals with his compassion and courage. Despite alternating first-person chapters, the narrative tips noticeably in Eliza's direction, with her realistic and relatable anxieties-many climate-conscious reader will find themselves reflected here. ACM COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Two teen activists in Houston find refuge in each other in the aftermath of Hurricane Harvey. The hurricane has completely upended Eliza Brady's life: Since her own home flooded, she's been sharing a bedroom with her baby cousin, and she and her Baldwin High community have been temporarily transferred to Southwest High. Baldwin had more white students and a more prestigious reputation than Southwest. Regardless, overachiever Eliza is determined to have a successful junior year that will help land her at the University of Texas at Austin. Fueled by her genuine fears about the future, Eliza, a white girl, starts Eagles and Tigers United for the Planet, an environmental club named after the mascots of her old and new schools. After experiencing an instant connection with sweet Mexican American Southwest student Javier Garza, who struggles with his own post-Harvey trauma, she asks him to be co-president of ETUP. Together they navigate a new and exciting relationship. Despite some dialogue not feeling like natural teen speech, Mathieu honestly depicts the toll of eco-anxiety and the nuanced interactions between two seemingly different people who are grappling with the environmental impact of their families' employment. Eliza resents that her family is well-off because her father is a Big Oil executive, while Javi grapples with his older brother's refinery job, a position he could get without a college degree and that helps feed his family. An empathetic exploration of the complex impacts of climate change on young adults. (resources) (Fiction. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Mathieu (Bad Girls Never Say Die) delivers a potent meditation on the devastating effects of climate change through the lens of two eco-conscious high school juniors. After Eliza's home in Houston is flooded during Hurricane Harvey, she and her family are forced to move in with her aunt while their house is repaired. This means losing sleep while sharing a bedroom with her six-month-old cousin Ethan and transferring to a new school; Eliza's worried that both scenarios will disrupt "the most important year of high school" and jeopardize her chances at being accepted into UT Austin. Being separated from her best friend and harboring silent resentment toward her father, who's employed by CITGO, only adds to her frustrations. (The fact that he works for a gas and oil conglomerate "when climate change caused in part by fossil fuels no doubt helped cause our home to flood" is ironic, she asserts.) But when she meets Mexican American classmate Javi, sparks fly, and the two bond over their shared interest in environmental activism. Eliza and Javi's alternating perspectives; each rendered using insightful and intelligent prose; provide illuminating glimpses of their individual experiences navigating class dynamics and eco-anxiety, culminating in an uplifting read. Ages 12: up. (Sept.)

#2199537 Ambassador of Nowhere Texas (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Kimberly Willis Holt
 Decades after the Vietnam War and Toby's life-changing summer with Zachary Beaver, Toby's daughter Rylee is at a crossroads--her best friend Twig has started pushing her away just as Joe, a new kid from New York, settles into their small town of Antler. Rylee befriends Joe and learns that Joe's father was a first responder on 9/11. The two unlikely friends soon embark on a project to find Zachary Beaver and hopefully reconnect him with Rylee's father almost thirty years later.
 978-1-250-23410-0 Henry Holt & Company ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 740

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Starred Review In this companion to the author's memorable When Zachary Beaver Came to Town, 30 years have passed and it's 2001. Former protagonist Toby Wilson is now an adult with a 12-year-old daughter, Rylee, who tells this quiet story of a small Texas town and its friendships. The book begins, however, with a friendship's end, as Rylee and her long-time best friend, Twig, have a falling-out. But nature abhors a vacuum, and soon a new boy, Joe Toscani, comes to town from Brooklyn and--after a rocky start--becomes Rylee's new friend. She soon discovers that Joe and his mom, Maria, have fled Brooklyn to distance themselves from the still-raw memory of the tragedy of 9/11, when Joe's fireman father was killed at Ground Zero. It's Joe who decides that--to surprise Toby--he and Rylee should start the Zachary Beaver Project, searching for the "'Fattest Boy in the World,'" as Zachary had been billed in the first novel. But how on earth will they find him, these many years later? Evocatively written ("stiff as burnt bacon"), this is an altogether absorbing and affecting novel. It's obvious that Holt loves her fully realized characters and their small-town setting, and readers can't help but feel the same. COPYRIGHT(2020) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine The narrator of this sequel to National Book Award winner When Zachary Beaver Came to Town (rev. 11/99) is Rylee Wilson, daughter of the first book's protagonist, Toby. At the beginning of seventh grade, Rylee watches Twig, her former BFF, pull away, seeking new friends and new interests. In a prophetic observation, Toby tells Rylee: "People come and go even when we don't want them to." And one person who unexpectedly comes into Rylee's life is Joe, unhappily transplanted from Brooklyn to Rylee's hometown of Antler, a place he immediately dubs as Nowhere, Texas. As self-proclaimed ambassador Rylee tries to get Joe to accept and appreciate her town (and herself to understand her changed relationship with Twig), the two begin a quest to track down Zachary Beaver, Rylee's father's onetime friend. She wonders about the wisdom of such a search, but, as Joe tells her, "If you're a true friend, you're a friend for life." Toby, now a social studies teacher, believes that history is about people. Mirroring that belief, Holt deftly intertwines the stories of the individuals from both books, each set at a pivotal time in our country's past, the earlier work during the Vietnam War and the latter in the aftermath of 9/11. This volume is a literary reunion of sorts, but more important is its deep examination of the meaning and responsibilities of friendship, family, and community. While Holt's latest can stand alone, its considerable strengths shine brighter when read with Zachary Beaver [see also "Hello Again" on page 34]. Betty Carter (Copyright 2021 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews This sequel to Holt's National Book Award winner, When Zachary Beaver Came to Town (1999), revisits Antler, Texas, 30 years later; this time our guide is Toby's daughter, Rylee. Rylee, 12, is a passionate booster of her tiny hometown. Unlike her mercurial best friend, Twig, she's blessed with a happy family. Rylee's stunned by the 9/11 terrorist attacks, then heartsick over their faltering friendship. Joe, a new classmate from Brooklyn, provides welcome distraction. He ridicules Antler but warms to self-appointed tour guide Rylee, who piques his interest in Zachary Beaver. Learning how the attacks affected Joe's family makes 9/11 personal to locals. Stalwart Rylee, navigating tween angst, is engaging, but comprehensive updates on characters from the first novel slow the narrative. Little has changed for the White residents. Antler's success story is Juan Garcia, the impoverished teen from the Mexican side of town, now a world-famous golfer, his childhood home a tourist attraction. Juan's affluent extended family includes the brilliant Garcia twins, Rylee's classmates. A new character, Vietnamese immigrant Mr. Pham, cooks for and lives at the bowling alley's cafe. He suddenly buys the town's mansion, planning to open an upscale restaurant. White residents' struggles, missteps, and achievements are affectionately chronicled; the Garcias and Mr. Pham get no humanizing backstories, and they seem to serve to validate Antler's post-racial bona fides. Sticks to the shallows. (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Following rising seventh grader Rylee, this post-9/11 companion to 1999's When Zachary Beaver Came to Town revisits familiar characters; including Rylee's father, Toby, that novel's protagonist; to poignantly capture a narrative centering both true friendship and national grief. After longtime town librarian and photographer Miss Myrtie Mae dies, she bequeaths Toby a photo of himself; his best friend, Cal; and Zachary Beaver, whose sideshow visited Antler, Tex., in the summer of 1971. Recently shunned by her longtime best friend, Rylee forges a new friendship with Joe, a newcomer from Brooklyn with a painful secret. Determined to locate Beaver, Rylee and Joe comb through the past at the library, piecing together the circus's timeline after 1971 while contending with their own personal upheavals. Returning readers will appreciate National Book Award winner Holt's attention to detail as she revisits characters, while newcomers will be drawn to Rylee's empathy, protectiveness of her community, and curiosity about the world and her place in it. The thoughtfully drawn setting circumvents the ease of contemporary internet access, creating a hearty mystery unraveled with local librarians' assistance and earnest intergenerational conversations. A quiet celebration of friendship, no matter how brief. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Amy Berkower, Writers House. (Jan.)

#2352118 Balto and Togo: Hero Dogs of Alaska (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Helen Moss

It's the winter of 1924 and a diphtheria outbreak is threatening the population of Nome, Alaska. The only way to stop the deadly illness from causing a full-blown epidemic is to immediately deliver one million units of the diphtheria antitoxin to the affected communities, which seems impossible given the only way to reach any place in Alaska at this time of year is by dog sled. The stakes are high, and the snow is piling higher--will the antitoxin make it in time? Or will the infection spread faster than they can treat it?

978-1-250-79253-2 Godwin Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 7-3/4 192 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews The historic sled dog "Serum Run" was undertaken to prevent a diphtheria epidemic in Nome, Alaska. Inventing minor details as needed to construct a seamless narrative while sticking closely to participants' memoirs and other documentary evidence, Moss recounts each leg of the nearly 700-mile relay--capturing both its urgency and the serious dangers faced by the 19 teams of dogs and men who undertook it. Exerting authorial license around a claim that the "malamute chorus," a sort of canine news and social network that even worked over long distances, was a real Alaska thing, she tells the tale from doggy as well as human points of view by weaving in engaging exchanges of canine banter: "I can feel it in my bones--we're headed for Norton Bay. I know that Togo here loves the sea ice, but it gives me the heebie-jeebies." Still, nearly every member of the cast, two- or four-legged, was real, as were the extreme cold, severe winds, blinding snow fog, and other obstacles faced by the tough dogs and rugged-looking, fur-clad men in Hughes' stark black-and-white illustrations. The disease claimed one child identified as Inupiaq/Norwegian, and one musher was part Athabascan; otherwise the human cast reads as white. True to life and compellingly dramatic. (afterword, source list, end notes) (Fictionalized nonfiction. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Set in the winter of 1924, this illustrated middle grade book is based on real events that took place during the diphtheria outbreak in Alaska. To prevent infection from spreading, one million units of antitoxin must be delivered as quickly as possible. But due to weather, temperature, minimal road access, distance, and isolation, the serum must travel by mushers and dogsleds. As they journey along the trail, the teams face frostbite, black holes, and trips and tangles. The details of the outbreak are shown through a variety of characters' points of view. After a telegraph is sent out asking for help, a team of huskies undertake a 600-mile round trip. Readers get to understand what the dogs are seeing and thinking as the author includes narration and dialogue from their perspectives. Additional viewpoints—from a sick child, a nurse, the mayor—round out the characters and add drama to the story. Footnotes on the bottom of several pages include detail about word definitions. Back matter includes over 10 pages of notes, reference material, and sources. VERDICT This well-researched adventure book will be out just in time for the winter. Children who enjoy animal adventure stories will love this book!—Tanya Boudreau

#2267111 Baker's Guide to Robber Pie (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Caitlin Sangster

With her best friend by her side, Evie sets off into the Old Forest to find a Fel, a crow-like magical creature who can't lie. She is sure her family's irresistible raspberry tart and a carefully crafted deal will lead to a magical adventure--without getting her eaten or worse. But the forest hides many dangers and when they finally find their Fel, they also discover a nest of robbers!

978-1-250-79331-7 Feiwel & Friends ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 Evie wants a life full of excitement, adventure, and fun. When an opportunity arises, she and her friend Cecily leave their boring town and venture into the Old Forest, which is filled with dangerous robbers, bears, mountain lions, and more. There, Evie hopes to make a deal with a Fel, a crowlike creature with magical powers, which will let her live the life she's always wanted; she plans to ask the Fel to take her on a yearlong adventure and bring her home safely. However, Evie has to be careful how she phrases her request because an incorrect word could result in disaster. Evie's exploits embroil her in the machinations of the infamous Robber Lord, who has dastardly designs on the queen. Finally surrounded by the adventure she has so craved, Evie must figure out how to save the royal family and thwart the Robber Lord's plan. In her middle-grade debut, Sangster brings readers an exciting tale of fantasy, questing, and finding one's inner hero. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Evie is the twelve-year-old daughter of bakers in the country of Paline, where people fear the Fel, giant crow-like fairy creatures. When adventurous Evie stumbles upon robbers in the woods summoned by her raspberry tart, she's whisked away for her safety by royal guards, posing as a baker for the Hollows, a noble family, while the location of the Robber Lord is identified. Something isn't right about the way everyone is acting toward the robbers, though, and the cunning, manipulative daughter in the Hollow house isn't helping things as Evie searches for answers. This middle grade novel is as charming as it is mouthwatering, with Evie's storytelling inclinations giving zest to even the less thrilling elements. Savvy readers will see plot twists in advance due to some heavy-handed foreshadowing, but the end result is still satisfying. Here, the power of friendship is a driving force, as Evie overcomes her biases to befriend Gisa, another girl in the Hollow household, and uses her connection to hometown friend Cece to save the day. Readers who are as adventure-seeking as Evie will want to join her as she takes on magical enemies with only her wits and baking skills. NB COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Twelve-year-old Evie Baker, whom cover art depicts with light brown skin, is a natural-born storyteller dreaming of real-life adventure beyond her bland-feeling town. Trading in dull school lectures about monstrous creatures for the thrill of finding one, she seeks to catch a Fel; a large, magical crow-like being that would "give you their magic if you made a deal with them"; using one of her family's famous raspberry tarts as bait. But Evie gets more than she bargained for when a band of elusive thieves and the infamous Robber Lord show up at the same time the Fel does. Through a sort of witness protection program, Evie is whisked away from her parents and best friend to the royal city of Reinstadt. But Evie is determined to find the truth and get back home, and with only presumed-white message runner Max and white-haired, dark-skinned maid Gisa as allies, she must navigate secret identities, deep-rooted prejudices, and hidden villainy. Overstuffed passages sometimes slow this middle grade debut, but Sangster (She Who Rides the Storm) writes in a jaunty, irreverent third-person voice that befits the book's clever and principled protagonist. Ages 9: 12. Agent: Ben Grange, L. Perkins.(Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5–8—Evie Baker loves to tell stories; tales of pirates, magic, and trickster crows. On Saint Hart's Day, Evie and her best friend, Cece, have a plan to venture into the forest to steal their own magic from the legendary Fel. However, as they set out on their grand adventure, a group of robbers derails their plan and Evie and Cece are whisked away to safety by the Queen's guard. Evie is transported to the capital to stay with a family friend. As a daughter of bakers, Evie takes on the role of baker to the noble Hollow family and is embroiled in a centuries-old struggle between the royal family and the magical Fel. With help from new friends Max and Gisa, Evie embarks on an adventure to catch the Robber Lord and uncover the truth of the Fel. Mistaken identity, trickery, and thievery combine to create a story more elaborate than anything Evie could have ever imagined. Unfortunately, Sangster's ambitious middle grade debut misses the mark. On the surface it is a fun adventure story; however, none of the plot lines or characters are fully fleshed out. This creates some confusing moments and periods of stagnation throughout. Main characters are coded as white. VERDICT A secondary purchase where adventure and fantasy books are popular.—Maryjean Riou

#2346777 Dogtown (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Katherine Applegate

Dogtown is a shelter for stray dogs, misbehaving dogs, and discarded robot dogs whose owners have outgrown them. Chance, a real dog, has been in Dogtown since his owners unwittingly left him with irresponsible dog-sitters who skipped town.

Metal Head is a robot dog who dreams of being back in a real home.

978-1-250-81160-8 Feiwel & Friends ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 4.0 Lexile 630

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 3-6 The unusual Dogtown shelter provides refuge to both wayward dogs and abandoned robot pups, and there is resentment brewing between the groups. Chance knows he's lucky to have a good life at the shelter after being injured and abandoned by unscrupulous pet-sitters, but having three legs, he worries that no one will want him, and he's still hoping to be reunited with his family. Chance can't understand why Metal Head, a recently discarded robot, refuses to ingratiate himself with potential adopters, preferring to plot a way back to his former owner. The two eventually form an uneasy alliance and, with additional assistance from a resident mouse, escape the confines of the shelter for an outdoor adventure. But their path home will be anything but straightforward. The tension and humor are beautifully balanced in this sympathetic story, and the delightfully distinct voices and memorable characters are enormous fun. Brief chapters set a brisk pace, and charming black-and-white illustrations are incredibly appealing. A sweet spotlight on shelter animals that is as heartwarming as it is entertaining. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Chance, our three-legged canine narrator, concedes that robot dogs are cleaner and more obedient (and definitely poop less) than flesh-and-blood dogs, but she also insists that mechanics can't make up for heart. Like many other residents of the dog shelter Dogtown, Chance is not fond of robot dogs, so when a mechanical canine she dubs Metal Head arrives, she isn't especially sympathetic. She is, however, intrigued, as Metal Head seems to have no desire to make itself more appealing and adoptable to a new family but is instead focused on getting out. Chance's dear friend Mouse convinces Chance to help spring Metal Head, and when the trio successfully make their escape, Chance starts to wonder if she, too, should try to find her previous owners. Clearly kin to the irascible street dog Bob in Applegate's The One and Only Bob (BCCB 5/20), Chance is the perfect balance of snark and vulnerability. Her relationships with and affection for the other dogs-metal and flesh-give her particular depth, as she is the one who often explains and comforts Dogtown's new arrivals: "Just because a human doesn't want you, doesn't mean you aren't lovable." The plot unfolds gently but directly, making this an easy choice for a classroom or family read-aloud, though tellers and listeners should have tissues on hand. KQG COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Three-legged Chance is at the top of the pack at Dogtown -- an animal shelter where she has a glowing reputation among dogs and humans alike. She's known for quickly settling the new "boo-hoo" pups as they adjust to life without their beloved owners, and she charms the managers into letting her cozy up under the staff poker table: "She makes everyone feel like her favorite," says a shelter volunteer. Then, Chance finds herself on an unexpected adventure back in the outside world, alongside Metal Head (a quirky dog that is actually a robot) and her friend Mouse (an actual rodent). While the threesome searches for Metal Head's human family, Chance's protective poise begins to waver -- just like every abandoned boo-hoo in Dogtown, Chance still harbors the painful hope that she might find a missing-dog sign with her own picture on it. Accompanied by friendly, cartoonlike halftone drawings, this canine slice-of-life adventure features a confident, affable narrator with a proclivity for doggy jargon (the cutest dogs at Dogtown get "First Cage" where they can flaunt their "Adopt-me Routine"). Short chapters and Chance's snappy narration keep the pace rolling, but Applegate and Choldenko adeptly make space for gently poignant moments along the way. An accessible, appealing romp that provides a dog's-eye view of the nature of hope, belonging, and found family. Jessica Tackett Macdonald(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews es the challenges of shelter life as he longs for a home. Friendly three-legged Chance is the perfect guide to Dogtown, a shelter that houses both warmblooded and robot dogs. In fact, she's "Management's lucky charm," roaming freely without being confined to a cage and leaving kibble for her mouse friend. Life is pretty good. But she still yearns for reunification with her family and, like many of the living pups, harbors suspicion of her robot counterparts, who are convenient and more easily adoptable but lacking in personality. When Metal Head, an oddly engineered e-dog, bonds with a child during a shelter reading program, Chance's assumptions about heartless robot dogs are upended. As Chance connects with Metal Head, the two make a brief escape into the wider world, and Chance learns a familiar lesson: Everyone longs for a place to belong. Memories of Chance's happy home loom large in her mind: Easy days with the Bessers, a sweet Black family, were disrupted by a neglectful dogsitter, the accident that cost Chance her leg, and Chance's flight in search of safety. Chance's chatty narrative style includes flashbacks, vignettes about fellow shelter pets, and thoughtful observations, for example, about the "boohoos," or sad new arrivals. The story offers many moments of laughter and reflection, all greatly enhanced by West's utterly charming grayscale illustrations of irresistible pooches. Eminently readable and appealing; will tug at dog-loving readers' heartstrings. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Newbery Medalist Applegate and Newbery Honoree Choldenko team up for this uplifting escape novel narrated by Chance, a forthright three-legged border collie/Aussie mix. Self-described as an unadoptable "pity party in a dog suit," Chase is a permanent resident of Dogtown; a shelter for dogs both mammalian and robotic; where she offers amusing and insightful commentary about her fellow rescues, including the animosity between the "flesh-and-bloods" seeking forever homes and the "metal dogs" that many humans consider easier to care for. When an uncharacteristically empathic robot dog, Metal Head, arrives, he makes a bold request of Chance and her friend Mouse: break him out of Dogtown. Unwittingly swept up in Metal Head's flight scheme, Chance and Mouse embark on an adventure that makes Chance wonder about life beyond the shelter. Angular b&w line drawings by West (Mighty Red Riding Hood) highlight the humorously sketched canine cast, while brief chapters that explore species divides promise to captivate anyone who enjoys rooting for a couple of down-on-their-luck dogs getting a second chance. Human characters are portrayed with various skin tones. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Welcome to Dogtown, a shelter for regular dogs—and robot dogs (don't ask, just go with it). The shelter's top dog is Chance, a congenial and introspective pooch, who like all the residents, longs to reunite with her family. But as Chance understands, "Hope is a painful business." That anguish, along with her resentment towards robot dogs (they often get adopted before real dogs) fades as Chance spends time with a robot dog she nicknames Metal Head. Animosity gradually evolves into understanding, then friendship as Chance introduces Metal Head to Mouse, a real mouse who lives in the shelter and shares Chance's kibble. The action shifts to adventure when Chance and Mouse escape Dogtown to accompany Metal Head on his quest to rejoin his family. Super short chapters, perhaps suggesting a dog's alleged limited attention span, keep the novel's pace moving briskly toward a climax sure to please animal lovers despite a few sad moments along the way. Chance captivates with insights that are hilarious and wise beyond her age in dog years. She counsels Mouse, "Your heart is a muscle...It grows stronger the more you use it." Thoughtful back matter suggests how children can help shelter dogs. West's grayscale art perfectly captures canine emotion and unbridled energy. VERDICT When Applegate and Choldenko collaborate, readers win.—Marybeth Kozikowski

#2282556 Hike to Home (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jess Rinker

Lin Moser is not looking forward to this summer. After living on the road all her life, hiking mountains and traveling through the country in an RV with her house-flipping parents, she's now stuck in Newbridge, New Jersey for their longest stay yet.

Determined to create her own adventure, Lin sets off on her biggest one yet—braving the wilderness with her two new friends, finding the castle, and maybe discovering home along the way.

978-1-250-81274-2 Farrar, Straus & Giroux ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Lin Moser has been living her best life, traveling from adventure to adventure as one of the "Moseying with the Mosers" YouTube family. So, how will she survive a B.O.R.I.N.G., stationary summer in New Jersey? Help comes in the form of two unlikely new friends: pink-haired Tinsley, who couldn't care less what the other kids think, and introverted, allergy-prone Leo from across the street. They form an odd squad and research the local legend of "The Castle in the Sky," a place that many have searched for, but no one has found. The trio head out alone, planning to discover its location and uncover its treasures. Briefly thwarted along their way by the bullying Sanders boys, the young explorers cleverly persist and are rewarded with exciting discoveries. A cross between the Irwin family's adventures and National Treasure, this is an entertaining quest that touches on facets of home and family, bullying, and personal creativity. A quick read that will entertain and challenge readers to seek out adventures in their own backyards. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Feeling abandoned by her filmmaker mom, who's on a yearlong residency in the Dry Tortugas, a tween finds friendship, mystery, and adventure in a small New Jersey town. Lin loves her family's unusual lifestyle. Her dad restores old houses around the country, while her mom films the process for their popular YouTube channel. The three occupy a souped-up bus that they move from location to location. With Mom away and Dad occupied, Lin--formerly home-schooled, now enrolled in public school summer rec camp--is bored and disgruntled. That is, until she's befriended by pink-haired classmate Tinsley. When Lin confides her intention to make a film about her summer, Tinsley's thrilled. Their friendship evolves to include Leo, a shy, overparented King Arthur buff who tells Lin about an abandoned castle believed to lie nearby, off the Appalachian Trail. Tinsley confides that her dad's Freemason lodge has long unsuccessfully sought the castle. Lin persuades them to break into the lodge to search for clues to its presumed whereabouts and then to join her on an overnight camping trip to find it. Things get more complicated when they're pursued by a trio of bullies who intend to capitalize on any exciting discoveries. Meandering at first, the pace picks up with the search for the castle--as do the stakes. Rinker's affinity for treasure-seeking quests serves readers well, as do her clear interest in and affection for the natural world. Characters default to White. An enjoyably alfresco romp. (Fiction. 8-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews,

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Stuck in Newbridge, N.J., with her father while her mother participates in a yearlong film residency in the Dry Tortugas, 12-year-old Melinda "Lin" Moser feels miserable. She's spent years traveling the country as part of her parents' popular YouTube home renovation show, Moseying with the Mosers, and resents being left behind. Ditching summer camp for her own film project, Lin becomes determined to find and film Pen's Castle, a rumored local haunt off the Appalachian Trail with purported roots in Arthurian legend and connections to Freemasonry. Along the way, she also hopes to prove that she, like both her mother and 19th-century mountaineer Annie Smith Peck, the subject of a book her mom sends her; is a true adventurer. Alongside musical theater enthusiast Tinsley Cooper, whose father is recovering from a work accident at local Sanders Construction, and bookish Leo Martin, bullied by another Sanders, Lin searches for clues about the castle while concocting a plan to spend two days hiking and filming in the woods. Rinker (The Dare Sisters) packs themes and plot points into a novel whose real strength is its characters; if the story sometimes bogs down as a result, the white-cued kids' rapport and significant emotional arcs satisfy. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Linda Epstein, Emerald City Literary. (July)

#2309453 Lost Year (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Katherine Marsh

Thirteen-year-old Matthew is miserable. His journalist dad is stuck overseas, and his mom has moved his great-grandmother in with them to ride out the pandemic, adding to his stress and isolation. But when Matthew finds a photo in his great-grandmother's belongings, he discovers a clue to a hidden chapter of her past, one that will reveal a life-shattering family secret.

978-1-250-31360-7 Roaring Brook Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.8 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 710

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist the early days of the coronavirus pandemic, and, like most 13-year-olds, he would rather play video games than hang out with his 100-year-old great-grandmother, Nadiya, or "GG." Matthew's mom has other plans. Forced to unpack GG's storage boxes, Matthew finds a photo that sparks questions and ultimately unspools a long-hidden history about GG's childhood in Stalin-ruled Soviet Ukraine. Alternating perspectives between Matthew and GG's cousins when they were young girls, the story connects 1930s Brooklyn to Communist Ukraine during its devastating, man-made famine, the Holodomor. As the cousins' narratives unfold, the book also links two moments in history deeply impacted by disinformation; it encourages readers to consider carefully their sources and emphasizes that "we need to tell the whole story" and be mindful of whose stories have not—or cannot—be told. Marsh, Edgar Award-winning author of The Night Tourist (2007), explains in a note that she rooted her research in her own relatives' experiences during the Holodomor. The fairly lengthy middle-grade book rewards readers with a nimble twist and satisfying ending and has an obvious urgency in light of current geopolitics. A natural selection for fans of Alan Gratz and a stepping stone to the work of Ruta Sepetys, this sobering and important story will be an excellent addition to classroom and library collections.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books With school shut down and socialization limited, thirteen-year-old Matthew has been relying on his Nintendo Switch for entertainment during most of the spring in 2020. That's taken away too, though, when his mom decides it's time to go screen-free, suggesting he help his great-grandmother, who has recently moved in with them, sort through her old boxes. When he finds an old photograph of two young girls, he uncovers a tale far more harrowing and dramatic than any video game. Alternate chapters tell the story of three girls in 1932: Mila, the daughter of a higher-up in the Ukrainian Communist Party; Nadia, orphaned when her mother and family died in the Holodomor in Ukraine; and Helen, the daughter of recent Eastern European immigrants to Brooklyn. The shifting perspectives make for a choppy narrative at points, but the story more than compensates for the unevenness with compelling characters and three separate settings brilliantly utilized for both a sense of place and a connection between the major players. Matthew makes an excellent proxy for young readers, especially as a kid at the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic: he's feeling relatively safe but has no idea how long the shutdown will be or how dangerous the virus is. He knows he's lucky but he's also aware that things can get really bad really fast—a fact confirmed in his great-grandmother's account of three girls tossed together in one tragedy and not all making it out alive. Marsh has a clear knowledge of the Soviet world and the Holodomor, and she seamlessly interweaves historical events and figures without extensive exposition. This feels especially timely, given the Russian invasion of Ukraine as well as the continuing pandemic, but ultimately, the book asks the reader a larger existential question: what would you do to survive and who would you become in the aftermath? KQG COPYRIGHT(2022) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Marsh's affecting historical novel, inspired by her own family's story, describes the social and political backdrop of the Holodomor, a famine that killed millions of Ukrainians in the 1930s and was covered up by the Soviets (Ukraine was a republic of the USSR at the time). It opens by introducing Matthew, a present-day, screen-obsessed thirteen-year-old living in New Jersey, "basically under house arrest" during the COVID-19 pandemic. He has been asked to help Nadiya, his hundred-year-old great-grandmother, to sort through her belongings; in so doing he starts to piece together the Lomachenko family story. Matthew's chapters alternate with those of Mila, a Young Pioneer living in 1930s Kyiv under the watchful eye of her doting widowed father (and Papa Stalin), and of Nadiya's cousin Helen in Depression-era Brooklyn. The harsh realities of the Stalin regime -- where citizens could be declared "class enemies," evicted from their homes, and sent to labor colonies for any perceived anti-Party infraction -- come to light. The horrors of state-sanctioned starvation and the desperation of would-be refugees are palpable and disturbing to read, but they are made palatable because the experiences are filtered through the viewpoints and sensibilities of young people caught up in the disaster. The multiple voices come together to bear witness and remind us that history is a collection of stories, "and it matters enormously who gets to tell them." A compelling and timely look at the historically complex and fraught relationship between Ukraine and Russia. Luann Toth(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A 13-year-old boy trapped indoors by Covid-19 uncovers a dark family secret leading back to the Holodomor, the early 1930s Ukrainian famine caused by Stalin's policies. When the pandemic shuts down the world in 2020, Matthew is more isolated than most kids. His journalist father is stuck in Paris, and since his mom has moved GG, his frail, 100-year-old, Ukrainian immigrant great-grandmother, in with them, protecting her means Matthew can't see his friends. Matthew starts helping GG sort her boxes of keepsakes, gradually piecing together a story that's also told from the points of view of Mila, the privileged daughter of a Communist Party member, and Helen, the daughter of Ukrainian immigrants living in Brooklyn. When Helen's cousins write to say they are starving, she secretly mails them her father's cherished gold cross. Meanwhile, in Kyiv, Mila encounters a starving girl who claims to be her cousin Nadiya. Mila is a strong supporter of Papa Stalin, but her efforts to help Nadiya ultimately open her eyes to the truth about his regime--as well as endangering her own life. Marsh's intertwining narratives ground the story of the Holodomor--which affected her own family--within a historical framework while leading up to a completely believable and emotionally powerful conclusion. A strong subplot discusses journalistic integrity and how one powerful man managed to keep the truth of the Holodomor hidden for years. A moving presentation of a long-suppressed piece of history. (author's note) (Historical fiction. 9-14) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly A 13-year-old boy discovers a dark family secret in this stirring volume by Marsh (Nowhere Boy). As the Covid-19 lockdown begins, Matthew is stuck in his Leonia, N.J., home with his divorced magazine editor mother and his 100-year-old Ukrainian-born great-grandmother Nadiya, called GG. Struggling to adjust to the new reality, Matthew finds comfort in playing video games, until his mother takes away his gaming console and orders him to help GG organize her personal belongings. When he finds a photo of two girls, labeled "Nadiya and Helen," GG reluctantly divulges that she and her cousin Helen had once been a trio, and that what happened to the third cousin, Mila, is a "terrible secret," spurring Matthew to learn more about GG's past. Captivating first-person POV chapters; which alternate between Matthew in 2020 N.J. and Helen, Nadiya, and Mila in 1930s Brooklyn and Kyiv; vividly render the suffering caused by Stalin's imposed famine, Holodomor; the event's perception around the world; and the aftereffects that ripple into Matthew's present. Helen and Matthew's growing understanding of the tenets of responsible journalism link their stories as each seeks to uncover the truth and report on their discoveries. An author's note concludes. Ages 10: 14. (Jan.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Four intertwined narratives explore a family history full of suffering, sacrifice, and secrets. Much of the book explores the events in the early 1930s around the Holomodor (death by starvation) in Ukraine. Mila, Nadia, and Helen are the Lomachenko cousins at the center of the story. Helen is in America; Mila is the daughter of a powerful Communist party member in Kyiv; and Nadia lives with her rural farming family in Ukraine. The story opens in 2020 where Matthew spends a lot of time with his great-grandmother during the early days of the COVID-19 pandemic lockdown in New Jersey, and she shares the untold story of her early life as one of the cousins as they go through her box of memories. Matthew seeks help from his reporter father who is working in Europe. The chapters are titled with the name of the character they feature and include an image, location, and date, which helps keep everyone straight as there are a lot of shifting perspectives. The narrative structure is a bit clunky at times, but the story is compelling. VERDICT With appealing connections to a family living in the time of the pandemic and insight into the history of Ukraine, this striking work of historical fiction dives into the importance of telling one's story and preserving the history of everyday people.--Erin Wyatt Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2348446 Juniper's Christmas (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Eoin Colfer

Everyone knows Santa doesn't do Christmas anymore, but Juniper Lane only wants one thing this year: to celebrate the Santa Vigil in Cedar Park in honor of her late father. But then her mother goes missing and the park's bureaucratic director declares the vigil is canceled, so Juniper seeks the help of mysterious and grumpy carpenter Niko--who accidentally reveals his expert craftsmanship, flying reindeer, and magic powers. He insists he's not Santa and refuses to help, so it just might be up to Juniper to find her own magic and save Christmas.

978-1-250-32194-7 Roaring Brook Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 368 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$22.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly An 11-year-old seeks the help of Santa Claus, retired to modern-day London following his wife's death, in a warmhearted Christmas novel from Colfer (the Artemis Fowl series). To honor her late, Ghana-born, London-park-keeper father, Juniper Lane hopes to continue the tradition he started: holding an annual Santa Vigil in the park. But when her white mother, the park's new keeper, vanishes before the event, a desperate Juniper enlists the aid of reclusive handyman Niko; previously Santa; who spends his days building wooden shelters for the park's unhoused residents, and whose retirement eight years ago has left a generation of children without faith in Santa Claus. He reluctantly agrees to assist after Juniper is imbued with polar magic of her own, but when a criminally inclined businesswoman seeks to gain control of the Claus powers, the two find themselves in a race to save Christmas. A congenial, omniscient narrator supplies a fresh spin on familiar holiday themes, including forgiveness, healing, and hope. Final art not seen by PW; secondary characters cue as white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Sophie Hicks, Sophie Hicks Agency. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Santa Claus stopped delivering presents to children after his wife died eight years ago. Since then, he has lived undercover in England as Nicholas. He and his reindeer do good deeds for people, but try their best not to be found by the Christmas elves. Without Santa Claus to bring Christmas cheer, Juniper's father developed his own tradition of helping those in need and filling the holiday season with good tidings. When he died, Juniper and her mom were too miserable to carry on the Christmas tradition. This year, when they finally feel up to celebrating, Juniper's mom disappears. Juniper is heartbroken and begins searching for her mom. Through a family friend, Duchess, Juniper makes contact with Nicholas. She learns that Nicholas is Santa Claus in hiding at the same time that she and Duchess find out that the local constables want to shut down the holiday food and clothes giveaway. As this fast-paced story races to a conclusion, Juniper thwarts the constables and their criminal helpers, and eventually finds her mom. Duchess falls in love with Nicholas, whom the elves finally locate. Christmas is saved. Colfer is a master storyteller. The voices of both Juniper and Nicholas shine through and will keep readers engaged, while Prabhat's beautiful illustrations help to convey the personalities of each character. VERDICT A delightful tale. Readers will enjoy the imaginative story filled with lush prose and a heartwarming ending.—Charla Hollingsworth

#2369037 Olivetti (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Allie Millington

Being a typewriter is not as easy as it looks. When Olivetti learns Mom has mysteriously gone missing, he believes he can help find her. He breaks the only rule of his 'kind' and types back to Ernest, who must face what he and his family have been running from, The Everything That Happened. Only by working together will they find the parts of themselves they've lost.

978-1-250-32693-5 Feiwel & Friends ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-6 Starred Review An introverted boy and his missing mother's cherished typewriter plumb forgotten family stories while journeying toward acceptance in this touching middle-grade mystery. The Brindle family swarms distractedly around seventh-grader Ernest, everyone fixed in their ways until the morning Beatrice, his mom, vanishes. This isn't the family's first trauma, but, after "Everything That Happened," Ernest finds an unexpected ally: Olivetti, Beatrice's classic typewriter, who explains, "We [typewriters] hold thousands of stories. Worlds full of words." Because Beatrice spilled her "secrets all over [his] keys," Olivetti breaks his code of silence and recounts Beatrice's writing to help Ernest trace her. As inanimate narrators go, Olivetti is especially well suited to the task and takes turns with Ernest in lending his perspective to the short chapters. And, as stories about stories go, Olivetti's and Ernest's insights about the power of memories, both held and shared, speak volumes. Emotional fragility pervades this introspective debut; sensitive readers should be aware of themes of major illness and its recurrence. Offering a Where'd You Go, Bernadette vibe, with its unspooling of a youth perspective on the adult world, this melancholic yet hopeful pick will appeal to fans of books with nonhuman protagonists and readers who enjoy emotional stories with alternating perspectives, such as Jasmine Warga's A Rover's Story (2022) and The Lost Library (2023), by Rebecca Stead and Wendy Mass. COPYRIGHT(2024) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Olivetti the typewriter was once a beloved part of the human Brindle family, with the mother, Beatrice, typing her various stories and thoughts on him over the years and the children occasionally using Olivetti for their own imaginings. He knows he's out of fashion now, what with the arrival of laptops and cell phones, but he's still shocked when Beatrice pawns him off at a shop. Through alternating narration with Ernest, one of the four Brindle children, readers learn that shortly after selling Olivetti, Beatrice disappeared. Desperate to find her, Ernest goes to the place she was last seen and makes the welcome but surprising discoveries that Olivetti can communicate with him and that the typewriter might know where Beatrice went. The dual perspectives allow for a fuller picture of the Brindle family members, who have all endured Beatrice's years-long battle with cancer but who have yet to process their lingering trauma, feeling it unearned as Beatrice is still alive. The eventual revelation that Beatrice is sick again is gut-punching, and the fact that the book's ending is ambiguous about her survival this time makes it especially emotionally fraught. That heartbreak, however, is both softened and honored by Olivetti, as he offers a view of a family living their fullest even in the face of uncertain tragedy, recognizing that the story goes on but is often reconfigured in unexpected ways. This has the charm of the Penderwicks books but the melancholy of Long's The Death and Life of Benny Brooks (BCCB 11/23), a balance that makes it an ideal pick for readers looking for both honesty and hope. KQG COPYRIGHT(2024) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A magical typewriter brings healing, reconnection, and new friends to a hurting family. Olivetti, a silent but fully conscious typewriter, has been there since the beginning, living with parents Felix and Beatrice and their children, Ezra, Adalyn, Ernest, and Arlo, a "copper-colored family with eyes as rich as ink." Olivetti, who even took part in Felix's proposal to Beatrice, watched playfulness and creativity grow as the children arrived, and he faithfully remembers every single word the people have typed. Then, longing to communicate, he watched the family suffer through Everything That Happened. Which is exactly what seventh grader Ernest is still trying to forget. Constantly carrying his dictionary around, Ernest spends most of his time on the roof away from others, scared of getting close to people for fear of losing them. So, when Beatrice suddenly leaves after taking Olivetti to a pawn shop, grief-stricken Ernest seeks him out and confesses that he fears he's to blame for her departure. Desperate to help, Olivetti takes the unusual action of breaking typewriterly code: He communicates with Ernest in order to help him. But will it be enough? The chapters are told from Olivetti's and Ernest's first-person perspectives and frequently contain flashbacks. Debut author Millington skillfully delivers a complex storyline that deals with heavy topics. With plenty of quotable wisdom, richly textured language, and dry humor, this work reads like a classic. An extraordinary journey that speaks to the "before" and "after" of life-changing events. (Fiction. 10-14) COPYRIGHT(2024) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Olivetti; a polite and observant dark green typewriter; and an introverted 12-year-old narrate Millington's unique debut. Olivetti takes his job as a "protector of memories" seriously. Despite the recent appearance of a laptop ("the glossy show-off"), Olivetti has accumulated "an endless amount of memories" working with owner Beatrice. His patient existence is upended when he's abruptly sold to a pawn shop and Beatrice goes missing, leaving her husband and four children; including middle schooler Ernest; confused and alarmed. While putting up missing-person flyers, Ernest meets dumpster-diving Quinn, whose father owns the pawn shop. Aided by Olivetti, Ernest and Quinn team up to solve the mystery of Beatrice's disappearance, and as they try untangling Beatrice's whereabouts, Ernest frets that his reluctance to speak to a therapist about a mysterious, traumatic family event caused his mother's departure. While the tantalizing premise is hampered by cliché characterizations, incomplete worldbuilding, and a limp mystery, Olivetti's snarky observations entertain, and the human protagonists' endearing support for each other's endeavors paints a worthwhile portrait of community. Ernest and his family have "copper-colored" skin; other characters default to white. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Kristen Terrette, Martin Literary. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4 Up—A lively and tender story about language, archive, and family history, Millington's debut will keep young readers on their toes. Ernest Brindle's family is falling apart after the sudden disappearance of his mother, Beatrice. His siblings are squabbling, his father is unraveling, and he can't figure out why his mother would have sold their beloved typewriter to a pawn shop, of all things, before running away. Enter Quinn, the precocious daughter of the pawnbroker. When Quinn and Ernest discover that Olivetti (the typewriter) is "alive" and can type for them every memory that has been recorded on its keys, they begin a race against time to discover anything and everything the Olivetti can recall about Beatrice. With the help of a friendly, if rather stereotypical, librarian and a Brazilian handyman, the Brindle family use Olivetti's unique ability to scour Beatrice's memories for clues to her whereabouts. This is a charming story filled with idiomatic expressions and wordplay. Formatted in alternating chapters between Ernest and Olivetti's points of view, readers will be delighted by the book's playfulness, as well as its bittersweet look at the power of memory, and how a family can be broken and then healed. VERDICT A quirky, heartfelt novel recommended for general middle grade collections.—Nora G. Murphy

#2329159 Little Like Waking (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Adam Rex

Zelda is stuck in a dream. A very strange dream, where people can fly, bears sneeze money, and her childhood cat, Patches, is somehow alive—despite being run over years ago. Things only get stranger when Zelda meets Langston, a sweet if overly timid guy who feels more real to her than anyone she's ever met. But what they uncover along the way pushes them towards a truth neither of them wants to face.

978-1-250-62191-7 Roaring Brook Press ©2023 6 x 9 400 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile HL 640

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$20.99

Reviews by: Book Page Zelda lives in the kind of quaint, upbeat town worthy of a montage. People greet her by name, wish her good luck on her geography test and loan her a bike when she's running late. But after a close call on that bike with a car and a disappearing boy, Zelda starts to question her perfect town. Why does that geography test—which she's pretty sure she also took yesterday—make no sense? Why does the town laundromat sport its own creepy clown? And why has her dead cat, Patches, shown up . . . talking?

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 8-12 Starred Review "To sleep, perchance to dream," as Shakespeare wrote, and here Rex (The Story of Gumluck the Wizard, 2023) isn't far behind with a captivating fantasy romance that's all about dreams and dreamers. Among the latter is our protagonist, 18-year-old Zelda, who is quick to realize that she is living in a dream in which her fellow students fly about in their underwear and her long-dead pet cat, Patches, comes back to vivid life, talking to her in a lovely baritone. Ah, but is Zelda truly the dreamer, or is she living in someone else's dream? Patches insists that he is the dreamer, as does Langston, the cute boy with whom Zelda is increasingly smitten. To determine who is right, the three set off on a quest to find the edge of the dream, where they hope to discover the identity of the dreamer and what will transpire if that dreamer awakens. Along the way, they'll have dreamlike adventures (while besieged by giant gym teachers who bombard them with dodgeballs, they are rescued when a giant duck waddles on stage and eats their attackers). Rex has dreamed up a charming, funny, highly imaginative story that invites long thoughts about the nature of reality and the enduring importance of romance. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Realizing she's stuck in a dream, a girl journeys with a boy and a cat to discover what's real. Zelda lives in an idyllic town where everyone knows her name, but her world is upended when she comes across a cute boy she hasn't seen before. This leads to the realization that she's inhabiting a dream world; she doesn't know if her memories are real or just more dreams. Zelda learns the boy's name is Langston, and together they set off toward the edge of the dream on an adventure, accompanied by Patches, her erudite talking cat. Zelda believes she must be the dreamer and must find a way to wake up for real, but when she starts falling for the oft-apprehensive Langston, she feels less inclined to leave. This surreal tale mixes a hero's journey with romance, folds in the absurdities and chaos of dreams, and is peppered with vibrant, memorable side characters including a wizard, witches, a giant duck, and a laundromat clown. There's a lot of silliness in the story, which is mostly entertaining but can sometimes grow tiresome. It's thoughtfully balanced, though, with relatable internal struggles and emotions about crushes and confidence, loss and love. The unpredictable nature of the story will keep readers on their toes and the pages flying. Captivating full-page grayscale illustrations are interspersed. Zelda appears White; Langston is Black. A wonderfully inventive story bursting with humor and heart. (Surrealist fiction. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly While running late for a final exam and biking furiously through her small town, white teenager Zelda narrowly misses being hit by a car and meets Langston, a handsome Black boy sprawled in the bushes. This meet-cute; and various encounters before it, including the greeting she received from the gate to her house ("?'MORning,' creaks the gate as it opens"); leads to Zelda realizing that her entire life, including her town and everyone in it, is a dream. Accompanied by Langston and her poetry-spouting, once-dead cat Patches, Zelda endeavors to travel to the edge of the vision, discover the identity of the dreamer, and hopefully return to waking life. Along the way, the trio meets fantastical apparitions (dodgeball-throwing gym teachers on horseback, a sinister laundromat clown, and a 1980s-themed carnival), and muddle through challenges in a world where the rules are constantly changing. Yet the closer they get to the edge, the more apprehensive Zelda and Langston become about their impending separation once the dreamer wakes. By turns existential and goofy, this campy, off-the-beaten-path story by Rex (Fat Vampire), propelled via an immediate, stream-of-conscious present-tense voice and sprinkled with beguiling b&w artwork, ruminates on themes of loss and love. Ages 12: up. Agent: Steven Malk, Writers House. (Aug.)

#2343658 Eagle Drums (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Nasugraq Rainey Hopson

As his family prepares for winter, a young, skilled hunter must travel up the mountain to collect obsidian for knapping-the same mountain where his two older brothers died. When he reaches the mountaintop, he is confronted by a terrifying eagle god named Savik. Savik gives the boy a choice: follow me or die like your brothers.

978-1-250-75065-5 Roaring Brook Press ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 910

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.99

Reviews by: Book Page In her debut middle grade novel, Nasugraq Rainey Hopson crafts an exquisitely immersive tale describing the mythical origins of the Iñupiaq Messenger Feast and how the Iñupiaq people acquired song and dance. A boy named Pinja is sent on a mountain journey by his family to get obsidian for their toolmaking. His mother can't help but worry; it's the same mountain where his two older brothers disappeared. Nonetheless, it's a vital task, because this small family lives off the land and never takes more than what's necessary, surviving "thanks to the animals and their kindness and generosity--and a heavy dose of luck." They rarely see others and are extremely cautious the few times they do. When Pinja reaches the mountain, he is immediately confronted by an immense eagle god named Savik, who snatches him and takes him far away to Savik's eagle god family. Pinja remains prisoner for 14 moons, learning many difficult lessons from the eagle gods, including how to dance, sing, drum, build a large gathering hall and become a leader. Pinja is thoughtful, intelligent and determined, and his intense yearning to return home drives him to study and learn from everything he encounters--even a cute lemming teaches Pinja to see the power of combining strength with others. Gradually, Pinja realizes an important new concept, one foreign to his family: "Why would you do things alone when you can accomplish so much together?" Rainey's writing is taut and finely chiseled, as in this description of the endless ennui of Pinja's imprisonment: "The days cut at him like obsidian against grass with their slow emptiness." Her fine-toned illustrations showcase the beauty of the Alaskan landscape and its people, while her knowledgeable, passionate descriptions of survival in a harsh environment integrate well into the ongoing action. Rainey herself lives with her family in a remote Alaska Native village in the Brooks Range, where they follow a predominantly subsistence life and try to preserve traditional Iñupiaq values and knowledge.

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Pi?a, a young Iñupiat hunter on a journey to the mountains to collect obsidian, meets a magical golden eagle, Savik. Rather than be killed by the shape-shifter (as were his older brothers), Pi?a agrees to accompany Savik to his aerie, where Eagle Mother schools Pi?a with lessons in song, dance, qalgi (sod-house) construction, and community. Eventually Pi?a returns to his family, where he is tasked with sharing what he has learned and preparing a celebratory meal (called the Messenger's Feast) to bring his people together. This folkloric origin myth offers many details about traditional Native Alaskan life, particularly ways to live off the land. Iñupiat Hopson's smoothly written prose is infused with many Native words, and though no glossary is included, context clues make most meanings clear. Full-color illustrations (one per chapter) help readers to visualize the characters and Alaskan tundra setting, and elegant spot drawings grace chapter headings and section breaks. In her debut, Hopson offers a culturally specific survival story that should have much appeal; an author's note clarifies the source for this tale.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books In this story of the Inupiat Messenger Feast, divine, shapeshifting eagles command Pi? a, a young hunter, to live with them and learn what they have to teach or die on the mountaintop like his two brothers before him. Although the tasks the birds throw at him initially seem odd-making drums, telling stories through singing and dancing, constructing a qalgi (sod building)-Pi?a grows in his understanding of relationships between people and nature, finally returning to his parents to prepare a massive festival that will join their scattered people in a communal celebration. Pi?a is a compelling and sympathetic protagonist, wary of strangers beyond his immediate family but longing for community as he struggles to find his place in the world. The narrative showcases a treasury of details about Native Alaskan life and traditions; enthralling details of building design, clothing, crafts, food storage, nutrition, transportation, and other day-to-day practices in the Arctic will appeal to survival story aficionados as well as readers eager to learn about Indigenous cultures and histories. Equally compelling is the mythological background of the Messenger Feast, a living celebration reclaimed by the Inupiat and explained further in an author's note. Accompanying illustrations in icy and earthy hues, also by the author, bring the landscape and its inhabitants onto the page to complement the narrative. FHK COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Hopson's (Inupiat) debut novel is the story of the origin of the Messenger Feast, an Inupiat festival of song and dance. Pia follows in the footsteps of his two older brothers, both of whom died confronting a golden eagle. When he encounters the eagle, instead of attacking or freezing in fear, Pia accepts its challenge to learn what the Eagles can teach him. Pia brings his new understandings of song, drumming, dance, architecture, and community back to his family, to the animals who share their environment, and to the people whose stories sustain their culture. This retelling of a traditional tale benefits from Hopson's personal connection to Alaska, where she was born and raised and where she and her family live. Set in the long-ago of oral tradition and accompanied by occasional colored-pencil and ink drawings, the tale evokes the tundra in all its seasons. Hopson deftly describes smells (the autumn earth, the "dusty rot" of the Eagle Mother), tastes (berries, roasted caribou meat, bitter Arctic hare fed on willow bark), and sounds (marmot whistles, bumblebees) that bring the land to life for the reader and ground this archetypal hero's journey in the real world. Lara K. Aase(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Messenger Feast and a boy who was kidnapped by eagles. Throughout Pi?a's childhood, he was told haunting stories about the dangers of strangers, an unknown presence in the mountains near his family's sod house, and his missing older brothers, Atau an Maligu. His mother's projection of his brothers' successes onto him combined with his father's silence, both expressions of their grieving, leave Pi?a wondering, "How can you compete with someone's memories, anyway?" One day, Savik, who shape-shifts between man and golden eagle, offers Pi?a a choice: death or captivity. Pi?a reflects on the pain his death would cause his parents. He decides to go with Savik and try to return so eday. The eagles teach Pi?a singing, drumming, and dancing. He also learns how to build a giant sod house and host a huge feast. The lessons aren't easy, and his ego is challenged: "I learned not to lead with demands. I learned to lead with connections." Pi?a struggles with fear and distrust instilled by his family, overcomes self-doubt, and becomes both "creator and learner." This orally transmitted tale, once banned like the feast it describes, offers a deep connection to rich cultural teachings. Inupiat author and illustrator Hopson enhances the story with full-page color illustrations that visually connect readers with Pi?a's journey and emphasize the importance of connections to nature, spiritual beings, and human relatives. A captivating tale filled with enduring lessons about overcoming the fear of others. (author's note) (Folklore. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Among the Inupiat of the Arctic Circle, "the story of the Messenger Feast was passed down orally from generation to generation for hundreds, perhaps thousands, of years," Hopson writes in this illuminating retelling of the original tale, which follows an Inupiat tween who is kidnapped by eagles. All his life, Pi?a has navigated his parents' grief over his missing older brothers, feeling as if he's living in their shadow. When he is one day approached by Savik, a man who shape-shifts between golden eagle and human forms, Savik whisks Pi?a away from his mountainous home. With the eagles, Pi?a learns many skills and hard lessons, as well as the details of what would later become the tenements of the Messenger Feast, including the drum, dance, and construction of the qalgi, the ceremonial building. All the while, he yearns to return to his family. In this poignant adventure, the creator employs rhythmic prose that echoes the story's oral traditions and offers illustrations rendered in rich, textured hues. An author's note discusses how, like many Inupiat songs and dances, the story of the Messenger Feast was banned following the "encroachment of the missionaries into Indigenous territories and communities," not to be resurrected until Hopson was in college. Ages 8: 12. (Sept.)

#2228170 Double Life of Danny Day (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Mike Thayer

My name is Danny Day, and I live every day twice. The first time, it's a "discard day." It's kind of like a practice run. At the end of the day, I go to bed, wake up, and poof everything gets reset, everything except my memory, that is.

978-1-250-77099-8 Feiwel & Friends ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.6 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 820

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Through a quirk of fate, Danny lives every day twice. Once as a regular day like everyone else and once as a "discard" day, when he can do anything he wants without consequences. A typical 12-year-old, he spends his "discard" days cutting school and playing video games. That changes when Danny starts a new school in a new town and meets classmate Zak, self-confident and respected by his peers. Zak's integrity leads Danny to wonder if there is something better he can do with his unique gift. Danny finds his purpose when he vows to take down a video game cheating ring, led by another student who uses the game to steal money from players. Danny's first-person narrative engages readers with wisecracking humor and sharp observations on the middle school social stratum. Danny is coded as white. Zak, whose parents hail from Ghana and Japan, provides the mentoring guidance Danny's parents do not. They are portrayed as loving but preoccupied and a bit clueless: Danny's father doesn't believe he's into video games and his mother thinks he has "playdates" with friends. Gamers will relish Thayer's extended play-by-play accounts of the kids' video battles and strategies. A good group discussion point is the difference between how Zak and Danny handle bullies: Zak stands up to them, Danny plots to get even. VERDICT Perfect for gamers who'd rather play than read, Thayer speaks their language and scores a direct hit.—Marybeth Kozikowski, Sachem P.L., Holbrook, NY

#2177589 Explorer's Code (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Allison K. Hymas

Math whiz Charlie won admission in a puzzle contest--and he's intrigued by the strange numbers he finds on Idlewood's walls. His restless sister Anna had to be dragged to the house--but then she discovers its hidden floor. Emily's parents brought her to the mansion on a secret mission--and she's determined to prove herself to them.

978-1-250-25885-4 Imprint ©2020 5-1/4 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Deep in the Shenandoah forest stands Idlewood Manor, where deep-rooted secrets await. The newly reopened historical mansion now serves as a weekend getaway for a select number of lucky visitors. Among these guests are the Hendersons, thanks to gifted 12-year-old Charlie's winning a contest. His exuberant 13-year-old sister, Anna, whose parents continually chastise her, can't wait to explore the manor's nooks and crannies. Following in the footsteps of her idol, famous early-20th-century explorer Virginia Maines, Anna uncovers a secret passageway to a hidden third floor and, further along, an abandoned tower. Charlie's exploits lead him to notice hidden numerical codes among the manor's walls and rooms. Meanwhile, 12-year-old Emily Shaughnessy plans on helping her historian parents on a critical mission to preserve Idlewood Manor as a historical site. All three explorers begin at odds with each other: Emily's suspicious of anyone derailing her task while Charlie and Anna struggle over the loss of their once-close bond. Soon though, the trio must rely on one another to untangle the mysteries of Idlewood Manor and its ties to Maines' disappearance. Full of puzzles and intrigue, this is a delectable treat for readers wanting a brainteaser or two in an intricately paced package. Equally amusing is the three young explorers' implicit battle with the adult guests, who range from bemused roadblocks to the trio's progress to stealthy thieves. Main characters follow a White default. A worthy call to unravel a mystery. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2158692 Ghost Squad (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Claribel A. Ortega

Shortly before Halloween, Lucely and her best friend, Syd, cast a spell that accidentally awakens malicious spirits, wreaking havoc throughout St. Augustine.

Together, they must join forces with Syd's witch grandmother, Babette, and her tubby tabby, Chunk, to fight the haunting head-on and reverse the curse to save the town and Lucely's firefly spirits before it's too late.

978-1-338-28012-8 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.5 AR Pts 7.0 Lexile 810

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When Dominican-American Lucely Luna, 12, learns that her single father might lose their house, her primary concern is for the myriad ghosts of her family, who inhabit the willow tree out back as fireflies, at least when they're not manifesting in human form. When her grandmother's spirit warns her of a coming darkness before falling dormant, Luna and her best friend, Syd Faires, seek to revive Mama. Borrowing a book of magic from Syd's grandmother, who owns an occult store, they cast a spell that unleashes malevolent forces upon the town of St. Augustine; one that they must reverse to defeat the evil that seeks to destroy them all. With this delightfully spooky adventure, Ortega draws upon her Dominican heritage to craft a heartwarming story with a strong focus on family genetic and found. A peppering of pop culture references; a nod to Ghostbusters, a clowder of cats named for Goonies characters; add humor, but it's the personal touches, such as Lucely's opinionated, ever-present ancestors; her dedication to those she loves; and an emphasis on Latinx food, love, and folklore, that gives this debut its distinctive spirit. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Suzie Townsend, New Leaf Literary. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal read? Look no further. Something strange is happening to Lucely's ghost family of fireflies, known as c ocyos—they are fading away. They tell her that something evil is coming. In an attempt to revive her Mama Teresa, Lucely and her best friend Syd perform a spell to raise the dead, but accidentally awaken old evil spirits that want to revenge against their town. Lucely, Syd, and Syd's grandmother Babette (who is a witch) must undo the curse and save her ghost family. This is a fast-paced adventure rooted in Dominican mythology and packed with action and humor. Readers are pulled into the family's close bond and supernatural world easily, with tender moments like abuela singing Lucely to sleep during a storm and the collective urgency as Lucely feels Mama's spirit quieting. VERDICT Ortega's debut is filled with action, humor, and originality. Lucely and Syd's adventure gives readers paranormal thrills akin to Ghostbusters and the Goonies, from a refreshingly different cultural perspective.—Ruth Guerrier-Pierre, New York Public Library

#2087655 Ice Garden (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Guy Jones

Allergic to the sun, Jess sets out to explore the world she longs to be a part of by night. But what she discovers is a beautiful impossibility: a magical garden wrought of ice...
 978-1-338-28533-8 Chicken House ©2019 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 264 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.6 AR Pts 5.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-More than anything, 12-year-old Jess just wants to be like other kids. But Jess is allergic to the sun, a condition that forces her to spend most of her time inside, behind closed shades, or encased in a heavy protective suit complete with hood and goggles. When she's not traveling back and forth for doctor visits with her mom, Jess learns at home and spends her free time making up fantastic tales that she hopes will one day make her famous. One night, fed up with her circumstances, Jess sneaks out to the neighborhood playground she has always wished to visit. Startled by a strange sound, she flees to the woods behind the playground and stumbles into a magical place: a garden made completely of ice. Entranced, she begins to make nightly visits to the playground and soon discovers that she is not alone: Owen, also made of ice, becomes a trusted friend, one of the first Jess has made in a long time. This gentle tale strikes a pleasing balance between the harsh realities of illness and a fantastical world in which to escape. Young readers will relate to Jess and her frustration at the lack of control she has over her life. This effectively straddles the line between realistic fiction and magical realism. VERDICT This feel-good, modern fairy tale is ideal for elementary libraries and all middle grade collections.-Kristy Pasquariello, Westwood Public Library, MA Copyright 2018. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2102945 Last Chance Hotel (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Nicki Thornton

Seth is a kitchen boy at the remote Last Chance Hotel. One night, a band of magicians begin to arrive to participate in a secret meeting. But when the doors to the private meeting open, and Dr. Thallonius lay dead on the floor, the group blames the dessert, which means that it's Seth who will pay the price.
 978-1-338-32362-7 Chicken House ©2019 6 x 8-1/2 336 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.9 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity 1
Unit Price $18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 5-8 Seth is stuck working at the Last Chance Hotel as a kitchen boy for an awful couple and their daughter, Tiffany, who lives to torment him. He longs to fulfill his dream of becoming an amazing chef like his father. The night a group of magicians gather at the hotel could be Seth's opportunity to show off his cooking skills, but that chance slowly slips away when Tiffany makes him cook up a dessert for Dr. Thallonius, who ends up dead. Seth knows his dessert didn't kill Thallonius, but the magicians have deemed him the killer, and he has to find a way to prove his innocence. Thornton sets the story entirely inside the Last Chance Hotel, giving this closed-room mystery a twist of magic. Though it's his place of confinement, the hotel is also Seth's only home, and there are plenty of secrets buried in its foundation. The murder mystery, powerful magicians, and Seth's love of cooking will appeal to a wide readership. A magical adventure with many intriguing elements. (Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books In this British import, young Seth Seppi works as a kitchen boy at the Last Chance Hotel in the middle of nowhere. Seth shows off his aspirations to be a chef when the hotel receives a prestigious (and odd) assortment of guests, but his special dessert leaves Dr. Thallomius-actually the Sorcerer General in this gathering of magicians-dead rather than impressed, and all evidence points to Seth's cooking. Any of the magicians could be responsible for Dr. Thallomius' death, and as Seth gets swept up in magical politics he never knew existed, only he and his sassy talking cat Nightshade can clear his name. This story has all the staples of an entertaining murder mystery as evidence accumulates that readers can puzzle through along with Seth. There's also a child-understandable touch of modern politics in the likely murder motive: Dr. Thallomius was (probably) killed to prevent magical reform that would open doors for newcomers to the magic world. Though not all the loose ends get tied up, Seth gets his happy ending, and mystery lovers are left with a satisfying and enjoyable tale full of oddball characters and quirky magic. NB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A parentless, put-upon kitchen boy is accused of murdering a magical hotel guest. Seth Seppi cooks brilliantly, but he'll never be a chef. Instead he's the overworked help at the Last Chance Hotel, abused by his "nasty bosses." Sometimes he sadly recalls the hotel's popularity in the dimly remembered days before his father's mysterious disappearance. Mostly, however, he washes dishes, even on nights like this, when some very special guests are due at the hotel. Tiffany, the daughter of Seth's employers (and Seth's chief tormenter) blackmails Seth into making a splendid dessert for the guest of honor, Dr. Thallomius, for which she'll claim credit. When Dr. Thallomius drops dead from poison, Tiffany promptly snitches: Seth made the dessert, so he must be the murderer! Seth's quest to clear his name is complicated by his realization that Dr. Thallomius and all the other guests at this bizarre party hail from a magical world. One of these odd people--Professor Papperspook in her multicolored, tentlike dress; tiny, scarred, dark-skinned Master Darinder Dunster-Dunstable; glamorous Angelique Squerr with her magical cane; or one of the others--murdered the kindly doctor and pinned the blame on Seth. Thornton's prose can get clunky and characterization resorts to types, but the plot itself is a nifty, magical spin on the classic locked-room mystery. The book subscribes to the white default for characters not otherwise described. A charming, old-fashioned-feeling romp. (Fantasy. 9-11) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7-Seth Seppi maintains a pitiful existence at the Last Chance Hotel; he's an abused kitchen boy in the space where his father once ruled as chef before he disappeared. Now Seth chafes at scrubbing pots and avoiding the notice of Tiffany, the owners' cruel daughter, hoping against hope that his cooking abilities will someday take him away from this isolated hotel. When a famous guest, one of an odd group of magicians assembled at the hotel, dies during dinner, poisoned by the special dessert Seth made for him, Seth's fate looks dire indeed. He sets out to clear his name, aided by his cat, Nightshade, and several members of the magical community. Can they unravel the crime and find the guilty party in time to save Seth from arrest? In this delightful Harry Potter-meets-Agatha Christie adventure, readers are presented with a classic locked room murder complicated by magic. As Seth and members of MagiCon-the Magic Constabulary-investigate the murder, Seth learns about the existence of magic, and the tensions within the magical society over reforms instigated by the now deceased Dr. Thallomius. Red herrings and sinister suspects abound as Seth alternates between fear for his future and thrill at each piece of magical history and lore he learns; history which may hit closer to home than he ever could have dreamed. VERDICT A well-crafted middle grade mystery with a touch of magic enhancing its appeal. Fantasy fans will find a lot to love here.-Nancy Nadig, Penn Manor School District, Lancaster, PA Copyright 2019. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2156075 Guard Dog Named Honey (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Denise Gosliner Orenstein

When her older brother is arrested on her eleventh birthday, Bean Wright is devastated, and determined to raise the bail money that their mother does not have; the most promising scheme she comes up with is getting a young girl named Phoebe, one of the summer residents, to sell her valuable Mastiff guard dog, Honey--but the scheme takes a dark turn when the buyer turns out to want Honey for dog fighting.

978-1-338-34846-0 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 256 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 6.1 AR Pts 9.0 Lexile 980

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$16.99

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Bean's determined to raise the money to bail her beloved older brother, Willis, out of jail, but her schemes seem doomed to failure. On this island off the coast of Massachusetts, the opportunities to raise $1,000 in bail money are seriously limited. But plucky Bean is determined to find a way. It's that mission that motivates her to befriend 9-year-old Phoebe. She's been left by her wealthy but distant parents in the care of the unusual chef-turned-nanny Edwin and, more importantly, Honey, a huge young mastiff. Initially, Bean is skeptical of the whole crew, merely currying their favor in order to make money by--she hopes--painting their house. Unexpectedly, Phoebe and Honey take up the slack for the 11-year-old, who is bereft without Willis. Although Bean talks Phoebe into agreeing to sell Honey, she quickly has sobering second thoughts. After Bean realizes the prospective buyer is involved in the dogfighting world, the two girls, full of spunk but a little short of wisdom, resolve to bring the bad guy to justice. The apparently white characters are lovingly crafted and richly nuanced, although drooly, ever loyal Honey almost steals the show. Bean's motivation is fully convincing, and her heartfelt but somewhat scatterbrained plans are age appropriate as she tries to fix too many hard issues with a believable lack of adult help. Richly engaging and evocative. (Fiction. 9-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Bean's 16-year-old brother, Willis, gets arrested on her 11th birthday for drunkenly crashing someone else's car. When her single mother, who works at the Stop & Shop, says they don't have enough to bail him out, the girl; whose worries bring on hives and vertigo; decides to earn the money herself. Heading to the wealthy section of Rock Haven, the Massachusetts island where she's lived her whole life, she looks for a summer family to hire her for odd jobs. When no one bites, Bean sets her sights on Phoebe, a wealthy girl who is staying for the summer with her nanny and dog, Honey, while her parents tour Europe. When Phoebe discloses that Honey, an Italian Neapolitan mastiff, is a purebred worth $3,000, Bean persuades the child, whose parents consistently let her down, to sell the dog. Bean finds a shady buyer, and a related mystery, just as Honey adopts three baby kittens, nursing them and carrying them in her jowls. Bean's believable desperation to help her brother is poignant in this empathic story featuring well-wrought characters who are trying their very best. Ages 8: 12. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–7—Bean has had a hard life so far. Her dad abandoned his family years ago, and her mother has become the sole provider, which means she is never home. And to top it off, her brother gets arrested for stealing a car. Paying the $1,000 bail is a momentous hurdle that Bean feels determined to overcome. But she lives on an island off the coast of Massachusetts, where opportunities to make money are very slim. In her mission to earn the bail, she tries everything from applying for summer jobs to offering to paint vacation homes. It's at one of those mansions that Bean meets Phoebe and her giant guard dog, Honey. Phoebe's own parents are similarly absent as they jet-set around the world, leaving Phoebe in the care of an unusual chef-turned-nanny and, of course, Honey. Phoebe and Honey end up taking care of Bean in her brother's absence, as Bean is extremely lost without him. Somehow Bean ends up talking Phoebe into selling Honey. However, once the girls figure out that the prospective buyer is in the dog-fighting world, the girls vow to bring the bad guys to justice. These characters are lovingly crafted and spunky, with Honey stealing the show. Bean's motivation is convincing, and her ideas are age appropriate. VERDICT An engaging realistic fiction title for the target audience. A solid purchase for young middle school libraries.—Amy Caldera, Dripping Springs Middle School, TX

#2152159 Secret Deep (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Lindsay Galvin

When Aster wakes alone, stranded, on a tropical island, she has no idea what has happened, why she is there, or where to find her younger sister, Poppy. The answers lie in the secretive underwater world surrounding the desert island, populated by the beautiful and the unexpected...

978-1-338-56739-7 Chicken House ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.4 AR Pts 10.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 6-8 After losing their mother to cancer, Aster and her sister are flown out to their aunt Iona in Australia, who takes them to a mysterious ecovillage. Next thing Aster knows, she's waking up alone on a beach, with no idea where to find the underwater-breathing boy who saved her from drowning. Meanwhile, Sam, who met the girls on their plane to Australia, searches for them, even as his grandpa's worsening condition drives him to make a deal with a doctor that leads to a shocking discovery. Alternating between Aster's and Sam's perspectives, Galvin explores the reality of cancer through Sam's desperation to find a cure and Aster's struggle to work through grief. It's also a story of survival?with Aster battling sharks, facing off with jellyfish, and finding the courage to stand on her own?that weaves in several mystery elements via Sam's investigation into the ecovillage and Aster's search for her missing sister. An emotional journey of strength and grief set on a stunning island backdrop.(Reprinted with permission of Booklist, copyright 2019, American Library Association.)

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books After their mother dies of cancer, thirteen-year-old Aster and her eleven-year-old sister Poppy move to New Zealand to live with their oncologist aunt, only to be gassed into unconsciousness on a boat in the middle of the sea. It turns out that Aster has become an unwilling participant in her aunt's cancer study, which proposes that merging Aster's DNA with that of a prehistoric mermaid and then storing her in a medically induced hibernation will rid her of genetic markers for cancer. Aster's sister is missing, however, and Aster will do anything to get Poppy back, even if it means that she has to grow gills to join the sea people in the ocean. The preposterous plot poorly suspends disbelief, even for science fiction, and Aster is an impossibly smart thirteen-year-old, calling out her aunt's God complex and, at the end of the book, proposing to use her new altered blood to cure cancer because her best subjects in school were math and science. This may entertain a few B-movie fans with a taste for island survival, but they'll be better off with Bray's Beauty Queens (BCCB 6/11). NB

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Aster wakes on a deserted beach, alone and confused, just days after she and her sister, Poppy, move to New Zealand to live with their mysterious aunt. Aster, 13, and Poppy, 11, are officially orphans. Their dad died in a car accident when Poppy was a baby, and their mom recently lost her battle with cancer. Having no other relatives, the girls travel to New Zealand to live with their aunt, Iona, whom they haven't seen in years because she works all over the world as a hotshot research oncologist. Iona moves them to Wildhaven, a remote ecovillage where she is doing fieldwork. Wildhaven is a research site filled with international students, secrets, and doctors at odds with one another. Following a catastrophic boat trip, Aster wakes up alone on a beach, bewildered. She works to uncover the mysteries of Wildhaven and Aunt Iona and to find Poppy. The cast is a range of races and skin colors—including Aster and Poppy, who are white, Korean, and black—but an absence of cultural markers suppresses a feeling of robust diversity. Character development is weak, so while readers will root for Aster to find Poppy, they won't have a sense of who she really is. However, the depiction of her anxiety and panic attacks both feels authentic and is well written. While the twists are interesting, the information reveal is slow in coming, so they pack less punch than they might. An underwater adventure bogged down by uneven pacing. (Thriller. 10-13) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly After their single mother dies from cancer, orphaned sisters Aster, 13, and Poppy, 11, who are multiracial (their mother was black and Korean; their father was white), are sent from England to live with their aunt Iona, a noted oncologist now living in New Zealand. To their surprise, instead of heading home, Iona takes them to her current work site, Wildhaven: a tech-free ecovillage "in the proper bush," where she's conducting "a study of healthy lifestyles" on the teenage residents, largely international students. But after the girls overhear an argument between Iona and a former employee, then experience a strange fever following a routine injection, Aster grows increasingly uneasy with their situation. Before she can do anything about her worries, a snorkeling trip turns bizarre. Aster is stranded on a remote island, where she's hooked up to strange technology and desperate to find her missing sister; and to figure out how her own experience plays into her aunt's secret agenda. Meanwhile, her New Zealander friend Sam, 14, embarks on his own quest to track down the missing sisters. With this atmospheric debut, Galvin skillfully captures Aster's surroundings, bringing the islands and deep waters to life while employing a fast-paced plot balanced among adventure, mystery, science fiction elements, and Aster's emotional struggle. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Laura Williams, Greene & Heaton. (Feb.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal er succumbs to cancer, 13-year-old Aster and her 11-year-old sister Poppy travel to live in New Zealand and with their Aunt Iona, whom they have not seen in years. They know that she is a scientific researcher, but they are surprised to learn that they will be joining her to live in a remote ecovillage populated by orphaned teens from different parts of the world. After taking a scuba diving expedition with the rest of the village residents, Aster finds herself washed up on an island. As she desperately searches for her sister, she begins to learn the truth about what Iona is doing with her research. Interwoven with Aster and Poppy's story is that of Sam, a young man they met on the flight to New Zealand. Discovering Poppy's phone left behind near a beach, Sam tries to find his friends with the help of Iona's scientific rival. The two story lines merge in a breathtaking encounter that is both disastrous and transformational. It is easy to become engrossed in this compelling story, and Aster is a convincing lead character; readers will sympathize with her grief and her anxieties. They will cheer her on as she grows strong through facing heart-pounding danger and learning to trust herself. VERDICT A thrilling and original science-fiction mystery that will surprise readers at every turn.—Sarah Reid, Four County Library System, NY

#2156066 Midnight Hour (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Benjamin Read

When strange late-night letters start arriving at home, Emily's parents set off to investigate. But when her parents disappear completely and Emily is left home alone to face the weird strangers that begin to appear at her door, she takes all of the clues at her disposal and makes for the place where the letters came from -- the mysterious Night Post. Armed only with a packed lunch, her very sleepy pocket hedgehog, and her infamously big argumentative mouth, she must escape bloodthirsty creatures of the night, figure out her own family secrets, and maybe just save the world.

978-1-338-56909-4 Chicken House ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.3 AR Pts 9.0

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books When Emily's mother and father suddenly disappear from their London home, it's up to Emily to follow them into the Midnight Hour, a magical pseudo-Victorian world hidden alongside her own. There she discovers that her quiet postal worker father is a Dangerous Deliveries Specialist of the Night Post, her flighty artist mother had a hand in the Great Working that created the Midnight Hour, and an ancient power called the Nocturne is bent on claiming the Midnight Hour's magic for herself and wreaking havoc in the non-magical world. Portal fantasy fans will not be surprised that Emily and her famously outspoken "gob" are more than a match for a quaintly antiquated magical world, squaring off against assorted baddies and armed with magical allies, a hedgehog, and a limitless supply of one-liners. Unfortunately, intrusive over-narration slows down the action. The novel's commentary on British imperialism, most notably the family history of immigrant Constable-in-Training Postlewhite of the Night Watch, is undermined by its liberal application of Irish stereotypes (Emily's newly discovered uncle Pat is particularly egregious) and phonetic brogue. Nevertheless, fans of Percy Jackson-style humor and readers working up to Terry Pratchett may enjoy this as an irreverent, mildly snappy read with plenty of scope for a sequel. FHK

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A young girl thrusts herself into a magical, alternate London to find her missing parents. Emily was sent to bed without supper after a massive fight with her eccentric Irish mother the night her mother disappears. Her quiet English letter-carrier father's explanations don't make sense; a week later, just before midnight, he, too, vanishes. With a rescued hedgehog in her pocket and an angry bearlike creature stalking her, she stumbles into, then through the door to an alternate universe--a Victorian-era London populated entirely by diverse magical creatures and protected by an enchanted version of Big Ben. This realm, called the Midnight Hour because it is frozen in time, connects with Emily's world only on the stroke of midnight, while Big Ben chimes. Years ago, manifestations of Art and Language fought their sister, Music, to create the Night World. Emily's mother was the hero of that battle, though her precise role is never explained. Now Music, known as Nocturne, is waging war again, and Emily's parents are her captives. This debut from collaborators Read and Trinder has several strengths: nimble wordplay, fast pace, a breadth of creative detail, and a fearless, impetuous heroine. Sometimes the details don't quite coalesce--what's with that hedgehog, anyway?--and the narrative feels a little overstuffed, but readers who don't need every aspect of their imaginary worlds spelled out for them will lose themselves in the dreamlike rush of words. Emily and her family appear to be white; many of the fantastical characters have darker skin; skin color never signals virtue. Enchanting. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2019) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

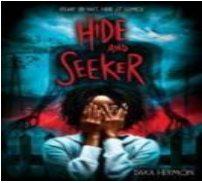

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly When her mother disappears, followed by her father, quick-tempered Emily Featherhaugh seeks to find them in Read and Trinder's fun fantasy set in an adjacent London. She sets out for the Night Post and her dad's place of employment, armed with her mom's helpful sayings ("Never be knowingly under-snacked"); a necklace that her mother has always worn; oddments marked "Just in Case" from her father's desk; and her hedgehog, Hog. Though pursued through dark streets by an anthropomorphic bear, she arrives safely, using her father's magical key to enter the Night Post, arriving into a magical 1859 London called the Midnight Hour, inhabited by creatures driven from the world by human progress, where "it is always pitch dark, always full moon, and always, always midnight." Read and Trinder imagine a wonderfully spooky alternate world populated with creatures from legend and nightmare: as she works to rescue her parents, Emily is menaced by a vampire, rescued by a rare Pooka, and assisted by The Library (aka Language), a constantly quoting Older Power whose sisters are Art and Music. The authors create a determined heroine whose weaknesses are crucial to her quest's success, and a satisfying balance of fright and fancy. Ages 8: 12. (Mar.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3–7—Eleven-year-old Emily's quirky, artsy, garbage-diving mother is the bane of her existence. She's so embarrassing! And Emily's dad is just plain boring; all he does is garden and deliver the mail. Then Emily's mom goes on a mysterious errand one night and disappears altogether. And then, her dad disappears too! When Emily goes in search of them, she finds herself in a completely new world. The Midnight Hour was stopped during London's Victorian era and all of the world's magic was held there. Is it in captivity? Or is it for safe-keeping? While Emily goes on the adventure of her lifetime, she meets an eccentric cast of characters who help (and hinder) her along the way. Emily's coming-of-age story will appeal to a broad spectrum of readers, and fantasy lovers will delight in the superb setting. VERDICT A fast-paced, amusing and endearing tale with a satisfying conclusion. Fun for fans of kooky magical adventure series like Jessica Townsend's "Nevermoor."—Terry Ann Lawler, Burton Barr Library, Phoenix

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2162600 Asha and the Spirit Bird (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Jasbinder Bilan In contemporary India, 12-year-old Asha will journey across the dangerous Himalayas to find her missing father and save her family's home -- guided by a mythical bird and a green-eyed tiger who she believes to be the spirits of her ancestors. This is an incredibly unique debut about loss, family, buried treasure, and hope. 978-1-338-57105-9 Chicken House ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 8.0	1	$18.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4–6—Asha's father has traveled to the city to make money, but his family hasn't heard from him in months. Asha's mother feels the only thing to do is sell their farm in India at the base of the Himalayas and move to England. Asha cannot believe that her father would abandon her family and is determined to find him. With the help of her best friend Jeevan and the watchful "dark-flecked" eye of a lamagaia vulture that Asha believes is the spirit of her grandmother, the duo sets off on a dangerous, cold, rocky, and fateful journey to locate her father. With mythical guides believed to be the spirits of her ancestors, Asha has more than just luck on her side. Bilan creates a believable world with real-life conflicts and characters that will resonate. Though the names of places are made up, descriptions of harsh societal conditions such as sickness, child servitude, and poor working environments are rooted in reality. This adventure has its twists and turns, but the book is a somewhat quiet story that can lag in momentum. The resolution leaves a saccharine tone that contrasts with the rest of the narrative, and seems a bit too quick and convenient. However, readers will feel that Asha deserves a happy ending. VERDICT A heroic adventure with a brave, believable female character that would appeal to those who like realistic fiction with a dash of magic.—Clare A. Dombrowski, Amesbury P.L., MA

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2181576 Hide and Seek (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Daka Hermon I went up the hill, the hill was muddy, stomped my toe and made it bloody, should I wash it? Justin knows that something is wrong with his best friend. Zee went missing for a year. And when he came back, he was... different. Nobody knows what happened to him. At Zee's welcome home party, Justin and the neighborhood crew play Hide and Seek. But it goes wrong. Very wrong. 978-1-338-58362-5 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs. Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.5 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 480	1	$18.99

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Zee had been missing for over a year. Now he's back, but something is not right. From the moment Justin, Lyric, and Nia arrive at Zee's house to celebrate his homecoming and birthday, things are very strange indeed. Attempting to reconnect with their friend and distract themselves with some fun, they play a game of hide and seek -- which turns menacing as the friends start to disappear one by one. Hermon spins a gripping tale that draws readers into a world where friendships are put to the ultimate test and grief, loss, and terror are around every corner. In the bizarre underworld of "the Seeker," one's fears become reality. As his friends disappear, narrator Justin must find the courage to help them, all while confronting his own fears. At times moving, thrilling, and downright scary, this suspenseful horror story delivers a welcome diverse (mostly Black) cast and well-rounded characters. Those who "seek" stories that will surely keep them up at night need look no further.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Justin and his friends play their last game of hide-and-seek at their friend Zee's not-so-welcome-home party. Zee had gone missing one week after Justin's mother passed away just one year ago, and the party is celebrating his return. But the emaciated Zee is acting strangely, mumbling rhymes about a Seeker that will take them all. Shortly after the party, one by one, Justin's other friends begin to disappear. It doesn't take long for the remaining members of the crew to figure out that Zee's strange behavior may be connected to the disappearances. Justin, Nia, and Lyric set out on a trail of clues and possible suspects, hoping to find their missing peers. No sooner do the details of the mystery begin to come to light than Justin, the last of the group, is unwillingly transported into the realm of Nowhere. In this parallel universe, the Seeker keeps children hostage, feeding off of their fears. This dark nail-biter, set in a small Tennessee town and featuring a largely African American cast (Lyric is the only white kid), weaves a creepy spin on a childhood game that quickly slips into a Stephen King-esque tale of horror. Can the children trapped in Nowhere gather as allies to evade the Seeker and get home? A chilling debut--like the Seeker, a tale that doesn't let you go. (Horror. 10-12) COPYRIGHT(2020) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Zee, sixth-grader Justin's best friend, has been missing for over a year; 404 days to be exact. Now he's home, and his mother, Mrs. Murphy, is throwing a party. Invited along with Justin are other close friends Nia and Lyric, as well as the neighborhood bully, Carla, and her twin brother, Quincy. While waiting for the guest of honor, another neighborhood kid, Shae, arrives and suggests that they play hide-and-seek. The game devolves into a flurry of rule-breaking soon interrupted by the arrival of a changed, scarred Zee, who conveys a cryptic message: "One day soon you'll leave from here and fight against all you fear." When the game's players develop a mysterious mark and begin to disappear one by one, Justin and his friends must find a way to defeat a chilling foe in a world made up of their darkest fears. Hermon's standout debut offers spine-tingling prose that pulls no punches; nuanced depictions of grief, friendship, and fear; engaging characterization that makes readers root for its largely Black cast; and a reassuring ending that leaves room for future installments. Ages 8: 12. Agent: Emily Keyes, Fuse Literary. (Sept.)

#2127449 Dog Driven (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Terry Lynn Johnson

McKenna Barney is trying to hide her worsening eyesight and has been isolating herself for the last year. But at the request of her little sister, she signs up for a commemorative mail run race in the Canadian wilderness--a race she doesn't know if she can even see to run.

978-1-328-55159-7 Clarion Books ©2019 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 240 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.4 AR Pts 6.0 Lexile HL 640

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5-8—Fourteen-year-old McKenna's sister, Emma, wants to race their sled dogs, but she's lost most of her vision due to Stargardt disease, so she asks McKenna to race in her stead. But McKenna agrees reluctantly—she has the disease, too, and her vision is slowly deteriorating. Still, she wants to deliver a letter to the Foundation for Fighting Blindness. The race begins with McKenna in the lead. She befriends a boy named Guy, and the two take shelter in a cave during a wind storm, wondering how they will finish the race. Guy and McKenna are well developed, and the action is captivating. The plot becomes sluggish at points; a shorter narrative might have been more powerful. Each chapter ends with fictionalized historical letters between figures based on the era of dogsled mail couriers from 1856 to the early 1900s, as well as letters between the contemporary characters. These parallel exchanges tie the chapters together well. VERDICT Recommended for libraries where hybrid contemporary and historical fiction is high in demand.—Jill Baetiong, Bloomingdale Public Library, IL

#2277353 Coming Up Cuban: Rising Past Castro's Shadow (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Sonia Manzano

In the wake of a new regime in Cuba, Ana, Miguel, Zulema, and Juan learn to find a place for themselves in a world forever changed. In a tumultuous moment of history, we see the lasting effects of a revolution in Havana, the countryside, Miami, and New York. Through these snapshot stories, we are reminded that regardless of any tumultuous times, we are all forever connected in our humanity.

978-1-338-06515-2 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 620

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$18.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-8 In Coming Up Cuban, "'lo que significa buscar la identidad personal,'" meaning "the significance of finding our personal identity," is a theme that takes center stage. The story follows four children from Cuba who find themselves seeking solace and pondering what's next after Fidel Castro assumes power, an act that quickly leads to the 1959 Cuban Revolution. Ana, Miguel, Zulema, and Juan face the conflict from different circumstances, but all cling to hope for a better future. Over the course of the story, the characters face their fears, grow as individuals, and learn serious lessons during a difficult time in Cuba's history. As readers follow the characters, they will see the complexity inherent to issues that arise during times of political unrest, such as emigrating to another country and the lingering effects such life-altering decisions have. Featuring gorgeous cover art and a sprinkling of chapter illustrations, this novel is a fantastic choice for middle-school libraries. It gives history relevance and showcases how the characters' actions relate to hope, growth, and inner strength. COPYRIGHT(2022) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews harsh realities of Castro's Cuba in this novel by author and Sesame Street actress Manzano. In overlapping short stories, readers hear from Ana, Miguel, Zulema, and Juan about how Castro's revolution affected their lives. They come from different backgrounds reflect Cuba's racial diversity, and suffer varied consequences in the aftermath of Castro's rise to power. Ana's father is home from fighting in the mountains with Fidel; her family, like many Cubans, wanted to build a better country only to realize too late that Fidel had fooled them. Miguel, on the other hand, is one of thousands of Pedro Pan children, sent to the U.S. alone to protect them; he arrives in Miami and goes to live in an orphanage. Zulema and her rural community learn to read thanks to young brigadistas--but they're only allowed access to state-sanctioned propaganda. In Havana, Juan loses his best friend, who eagerly participates in the militaristic pioneros; being on opposing sides wreaks havoc in their lives. Through these young people's experiences, the realities of Cubans' lives are presented in nuanced and complex ways in this thoroughly researched work. Many moments will ring true to young Cubans who have grown up on family stories, down to the slang and details of daily life at the time. A well-researched, thoughtful, and moving look at post-revolutionary Cuba. (author's note, historical notes, timeline, resources) (Fiction. 9-13) COPYRIGHT(2022) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly With insight and empathy, former Sesame Street actor Manzano (A World Together) explores the impact of Fidel Castro's rise and revolution through the eyes of four young people building new lives amid a climate of political turmoil. In separate but overlapping sections, Ana, Miguel, Zulema, and Juan offer various perspectives on the turbulent political uprising, highlighting intersectional nuances around class and race. Ana's segment concentrates on the revolution's tail end in 1959 Havana, where her father has returned from fighting for Castro. Miguel details challenges for immigrants and refugees in 1961 Miami after he is sent into care while waiting for his parents. Zulema's section, based in the Cuban countryside in 1961, delves into Castro's literacy campaign, while Juan's section considers youth radicalization in 1961 Havana through the lens of two friends. In stories that brim with love for Cuba while highlighting a difficult historical moment, Manzano employs graceful, straightforward prose, highlighting the experiences, and will, of Cuba's people as they navigate the events' fallout with alternating anguish and elation. Back matter includes a timeline of the book's events and resources. Ages 9: 12. (Aug.)

#2210043 Flood City (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Daniel Jose Older

Welcome to Flood City, the last inhabitable place left above the waters that cover Earth. It's also the last battleground between the Chemical Barons, who once ruled the planet and now circle overhead in spaceships, desperate to return, and the Star Guard, who have controlled the city for decades.

978-1-338-11112-5 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2021 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 336 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.2 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 760

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Max Salazar, his sister, and their friends live in Flood City, Earth's last remaining haven above water. Max has been taught all his life to fear and despise the Chemical Barons, a dangerous dynasty that looms threateningly over them all, and after an unexpected attack on Flood City results in him saving the life of Ato, a young Baron, Max must find a way to keep his home and loved ones safe. In this middle-grade dystopian novel, Older presents a futuristic cityscape replete with technological innovations, like jet-powered boots, and dangerous hybrid mutations, like the menacing iguanagulls. The three-act adventure boasts a vibrant setting; multifaceted characters, alien and human alike; and a heart-stopping plot as Max and Ato join forces to prevent nuclear destruction, emphasizing the importance of working with a diverse community to achieve common goals. Short, action-packed chapters will hook readers with excitement as this steampunk-y journey explores life in a time of intergalactic war, when anything is possible.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Ever since the waters rose and drowned the world, the last bastion of civilization on Earth has been Flood City, a ramshackle affair protected from the orbital menace of the Chemical Barons by the extraterrestrial, authoritarian Star Guard. Twelve-year-old musician Max has little interest in the ongoing tension until a devastating attack upon Flood City by the Chemical Barons, the city's former rulers, changes everything. Max meets Ato, also 12, a young Baron who winds up stranded in the wake of the incident, and the two swiftly become friends as Ato rejects his ruthless commander's extremist agenda in favor of Flood City's charms. Now they must work together to save the city from oppression and potential destruction. Older (Thunder Run) conjures a postapocalyptic world packed with danger, excitement, and memorable concepts, such as marauding iguanagulls and enigmatic, posthuman vapors. With Flood City populated by people of color and the Barons primarily white, Older imbues a clear message about how whiteness is proximal to privilege. The story is at times frenetic, filled with individually entertaining elements that are sometimes undersupported; still, this is a fun, adventure-filled read. Ages 8-12. Agent: Joanna Volpe, New Leaf Literary. (Feb.) Correction: A previous version of this review mischaracterized the book as a series starter; it is a standalone novel. Copyright 2021 Publishers Weekly, LLC Used with permission.

#2017439 White Tower (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Cathryn Constable

When Livy's accepted at Temple College, an exclusive school for the most gifted students, no one is more surprised than her. After all, she doesn't think she's very smart at all! But she does have a secret that sets her apart from everyone else . . .

978-1-338-15744-4 Chicken House ©2017 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 272 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 8.0 Lexile 680

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-7-Livy Burgess's best friend Mahalia has just lost her battle with leukemia. Livy is reeling with grief, but her parents decide it might be good for her to take an opportunity for free tuition at the prestigious Temple College, a preparatory school in London. Livy's dad is offered a job as the new librarian there, and it's a chance the family can't pass up. The action starts immediately when, after the move, Livy and her mom encounter the eccentric ex-librarian at Temple, who appears to be homeless and quickly losing his marbles. Also, the stern and intimidating headmistress seems to have an agenda; she's very interested in a possible connection the Burgess family may have to the founder of Temple College, scientist Peter Burgess. Livy senses something's not quite right at her new school, and when she meets an intriguing boy on the roof, even more questions are raised. She's determined to figure out what's going on, even if she has to risk her own life to do it. Livy's love for her departed friend, and her struggle to make new ones and find her place in the world, will resonate with readers. Minor characters are underdeveloped, with the exception of Livy's lively four-year-old brother Tom, and there are a few aimless plot points. The twist at the end is a shocker, though, and the resolution satisfies. VERDICT Perfect for libraries in need of shivery but not-too-creepy middle grade mysteries.-Mandy Laferriere, Fowler Middle School, Frisco, TX Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2057469 Me, Frida, and the Secret of the Peacock Ring (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Angela Cervantes

A room locked for fifty years. A valuable peacock ring. A mysterious brother-sister duo. Paloma Marquez is traveling to Mexico City, birthplace of her deceased father, for the very first time. She's hoping that spending time in Mexico will help her unlock memories of the too-brief time they spent together.

978-1-338-15931-8 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2018 6 x 8-1/2 220 pgs.

Grades 4 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.7 AR Pts 7.0 RC Lvl 4.4 Lexile 710

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$17.99

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 4-6-Paloma Marquez isn't too excited about her first trip to Mexico. Her mom has a fellowship and has dragged Paloma along to introduce her to her father's heritage. Paloma is annoyed that she has to study Spanish in summer school instead of heading to the beach with her friends. Despite her low expectations, she quickly makes some intriguing friends and gets involved in a mystery allowing her to emulate her favorite protagonist, Lulu Pennywhistle. Although the secondary characters are somewhat underdeveloped, the plot moves along at a good pace and young mystery fans will want to keep turning pages. The mystery revolves around Frida Kahlo, so readers learn quite a bit about Mexican art and culture. VERDICT A well-paced mystery plot and a rich exploration of the art of Frida Kahlo make this a good purchase for most middle grade collections.-Geshe Stark-Smith, Multnomah County Library, Portland, OR Copyright 2017. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2089133 Lety Out Loud (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Angela Cervantes

Lety Munoz's first language is Spanish, and she likes to take her time putting her words together. She loves volunteering at the Furry Friends Animal Shelter because the dogs and cats there don't care if she can't always find the right word. When the shelter needs a volunteer to write animal profiles, Lety jumps at the chance.

978-1-338-15934-9 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2019 5-3/4 x 8-1/2 201 pgs.

Quantity
1
Unit Price
$16.99

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Fifth grade is over, and Lety is excited about starting her summer camp experience at the Furry Friends Animal Shelter. She's hoping, despite her shyness about her English, to land the position of shelter scribe, creating writeups for the animals to personalize them to prospective adopters, but she's dismayed when she has to share that position with grumpy Hunter. Their friends propose a contest-the scribe whose descriptions get the most pets adopted wins-to determine who keeps the role, but Lety begins to wonder if she's underestimated Hunter, both as a writer and as a person. Mexican-American Lety, with her desire to graduate from the English Language Learner program and her yearning for a dog, is a highly relatable protagonist, and the notion of a summer camp at an animal shelter is irresistibly appealing. Aside from Lety's feelings, though, there's not much reality in the situation, between the implausible and idyllic shelter, Hunter's abrupt shift from foe to friend, and, of course, Lety's final acquisition of the dog she had her eye on from the start. Cervantes nonetheless writes with kindness and accessibility that gives her story a quick payoff for readers at a variety of skill levels, especially if they're animal lovers. DS

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A bilingual girl named Lety volunteers at an animal shelter where she gets drawn into a competition with a boy she finds unkind. Lety signs up to be the animal shelter's scribe, writing biographies for cats and dogs that are up for adoption. It's a tough job--she is an immigrant from Tlaquepaque, Mexico, and she and her best friend are still taking special classes to improve their English. Drawing attention to bilingual learning, the slipperiness of colloquialisms, and the power of dictionaries, Cervantes deftly engages young readers in Lety's predicament through the device of a crabby white boy named Hunter, who challenges her for her position. As the two of them enter into a competition for the job, Lety worries about breaking the rules, encountering prejudice, becoming competent in English, and convincing the shelter's veterinarian that she is the right girl to take home a very special dog. Just as all seems lost, Lety proves her intelligence and willingness to serve by suggesting a solution that benefits immigrants in her community as well as animals in the shelter. At its heart, this is a sweet, entertaining story about a kindhearted girl who has compassion for both animals and people. Young readers will be drawn in by the sweet pet portraits yet they will leave with much more: an empathetic understanding of the immigrant experience in America. A touching story about the power of language, pets, and friendship. (Fiction. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2018) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 3-6-Cervantes returns to the Furry Friends Animal Shelter (the setting of Gaby, Lost and Found) in this new title. Ever since she moved to Kansas from Tlaquepaque, Mexico, Lety Muoz has spent her summers at school with the other ELL students working to improve her English; but after finishing fifth grade, she's trying something new and attending a summer camp at the animal shelter. She's immediately drawn to both Spike, a dog she wants to adopt, and the job of shelter scribe, the person who writes profiles of the adoptable dogs and cats for the shelter's website. But Hunter also wants the job, and thinks he can do a much better job than Lety, since she's still learning English while he is already reading and writing at a high school level. Encouraged by their friends, the two end up in a secret competition to determine who gets to be the sole scribe. Lety is an admirable protagonist; she faces challenges, tries new things, and finds her voice. The focus on language, writing, and vocabulary will make this a good fit for a classroom read, and the premise and setting should entice young animal lovers. This novel is also a potential "mirror" book for young immigrants to the U.S. and ELL students, and one that can be an empathy-building "sliding glass door" book for other readers. VERDICT Compelling and relatable, this is highly recommended for all middle grade collections.-Kacy Helwick, New Orleans Public Library Copyright 2019. Library Journals LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Media Source, Inc.

#2319513 Big Tree (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Brian Selznick

A mysterious voice has been speaking to Louise in her dreams. She and her brother Merwin are Sycamore seeds, who hope to one day set down roots and become big trees. But when a fire forces them to leave their mama tree prematurely, they find themselves catapulted into the unknown, far from home. Alone and unprepared, they must use their wits and imagination to navigate a dangerous world--filled with dinosaurs, meteors, and volcanoes!

978-1-338-18063-3 Scholastic, Incorporated ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 528 pgs.

Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.1 AR Pts 2.0 Lexile 610

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$32.99

Reviews by: Book Page In previous bestselling, award-winning books such as The Invention of Hugo Cabret, Wonderstruck and The Marvels, author-illustrator Brian Selznick has centered his richly imagined, deeply cinematic stories on children growing up alone and navigating worlds both dangerous and wonderful. Selznick explores similar themes in Big Tree, but this novel's children aren't human; they're the seeds from a massive sycamore tree.

Reviews by: Booklist Two sycamore-seed siblings, Merwin and Louise, nestle in their seed ball, waiting for the time that their dear mother tree has prepared them for, when they'll float free and set down roots of their own. Louise is eager to explore, and she's certain she's heard whispers from afar that the world needs her help, though exactly how is unclear. Their comfortable Cretaceous existence is upended when a vast fungal network brings news of impending danger and a run-in with a dinosaur sends the seeds flying much earlier than anticipated. They know it's imperative to find the perfect place to land—too little or too much of anything could prove disastrous. But to fulfill their destiny, they'll have to navigate a wide world filled with wonder and uncertainty. Initially conceived as a film idea that Steven Spielberg hoped Selznick would spin into a screenplay, the astonishing story is at once vast and intimate, succeeding as both a small-scale adventure story and a broader exploration of the natural world. Glorious pencil drawings, moving swiftly from macro to micro lenses, turn wispy seeds into spritely, darling protagonists, and wordless sketched reveals that follow text interludes are sure to elicit gasps of surprise and delight. Detailed endnotes explain the incredible science inspiring much of the story. An enthralling and expansive meditation on what it means to be alive on this planet.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books never expected to be apart from their mom so young—they are still quite small Sycamore seeds when a fire leaves them alone in a giant and dangerous world. This world is full of terrors even if you aren't a little seed, but for them water and wind can be risky, not to mention the dinosaurs and volcanoes. Louise is optimistic, trusting that her vibes will get her where she is destined to grow. Merwin is far more skeptical and fearful, but their love and mutual respect for each other lasts through separations, harrowing adventures, and, ultimately, two very different timelines for planting roots and becoming trees. The story is unrushed, moving at a measured pace that encourages contemplation and patience: nature can be quick and wild, but trees will not be hurried. Selznick's dedication to dual storytelling through text and hundreds of finely detailed pencil drawings allows for each to progress the plot in succession, creating a balanced and rich book that invites careful reading and poring over illustrations to find all of the connective threads. An author's note describes how the pandemic derailed this Steven Spielberg idea from becoming a movie and how Selznick then adapted their project into a book. His expressive art that highlights the heart of the story, paired with his keen eye for creating sympathetic and memorable lost children (here he subbed in seeds for the kids) are a powerful combination to bring to this epic quest. Selznick fans will be delighted, and dinosaur fans and nature buffs will likely be just as enthralled. AS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine Selznick elegantly intertwines pictures and words to tell the macro story of the natural world through the micro perspective of two sycamore seeds. Louise and Merwin are siblings who occupy the same seed ball but possess two distinct personalities. Louise is a starry-eyed dreamer, while Merwin is a pragmatist. When a stampede of dinosaurs forces the siblings' benevolent tree mother to disperse her seeds before they are trampled, a multi-millennial saga begins. Plant and plant-adjacent organisms are personified, often possessing personalities reflective of their roles in nature -- for example, mushrooms serve as communicative "Ambassadors" in the book the way actual mycorrhizal fungi connect forest root systems. Louise and Merwin encounter a range of ancient flora and fauna as they themselves work to "put down roots." A massive time jump to the present day, along with a stunning portrayal of the planet's formation (from Earth's perspective), reveals the true meaning of Louise and Merwin's journey: that life is a gift, fragile and in need of care and protection. Selznick's control of narrative, pacing, and book design is idiosyncratic and masterful. Fluid shifts between prose and double-page spreads of accomplished pencil illustrations are clear and effective, ranging from entire chapters in prose to passages alternating between text and image with every page-turn to sustained sequences of images. The afterword includes annotated notes on the real science found throughout, a selected biography, and backstory on the book's origin (it was originally conceived as a screenplay for a Spielberg film). Ambitious and poignant while still, ultimately, hopeful. Patrick Gall(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A broad history of our planet overlaid on a seed's experience of time and change. Spun out to doorstopper dimensions by the overly liberal use of single lines of narrative on otherwise blank pages, Selznick's latest fulsomely illustrated tale twines storylines large-scaled and small-, literal and metaphorical, immediate and spanning billions of years. In a Cretaceous forest, the desperate efforts of sycamore seed Merwin to protect his visionary little sibling Louise make for adventures aplenty involving fire, winds, dinosaurs, and even a volcanic eruption—with occasional breaks for flashbacks or philosophical dialogues with their loving Mama, a decomposing leaf, and the Earth itself. He eventually fails, as the two are swept off in different directions. They reunite many years later to grow up side by side, branches intertwined, after which the author fast-forwards to the present and a seedling's rescue from a city sidewalk crack by a little Black girl. Most of the illustrations come in wordless, full-page sequential bursts, and if their ultra-soft focus isn't particularly suitable for capturing more violent events, the lyrical, dramatic, and comical ones glow with vivid, cinematic intensity. In a lengthy afterword the author provides nature notes as well as describing the story's origins as a movie concept from Steven Spielberg (whose tendency toward sentimentality is all over this), closing with a bibliography that includes, appropriately, The Carrot Seed and A Tree Is Nice. Patchy and sentimental but central to our past, present, and future; at once grand and intimate. (Illustrated fantasy. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Caldecott Medalist Selznick opens this sweeping illustrated novel in a Cretaceous forest as two sycamore seeds, drawn as diminutive figures with shocks of delicate fuzz, search for a place to take root after a forest fire's fallout propels them away from home. Louise, trusting and intuitive, often hears words from sources that can't be seen ("The voice I've been hearing, the dreams, the Old One... It's telling me there's danger"). Protective, anxious Merwin brushes his sister's insights aside ("We already know there's danger! There's danger everywhere!"), intent on finding a safe place to exist. Journeying through a lush, verdant world on the precipice of catastrophe, the two encounter varied outlooks via a host of beings who form Earth's web of life: self-important King Seaweed, tiny Scientists who record the data of countless generations, a Ghost Leaf who helps other plants grow. Silvery, deeply textural drawings move elegantly between planet-scale drama, microscopic life, and Louise and Merwin's shifting surroundings as the pace bounds inexorably onward, ending in a contemporary city where a Black child encounters a sidewalk-crack seedling. In evocative prose and peppery dialogue that sometimes get caught up in their message, the cinematic story journeys across time and space, contemplating the power of life to heal and the importance of developing "roots and wings." Back matter details the science behind the story. Ages 7: up. (Apr.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 2-8--Selznick returns with a majestically illustrated, modern-day parable. Sycamore seeds Louise and Merwin are suddenly separated from their mama tree due to a conflagration. They are thrust into a dangerous world of dinosaurs and volcanoes, hoping to set down roots somewhere safe. Throughout their treacherous journey, the stars speak to Louise, hinting at a possible life-changing event on the horizon. Along the way, they meet The Ambassadors (mycorrhizal fungi), Spot (a butterfly), King Seaweed, and The Scientists (Foraminifera). Originally meant for a Spielberg-produced animated film, this tale, with its combination of a childlike narrative and profound illustrations, presents a big, universal story of taking care of the miraculous Earth on which we live. Selznick's signature art was created with pencil on hot pressed watercolor paper, and the texture and nuance of these nearly 300 pages will strike wonder in every reader. In the back matter, Selznick explains the science behind the story, including dinosaurs, asteroids, and the beginning of life on Earth. It also features a selected bibliography and a poem by W.S. Merwin, the seed's namesake. Weighty themes of connectedness, conservation, and the impact that one small voice can have on the fate of the universe might feel unfathomable and too big for children, but in Selznick's hands, this poignant fable will resonate with all readers, young and old. VERDICT A special, one-of-a-kind book for the whole family that readers won't soon forget--Shelley M. Diaz Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2364106 Thirteenth Circle (Hardcover (Trade))
written by MarcyKate Connolly

Cat knows aliens are real, and she's determined to prove it. By studying her town's legendary crop-circle phenomenon for the McMurray Youth Science Competition, she'll not only demonstrate the existence of extraterrestrial life but also impress her distant NASA-scientist father.

978-1-250-89159-4 Feiwel & Friends ©2024 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic

Quantity 1
Unit Price $19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Authors Connolly and Holmes have teamed up for their first creepy, sf collaboration starring seventh-graders Cat Mulvaney and Dani Williams, who do not have much in common except science. They each dream of winning the McMurray Youth Science Award, and, determined to win, they join forces, though they have different motivations. Cat, obsessed with crop circles that mysteriously form on a local farm, wants to prove aliens are behind the odd occurrences. Dani, skeptical of Cat's theory, wants to prove that a local pesticide company generates them. Told in chapters alternating between Cat's and Dani's points of view, the novel offers insight into their home lives, adding depth to the characters and aiding with character development. Shocking the girls, people in black show up in town and thwart their investigative efforts, adding intrigue and adversity. The pacing helps keep the excitement going as Dani and Cat continue their investigation despite many obstacles. Connolly and Holmes write an absorbing story using factual science and emotional situations that will resonate with middle-grade readers.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Two middle schoolers investigate mysterious crop circles. Dani wants to convince her artistic parents that she's a serious scientist, but her partner in a prestigious youth science competition, "designated school weirdo" Cat, has an alien obsession that might derail Dani's plans to win. When Cat signs them up to investigate local crop circles, Dani is skeptical at first, but she discovers that Cat is a pro when it comes to the scientific method. Still, Dani pursues her own line of inquiry: her belief that the crop circles are human made. The mystery may be the main event, but themes of family relationships and self-actualization permeate the girls' partnership. As they grow closer, the seventh graders bond over social challenges (other kids mock their interests) and parental woes (Dani longs for her parents' acceptance, and Cat just wants to know that her dad, who's away working for NASA, remembers her). The girls, who are white, follow their own paths despite criticism from others, which makes them good role models for readers. Well-developed parental relationships are central, as is the treatment of ways the girls grow closer through their shared love of science and how this affects their relationships with their parents and their school experiences. The references to scientific methodology are presented in an entertaining manner that's grounded in real life. An entertaining, science-focused mystery that encourages readers to embrace their true selves. (Mystery. 8-12) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

#2330703 Lost Library (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Rebecca Stead

When a mysterious little free library (guarded by a large orange cat) appears overnight, eleven-year-old Evan plucks two books from its shelves, never suspecting that his life is about to change. Evan and his best friend Rafe discover a link between one of the books and a long-ago event. The two boys start asking questions whose answers will transform not only their own futures, but the town itself.

978-1-250-83881-0 Feiwel & Friends ©2023 5-1/4 x 7-1/2 224 pgs.
 Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 4.3 AR Pts 5.0 Lexile 640

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Booklist When a makeshift Little Free Library appears on the town green, almost 20 years after the mysterious fire that burned down the town library, the people of Martinville are drawn together once more to not just solve the mystery of the fire but also to decide what it means for their own fates. Mass and Stead employ a rich cast of characters—including ghost librarians, graduating fifth-graders, mice, and a cat—to dive into the heart of Martinville. As the little library grows, our protagonist, Evan, works to uncover what happened to the original library, and Mortimer (the cat) seeks out his own revelations. Full of heart, sly narration, and Stead's expected air of mystery, this is well suited for lovers of books and libraries and novels featuring ensemble casts. Though certain gaps in the plot (some quite tantalizing) might leave readers feeling unsatisfied, fans of atmospheric tales with nonhuman narrators will be pleased. Hand to fans of Kate DiCamillo's classic The Tale of Despereaux (2003) or Andrew Clements' The Losers Club (2017).

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Library records contain the keys to a town's secrets in this lightly fantastical literary mystery from the creators of Bob. On the last Monday of fifth grade, Evan McClelland takes two books from a little free library that has appeared seemingly overnight. The books' circulation cards signal that they're from the Martinville Library, which burned down years ago; and one card suggests that Evan's father once checked out the book over and over again. With best friend Rafe and a copy of How to Write a Mystery Novel that's linked to a famous author, Evan seeks to unravel his family's possible connection to the town's history while navigating his anxiety about the looming adjustment to middle school. Via distinct, unhurried voices, alternating chapters provide history and context from the perspectives of Evan, large orange feline Mortimer, and ghost Al, an assistant librarian at the Martinville Library who died in the fire. Bustling with well-rounded secondary characters and threaded with metafictional elements, Mass and Stead's collaboration is a humane ode to the courage needed to face life's changes as well as the power of libraries as centers of community. Cover art portrays Evan with pale skin. Ages 8: 12. Agents: (for Stead) Faye Bender, Book Group; (for Mass) Ginger Knowlton, Curtis Brown. (Aug.)

#2348406 At the End of the World (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Nadia Mikail

When the world is ending, what matters most to you? Seventeen-year-old Aisha hasn't seen her sister June for two years. She has no idea where she is, but that hasn't stopped her from thinking about her every day and hoping she's okay.

978-1-250-86809-1 Feiwel & Friends ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 192 pgs.
Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic Lexile 830

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$19.99

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 9-12 Starred Review Earth was given one year of warning to prepare for an asteroid strike that will end all life on the planet. Soon after came riots and upheaval, then a long despair, and finally widespread acceptance. For Aisha and her mother, getting their final affairs in order includes reaching out to Aisha's estranged sister, June, who left several years before. The prospect of seeing June again is bittersweet for Aisha. She blames June for abandoning her and her mother so soon after their father's death, for stranding her with a life un-lived—a university that will never be attended, exciting experiences as a young professional that will never be enjoyed, a future that will never escape the present. Still, along with her boyfriend's family, Aisha accompanies her mother on one last tour of Malaysia to find June and be a family together at the end of the world. Haunting is the perfect word for this novel. Bereft of fantastic schemes to avert the coming disaster or overwrought melodrama, this story instead opts for an elegiac, personal story that extols familial and community relationships and highlights how pivotal memory and storytelling are to the human endeavor. Key to the success of this approach is Mikhail's sparse prose that somehow conveys the weightiest emotions with the most delicate of touches. An incredible, soulful debut. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews A looming apocalypse leads a family to heal their estrangement. Seventeen-year-old Aisha's older sister, June, left home three years ago, trying to escape the emotional burden of dealing with her mother's depression and strict rules. The quick succession of family tragedies—the deaths of Aisha's father and maternal grandparents and uncle—affected each of them in different ways. Now, with a devastating asteroid set to collide with Earth and put an end to humanity, Aisha and her mother set out to find June. Walter, Aisha's boyfriend, along with his parents and a stray cat they name Fleabag, join mother and daughter in a road trip across Malaysia. They meander, making pivotal pit stops that reflect cherished memories and support the characters' emotional journeys. Once they find June, feelings of grief, abandonment, and simmering resentment surface, but they slowly give way to understanding and reconciliation. Aisha's family is Muslim and of Malay descent; Walter's presents as Chinese and South Asian in heritage. The heartfelt writing evocatively portrays the complex emotions within close relationships; the bewildering sense of loss in not being able to experience a full life is thoughtfully expressed by both Walter and Aisha. The characters seem so resigned to their impending deaths, however, that framing the story around an apocalyptic event feels unnecessary. Though the situations are easily resolved and some of the metaphors feel overdone, the different landscapes and cultural touches give readers a glimpse of a rich and storied land. A quietly reflective novel enveloped in hope. (Fiction. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Four months ago, teenage Aisha, along with the rest of the world, found out that an asteroid is projected to destroy Earth in less than a year. For the past two years, Aisha has lived alone with her mother in Penang, Malaysia, ever since Aisha's father died and her sister June walked out on them; realizing they have limited time left, Aisha and her mother resolve to find June. Aisha asks her boyfriend and his family to come along, and the group travel together across the country to Melaka with a stray cat named Fleabag. Aisha's despair over her search for June and the oncoming end of the world manifests in increasing anger and irritability, and Walter's seemingly relentlessly positive attitude causes a rift between the teens. The trip provides the families with opportunities to reflect on their lives, strengthen their bonds, admit their most private thoughts, and process their grief. Though revealing flashbacks interwoven throughout occasionally disrupt narrative flow, they also offer vibrant and emotionally raw looks into the protagonists' relationship with loss, the past, and each other. Using poetic prose, debut author Mikail highlights the power of hope and reconciliation amid impending devastation and dread. Ages 13: up. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 6 Up--Aisha was 10 years old when her father died. She was 15 when her sister June left, never to be heard from again. Now at 18, her life is once again upended when a planet-killing asteroid is headed toward Earth. With less than a year left before impact, it is time to reunite what's left of her broken family. Setting out with her supportive boyfriend Walter; her closed-off mother Esah; Walter's parents; and stray cat Fleabag, Aisha travels across Malaysia to find June. Short chapters cut with flashbacks give in-depth glances into Aisha's past as each family member tries in their own way to cope with the aftermath of repeated devastation. Readers will relate to Aisha's journey as she struggles with emotions that are equally expected and unforeseeable. Unlike most end of the world stories, the extended deadline gives plenty of time to digest the bittersweet memories and dreamlike reflections. Aisha and Walter's relationship is a highlight, offering sweet and steady support for her as she lashes out, while also acknowledging Walter's own struggle to accept the end of the world. Malaysian and Indonesian references ground the setting in a heavily character-driven story. While the open ending may not satisfy every reader, hope is sure to resonate. VERDICT Fans of Adam Silvera's They Both Die at the End will find much to relate to in this emotional exploration of the end of the world.--Elisha Sheffer
Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

#2329210 No Place Like Home (Hardcover (Trade))

written by James Bird

When home is a car, life is unpredictable. School, friends, and three meals a day aren't guaranteed. Not every town has a shelter where a family can sleep for a night or two, and places with parking lots don't welcome overnight stays. Opín, his brother Emjay, and their mother are trying to get to Los Angeles, where they hope an uncle and a new life are waiting.

978-1-250-87762-8 Feiwel & Friends ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 320 pgs.

Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 3.9 AR Pts 11.0 Lexile 590

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$17.99

Reviews by: Booklist Twelve-year-old Opín (Ojibwe); his mother, Inde; and his angry and troublesome older brother, Emjay, who has a habit of disappearing at the wrong time, are unhoused and living in their car. Their goal is to drive from Sacramento to Watts, where Inde's brother lives, in the hopes that he might help them. But he struggles with alcoholism and is "a bit off." In the meantime, they move from city to city, one step ahead of the police and Child Protective Services, staying in shelters if they're lucky. This enrages Emjay, whose default emotion is anger and whom Opín often fears. Things ease a bit when Opín finds an abandoned puppy, names it Ani, and adopts it. Opín has fantasies of being a warrior brave, riding a pinto horse (their car is a Pinto) accompanied by Ani (now a wolf in Opín's imagination), until Emjay snarls, "Grow up. . . . This is real life. . . . There's no happy ending." Is he right? Will the family reach Watts? James Bird, who has been unhoused and is of Ojibwe descent, writes with rare authority, insight, and compassion that invites deep empathy from readers. He has done a beautiful job of creating an unforgettable family, who, as Inde says, "may be broke, but we're not broken."

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews An urban Native American boy's gripping survival story. In this complex and emotionally resonant novel, Opín lives in a car, enduring unpredictable days as his family struggles. Opín's mother guides Opín and his brother, Emjay, to live life as a game, even though their battle with being unhoused seems unwinnable. They move constantly to avoid "the cavalry"--or Child Protective Services--as they search for money, food, and a forever home. Opín's mother insists that he "keep an active mind." He hunts down science facts and learns all his school subjects from library books. His mother teaches him Ojibwe words from her grandmother's handwritten notebook. She teaches him reciprocity, only taking what they need to survive, and street smarts. Opín and his new friend, a Black boy from the shelter they move to in Stockton, are attacked by racist teenagers. The storytelling is superlative, but some of the phrases and descriptions--for example, "metal pony" for shopping cart, "buffalo hunt" for stealing food--feel reminiscent of Native tropes, despite seeming to be intended to show Opín's feelings of connection to his heritage. Some scenes would have benefited from more context: Opín's mother, who performs her own version of Ojibwe dancing for money, rebuts a passerby's criticism that she's "exploiting our dying Native American culture." Rather than critiquing the framing of Indigenous cultures as "dying," she says that she's "reviving our culture." But do vibrant contemporary Indigenous ways of life need to be revived? Still, Bird seamlessly weaves in historical events, like the government's distribution of smallpox-infested blankets to kill Native people, while telling a story of admirable resilience. A thought-provoking story of one boy playing his own game of life. (song list, Ojibwe glossary, author's note) (Fiction. 11-14) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Twelve-year-old Ojibwe Opín has been living in his family's Ford Pinto for some time with his mother and impulsive older brother, Emjay, who often disappears during rest stops along their route across California to Los Angeles. Gathering left-behind grub from fast food restaurants, slipping into empty hotel rooms to shower, and crossing their fingers for space at a local shelter are just a few of the things they must do to survive if they hope to make it to their destination before social services puts the brothers in foster care. Despite the promise of stability in L.A., the feeling of home is always just out of reach, until Opín adopts a stray dog that he believes completes their family. But when Emjay takes his frustrations out on the pup and storms off, and Opín reckons with the fact that most shelters don't allow pets, Opín worries that his family has reached a breaking point. Writing from his own experience, per an author's note, Ojibwe author Bird (The Second Chance of Benjamin Waterfalls) crafts this deeply felt ode to familial love with authoritative prose. Opini's palpable fears, joys, and unrelenting hope buoy this tale of resilience. A glossary and playlist conclude. Ages 10: 14. Agent: Rosemary Stimola, Stimola Literary Studio. (Aug.)

#2348595 People to Follow (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Olivia Worley

Welcome to "In Real Life," the hot new reality show that forces social media's reigning kings and queens to unplug for three weeks and "go live" without any filters. IRL is supposed to be the opportunity of a lifetime, watched closely by legions of loyal followers. But for these rising stars--including Elody, an Instagram model with an impulsive streak; Kira, a child star turned fitness influencer; Logan, a disgraced TikTok celeb with a secret; and Max, a YouTuber famous for exposes on his fellow creators--it's about to turn into a nightmare.

978-1-250-88138-0 Wednesday Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.

Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$24.00

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews Ten influencers come together for IRL, a reality show set in a tropical paradise--but not all of them will leave the island alive. The show features content creators from age 18 to their early 20s. Kira promotes fitness. Max films documentary exposés for his YouTube channel. Corinne is a gamer on Twitch. Aaron is a former child star who's struggling to stay relevant. Elody posts photos of herself in swimwear. Cole pulls problematic pranks. Storyteller Logan does comedic bits. Zane heads a TikTok collective, the Bounce House, with McKayleigh and Graham. Left to their own devices on a Caribbean island--and stripped of their electronic devices--the young people quickly become embroiled in drama. Everyone has a secret they're trying to hide, and no one wants to end up canceled. Then, after a night of drinking, one of the influencers winds up dead. Was it just an accident? Or was it something more sinister? Mysteries unravel and secrets spill in this Gen Z thriller. The isolated setting of a private island contributes to the eerie mood, which is punctuated by dramatic reveals as the influencers fall from their pedestals. The story is told from the points of view of Kira, Max, Elody, and Logan. Character development is light; if readers can tell the 10 influencers apart, they'll appreciate the plot's twists and turns. Most characters are coded white; Corinne is Black. A chilling thriller that explores the consequences of getting #canceled. (Thriller. 14-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly In Worley's tense debut thriller, 10 teen social media influencers agree to ditch their phones to film a reality show on a secluded tropical island, only to realize they're stranded with a killer on the loose. Upon her arrival, wellness enthusiast Kira encounters her frenemy McKayleigh, whom she met at a reality dance competition and who is a founding member of the hugely successful TikTok creator group Bounce House. While former Bounce House member Logan is livid to see McKayleigh, documentarian Max is eager to film what he assumes will be rivalry-fueled chaos among the other influencers, who were all given smart watches to communicate with the show's crew. The vibes turn sinister, however, when the production team fails to arrive and an unknown sponsor informs the group via their watches that they must reveal past secrets or risk media exposure. When one of the attendees turns up dead, the teens turn on one another in a race to escape the island. Somewhat formulaic chapters are buoyed by lighting-quick pacing and savvy twists, and through four shifting perspectives, Worley notably considers social media fame's impact on both the content creator and their following. Most characters read as white. Ages 13: up. Agent: Claire Friedman, InkWell Management. (Oct.)

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness A group of social media stars on an isolated island are forced to reckon with their pasts in this unnerving, tense YA thriller that exposes the dark side of influencer culture.

#2298685 Children of Stardust (Hardcover (Trade))

written by Edudzi Adodo

Zero has spent years scraping by as an aid to stranded travelers whose spacecrafts have crashed on his home planet, while all he has ever wanted is to join one of the legendary Saba guilds--groups of intergalactic travelers who explore space, retrieve lost treasures, and hunt down criminals. When the pyramid imbues Zero with a legendary power, he is recruited by a top Saba guild and launched into a dangerous intergalactic quest to track down the infamous Mask of the Shaman King before the Space Mafia uses it to unleash chaos on the galaxy.

978-1-324-03077-5 Norton Young Readers ©2022 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 288 pgs.

Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic AR Lvl 5.7 AR Pts 10.0 Lexile 730

Quantity	Unit Price
1	$18.95

Reviews by: Booklist follows Zero Adedji, owner of the Zero Worries business, which helps stranded space travelers who crash-land on his home planet of Anansi 12. But Zero's heart is far from being planet bound; his lifelong dream has been to join the Saba guild, a group of adventurers who explore outer space, hunt for artifacts and treasure, and chase down dangerous rogues. Zero is a likable protagonist who becomes an unlikely hero after an encounter with a strange creature and its artifact result in him gaining unexpected powers and being recruited by a Saba guild for the mission of a lifetime. As Zero and his companions embark on their adventure, searching across the galaxy for the mysterious Mask of the Shaman King, his story is charged with humor, a vibrant cast of characters from all corners of the galaxy, and a thrilling plot that keeps readers guessing. Adodo's text is accompanied by lively illustrations of characters and space tech as this spectacular sf adventure brings a fresh take to the genre with elements of African mythology, high stakes, and an otherworldly sense of adventure.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Zero Adedji lives solo on his home planet of Anasi 12, working as a guide for lost travelers. Secretly, though, he wants nothing more than to join one of the Saba guilds, licensed teams of intergalactic adventurers equipped with adhesive Kobastickers, which offer the wearer magical abilities. When he inadvertently becomes host to the Jupiter Kobasticker, a desperately sought-after object that offers the power to conduct electricity, Zero is recruited to the exclusive Shango Heart Guild to learn how to use it. Zero becomes fast friends with rising Saba stars Camih Sitso and Ladi Hyung, and the trio soon faces their first major challenge: recovering the Mask of the Shaman King, an ancient artifact whose reality-distorting power could unleash a fiend imprisoned in the Oblong Dimension. The friends embark on a thrilling adventure, facing a medley of enemies who seek the mask for their own nefarious ends. Through it all, Zero must both learn to wield the Jupiter's power and maintain secrecy around hosting it; the mystical object is rumored to grant immortality to its 26th host; and Zero is the 25th. Inspired by Adodo's love for African mythology and science fiction, this fast-paced debut is a fun-filled space opera with strong themes of friendship and courage. Final art not seen by PW. Ages 9: 12. (Oct.)

#2161769 Super Miraculous Journey of Freddie Yates (Hardcover (Trade))
written by Jenny Pearson
 Facts are everything to eleven-year-old Freddie Yates: once you know a fact it's yours to keep. After his grandmother dies and Freddie discovers his biological father might be alive and well in Wales, he decides to follow the facts. Together with his best friends Ben and Charlie, he sneaks off on the adventure of a lifetime (or at least, the summer holidays) to track down Freddie's father.
 978-1-324-01133-0 W. W. Norton & Company, Incorporated ©2020 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 235 pgs.
 Grades 4 - 7 Dewey# Fic Lexile 740

Quantity 1
Unit Price $16.95

#2348334 Gone Wolf (Hardcover (POB))
written by Amber McBride
 In the future, a Black girl known only as Inmate Eleven is kept confined-to be used as a biological match for the president's son, should he fall ill. She is called a Blue-the color of sadness. She lives in a small-small room with her dog, who is going wolf more often-he's pacing and imagining he's free. Inmate Eleven wants to go wolf too-she wants to know why she feels so blue and what is beyond her small-small room.
 978-1-250-85049-2 Feiwel & Friends ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 352 pgs.
 Grades 6 - 8 Dewey# Fic Lexile 700

Quantity 1
Unit Price $17.99

Reviews by: Book Page Gone Wolf begins in 2111 with Inmate Eleven, a 12-year-old girl being kept in a tiny room. Her only company is her dog, Ira, who has been "going wolf" more often--pacing, narrowing his eyes and imagining he is free. Inmate Eleven is a Blue, which refers to her blue skin and hair. As a genetic match for the president's son, she is designated to serve as his companion in a mysterious and sinister system. And as Inmate Eleven gathers more information about the world outside her room, she begins to feel the calling to go wolf too. The narrative switches to Charlottesville, Virginia, in 2022, where Imogen--also 12 years old--is often told she feels too much. She used to rely on her brothers to help settle her worries, but now the pandemic has isolated her from everyone other than her mother and therapist. When Imogen connects with a Black college student in the Big Sister program through a mutual love for stories, she begins to open up and heal the sadness--the blueness--in her own heart.

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 4-7 Starred Review There are two realities for Imogen. In one reality, she is simply known as Inmate Eleven, and she lives in the Bible Boot, a place that has reinstated slavery for Black Americans. Some of those enslaved people are so sad that they have physically turned blue. Imogen is one of those "blue" people, one who lives in a prison with her wolf-dog, Ira. Imogen yearns to be free of the binds that the "clones" harness her with. In another reality, Imogen is a girl in the modern world, dealing with the aftermath of racial violence, a devastating virus, post-election discord, and the death that links all of these things in her life. National Book Award finalist McBride, author of Me (Moth) (2021), is a master at crafting characters who are unapologetically flawed, a pattern that continues in this, her middle-grade debut. Imogen's character perfectly personifies the continuous shroud of grief that Black Americans have to live with in a post-pandemic, post-2016 election world. But even with the integration of the theme of grief throughout the novel, there is still the insistence of hope. McBride examines the beauty in Black resilience and the importance of building community. This novel is an integral addition to the children's literary canon. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books In 2111, southern states have seceded from the United States to form the Bible Boot, presided over by President Tuba. The pale-skinned Clones there dominate and enslave Blue people, keeping them isolated and imprisoned until they are deemed fit to serve the Clones or work in the quarry, mining the material that extends Clones' lives. Inmate Eleven, who has dubbed herself Imogen in a small act of rebellion, is selected to serve Larkin, President Tuba's chosen son and successor. She's horrified by the world outside her cell, where Blues work in backbreaking conditions and are killed for any resistance, so when a fellow inmate informs her of an escape route, she dares to take it. The book then shifts to 2022, where Imogen is sharing with her therapist the story of Inmate Eleven and struggling with the trauma of the COVID-19 quarantine, the onslaught of news about violence against Black Americans, and her own loss of her brothers, Lark and Kin. While the premise that twelve-year-old Imogen authored the first half of the book can forgive its lack of subtlety, the expository, forced dialogue and secondary character explanations make both sections feel more browbeating than compelling, leaving little agency or interpretation to the reader. It's Imogen who offers the true, authentic point of connection, much like Callender's Moon in Moonflower (BCCB 07/22), and her vulnerability, horror, and grief will feel entirely relatable to kids who have just endured enough hardship to perhaps feel like they are in their own dystopia. KQG COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Horn Book Magazine McBride (We Are All So Good at Smiling, rev. 1/23) begins this compelling novel in the year 2111: a girl known as Inmate Eleven has lived in a small cell her whole life. All she knows she's learned from Miss Abby, a pale-skinned "Clone" who describes blue-skinned people as "genetic mistakes, which is why we take care of you here." Inmate Eleven's only true companion is her dog, Ira, who will occasionally "go wolf," pacing the cell, looking desperately as if he wishes to be somewhere else. When she finally learns the disturbing truth -- that Blues are Black Americans, turned blue from generational trauma; and Clones are white Elitists from the "Bible Boot" of the South -- she must escape to save herself. Meanwhile, in the year 2022, young Imogen is struggling with both the racially motivated violence across the country and the catastrophic effects of the COVID-19 pandemic. When Imogen and her mother finally find a therapist willing to listen to her whole story, the juxtaposition of past, present, and future creates a jarring narrative. Interspersed throughout are Bible Boot Learning Flash Cards propaganda and asides at the end of Inmate Eleven's chapters touting the virtue of Clones over the "lesser" Blues. A strong voice in the sci-fi genre, McBride presents a fascinating discussion of the inextricable bond between Black Americans and the blues. Eboni Njoku(Copyright 2023 by The Horn Book, Incorporated, Boston. All rights reserved.)

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews With fear, grief, pain, and suffering caused by the Covid-19 pandemic and America's history of enslavement and racial violence. It's the year 2111, and Inmate Eleven is undergoing a test. She must decide which is better: the blond, blue-eyed, light-skinned doll or the doll with blue skin and hair like her own. Inmate Eleven's world is cruel and fractured: As a Blue, she's separated from the pale-skinned Clones and has been isolated in a cell her whole life. Her only source of comfort is her dog, Ira; they both long for escape. "Bible Boot" flash card fill in the backstory through references to an alternate but recognizable history: a 2016 election, xenophobia, a wall, a worldwide virus, and vaccines. Blues are regarded as inferior, their bodies exploited to prolong the lives of Clones; they are actually Black Americans whose stolen freedom has caused them to turn blue with sadness. Back in 2022, Imogen is trapped by fear and grief from racist violence and devastating pandemic losses. She finds relief and healing through sharing her stories and builds relationships with Black role models like her therapist and her mentor from the Big Sister program. Textbook pages at the ends of chapters share true Black history. McBride's multidimensional genius shines through, artfully exposing the reality that Black Americans have lived lifetimes of dystopias. She scrupulously guides the complicated storyline and hard histories with context, definitions, and word choices. Raw, incisive, and authentic. (author's note) (Fiction. 11-16) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly This profound middle grade debut by McBride (We Are All So Good at Smiling), set in 2111 and 2022, follows two Black tweens navigating grief and racism. In 2111, in the Bible Boot, pale-skinned Clones are the ruling class while Black children called Blues are kept separate from society. A Blue girl called Inmate Eleven lives under confinement with her genetically modified dog Ira, whose tendency to "go wolf" inspires her to imagine a world elsewhere. As Inmate Eleven learns more about the systemic racism against Blues in the Bible Boot, she discovers that everything she's learned about the world under Clone leadership has been a lie, and longs for escape. Meanwhile, in 2022 America, 12-year-old Imogen grapples with the long-term effects of an unnamed virus that has ravaged the nation while working through an unspecified traumatic event in therapy. McBride skillfully weaves each girl's experience into the other's via callbacks. In this weighty read, which explores the consequences of loss, quarantine, and racism on Black youth, the author employs brilliantly inventive storytelling as a tool through which the protagonists process their grief and find their people. An author's note details historical events addressed in the book. Ages 10: 14. (Oct.)

Reviews by: School Library Journal Gr 5 Up--Inmate Eleven has never seen the sky, or even been outside in her 12 years. All she knows is that there's a virus outside and she can't leave without a vaccine. In order to get the vaccine, she must pass tests to be sure she is ready. She is eventually paired with a child called Larkin who is the son of the President. A young Black girl, Inmate Eleven thinks her life may be changing for the better, but little does she know what lies ahead. The book is split into three major sections that deal with Inmate Eleven in the year 2111, and a girl named Imogen in 2022. Imogen has to come to terms with several things that have impacted her life due to the pandemic and her mental health. This book is written in a conversational tone, so it's a quick read. At the end of each chapter there are notecards to help readers understand what is happening in each character's world. The book deals with tough topics like racism, generational trauma, and the pandemic. Each section is masterfully written, and will cause a few eyes to tear up. McBride includes some notes at the end of the book with an explanation of real and historical events. VERDICT Great for libraries looking for more diverse voices, and books that touch on the topic of the pandemic in a relatable way.--Kristin J. Anderson Copyright 2023 School Library Journal, LLC Used with permission.

Reviews by: Shelf Awareness In National Book Award finalist Amber McBride's ambitious middle-grade novel, Gone Wolf, a child develops an imagined world to escape the painful realities of the Covid-19 pandemic.

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2348350 Just a Pinch of Magic (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Alechia Dow Wini's family of enchanters runs a bakery, but with the prices of magical ingredients skyrocketing, they're going under. Desperate to save their business, Wini takes a risk by casting a (sort of illegal) spell. But the spell backfires. Badly. Now the whole town is in danger. 978-1-250-82911-5 Feiwel & Friends ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs. Grades 3 - 6 Dewey# Fic Lexile 690	1	$17.99

Reviews by: Publishers Weekly Twelve-year-old magic user Winifred Mosley is an intuitive baker who lives in the enchanted town of Honeycomb Hill, R.I., with her family, who own a bakery. The reputation of Wini's birth mother ; whom she's never met; as a curse worker repels customers, and the rising cost of magical ingredients has the business in dire straits. To save the store, Wini concocts a plan: Step one involves "captur some of the love floating around" to spread it through town. But Wini must be discreet; "taking emotions" is forbidden by the Enchantment Agency, which polices magic use. Meanwhile, Kalioppe Clarke, a novice word enchanter, moves from Boston to Honeycomb Hill with her queer father and retired Enchantment Agent grandfather so that she can learn and practice magic safely. Upon arrival, her grandfather is called out by residents for bringing "wicked magic" into town. When Kali and Wini meet, the two bond over having single fathers and aid each other during magic lessons. Dow (A Song of Salvation) delivers a magical story about family, friendship, and love that is both beguiling and surprising. An unforgettably rendered magical world paired with delicious descriptions of impeccable baked goods will leave readers wanting more. Wini is Black, and Kali reads as white. Ages 8: 12. (Oct.)

	Quantity	Unit Price
 #2348580 Search for Us (Hardcover (Trade)) written by Susan Azim Boyer Samira Murphy will do anything to keep her fractured family from falling apart, including caring for her widowed grandmother and getting her older brother into recovery for alcohol addiction. With attendance at her dream college on the line, she takes a long shot DNA test to find the support she so desperately needs from a father she hasn't seen since she was a baby. 978-1-250-83370-9 Wednesday Books ©2023 5-1/2 x 8-1/4 304 pgs. Grades 7 - Y Dewey# Fic	1	$21.00

Reviews by: Booklist Grades 8-12 Two teens in different places in California take DNA tests; each is trying to find a long-absent father. What they discover, however, is that they are half-siblings, although no connection to their mutual Iranian American father appears. They each have different goals for the search: Samira wants to find her father for overdue child-support payments to relieve her family's financial burden, while Henry longs to find belonging and an escape from the strict rules of his prejudiced aunt and uncle who are raising him. They ultimately unite to find their father, and his circumstances are not at all what either of them expected. When they finally meet him, they both begin to fill gaps in their understanding of their lives and gain a richer perspective on their father and their respective families. The narrative switches between Samira's and Henry's points of view, heightening the tension and pressure they both feel. Boyer sensitively explores the complexities of identity, family, and responsibility in a plot fueled by a compelling search for answers and healing. COPYRIGHT(2023) Booklist, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books Samira Murphy may have missed a few days of school to organize her grandfather's funeral, deal with her older brother Kamron's alcoholism, and compensate for her distant mother, absent father, and codependent grandmother, but she's still making straight As and going to Lewis & Clark in the fall. Meanwhile, Henry Owen is trying to do the same, but he still feels like he's falling short of the high expectations set by his guardian aunt and uncle, who seem to think Henry is just one wrong step from landing in jail as they assume his father did (if he's not dead). Henry and Samira know their father's name, Mohammed Safavi, and they each have a copy of his military portrait, but no one in their families is willing to tell them much more. Henry's aunt and uncle would rather he not learn anything about his Iranian heritage, and Samira knows Kamron's trauma is related to their father's behavior when she was too young to remember. The novel smartly reveals Samira and Henry's shared parent early on, and the third-person narration hews close to Samira's and Henry's points of view in alternating chapters, rendering each teen with sympathy and humanity that doesn't spare their faults or those of the adults in their lives. Samira's sense of superiority over Kamron, Gran, and her mom leaves her little room to feel compassion for them or to reckon with her own pain. Henry's simmering resentment erupts into rage that frightens even him, but he can't bring himself to confront his aunt, uncle, and mother. The driving tension of the book lies in how Samira and Henry navigate their relationships, making this is an absorbing and deeply human story of losing and finding family. SS COPYRIGHT(2023) Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Reviews by: Kirkus Reviews If siblings Samira and Henry each take DNA tests and are surprised by the results. Samira Murphy takes on too much responsibility. Ever since her grandfather died, she's taken on even more, including caring for her grandmother and supervising her older brother's participation in AA, all while preparing for college. After she decides to put her college funds toward rehab following her brother's latest UI, Samira takes a DNA test, hoping to track down and get overdue child support from their absentee father. Meanwhile, Henry Owen feels caught between his flighty biological mom and the overbearing, xenophobic aunt and uncle who've raised him. Hurtling toward a future he didn't shape, Henry longs to slow down and forge a connection to his missing father and his Iranian heritage, and so he takes a DNA test too. When the test results link Samira and Henry to each other instead of Mohammed Safavi, as they expected, the two 17-year-olds continue their quest together, redefining family and untangling their U.S. Army veteran biological father's complicated past. Readers are taken on a moving emotional journey through self-discovery, strained family ties, and the impacts of substance abuse and mental illness. The author effectively explores a number of substantive subjects with nuance in this ultimately hopeful story told through dual narratives. Samira and Henry are multiracial teens living in white families; additional ethnic diversity is shown in supporting characters. Relatable, poignant, and full of hope. (Fiction. 12-18) COPYRIGHT(2023) Kirkus Reviews, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

